"So Many Switches, And All Those Knobs"

When Heavy Attack Squadron Nine held Open House recently much "oh and ah-ing" took place at Ramey Field.

After a full dress inspection by Commander Floyd L. Harris, around 1,000 wives, children and guests were escorted through the squadrons spaces and given a tour of the aircraft.

Several of the flight crew wives were amazed to see all the gadgets that their husbands use on a flight and Mrs. Frank Kelsey, for one, was heard to exclaim "I have never seen so many switches and knobs!" She is the wife of ADJ Frank Kelsey, a radar gunner. Others were particularly impressed by the take off and landing of the planes in the field carrier landing formation. One wife commented, "The planes seemed so big and heavy when they started to roll, but they came by us so fast that I almost missed them."

During the field carrier landing procedures the wives of the pilots talked to their husbands relating the landing signal of ficer's comments concerning the previous landings.

The youngsters were fascinated by the planes but the refreshment stand stole the show. They drank over a thousand Coca Cola donated by Mr. Holtzclaw of the Sanford Coca Cola Bottling Co. And the kids who were assisted in a small way by the adults, consumed almost twenty-five hundred hot dogs! The hot dogs were donated by Mr. Wade of Wade's Superes and Mr. Rob Brown of the French Avenue Winn-Dixie food store. Rolls were donated by the Dandee Bakery.

Colonel Grayson Powell of Swainsboro, Ga., who at the present time is visiting with his Navy son, Lt. (jg) Wendy Powell, said, "I have attended many Open House Ceremonies and inspections, but I think that this is the most interesting to the general public that I have seen."

Chamber Busy In Past Year

It is customary that a retiring official be given a plaque, trophy or some such "token of appreciation."

Such was the case at the annual Seminoles Chamber of Commerce banquet here. Clifford McKibbin Sr. succeeded by Mark Cleveland Jr., as Chamber president last Oct. 1, was given a plaque Friday night for a "job well done."

McKibbin, asked to report on Chamber accomplishments for the past year, served two years in a row as president, gave a very brief resume of projects in the past year. However, a check of the record reveals much more accomplished than McKibbin took credit for in his report.

McKibbin mentioned the three prime objectives: retention of the Sanford Naval Air Station, promotion of the county as a site for light industry and efforts to secure approval of the Sanford T. S. Canal.

There were in addition to the general program sponsored annually by the Chamber included in his report were such items as the addition of V-11 to NAS, concentrating all of Heavy Attack Wing One in Sanford and the aid of the Armed Forces committee.

The Chamber in securing almost $1 million for NAS improvements. Efforts to secure the Sanford T. S. Canal were unsuccessful, but the Chamber feels that "much support for this project" was gained in the 1958 battle. The Chamber also feels that approval will be granted when the subject is reopened by the Corps of Engineers.

Industrial expansion is a continuous program. Officials are reluctant to attempt to measure effectiveness in a 12-month period. The Johnson & Johnson plant which Seminoles attempted to obtain went by the board, at least temporarily, last year. However, the Chamber feels that Seminoles "has its foot in the door" as a possible J&J site in the future.

More important than these items mentioned by McKibbin, perhaps, are the day-to-day services rendered ed the county by the Chamber. Among these are the "welcomes" extended new businessmen and NAS officials at the Chamber's Coffee Club, the support given local merchants and industrial firms, cooperation given civic clubs in various projects and the continuous campaign to "sell" Seminoles County. In the latter category during McKibbin's administration, the Chamber placed advertisements in Sales Management, the Wall Street Journal and the Journal of Lifetime Living. These ads were directed at industry and at senior citizens in America who are contemplating retirement, and who are interested in places to spend retirement years. During the past year Seminoles County received a full-time Florida State Employment Office, aided the County Agent in setting up a county display at the Central Florida Exposition in Orlando, furnished more than 3,000 brochures on Seminoles County to agencies such as auto clubs, other Chambers of Commerce and welcome stations.

In addition to its work on the Sanford Titusville Canal, the Chamber, under McKibbin's leadership, worked with the Florida Waterways Committee. A highlight of this work was meeting with the Florida congressional delegation to urge full development of the state's waterways.

The Chamber can point to establishment of a vegetable or cool vacuum plant (Jet-Vac), which will insure production of higher quality vegetables, more money for county farmers, the beginning of York Manufacturing Co. operations, opening of Allen Orlando Inc. completion of a new building by Harcar Miami and in framing of a new plant for Pietro Manufacturing Co. and many others.

Cooperation with civic clubs best can be emphasized by Sanford, winning of the title of Florida's Most Conspicuous City, a campaign sponsored by the Junior Chamber, supported by the Senior Chamber.

The Chamber continued to wage a campaign in behalf of local businessmen. Since Seminoles has no Better Business Bureau, the Chamber attempts to keep the public informed on such matters. Close contact was maintained between the local Chamber and the State Chamber and the Florida Development Commission, particularly the industrial divisions of the two industrial projects supplied by the two agencies were contacted.

The list of accomplishments could go on and on. Many thought that McKibbin was too modest in his report. The record proves it.

THE McDUGALL PUPPETS — Mrs. Elsie McDougall, who has moved to Sanford to be with her Navy son, creates her own marionettes and puppets. She is originally from Canada. (Herald Staff Photo)

Puppeteer Proud Of 150 'Children'

Mrs. Elsie McDougall has arrived in town with 150 children. The children are not the kind that go to school or roam the streets, however. They lie quietly in their boxes until the magic in Mrs. McDougall's hands brings them to life.

Each one was made like Pinocchio, with tender hands and loving care. They are marionettes and puppets, designed and created by Mrs. McDougall, a delightful Canadian who has come to live in Sanford.

Unaccustomed to the Sanford heat, Mrs. McDougall mopped her brow as she explained that she moved to Sanford a week ago to be with her son, Robert Oakley Robert is an AM2 with VAH-1 at Hamey Field.

Ever since she made her first puppet in 1938, Mrs. McDougall has worked at perfection in the rare art. The work was an accident—when her two boys interfered with painting and drawing she found a book on puppetry in the library, and thus began her career.

Mrs. McDougall has done television shows in Canada and the United States. She has performed for schools and kindergartens, hotels and vaudeville shows. As an attraction for bazaars and benefits, her marionettes and puppets have raised more dollars for charity.

With her she carries all her equipment, she builds her stage, paints her sets, makes her costumes and dresses, believes in the "do it yourself" theory. Mrs. McDougall also writes her own scripts. She does require help with sound effects, music and voices, which have been taped and are used with a loudspeaker.

The McDougall marionettes and puppets are unique in that their faces are made of wire, which eliminates the ugly grass in the jaw. Another fortunate accident caused this discovery. Mrs. McDougall spilled some latex on a puppet's face one day and put off the clean up job until later.

The puppeteer is residing on Country Club Road. She is originally from Vancouver, and once taught a course in puppetry at the University of British Columbia. She plans to be in Sanford for three years, during Robert's tour of duty here.

Mrs. McDougall will audition for television stations in Orlando within the next few weeks. Perhaps residents will see her then, as she breathes life into her many children.

Wabash To Crest; Farmlands Awash

MOUNT CARMEL, Ill. (UPI)—The flood-swollen Wabash River bulged into a giant lake 33 miles long and 14 miles wide at its widest point today, inundating thousands of acres of farmland in Illinois and Indiana.

The river, which earlier tore poles in levees at Russellville, Ill., and Oaktown, Ind., surged past Mount Carmel Wednesday night at 24.5 feet, inundating a 20-block lowland area of the city of 8,732 population.

About 25 homes in the area suffered water damage but only a few families moved out. The rest took refuge on second floors of their homes to wait out the flood.

The storied stream was expected to crest at Mount Carmel in 24 feet today. However, little further damage was predicted since most of the city is on high ground.

The heaviest flooding was on the Illinois side where an estimated 30,000 to 35,000 acres were awash with murky water.

Residents appeared in flooded lowland streets in Mount Carmel to serve as taxis for floodlocked families.

Social Security Bill Encourages Old Age

The proposed social security expansion bill introduced into Congress yesterday ultimately can achieve only one thing: make everyone want to skip youth and start out as "old folks."

The legislation, in effect, would provide the elderly with paid-up hospital and surgical insurance for life. This is in addition to current benefits.

Cost of such a program, naturally, would be placed on the same people who now finance social security. Next January, social security deductions for workers making $4,800 or more per year will be increased by $2 monthly, or $24 per year. The present $120 per year deduction gradually will climb to $216 per person per year by 1969, without new benefits.

If the "old folks" bill is enacted, social security taxes will be raised immediately.

The "clincher" in the bill, proposed by Rep. A. J. Forand, Rhode Island Democrat, is that proposed tax increases won't finance such a program. Forand admits this. He apparently isn't interested in where the remainder of the money would be obtained. He just knows that the AFL-CIO has tagged the bill a "must" in this session and that it is popular with the "old folks."

The new social security rate in 1969, if the bill is passed, would not be $216, but $245 per employee earning $6,000 or more and $427.50 a year for self-employed persons.

This bill is opposed vigorously by the American Medical Association as "another step toward socialized medicine."

At the same time, Congress is debating a bill to raise the income tax on life insurance companies. This, of course, will result in higher premiums for the "young folks" who are being asked to provide free medical care for the "old folks."

It has been suggested that American "young folks" grow up too fast. Such proposals as the Forand bill could make "old folks" a lot of us in a hurry. There is a sad side to such old age comforts. The healthy young taxpayers probably will work so hard to make ends meet (after taxes) that he will die before he is old enough to enjoy the benefits his taxes make possible.

Explain It, Please

The federal government, often accused of wasteful spending, usually attempts to defend its position by insisting on some long-winded explanation which insinuates that the questioner is about three rungs below the idiot level.

The dolt who fails to understand why he can get only $42 monthly from welfare, when the U. S. is lending millions to Jordan, Iraq and Yugoslavia, is just too contemptible for words.

Mr. Average Citizen, who duly files his income tax return so that thousands of "administrative experts" on the U. S. payroll may draw salaries befitting their titles, sometimes is at a loss to understand why people in the U. S. A. die of malnutrition while millions of tons of food are given to foreign countries.

He, too, is subjected to a good taste of the "It's None of Your Business" attitude so common in public "servants."

With this in mind, we join the "idiot" class to ask a question: who was the "efficient" public servant who mailed 15,700 copies of "Handbook For Emergencies" to Dr. John Ziegler in Cincinnati? Dr. Ziegler wrote the federal government for one copy of Booklet No. 15700. By return mail, he received 15,700 copies of the booklet.

It is possible, but not probable, that the bureaucrat couldn't read. Even so, he should have had enough common sense to know that nobody, but nobody, wanted 15,000 copies of any booklet the federal government ever published.

The explanation should be interesting, if the bureaucrat lowers himself to the point of trying to explain the error to all of the dolts who pay his salary.

WING AND A PRAYER

LINDBERGH-1927

WHO, 1959?

Assignment Washington

By Ed Kuterka
WASHINGTON — I somehow got the idea that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson didn't have many friends in the room. This was to be the Mormon elder's first taking-over by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee this year. He walked into the small hearing room under a tern galton hat and on a ray of sunshine.

England Shrouded By Blanket Of Fog

LONDON (UPI)—A great blanket of fog hovered over southern England today, paralyzing land, sea and air transportation in the worst blackout in 29 years. London airport has been out of service since Wednesday night, but service in the city was virtually nonexistent, and the few trains that completed journeys in the capital ran far behind schedule.

Highways leading to London were closed by abandoned cars and trucks. Shipping officials were assembling tenders to take passengers off the giant liner Queen Elizabeth, fog-bound for four days in the English Channel a few miles from Southampton.

The fog caused a number of shipping accidents — notably the grounding of a Norwegian tanker near the Isle of Wight and a collision between a small British liner and a fishing boat — but no casualties were reported.

Similar conditions applied in 25 countries, a belt of territories stretching from the Channel to the industrial midlands.

"We cannot recall such a complete and widespread blackout," said auto-club spokesmen. "Conditions are the worst in 29 years."

At least one member has health insurance in about 13 per cent of all American families.

The Secretary went around the room grasping any hand within reach with the desperation of a man who was in need of friends. And I think he was.

He turned his charm up another notch when Sen. Allen Ellender (D., La.), the chairman, sauntered in. "Say," he exclaimed, "but haven't you done a lot of traveling?" And he and Ellender talked cozily about the Senator's trip to South America.

But then the TV man stretched a yellow tape 16 feet 11 inches from his camera to Benson's face, and the inquisition began.

Now Ellender was growling at poor Ezra. "As I understand it," he muttered to the Secretary, "you propose a further reduction of prices to the farmer."

What friendly Mr. Benson had said was there ought to be a change in the farmer's wheat law. Says of the problem, he said, was there was just too damned much wheat stored around the country — about 1.3 billion bushels.

From across the green baize on the mahogany table, another Senator got into the fray — and a fellow Republican at that — Sen. Milton Young of the North Dakota wheatlands.

"I don't know why you paint the worst kind of a picture in agriculture," said Young as if those words were pent-up for a year. "Your whole tone certainly has been unfriendly to the farmer."

Friendly Mr. Benson smiled and bent and unbent a paper clip. He took a gulp of tea water, swilled it around for a moment, then swallowed hard.

There may be a solution for the wheat farmers' woes, said the Secretary. Do away with acreage allotments. This, he said, should be done "as soon as price supports are adjusted to feed-use relationship."

Sen. Stuart Symington (D., Mo.), a Presidential possibility, said he didn't know what the Secretary meant. Neither did I. And I fear, neither did Mr. Benson.

"I've been a farmer most of my life," he pleaded, "and sometimes I can't figure out the accounting system of this country."

But Symington pressed on. Just tell him, he said, what price support figure would be. Mr. Benson turned to the assistant on his left, Marvin McLain. Mr. McLain couldn't quite answer it.

Under Secretary True Morse, flanking Benson on the right, had a stab at it, but couldn't get across the true picture. So from behind Mr. Benson popped another assistant, complete with charts.

"All I want," warned Symington, breathing fire, "is a figure, a simple specific figure." Ah said Mr. McLain at last, "if all you want is a specific answer, I don't see why we can't furnish it to you in a few days."

Forget it, said Symington. Even Ezra looked disgusted.

The Senators shortly knocked off for lunch. Friendly Mr. Benson now looked relieved. At least the inquisition was over for a spell.

But as the people filed out, a little man came up from the back of the room and tapped the Secretary on the shoulder.

"I'm a farmer from Jasper County, Indiana," he said in words that spat. "If you want to destroy us farmers, why don't you do it the humane way, all at once — not by attrition?"

Poor Ezra Benson. He looked the man in the eye — and thought, "If you're not happy," he said, "I'll trade jobs with you."

The way things were going for Mr. Benson, I think he meant it.

Washington Calling

By Margus Childs
WASHINGTON — With the reply of the West rejecting the Soviet Union proposal of a German peace conference shortly to be sent off, the next move will soon be up to Moscow.

In what is widely being called the most widely leaked note in diplomatic history the West is making what are advertised as concessions to the Russians. One such concession is to include representatives of both West and East Germany in a conference not as participants with seats at the table but as consultants.

But from the Russian viewpoint these concessions are on the terms of a conference and they do not get down to the substance, which is Berlin. Therefore, the view of the most knowledgeable diplomats here is that Moscow will almost certainly slam the ball back into the Western court. We asked you for counterproposals on Berlin and Germany, the Russian reply is likely to say, and you gave us none. The line that Anastas Mikoyan took during his American visit was to demand at every opportunity that the United States had to suggest as a substitute for ending the four-power occupation of Berlin.

There was never any doubt that the Western powers would in full agreement insist on staying in Berlin and having access to the city. The dispute over how access should be maintained if the Russians withdrew, leaving the East German in authority, was blown up out of all proportion to the reality. It has now been satisfactorily resolved and no doubt remains of how and when the Allied powers would act to reject any East German authority over free access to the city.

One objective of the Russian maneuver on Berlin seems to be to get recognition for East Germany as a sovereign state. Therefore, the Western proposal to have consultants of the two Germanys at the conference table will almost certainly be referred by Moscow to the Pankov regime in East Berlin. This little byplay will be designed to augment Pankov's prestige and if the reply of Pankov should be, "No, we insist on full participation," it will not be surprising.

What has been blandly taken for granted in the West — that the Russians will welcome the opportunity for a meeting on Germany and Berlin — is not assured at all. This is the view of diplomats who believe the Russian mood is one of supreme self-confidence.

Nevertheless, the odds are for a conference to be held in late April or early May, since Moscow cannot be put in the position of a flat no. In the view of those who are convinced it is wisest not to indulge in wishful thinking and to take a sternly realistic view, here is how events will develop.

1. The conference will be a confrontation and not negotiation. East and West will come with positions that cannot be reconciled.

2. The conference will break down after the two sides have aired their irreconcilable differences. Mutual denunciation will follow with the blame for failure passed back and forth in angry recrimination.

3. The widely advertised failure is very likely to occur before the May 27 deadline the Russians have set for their departure from Berlin. Then could come the supreme test of unity in the West.

4. The course of caution would be to accept the East Germanys as agents, regardless of whether the conference had succeeded in establishing Russia's continuing authority. But if the stand firm advocates have their way, the East Germanys will be brushed aside.

5. Then it will be up to Moscow again. The Russians, in their stern view of the future, would restrain their German satellite and the threat of war would pass, with the three allies still having their own access to Berlin. It is not a cheerful prospect. On the contrary, it could hardly be more grim. The guesses involved are stupendous and, if they are wrong, catastrophe by capitulation or nuclear war is the choice.

Sincere and high-minded men such as Senator Mike Mansfield are looking for a way out. Perhaps an escape can be found short of the confrontation that will bring the world to the edge of Armageddon. But since the principal Russian objective in the Berlin maneuver seems to be to split the West, and a likelier device would be hard to find, the odds on a showdown are heavy.

Twin Tots Caged, Mother Will Face 'Neglect' Charges

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI)—A mother of five has been charged with neglect for penning her 14-month-old twin daughters in "indiscribably filthy" animal-like cages at their home.

Officers said Mrs. May Matt, 30, was also being held for investigation of insanity.

Sheriff's investigators, who raided the house Wednesday after neighbors reported the abuse, said the red-haired girls were penned like animals in a dirt-littered bedroom.

The cages were improvised from chicken wire hung over vermin-ridden wooden beds. Human refuse and other filth covered the floor of the unventilated room, officers said.

Neighbors said the twins were never allowed out of doors.

Another daughter and two young sons also lived in the house.

Juvenile investigator Helen Pankov said she warned Mrs. Matt about similar child abuses when the family lived in another home in the area. She added that Mrs. Matt has been ill for some time with a heart condition and apparently needs mental help.

Authorities said the twins appeared to be normal despite their abuse.

Officers said they did not plan to arrest the father pending further investigation. They permitted him to keep custody of the boys but took the three girls to a juvenile home.

The father said he built the cages to serve as cribs because he did not have enough money to buy cribs.

Zoo Keepers End Strike, Animals Back To Normal

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)— A three-day strike by 50 zoo keepers ended Wednesday night when officials gave in and granted organizational rights to employees. A zoo coup, some called it. On one side were St. Louis Zoo Director George P. Vierheller and the zoological board, besieged by opposing forces from the Institutional and Public Employees Union Local 410, who demanded organizational rights. Union spokesman Joseph I. Ames said battle lines had been drawn at "arms length."

Caught in the crossfire were the animal kingdom's subjects, its lions and llamas, elephants and elk. Vierheller and 10 supervisory staff members worked day and night, without rest, to feed the 1,600 animals.

"The monkeys' morale is suffering," trainer William Rogers said shortly before the walkout ended. "They know something's wrong and it's not good for them."

When he analyzed the "water," he found it was a ready-made highball of corn whisky and water. High would not say how much liquor he found, but a reliable source said it was about 40 proof.

Fern Park Student Wounds Self, Pair

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — A University of Florida engineering student apparently went berserk late Thursday night, shot and stabbed a married couple and then seriously wounded himself, police reported today.

Held under guard at Alachua General Hospital for investigation was Ross Allan Fox, 28, senior from Fern Park.

Officers said their investigation showed that Fox turned on James H. Todd, Jr., student from Conway, S. C., and his 23-year-old wife, Beverly, at their home.

Mrs. Todd, who was shot in the chest, said Fox apparently cut his head at their home. Without apparent reason, she said Fox unstrapped a hunting knife from his leg and stabbed Todd in the back.

When Mrs. Todd ran to a telephone, Fox then drew a .38 pistol, she told the operator a man was in her house with a gun and needed help.

When officers arrived, they found Todd suffering pistol wounds of the right thigh and lower left jaw. Mrs. Todd had been shot in the upper chest. Todd also had a knife wound in the back.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Parker said Fox was picked up at the local airport where he had driven and told attendants he had been shot, asked for a drink of water and a minister.

Fox was taken to the hospital with a pistol wound in the left chest. Police said all three apparently were shot with Fox's .38 pistol.

An investigation was underway.

Atlas Is Failure; Up Only 3 Minutes

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A fuel-laden Atlas ICBM exploded like a huge oil storage tank early today on what was intended to be another 4,300-mile test hop to the South Atlantic.

The 108-ton Atlas, which has been chosen to boost the first manned space capsule into orbit, disintegrated completely in a white-hot splash of flame that rivaled the moon overhead in brilliance.

The Air Force said the blowup was caused by a malfunction which occurred at 12:04 a. m. e.s.t. after the 50-foot war rocket's two powerful booster engines separated and began a steep plunge into the ocean.

"The cause of the malfunction is not available," officials said.

It was the first Atlas explosion in five months. The last blowup came Sept. 18, when the Air Force tried for the first time to send an Atlas the full intercontinental distance of 6,300 miles.

The Air Force had hoped to test the missile's blunt nose cone today and observe the path the Atlas took through space. But the flight, which would have taken probably about 25 minutes, lasted little more than three minutes.

Only once has the Atlas flown the full intercontinental route.

Ed Graham was chosen best speaker in the club contest and will represent Sanford in the area "speak-off" next month in Jacksonville.

Fireman Got Kick In Fighting Fire

PLANT CITY (UPI) — A 35-year-old city fireman awaited trial today after admitting he set five fires because "I got a kick out of helping to put them out."

Robert Chester Anderson was charged Thursday with arson in the fires which caused $100,000 damage. No one was hurt in the blazes.

Police quoted Anderson as saying he felt drives to start the fires because he felt "relief" from internal pressures when he helped put them out.

He was held under $500 bond.

Cleveland Chosen County Bar Head

Squadron Will Join Demonstrations Of Famed Blue Angels

A squadron from Ramey Field will participate in flight demonstrations this weekend with the Navy's famous Blue Angels.

Flying their twin jet A-1H Skywarrior, pilots from Heavy Attack Squadron Nine flew over the NASCAR races today at the International Speedway in Daytona Beach.

The Blue Angels arrived in Sanford Wednesday, and yesterday gave spectators a treat with their expert precision maneuvers. Today, Saturday and Sunday they will continue to thrill the crowds at Daytona Beach, during the final days of "Speed Week."

VAH-9's swept wing carrier bombers can fly at speeds of ten miles a minute, seven miles above the earth. Their familiar shape and sound have become second nature to those who live near the Sanford Naval Air Station.

Lt. Col. Ralph Mattus, operations officer of Nine, is leader of the bomber flight in the weekend demonstration.

Sanford residents who missed the show yesterday will have another chance to see the team tomorrow.

It will perform maneuvers at 12:30 p. m. on its return from Daytona. The length of the show will depend on the amount of fuel left in the tanks.

A spokesman for the Navy said this morning, "The show may not be long, but this is certainly the best flying we may ever see. No one should miss it."

The public may come to Ramey Field for the performance.

Greyhounds To Be Official Name Of Baseball Team

Sanford's baseball club will be called the Sanford Greyhounds. The announcement came this morning from W. K. Melhober, promoter of the new venture.

An office has been opened at the Municipal Stadium. Ward Goodrich, business manager for the Greyhounds, may be reached there for information. The number is FA 2-1940.

A meeting was to be held this morning to form a corporation. Officers will be revealed by Melhober after the session. Dr. D. H. Mathers is expected to be chosen president of the club.

Car Cuts Corner, But To No Avail

Cutting a corner short on French Ave. and 13th St. failed to avoid an accident last night between vehicles driven by Miss Beverly Jean Cooper and George Samuel Kenna, both of Sanford.

Miss Cooper, a school teacher, told police officers she thought she "could get out of the way" before Kenna hit her, as she made a left turn into 13th St.

The accident occurred east of the intersection at 7:44 p. m. Miss Cooper was charged with failure to yield right of way. Damage to both cars was estimated at $370.

Board Votes To Continue United Fund In Seminole

United Fund directors yesterday decided that this charity agency should be used again next year "to afford Seminole County residents the most efficient method of making one contribution."

Disappointed that the campaign for funds this year fell short of its goals, some thought had been given to abandoning the "give-our-for-all" fund raising plan. UF officials at a recent meeting expressed the opinion that "since folks are not contributing to this drive in a way that indicates their support of the idea, maybe we are cutting our heads against a stone wall of indifference in trying to have a United Fund."

Discussion yesterday brought out the fact that even though subscriptions fell below goals of the agencies, the total allotted to each by UF for the two years of UF operation was greater than the charities had been able to raise in their individual campaigns in

'Zorro' No Hero To This Resident

Television's Robin Hood of the southwest may be a hero to the kids, but to Ed Higgins, "Zorro" is nothing but a large size headache.

The other day Ed came home to find the fruits of a television education. "Zorro" was written all over the exterior of his white house — a long-lasting, super-smear, red chalk.

The art work did not end there. The fence down the alley, the neighboring houses, garbage cans, cars; anything that would take scribbling was emblazoned with the dashing name of "Zorro."

The culprit was found and put on the carpet. Orders were issued to cleanse the area; additional punishments were administered.

"Now," said Ed, at the top of his lungs, "can you think of ANYTHING else you wrote Zorro on?" "No, Daddy," answered the guilty one meekly.

Just then the neighbor's dog sauntered by. Yup, both sides White dog, too.

Evidence Absent, Motorists Freed

KENOSHA, Wis. (UPI) — Speeding charges against 25 motorists were dismissed Thursday because of the absence of one vital piece of evidence.

Judge Urban J. Zievers threw out the charges after highway police failed to produce the incriminating radarograph used to trap the defendants.

Russia Brags Again

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's output of chemical products now exceeds that of any other European nation, according to Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Says West's Plan Not Constructive

LONDON (UPI) — Radio Moscow today denounced the West's Berlin proposal as devoid of "any constructive suggestion" for a settlement of the East-West dispute.

The attack came one day before the Moscow radio attack followed by three days a saboteur radio speech on Germany and Berlin by Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, who warned that any attempt by the West to shoot its way into Berlin would mean war.

On Monday, the U. S., Britain and France delivered notes in Moscow proposing a broad Big Four foreign ministers' conference on Berlin, Germany and European security. The notes suggested that West and East Germans sit at an "advisory" conference.

The Soviet had proposed a 20-nation conference to conclude a peace treaty with Germany. The participants would include all World War II allies.

The western powers also expressed determination to maintain the right of free access to West Berlin. Russia has said it would turn over its control functions to the Communist East German regime, which the Western powers do not recognize.

Moscow radio contended that the Western replies do "not provide a reasonable basis for settlement of the German question."

It claimed the notes "do not contain a single more or less constructive suggestion capable of facilitating settlement of the questions either of Berlin or Germany."

Chief Gets Word, Auto Towed Back Into Illegal Spot

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — When do Miami Beach police tow a car back to its illegal parking spot after the chief has ordered it towed away?

Answer: When the chief learns that the car was hauling a city councilman.

The incident occurred Wednesday night when officer Adrain Dawson spotted a big limousine parked on a crosswalk in front of the Miami Beach Auditorium where a boxing match was in progress.

The driver and passenger refused to move and made a few remarks about Miami Beach police in general and Chief Mike Fox in particular.

Fox drove up a few minutes later and Dawson told him of the remarks.

"Tow it away," ordered Fox.

After the first round, someone told Fox the car was carrying Councilman Marcus Liberman.

Fox ran out of the auditorium and ordered Dawson "get that car back before the fight is over."

Perhaps if fighter Mike DeJohn hadn't fallen to his knees twice in the sixth round, Dawson might have made it back in time.

As it was, the tow truck was pulling the car up just as Liberman stepped outside.

Police dismissed it as a "routine incident" Thursday and scratched the violation from their official records.

Reedy Will Speak At Rotary Monday

Bill Reedy, author of "The Key to Peace in America," will speak to the Sanford Rotary Club Monday.

A state representative from Lake County, Reedy stirred the nation last November when he proposed a public relations plan to inform the northern states of the "true" relations between races in the south.

Reedy feels that pre-World War thinking is responsible for criticism from the north, that the south should defend itself with facts of advantages offered its Negroes.

In past talks to clubs and releases in newspapers, Reedy has quoted the president of a Negro college in the south. The Negro educator said he "knew of nothing that had ever happened to colored people that had hurt them so badly, and cut off the free friendly relations between the white and colored of the south, as had the Supreme Court decision of 1954."

Reedy has announced his intention of presenting a bill for his proposed "Voice of the Southern States" program to the state legislature, April 1.

The Rotary Club will meet at noon in the Civic Center.

Students Say 'Aye'

STARKVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Students at Mississippi State University voted overwhelmingly in favor of having their basketball team play in the racially integrated McAllen gymnasium, but their president said it was not their decision to make.

In a 9-1 vote, the student body expressed support for the team's move to the new arena. However, the student body president said that it was not his role to make such a decision.

Surprise In Store For Local Drivers

Local drivers who have avoided certain streets have a surprise in store as the resurfacing program spreads out in Sanford.

Paving on West Third St., between Park and French, was completed yesterday.

Work began this morning on Palmetto Ave., where the strip across of the school would result in the passage of the "last resort" bill to close public schools. Collins vetted such a bill two years ago, but state legislators say the bill will be revived this spring.

The governor declined to say what he would do if the bill comes up again, but added he had no cause to regret his vote in 1957.

Collins knew the Miami integration decision was in the making, but God he had no part in planning it.

Seminole Gets Set For Another Fair

Seminole County exhibitors will move many of their displays directly from the American Legion Fair grounds to the Central Florida Fair, which opens Monday in Orlando.

The Seminole County exhibit once again is under the direction of Cecil Tucker, county agent. Limited funds have necessitated the refurbishing of last year's display, but fresh paint and a change in design should add new appeal.

A ferris wheel bearing original flower arrangements will turn constantly in one corner of the exhibit. Huge scales, weighing the county's productivity against its small size, will again be utilized. A model of the area provides meager balance for the riches of vegetables and citrus representing the county's fertility.

An outdoor patio scene, complete with shrubbery and sunshine, exemplifies the fun of Central Florida living. One of the displays is a shadow box containing models of a 4 H boy and girl, "the best crop in Seminole County."

Last year, the county's contribution to the fair won the commendation of officials. Thousands of visitors paused to see the display and remark on its presentation.

With only a few days preparation, Tucker feels that this year will bring even more valuable advertising for the smallest county in Florida.

Qualifying Limit For Tourney Voted

The Board of the Sanford Women's Golf Association last night voted to have only one qualifying day for the club membership.

Members will qualify March 4. Matches will be posted within a few days after qualifying rounds are played. In former years members were permitted to qualify on weekends, in addition to Wednesday.

A nominating committee will be selected next week during a business meeting in the patio of the Mayfair Country Club. The session will be held at noon, followed by luncheon at 12:30 p. m.
