Boys Learn Good Trades At Florida School

(Editor's Note: The excellence of a school newspaper known as "The Yellow Jacket" came to the attention of The Sanford Herald. It was the well written stories, excellentness of composition, and the neatness of the paper that prompted us to bring to our readers just what happens in the process of publishing each edition.)

One of the largest and best equipped printing establishments to be found in the state is located on the campus of the Florida Industrial School for Boys and it is here that many boys each year are given a good foundation for entering the printing trade as a life-long profession. It is an established fact that boys, upon completion of the printing course here, are far in advance of what an employer expects of an apprentice and this "edge" gives the trained boy an advantage in securing employment upon his return home.

Students for this unit of the vocational training program are selected by Director R. W. Hatten from among the boys in the upper academic grades, as it is necessary that a boy have a good background in English, mathematics and spelling to ever become a good workman in the printing trade. The class in printing, as other training units, is divided into two groups, odds and evens, according to grade number—the even division working one day and the odds the next. Each class attends school on its "off" day. It has been the custom for many years for the odd division to publish the Yellow Jacket along with their studies, while the even division take care of the greater part of the printing used by the school, which is sufficient to keep the plant busy every day in the week.

Explanation of the method of study will explain to the layman how a boy can start from the very beginning and in a few months be able to carry the most difficult job or piece of work, to completion. Including composition, cutting paper to desired size, make-ready, or putting the job on the press, feeding the press, lathing or binding as ordered, and putting materials away for future use.

To begin with, the student is given a specially prepared textbook, the first part of which is taken up with studies in grammar, the printers' system of measure, and many other questions relating to the trade, among which are included names and uses of the various pieces of equipment he will use in his study. It is in this section that the student learns the printer's and the "do's" and "don'ts" of the shop. Upon completion of this section of the book the student writes out the answers to the questions covering the material he has studied and is ready to begin his elementary shop work. He is then given a case to "clean" meaning that he takes every letter out of the case, assembles them in lines, removing letters which have fallen into the wrong divisions, and replaces all type in the proper places. In performing this phase, he learns the case "being able to pick up any letter or figure wanted without referring to his case chart for guidance, also the correct method of putting type into the composing stick and in handling type for distribution.

Following this phase of training, the boy is ready for elementary shop work which consists of composing simple jobs, twelve in number, wherein is learned capitalization, indentation and tabulation as well as furnishing abundant practice in composing and distribution, and the use of the proof press as well as proofreading and marking. Following this series of lessons there is another set of questions which the student answers and then he is ready for the advanced course which is made up of cards, business and social, envelope covers, letterheads, invoices, simple and difficult ruled forms, and work printed in two, three and four colors, all of which furnishes the student a large amount of press-work practice. Upon finishing the advanced course, the student then becomes a "commercial" printer and takes his place in supplying the school with the many forms required in its operation, which range from simple notice slips to the most highly complicated rule work. Manuals for the academic department, some of them running near two hundred pages, are also printed in the local shop.

The shop, which covers a floor space of approximately five and a half thousand square feet, was built for the purpose and allows a great many pieces of machinery to be used without crowding. A list of the equipment, includes a battery of 3 Linotype machines with fifteen magazines, each containing a different face of type, approximately thirty cases of hand type, three open, or hand fed presses, three roller and ink cabinets, one large composing stone, five by eight feet, with storage racks, several smaller stones, four spacing material cabinets, two brass rule cabinets, wood and metal furniture cabinets, metal furnace, Kelly R automatic press, power stitchee, power punching machine, drying cabinet, two paper cutters, one of which is a 34-inch power cutter, while the other is a twenty-six inch machine. There are also a number of smaller pieces of equipment including mitering machines, lead and slug cutters, saw trimmer and many other necessary items that are found in well-equipped shops. In the course of study here, a boy becomes familiar with all of the machinery and has time to learn when entering the trade in a public shop upon his return home.

The Yellow Jacket, school newspaper, which has been published continuously for the past 23 years, requires the efforts of all the students in the shop. Student operators compose practically all the type used and student pressmen

Regular Army Classes Open Doors For Men

The Regular Army, which boasts the distinction of having both its own Air Force and Navy, has opened its classroom doors to accept applications from qualified men to train in the latter of these two, according to Sergeant Henry P. Jacobsen, the local Army recruiter.

At Fort Eustis, Va., home of the Army Transportation School, a specialized program of study is the nine week enlisted men's Marine Hull Repair course.

"This course is offered to men between the ages of 17 and 34 who are high school graduates, under the provisions of the Regular Army's exclusive "Reserved For You" training program. This program allows the applicant to apply for a school course and be given a written assignment in his choice before he enlists," the recruiter said.

Sergeant Jacobsen explained that the Marine Hull repair course is taught by civilian and military instructors who have many years of experience in ship construction and related trades, both in and outside of the Service. They have been selected for their ability as teachers as well as for their technical knowledge and skill as craftsmen.

The program of instruction is divided into six main sections, each being devoted to a major phase of hull repair work. The six are: Introduction to Hull Construction; Welding; Shipfitting; Sheet-Metal work; Pipefitting; and Ship's Carpentry.

All sections of the program include ample practical exercise where classroom teachings is applied to actual work on hulls and hull components. During both instructional practical exercise periods, the latest training aids, marine materials, and tools are used. The shops themselves are large, well lighted and ventilated, well equipped, and ultramodern in design. Students also get the opportunity to visit the Fort Eustis port area, where numerous types of craft are kept for training purposes.

The object of the course is to train men to repair steel and wood hulls and related structures of Army harbor and landing craft. Successful completion, however, paves the way to more advanced studies and further practical experience in repairing all types of vessels, such experience leads to highly desirable positions that assure fast promotions in service and insure promising civilian employment. There is a great need today for skilled hull repairmen throughout the nation, particularly for men who have experience with the small commercial type craft such as those used by the Army," the recruiter said.

Further information about a guaranteed assignment to the Marine Hull Repair Course is available at the Army Recruiting Station, Federal Office Building in Orlando, or see Sgt. Jacobsen at the Post Office in Sanford every Monday and Wednesday.

operate the Kelly automatic press used for this work. Folding is done by hand and the mailing (posting names on each paper) is also handled by students using Wing mailing machines.

Considerable favorable comment has been made regarding the newspaper and the boys are always on the alert to put out the best work possible on each issue.

If the Florida citizen has ever had the very first idea that education and training are not put to the forefront where boys are committed to Florida Industrial School for Boys, then this story is meat for thought.

Many boys have expressed their happiness, after all, that they were sent to this school because they had been given an opportunity to make a good beginning on a trade career.

The young men, trained at this school, are proud of the result of their efforts, and justly so, as any one of them, after a short while can do really good work. Boys at this school go to work like printers and newspapermen, work like real tradesmen and do their best to deliver on time.

"The Yellow Jacket" is a tribute to the leaders who teach the youngsters in their charge. It is a tribute to the care, the thoughtfulness, the inward love for "a real boy". And then, it is a tribute to the youngster who makes himself so that when he goes home he can proudly say "I know I can do it."

Argentina Moves To Broaden Support

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The Argentine provisional government moved today to broaden its support and give a shot in the arm to the nation's slowly reviving democratic political life.

Interior and Justice Minister Eduardo Basso announced a four-party "consultative junta" would be formed to advise Provisional President Eduardo Lonardi, and his Cabinet until a new Congress is elected.

Basso said four parties—Radical, Democratic, Socialist and Progressive Democratic—had agreed to serve on the junta. Each was expected to contribute four representatives.

Prices Of Coffee May Take Tumble

WASHINGTON (AP)—Coffee prices should tumble before the year's end, more than erasing the recent retail price boosts which raised up to 4 cents a pound.

This was the consensus today of trade observers here, who noted a world surplus of coffee is expected and new harvests start coming to market in November and December.

Prices might break even before November, the observers said, should coffee-growing Brazil soon go ahead with a long-rumored currency devaluation which would make her coffee cheaper in terms of U.S. dollars.

THE INDIFFERENT SHRUG

couldn't care less

The SHRUG is a retailer who shows little concern if manufacturers advertise in newspapers or not.

Oh, sure, he believes in newspaper advertising for retailers like himself—but he doesn't realize that he should urge manufacturers to advertise there, too.

Fortunately, the SHRUG is a rare creature.

Most retailers put most of their advertising in their local newspapers—and ask for and welcome manufacturers' ads in the same medium.

Happily, manufacturers are using newspapers more and more. What clearer evidence than in the record amount of linage they placed in newspapers the first six months of 1935? Both retailers and manufacturers used more newspaper advertising in the first six months of 1935 than in any similar period in history.

Nowhere else can a manufacturer and a retailer advertise together so effectively as in the newspaper.

All business is local...and so are all newspapers!

Spotlight On Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (MGM) once the citadel of escapism, has developed a split personality in recent years.

The studio's films once presented no greater problems than whether Joan Crawford should or should not submit to Clark Gable's charms. But now MGM makes two kinds of pictures: (1) musicals, comedies and adventures that require no thought power to enjoy; (2) dramas about real problems in American society.

Hollywood used to stimulate public opinion with films on social injustices, racial problems, etc. Now MGM is the only studio that regularly treats such issues. Production boss Dore Schary said: "We think there is room for two kinds of pictures. There is the kind that provides pure entertainment and there is the kind that makes people think about problems in the contemporary scene."

Schary admitted that the latter often stirred up much controversy "but that doesn't scare us off." The most recent case was "Black and Jungle," a story of brutality in a school. It was blasted from all sides.

MGM has another blockbuster in "Trial" while the picture lacks bite, it is a stirring treatment of how Communists take over the cause of a Mexican boy accused of murder. It is bound to arouse controversy.

Social Security Cards Aren' Used For Identification

A social security card is identification for social security purposes only, and should not be accepted as identification for other purposes. Paul K. Weaver, manager of the Orlando social security office reminded local storekeepers and their employees today.

A person can obtain a social security card and work under any name he wishes, Mr. Weaver said. To receive his old age insurance benefits at age 65 or later, he must prove only that he is the person for whom a social security account has been set up under that name and number, and that this earnings have been credited to that account. Therefore, a social security card is no guarantee that an individual is using the name his mother gave him, or that he has a bank account.

To illustrate the hazards of cashing checks where only a social security card is offered as identification, Mr. Weaver cited a true story. Recently, he said, police in Tampa, Florida answered a call from a supermarket manager and asked up a woman "customer" who, using several different social security cards as identification, had passed $1600 in worthless checks during her travels through six Eastern cities.

The 25-year-old woman, Mrs. Freida McGurkin, claimed that she had been led into her criminal career by a man she met while working as a waitress in Baltimore. He had planned all their operations, she alleged, and had taken all the money. The man, Thomas Gerald Ryan, 29, deserted her accomplice before the Tampa police arrived at the supermarket. The general plan followed by the couple was for Mrs. McGurkin to visit the local social security office in each of the six cities on their itinerary to obtain a social security account number card. Ryan would pick a random address off a street map, and using an alias of his selection, she would apply for a social card, alleging that she was going to work for the first time. He then wrote out a number of checks, all for $44.00, and took her around to several stores in town where she attempted to cash them, offering only the falsely obtained social security card as identification.

Mrs. McGurkin told Tampa police that about half the stores she approached cashed the checks without requiring any other evidence of her identity.

The amazing thing about this story, Mr. Weaver said, is that she found so many willing dupes. The Social Security Administration has repeatedly warned business men not to accept social security cards as identification in cashing checks, giving credit, or for any other purpose not connected with the administration of the social security program.

Although few people will, like Mrs. McGurkin, go to the trouble of obtaining a false social security card, he pointed out that properly issued cards may be lost or stolen, and may be in the possession of someone to whom it does not belong. Moreover, a person can have his name on his social security card changed by filing a request for a change in records with the Social Security Administration. For example, he said, women change their names after they marry.

2 Strong Warnings Most Significant

NEW YORK (U.S.)—Two strong warnings by the West to Russia on Berlin and Middle East arms stood out today as the most significant outcome of the Big Three foreign ministers' meetings here.

A caution to stay out of an arms race for Middle East favor and stern notice that Russia's recognition of East Germany does not relieve her of responsibility for the Soviet zone of Germany proved, one authoritative informant said, "that we are not being lulled by words about the spirit of Geneva."

"When one party at Geneva by its acts starts muddling up tensions all over again, in other quarters, then the spirit of Geneva is being violated and we must say something about it," he added.

'Dust Bowl' Shows Good Example

WASHINGTON (U.S.)—America's "dust bowl" disaster of the 1930s showed what can happen to a land parched for water.

Today scientists warn that water shortages are becoming a serious problem in many parts of the United States—and will become more acute from year to year.

Why is water getting scarce? Is the weather turning hotter? Is America's once abundant rainfall beginning to dwindle?

Meteorologists say there is little question that winters have been warming up over the last 50 or 60 years, averaging about two degrees in most U. S. cities. Since 1870 the mean annual temperature has risen 4 degrees in Philadelphia and 2½ degrees in Montreal.

"That doesn't sound like much of an increase, until you realize that an average annual drop of only 10 degrees would put us into another ice age.

As for rainfall, there are violent regional fluctuations from year to year, but the nationwide average remains almost constant at 39 inches annually—some 4,300 billion gallons a day.

Why, then, isn't there plenty of water as usual?

"Except for recurring droughts our water supply is pretty stable," says Carl G. Paulsen, chief of the

Verne Wheelless

"Where The Meadow Lark Calls" is named so because the meadow lark is the state bird where the story is centered, and, because, according to the author, "the musical sound of the combination of words that fits the theme of the book."

"I've rewritten the book five or six times," said Wheelless, and now, he remarked, sales of the book are gratifying.

Wheelless, photographer, automobile dealer, radio operator, and now an author, is also a carrier for The Sanford Herald in the San Lanta section of the city and in the south Sanford section.

If you've never met this "youngster-at-heart" who has told so vividly his early day experiences in "Where The Meadow Lark Calls," you can hear his own explanations at Sweeney's Saturday.

Excerpts from reviews of the book read as follows in part: Wilmington (Del.) Morning News — "Mr. Wheelless's story has the flavor of American farm life from the 'inside.' A fine family life is also revealed."

Cresco (Iowa) Times-Plain-Dealer — "Certainly a realistic picture of rural life some 50 years ago. Entertaining and amusing to both rural and city residents."

Publishers' Weekly (New York) — "A picture of life of a country boy 50 years ago."

Orlando Sentinel — "A realistic picture of rural life that will make you remember your own barefoot days."

Davenport (Iowa) Democrat-Times — "A nostalgic writing, 'Where The Meadow Lark Calls' will bring back many memories to those of the older generation while proving a colorful and informative history for the generation of today."

New York Times — "A heart-warming story about two mischievous lads on a farm proves that the good old days, through rugged, were healthy, happy ones. Refreshing humor pervades this book."

Coggon (Iowa) Monitor — "Describes in humorous and interesting detail, rural life of some 50 years ago..."

Albion (Neb.) News — "A marvelous picture of rural life."

Hopkinton (Iowa) Leader — (Editorial) "A book I have read. I can assure you the book is mighty interesting. Buy it and enjoy a good book."

Hunting Library Catalog — "A wholesome and entertaining picture of boyhood on the farm."

You can make an ice cream cake at home. Bake an angelfood cake from a packaged mix and cut it into three crosswise layers. Spread two pints of slightly softened ice cream between two of the layers. Work fast now and cover the whole cake with two cups of whipped cream (sweetened and vanilla-flavored). Freeze the ice cream cake and serve with a fruit sauce. You can vary the flavors of the ice cream and sauce to suit your taste.

U. S. Geological Survey's Water Resources Division." But it could well become critical with a further vast expansion of population and industry."

Scientists explain that about 70 per cent of the water that falls on the land as rain returns to the atmosphere by evaporation or evapotranspiration action by vegetation. The other 30 per cent—some 1,300 billion gallons a day—is either "consumed" or flows into rivers en route to the sea.

The 1,300 billion gallons is thus the maximum quantity of water "available" in the United States, unless fresh water can be obtained from other sources than normal rainfall.

At present, the U. S. Geological Survey says nationwide usage totals about 200 billion gallons daily. By 1975, it is expected to rise to 400 billion or roughly one third of the total "available" supply.

That's getting uncomfortably close to the limit, considering the vast and unsteady problem of distributing the water where it is needed.

So it is that scientists, subsidized by government and private industry, are anxiously searching for new sources of supply. The long-range possibilities include:

1. Artificial rain making.
2. Distilling fresh water from the sea.
3. Pollution abatement (since pollution of the nation's streams and lakes robs us of clean water by making it unfit for use).
4. Increased storage capacity (dams, reservoirs, ponds).
5. Recirculation of water, particularly in factories, so that it is

Troops Enter Italy For Duty In NATO To Help Plug Gap

BRENNERO, Italy (U.S.) — U. S. combat troops leaving Austria entered Italy before dawn today for NATO duty. Their mission: to help the Italian army plug a gap in Western defenses by Austrian neutrality.

The new arrivals are the first Americans combat troops to be stationed in Italy since October 1947 when the 88th Infantry Division was deactivated as a combat unit. American soldiers based at Leghorn and Naples are from service units.

Crossing the Austrian-Italian border through historic Brenner Pass was a convoy of 214 officers and men under Lt. Col. William W. Hawke of Terryton, Tex., commander of the 1st Battalion of the 250th Infantry Regiment.

About two dozen firms in the country, operating under government contracts, are experimenting with various methods of removing the salt from ocean water to make it drinkable. It's still an expensive process.

Rain hungry farmers in our Western Plains still hope that artificial rain making experiments will bring them water from normally rainless skies.

Dwight Kline, U.S. Weather Bureau expert, says the government still has an "open mind" about rain making.

"We've seen rain fall from treated clouds, but we have also treated 200 clouds and the quantity of moisture that reached the ground was practically nil," Kline said.

"There are so many unknowns that we need more basic research to find out if we are on the right trail at all."

Concrete Tables Put In Elks Park

Two new concrete picnic tables have been placed under the shed in the Elks Playground in Fort Mellon Park. Park Superintendent Jim Dunn said today that the tables were placed this morning and are ready for use. They replace flimsy wood tables that could easily be moved, cut, and jostled about. The tables were donated by Sherman Concrete Pipe Company, said Dunn, and were installed and placed by his department. The concrete facilities, with smooth table tops, will add a note of permanence to the picnic and rest area of the playground that is being used more and more by local families.

Mark Mack, Florida Highway Patrol Trooper and chairman of the Jaycees Safety Committee. Trooper Mack said that "this is the first phase of the Jaycees Safety Program."

Observing Rules Leads To Damage Of $390 For Cars

A man slows up for a Sanford railroad crossing and $390 in damage is totaled from observing a safety caution signal. According to a Sanford Police Department accident report, a 1934 Dodge Sedan driven by Edward Carlton Sherwood, 17-year-old Navy man from Mt. Dora, was traveling south on Park Ave. when he came to the railroad crossing at 18th St. he slowed down to five miles per hour. As a result of the safety precaution observed by Sherwood, a 1934 Chevrolet Sedan driven by Henry Edward Miller 27-year-old salesman of Orlando, smashed into the rear of the Dodge.

The report states that the accident occurred at 11:19 a. m. yesterday and was investigated by Sanford Police Department Patrolman Arnold Williams. He said in his report that the Chevrolet Sedan left skid marks measuring 46 feet 2 inches in the crash that occurred 26 feet north of the railroad crossing. Miller, traveling south on Park Ave., said the report did not notice that the Dodge sedan was slowing up for the railroad and slowed into the back end of the car. The Chevrolet sedan is owned by the Transportation Vehicle Corporation of New York. Damage to the Dodge is estimated to $90 and to the Chevrolet at $300.

Boat, Ski Enthusiasts Welcomed

Local boat and ski enthusiasts are campaigning for new members in their organization. In an effort to increase its membership, the Sanford Boat and Ski Club will set up an information booth tomorrow at First and Park, with several representatives of the group on hand from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Members on hand at the downtown booth will answer questions regarding the boat and ski club program and to tell of the advantages of being a member of the local organization. To be located on one of the nation's most beautiful rivers is a distinct advantage since it affords excellent opportunities for both boating and skiing. Officials of the Sanford Boat and Ski Club point to the fact that boating has become one of the nation's favorite pastimes and with a membership in the local organization one can enjoy the fun and thrill of boating and skiing. Members of the local organization are selling subscriptions to "Outboard", a magazine published monthly in the interest of boating and circulated throughout the country. The officers of the Sanford Boat and Ski Club brings especially to the sportsman's attention that membership in their organization is open to anyone whether or not they are boat owners.

Mothers' Patrol Is Well Formed, Says Police Chief

The Mother's Patrol, formed by the Safety Committee of the Parent-Teacher Association is a well formed, closely knit organization. Chief Roy Knowles said this morning as he made a survey of many of the stops where school buses take on children and where miners are standing watch with Patrol flags, Sam Brown belts and a firm hand in controlling the children. Five school bus stops between Mellonville and Sanford Ave. on 23rd St. afford many places for children to board buses and ride to school. "In some locations," said Chief Knowles, "they have as many as 14 volunteer mothers to stand watch in turn at the bus stops. Children at the stops this morning were lined up, orderly, out of the street, and in a safe position to keep from being injured by passing motorists." "Each mother, serving in the capacity of a patrolman at bus stops, has received instructions from the Sanford Police Department to take the license numbers of cars observed violating traffic regulations in the school bus areas."

Annexation Bill Passed By Senate Told To Citizens

Questions have been raised on the wisdom of annexation of the large strip of timberland. Few people have seen or even known their ex-ists, a bill, passed by the Legislature "extending and enlarging the corporate limits of the City of Sanford."
