Priest Reports Life in Communist Jail

While among Father Joseph McCormack, a Maryknoll priest, was released from five months in a Red Chinese prison and home. Father McCormack, who was 62 years old when he was arrested, spent almost half his life in the Far East. Today he begins his story of what happened to him, and to his fellow missionaries, under Communist rule.

By JOSEPH F. MCCORMACK, M. M.
(Written for United Press International)

Since my release after five years in a Red prison, people are continually asking me about the Chinese Communists. My reply is that there are no Chinese Communists for all Communists are men without countries. Regardless of their nationality — whether they're Russian or Chinese or even American — once they've been indoctrinated with the Communist idea, they're the same all over the world — shrewd, fanatical, capable of doing anything to get what they want.

The ordinary people of China are frightened to death because of Red brutality. They are terrorized by a highly-efficient secret police organization which has a finger on everyone. A jailed Communist told me that between October 1933 and October 1934 the Reds arrested 25 million Chinese from all walks of life, and on the slightest pretext.

It's unbelievable how the face of China has changed. What was once a land of warmth and laughter is now a desert of frightened, unsmiling faces. In Shanghai alone, over one million people have been put in prison. The jails are jammed with men and women whose only crime is that they're too poor to pay taxes.

I saw part of the picture during a propaganda campaign which the Communists launched last February, using nine of us from the prison. After assigning 14 secret police to guard us, they took us on a 30-day, conducted junket of new redevelopment projects.

The tour was a big thing, let me tell you, with high-powered publicity and all kinds of official clearance. Even though we knew we were being used — with photos taken of us in clean white shirts, eating good food and smoking cigarettes — I must say it was a nice switch from prison life. So we went along with the game.

These words of Moses apply as much to us today as they did to the Israelites after he led them to freedom from captivity in Egypt. Surely we have been given a land of freedom and plenty. Surely we should give thanks to God.

Wald Says Picture Industry Needs Feminine Movies

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) Producer Jerry Wald is a self-admitted lady's man, and he's working overtime to convert the male population to his way of thinking.

The voluble Wald, seldom at a loss for words, is attempting to fire a gaggle of actresses into orbit to compete with male box office stars.

"We've got to make more movies for women — love stories with big name feminine stars," says he. "When a wife insists on seeing a movie her husband has to go along with her. And it would bring back the matinee trade to theaters."

"The whole thing is to get beautiful women up on the screen. I've scheduled 15 pictures for the next year, and every one of them is a love story with plenty of glamorous girls."

Made No Westerns
The 20th Century-Fox executive started Marilyn Monroe, Kim Novak and Diane Varsi in their careers, and gave new life to Lana Turner ("Peyton Place") and Deborah Kerr ("From Here to Eternity").

Wald has the distinction of never having made a Western and has steered clear of war pictures for 15 years.

"There's no reason why Sophia Loren, Joanne Woodward, Audrey Hepburn and Lee Remick can't move into the top 10 box office attraction," Wald avers. "All they need are good stories, and that's where I come in."

"Pictures have to be hand-tailored for them. They must be miscast in the right parts, if you know what I mean. Every actress needs a change of pace, a chance to do something different."

"Ten great feminine pictures is all the picture industry needs to put it right back on its feet."

Year Soap Operas
"Other producers duck stories that star actresses in top roles because of the work involved. They're also afraid of turning out soap operas. What's wrong with having one of the characters say, 'I love you!' I'm for it — and so are feminine movie-goers."

Most prolific producer in films today, Wald believes movies were built on Garbo-Gilbert screen fare in the days when actresses out-drew their leading men 10-1.

"If a producer makes a great woman's story it can't miss being a hit," he says. "Both men and women are interested in seeing a beautiful girl on the screen."

"Just watch my next few pictures. You'll see the kind of love stories with the kind of heroines that everybody wants to see."

SMALL CHANGE
PLAINVILLE, Conn. —(UPI)—A boy handed a dime to Norton Park concessionaire B a r n e t t Sniedeman, ordered a seven-cent ice cream cone and said, "I'll take my change in pennies please."

POLICE PROTECTION

The New York State Conservation Department says the weakfish "is like a ton of bricks when he's hooked and squirms and twists with lightning speed."

Senator Urges World Unite Against Disease

(Disease knows no national boundaries—the attack against it should be worldwide in scope with all nations working together. That's the view of veteran Senator Lister Hill (D-Ala.) who has taken a particular interest in health legislation during his 31 years in Congress. In the following dispatch Senator Hill outlines his ideas for a global assault on disease.)

By SEN. LISTER HILL (D-ALA.)
(Written for United Press International)

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Within the next few years, medical research can achieve a momentous breakthrough that will enable man to overcome many of the dread diseases that have plagued him through the ages.

There is reason for confidence that this breakthrough will yield many answers in the battle against heart disease, cancer, mental illness, and other crippling and degenerative diseases.

I propose that the United States speed up this breakthrough by initiating a dynamic program of international medical research. The essential elements of the program would be these:

1. Cooperative international support of medical research directed against all major diseases.
2. Exchange of research workers so that all countries may obtain the benefits of the latest developments in research.
3. Distribution of drugs, medical equipment and rehabilitation appliances to all parts of the world.
4. Establishment of demonstration projects to disseminate the latest techniques of combating diseases in all areas.
5. Organization of an international clearing house, including appropriate translation services, to facilitate exchanges of medical knowledge.

Such a program could become a major and vital part of America's foreign policy. In our effort to win the trust and friendship of the uncommitted millions in the world, what more important boon can we bring to them than the promise of better health and longer life?

Here in America, with the vast resources of modern medicine at hand, we tend to forget that two-thirds of the earth's 2,500,000,000 people know only a submarginal living standard in which sickness and undernourishment are the "normal" state of life.

We forget that every 60 seconds 10 people die somewhere in the underprivileged areas of malaria, tuberculosis or intestinal infections.

We forget that the fundamental needs for sanitation, pure water and simple preventive medicine are pressing problems of life for these people.

The World Health Organization has done much to bring the benefits of modern medicine to underdeveloped areas, some of which founded 10 years ago.

It has demonstrated that a single shot of penicillin, costing about 15 cents, will completely cure the horrible open sore disease of yaws, which afflicts tens of millions of a good story. If not, you try to fill the gaps by acting your way through the weak spots. It doesn't always work.

Movies today put too much responsibility on the actor. If a picture is bad—due to script, direction or other elements—the star usually takes the rap.

"Of course, you can always stay home and move the lawn, waiting for the good news to come along. But it might be a long wait."

Gregory Peck Has Problem

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)— Gregory Peck has a problem.

He figures only one of his pictures in every five is a success and he can't come up with a gimmick to improve his batting average.

"I'd like to do better," says Peck, "but it's not possible. Every time an actor accepts a role he's gambling his career. And when the roles come along they're not always available."

"Producers think of movies as a Brando picture, or a Cooper picture, or a Peck picture."

"The industry," says Douglas and But Law later are generally cast in action films. Brando gets the heavy drama. Coe Grant has the light comedy fold sewed up. Gary Cooper and John Wayne are picked for the strong, silent roles.

His Occasional Jackpot

"Maybe a producer thinks of me about the eighth time around and by that time there isn't much left."

Peck admits his success is due to the one picture in five that hit the jackpot.

"Five or six good movies in a row can help you badly," he said. "And a single disaster can ruin you off altogether. Myself, Dick Young, close to being a disaster. I found in percentage of the picture, and I'm still waiting for the first dollar to roll in."

In combat poor role in second rate films, Peck has formed his own production company. To calculate his newest epic, "The Big Country" the actor is throwing a $20,000 party the night of the premiere.

Still A Gambler

"It's easier to make a good picture when you have your own properties and can choose your roles," he said. "But you're still gambling."

"Scripts are mainly at fault. I need a minimum of direction, and I don't need a producer at all. But a script must contain the essentials of a good story. If not, you try to fill the gaps by acting your way through the weak spots. It doesn't always work."

Movies today put too much responsibility on the actor. If a picture is bad—due to script, direction or other elements—the star usually takes the rap.

"Of course, you can always stay home and move the lawn, waiting for the good news to come along. But it might be a long wait."

Prosperous Citrus Season Predicted During 1958-59

TAMPA (UPI)— A favorable balance of supply and demand caused by last winter's freezes points to a prosperous 1958-59 citrus season, the Florida Citrus Exchange has predicted.

General Manager John T. Lewis and Sales Manager Fred S. Johnson, just back from the International Apple Assn. convention at Montreal, said buyers are eagerly awaiting the arrival of the Florida citrus season.

They predicted a strong demand, tight supply and wise marketing will make the coming season a profitable one for Florida citrusmen.

Johnson noted that Texas is expected to have a larger grapefruit crop this season and said this means that Florida will have to put more emphasis on grapefruit promotion to keep its share of the market.

Last season's orange crop totaled about 83 million boxes. Freeze estimates had put the crop at 102 million boxes. It is generally believed this season's orange crop will total about 80 million boxes, less than normal because of tree damage last winter.

Lebanon's Two Stumbling Blocks Discussed

By SAEB SALAM
Written for United Press International
BEIRUT (UPI)— The internal situation in Lebanon is conditioned by the fact that the country is made up of two component parts—Christian and Moslem. No future policy of program can be successful unless it is based on the principle of full and equal partnership and accord of these two parts.

Neither side must dominate the other. Neither must take the other for granted. Both must feel that they have an equal stake in the country, that they equally belong to it.

If this principle is translated into action in the economic, social, cultural, political and administrative fields, nothing can endanger the internal cohesion of Lebanon.

Lebanese relations with her sister Arab states must be based upon respect for the independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon.

The Arab states, in fact, have already been anxious to express this respect. This is evident from the covenant of the Arab League, repeated declarations of U. A. R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser and recent statements by the Republic of Iraq.

On the other hand Lebanon must not allow itself to be used by foreign powers as a lever to widen differences between the Arab states nor must it become a bridgehead for indirect pressure or direct aggression against any sister Arab state.

Lebanon has nothing to fear from the united Arab world. Apart from consideration of the sentiment and from security against possible Israeli expansion it is in the vital interest of Lebanon, whose economy depends on transit, trade and oil revenues and friendship relations with the Arab countries.

Future policy must suited for Lebanon in the East-West struggle is in fact Lebanon's traditional policy, which dates back to the inception of the country's independence in 1943.

This policy is one of friendship to all, and of neutrality between the great power blocs. By neutrality it is meant refusal to be drawn into the whole complex of direct or indirect military commitments to either bloc by the adoption of doctrine, loans or grants, giving of bases or recognition of preferential status.

This, of course, does not mean Lebanon should not cooperate with the sister Arab states in taking measures for regional security as indicated in the Arab security pact.

No one can predict the future but if one is talking of what is necessary and desirable, then Lebanese President Camille Chamoun must resign immediately and the foreign American occupation must cease forthwith.

No useful political step can be taken so long as these two stumbling blocks remain.

TV Review

By WILLIAM EWALD United Press International NEW YORK (UPI) — Views and reviews:

I watched repeats of four Walt Disney cartoons — "Casey at the Bat," "Casey Jones," "Johnny Appleseed," "Martins and the Coys" — on ABC-TV's "Disneyland" and I was struck by their thinness. It seems to me there has been a gradual hardening of the arteries since about the time of "Snow White."

Disney's products in recent years — however, admirable they may be technically — have an air of mechanical slickness, a formula-strapped sense of fun that adheres too closely to what have become Walt Disney clichés. There has been very little apt evident in the recent Disney product — including his closing, kitschier series of nature films — only a fast paced assembly line product that walks a dreary tightrope between monotony and mush.

Jack Klugman blew breath Wednesday night into an NBC-TV "Kraft Mystery Theatre" he did it, "Night Cry," a piece about a cop who accidentally knocks off a suspect and tries to conceal it. As the cop, Klugman churned out a portrait of considerable merit — aggressive, spiky, pungent, with just a hint of good-guyness. Diana Van Der Villa provided the decoration.

William Shatner, an actor TV is losing to Broadway "The World of Busby Wong," was the only notable guest of Wednesday night's CBS-TV "U. S. Steel" live Western, "Old Marshals Never Die." Shatner, who only spent about two seconds aboard his pony during the entire hour, played a town sheriff. A sort of horseless headman, you might say. Shatner, incidentally, learned about five hours before airtime that he had become a father for the first time — his wife, actress Gloria Rand, gave birth to a girl.

The Channel Swim: MGM is pitching its "Thin Man" series at ABC-TV — it won't be back on NBC-TV. Mortimer Adler is in as Mike Wallace's Sept. 7 ABC-TV guest. Bob Keeshan, who plays "Captain Kangaroo" takes off for England Sept. 8 to film some hits for his daily show which re-opens Sept. 10.

Robert Saudek Associates, producers of "Omnibus," "New York Philharmonic Previews" and "Annals of Medicine," may coax a big auto sponsor into its fold. Lucille Ball wants to do a melodrama for CBS-TV's "Desilu Playhouse" called "The Night The Phone Rang." Polly Bergen cold-shouldered the lead in the movie version of "On the Beach" to be shot in Australia.

Laurence Olivier, Frederic March and Jose Ferrer turned down the Stalin role in CBS-TV's "Playhouse 90" opener, "The Plot to Kill Stalin" with Rod Taylor, Peter Ustinov and Van Heflin still in the running. Margie Pierce is the hottest contender for the bride role in "Father of the Bride," a series that'll be seen in 1958-60. CBS-TV, still jiggling its fall schedules, now has dropped "Invisible Man" back into a Wednesday night slot and definitely knocked off "World of Giants."

Expect Unexpected From TV Quizzers NEW YORK (UPI) — Proponents of the daytime quiz show had often use the argument, "Well, they're live and you never know what'll happen." Of course, not all viewers of these shows look for the unexpected. There is evidence that a few of them are more interested in getting their hands on the loot under the popular "home viewer entry" plan.

Nevertheless, the unexpected does sometimes happen on these daytime quizzes to give them some added zip. "For Love or Money" program, a pretty young lady contestant had to choose between accepting a sum of money or a non-monetary prize. The problem was that she didn't know what the prize was and she didn't know how much money she could have.

While she was trying to decide, her husband darted to the stage from his seat in the audience and whispered advice to her ear. "He told me to take the money," she told once Bill Nimmo, "So I'll take the money."

The obedient wife was awarded the cash prize of three cents. The item she turned down was a set of golf clubs. "And I was going to take the prize," she wailed.

On "Play Your Hunch," emcee Merv Griffin introduced a lady contestant to a man and suddenly felt a chill in the air. The contestants murmured politely to each other and looked away. After the show, the man explained to Griffin that he and the woman had been married and separated 12 years ago. Hadn't seen each other since.

J. Lewis In Comedy At Ritz Sunday

Fasten your laugh belts, fans, before you go to the Ritz Theatre, Sunday to see Jerry Lewis in his new Paramount comedy, "Rock-a-Bye Baby," or you're liable to find yourselves rolling in the aisles! For in this latest film adventure of Jerry's he's about as funny as a man can be in some of the most hilarious situations imaginable.

"Rock-a-Bye Baby" co-stars Jerry with beautiful, blonde Marilyn Maxwell who hasn't been seen on the screen for three too-long years; that terrific straight man, Reginald Gardiner; big and bouncy Baccaloni, the Metropolitan Opera star who scored such a tremendous hit as the circus owner in "The Merry Andrew," and pert and pretty Connie Stevens. It also stars, although namelessly, three of the cutest babies that ever stole scenes from their elders.

Filmed in Technicolor and VistaVision, "Rock-a-Bye Baby" revolves about the predicament of a smalltown bachelor who suddenly finds himself the "mother" of triplets left on his doorstep. Of the plot is complicated by the fact that Jerry is determined to take care of them because their mother is his childhood sweetheart, now a famous Hollywood star, for whom he is still carrying a torch. Miss Maxwell plays the star to a first-class well, reaching a new comedy high with her big musical number, "The White Virgin of the Nile."

Connie Stevens plays her younger sister, who loves Jerry and is determined to land him over both his and her choleric father's objections. The father, riotously portrayed by Baccaloni, thinks Jerry is a meat-head until the triplets convince him otherwise. The scenes showing how a man (if he's Jerry Lewis!) can do television repairwork, laundry ironing, and sundry other cash-on-the-line jobs and "mother" triplets at the same time, are sensationally funny.

There are six highly enjoyable song numbers in the film, all written by Harry Warren and Sammy Cahn. Frank Tashlin, directed "Rock-a-Bye Baby," which, incidentally, is Jerry's first self-produced motion picture.

TORRID AND REALISTIC and performances given by Jean-Louis Trintignant and Brigitte Bardot in "And God Created Woman." Opening Sunday at the Movieland Ritz-In, the new Kingsley International release is in CinemaScope and Eastmancolor. The film is a Raoul J. Levy production.

French Star To Be On Drive-In Screen

Lolobrigida and Loren had better look to their laurels. No longer does Italy's tempting twosome completely dominate the pages of pin-up magazines as in days of yore. The space that once was theirs has been usurped in increasing quantities by a bundle of beauty from France named Brigitte Bardot.

Twenty-three year old Brigitte, whose newest film, the Kingsley International release, "And God Created Woman," in CinemaScope and Eastmancolor, will open Sunday at the Movieland Drive-In Theatre, has stood the film world on its collective ear. With more than twenty films to her credit, she has become her country's highest paid motion picture performer.

The sensuous mademoiselle is the answer to a hungry press agent's dream. Aside from her obvious physical assets (38-18-34), the lovely lady is possessed of candor second to none. Her ad lib made those of the early Monroe and latter-day Mansfield seem like the utterances of a Sunday school

Girl Who Tho't Nobody Loved Her Finds She's Wong From Radio

By HENRY MACLENNON
ROME (UPI)—Little 10-year-old Raffaella was very sad and lonely and, like little girls who grow up, had got believing in fairies.

But one night Raffaella thought she heard the voice of a fairy on a radio program so she sat down and wrote a letter addressed to the man in charge of the program:

"Dear Sir,
 "I am called Raffaella Panico. I live in the San Salvatore Institute of Piedimonte D'Alife. I suppose it would have to be in the time of the fairies to have my wish come true. My wish is to learn how to play the piano. I love music very much . . .
 "I am very poor. My mother is very poor and that is why she cannot come to see me . . .
 "Dear Sir, I know you love children. Can you help me I would like to tell you something now. I am not like the other children. My hair is very curly and different and my nose flat and ugly because I am a little mulatta. That is why I am more lonely than other girls because people do not love me like the other children. But if I could learn to play the piano I would not be unhappy anymore. I am praying to the Madonna and I will also pray to Her for you . . ."

This letter did not go unanswered. Raffaella had written to one of the most popular Italian radio programs, "The 24th Hour," which is broadcast Sunday and Monday nights. The program also has been called the Fairyland of Rome. Every week wishes are heard by a "Fata" or fairy who is never seen, not even in the radio studios.

After the announcer read the letter one Sunday night recently, the Fata made it possible for Raffaella to come to the studio.

She was asked to lift a cover from a bulky object on the stage. Underneath was a brand new piano—for her.

Raffaella was asked to come back to the studios when she had learned to play it—curly hair, flat nose and all.

Employment Rises Slightly In July

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Employment rose slightly while unemployment edged downward in July, but both changes were less favorable than had been expected the government reports.

As a result, the rate of unemployment, a figure adjusted to take account of the normal seasonal swings, climbed to 7.3 per cent last month from 6.8 per cent in June.

In July 1937 it was 4.8 per cent. A joint monthly report by the Commerce and Labor department said employment increased by 198,000 to 65,170,000 in July and unemployment dropped by 143,000 to 5,294,000.

The report said these developments meant that the "over-all job picture did not change significantly in July."

Heavy rains curtailed farm and other outdoor work in many parts of the nation, the report said. In addition, hiring of vacationing students and June graduates was slower than in July of most previous postwar years.

Smaller Than Usual

The report said, however, that in durable goods manufacturing, where the recession has hit hardest, the midsummer decline in employment was smaller than usual.

In manufacturing generally, it said, employment was about unchanged at 15,800,000, whereas moderate decline is usual.

Standouts among lines reporting less than seasonal employment cutbacks were fabricated metals and machinery industries.

Auto producers continued to trim payrolls by small amounts, but "there were indications of job strength among producers of automobile components, apparently in anticipation of an early model change-over," the report said.

Work Week Unchanged

It said that despite recent improvements, manufacturing employment was down 1,500,000 from a year ago, with most of the loss centered in hard goods industries.

The government's labor force figures are based on a monthly survey by the Census Bureau of 35,000 households throughout the nation.

Today's report said the average factory work week remained unchanged from June to July at 39.2 hours, although there is usually a small decline.

Average hourly earnings in manufacturing increased by one cent to 32.13, mainly as a result of wage boosts in steel, aircraft, shipbuilding, paper and chemicals, the report said.

The number of relatively long-term unemployed—those out of work for 15 weeks or more—remained unchanged at 1,700,000.
