

DEMOCRATS OF STATE ADOPT PARTY POLICY

It was "ready to turn to the Democratic Party as an agency of relief to bring economic conditions to a higher level." Governor Carlson said the tariff was "so high it is impossible for us to trade with the world." He asserted the Democrats could remedy the situation.

James M. Carson of Miami, advocated organizing "from the grass-roots up," and said provision should be made by law for biennial conventions of the party for the purpose of adopting platforms. He added he did not propose that Florida go back to the old convention system of nominating candidates, but that platform conventions be called in advance of primaries.

Congressman R. A. Green, Second Florida District, made the only reference by speakers to the 1932 presidential standard bearer possibilities. He told the conference of the United States Sen. Walter George of Georgia, or Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York would be the next occupant of the White House. Applause greeted the statement.

There was a sprinkling of Roosevelt buttons in the audience, these having been distributed by Roosevelt workers to persons who wished to wear them.

That women of Florida are being organized to advance the Democratic cause was related by George McKory, Sanford, and Mrs. James M. Carson, who has been elected by the national Democratic organization as general of Florida for the year just past. McKory said Florida was one of three states in which an experiment is now being conducted toward organizing women voters. He listed the others as Delaware and New Jersey.

Mrs. Carson told the conference world captains would be appointed on a basis of one for each 100 men and women voters, each to raise a minimum of $10 for the Democratic victory fund.

Mayor H. Clay Armstrong, Pensacola, listed the Eighteenth Amendment, the tariff, the League of Nations and reaffirmation of state's rights as among the pressing problems the Democratic party must consider, with look looking to Washington for plans, and these responses to duties at home.

In referring to the Eighteenth Amendment, Armstrong declared the "Nation finds itself victim of one of the most tragic and pathetic facts that ever confronted any representative government."

"We have written into the law these police regulations which in these states and communities in which the provisions are repugnant to an obvious law enforced by its alien power."

Armstrong said "We are still facing creation of an instrument of peace," lauding the late President Woodrow Wilson's efforts for a League of Nations, and asserting the League "lacks our adherence."

Mayor John T. Alsop Jr., of Jacksonville, a candidate for congressman-at-large, said what the party needed was more teamwork in football and baseball, and a "few more pinch-hitters and sacrifice hitters, since all of us cannot carry the ball."

Speaking of Floridians who vote as Republicans in National politics and as Democrats locally, Alsop advised they "not be rallied at, but talk to them and reason with them because when the Good Shepherd took sheep into pleasant pastures he did not drive them, he led them."

But he said Democrats must hang together and say to each other "pull with us, or pull out." He recommended some "good, old-fashioned religion" for the party.

Congressman Tom Yon, Third Florida district, said "Ask a Republican what is the matter with economic conditions and he will blame it on world conditions." Yon asked "Who is more responsible than the Republican party?" which he asserted was trying "any expediency to try to get things going."

The conference was representative of all sections of Florida, and was presided over by leaders at the request of the local convention. Attendance, which included in Florida, was estimated at 100, and there was a long line through the streets before the crowd packed into Jacksonville city courthouses for the speakers.

All night a resolutions committee of 25 was considering resolutions to be offered for action on the coming New Year. While it was working out that the conference would still be in session, it was decided to offer for action to be taken at the coming year.

Carlson, in his address, suggested the platform convention as the next step of the Democratic organization in Florida.

Results of the annual convention of the Democratic Party in Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 27, 1931, are as follows:

HENRY NEHRLING

(Born in Wisconsin in 1853; died in Florida 1929)

LAKE WALES, Nov. 28.—The scientific services of Dr. Henry Nehrling, eminent ornithologist and botanist will be commemorated at Rollins College at Winter Park, Nov. 29th at 3 P. M. under the auspices of the Quetz Society of Florida. There will be brief religious and musical exercises and four speeches of appraisal.

had quickly recovered from war, reconstruction, yellow fever, freezes, hoons, hurricanes and fruit fly, it had quickly recovered from the disgrace of having voted for Hoover," the speaker declared.

Among the eight recommendations he made for the party was "first, our law should be changed to provide for equal representation on all of the executive committees now set up by law of the women of the Democratic Party." He suggested the example of the Democratic National Committee, which provides for one man and woman from each state and territory.

Second, he recommended that the organization, even the county committees, "should maintain permanent headquarters" for the purpose of meeting any emergency that might arise.

Mr. Carson also proposed that nominees of the party for all offices from constable up, "should understand that from the day of their nomination until the polls are closed on election day, their services are at the command of their party organization in an endeavor to insure the election of the entire Democratic ticket."

He stressed the duty "or obligation" of all nominees "to campaign for the entire ticket."

The executive committee, he said, "must function continuously to insure the people of the state good government."

Fifth, the speaker recommended, all officers elected by the Democratic party "are expected to consult the party organizations, as set up by law with regard to the filling of vacancies in office. The appointing power in Florida is in the governor, but there are many Democratic officers who have the right to name employees as distinguished from officers."

If all these suggestions should be carried out, Mr. Carson declared, "we may expect the most important single development to follow inevitably, and that is the securing of the services of the very highest type of citizenship in our party organization."

Mr. Carson's eighth recommendation was correlative with the suggestion for the platform convention. "Dull such time," he said, "as the legislature may pass a law authorizing the holding of such a convention, then the calling and convening of conferences, such as this are to be commended. . . to discuss in the open light of day the tendencies of the times and the political questions before our people and that the conference has no power to bind any Democrat in the state."

rapped loudly for order. It was several minutes before bailiffs could control the crowd.

The 59-year-old showman was overcome by emotion. His wife, turning to the spectators, as they surged about the couple, said: "This is the happiest moment of my life. The mills of the gods grind slowly but truth will out. I'm too happy to say more."

Pantages, finally regaining his composure, commented:

"I am very happy that my name has finally been cleared of the charges brought against me two years ago. I have suffered during these two years. My fullest gratitude and appreciation go to the fair-minded ladies and gentlemen of the jury who saw the truth and spoke it."

Newell J. Morehouse, one of the jurors, said the jurors never believed Miss Pringle's story but felt sorry for her.

From the day of his arrest, Aug. 9, 1929, Pantages claimed Miss their exit.

"I never saw anything like it in my life," said the former American ambassador.

Senator Henry de Jouvenel endeavored to stem the forward rush. Half of the crowd did remain in their seats, but the other half stampeded, jostling the speakers and raising such a hubbub of cheers from the men and cries from weeping women that none could be heard.

Calm was restored only after the crowd had been ushered outside by the police and had sung the Marseillaise lustily.

prize of the team to "Our Mothers." Mr. Coulter thanked the mothers who had made the event such a success and declared that their patience during the season was remarkable.

Coach Leonard McLucas, in his talk, lauded the work of the boys who have faithfully attended every practice session since the season began but who were able to play in but few games. "They deserve a great deal of credit for their fine spirit, for it is extremely trying to be a 'bench-warmer' all season, especially after working as hard as all the boys did."

He mentioned the work of Eugene Estridge, team manager, as deserving of much of the team's credit, declaring that without him many of the details connected with games would certainly have handicapped the team.

To the fathers present, Coach McLucas said, "I hope that this successful affair will be but the beginning of an organization which will flag you Dads coming in closer contact with your boys, our school and its aims and ideals."

He expressed his thanks to the sports editor of The Sanford Herald "for the splendid publicity which aided in making our season a success."

Hendrix Lyles, president of the Senior Class and veteran half-back of the squad, on behalf of the team, expressed his appreciation of the interest that Coach McLucas had taken in the club during the season, and said that the lessons of sportsmanship and fair play which they had learned will be remembered through their lives.

of her 250-mile long journey followed—62 speeches delivered from Jacksonville to Key West in exactly one month.

This particular trip was inspired by the purpose of financing a trip to Washington next spring for some boy and one girl, from each of 13 counties in her district, to attend yearly event.

On this trip, the southernmost stop was New Orleans, the northernmost Detroit, Minn., the westernmost Tulsa, Okla., the easternmost Toronto, Canada—22 addresses in seven weeks.

This recent rambling found Mrs. Owen in motion on every variety of equipment from the most ancient to the most modern.

"In Copenhagen we peddled around the parks on bicycle, though our caravanning was done by modern auto trailer," said Mrs. Owen. "We saw Nürnberg in an old-fashioned horse-drawn buggy being a fat coachman. My little daughter had never ridden before a horse steppe before."

"We took one flying boat that set on the water like a duck, and the passengers went in through a trap door in the roof."

"I am sure I've ridden this autumn on every known variety of train and bus and down in Macon, Ga., I took a trip with Amelia Earhart in her airplane."

lice were called and four of the disturbers, alleged to be members of the royalist organization known as "the King's Henchmen," were ejected.

Several fist fights broke out and the tumult became such that the Trocadero meeting had to be suspended.

Mrs. Louise Weiss, who was a member of Premier Laval's party on his recent trip to the United States and who organized the demonstration, also was howled down, as was Joseph Joss, member of the German Reichstag.

While brilliant lights were thrown on the audience, revealing continued fighting, the meeting was temporarily suspended. Then Herr Joss resumed his speech under police protection. His remarks were greeted with cries of "llar," and catcalls.

Former American Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton sat on the platform all this while awaiting his turn to talk.

Viscount Cecil of Ch.wood, famous British statesman, next was greeted with howls which caused Chairman Herriot to exclaim, "Where is the French politeness!"

The veteran English statesman read messages from the Archbishop of Canterbury, David Lloyd George and the British national women's council.

"We want to halt war to devote the millions spent for armaments for humanitarian purposes," he said.

Former Premier Painleve was cheered when he said France could not disarm until it had an assurance of security. But a wounded war veteran, who attempted to speak, immediately afterward, was prevented by a fresh outbreak of fistfights as the audience roared and shouted, "vive la France."

Houghton got out only the first sentence of his speech of greeting, "From the millions of Americans united to aid in peaceful solution of international divergencies," when a fight in the orchestra rows below forced him to give up the attempt.

By that time the crowd was quite out of hand and rushed for the platform while two lines of police formed a pathway for Lord Cecil and Mr. Houghton to make

"I'll stand by tobacco . . . in good times, in hard times . . . all kind of times . . . it helps a whole lot!"

"I GREW up with tobacco. Mostly I smoke cigarettes now—but I've smoked plenty of cigars, and pipes, too. And I never got anything but good from tobacco in any form—pipe, cigar, or cigarette—and that goes for every smoker I ever heard about."

"Why, I remember as a boy, way back, how the old folks in the fall used to pick and cure tobacco from a little patch they'd raised, and save out the best for their own smoking. And my father fought all through the war, and lived to be ninety."

"He'd certainly appreciate what we get today, though. I've smoked some of them CHESTERFIELDS of mine—fine tobaccos from all over the world, and cured and blended just so; you couldn't get anything purer or milder. Cleanest factories you ever saw, too—never a hand touching the cigarettes . . . everything up to date."

"A big improvement over the old ways . . . reckon that's why I like CHESTERFIELDS so much. I notice most of my friends get a lot of pleasure out of them, too."

"But what I started out to say was, you can always depend on tobacco, no matter how things are going. Probably there was never anything in the world that meant so much to so many people, and cost so little, as tobacco—whatever way they smoke it."

"Yes, sir—I'll stand up for tobacco as long as I can smoke a match!"

A CAPTAIN COME TO PORT

A Captain come to port, a dream-ship man, with horizons starting from his eyes.

Wrecking his ship had been, wherever he ran, caught in a stubborn bubble of the skin.

Only his spirit had found land tonight, beyond the low-hung stars at the last rim.

Now 's dark-sailing through a host of lights, came, broken over seas, and earth broke over him.

And earth broke over him; men, rime on tank, smashed down upon his dream that had prepared.

A different thing. And when he ate and drank, sitting alone in sudy inn, he stared.

To find a face his heart should recognize, no face would come but a slender ship only.

During the drifting prison of the skies, for that last landfall of the odyssey.

Oh folded yet in watery ply! stemless forests wave their lips.

And funny things that flicker by, witness the dark streets that lie upaven yet of that city.

But let him loose the snaky twines, of rope, escape the traffic, free the harbor, and put out to sea.

Orville MacKenzie.

Robert Ames, of "Holiday" fame, and one of two other feature stars, was found dead in his room on a winter day, with the pictures of his four wives and innumerable friends around him, six bottles of whiskey, and a quantity of powder. Shipped police officers are wondering how he died. He probably took his holiday as he could. He was lucky it lasted as long as it did.

Advertisers sometimes overlook that the total circulation of a newspaper is not necessarily the total number of persons who read it. A subscription of twenty-three hundred copies that some seven thousand persons are reading that paper daily, and practically everyone reads the paper. That is why there is no more effective medium for advertising than newspapers.

Los Angeles is in a hurry to get a new stadium. The city is in a hurry to get a new stadium. The city is in a hurry to get a new stadium.

The Clouds Break At Pahokee

Newspaper readers of 1928 well remember the stories of death and desolation which came out of the Okeechobee region immediately after a disastrous hurricane had swept through there leaving a death toll in its wake of nearly three thousand. A number of Sanford men who joined the ranks of national guardsmen, American Legion and Red Cross members, who engaged in relief work in that section, tell ghastly stories of sorrow, misery and revolting spectacles which the area presented.

No doubt in the minds of those who survived that frightful onslaught of nature was the crying urge to leave, to check out at once and quit that spot forever. There was hardly a family which did not have some relative among the missing, many with five or six. Only the staunchest spirit of hardy pioneers could have prevailed upon them to stick it out and try again.

Apparently their reward has come at last. In the region of Belle Glade, Pahokee, and Canal Point, familiar names in those hurricane stories, almost a boom is in progress. Good prices for beans, and other vegetables and an unusually productive season have created scenes reminiscent of the old boom days. The best Fall trucking season in history has precipitated a serious housing problem in Belle Glade where some four thousand farm laborers have been employed. New buildings are being rushed to completion in an effort to meet the demand.

Other Floridians, perhaps not so well off, will rejoice at this news and congratulate the Okeechobee section upon its good fortune. The sturdy farmers of that region deserve all the success and prosperity which a fertile soil, an enviable determination, and a good market can produce.

Party Organization

What will undoubtedly prove of inestimable value to the Democratic party in Florida was the meeting of outstanding Democratic leaders held in Marianna last week. This meeting advocated the convention system of forming platforms, condemned nepotism and business transactions between public officials and concerns in which they are financially interested, and favored the sending to national conventions delegates who are seasoned and committed to the policies of organized democracy. The keynote of the meeting was sounded by Senator Fletcher who urged the party to return to the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian and Jacksonian Democracy.

"No less significant and timely," the Tampa Tribune declares, "was the speech of James M. Carson, of Miami, who declared for thorough organization of the party in Florida—a thing which it has not enjoyed in many years—organization, as Mr. Carson put it, 'from the grass roots up.' Mr. Carson advocated, as a feature of this thorough organization, biennial conventions of the party, 'for the purpose of adopting platforms upon which the candidates for office in the primaries will agree to stand.' Such conventions should be held prior to the primaries, else they would be of no significance or effect. If they are held, it must be the unwritten law of the party that nominees of the primary are to stand upon, advocate and abide by the platform adopted by the convention. That is as far as a convention, under existing law, can legally go."

"Mr. Carson also made it clear that proper organization and functioning of a live and responsible Democratic party in Florida requires that the nominees of the party, from Constable up to Governor, should understand that from the day of their nomination until the polls are closed on election day, their services are at the command of the party organization in an endeavor to insure the election of the entire Democratic ticket. The day is past when a man can be nominated for high office by the Democrats in a primary election and then take the position that his nomination is a personal matter with him and carries with it only the privilege of being voted for in the general election by Democrats, and does not carry with it the duty or obligation to campaign for the entire ticket. Observance of this obligation by all Democratic nominees in 1928 would have made a considerable change in the state's vote in that lamentable year."

"Governor Carlton dealt with economic issues and declared that the people of the country are now looking to the Democratic party as an 'agency of relief.' All the speakers were confident of Democratic success next year. 'To the extent that it served to bring together Democrats from all sections of Florida in an exchange of views and an expression of party loyalty and confidence, the Marianna meeting was a success.'"

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

Sanford's mammoth lettuce crop is beginning to move. Already several carlots have left the loading station for northern markets. Among the early carlot shippers are L. A. Bromley, of Casey Avenue, who shipped two cars last week, and D. R. Brisson and Roy Bynas.

The statement of the Sanford Building and Loan Association is being published today. This is an institution of which Sanford may be justly proud. It is a strictly co-operative home building association, organized three years ago with only 490 shares common stock outstanding and in debt more than $400, the directors borrowed a few thousand dollars and started building houses for members. At the end of 18 months the earnings had paid all expenses and debts incurred in organization. Its officers are: G. H. Fernald, president; W. J. Miller, vice-president; J. C. Forster, W. D. Holden, J. C. Higgins, H. R. Stevens and A. P. Connolly, directors.

SAVES 20 YEARS TAXES LIESBURG, COMMERCIAL.

Contraverting the assertion so frequently made that "taxes are too high now to build a home" we find that an analysis of the present building costs and of the prices at which lots can be obtained shows that the savings by building a home now will pay the taxes for at least 20 years, even if in that time taxes on real estate are not reduced from the present level.

Taken without any preliminary discussion, this seems to be an absurd statement, startling only if true. Let's look into it and see whether it will bear close scrutiny.

First, take the lot. In normal times, if one wants to build a home to cost about $5,000, the lot will cost from $2,000 to $2,500. In boom times, of course, the price would be away above this figure. But to see that lot can be bought readily for $1,000 to $1,500 on the lot alone. Let's put it at $1,000 to be conservative.

Second comes the building cost. We started out on the basis of a house that would cost in normal times $5,000. This house can be built today, using the same materials and the same skilled workmen, according to the estimate made for us by W. W. Blackburn, for $3,500. There's another saving of $1,500 to add to our first thousand, bringing the saving to $2,500.

Third, there's the interest on the money invested. In normal times we would have spent $7,000 for this lot and home. Today we get it for $4,500. Money in Florida earns 8 percent on real estate mortgages of this size and as we are dealing in real estate here, we'll take that $2,500 saving and put it out at the legal rate of interest and make $200 a year.

We'll skip over the obvious fact that the actual depreciation per annum is less on a house that originally cost $2,500 than on one that cost $5,000. However, the cost of maintenance would be the same, so we will not count that in our figures. Just bear it in mind as an advantage on the side of building a home now.

Taxes, under the millage rates that will apply next year and with the assessed assessments, would total approximately $125 for such a home. At that rate, even if we do not take the interest on the savings into consideration but merely use up the savings in paying taxes, we would start with enough saved to pay the taxes for 20 years. But, if we put the savings out at interest we would have enough to pay our taxes forever and get a little over to use for maintenance.

Eventually it would be good business to build now.

A BIG LITTLE COUNTY MIAMI HERALD

If one is Florida-minded, the name of Seminole County brings to mind a companion vision of a white, crisp bunch of celery, cool and refreshing to the taste and representing a crop which annually pours $1,000,000 into the coffers of the county.

But that is not the whole story of Seminole County and of Seminole, its county seat. Despite an unfortunate experience with a mayor who over-boomed Sanford and whose bank later crashed, Sanford is pulling out of the hole in a manner to win the admiration of everyone who admires a fighter. And all the while this county, second smallest in the state, is using 14,000 acres of her land so well that a carload of fresh fruits and vegetables, outstanding, could be trucked up for every hour of the year.

In Seminole County is the answer, one of them at least, to the statement sometimes heard by the uninformed that the soil of Florida is not adapted to diversified farming. Reminds us of The Sanford Herald's boast that "the soil is so fertile that the other day, when a fellow dropped his con-chop pine in the dirt, before he could pick it up the pine had begun to grow and the tree had become a giant."

It is no wonder that a former Governor was moved to dub Seminole "the biggest little county in the state of Florida."

Another factor which makes Seminole County attractive is the profusion of lakes and the multitude of game fish found there, the birding game which are within reach of the hunter's aim. One could go into raptures over the fishes which dot this and other counties in that beautiful part of Florida.

It is no wonder that a former Governor was moved to dub Seminole "the biggest little county in the state of Florida."

3 High Officers Of U.S. Army And Navy Will Retire Today

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(A.P.)—Three officers will take the place of swains today at the stroke of midnight in the U.S. Army's list of known men of war.

Each leaves behind on retirement for age from the army or navy a brilliant career of service. One carries the memory of a stirring controversy with naval superiors which ebbed throughout the land. They are Maj. Gen. Hanson E.

Ely of Independence, Iowa; Maj. Gen. Fred W. Sladen of Omaha; and Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, Yazoo county, Mississippi. During the past month the three have reached the age of 64 years—at which time all officers of the army and navy must by law be ordered to retired status. Their respective terms end at midnight, the last day of the month within which they attained the retirement age.

After more than 40 years of military activity at home and in foreign lands, each will be left with many free hours. All three look forward to these hours for two purposes—well-earned rest and recreation.

One division later reached Gary, Ind., where it held a demonstration in Communist Hall and then departed for Kalamazoo, Mich. Another file was reported several miles south of Hammond on the Lincoln highway, while the other groups had not been heard from several hours later.

No arrests were made during the demonstration here, but police seized a quantity of communistic literature that was being distributed. A number of banners also were confiscated.

the fact that the dollar of 1931 is not the same monetary unit as the dollar of 1929, and that policies based on the assumption that the 1929 levels could be maintained are no longer tenable. An equilibrium must be sought at the new levels."

While conceding that industrial recovery naturally has been slow, the survey observes several constructive developments in the past month. The outstanding development in American business in recent weeks, it says, has been the advance in commodity prices, notably wheat and silver. "Although the rally that occurred in October and the early part of November proved to be too swift to be fully maintained, enough of the advance has been held to create a better business sentiment than existed before the upward movement began," the survey continues.

The publication also notes a sharp decline in bank failures during November and stresses another favorable factor in the belief that the hoarding of currency, both in this country and abroad, has ceased. While the actual level of business activity has not yet shown any notable response to improved sentiment, the publication expresses belief that this is largely due to inactivity of the automobile industry.

"An expansion in motor car output is looked for within the next few weeks and is expected to exert a favorable influence on other lines of industry," the review says. "The buying of steel by automobile manufacturers has already increased."

OGLESBY HELD FOR ACTION BY GRAND JURORS

lively connecting Oglesby with the killing, Oglesby sat nearby, unmoved, his only words coming at the conclusion of the hearing and they being, "I do not care to make a statement."

Dr. R. E. Stevens was the first witness. He said that McEntyre died from a gunshot wound in the chest. The charge split the boat and some of the shots entered the lung, he said, adding that "it must have been fired at close range for the explosive effect caused a piece of his heart about an inch square to be found between his shirt and flesh when I examined him."

McEntyre testified that she last saw him early Wednesday morning as he walked away from their camp on Stone Island, and that she had not seen her husband since.

Mrs. Flood Sharp, 39-year old wife of the man who later admitted he helped hide McEntyre's body in her opening apartment, said that "Mr. McEntyre and Tom Oglesby, and then Tommy fired the shot." State Attorney Millard H. Smith, who handled the investigation, then asked her, "Did you see him fire the shot?" to which she answered, "Yes, I did."

She then said "Tommy Oglesby and my husband dragged him to his boat, placed him in it and took it away and hid it in the bushes." Questioned further, Mrs. Sharp said that before the shooting, she, her husband and Mr. and Mrs. Oglesby, from their houseboat, saw Mr. McEntyre coming if he saw anything in the river. Mrs. Sharp said that before the shooting, she, her husband and Mr. and Mrs. Oglesby, from their houseboat, saw Mr. McEntyre coming if he saw anything in the river.

After the shooting, Mrs. Sharp said that Oglesby turned to her husband and said, "Play, are you going to give me up?" Sharp answered "No," Mrs. Sharp later explaining that her husband said that, because he was afraid, that Oglesby himself shot him.

She testified that her husband and Oglesby dragged the body to a boat, returned a few minutes later, and "picked up trash and burned it in the stove." The trash referred to was blood-stained paper, grass, and chips upon which McEntyre fell after he was shot, according to Mr. Smith.

Asked why she did not report the killing, Mrs. Sharp said that she did not tell it on Wednesday because I was afraid that Tom would shoot us."

Floyd Sharp's first statement was, "Well, Wednesday morning he came over there and Tom grabbed his gun and shot him and then carried him off in a boat." He elaborated that statement later by testifying in almost the same vein as did his wife, particularly as to what Oglesby said when McEntyre came near the boat, what Oglesby said to McEntyre directly, and what he answered when Oglesby asked him if he was going to "give me away." He added that "I told Tom that the best thing to do was to leave him there where he was and go in to town and give himself up."

Asked why he did not report the matter, Sharp said "I was afraid of Tom." Sharp also said that he "towed his boat away from the camp while Oglesby held the boat containing the body of McEntyre, which they pushed into a hyacinth patch in a cove about half a mile from their camp. When they returned to the camp, Sharp said that they burned paper and grass and "everything that had blood on it."

John Henry Smith, a negro who was passing the scene, testified that he did not see the shot fired, but saw a man fall. He hurried away from the scene, later reporting it to a white man he didn't know, he said. He testified that he did not know any of the persons connected with the affair.

R. E. Hillyard, white man, who was later identified as the man the negro had reported, the shooting, said that he was fishing about half a mile away from the Oglesby camp the morning of the killing, and that he saw dim figures in the distance, dragging something along the ground. After completing his haul, he rowed to the camp, asked Mrs. Oglesby if she knew anything about a shooting, was told that nothing had happened, and then came to Sanford. He returned later, and remained with the group for some time, but said he never learned "anything about the shooting" until the next night when Sharp and Oglesby were arrested.

Mrs. Thomas Oglesby, wife of the accused man, testified that she didn't see the shooting, because when she saw McEntyre coming at her husband with an open knife, she ran out of the back of the boat, and hid in the bushes. She denied knowing anything about the affair, including the testimony that her husband dragged McEntyre's body away, and came back later to burn chips, paper, and grass.

The coroner's jury was composed of H. C. Morgan, T. M. Hill, J. F. Hickson, J. R. Long, G. A. Niblack, and C. T. Kent. Currier O. P. Herndon conducted the hearing, with Millard B. Smith, Titusville, questioning the witnesses.

Lindy Has Quiet Sunday Waiting For Fog To Lift

of the National Aeronautic Association, until weather conditions improved sufficiently to permit him to resume his flight. He said he would rather remain here in this little fishing village where it was quiet.

Lindbergh arose early yesterday and, after a hearty breakfast, retired to his room again when he received weather reports that a heavy fog, that has enveloped the entire Southeast for several days, would prevent him continuing to New York.

All day, hundreds of persons motored here from surrounding cities to see the famous aviator, but most of them went away disappointed. Only for a short time this afternoon did he venture from his hotel and then it was for a swim in the ocean near the Coast Guard Station.

Afterward, he returned to his room in the town's only hotel and went to sleep. He declined to be interviewed by newspaper men or talk with any visitors who came to see him.

Several times during the day, Lindbergh telephoned the Eastern Air Transport Company's Weather Bureau at Jacksonville and was advised meteorological conditions would permit a flight to Jacksonville or Brunswick, Ga., but not farther north. He indicated, however, he preferred to remain here until the weather would permit him to fly on to New York.

If conditions are satisfactory, Lindbergh expects to return his flight today to the metropolitan city, which he left recently to make a round trip hop from Miami to Barranquilla, Colombia. On that flight, he piloted the American Clipper, world's largest amphibian, on its first commercial air voyage.

"We must again go through a calvary of suffering," he continued after a moment's silence. Not far away the rhinoceros of an English church pealed out the hour of 4 o'clock.

"It seems God's will that we must take up our heavy cross again and carry it to the end," he said in the quietly quiet which hung about London's east and could be heard the swish of his sandals as he waded through the slippy streets.

"How soon after your return to India will you begin the battle?" he was asked.

"The masses of India are only awaiting my signal," he replied. "But I think I shall study conditions awhile before I give it."

"Do you expect the British to put you in jail again?" was the next question.

"Yes, I expect to be the guest of the government again at Yerod, I shall be arrested with a slight delay. But there may be part me out the light will go on."

"Asked what effect a possible arrest would have on the people who are waiting for their liberty?"

"Are you carrying you came to England?" the correspondent queried.

"No," he said firmly. "I was only a man and a martyr to many Britishmen will I come."

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—(A.P.)—

Fifteen unemployed men who left here late Saturday by truck for Washington represent this section of the "hunger march" on the nation's capital. Another group was scheduled to leave from East St. Louis, Ill., but no marchers appeared at the assembly point yesterday morning.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(A.P.)—

Federal Secret Service officials watched from afar yesterday the convergence upon the capital of steadily rising "hunger marchers" and retained their confidence that the situation would be handled in a manner satisfactory to all concerned.

From his own operatives over the country and from the press these reports came to W. J. Morgan, chief of the Secret Service. But he retained his confidence that the situation would be handled satisfactorily to all concerned.

A bulky sheet of data gathered by Federal agents is described by them as linking communist leaders closely with the march.

Federal agents had in hand today a statement from the American Vigilant Intelligence Federation, opposed to the march, that as many as 1200 demonstrators might be expected in Washington by the time the demonstration is planned to culminate December 7, the day Congress convenes.

Secret Service men detailed to guard President Hoover, under the command of Richard Jervis, also had in hand a statement from the "Unemployed Councils Committee for the National Hunger March."

It said the marchers would demand of Congress and the President immediate cash relief of $150 apiece, unemployment insurance, and "free rent, gas and electric light—free food for children of unemployed and part time employed."

On this same handbill exhibited by Jervis, was a call to "defeat the Soviet Union."

In his possession also were reports from Secret Service operatives in several cities that known communists were engaged in helping organize the demonstration.

One statement attributed to the marchers carried instructions for each truck to carry three trained defense workers, and that each be armed with "revolvers" by weapons.

and an automobile 50 yards away was only an indistinct dark blur in the mist. Motorists in the city drove with their lights on until nearly noon.

The market in most areas was foggy, though in some places there found five areas smoke contributed to the opaque haze.

The fog market still held Colonel Lindbergh on the ground at Flagler Beach, Fla., on his interrupted flight from Miami to New York.

Two deaths in Georgia were attributed to the fog and smoke yesterday.

George W. White of Atlanta tried to stop an automobile that suddenly burst out of the mist near Maceo, and his car struck William Levi Walker, 11, of Knoxville, Tenn. He died enroute to a hospital. J. E. Long of Knoxville was injured.

Dr. W. W. Smith of Chicago was killed and five persons injured when two cars met head-on in the fog over Indiana last night in an accident caused by the fog.

BUFAALO, N. Y., Nov. 30.—(A.P.)—

Forty members of the "National Hunger Army" left here yesterday morning in a truck and two touring cars for Washington, D. C.

Nearly 100 persons were on hand to give the party a send-off. There was no demonstration, the departure instead being marked by near comedy.

The truck proved balky at the start and several volunteers failed to crank it. Then it was discovered the machine was out of gasoline. A hat was passed among the spectators, and sufficient funds obtained to buy fuel.

Two negro women and six white women were among the occupants.
