New Turn For Finland

Being involved in the politics of Europe is a familiar situation for the Finns, but the actual negotiation is something new for them. Until recent times the Finns led a relatively untroubled life.

Their origin, like that of other nations, is clouded in the mystery of pre-historic times. The Finns were embraced by the Swedish kingdom in the days of its formation, about siderable burst of sunshine as we the end of the twelfth century. Finland was an almost disinterested pawn in the wars and maneuverings of the Napoleonic period, was ceded to Russia in 1809 by a deal between the Czar and the French Emperor to which Sweden, not consulted, was forced to yield.

History indicates that the Finns scarcely changed their ways with this change of rulers. It was only in the latter half of the nineteenth century that they began to be restive under a Russian effort to assimilate them, to Russianize them.

Russia began to tighten rings of control around the Finnish duchy, but the Finns bided their time, seizing an added measure of autonomy when the uprising of 1905 shook Russia, and quietly cutting themselves away from the mother state when the Communists took over in 1917. The new Russia made a brief effort to force Finland into the fold, but the Finns enlisted the aid of German troops and the fine of all the less are granted and the Russians were repulsed. Then Germany collapsed and the Russians were repulsed. Then Germany collapsed and Finland was free.

More Speed In Air

The development of jet propulsion still is stepping up the speed at which planes can be driven through the air, as designers learn how to make better use of this new kind of power. The Navy displayed its newest jet-propelled fighter plane in a series of flights on the West Coast, one of which spanned almost the length of the United States Pacific coastline, from Seattle to San Diego, in a little more than two hours. The average speed for the flight was 485

New speed records for specific distances along the coast established by these Navy planes supplant previous records established by Army jet planes about two years ago. Within another couple of years still faster records probably will be set. The designers of aircraft, like the "The Lesson of Czechoslovakis", designers of homes and automobiles and other things, are never satisfied.

The aviation policy board of Congress has reported to Congress that it would cost an estimated ten billion dollars a year to keep military aviation in this country abreast of developments, maintaining air forces so powerful that America obviously would win in the air any war ried that if the Congressional in which we might be involved. The policy board said such "witch hunt" continues the govern an air program is the way to head off "the next war."

The figure is staggering, but if such a program would find outstanding scientists who prevent war it would be worth it. The military cost of will accept government jobs. Admiral Dickens Descendants of famous men sometimes turn up in queer places. A grandson of the novelist Charles Dickens, Sir Gerald Dickens, appears as an admiral. His grandfather General DeGaulle says the wrote about many aspects of human life, but war was not United States must help defend among them. That was one theme in which he definitely was not interested.

Admiral Dickens has just written a book, "Bombing of the country excepting the Ruspretty much the same thing last and Strategy," to prove that the British emphasis on air week. Some years ago English- attack was a mistake and weakened the army and navy, men were shocked by Prime Min-ister Stanley Baldwin's assertion defense. He thought the navy, if allowed, might have that "Britain's frontier is on the handled the submarine menace far better than did the air

Some of this may be the traditional expert's belief that his own line is best, like the legendary shoemaker who remarked, "After all, there is nothing like leather." But Admiral Dickens makes one valid point, tha tombing cities made infinitely harder the task of post-war reconstruction, to say nothing of the ill-will it left behind. He preferred the old-style clash of battleships on the high seas.

THE WORLD TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE AP Poreign Affairs Analyst

Maybe we are over-optimistic ecause Spring is just around the corner, but the developments in Western Europe reflect a connear the end of a tough and discouraging winter.

Two momentous international conferences have produced re-sults which bid fair to go a long way toward achieving economic rehabilitation and peace for Wesern Europe. And such a happy development would, of course, be a step in the direction of world rehabilitation and peace. I has-ten to add that I'm not for a moment auggesting our worries are nearing an end, or anything like it. But the more peacemindedness we can cultivate, the better.

The conferences referred to are the Brussels parley to consider ways and means of forming a union of Western European nations, and the American-British French discussions in London regarding the future of Western Germany and the Ruhr. Both these meetings have met with unexpected success in laying the foundations upon which important structures may be built. The Brussels conference, which is continuing, is among Britafn, France and the so-called Benelux countries-Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. Already they have laid down the political and legal basis of a Western European economic and military union. It is stated that there is general agreement on the basic principles of a 60-year pact binding the five countries, although considerable work remains to be done before the formal pacts can be phrased. The hope is that the rest of the 16 Western European nations will foin.

Should this Western European union develop it would, as I have mentioned in previous columns, be calculated to complement the Marshall Plan in a big way. Indead, whole-hearted co-operation among the sixteen countries should so speed their rehabilitation that America would progressively be relieved of the need of economic assistance. We are talking about "whole hearted" co-operation, which surely is the least that should be contemplated.

The London conference dove tails into the Brussels meeting and into the Marshall Plan. The three powers have announced agreement on future international control of the great industrial Ruhr, with the participation of Western Germany. The propos als contain important incentives for the German people to work for close association with the western world. The conference hasn't yet completed its work and has recessed, but what it has done thus far sums up to this: Western Germany (that is.

in the rehabilitation of Europe That is vastly important, because atructure. And of course the Ruhr figures heavily, with its rich coal and iron mines.

Under the Allied plan the wealth of the Ruhr, which for-merly was used to implement German aggression, will now be devoted to the recovery of all Western Europe, including Germany. Allied safeguards will insure that the products of the Ruhr never again will be made into instruments of war.

Perhaps the full significance of this move can be shown better by putting the situation like ceiling and hit her in the face She rushed through the hallway dodging more plaster, and awak ened the other occupants. Police Captain Robert Strange and two other patrolmen were summoned. The cracks were louder when they arrived. "They sounded like rifle shots," Strange this: Without Germany, the rehabilitation of Western Europe would be doubtful; with it, there is no reason why there shouldn't he success, if we get peace.
