Second Round Of Lakeland Tourney Opens With Willie Kline Leading By A Stroke

LAKELAND, Fla., Feb. 24.—(A) With a large gallery and its opinion divided on the probable winner, the second round of the Lakeland tournament began this morning in the Lakeland and Ridge open championship 72-hole medal play over the Cleveland Heights Country Club Golf Course.

Willie Kline of West Palm Beach and holder of the Miami open championship, who was yesterday's medalist with 143 for the 36 holes and a one stroke lead over Tommy Armour of Sarasota, West Coast open champion; runner up of yesterday, while Bobby Cruickshank, unattached, Andy Kay of Toronto and Al Espinoza of Chicago were only two strokes behind.

Arnold Massey, of St. Augustine, French open champion, who is always good for a comeback, is being looked to by the fans to lower his score today which was 151 for the first 36. He is paired with Tom Kerrigan of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Eddie Loos of Lakeland, who is playing late yesterday caused speculation to place him among the probabilities today.

The threesome of Johnny Farrell of Tampa, Central Florida champion, Archie Compton of St. Augustine, British pro champion and Gene Sarazen of Miami, will be in the low scores at the end of today, it is anticipated.

Threesomes for today are: Laurie Ayton, Chas Mayo, Pat Doyle;

Hap Martin, Walter Kennett, Ralph Thomas;

Nick DeMano, L. L. Voorhees, Alex Ayton;

Al Cioei, Johnny Connell, H. R. Loudon;

Clarence Hackney, Arthur De Mane (only two);

Ray Oumet, Jack Ross, George Dodge;

Pat Costello, R. S. Miner, Jimmy Donaldson;

R. Horan; Bob Randall, Major Wilson;

George Wagaman, Bill Parker, Frank McGuiness;

Henry Bulesta, Gordon Gibbons (only two);

John Rogers, Ray Deer, Jack Forrester;

Ed Gayer, Tom Tepin, Ralph Beach;

Mike Brady, Bill Mehlhorn, Frank Walsh;

Andy Kay, John Dawson, Bob McDonald;

Tommy Golden, Joe Kirkwood, Al Espinoza;

Cyrill Walker, Larry Nabholz, Harry Hampton;

Willie Klein, Bobby Cruickshank, Tommy Armour;

Johnny Farrell, Archie Compton, Gene Sarazen;

COBB IS FREE AS BIGAMY CHARGES ARE WITHDRAWN

Young Alabama Student Who Posed as French Diplomat, Said to Be Suffering From A Serious Nervous Malady

DECATUR, Ga., Feb. 24.—(A) Noel Cobb, alias Noel Dupre, was in an unnamed southern city sanitarium following his marriage here since Feb. 7 as a "French diplomat," his marriage on Feb. 9 at Chattanooga to Miss Virginia Hollingsworth, pretty, Agnes Scott College student, of Dawson, Ga., and his arrest and subsequent release on a charge of bigamy. Charges in the case have been withdrawn.

Cobb's mother arrived yesterday to take him to their home in Anderson, S. C., where they are well known, following exposure of the case. Physicians there, disenchanted, declared the young man was a sufferer from "dementia praecox," a nervous malady creating a dual personality.

When it was first learned that Dupre was not what he reported himself to be, it was believed that he had married another girl prior to his marriage to Miss Hollingsworth. The name of the girl is not known here, other than "Margaret" and that she is believed to live somewhere in Alabama. Development yesterday, however, dispelled this belief.

A South Carolinian, Cobb attended the University of South Carolina at Columbia, also Vanderbilt at Nashville.

About Feb. 1, he went to Birmingham, Ala., where he represented himself to church officials as a Frenchman named Dupre, commissioned by a French University to paint portraits and to study theology in America. He was given letters of introduction to a theology seminar at Emory University, Atlanta, where his present escapade began.

His bride has gone to the home of her parents at Dawson, in the meantime, relatives are preparing to go ahead with annulment or divorce proceedings.

TOO MUCH "CHARLESTON"

LODGEVILLE, Feb. 24.—(A) Raymond Gatewood "Charleston" has way to a 30-day jail sentence and $25 fine, on an assault and battery charge. He couldn't keep from exhibiting his latest step in the side of a theater here, and when the doorman attempted to eject him, Gatewood attacked him.

Police Chief Wounded During Women's Riot At Mexico City Church

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 24.—(A) During a women's riot at the Catholic Church of the Sacred Family, the chief of police of the tenth district was seriously wounded and four civilians were injured yesterday.

The gendarmes fired a volley over the heads of the rioters, composed mostly of women, before they dispersed. The playing of a horn upon them by firemen previously had no effect.

The trouble began when gendarmes endeavored to disperse parishioners who had gathered in the belief that the governor was endeavoring to close the church.

As a matter of fact, however, a Mexican priest, Father Carrasco, ordered the edifice closed. The women attacked the police, centering their efforts on the chief, who was clawed and mauled badly.

ARGUMENT AGAINST 'REDUCING'

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(A) "Take care, girls, that you don't go crazy trying to reduce. At Bellevue Hospital in New York county, some 225 mental cases have been traced to dieting coupled with anxiety over avoirdupois."

Water sports have had their effect on aviation. This plane has been equipped with skis to enable landing on the snow. A trial flight by Captain Bryan of the Reserve Corps at East Boston airport was successful. The plane is shown just after the take-off.

Biggest Task Of Year

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Pittsburgh Pirates has the hardest job of any man in the majors for 1926. Pitching the Pirates, McKechnie won a pennant and a world series last season. This year he has nothing to shoot at except a repeat if he is to retain his new-won prestige.

The Pittsburgh club is, admittedly, the best club in the National League. It is hoped to win by all the experts. Failure to deliver would make it seem that McKechnie didn't get the best from his club.

During the world series the judgment of McKechnie was several times taken to task. It was rumored that he and Fred Clarke, his assistant, nearly came to blows as the result of a difference of opinion.

There are some experts who insist that Clarke is the guiding hand of the Pirates, that until his arrival McKechnie failed with clubs that should have won.

The season of 1926 is certain to be the acid test for the leader of the Pirates from any number of angles.

They plan to build a Spanish hacienda further back in the hills. The film couple will leave here next Tuesday on a tour of Europe.

Sinclair Wants To Be California Governor

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 24.—(A) Upton Sinclair, author of 'Pasadena, Calif.', has been named the Socialist candidate for governor.

The party platform calls for the repeal of the state criminal syndicalism law, public ownership of hydro-electric power and of public utilities.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

SPITBALL PITCHERS WALSH A MARVEL DIFFERENT STYLE

"Whom do you consider the greatest spitball pitcher in the history of the game?"

My mail of the other day brought such an inquiry.

"Since there are only a few spitball pitchers in the majors and the delivery will soon be but a memory," continued the letter, "we would welcome your opinion as to the relative merits of the pitchers who have used that style of delivery."

It is a rather difficult matter to answer that query in one definite sentence, since there are so many angles to the situation.

Off hand I would say that Ed Walsh of the Chicago White Sox was the most effective of all spitball pitchers I have ever umpired. However, I have in mind several pitchers who had a more deceptive spitball than Walsh. His remarkable effectiveness was a matter of control as well as a break on the ball.

Walsh's splitter dipped only slightly but broke sharply. It is a well known fact that a spitball is effective only when pitched low.

So uncanny was Walsh's control that he seemed able to keep it at the knee on every pitch.

Rated for effectiveness, which after all is the end desired in pitching, I would say that Walsh should be ranked first among the spitballers.

For out and out deceptiveness, I never saw a pitcher who delivered a freakier ball than Jimmy Dygert, who 15 years ago was a valued member of the Athletics pitching staff.

Dygert's spitball looked like a fast ball until within a short distance of the plate and then it seemed to duck downward in a most deceptive manner. Opposing batters were always toying Dygert's spitball. His control was just so-so, therefore he never reached the heights that his ability deserved.

Jack Chesbro, one of the first of the big league pitchers to cash in on the spitball, worked much in the manner of Walsh. There was nothing so very different or difficult about his delivery but he was able to keep it knee high and thus prevented rival clubs from taking much liberty with it.

Just when Walsh was slipping, Russ Ford came along with what was believed to be the most unusual of all spitball deliveries. Instead of making the ball break down, he would break it in or out and give it a hop according to the manner in which he threw the ball.

Ford went through all the motions of pitching a splitter but in reality was throwing the emery ball.

To Jimmy Dygert I would give the credit of throwing the freakiest spitball I have ever tried to judge. Sometimes it seemed as if his spitball broke at the foot. The batters insisted even more than that.

Of the modern spitball pitchers, I am of the opinion that Fletcher Urban Shocker of the Yankees has developed the most delivery more than any one else.

Shocker delivers the splitter with three different speeds. His slow speed is a lazy breaking splitter that is as hard to fathom as the one that snaps. He also uses a half speed as well as all his stuff in getting a different break. Incidentally, he mixes in a curve spitball that puzzles.

"Red" Faber of the Chicago White Sox must be rated one of the greatest of spitball pitchers. Faber uses one style, after the manner of Walsh, and keeps it low. As a result he has been for years one of the outstanding pitchers in the majors.

Stanley Coveleskie of Washington, one of the truly great spitballers, has used it more than any of the others. "He starts and finishes with a spitball" is the way players speak of "Covey."

Walsh for effectiveness, Dygert for the freakiest break and Shocker for making the most use of the spitball, would be the way I would sum up the situation.

SUZANNE THINKS SHE MAY PLAY IN FRIDAY'S MATCH

French Net Start Apparently Benefitted by One-Day Sojourn In Mountains. Hopes To Enter Monte Carlo Meet

MONTE CARLO, Feb. 24.—(A) The case of "nerves" that Suzanne Lenglen took into the mountains with her evidently has been dissipated by the rarified atmosphere.

After a day's rest the French girl admits that she has been generally benefited, and says that instead of putting off her play in the women's doubles event of the Monte Carlo tournament until Saturday, she will be ready to compete on Friday.

This has given renewed hope to the authorities of Nice that Suzanne may yet agree to meet Helen Willis in a return match at the club's tournament beginning March 7. The club, the Secretary of which is Papa Lenglen, needs funds to contract the expenditure recently of 1,000,000 francs for the erection of a new clubhouse. One official of the club says:

"Our Suzanne will not let us down, but will give us the opportunity of attracting great crowds by another meeting with the girl from California."

Meanwhile, Miss Willis continues to carve her way through the ranks of the women in the singles competition with her eyes fixed upon the Duke of Connaught's gold cup, which goes to the winner.

A protest has been made by other players against a dress made out of bright shining silk and satin material worn by Eileen Bennett, the youthful English star.

Her opponents claimed that the reflection of the sun on the dress was like that from a mirror and hurts their eyes.

How Doctors Treat Colds And The Flu

To break up a cold overnight or to cut short an attack of gripe, influenza, sore throat or tonsillitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Glaxo's, the purified and refined calcium compound tablet that gives you the effects of calcium and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calabats at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

BOYS' FASHIONS

THE same styles, the same fabrics and the same workmanship that have been put into dad's clothes will be in evidence in suits and topsuits for boys this fall and summer.

Customer demand has brought about this situation. They drive for economy, too, coupled with a definite style appeal, is responsible, also, for this movement. As a result the clothes your youngster will wear will give parents everything they desire in good clothes at prices, which in the long run, will produce the utmost in value.

Among the various questions asked is one: "Will the long trousers suit be popular for boys of juvenile age to about fourteen years?" At the present writing there is no answer, for neither maker or retailer knows what the trend will be.

Question of Popularity
Some merchants are strongly of the opinion that "longies" have passed the peak of popularity and that from now on the demand is on the decline. While the crest of favor may have been reached in some communities, nevertheless there are certain sections which will continue to favor the idea of clothes "like dad's."

As expressed by one buyer: "There are many parents who like these 'longies' and despite the cry from various sources that such suits are impractical they will be worn extensively because of the style appeal."

To meet this situation many retailers will offer two-trousers suits, with one pair of "longies" and the other pair of knickers. But where the long trousers are not desired one pair of knickers and one pair of golf trousers will be offered with each suit.

Lighter Colors, Again
In line with men's clothes lighter colors for boys will be the vogue. Two years ago only the sombre tones were presented, but last season saw an unusual demand for flashier colors and this spring promises to bring added demand. Greys, browns and mixtures will get the greater play.

With the advent of late spring and summer an innovation may be tried with the introduction of separate flannel trousers and knickers and blazer coats in stripes and figured effects. Another feature will be blue single and double-breasted jackets to be worn with light colored flannels.

These styles came to the front last year in the mode centers of the Atlantic seaboard and California.

No Change in Fabrics
As for fabrics there will no decided change, for homespun, chevrons, tweeds and worsteds will get the principal calls.

Clothes for the little youngsters—those of juvenile age—haven't undergone any important style modifications. The Tom Thumb suits will be shown, as will be the sailor suits with the long trousers. The latter is more of a summer proposition.

All accessories, which include furnishings, shoes and hats, are very much like they were a year ago.

HERETOFORE man's latitude in the choice of his footwear has been restricted to the presentation of about a dozen different models and leathers.

With the coming of spring, but more so with summer, selection will be almost endless. In other words when the warm breezes blow Mr. Man will be afforded an opportunity to choose his footwear from a greater array than was ever shown in the history of shoedom.

Unless all signs fail the barometer of style tendencies as shown in Florida and California last winter will flash such a presentation as was never featured before.

It seems as if most of the inhabitants of the animal kingdom will contribute to summer wear. Exotic trimmings, originally parts of elephants, colobus, sharks, alligators, lizards, pigs, goats, etc., in fact anything tannable have been used.

For That Distinctive Touch
While there is no decided change in the model or last these trimmings will lend that distinctive touch and will go hand in hand with man's desire for more color. All of this has to do largely with summer modes.

For spring the semi-balloon, a modification of the broad toe of last spring and fall, will be the vogue introduced by the majority of the better shoe manufacturers. This change was brought about by the narrower trousers now being worn. The balloon trousers demanded a substantial base, but with the alteration in suit styles also comes a modification of modes in footwear.

While the Scotch grains, noted for their durability are still favored by the younger man, there is a tendency to offer lighter and finer footwear for spring and summer. Fine kids and light-weight calf-skins will be shown almost everywhere.

Suit Colors Control
As for color various shades of tans will meet with greater demand than heretofore. This is also due largely to the light colored suits that are being shown by the clothiers.

An attempt is now underway to push propaganda urging the wearing of black shoes after dark. Just how strong this movement will win converts is not known at the present time, but from a health point of view it is suggested that a change of footwear for evening is advised.

NUNS FINED
DOVER, Feb. 22—Twenty-three members and the Mother Superior of the Convent of the Annunciation were fined one shilling each here for failing to register as aliens. They pleaded that most of them had been in the convent since

Stepping Up

Spats, of course, will be worn by the man who wants a bit of distinctive note attached to his footwear. These are offered largely in shades from light tans or greys to dark tones with pearl grey ruling.

1904 and in view of their limited contact with the outside world, were not conversant with the law requiring registration.

OLD THEATER UNSAFE
LONDON, Feb. 22—The question of the safety of Covent Garden Opera House, historic theater of London, is perplexing authorities here. The management denies lack of safety in the structure. The London council has no jurisdiction, since the theater is operating under a royal charter granted by King Charles.

A MIRACLE
"When this hand of mine gets well shall I be able to play the banjo?" the patient asked the doctor.

"Certainly," "Thanks!" he replied. "You're a wonder. I never could before."

SPRING

Creations Embody Charming Modes in Frocks

These new frocks strikingly emphasize the youthful cast of the Spring-time modes; each model smartly portraying some new and clever feature.

Among the favored fashion one finds the two-piece mode, which is chic in both tailored and dress frocks. Pleats and flares vary the silhouette and one finds a wide choice of fabrics and colors.

enough chairs to take care of all one's wedding guests, and it is usually necessary to rent a few or may be several extra ones. It would be a good idea to arrange slip covers for these in some other periods, and it may be cretonne flowered or striped, to correspond in color with the awnings.

Then too, the camp chairs could be made to seem a part of the home furnishings, if new and matching slip covers were made to use. The porch settee and the porch swing will be useful at this time, and every fern stand one can resurrect or borrow.

Perhaps a bride may prefer to plan a Spanish wedding. So many homes have been furnished in Spanish styles the last few years that such a wedding would fit in very well. Iron furniture would lend itself gracefully to this occasion. The spot where the service takes place naturally becomes the central point of interest and with a marble topped console against a semi-circular tapestry on the wall, an interesting beginning is made. A handsome beveled mirror may hang against the tapestry, draped with flowers.

Fill Aquarium with Flowers. Wrought iron fern stands will go with the other pieces pleasantly. Aquariums filled with flowers instead of fish, will add to the arrangement and as many iron chairs as can be brought together.

A Spanish wedding will furnish many ideas to one who likes to be original. A great tapestry can hang back of the refectory table on which, with all its glittering china and glass, is set the

IN NEW YORK

Just the Story of a Mother

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The whole nation hears of the few dozen Broadway successes, but the "flips" are quietly buried like napkins in a Potter's field. And there are a thousand of these unmarked graves to every memorial statue.

So it is a pretty good idea for the playwright to have a spare profession or two to fall back on when he sets forth with a play in his pocket.

One of the Broadway's most interesting examples of such versatility is William Hurlbut.

If his plays fail Hurlbut can always go "back to the kitchen." He can play chef to a hotel or cafe kitchen with the best of them. In fact he is doing that right now in a restaurant on West Forty-eighth street.

Just a couple of months ago his last play, "Chivalry," blazed for its last brief hours on the gay white way and then was carried silently away. So he secured an interest in a restaurant and, it is said, he "throws a wicked menu."

Hurlbut has tasted success quite as often as failure. Belasco put on his first effort, "The Fighting Hope," and Olga Nethersole was starred in his second drama, "The Strange Woman." He has written a half dozen since then.

But he always has kept his chafing talent somewhere within easy reach.

That's a good thing to remember.

But it's a good gamble, if you lose.

Dorothy Donnelly and Sigmund Romberg, who adapted and composed "The Student Prince," collect $3,000 a week each quite regularly. Sampson Raphaelson, who not so long ago drew down his modest weekly amount as a newspaper reporter, free lance writer and such, now spends the winter days in Naples while his play, "The Jazz Singer," sends him from $1,500 a week and up.

This daily letter is not inclined toward obituary notices and yet I feel that every granddaddy who reads it will read with interest of the death of William Cahill Davies, who was he? The man who wrote "The Mick That Threw the Brick."

CAPRICES of 1926

AS we now plan our costumes with an eye to the whole effect, the accessories gain an ever increasing importance for they must be so carefully chosen. Indeed, it is in the gloves, the purse, the handkerchief and the jewelry that a woman indicated her ability to dress with the most perfect taste.

Novelty Jewelry Novelty jewelry has attained a place that was scarcely dreamt of a few years ago. And this is particularly true of bracelets. With the evening frocks of today the arm is covered with bracelets of all types and sizes. The flexible bracelet of stones is seen in every width varying from a tiny strand to gorgeous affairs over an inch wide and the slave bracelet is still very good, either in the simple heavy gold or silver links or with stones set in every other link. Odd bracelets are very smart also. Russian antiques and old English jewelry has won high places in the mode. But whatever type of bracelet you choose, be sure to wear enough of them for moderation, as a rule the keynote to smartness, is anathema in the bracelet world.

A charming revival in the vogue of Victorian jewelry. It is really surprising how these quaint earrings, chains and pendants, which we have always associated with the demure Victorian Miss, seem to fit in with the frocks of today. The earring is with us once more. Long, decorative and very unusual earrings are the very newest. With the closely cut, sleek hair these earrings save us from a too severe simplicity with their exotic charm.

Pearls are quite as popular as ever. They have been in so long had become a classic on the mode and while other fads may come and go, pearls go on forever. Very Modernistic The scarfs for 1926 are the gayest of patterns. The designs are modernistic in nine cases out of ten and brilliant color contrasts make them a vivid adjunct to the softly colored frocks with which they are generally worn. For sports wear the favored scarf is very short. However, with other frocks the scarf is its usual length. Shawls are having an added

Picking Fashion Winners for 1926

By Muriel Mertens Townley

By Muriel Mertens Townley AFTER all, the whole art of dressing well, for it is an art, consists in "picking the winners." That is, choosing between the countless variations offered at the beginning of a new season, just which ones are going to last—not the ones which will blaze into sudden glory to be immediately dropped because of too many imitations. So the well dressed woman studies carefully the trend of the mode, selects her frocks by that standard and saves herself many disastrous and costly experiments.

The Silhouette The silhouette of this season's frocks is slimmer than last winter's. This does not mean that we are going back to the straight tight frock of a few seasons past. Far from it. It simply means that the flare is more subtly managed. When we walk, the dress is plenty full enough to flow easily and gracefully with the figure. This fullness is frequently attained by pleatings. Sometimes these pleats are found in fan shape pockets. The golet is not quite as good as formerly as it gives too abrupt a line of flare. However, it is still seen if the material is soft enough to take it gracefully. The dress which falls into a soft ample flare below the hips is also a favorite.

Use the Uneven Hemline The uneven hemline is very good, not so much for street frocks as for the dancier, softer frocks of afternoon and evening. Usually this line is up in the front and down in the back, but sometimes the sides are long with the front and back short. Many a frock, especially the daytime frocks are made with a flat back. The fullness is then introduced across the front by means of box pleats. Sometimes these pleats go right across the front. At others they are concentrated at one or both side fronts. For the more tailored costume, the inverted plait is used, either at the side or the front.

The hemline tunic is another method of obtaining a feeling of flare and motion in the skirt. These tunics usually open down the front over a tight undergarment. On these frocks the bodice is slightly molded to the figure.

Jumpers Again Of course, for morning, afternoon and evening the jumper dress is a great favorite. It is almost a uniform for sports wear. It is frequently seen in silks or kasha or jersey in street shades; in the afternoon it is in georgette and in the evening it is in chiffon gorgeously beaded or spangled.

The jumper is longer than it was last year, and the skirt is usually full in the front with a flat back. It seems as though this youthfully becoming little frock is ever new. It has been several times rumored that it is being out of fashion, but back it comes with a few slight changes and finds itself more charming and more popular than ever before. This is probably because its supple boyish lines and the freedom of motion it allows, express the life of the woman of today better than any other type of costume.

The Influence of the Cape The little cape is the very newest idea for spring and summer frocks. Sometimes this cape is so narrow that it is hardly more than a wide collar while in other models it reaches well below the waist. In the street frocks, especially the woolen ones, this cape is detachable leaving an equally smart but cooler dress for warmer days. This cape is also seen on many a chiffon evening dress to which its fluttering motion adds unusual charm.

Of course, sleeves are long and tight for daytime wear. Now and then one sees a dainty little frock for summer afternoons with the briefest of sleeves, but these frocks are few and far between.

The evening frock when it is a jumper frock, has a moderately low neck, but every other type of evening frock has either a deep "V" or "U" in the back, while it is higher in front. An evening frock which is particularly becoming to the very young Miss is the "robe" style. These frocks of taffeta with a fitted bodice and long full skirt, are very smart no matter how the mode changes. This year most of them are made with the hemline much shorter in front than in back. Another new note is to have a wide transparent hem of net so that while the general feeling of length is kept, they are more in keeping with the short skirted mode of today.

Taffeta Perhaps it is the charm of these frocks which is causing a definite attempt to bring taffeta back into style for daytime dresses. It is a new and very soft taffeta, but it demands a different handling than the soft silks we have been wearing so long. The models shown so far have had a molded bodice, a full skirt and have been trimmed with crisp white organdy in collar and vestee.

However, crepe de chine and crepe satin are certain to be smart. The crepe satin is frequently used in modes which show both the dull and shiny surfaces of the material. Georgette for afternoon and chiffon for evening are almost universal.

The evening mode, however, is such a gorgeous and glittering one that these chiffon frocks are frequently trimmed with silver lace, encrusted in silver or without being beaded.

So far, no woolen material has quite taken the place of kasha but tweed and jersey are frequently seen. Among the newest woolens are crepeella and frisen.

The New Colors Grey in all shades has come back to the mode, but of all the shades that lovely silver grey is quite the smartest. We have been wearing all shades of beige as our neutral color for so long that this change to grey is most welcome. Of course, this does not mean that beige will suddenly be dropped, but it does mean that a distinct turn in fashion's favor toward grey has been felt.

All the colors are good. It's really a rainbow year. Some will choose the clear pastels though the "dainty" pastels are even newer. For the street quieter versions of those colors will be worn while the evening hours will choose even more vivid tones. Printed georgette is a great favorite especially for afternoon.

The New Wraps The cape is having a definite influence on the mode. Many of the new coats have a cape back while the long cape is also worn. However, these capes will not supplant the long coat as that is entirely too useful a style to be given up. The new coats are either straight or with a flare which comes from the shoulder. They are developed in twill, kasha, cashmere or novelty wools for utilitarian wear, and in black satin or any of the ribbed silks for dress.

When these coats do not boast of cape back, they may have a scarf collar or a fur collar while, if you are one of the few women to whom it is becoming, you may choose a collarless one.

Suits Are In The suit which is straight of shirt, short of coat and tailored in its origin. It is worn with an overblouse of some tub silk in white or a pastel shade, and its jaunty smartness is certain to recommend it to youth.

There is also a cape suit. Some of these are really sport suits, light colored silk frocks with a matching circular cape, coming about to the hips, while those intended for street wear may be either in silk or wool. The capes to the street suits are usually short and circular though a few longer ones are seen.

The Ensemble It is hard to say whether the ensemble suit is in or not. This is because all of our dresses and coats are planned so much with the ensemble in mind that it affects our whole wardrobe, rather than remaining a distinct fashion. In this sense, it is most certainly the greatest style trend of the times. Now, though, dresses and coats are planned to go harmoniously together rather than be a definite match as when the ensemble was first introduced.

The Head of the Mode

By Muriel Toon

The gigolo reappears in lighter shades. White or sometimes tones just a bit deeper than the frock, and others in shades that harmonize with the frock rather than offer a decided contrast or too exact a match, are the favored colors for sportswear.

The larger gracefully drooping hat of horsehair or straw is fashion typical of the United States. It is one of those styles which has come into being through real necessity. The bright midsummer sun ruins both to complexion and comfort, as foiled by the cool becoming shadow cast by one of these hats. The great majority of them are in horsehair or some very fine straw trimmed very simply with a bow or flower on one side. They are to be had in the most alluring shades—just the colors to accompany the softer, more delicate frocks of summer afternoons.

Felt and Still More Felt Was there ever a time when we did not wear felt? It hardly seems possible to imagine such a thing for nowadays, whether it is winter or summer, spring or fall, more than half of the smart hats are of felt. And yet no matter how much it is worn, it never seems to grow tiresome or so common that the well dressed woman turns away from it. Perhaps it is because the simpler the felt hat is, the more charming it is, and we seldom tire of anything which has the simplicity of real beauty.

When midsummer comes these felt hats will give way a little to straw. Sangha, the new crocheted straw, is quite the smartest. Sangha is soft and flexible enough to be folded into the creases which distinguish the felt hats. In fact, there are countless novelty straws which are very smart. Of course satin is always good in spring and it lends itself so gracefully to softly draped turbans that we are certain to see many satin hats this year.

The Newest Shades Hats are not thought of just as integral a part of the costume. So the favored shades in hats will be the shades which harmonize best with the frocks, and give the final touch of loveliness to the costume. Hats do not match the frocks as closely as they have in years gone by. Sometimes they are chosen on a slightly deeper shade. Sometimes with a gaily patterned frock, the hat will emphasize one of the brighter tones of the frock rather than remain just neutral.

er than remain just neutral. With the returning popularity of grey, there will be many grey hats, but these will be worn rather with the costume which has grey in combination with another shade, while the all grey frock will choose a hat of blue or mauve of the dusty pink.

New Millinery

The large hat shares honors with the small one in the new hat mode, and both insist that the crown be quite high. Simplicity marks the trimmings on the smaller and sport hats, while felts and panama dominate as fabrics. The larger hats, we are showing are gracefully drooped using both flowers and ribbons as the necessary trimmings.

Hosiery

"As You Like It" hosiery is an added delight to the wardrobe of the fastidious lady. Spring has added many new shades to our already large showing of colors and each dress of milady can be suitably matched.

cleverly together to form the crown. The draping is very simple but must be skillfully managed to be effective.

All sorts of clasps, buckles and pins form the trimming of the new hats. The rhinestone pins are still very smart, but perhaps even newer are gold and silver ornaments designed on very modernistic lines.

Pins of jade or a red composition combined with brilliants give a welcome touch of color to black or neutral hats.

Flippant Brims on Men's Hats for Spring

WHILE there will be no decided change in men's hat styles over those a year ago, there appears to be a general tendency in some quarters to surrender the Alpine or Fedora shape for the curl brim effects.

Just how widespread is this movement will be difficult to say until well into spring when most men have purchased their headwear.

Particularly among the younger fellows and that class includes the style-making collegians, will this mode win favor. The first evidence of switching came almost a year ago and gradually gained headways through the fall and winter seasons. The movement promises to gain momentum this spring.

Hat makers and retailers are reticent in making predictions in regard to the advance this turn down brim vogue will make, but they have prepared to meet any emergency.

Fedora Remains Popular

The ever popular fedora or Alpine shape, in good stead for many years, will continue to have its horde of devotees as in time past. It is the style of the man who prefers the conventional; the man who is pretty much set in his ways, and the only difference is in size of brim and crown.

As for colors pearl greys probably will dominate the field. This particular shade always has been considered a spring color, but until recent years hasn't made much stride forward and this year promises to hit the peak of popularity.

There, too, will be other shades of grey, running the entire gamut from lights to darks. Various tints of tans and browns will have quite a following. The green hat, which some makers attempted to force upon the public in other spring seasons, will take the background.

The fancy band, which was shown more last spring than any previous season, again will occupy an important part in lending a bit more color to headwear. Many of these bands will be similar to those worn around straw hats, but in many instances they will be toned down a bit, with narrower stripes of color—just enough to make a man's hat a noticeable part of his ensemble.

And when warm weather comes in comes the straw hat. Lightweight straw sailors, the standbys of other seasons, will win the favor of most men. Brims will be a bit wider and there will be plenty of splash to the bands.

Among the colors that will be worn largely in straws are whites, light browns and tans. All the weaves, including those that were first introduced with the first straw hat to the newest novelties will be on display.

The conservative man will stick to the Panama and leghorn. They are the truly comfort straws and for that reason will retain their following.

Derby Is Coming Back

The derby which has been with us for scores of years, passing through many years of diminishing and increasing popularity, is expected to blossom forth. In the east this style has already won over many new wearers and the movement, it is said, is traveling westward.

Light, rich, distinctive all-over patterns will prevail in caps. The one and eight-piece styles will prevail. Such headwear will be largely for sports and general outdoor activity.

Status Of Salm May Be Probed Under Plan Of N. Y. Congressman

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24 (AP)—Representative Laguardia, Socialist of New York, announced today that he would ask the Labor Department to investigate the status of Count Ludwig Salm von Hoopstraeten, husband of the former "Millie" Rogers, to determine if he was scheduled to deportation on the ground that he might become a public charge.

Count Salm arrived here from Palm Beach, accompanied by his mother, but kept closely to his hotel room.

Mr. Laguardia said he expected to forward a letter to the Labor Department late today asking an inquiry into the Count's case and if it was found he was without means of support, his deportation will be required.

Mexico is not solely responsible for the establishment and operation of them. That is a blot that rests in large part on the record of Americans.

Heavy tribute is paid the officials here by the American owners of the establishments, gambling halls, saloons and other dens. The hundreds of fallen women, most of them Americans, also pay their tribute to corrupt officials. The whole thing, in short, is a striking combination of Mexican laxity and American greed.

F. A. Markley, deputy U. S. customs collector, investigating conditions at Tia Juana for the American government.

informed that Tia Juana has put its house in order.

More than 200 American women are now waiting in San Diego for the opening of this resort. It will be one of the largest institutions of its own kind in the entire world.

For a few days after the Petest outrage the American saloon and dive owners were worried lest the city be really closed. But now they are at ease again.

"It will be only a few days now until business will be better than usual," one told me. "We knew that officials here wouldn't do anything, and we didn't really believe that the American government could do anything."

Heading for Home

In the evening long strings of automobiles wind their way out of town and across the plain to the international line and the road to San Diego and the north. They carry back loads of tourists, "suckers," and the like headed home after a day of what passes for amusement.

Later, when the tourists have left, other autos head north over the line into the United States. They carry men who own and operate the unspakable dives here—carry them back to their homes in the United States.

She ran some risk in her escapade, as several times game were fired in the direction of the "ghost."

Amundsen to Wed Childhood Sweetheart If His Proposed Flight to North Pole Succeeds

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—One more trip to the Arctic and—if it is successful—Roald Amundsen, famous Norwegian explorer will marry and settle down to a quiet home life in his native land.

If you would know why, go back about 40 years and take a peek into a little school room of Oslo—then known as Christiania—Norway. Taking his sweetheart by the hand Roald, a 14-year old youngster, led her to a far corner of the room where stood a globe of the world.

"Some day I am going to discover the north and south poles. Then I am coming back and marry you," he said.

And, with school-girl faith, his sweetheart promised to wait.

Having passed the halfway mark of the long road to his goal by discovering the south pole in 1911, Amundsen is about to realize the rest of his school-boy dream. He will take off from King's Bay in a huge dirigible May 1, bound for the Arctic.

His is confident that on this trip he will discover the north pole. Then he will return to marry the sweetheart of 40 years ago whose name he refuses to reveal—but who, he admits, is still waiting.

"And then the polar regions will be forgotten," says the man who has spent the best years of his life among the icebergs of the Arctic and Antarctic oceans.

"We will buy a small home somewhere on the outskirts of Oslo and live there quietly."

"But of course, that's only on condition I find the north pole. I will never quit until it has been discovered, and these trips into unknown regions are not for married men."

Amundsen started his long career of ice-bound journey in 1897

when he sailed with the Belgian Antarctic expedition. It failed to discover the south pole and the expedition returned home two years later.

"For several years after that I made trips to the Arctic and secured my master's certificate," says Amundsen. "Then in 1911, we sailed for the south pole again. It was on this trip—my second one—that we discovered the pole."

"According to our present plans, we will cover 2100 miles on our trip this spring. Our dirigible, the Norde, is about one-third the size of the Shenandoah. I don't think there is any doubt that we will discover the pole on this trip."

"Then we will continue flying straight over to Alaska, searching for a continent believed to lie between the pole and North America."

Two Die In Orlando Automobile Mishap

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP)—William F. Mays, 25, of Orlando and Viola Libby, 22, of West Pownal, Maine, were instantly killed late last night when a front axle of the roadster driven by Mays broke, causing the car to turn over a number of times, finally crashing into a post.

Miss Libby's chest was crushed, neck broken, and spine twisted; Mays' back was broken between the shoulders and his chest crushed. Skull marks on the road showed that Mays had applied the brakes and skidded over 20 feet.

Their bodies were found mangled together, in the seat of the car about half an hour after the accident.
