Duvalier Flees

United Press International
Haitian President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country for France early today, hours after gunfire erupted in the streets of Port-au-Prince, the capital of the Caribbean nation.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said a U.S. Air Force plane flew Duvalier out of the country he has ruled for 15 years. In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry reported Duvalier and his wife, Michele, were bound for France.

"I can confirm it. It's true. We did supply an Air Force plane," State Department spokesman Bohdan Demytrewyc said. He said the plane, carrying Duvalier and "a number of people with him," left Port-au-Prince at 3:46 a.m. EST.

Cooperation On Horizon For Yankee Lake Foes

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

A cooperative venture may be in the offing for Seminole County and Sanford to meet their wastewater management needs at Yankee Lake.

Such an effort will not be without obstacles, according to state Department of Environmental Regulation representatives, who met with the governments' elected officials and staff for two hours Thursday at Sanford City Hall.

The DER representatives said their agency will in all likelihood pull the $8.3 million in wastewater program grants it has allocated Sanford if the city is unable to dispose its effluent at Yankee Lake.

However, as demonstrated by the meeting's tone, apparently at least one major stumbling block has already been overcome. The same governmental representatives who spent the last three months embroiled in a bitter dispute over the 2,876-acre property now intend to pursue its mutually beneficial utilization and, in the process, will attempt to retain Sanford's grants.

The county has eyed the site for a regional sewage treatment and disposal facility, while Sanford has already developed a DER mandated project which targets Yankee Lake as the city's effluent disposal site.

Thursday's meeting came just three days after Sanford failed in its effort to obtain the land from the county through condemnation. The city filed its suit in November, two days after the county entered into a purchase agreement with Jeno Paulucci.

Although the city has yet to determine whether it will reinstitute its condemnation effort to pursue ownership of the property, Mayor Bettye Smith said today she "would definitely prefer continued discussion (with the county) to continued litigation."

The county and city officials have already scheduled their next meeting with the DER for March 14. Discussion will center on a county engineering study of Yankee Lake, including its effluent disposal capacity.

The study is expected to be complete March 1, and will immediately be submitted to the DER for review. City and county staff will also meet with the DER

'Reach For The Stars' Geneva Students Got Message From McAuliffe

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

"To Geneva Elementary School — Reach for the Stars — Christa McAuliffe"

Mrs. McAuliffe inscribed those words on a color photograph of the space shuttle Challenger crew hours before the launch explosion in which all perished Jan. 28. The seven Challenger astronauts autographed the photo, but McAuliffe added her personal message.

The picture was circulated among the crew by Lockheed Aerospace technician Paul Arnold, whose son Keith attends Geneva Elementary. Arnold was involved in loading the crew onto the shuttle, and closing the cabin door, school principal Nancy McNamara said.

According to Mrs. McNamara, the astronauts had been teasing Arnold about a Geneva Elementary School sweatshirt he had worn. Apparently, they quizzed him on the location and size of Geneva, since they had not heard of the town previously, Mrs. McNamara said.

The younger Arnold, a fourth-grader, and Mrs. McNamara displayed the photo at a Thursday morning press conference at the Sanford post office. Seminole County students letters to Concord High School in New Hampshire where McAuliffe taught were received by Postmaster Don Moore during the conference.

According to Mrs. McNamara, Arnold has given the photo to the school. It will be sealed in an air-tight glass case and shadow box, and put on display at the school.

"It is a genuine treasure," Mrs. McNamara said.

The school hopes to be able to reproduce the picture, and sell copies, in order to raise funds for the "Reach for the Stars" display planned for the school system's Sanford Student Museum. The display will honor the Challenger crew.

January Jobless Rate Dips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment declined slightly in January to 6.7 percent and more than a half million new jobs were created, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The rate dropped two-tenths of a percentage point from 6.9 percent in December.

The number of people without jobs, on a seasonally adjusted rate, dropped to 7.8 million, the lowest level since March 1980 and a continuation of a trend of gradual improvement that started last summer.

Most of the hiring, however, was among men and whites. Rates for adult women, teenagers, blacks, Hispanics and most other groups were little changed from December, when unemployment stood at 6.9 percent.

About 565,000 new jobs — including 205,000 in retail trade and 155,000 in construction — brought the number of people working in January to 99.6 million, after seasonal adjustments. A record 60.6 percent of the civilian population now holds jobs, the agency said.

County Gets Taste Of State Growth Rules

By Sarah Nunn
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County and its citizens got their first real taste of the new state growth management law Wednesday, when the county planning and zoning commission heard its first set of proposed comprehensive land use amendments under the legislation.

County commissioners will be introduced to the requests at their meeting Tuesday, before forwarding the proposed amendments to the state for a 60-day review.

The P&Z, sitting as the local planning agency, wrestled with 18 land use requests during the lengthy public hearing, but not before its members expressed some confusion over how to hear the cases in light of the new state guidelines.

The county has been considering specific land use amendments on a case-by-case basis. Under the growth management bill, however, requests to change the county's land use plan must go through a more comprehensive review and public hearing process.

The state has given the county two chances each year to amend its comprehensive land use plan. The requests heard Wednesday are interim amendments, with the county having until October 1987 to update its land use plan.

After review by the Florida Department of Community Affairs, the requests come back before the county commission for two more public hearings in May.

Seminole County's cities and adjoining counties will also have the opportunity to comment on the land use amendments during the review process, County Planning Director Tony Vanderworp said.

Rather than consider specific amendments to the comprehensive land use plan, the county has lumped them together within seven designated study areas. These areas, which reflect the 18 land use requests received from August to December, include the following:

Study Area A is located in northwest Seminole County. The area is bounded by the Paola area on the south, Interstate-4 on the east, the St. Johns River on the north and the Wekiva River on the west.

Study Area B is the Midway area bounded by Celery Avenue on the north, Ostren Bridge Road on the east, State Road 46 on the south and the City of Sanford on the west.

Study Area C is the County Road 427 corridor between Sanford and Longwood.

Study Area D is the Bear Lake area, bounded by the county line on the south and west, S.R. 436 on the north and the City of Altamonte Springs on the east.

Study Area E consists of Altamonte Springs and adjoining areas, bounded by State Road 434 on the north, U.S. Highway 17-92 on the east, the county line on the south and I-4 on the west.

Study Area F is the Lake Howell/Tuskawilla area in southcentral Seminole County, bounded by the City of Casselberry on the west, the city of Winter Springs and Red Bug Road on the north and S.R. 434 on the east, and the county line on the south.

Study Area G is bordered by the Little

Shuttle Search Heats Up; Panel Meets In Secret

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — A mysterious 3-mile security zone was set up around what apparently is submerged rocket wreckage from the shuttle Challenger but NASA would not say what might be the target of a salvage effort.

Thursday, ABC news broadcast a photograph that showed what appeared to be the back half of a heavily damaged astronaut flight helmet that apparently was recovered at sea.

NASA officials, sticking to a strict "no comment" policy on the personal effects of the seven-member crew or their remains, would neither discuss the picture nor confirm or deny continuing reports that body parts have been recovered.

A salvage ship equipped with two cranes capable of lifting up to 10 tons arrived at nearby Port Canaveral Thursday.

Meanwhile, in Washington, President Reagan's Challenger commission called a secret meeting to follow up five hours of testimony from NASA officials and plan their investigation into the shuttle tragedy.

There was no indication from the panel's opening public session Thursday that NASA investigators are any closer to understanding what caused the shuttle explosion than they were last week when photos were released showing fire shooting out the side of a booster rocket.

Chairman William Rogers, who served as secretary of state under Richard Nixon, announced that the commission will meet today in secret session to plan future work and take some "possibly classified" testimony from unspecified witnesses.

The 3-mile security zone was in effect around a point 15 miles east of Challenger's launch pad. Mariners were being advised once an hour by radio that "vessels are not permitted to enter this area."

A much wider but less restricted zone was established running 18 miles to either side of a line extending 72 miles offshore from just north of the shuttleport.

Despite widespread speculation, NASA has refused to discuss what might be lying on the murky ocean floor but attention has focused on the shuttle's two solid rocket boosters.

The right-side booster rocket is thought to have triggered the explosion of Challenger's external fuel tank Jan. 28, killings.

Early Thursday, a NASA spokesman said Challenger's left-side solid rocket booster may have been located by sonar, but he described that as a "rumor that we have not been able to confirm."

The estimated 13 tons of shuttle debris located since the shuttle exploded 73 seconds after blastoff was found floating on the ocean surface, most of it immediately after the disaster.

The latest "find" was the tip of Challenger's destroyed external fuel tank.

No Quarrels In 81-Year Marriage

ELMORE, Ala. (UPI) — The nation's longest-wed husband says the secret of staying married for 81 years is simple — don't fuss, don't quarrel and "just love each other."

Cora Lee and Oliver Glenn, both 99, were honored Thursday as the couple with the longest marriage in the United States. Gov. George Wallace joined them for the informal ceremony at Merry Wood Lodge nursing home.

"If you are with a woman you love, you can stay 81 years and you won't be sorry," said Glenn, who married Cora Lee on Nov. 6, 1904.

"We never did have any fusses or quarrels and things like that. We just love each other and tried to be pleasing."

Glenn had this advice for people contemplating marriage: "Be sure and love the woman you marry. If you do, you'll love her after you're married."

Voyager Reveals Uranus' Secrets

The technological triumphs of the Voyager 2 spacecraft in its safari through the solar system are somehow consoling to contemplate after the tragic disaster at the Kennedy Space Center.

Reminiscence is in order for a full appreciation of Voyager 2's spectacular rendezvous with the distant planet Uranus on Jan. 24. It was less than 50 years ago when the world was so ignorant of the solar system that Americans panicked in the streets during Orson Welles' radio drama, "The War of the Worlds," which described an invasion of New Jersey by men from Mars.

The 1,800-pound Voyager, launched in 1977, was only a minute off its Uranus schedule, which was calculated five years and almost 2 billion miles ago. It came within a mere 18,000 miles of Miranda, and of Uranus's 15 moons and within 50,679 miles of the bluish-green clouds of the gaseous planet, the seventh out from the sun and third largest of the nine planets. Uranus is the farthest object from Earth ever visited by a spacecraft.

So vast is the distance, Voyager 2 data requires 2 hours 45 minutes of travel at the speed of light (186,282 miles per second) to reach the antennas on Earth. The photographs and data pouring forth from this extended eye are thrilling scientists, who are also puzzled over some of the new findings that contradict previous knowledge. In contrast to all other planets that spin on their axis perpendicular to their orbit around the sun, Uranus lies on its side; its pole points directly at the sun.

Awestruck scientists marvel at the exotic, unexpected geology of Uranus's major moons. The surface of Miranda, for example, features craters, glacial flows, deep canyons, pancake-like terraces — "all the strange places rolled into one," according to Dr. Laurence A. Soderblom, deputy leader of the photographic interpretation team.

Uranus was discovered by William Herschel through his backyard telescope in Bath, England, on March 13, 1781. This was the first planetary discovery since antiquity because of Uranus's distance and dimness. Herschel proposed the name Georgium Sidus (Georgian Planet) in honor of King George III. But Americans predictably preferred the name Uranus proposed by the German astronomer Johann Elert Bode in honor of the Greek god of the heavens. The weight of European and American usage brought universal acceptance of Uranus (Preferred pronunciation YOOR-uh-nuss).

Two years after his discovery, Herschel detected two Uranian moons and two more were spotted in 1851. Herschel's son, Sir John, is credited with naming the moons after characters in Shakespeare's literature.

There were but five Uranian moons known to astronomers until Voyager 2 discovered 10 more. The new moons have come in such quick profusion they have been given the technical designations 1986 U7 and 1986 U8, etc., in sequence of discovery. One must hope the astronomers will act favorably on the suggestion that seven of the moons be named in memory of the Challenger astronauts.

Astronomers tracking the Uranus orbit after Herschel's discovery noted its distortion by the gravitational pull of another planet and thus were led to discover Neptune in 1846 — a billion miles farther out. Voyager 2 having completed its highly successful missions to Jupiter in 1979 and to Saturn in 1981 speeds on at 40,000 miles an hour toward a rendezvous with Neptune on Aug. 24, 1989.

As The Economist aptly emphasizes, Voyager's flypast these planets is producing a Copernican leap in knowledge. Astronomers are learning more from this marvelous unmanned craft than they have gleaned from centuries of straining at telescopes.

The realization that there are no Martians and indeed no life as we know anywhere in the immense solar system except on this planet has made earthlings belatedly aware of the delicate balance that sustains all living things here. The idea of Earth as a space ark is surely to be one of the redeeming concepts of this troubled century.

Escalating Role Of U.S. In Central America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan should read "With the Contras" before he pushes ahead for a return to military aid for the anti-Nicaraguan rebels while mulling the possibility of a negotiated settlement.

The new book by Christopher Dickey is hair-raising in terms of the terror, torture and inhumanity as portrayed by the U.S.-supported side in the Nicaraguan struggle.

Dickey quotes a Contra in a bar in Honduras as saying, "You know there are people who learn to kill and love it."

The author goes on to say, "These are the men President Reagan has likened to 'freedom fighters.'"

Reagan also has likened their cause to that of the Founding Fathers and more recently called them "allies of the heart."

Dickey, a foreign correspondent for The Washington Post, depicts the role of the CIA in the covert attempt to overthrow the Sandinista government and the intense involvement of former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza's guards.

"If you're going to overthrow anyone you have to do it pretty quickly," he quoted a CIA veteran as saying. "These operations always unravel — unless they take over a country — they always make a mess."

Dickey said CIA Director William Casey was listening to two voices, but was eventually won over by "cowboyism: a go-get-'em attitude that said that now was the time for the agency to win some certifiable victories over communism."

Much of the book focuses on the internal disputes and power struggles between the rebel factions. The spotlight is particularly on La Suleida, one of the rebel leaders, a former Somoza guard whose excesses and rampages led to his own death by other Contras. Dickey writes that La Suleida was kept naked and interrogated for days before he was executed by the Contras.

He writes of the fatal news conference given by Eden Pastora, known as Commander Zero, who met with a handful of reporters after they had taken a hazardous journey to a dilapidated shack on stilts in the jungle.

Among the reporters was Susan Morgan, stringer for Newsweek, and Linda Frazier, wife of the Associated Press correspondent.

Shortly after the news conference began a bomb went off and "Pastora's luck held." Morgan was desperately hurt and Frazier, whose legs were blown off, died a slow death. Pastora was rushed away from the scene in a speedboat, leaving behind the reporters screaming for help.

"Reporters would not remember Pastora for his bravery there," the author wrote.

Dickey ties the rebel offenses to a step-up in Sandinista repressions and increasing reliance on Soviet support. In short, a vicious circle.

He notes that the United States, which first said it was trying to interdict arms supplies from Nicaragua to Salvadoran rebels, had widened its original goals.

He quotes one of the rebel leaders, Edgar Chamorro, as saying, "If you know too much, you owe too much. There are times when it is better not to know too much."

Shades of Vietnam and short memories.

Hangovers Contribute To Safety

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jake Garn's suggestion that too little is being done to reduce the traffic toll caused by drunken motorists certainly will draw no quarrel from me.

Clearly, we need to make the roads safer for sober speeders, senators and reckless drivers. I am wondering, though, whether the Utah Republican, head of a Senate space group, realizes that one of the program's spinoffs may be counterproductive.

I refer to studies of spaceickness by a Canadian astronaut-trainee. This project, as previously reported here, could lead to the development of hangover-free alcoholic beverages.

I hardly need point out the consequences such a breakthrough could have. If spared morning-after maladies, more motorists might be tempted to down a few too many before getting behind the wheel.

Anyway, after hearing Garn's comment, I undertook a more careful reading of the magazine article in which the original material appeared.

This time I learned that both spaceickness, of the type Garn experienced during his shuttle ride, and inebriation, which he deplored, have something to do with the inner ear.

Granted that only in extreme stages are you or a drinking companion likely to pour a cocktail in your ear. But the alcohol goes there just the same.

Zero gravity permits fluids to slosh against the canal walls and much the same thing happens when a person gets sloshed. Alcohol that is lighter than the liquids we normally have in our inner ears mixes with the heavier canal fluids, resulting in a certain amount of sloshing.

"Both the astronaut and the drunk feel as though they are moving, even though their eyes tell them they are not," says the magazine Omn.

That's putting it mildly. I've been in taverns where all the barstools seemed to be moving and the occupants along with them. No wonder the occupants missed their mouths and poured highballs in their ears instead.

In theory, the publication adds, if the alcohol and a heavier liquid mix in the right proportions, "their effects on the inner ear may cancel each other out."

Hear! Hear! Three cheers for the right proportions.

Space Still Belongs To The Young

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — Christa McAuliffe and her partners in space died that others might learn. She left friends recall, that there was so much we don't know, so much to learn, so much she wanted to teach.

As the first teacher chosen to explore space, Mrs. McAuliffe was eager to turn the space shuttle into history's most dramatic classroom. She hoped to make schoolwork less forbidding by teaching the lessons of space on location. She wanted to use the excitement of space to attract students to the tough disciplines.

I am chairman of the Young Astronaut Council, which co-sponsored the teacher-in-space launch. Fate doesn't always consult us as to the time or the place tragedy will strike. The horror in the Florida sky, as Christa McAuliffe's celestial classroom disintegrated, devastated us.

ROBERT WALTERS

Railroading A Merger

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It's a helluva way to sell a railroad.

That's the best that can be said for the arrangement devised by members of President Reagan's Cabinet to unload Conrail, the freight-carrying rail line owned and operated by the federal government for the last 13 years.

The wisdom of selling Conrail is not open to question because the government has no business running a railroad. (Conrail is under federal control only because of a government bailout following the 1973 bankruptcy of the Penn Central system.)

At issue is to whom Conrail should be sold, under what conditions and at what price. The Reagan administration's current proposal constitutes nothing less than another sweetheart deal for another large corporation.

The Transportation Department says the most suitable buyer is the Norfolk Southern Corp., a major railroad that has offered $1.2 billion for Conrail — but the merger of those two lines would be blatantly anti-competitive.

It would create the nation's largest railroad whose 32,000 miles of track sprawling across 23 states would enable it to dominate the rail freight business throughout much of the eastern half of the country.

In an era of deregulation, competition is the most important constraint on greedy carriers inclined to gouge shippers to maximize profits — but the proposed merger would drastically reduce competition.

In many parts of the South, competition would be provided by the thriving CSX system, a major rail carrier formed in 1980 by the merger of the Chesapeake and Southern lines.

In the North, however, there would be virtually no competition — a situation implicitly acknowledged by Norfolk Southern when it claims that it would be challenged in the region by two small, obscure railroads — Guilford Transportation Industries and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Co.

The evidence suggests otherwise. A CSX analysis, for example, shows that the massive new carrier would dominate traffic moving in and out of the busy rail hub of Chicago — carrying 66.3 percent of all freight to Pittsburgh, 82.3 percent to Cleveland and 91.5 percent to Buffalo.

If Conrail was not a government entity, the proposed merger would have to be examined at a full-scale hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, be subject to ICC approval and be vulnerable to judicial review.

Instead, legislation submitted to Congress on the proposed sale waives all of the public's protection against anti-competitive acts and confers upon the transaction absolute immunity to federal antitrust laws.

That's important because the Justice Department last year held that an earlier version of the sale proposal would violate the Clayton Act, a major antitrust statute. In recent months, however, there have been recurrent reports of similar opinions being suppressed and of documents that might undermine the transaction being destroyed at the Justice Department.

Air Packs Will Help Firemen

By Vincent Del Giudice
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Firefighters may have a macho "leather lungs" image, but should be required to wear air packs to filter smoke and dangerous fumes from the air they breathe, a study warns.

But even if they do protect their lungs, they may be absorbing hazardous chemicals through their skin, the study says.

"Firefighters consistently suffer rates of death and injury among the highest of any occupation," the Washington-based Citizens Committee for Fire Protection reported.

The study said firefighters have a high incidence of heart disease — including circulatory disorders — and cancer, some of which may be linked to damage caused by chemicals and fumes they are exposed to.

Already, most U.S. fire departments provide air packs, called self-contained breathing apparatus or SCBA, to protect firefighters from flame, smoke and the other deadly byproducts of combustion.

The air packs, somewhat bulky but easily donned and stored on fire engines, weigh about 30 pounds and consist of a cylinder of compressed air, a harness, a regulator, connecting tubes and a mask.

The breathing equipment also limits vision and verbal communications, but depending on the model, a pack can provide up to one hour of cool air in baking, choking and blinding environments.

The fire protection committee noted the Boston Fire Department introduced a measure in 1977 requiring use of air packs "and saw inhalation injuries to firefighters drop 79 percent in the following year." Washington, D.C., instituted a similar rule.

But, according to the study, not all cities and counties require use of air packs, which the committee urges — even by law.

"Firefighters in 23 states are now protected by a mandatory SCBA rule," the study said. "But not all of these states include volunteer firefighters within the definition of protected employees."

"Also, some small fire departments in these states may not be able to afford adequate protective equipment."

But there are other reasons that may be difficult to legislate.

"Many fire departments are tradition bound. If it hasn't been done a certain way in years past, or if it wasn't here, it won't be adopted now," the study says.

Aspartame Safe, But Be Careful With Kids

DEAR DR. GOTT — A couple of days ago I noticed lumps along my jawline. Today, they are all over my face and are red, hot and itchy. I'm trying out some new face powder with a moisturizer and some shiny stuff in it. Could I be allergic to it?

DEAR READER — Certainly. The lumps don't disappear in three or four days, see a dermatologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When NutraSweet was being introduced, I read an article which warned that aspartame should never be used as a sugar substitute in cooking — that, when heated, it loses its sweetening ability and breaks down into, among other things, wood alcohol. Can NutraSweet hurt us?

DEAR READER — Aspartame, the calorie-free sugar substitute marketed as NutraSweet and Equal, was thought to be safe when it was first introduced in 1981. There is growing concern among consumers that this substance may produce harmful side effects. However, in all fairness, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the manufacturer have reported it to be safe.

Some scientists have recommended that pregnant women avoid aspartame because it can cause brain damage in unborn (and born) children with phenylketonuria, a rare genetic disorder. Consumers of aspartame have complained of slurred speech, seizures, depression, visual problems and menstrual difficulties. The sweetener does indeed break down into methanol (wood alcohol), as well as into aspartic acid and phenylalanine.

Aspartame is being added to a growing list of diet foods, including soft drinks, chewing gum, frozen puddings and ice cream. Small amounts of the chemical are harmless to the average healthy person; however, the prudent consumer should exercise caution, particularly when encouraging children to consume the product.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was diagnosed as having serum hepatitis. Exactly what is it, and what are some of the do's and don'ts? I've been married less than three months to a lovely girl whose blood test shows that she has antibodies to serum hepatitis.

DEAR READER — Serum hepatitis is now called hepatitis B. It is a viral inflammation of the liver caused by an infection that ordinarily enters the body through the blood stream. Typically, hepatitis B is spread by drug users who share contaminated needles; however, the virus is now recognized to be present in body fluids — like stool, saliva, blood and semen. Therefore, intimate contact allows a person to catch hepatitis from someone else, without an injection.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

I don't recommend making a takeout double with only ace-small in one of the unbid suits, but North had such a strong hand that there was little chance that South would crowd the bidding by jumping in spades. North's subsequent jump to three clubs was not completely forcing, but it showed a very strong hand. South was happy to bid three no-trump. Having reached the right contract, declarer now had the responsibility of bringing it home safely.

If you assume that the seven of diamonds was a fourth-best lead, West would be left with the A-K-9 and probably some others. Declarer could survive if West later won the lead, but it would be disastrous if a trick had to be given up to East, for then a diamond would be returned through declarer's 10-8-4. The plan of attack therefore was to develop the club suit for tricks without letting the dangerous hand on lead. Since declarer did not need all six club tricks for his contract, he could afford to give up a club trick. That caution paid an extra dividend.

Declarer went to dummy with a high heart and played a low club. When East followed low, South played the eight. That held the trick. Next came the queen of clubs and then back to dummy for the remaining club tricks. By playing ultra-safe, declarer had even managed to score an overtrick.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conditions in general appear rather fortunate for you now. But the areas where you are apt to be the luckiest deal with things of material value.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Plans you formulate today could have far-reaching positive effects. But you must devise ways to put your ideas into action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) As of today you will move into a unique cycle where you can gain the upper hand, not by being aggressive, but by relying on your smarts and sense of timing.

Gardening

Shade Trees Increase Property Value

There are over fifty different species of trees growing in our area. About half of these are suitable for shade in the home landscape. If you don't have your fair share, it's not too late to plant some now. Some varieties of trees take a lifetime to develop a canopy, others may develop in 5-10 years — enough so you won't need to keep moving your lawn chair around to keep the hot summer sun off your tender skin. Keep in mind, though, when you plant a shade tree, usually you're providing shade for the next generation of kids. Properly placed shade trees in your landscape will increase the monetary value of your property, too.

Some of the more desirable broadleaf evergreen trees include Cherry Laurel, Live Oak, Laurel Oak and Southern Magnolia. For energy-conserving deciduous trees (these drop their leaves in the winter to let the sun warm your home), plant Red Maple, Tulptree, Sweetgum or Sycamore.

Most of these trees can be purchased already started in containers at your favorite nursery or garden center. A little extra care and preparation for planting your tree will definitely be a plus for future growth. Start by digging a hole at least a foot wider and deeper than the size of the container in which the tree is growing. If the soil you remove from the hole is very poor, discard it and locate some good topsoil to backfill the hole. Mix the planting soil half and half with compost or peat moss. Then, shovel a foot of the prepared soil mix into the hole then carefully remove the tree and ball of soil from the container. Discard the container and set the tree in the planting hole so it will continue growing at its original growing depth, or slightly higher. Add more soil around the root ball tamping and watering until the hole is filled.

In sandy, well-drained soils, leave a saucer-like depression around the base of the tree to make future watering easier. Two inches of mulch, such as wood chips, pine bark, or pine straw, around the base of the tree will keep the grass away. Water your tree at least once a week after the initial application for the first year. For sandy soils, water a little more often. Be sure to apply it slowly and deeply. Shallow watering encourages shallow rooting.

If your new tree is planted in an exposed area, you may want to stake it with a couple of 2 x 2 wooden stakes driven 2-5 feet into the ground. Then tie the trunk to the stakes with wire strung through cut sections of old garden hose. Usually no pruning is needed for the first couple of years. Do remove the plant label attached to the tree to prevent accidental girdling.

Crabgrass, the bane of Florida lawns, generally moves (along with many other weeds) in turf areas weakened or destroyed by insects or disease. The freeze took care of most of the live crabgrass and this is a good time to rake out the brown remains. Bahla lawns attacked by mole crickets, and St. Augustine turf destroyed by Brown patch, chinch bugs or nematodes are especially susceptible to intrusion of weeds.

If little turf grass remains it is best to reseed the problem areas. Application of a pre-emergence crabgrass killer may help salvageable turf. The use of "weed and feed" fertilizers generally will kill broadleaf weeds in the lawn. Use caution to avoid flower beds. Always follow instructions for application shown on the container. Generally, our lawn grasses begin active growth when the night temperatures get into the 60's. This year it may be early March, considering the freeze damage and cool nights we've been experiencing.

Is your grocery bill getting too high for your pocket book? You can lower it by investing in a few packets of vegetable seed or even started plants from the garden center. If you're new at this game, start small, so it won't overwhelm or discourage you. A small plot of ground near your kitchen door or containers that will hold soil can provide almost a year-around supply of fresh produce.

Sure, it may take a little care and effort on your part to get started and keep it going. But, it is one of the most relaxing, pleasurable and profitable hobbies. It soothes the soul.

Start with one or two tomato plants if you're a real novice or even Cherry tomatoes in a hanging basket on your patio — you never know, you may become a real urban farmer! Now is the time to get started with most of your spring vegetables. Some, such as tomatoes, are susceptible to frost damage and should be planted after the danger of frost has passed — possibly by the first week in March.

Happy gardening!

Woman Looks For Body Shop To Give Her Better Chassis

DEAR ABBY: Is it true that in Hollywood if an actress is good for a part but needs a few alterations (physically), they can fix just about anything? I read somewhere that if a woman is skinny or has bony parts, she can be filled in with a silicone. Like in that song from "A Chorus Line," "T and A Is Where It's At." Well, I have plenty of "T" and "A," but the calves of my legs are very thin and my knees are bony. The rest of me is just fine, but my legs are so shapeless I hate to show them.

Plastic surgeons can perform miracles with a face-lift, so why should giving a woman shapely calves be so difficult? Where can I find a doctor who does this kind of work? I have the funds to handle it, so that's no problem.

Please don't give me any lectures about how I should be satisfied with what I've got. I've heard plenty of those. At 39, I'm old enough to know what I want.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Now that you've rejected my intuitive advice, here's my next choice. Consult with three of the top plastic surgeons in your area. (If you don't know who they are, contact your county association of plastic and reconstructive surgeons, and request referrals.) Discuss your desires with all three of these doctors, then make your decision.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter from a waitress? (Don't worry, it's not about tipping.) If one more customer comes into the lounge where I work and asks me to serve an underage child an alcoholic beverage — or orders two drinks and gives one to the child, then says, "Don't worry, I'll take the responsibility" — I don't know what I'll do.

What I'd really like to do is slap them upside the head and maybe knock some sense into them! If they realized what the penalties are for serving minors, they'd never ask me to do it.

Are they willing to serve my possible jail term, or pay up to $2,000 for my possible fine? Would they be willing to reimburse the restaurant-lounge for the money it would lose if its liquor license were suspended?

Abby, please tell parents who allow their underage children to drink, to do it in their own homes and not expect the cooperation of a bartender of waitress. Thanks. By printing this you may have saved my job and my sanity.

HAD IT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HAD IT: When you're asked to serve someone who appears to be underage, ask to see his/her identification. If an adult offers to accept the responsibility, say, "The responsibility is not transferable ... it's mine." Period.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.

And The Word Is With Him

Books worm their way into the hearts of the literary minded and although some can't wait for the latest romance novel or racy biography to hit the shelves, others look to the past to find literary pleasure and collect the books from yesteryear.

These often moldy, sure to be dusty, castoffs may have broken backs and tattered pages but still hold the tall tales for both young and old - the lessons to be learned, how-to tips, and unique perspectives on history as reflected in its own era.

Or the "Word" as passed through various versions and translations of the most popular book of all time, the Bible.

DeBary Bible buff Reginald Willey said though the message doesn't really vary in the 300 or so Bibles he has collected since 1945, each is different, with its own story and character.

That character can be seen, he said, through language and illustrations of each issue. Some are ornate with golden, hand-tooled touches, while others are rather simple, basic issues.

Willey has picked up these volumes at yard and estate sales, pulled them from trash heaps, or been handed by friends over the years. The character of the past owners can, in many cases, be read along with the books.

Some, although more than 100 years old, look crisp and new, while others are dog-eared from use.

Bibles, Willey said, are unique in that they not only deliver a religious message, they also serve as records of a family's history. The pages of some of his prized texts carry, in the florid, careful handwriting of yesterday, listings of the births, deaths and marriages of those whose Bibles have outlived, if not them, at least their family ties.

Willey's oldest Bible was printed in London 245 years ago. He found it in a junk pile in the basement of a second hand bookstore and shelled out $2.50 for the volume that has been appraised at $250, he said.

He also has one of those "untouched" Bibles, from 1860, which, because of its pristine condition is worth $200, he said.

Sanford's Duane Harrell, a collector of factual accounts of history and the American West, said the condition, subject, date of print, whether the book is a first edition, the stature of the author and the book's rarity all play a part in determining value. However, any time you attempt to repair or alter an old book it loses value.

An inscription or notation by an original owner or the author's autograph can increase the value of a book, Harrell said. But he's careful not to buy a book if it's just a pile of scrap, so he isn't tempted to make changes in the ones he acquires.

Harrell has hundreds of books, having paid from a few cents to $40 for each, and has read them all.

And Willey said his Bibles aren't just gathering dust. Every night he reads something from one of them and he has a favorite from 1940, which he rebuilt.

...The Word

The illustrations in that Bible attract Willey. And illustrations are also the draw to some collectors to other types of old books.

Those who browse through stacks of old books seeking those illustrated by an artist who later gained fame might be considered art fanciers rather than bookworms. But the source of their pleasure remains the same, even though the artist's work in some cases outshines the author's.

Collectors admit it takes patience to dig through grimy stacks of discarded tomes to find a treasure. But to the book buff the rewards can be great.

A Sanford collector said she wouldn't consider going to an antiques shop to shop for an old book. Only the over-priced in poor condition are likely to end up there. "Garage sales where people don't know what they have," are your best bet, she said.

Harrell considers a pile of old books a challenging adventure. He's obsessed with books 60 to 100 or more years old. When he finds a cache of books he separates fact from fiction and then tries to weed out the historical accounts he prizes, with a special interest in those written just after the recorded event occurred.

Within his collection he cherishes a story on outlaw Jesse James, written by a man who knew James' family and members of his gang. Harrell also favors a history of George Washington written just after his death and Buffalo Days.

Buffalo Days, Harrell said, has a misleading title that might make one think it was a story of the Buffalo. That's not the case, he said. It's an account of the Battle of the Little Big Horn where George Custer was killed, written by a man who helped bury Custer's troops. It's a sought after book which Harrell said he might have by-passed if another Custer buff hadn't tipped him to the title, which he just happen to find among a pile of discards.

"It takes a lot of time," Harrell said. "But that's the fun of it."

And, he added, old books are more than just junk, with their value typically increasing at a rate of about 15 percent a year.

So, for fun and profit, those with a probing curiosity and a quest to collect might find just what they seek between the musty pages of an old book.

What If Foreign Terrorists Blast U.S.?

By Andrew J. Edelstein

What would happen if America came under attack by foreign terrorists?

That's the intriguing, but frightening, premise of "Under Siege," a three-hour NBC movie airing Sunday, Feb. 9.

Hal Holbrook plays the U.S. president, who is torn by conflicting advice from his advisers. One camp, led by the FBI director (Peter Strauss), urges restraint, the other, led by the secretary of state (E.G. Marshall) wants quick retaliation against Iran, even though no clear link has been established that it is the culprit.

"Under Siege" was co-written by three Washington Post staffers, including assistant managing editor Bob Woodward ("All the President's Men," "Wired").

"If you talk to anybody in the government they will tell you that it is a very real possibility that terrorists are coming to this country and that we have to prepare for it," says Woodward. "We hope it does not happen, but it would be foolhardy not to anticipate it and take some precautionary steps."

Ed Asner never fails to please — as "Lou Grant" or somebody else. In his latest TV movie "Vital Signs" (CBS, Tuesday, Feb. 11), Asner plays an alcoholic surgeon whose son (Gary Cole), also a physician, is addicted to morphine.

Several recent books have claimed that one of out 10 physicians will be impaired by either addiction during their lifetime, so this movie is not merely being sensationalist. TV movies about alcoholism have been quite popular this season — "Vital Signs" handles the subject skillfully.

(BU) On a much less cosmic note, the Tuesday, Feb. 11 episode of "The A-Team" features a guest appearance by, of all people, flamboyant singer Boy George. The action-adventure show has been slipping in the ratings, so the presence of Boy George to be a somewhat desperate ploy to attract viewers.

What happens? Well, it seems that Boy George gets mistakenly booked by Face into a rowdy country-and-western bar. Apparently the patrons were expecting someone called Cowboy George. But the guys with the red necks love the boy with the red lips and everyone goes home happy.

By the way, Mr. T and Boy George got along fine. In fact Mr. T told a group of reporters recently that he and the Boy have formed a mutual admiration society.

"I wish I had the talent Boy

George had," he said. "You tell it like it is and you your own person. You don't get caught up in what people think of you. You know what you is and that's enough. You talented. Other people have hangups. Because they go home and they would like to do what you doin', maybe they would like to do what I'm doin'... We do what other people think of doin'."

Mr. T, of course was launched in "Rocky III." This week, another "Rocky" alumnus, Carl Weathers, who's best known as Apollo Creed, makes his TV series debut. On Saturday, Feb. 15, he stars in ABC's "Fortune Dane." He plays a "larger than life" troubleshooter who roots out corruption for the female mayor (Penny Fuller) of a "major West Coast city."

Kevin Hooks Looks Ahead

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Three generations is a slice of history, particularly in the progress, for example, of one American family.

Bertha Ward Hooks spent most of her life in poverty, working as a domestic; but she managed to send her son to college. That son, Robert, grew up in the slums of Washington, often getting bitten by rats as he slept.

He became a famous actor. His son, Kevin, grew up in comfortable surroundings. He has become an actor and, while still in his 20s, a director.

Kevin Hooks is the star of the new ABC-TV series "He's the Mayor." He plays Mayor Carl Burke, the chief executive of a medium-sized northeastern city.

There may be another generation of acting Hooks, because Kevin says his 6-year-old daughter, Christiana, seems to have the makings.

"She's outgoing and she has a strong personality," Hooks says. "Just the other day, I was sitting there, looking at her, and I thought, you know, she reminds me of myself when I was her age. It's like a one-woman show she puts on, which is exactly what I used to do."

He says his father neither encouraged him to become an actor nor discouraged him, and that is the course he plans to take with his daughter.

"She hasn't said she wants to act," he says. "Actually, she says now she wants to grow up to be a schoolteacher. I remember at her age I was excited about growing up to be a bus driver, so I am just going to let nature take its course with her."

Hooks and his TV series mates made 13 episodes of "He's the Mayor" for ABC. That's the way it is being done, frequently, with new series these days. They make a group, such as these 13, then wait until the network has an opening and sticks them in.

"It's difficult to do a show like ours that way," Hooks says.

"We do it in front of a live audience, but the audience is watching a show it is totally unfamiliar with. We had the misfortune of having to do all 13 shows in front of people who had never seen the show and had no idea what it was all about.

"It's much better if you can do a show in front of an audience who knows you, knows the characters and the character choices the actors are making. In our show, much of the humor is supposed to come from character development and the relationships between the various characters.

"So it was a distinct disadvantage to have to stay away from that kind of comedy, because the audience wouldn't know what it was all about and wouldn't laugh at the right places."

Nevertheless, Hooks is optimistic about the show, because he thinks it shows black people in a favorable light, which is something many sitcoms do not do.
