'Jeopardy' king nails blackmailer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Roger King, the wealthy distributor of the game shows "Jeopardy" and "Wheel of Fortune," helped police in Atlantic City, N.J., nail a man who allegedly was trying to blackmail him for $150,000. On June 22 King, chairman of King World Productions, received a call from someone saying he would release some embarrassing information unless King came up with the cash. Ivan Foster, 23, was arrested in a casino in Atlantic City, where King had gone for the Tyson-Spinks fight, after accepting the money from an undercover cop. "This extortionist really picked the wrong guy to try this on," prosecutor Jeffrey Blitz said. "King is a self-made millionaire, not the type of person that would be intimidated by these types of threats. He immediately came to us and assisted us greatly in the investigative stage of this case. It's citizens like that that make our job a lot easier." King, however, has been on the other side of the law. In February 1987 he was arrested for allegedly stealing a driver's taxi and possessing cocaine. He ended up with a $240 fine and two years on probation.

'Too Party' clock brings record price

KIRKJHUNK, Maine (UPI) — Brewster Doggett found owning a piece of America's history cost more than he could afford. The 78-year-old retired stockbroker didn't want to sell the grandfather's clock — believed originally owned by an organizer of the Boston Tea Party in 1773 — but found it too expensive to insure.

The clock, known as the Boston Tea Party clock, was sold at auction during the weekend for $440,000, said to be the most money ever paid for a clock.

FBI: lady shocked by staff drug use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First lady Nancy Reagan is said to be "shocked and disappointed" that three White House policemen and two National Security Council clerks were allegedly saying yes to drugs. Elaine Crispin, Reagan's press secretary, said the first lady still was not "terribly surprised because she has been saying for the last seven years that drugs are everywhere."

Couple arrested for murder

By J. Mark Barfield
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford couple was arrested Thursday morning for the March 2 murder of a retired two-star Marine Corps general in Longwood after they reportedly conspired to rob the man using a fake pizza delivery man scheme. The scheme went awry, leaving one of their alleged co-conspirators dead after a shootout with the victim.

Gina Marie Rizzo Mosteller, 33, and Arthur Douglas Mosteller, 27, both of 2613-B Mohawk Ave., were arrested at 10:15 a.m. at the Sanford Police Station. Both were charged with two counts of murder and are being held in the Seminole County Jail without bond.

They are charged with the murder of Wilbur J. McNenny, 72, and Clive Mitto, 24, of Deltona. Police say Mitto was a co-conspirator in the crime and state laws allow murder charges to be placed on suspects involved with a death resulting from a crime.

Police say Mitto posed as a pizza delivery man in order to rob McNenny. He went to McNenny's Longwood home at 556 Thames Circle in the Tyler Cove subdivision at about 9:30 p.m. on March 2. According to police, Mitto shot McNenny twice, and McNenny returned three shots, leading to Mitto's death several minutes later.

Sanford police found Mitto's body slumped over in the passenger seat of his car the next morning, still wearing rubber gloves and a stocking mask. The car was parked at Lake Monroe Terrace Apartments on Third Street in Sanford.

McNenny died more than two months later as a result of the gunshot wounds.

Gina Mosteller had been a practical nurse for McNenny's bed-ridden wife, Dorothy McNenny, for about four years, police report. Last November she reportedly met Arthur Mosteller and began a close relationship with him. They married after the robbery attempt, police report.

Police report witnesses told them Mitto and Arthur Mosteller were close friends and often drove past the McNenny residence on their way to work.

Arthur Mosteller is a forklift driver for Ball Motor Line in Sanford, police say.

SANFORD — Fireworks displays, barbecues and a lighted sailboat parade on Lake Monroe will highlight Independence Day celebrations in Seminole County Monday.

There will be fireworks displays at Sanford's Fort Mellon Park and another in Oviedo Monday night as America celebrates its declaration of independence.

The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce and the city have scheduled a free fireworks display for 9 p.m. at Fort Mellon Park, located between First Street and Seminole Boulevard.

At the conclusion of the fireworks display, about 100 sailboats on Lake Monroe will turn on their specially equipped lighted masts, providing a sparkling backdrop to the fireworks finale.

People are asked to bring flashlights and participate in the finale that will also feature patriotic music.

The Greater Oviedo Chamber of Commerce and the city of Oviedo are sponsoring a fireworks display at the Seminole Flying Ranch at 8:45 p.m. People will be asked for a $2 donation per carload to attend the fireworks display.

The Seminole Flying Ranch is three miles east of Oviedo on State Highway 419.

Earlier in the day, the Geneva Citizens Association will host a parade at 10:30 a.m., beginning on First Street in front of the First Baptist Church, then continuing down Avenue C to Second Street, down Second to Pine Street, past the post office and back to First Street.

After the parade, activities will begin at the Community Center on First Street with games for children, live entertainment and sales of barbecued food and cold drinks.

The activities at Fort Mellon Park will begin at 5 p.m. with a special appearance by Twiggy, the water skiing squirrel, on Lake Carrolla, behind the General Sanford Museum.

HUD grant to benefit Goldsboro

By Wayne Mize
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Working with Seminole County, the city has received a $102,000 federal grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for rental rehabilitation, which will benefit those of low-to-moderate income, according to Richard Woods, director of the Community Development Office.

Woods' office received notice of the grant approval Wednesday from the HUD office in Jacksonville.

The money is targeted for use in the Goldsboro community to renovate unoccupied rental units that are owned by private businesses and are in need of repair or considered substandard housing, according to Woods.

"The purpose of the grant is to improve the rental housing supply and make the units affordable," said Woods.

Application for the grant was made in May by Buddy Balagia, principal planner for Seminole County's Community Development office, with information provided by the Sanford office.

The city must apply for grants from HUD's Rental Rehabilitation Program through the county as part of the Urban County Entitlement Program (UCEP).

As part of the UCEP agreement, the city gave up its right to compete for certain Community Development Block Grants (CDBG) and the county must apply on behalf of the city, Woods said.

"Most of the money will be for the Goldsboro area (in west Sanford)," he said. "We made the target area big enough that it would include most of the low-to-moderate residences, though we have not selected the actual units."

Woods said owners of investors in rental units in the specified area may apply for the rehabilitation money.

Lake Mary agrees to further study on how to pay for paving dirt roads

By Carol Rumsey
UCF Intern

LAKE MARY — City commissioners agreed to further study how to pay for the paving maintenance and repair of the city's more than 10 miles of dirt roads Thursday night, but didn't give the go-ahead on any action.

City Engineer Tim Weaver's road improvement policy, presented to commissioners, lists the priority needs of the roads for paving or repair, based on the severity of the problem, the number of citizens who would benefit, the cost and the amount of preparation required.

The question debated by commissioners was not which roads to repair but how to assign assessment for those repairs.

"We have a good framework for a policy," said Mayor Dick Fess. "A skeleton. What we need is a little meat on the bones."

Weaver said the city is currently seeking a grant from the Department of Commerce Economic Development for road improvements. According to Weaver, the grant application asks if development, creating more traffic, will adversely affect a roadway which is already in poor or declining shape.

The city's land development code, adopted in 1985, requires developers to pay for new growth's impact on traffic, drainage, and other infrastructure. For example, subdivision developers must pave their internal roadways and any part of unimproved road that connects the development to a paved road.

Private funding is another source for road improvement. Some city residents have petitioned the commission to have their streets paved or improved. According to Weaver's plan if the street is not on the five-year priority list, the cost to improve or repair will be assessed to those who benefit most.

Road assessment is not a new problem. Commissioner George Duryea reminded fellow commissioners.

"In the past we have had a very large problem of funding roads. Either we did it, the developer did it in conjunction with the city, or we assessed the people living there."

Duryea said Weaver's proposed policy is no policy at all because it lacks clear definition for action.

Commissioner Paul Tremel disagreed with Duryea, saying the reason for Weaver's proposal was to give the staff direction, and that the city should be trying to deal with the roads listed in Weaver's proposal as top

Arrest made in beating death

OVIEDO — An Oviedo man was arrested and charged with murder and robbery Thursday for the beating of a Winter Springs man who died 26 hours after an apparent fight early Tuesday morning.

Fred Robinson Jr., 25 Pine Street, was arrested at 5:45 p.m. Thursday following the death of Tommie Kennedy of Winter Springs at about 1:15 a.m. Wednesday at Seminole Community Hospital in Longwood, said Oviedo Det. Sgt. Sparky Dingess.

Robinson is being held without bond at the Seminole County Jail on charges of murder and robbery.

Dingess said according to witnesses, Robinson and Kennedy were arguing at the corner of Avenue B and Tyson Street at about 12:45 a.m. Tuesday. Witnesses reported Robinson struck Kennedy with his fists several times and was seen attempting to remove a gold chain from Kennedy's neck as he lay on the ground. — J. Mark Barfield

Many complaints filed against bridgetenders at Pompano Beach

POMPANO BEACH (UPI) — Bridgetenders, working at the same location within 24 hours of when a car jumped 8 feet over a rising drawbridge, entertained visitors and forced a pedestrian to jump off the rising bridge, state records show.

Among the other complaints leveled against bridgetenders working for Global Contract Services Ltd. were that they made hundreds of dollars in unauthorized personal telephone calls, invited friends to drink in the bridge cabins and yelled at people passing over and under the bridge, according to state records.

A motorist crossing the Intra-coastal Waterway on Saturday had to make an 8-foot leap over the rising drawbridge. The driver said the gates were still upright.

But company officials said warning bells were ringing, lights were flashing and the gates were about to close when the motorist tried to make it over the bridge.

Police say the bridgetender was 16, although company records show he is 18. After the incident, he fled on his bicycle.

Lawmakers approve White Sox deal

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Without a vote to spare and technically past its deadline, the Legislature gave final approval early today to a lease agreement to keep the White Sox in Chicago.

The Senate endorsed the plan on a 30-26 vote, and the House followed at 12:03 a.m. on a 60-55 roll call.

The action apparently will prevent the team, at least for the present, from moving to St. Petersburg, Fla., as threatened.

Shortly before midnight the fate of the deal was in doubt as the House vote board showed the plan six votes shy of the 60 needed to send it to Gov. James R. Thompson. But animated and unrelenting arm-twisting by the governor and other top officials resulted in the legislative grand slam.

"This is a political resurrection from the dead, a baseball resurrection from the dead," the Republican governor said. "The leaders in both Houses, all four of them, told me they would help me. They did. They kept their word. I'm immensely grateful to them. This was a team victory."

Some lawmakers opposed to the plan questioned the legality of the vote, since it occurred after midnight. Votes after the scheduled adjournment deadline require an extraordinary majority. But House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, said everything was legal.

"The vote ended at 11:59," he said.

Prior to the vote House Democratic leader James McPike of Alton, said the roll call was taken at 11:59 p.m. which will be recorded in the printed journal. Even if there is a court challenge, judges traditionally have not gone farther than the journal to verify the time of a vote, legislative officials said.

A statement from the team's owners said the outcome "renews hope the team can remain in Chicago where it has played since 1900 as a charter member of the American League."

Earlier in the day, many lawmakers were predicting the Sox deal was dead.

"It is the last of the ninth. We hope the bases are loaded. The lights are almost out in Comiskey Park," said Sen. Tim Degnan, D-Chicago. "For 90 years Chicago has been a two-team town. How will Chicago and Illinois look to tourists, residents and fans if we allow a city half our size, less in spirit and sports tradition to steal our White Sox?"

Approval did not come without objection.

"It's time to tell state government to get its priorities in order," said Rep. John Dunn, D-Decatur. "What in the name of heaven are we doing at this hour with every top ranking politician in this state standing on the floor of this chamber and we can't take care of the children, we can't take care of the poor, we can't take care of the sick, we can't take care of the mentally ill. Let's shut this place and go home and forget the White Sox. Vote no."

The Sox owners — Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn had threatened to move the team to Florida if the Legislature did not approve the deal for a new $150 million stadium on Chicago's South Side. The agreement would give the Sox at least $60 million more than what was agreed to in 1986.

The package is financed by a 2 percent tax on Chicago hotel and motel rooms and $10 million in payments split between the city and the state. The funds would be used to pay stadium operating costs and the Sox would not pay any rent if attendance does not exceed 1.2 million. In addition, the state might have to buy 300,000 tickets annually if attendance is low in the second half of the 20-year lease.

Governor's veto wrong on airport

Though each maintains its territorial distinctiveness, the destinies of Seminole and Orange counties are inextricably interwoven. If Orange is harmed, Seminole hurts. And Wednesday Gov. Bob Martinez bruised Central Florida with his veto of the $30 million loan by the state to the Orlando International Airport.

A survey taken by the Sanford Airport Authority revealed nearly 900,000 passengers from this area used the Orlando International Airport annually. That facility is now the second largest in Florida and the nation's 19th busiest. The loan was to fund acquisition of 3,500 acres of adjacent land and build a fourth runway. The expansion is vital to the continued growth of the region. A delay will result in greatly increased costs.

The veto by Gov. Martinez is difficult to understand. He made a point of blaming aggressive tactics by Orange County delegation members in the Legislature, but since when is aggressive representation of one's district wrong? He cited politics but when dealing with governors and legislators, how do you separate "politics from political"? We should be able to expect capable representation and fiscal responsibility.

The legislative provision for the Orlando International Airport was a $30 million non-interest bearing loan payable within 12 years. Its benefits would extend throughout Central Florida. Gov. Martinez did not veto a special interest funding in support of St. Petersburg's attempts to persuade the Chicago White Sox to transfer its franchise to Pinellas County. The funding bill provides for a total of $30 million for the baseball program, $5 million grants for each of three successive years, plus authority to bond future revenues up to $15 million. A domed stadium to serve as a home for a sports team in St. Petersburg is presently under construction but the city is vying with interests in Tampa to secure a team — any team. Their impatience, displayed by premature building, has now led them to the public trough.

Gov. Martinez displayed convoluted logic last year in his vassalizations over the ill-timed, ill-conceived state sales tax on services. He is now maintaining that record by vetoing a state loan for a deserving project such as the airport, which would benefit a wide area of Florida, and approving a grant and credit for a similar amount for a parochial project which would benefit a much narrower citizen base. Perhaps the difference is the proximity of St. Petersburg to his hometown of Tampa.

The growth of Florida generally, and Central Florida in particular, poses challenges to elected and appointed officials to apply creative thinking, coupled with sound fiscal restraints, in order to maintain planned progress. Our state cannot afford mistakes such as this one by the governor.

Reagan insists two former aides are innocent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is neither a lawyer nor a student of the Constitution. That's pretty clear.

His insistence that Oliver North and John Poindexter are "innocent" and broke no laws has been repeated on several occasions in recent days. It is interesting that Reagan has passed that judgment in view of a sweeping 23-count indictment against both men and others in the Iran-Contra scandal.

After taking the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination until he received immunity, North has acknowledged lying and deceiving Congress, shredding official documents hour after hour after a government inquiry was under way and accepting a security system paid for by the arms sales to Iran. That's for starters.

He also was aware that his secretary, Fawn Hall, took national security documents out of the White House complex, hiding them in her clothes.

Poindexter was charged with obstructing justice, blocking congressional and Justice Department probes, a part of the conspiracy charged in the indictment. He also is accused of deleting information about the secret arms sales to Iran and the diversion of profits from the sales to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras.

After a Lebanese magazine exposed the arms sales, Poindexter insisted that the United States had an arms embargo in force against Iran.

Poindexter later acknowledged he knew of efforts to falsify the chronology of events leading to the scandal, which had been prepared for Reagan to use in his speech to the nation and at his news conference.

The same day that Reagan fired North and compelled Poindexter to resign, he told Time magazine's Hugh Sidey that North, who had supervised the Contras and helped raise funds for them, was a "national hero."

The scandal broke in November 1986. For nearly a year, the president avoided news conferences, picture takings, and any encounters with the media where he might be questioned. His wife, Nancy, stepped forward to answer questions and was not hesitant in calling on North and Poindexter to tell what they knew about the affair that was engulfing the White House and jeopardizing the presidency.

Neither the Tower Commission report, the congressional hearings nor the testimony itself of the key witnesses apparently had any effect on the president.

He was back to square one at his recent news conference at the Toronto summit meeting, insisting that he did not trade arms to Iran for help in securing freedom for the American hostages in Lebanon. Nor does he believe the usurpation of his presidential authority by Poindexter, who told the world "the buck stops here," and of North, who took it on himself to siphon funds from the arms sales, represented any legal breach.

Reagan's own lack of outrage that two national security aides would undertake such activities without his authority is puzzling. Reagan said he did not know about the diversion of the money to the Contras, but he shows no anger that it was done behind his back.

If there is a lesson for future administrations to learn from the consuming scandals, it could be that ignorance of the law is no excuse.

JEFFREY HART

'Tawana Brawley' by Wolfe

We may be at the End of an Era. That is, the era of the Great Racial Scam. Tom Wolfe zeroed in on it in his best-selling novel "The Bonfire of the Vanities."

In that novel one of the most amusing characters is one Rev. Reginald Bacon, a sort of combination of Jesse Jackson and Adam Clayton Powell.

One of the funniest scenes in the book occurs when a couple of Manhattan elite Episcopalians confront the Rev. Bacon over the disposition of some $300,000 the church has contributed to Bacon's Bronx "jobs" program — only, there are no visible "jobs." Bacon tells them firmly that the money has been "committed." When they persist, he threatens around-the-clock picketing of one man's mid-town expensive restaurant. End of negotiation.

But back to the famous Tawana. What now appears to have happened is that Tawana Brawley ran away from home in Wappinger's Falls, N.Y., possibly in the midst of a family spat. She thereupon went on a four-day "spree." To explain her absence, she made up a story — imitative of a story told several years ago by a friend — that she had been abducted, held for four days in a shack by six white men, one of them a police officer, and raped. Then she turned up near her old apartment, smeared with dog excrement and inked-on racial slurs.

On the face of it, her story was laughably incredible. Her friend had told the same sort of story before. In the unheated shack in which she claimed to be held, the temperature at the time was around freezing. The notion that six men would spend four days "sexually abusing" Brawley under such circumstances is absurd. In this small town, there were no "missing person" reports concerning six such men. Medical examination showed that Brawley had not been raped.

If Tawana Brawley had not been black, she would have been told to report to the truant officer. Instead, the case turned New York politics and law enforcement upside down. A vast investigative apparatus went into operation. Brawley refused to testify before a grand jury. Her mother, to avoid testifying, ignored a subpoena and took refuge in a church.

Nicaragua reporter fears for his sources

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — In the Atlantic Coast region of Nicaragua is a grieving mother whose son was kidnapped and killed by Sandinista soldiers. Free-lance journalist Gary Moore of Washington, D.C., persuaded her to tell her story to his video camera.

"She looked right in the camera and talked about how the soldiers had dragged him off and cut his throat," Moore said. He asked the woman why she would risk her life to talk. "If I have to die for the truth, I'll die for it," she said.

Now Moore is afraid she might. After he spent more than three months combing the Nicaraguan jungle documenting human rights abuses on both sides of the civil war, Moore was jailed by the Sandinistas in May. He was released after five days, but his film and notes with names and faces are still in the hands of the Nicaraguan government.

Moore was detained because he had ventured into a restricted zone. Few journalists have gone to the Atlantic Coast, because the Sandinistas don't allow it, and because the area is primitive — horses and

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court's 1987-88 term may be viewed best as two terms divided by one justice — Anthony Kennedy, who may have the final word on President Reagan's influence on constitutional law and a woman's right to an abortion.

In the first half of the term that began the first Monday in October, the court found itself struggling with just eight members as Congress and the White House battled over a replacement for retired Justice Lewis Powell.

The court deadlocked on an abortion case and splintered on applying the death penalty to teenagers, cases were held over for months without action; and other controversial issues, such as the constitutionality of moment of silence laws and attempts to stop the Providence Journal-Bulletin from printing a story, were dismissed on technicalities.

In a major abortion case from Illinois — already held over from the year before — the justices split 4-4 to uphold a lower court ruling that struck down restrictions on a minor's right to abortion that included a 24-hour waiting period and notification to both parents.

On the death penalty, the court voided laws in 18 states that allow capital punishment for children who were under 16 at the time of the crime. But the ruling, which failed to win support from a majority of the court, left open the possibility that state legislatures could enact laws allowing the death penalty for minors 15 and younger. Again, only eight members participated.

Both cases were argued before Kennedy joined the court in February and he did not join in the decisions.

In a major case he did participate in, however, Kennedy gave the conservative wing a 5-4 majority to uphold a law that sends tax dollars to religious groups to counsel teenagers about sex.

A.E. Dick Howard, a former Supreme Court law clerk teaching law at the University of Virginia, said, "The term came a step closer to conservative majority... but I still don't see it working majority... One more term and we'll know."

Bruce Fein, a conservative constitutional scholar, took the hypothesis further and said the term marks the beginning of a new conservative majority.

"This was the term where the chief justice (William Rehnquist) displayed the first earmarks of leadership," Fein said. "Justice Kennedy placed himself clearly in the conservative bloc and Justice (Sandra Day) O'Connor emerged as the crucial pivotal swing vote that will determine whether this court dramatically moves in the social-liberal rights area with a conservative face."

Howard said Kennedy is clearly not another Powell, known for his moderate views and pivotal role as the swing vote to give the liberal wing the margin of victory in such areas as affirmative action, school prayer and abortion.

Lawrence Baum, a political science professor at Ohio State University, said Kennedy's vote to consider overturning a major civil rights ruling in the next term "symbolizes the fact that he is more conservative probably than people were speaking of him during the confirmation process."

Weight loss problems

CHICAGO (UPI) — People who repeatedly go on crash diets to lose weight only to gain it back again may slow their metabolism and make future weight control even more difficult, a study of high school wrestlers suggested Thursday.

Researchers from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia recommended "slow and steady" as the best dieting strategy.

"I would hesitate to say what we found (with high school wrestlers) is going to be true of people in general. That's going to require more study," said Suzanne Nelson Steen, a sports nutritionist at the medical school. "But I think it is safe to say that for most people yo-yo dieting is not a good method of weight control."

"This (study) might explain why," she said. "But if reality is too early to draw that conclusion."

Yo-yo dieting is very common among wrestlers, who try to wrestle in the lowest possible weight class in order to attain a competitive advantage. Known as "weight cutting," the diets typically involve fasting, fluid deprivation, use of diuretics or sauna, and sometimes vomiting and laxatives. Weight lost in this manner is usually gained back shortly after the competition.

Such "cycling" can produce numerous negative health effects, the researchers said, noting that "studies have shown adverse effects on body composition, nutrient intake, renal function and electrolyte imbalance, thermal regulation, testosterone levels, and strength."

Nevertheless, and despite strong disapproval from both the American Medical Association and American College of Sports Medicine, weight cutting remains widespread.

"If a wrestler's metabolic rate decreases, subsequent dieting will become increasingly frustrating, both during the wrestling season and later in life," the researchers concluded, but added further "studies will be needed to determine whether weight cycling actually produces a decline in metabolic rate" in the general public.

Heidnik jury mulls insanity defense ...Fourth

Sanford Herald, Sanford, Fl. Friday, July 1, 1988-3A

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The jury in Gary Heidnik's "House of Horrors" murder-and-torture trial began its third day of deliberations today with his attorney saying he is encouraged by the lengthy deliberations.

The six-man, six-woman panel deliberated for five hours over two days before asking Common Pleas Judge Lynne Abraham to redefine legal insanity and explain the requirements of a verdict of guilty but insane.

"The jury is asking about issues that are helpful to the defense," defense attorney A. Charles Peruto Jr. said Thursday. "Any question along those lines would be encouraging," Peruto said.

Peruto maintains Heidnik was insane when he raped and tortured six women in his basement dungeon. Two victims died.

The jury also asked Abraham to re-explain the components of the various degrees of murder.

Assistant District Attorney Charles Gallagher, who asked the jury to convict Heidnik of first-degree murder and sentence him to death in the electric chair, dismissed the jury requests as routine and said he remained optimistic.

The jury began deliberations Wednesday after receiving 2 1/2 hours of instructions from Abraham on how to apply the law to one of Philadelphia's most bizarre criminal cases.

Peruto said he believes the longer the deliberations continue the better Heidnik's chances for an acquittal.

Heidnik, 44, awaited word of his fate from an isolated cell in City Hall, one floor above the jury room. He has been placed in solitary confinement after a pair of inmates beat him up in a crowded holding cell Wednesday.

Peruto said the assailants — another murder suspect and a robbery suspect — apparently recognized Heidnik from news media photographs and began beating and punching him.

Peruto said Heidnik suffered bruises and cuts and a scraped knee but did not require hospitalization. No charges have been filed.

Peruto has conceded that Heidnik committed the offenses, kidnapping six women, shackling them to sewer pipes inside his basement torture chamber and raping and abusing them.

But he said Heidnik suffered from severe schizophrenia and was driven by an insane obsession to impregnate 10 women and raise a "perfect family" in his basement.

Gallagher described Heidnik as a calculating "laker" who enslaved his six captives for "sadistic sexual pleasure," fully aware of the nature and consequences of his crimes.

Arab dies of gunshot wounds

JERUSALEM (UPI) — An Arab woman died today from a bullet wound she received when Israeli soldiers opened fire May 18 at West Bank villages who attacked an army patrol with rocks, Palestinian sources said.

The woman, Fatima Youssef Sahweil, 24, was shot in the head in Abwein village near Ramallah, 9 miles north of Jerusalem. A Palestinian teenager was shot and killed and nine others wounded in the incident.

Sahweil died today in Jerusalem's Mokassed Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Hospital and Palestinian sources reported Thursday that two other Arab youths had died from army gunfire. They were identified as Ibrahim Aranki, 15, and Arafat Ahmed Hanani, 18.

The deaths brought the toll in the uprising to 33. Three Israelis also have been killed in the violence that began Dec. 9.

The latest deaths came amid new signs that the 6-month-old uprising in the occupied territories is seriously damaging Israel's image abroad while straining its financial resources at home.

The Jerusalem Post reported today at least four countries — Poland, Greece, Portugal and Ireland — recently have canceled or delayed plans to increase diplomatic ties with Israel because of the uprising. It also said the Soviet Union may have delayed visas for an Israeli consular delegation because of the uprising.

The newspaper also reported the Civil Administration, which governs the occupied territories, would no longer routinely pay the medical bills of Arabs from the occupied territories who are hospitalized in Israel.

The Civil Administration made the decision because of a budget squeeze caused by the uprising, the newspaper said. The underground committee directing the uprising has repeatedly urged businessmen in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to withhold their tax payments.

But Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned Thursday that the Palestinians would accomplish nothing by the uprising.

Many Palestinian Arabs know that by violence, they cannot get anything from us," Shamir said Thursday in a speech at a luncheon. He called the uprising "a new form of warfare" against Israel.

A military spokesman said a riot erupted Thursday in Nablus, 30 miles north of Jerusalem, during a funeral for a man who died of a heart attack earlier in the day. The protesters claimed the man was killed by tear gas but Palestinian sources said he was ailing and due to undergo heart surgery.

The protesters waved the outlawed Palestinian flag and hurled stones at the soldiers, who fired bullets and tear gas to disperse the crowd. The spokesman said. One man was wounded by gunfire and another was beaten and required hospital treatment, hospital sources said.

Palestinian and hospital sources said Aranki was killed Wednesday when Israeli soldiers opened fire on a group of Palestinian protesters in the Taibe area near Ramallah. The military said two soldiers were wounded by stones.

A series of arson fires that destroyed nearby Arab cropland apparently touched off the protest, Palestinian sources said. They blamed Israeli settlers for the fires.

The boy's body was found after the protest and was taken to a hospital, where officials said he died of gunshot wounds. The army said it was investigating the death.

Hanani died Thursday from gunshot wounds he received June 16 when Israeli soldiers fired at protesters in the village of Beit Furik near Nablus.

Also Thursday, four Israelis received 18-month prison terms, with 12 months suspended.

Baker: No regrets, no plans for book

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief of staff Howard Baker says his 18 months in the White House were a "real eye-opening experience" but he leaves with no regrets and no plans to write a book.

In a farewell interview Thursday, Baker told United Press International he would "love to be president," but now considers it "highly unlikely." Vice President George Bush will offer him the second spot on the Republican ticket in this fall's presidential election.

"I'd love to be president," Baker said on his last day at the White House. "I wouldn't be a politician if I didn't aspire to that, and I sure am a politician."

But Baker gave up his own fledgling campaign for the 1988 GOP presidential nomination to come to President Reagan's rescue as the Iran-Contra scandal mushroomed.

IN BRIEF

One killed, 31 wounded in Beirut car bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A car bomb blew up in a crowded commercial center in Moslem west Beirut today, killing one person, wounding 31 others and causing extensive damage, police and hospital sources said.

The booby-trapped car laden with 100 pounds of explosives blew up at the entrance of a movie hall at the far end of the bustling Ha'ira shopping district in the heart of Syrian-ruled west Beirut.

The blast occurred only 50 yards from a Syrian army military intelligence office, and near the headquarters of the Geneva-based International Committee of the Red Cross.

The explosion sent a burst of shrapnel cutting through the crowds of shoppers, police said.

13 Koreans killed in Iraqi strike

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — At least 13 Korean workers were killed and 37 others wounded, 14 of them seriously, in an Iraqi bombing raid on a natural gas refining plant under construction in Iran, South Korean officials said today.

Persian Gulf-based diplomats said Iranian workers also were killed and wounded in the Thursday morning raid, but could not immediately provide specific numbers.

New insight into roots of Pentagon scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With new revelations about the process that gave a top Navy job to Melvyn Paisley, now a key figure in the Pentagon fraud scandal, federal court papers are shedding new light on the process by which defense consultants altered the course of military contracts.

A federal search warrant made public in Dallas Thursday, along with other documents providing a clearer picture of the unfolding investigation, details wiretapped conversations in which a former Navy employee allegedly proposed to design a naval program to favor a defense firm that paid him as a consultant.

The documents submitted by FBI Agent James Lamb were used to obtain a search warrant executed June 14 at Varian Associates Inc.'s Continental Electronics division in Garland. The search led to seizure of notes and computer files.

The conversations in question were recorded after the government placed a wiretap on the home and office telephones of consultant Mark Saunders, fired in 1982 as a contracting specialist for the Navy's Space and Naval Warfare Command (SPAWAR) following a criminal conviction for insider stock trading.

In one conversation, Saunders alluded to the possibility of paying kickbacks to government employees to obtain information, the court documents show. While the documents do not name him, law enforcement sources have identified the key connection for Saunders as George Stone, who took over Saunders' SPAWAR job.

Meanwhile, law enforcement sources in Washington Thursday confirmed that a 1981 FBI background check contained allegations of bribery involving Paisley, as ABC News reported that the White House withheld the background report from the Senate committee that cleared him for the Navy's top procurement post.

ABC said the derogatory material about Paisley, now a private consultant at the center of the bribery and fraud investigation, was kept secret by the White House counsel's office because of pressure from Navy Secretary John Lehman to hurry through his appointment as assistant Navy secretary.

Leaders of the Senate Armed Services Committee are trying to retrace how Paisley was confirmed in light of the recent allegations. A transcript of his confirmation hearing Nov. 18, 1981, showed his nomination went forward without a close committee review of allegations that he delivered and accepted bribes during his 28 years at with the Boeing Co.

Aides to Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan, a Democratic committee member, said he had written the FBI requesting a copy of Paisley's entire file. Virginia Sen. John Warner, the committee's ranking Republican and a former Navy secretary, is taking similar action to review the confirmation process.

In a related development Thursday, Navy sources said scientists at California's China Lake Naval Weapons Center had urged shutting down a problem-plagued secret missile project only to have Paisley override them.

The sources said Paisley and Deputy Assistant Air Force Secretary Victor Cohen, another central figure in the current scandal, teamed up to keep alive the Tacit Rainbow anti-radar missile designed by the Northrop Corp. despite soaring development costs and technical problems.

Cohen previously had worked as a consultant for Northrop, whose Ventura division office was searched by the FBI June 14 when the scandal broke open.

With regard to the court papers made public in Dallas, Saunders has operated a private consulting firm, Acquisition Control Ltd. of Alexandria, Va., since 1983. In late September, according to the affidavit justifying the search warrant, he called Joe Bradley, vice president for marketing for Varian's Continental division, and "told Bradley that he wanted to gear" a specific Navy program to Varian "but wasn't quite sure how to accomplish it."

Party boss asks for rehabilitation

MOSCOW (UPI) — Fired Moscow Party boss Boris Yeltsin asked for "political rehabilitation" today in a dramatic appearance at the 19th Party Conference.

Yeltsin, who had been dismissed in November after criticizing the slow pace of the perestroika reform program, took the rostrum on the fourth day of the conference shortly after a delegate denounced the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Yeltsin's request, reported by the official news agency Tass, also came a day after a dramatic move orchestrated by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev calling for the ouster of President Andrei Gromyko and three other aging Kremlin leaders.

Tass did not give Yeltsin's full address but the official news agency said Yeltsin "asked for political rehabilitation" and his remarks would be published.

Yeltsin is known as an outspoken supporter of Soviet leader er Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of perestroika, with perestroika supporters often carrying banners bearing his name.

He reportedly had told Gorbachev at an October plenum of the Communist Party that at its present pace "perestroika was not giving the people anything."

Earlier, Grigory Baklanov, editor of the literary journal Znamaya, praised Gorbachev's decision to withdraw the troops from Afghanistan this year, more than eight years after they entered to bolster a faltering pro-Soviet regime.

Restoring treasured antiques

Craft requires patience, precision and practice

Story and photo
By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Stable fingers, patience, precision and practice are the allies of those who weave their way and replace worn caning when restoring a treasured antique.

Valuable antiques, family heirlooms or chairs with great sentimental value are all that should be considered for this painful, time-consuming handwork, according to caner, Rob Anderson.

Anderson, 41, took up caning about seven years ago as a logical step in his furniture restoring projects. Today, at 70 cents a hole, or 50 cents per hole if he has been hired to relush a complete chair, he weaves back into service chairs, that without this restoration, would be useless.

The price of caning varies from region to region, with some restorers charging $2 per hole in the base of the piece, through which cane will be re-woven.

The high cost, which Anderson said doesn't really cover the artist's time invested in mundane work of revamping, is a major factor in determining if a piece is worth salvaging and restoring. Anderson said it would take him about three or four hours to restore a dining chair seat.

In mastering the craft, Anderson said, his method was one of trial and error and when he made serious errors he had to cut away his work and start again.

...Antiques

Some contemporary caned pieces are caned using a premade sheet and such seats are more easily replaced, by a different method, than are older pieces, which must be hand caned, he said. For an older piece to be adapted to sheet caning, which is less durable than hand caning, the wood base would have to be routed out where the holes once were. This could devalue the piece, Anderson said.

The art of caning has been traced to the Egyptians through archeological finds of baskets in tombs.

The first chair to be caned is believed to have been produced in England in the 17th Century. caning was popular in the Victorian Era.

Anderson said, so it is found in many prized chairs that need to be restored.

He canes in his leisure time, as he watches television. Otherwise, he said, he wouldn't have time to cane, which is a major part of some restorations.

Some who have a favored antique that they want to restore, learn caning specifically for that project. Anderson, who is self-taught, said he instructs others in the craft. However, he cautioned, caning isn't for everyone.

The weaving of the water-soaked cane, which has been shaved from bamboo stalks, into the intricate pattern, is painful, Anderson said it is a craft which should not be considered by those who suffer from arthritis or other ailments that limit flexibility of their fingers.

Cuts to the fingers are part of the game stretching and weaving the cane, which is imported and sold in "hanks." Hanks, Anderson said, contain enough cane to cover three or four chairs.

The cane comes in varied lengths and is soaked in water to increase flexibility before the short end of a piece is placed in a hole. The weave is worked away from the caner — back and forth and then side to side to side. Anderson uses golf tees to hold the cane in the holes of the chair, until the weaving is complete. As each strip of cane is worked into the design, it is tied off at the back of the holes. When the work is almost done the golf tees are removed and a binder worked through the holes at the edge of the chair base.

As Anderson worked on a wainut, child's rocking chair, which he had refinished, he said the chair back, with 75 holes would cost the owner $32, for the recaning. The seat would be an additional $34.

"You have to keep in mind the value of the chair when it is done," Anderson said. "If it needs recaning, consider the cost of that before paying a lot for the original piece. When his work is complete, he said the little rocker, which will be in perfect condition, will be valued at $175.

The life of a caned piece, Anderson said, depends on use, and abuse. Standing on a caned piece, will usually bring instant destruction of the weave. "It can't take that kind of pressure," he said.

Cane will dry out and become brittle. To help extend the life of cane, Anderson said, a piece should be oiled with mineral or tongue oil on the rough underside.

When admiring an old chair that needs to be recaned, Anderson said, take a second look and consider the toll restoration will take either on your wallet — or on your fingertips, if you should decide to do it yourself.

Hugh O'Brian: actor and humanitarian

By Vernon Scott

UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It takes more guts to sell capitalism to the Russians than to beat the bad guy to the draw in an Old West saloon, but that's exactly what the man best remembered as Wyatt Earp is doing.

Hugh O'Brian, who played the fabled lawman from 1955-61 on network television, is traveling to the Soviet Union to promote his youth program dedicated to fostering leadership among high school sophomores.

This is the 30th year of the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation, also known as HOBY. O'Brian got the idea after a visit to Africa in 1958 and meeting with the world-renowned humanitarian, Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

Schweitzer's beliefs in America as the nation most capable of producing leaders who could promote world peace and in teaching young people to think for themselves had a profound effect on O'Brian.

When O'Brian returned to Hollywood, he turned that inspiration into HOBY. In its 30-year existence, some 200,000 young people have gone through the HOBY program.

"I came to believe every man and woman, if given the opportunity and encouragement to recognize his or her potential, regardless of background, has the freedom to choose in our world," O'Brian said the other day.

"The important thing is to get to people when they are young enough to understand about choices, people who seek to achieve specific goals in their lives.

"There are 20,000 public and private high schools in this country and I am trying to get every one of them involved in our leadership development program. Our target is the motivated leader in the 10th grade in every high school class."

O'Brian said 11,000 high schools have participated in the 83 seminars conducted each year by HOBY.

"Every September the selection process gets under way to find a 10th grader — boy or girl — from each high school," O'Brian said. "We contact the principal at every school with a kit explaining the program to develop leadership seminars on America's incentive system.

"We remind them that the leaders of their community tomorrow are in their classrooms today. We exist to help motivate, train and reward those future leaders at no cost to the school or the students."

"Every sophomore in each school is eligible. But the principal and faculty pick the most qualified. The seminars take place in the spring, from March to mid-June.

"Scholastic grades have nothing to do with the sort of youngster we're looking for. We want leadership, people involved in extra-curricular activities."

A HOBY seminar brings together selected students and a group of community leaders in business, education and government.

In the panel discussions, adult participants speak and answer questions about a variety of topics: aerospace, economics, a free press in society, international trade, transportation, education, rural and urban problems and entrepreneurship.

Once a student has attended a HOBY seminar, O'Brian said the next step can be Community Leadership Work Shops, or CLEWS. These are for highly motivated students, who put on one-day seminars at their own high schools.

"The most motivated kids go on to our International Leadership Seminar coordinated by a major university every year," said O'Brian. "It's sort of the Superbowl of the program.

"In 1985 it was held in Los Angeles at the University of Southern California. In 1986 it was Purdue University in Indiana and last year it was held at the University of Denver.

"The international seminar is attended by a boy and girl from each state, and a boy and girl from 21 other countries. It is always an inspiring event," he said.

"Fifty percent of our kids change direction after attending the program, deciding to become lawyers, businessmen, educators, politicians and bankers. They ask tough questions and get direct answers from the community leaders."

A program of this size requires money, and fundraising has a big role at HOBY. The organization has a paid staff of 23 at its Westwood headquarters, but hundreds of men and women across the country also donate their time.

The foundation receives donations from major corporations, foundations, individuals, small businesses and service organizations. Hotels, restaurants and other service industries in the towns and cities where seminars take place contribute their services.

This year's International seminar was held at Washington University in St. Louis and more than 200 youngsters participated. The cost, about $250,000, was underwritten by HOBY and local businesses, individuals and service clubs.

"HOBY has grown and expanded every year, thanks to the private sector," O'Brian said. "We're even getting contributions from some of our alumni."

"I recently received a letter from a young man who had taken part in the program in 1972. He now owns a mortgage company in Dallas. He wanted to know how he could help the program and sent along a check for $10,000.

"In the future I hope the alumni will run and support the foundation. On the state seminar level we have the cost down to $150 per student.

"In recent years we've started a program for the participants to write me on their birthdays to let us know what they are doing and how their lives are progressing. A lot of them have complied, and there are a lot of success stories."

HOBY obviously occupies the bulk of O'Brian's time — he often puts in 12-hour work days — but his motivation and dedication are equally obvious.

"I believe in rewarding winners and youngsters with a potential to develop themselves in a way that will benefit their lives and the lives of other people," he said. "That's what Schweitzer was doing."

"We try to get the message across about what it takes to earn a buck and to let young people know the world doesn't owe them a living. We promote the democratic economic process."

O'Brian said the Soviet Union's new policy of "glasnost," or openness, has resulted in some growth of "entrepreneurship and private business. It looks very promising," which prompted his trip to encourage Soviet leaders to participate in his International Leadership Seminars.

"I want to generate interest in youth exchange programs and get the Russians involved in workshops," he said. "This trip is also to pave the way to bring an alumni group of 100 American kids to Moscow for a July 4, 1989, celebration.

"I look at it this way — if the leaders of tomorrow in all countries are doing business with each other it will help break down the barriers of international mistrust."

Mickey's new club

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — To celebrate Mickey Mouse's 60th birthday, The Disney Channel will present a new "Mickey Mouse Club" series to air on cable TV.

"The new Mickey Mouse Club will be as relevant and entertaining for the children of the 1990s as its predecessor was for the 1950s," said Disney spokesman Patrick Davidson.

Designed for Children 6 to 12, the series will originate from the Disney-MGM Studios at Florida's Walt Disney World and will broadcast daily beginning this fall. The cast will feature a group of kids who will sing, dance and act.

How many remember Farmer Ron?

Dear Dick: I have been trying to remember the name of a good movie I saw when I was very young. It was about a vegetable truck farmer and starred Ronald Reagan, George Tobias and, perhaps, Ann Sheridan. Why isn't it shown on TV, like so many other old movies? — R.A., Renton, Wash.

Dick Kleiner

Dear R.A.: I think you must be remembering "Juke Girl," a 1942 film about Florida fruit workers. The cast also included Gene Lockhart and Faye Emerson. It has been on TV, but, these days, not many of Ronald Reagan's old films are shown. Perhaps the stations feel it might be embarrassing to the chief.

Dear Dick: For years, I've told friends there was an instrumental record called "The Clouds" performed by The Spacemen around 1960 or 1962, and was Number 1. Nobody has ever heard of it. Tell 'em it was Number 1. Dick. — J.F.M., St. Marys, Ohio.

Dear J.F.M.: Wish I could.

but I can't. According to The Billboard's Book of Number One Hits, no record by The Spacemen was ever Number 1 on its national charts. And, also, from the same source, there was never a record called "The Clouds" that achieved that national ranking.

Dear Dick: I am completing a book called "What Happens To a Fallen Star," in which I document the lives and careers of twelve eminent performers who reached great heights in show business but who then disappeared. I hope to include a story about John Gary, very prominent in the '60s as a singer. But I cannot locate him. Do you have any information about his present whereabouts and career? — C.E.F., Houston.

Dear C.E.F.: Not much. Richard Lamparski, who does those "Whatever Became Of..." books tracked Gary down a few years ago. He had married a Dallas woman and was devoting himself to managing her real estate holdings. He did sing occasionally, too.

Dear Dick: I am a big fan of "High Mountain Rangers" and think Christian Conrad is great. Can you give me some information about him? — E.W., Copperas Cove, Texas.

Dear Dick: I watch "High Mountain Rangers" every week. I would like to know which of Robert Conrad's sons is Shane Conrad and which is Christian. Also, how old are they? — J.E., Jersey Shore, Pa.

Dear E.W. and J.E.: Christian plays Matt, the older son; he is 23. Shane plays Cody, the younger son; he is 16. They are two of Robert Conrad's eight children. Christian says he really wants to be a director and/or producer and acting is just for the experience.

Dear Dick: Would you please tell me if Mr. Ed., the talking horse, is still living? And who speaks for him? — M.C.K., Reading, Pa.

Dear Dick: On "Mr. Ed." how do they get the horse to move its mouth? How long did that show run? — H.L.B., Bamberg, S.C.

Dear M.C.K. and H.L.B.: Poor old Mr. Ed died in 1979, at the advanced age of 33. His words were supplied by an old Western actor named Allan "Rocky" Lane. The show was made from 1961 to 1965. As usual when animals are featured on a show, they just kept taking shots of him and when they get usable ones — such as him moving his mouth — they saved it and used it. They don't try to get animals to do something; they let the animal do what it wants, then fit that shot into the script somewhere.

Dear Dick: I saw a movie on TV, with John Wayne and Janet Leigh. She played a Russian pilot. It was called "Jet Pilot." Will it be shown again sometime? — L.M.P., Steubenville, Ohio.

Dear L.M.P.: That film had a curious history. Howard Hughes made it. The movie was finished in 1950, but it wasn't released until 1957. Chances are poor that it will be shown again, except on some very late show.

Dear Dick: I am eight years old. I was wondering if Julia Duffy on "Newhart" and Patrick Duffy on "Dallas" are related? — S.P., Amarillo, Texas.

Dear S.P.: I am 67 years old. No, they are not.

Dear Dick: Can you tell me if John Houseman, the actor who advertises for Smith Barney, has passed away or is he just retired? — Mrs. E.A., Houston.

Dear Mrs. E.A.: Neither. He is still acting, although he does take it a bit easier than he once did. Houseman was replaced on those Smith Barney commercials by Leo McKern because he wanted out.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS

A shocked Victor was not happy when Nikki told him that she's pregnant. A strong Nikki assured Victor that she's carrying his baby because she hasn't slept with anyone else since their marital breakup. Scott and Dr. Steele, who is Jessica's doctor, agreed to keep mum about the fact that Jessica has AIDS. Cricket and John stuck to Jessica's hospital bedside like glue, but all they know is that she has premenstrual Leanna (Kelly) revealed more information. Nikki gave her about Ashley and Victor's past romance. Leanna led to Jack that Nikki hasn't told her anything about any of the Abbott family members. Jill asked Marc to credit her for men's line. Nina asked Phillip for some money and demanded to be included in family activities. Donna contacted Cricket, who is worried that Jessica might die. Paul continued his investigative work to George Kankian.

Star Speak

Talking with Sandy Duncan

By Frank Banello

Sandy Duncan had some mighty uncomfortable shoes to fill last fall. She replaced "Valerie" star Valerie Harper, who had been ousted in a TV contract dispute.

Even though she wasn't reprising Harper's role (Duncan plays Sandy Hogan, Michael Hogan's sister), Duncan didn't want to be perceived as the heavy who robbed Harper of her show. She wasn't.

This season, NBC's "Valerie" (which has had two name changes, first to "Valerie's Family" and recently to "The Hogan Family") has risen in the ratings by an average of 20 points.

Duncan, 42, returned to the small screen after more than two decades of success in Broadway musicals ("Peter Pan," "My One and Only") — and a mixed record on TV. In 1971, Duncan made her sitcom debut in "Funny Face," but she soon developed a brain tumor that ended the successful series and ultimately blinded her in one eye. She returned the following season in "The Sandy Duncan Show," but poor ratings killed the show in four months.

Duncan has been married for the last 10 years to her third husband, Don Correira. They have two sons, Jeffrey, who's almost 6, and Mikey, 5.

Here the boomer-turned-sitcom-star talks about success with the Hogans, life at home with two little boys, and her plans for the post-Hogan future.

Q: What do you attribute "The Hogan Family"'s dramatic rise in the ratings to?

A: Not to myself. I made the decision when I first began working on the show that I wasn't going to take credit for its success or its failure. I know in this business that it never rests on any one person's shoulders. So much of it is out of your control. The show was sort of floundering anyway when I began, so I could have just been the final "blat."

Q: One of Valerie Harper's alleged gripes was that the child actors were stealing the show. You also mostly had the "b," or secondary, story line in each episode this year.

'I chopped and peeled a lot of vegetables (on TV) this year. But that will change.'

— Sandy Duncan

A: I had all the "b" stories for a while. They just sort of eased me in. I was in the background for a while. I chopped and peeled a lot of vegetables this year. But that will change next season.

Q: Why?

A: The network researches shows to death, and they've gotten a huge public response to my relationship with ("Hogan" actor) Jason Bateman. Valerie and he had a standard mother-son relationship. We're more like pals, which is unusual for television.

Q: Do you think the boys will mind sharing the "a" stories with you?

A: The show is headed toward a more ensemble approach, and everybody's happy and wants it to be that way. None of us is "piggy, piggy, piggy." I remember Jason got a script and said, "I've got the 'b' story this week. Isn't that terrific?" I said, "You lazy clod!"

Q: How else will "The Hogan Family" change next season?

A: Josh (Taylor, who plays Duncan's brother Michael on the show) is going to date and have relationships. He was frustrated by how small his role was last year. I intend to get into subjects heavier than which blonde Jason is going out with this week. And the two younger boys (Jeremy Licht and Danny Ponce) are going to expand their Felix-and-Oscar relationship, which is quite interesting.

Q: What have you been doing during hiatus and the writers' strike?

A: I just shot three videos for toddlers that encourage them to use their imaginations and not just sit in front of the TV. I know that sounds a bit strange, using a video to tell them not to watch TV. Other than that, I'm just sitting home, playing mom. I'm really a lazy person.

Q: What are some of the differences between doing a weekly TV series and a nightly Broadway musical?

A: Broadway is a different energy, real high energy. Talk about a runner's high! The body produces some chemicals when you're on the stage that makes you feel high.

...Soaps

Eden, who is in Paris to have an operation that could enable her to have children, was disappointed when her surgery was postponed. Jeffrey was released when Kelly came out of her coma. Gina blackmailed Pamela for big bucks after realizing that Pamela was the one who poisoned Kelly. Heather and Neal made love. Pamela framed T.J., who insisted that he didn't poison Kelly. Keith, who had charged Jeffrey with Kelly's poisoning, released him and then arrested T.J. Phillip pressured Ming Li to carry out his plan, ago and Cain. Cain was stunned when Ming Li came on to him sexually. Cain asked Andrea to marry him. Father Michael had more flashbacks about a person who fired a gun. Cruz suspects that Pamela is behind Kelly's poisoning.
