The fire at Invisible Software, 1085 County Road 427, was reported shortly after 6:30 p.m., said city Fire Marshall Laurie Whitlock. Whitlock said the fire apparently began in an office near the rear of the offices where a half-dozen computers and other office equipment was located. Tuesday, Seminole County commissioners will take up the fatest Natural Lands Program purchase proposal for a portion of the 1,800-acrepreserve south of Lake Mary extending from the edge of County Road 427 to Lake Jesup. Begunin 1927 with the donation of the land for Big Tree Park, the area was once one of the top state preservation priorities but has become largely a county acquisition project.

Under the proposal, 39.1 acres now owned by APAC-Florida Inc., an Ashland Oil company, will be bought for $304,500. The price is about $7,800 per acre. APAC-Florida will also donate 14 acres along the northern edge of the property. but 11 acres of the donated land is in ownership litigation. The county could lose 11 of the 14 acres of donated property.

If commissioners approve the deal, closing is set for Nov. 30 at the latest.

More than 200 acres of Spring Hammock has been purchased under the voter-approved Natural Lands Program. The Natural Lands Advisory Committee ranked Spring Hammock as the topacquisition priority in the county.

The 53-acre APAC-Florida property is one of the largest remaining parcels in Springs Hainmock remaining for acquisition.

Schools join U.S. in observance of Red Ribbon Week

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Students in Seminole County learn about the dangers of drugs as a part of their. everyday education, but those lessons will be brought to the forefront this week as the district joins students and businesses around the country in celebrating Red Ribbon Week.

The week focuses extra attention on not only staying drug free but also on finding alternatives. to the activities that lead to drug use.

Students take part in poster contests, essay contests and other competitions that put an added emphasis on being drug free and proud.

"The schools are putting a united emphasis on being drug free," said Mary Balk, chairman of the Red Ribbon Week festivities in the Seminole

Red Ribbon Week was started several years ago in memory of Enrique Camarena, a Drug Enforcement Agency agent who was tortured and murdered by drug smugglers in 1985.

Last year, more than 75 million students and business people wore red ribbons in his honor and to remind others to avoid drugs. Balk said that all the schools in Seminole County are participating in this year's event.

We have 100 percent participation this year."

She said that the goal of Red Ribbon Week is to involve as many people as possible in the events and activities of the week, especially in the wearing of red ribbons and the education about drug abuse and the dangers of drugs.

Gibbons hears NAFTA opposition

TAMPA - The only Florida congressman who's come out in favor of the North American Free Trade Agreement ran into some opposition at a weekend rally in Tampa.

"It's not the first time," U.S. Rep. Sam Gibbons said. "I knew it would not be a particularly warm and friendly audience." The gathering Saturday was sponsored by the Hillsborough County chapter of United We Stand America Inc., an organization created by Ross Perot. It opposes the treaty.

"I wouldn't do anything to hurt America." Gibbons told the group.

"You bum. Why don't you retire," shouted one man in the crowd of about 75.

At some points, when the yelling seemed to get out of hand. Gibbons refused to continue until the group quieted down.

The Tampa Democrat said he would continue to support the treaty, which he said would remove Mexican tariffs and discourage movement of American jobs to Mexico.

"My Job is to protect America, to build America," said Gibbons, a 30-year House veteran and chairman of the House subcommittee handling most trade issues.

Farmers fear they will be the big losers because Mexican farmers pay lower wages and can produce cheaper citrus sfuit and vegetables, said Ellen Wine of South Bay Growers in Palm Beach County.

Burke, husband robbed at gunpoint

MIAMI - State Rep. Beryl Burke and her husband. Metro-Dade County commissioner Jim Burke, were robbed at gunpoint just hours after the commissioner attended a crime prevention meeting.

The couple was checking on Mrs. Burke's mother's home in northwest Dade County late Saturday when an armed man approached them in the driveway, Mrs. Burke said Sunday.

"He made a sharp turn with his body and pulled out his gun and said 'Get on the ground. Get on the ground nowl'," the Miami Democrat said.

"It's a very, very frightening experience because you're helpless. There's absolutely nothing you can do except obey."

Mrs. Burke saw the gun and immediately dropped, but her husband did not see the man pull the weapon, she said. The robber forced Burke to the ground as he held a gun over his head and took his wallet and car keys.

The man then stole Mrs. Burke's purse and sped off in the commissioner's county-issued car.

No arrests had been made, police said Sunday.

The car contained ceilular phones, beepers, office and car keys, checkbooks and two briefcases with important county papers, Mrs. Burke said. About $500 also was stolen.

TAMPA - Thousands of elderly Fiori-dians could get their nursing home costs paid under a federal law that may increase the state's Medicaid costs by up to $35 million a year.

A "Medicald gap" that denies them nursing home care would be closed under the law that took effect this month.

"For those of us who deal with elderly legal issues, this has always been the greatest nemesis, the most inhumane, the worst thing we've had to deal with." Ira Wiesner of Sarasota, chairman of the Florida Bar's elder law section, told The Tampa Tribune for a story Sunday.

The Medicaid gap is created by an income limit that makes people ineligible for nursing home subsidies if their incomes are over $1,302 a month.

That is far less than a nursing home costs. The statewide average is about $2,500 u

State officials estimate that up to 11,000 people in Florida need nursing home care but can't get it because of the Medicaid gap. Many live with elderly spouses, themselves in precarious health, who struggle to care

Her income from Social Security and a pension is $1,308 per month — $6 a month too much to qualify for Medicaid. Under Florida law, refusing to accept any income she's entitled to would make her incligible.

The nursing home, owned by an out-ofstate corporation, is on the verge of evicting the woman because $1,308 a month is all she can pay, Robinson said. "She told me recently that she prays every night that she won't wake up the next morning. And every morning, she prays she will be able to live just one day with dignity," Robinson said.

The new law would let such people put all or part of their income in a trust fund, and they would be eligible for Medicald nursing

Way Back When

Sanford ploneer native Mrs. Olga Hunter celebrated her 95th birthday Oct. 5 during an alternoon reception at her home on Narcissus Avenue. She was one of four daughters and eight children of Leonard and Emma Vihlen who, were among the Swedes brought to the "New Upsals" area in 1871 by General Henry 8. Sanford. Leonard was a botanist and became highly skilled in General Sanford's development of various varieties of citrus * especially the Valencia orange. Here is a rare photo of the Vihlen family. He died just several months ago. The Herald had reported that Olga was born in Miami in 1893, the year her family moved from Sanford to Miami where Olga's father became botanist and chief gardener for railroad magnate Henry Flagler's Royal Palm Hotel. However, Olga's father went to Mlami while Emma remained in Sanford since she was expecting. After Oige was born in Sanford the entire family then went to Miami. Since the climate didn't agree with Olga's parents the entire family returned to Sanford.

FBI slaying

New book breaks agent's silence on slaying

By ALLEN Q. BREED Associated Press Writer

PIKEVILLE - By spring 1990. FBI Agent Mark Putnam finally had it all - a beautiful wife, two children and a plum assignment

But something terrible from his past made him give that all up. He had slept with an informant back in the eastern Kentucky hills, possibly impregnated her, then killed her.

Officials had found no body after a year's investigation. Putnam's lawyer told him there was no way he could even be indicted, and his wife, Kathy. was ready to forgive him and move on with their lives.

But Putnam was having nightmares. He had been plagued by diarrhea for months. There was blood in his urine, and he had scratched his chest until it was raw.

Putnam needed to confess out of his sense of honor, guilt and responsibility to Susan Daniels Smith, the woman he had killed.

"I gave myself up when anyone else might say I really didn't have to," said Putnam, who is believed to be the first FBI agent even charged with a homicide. What was gained from that? Well, Susan's parents know where their daughter is, which they didn't know for a year. And Susan's children know."

Those words were taken from the new book, "Above Suspi-cion." They mark the first time Putnam has publicly broken his silence since dictating his nine-page confession in June 1990 to the 27-year-old Freeburn woman's death.

The hardcover book was scheduled to hit the shelves today in Smith's native Pike County. The Associated Press obtained an advance copy from the publisher, Simon & Shuster.

In it, Putnam debunks theories and rumors that Smith was killed to cover up some dread FBI secret. The 34-year-old Coventry. Conn., native also attempts to shatter speculation by Smith's survivors that he was forced to take the fall in some alleged conspiracy to cover up FBI abuses.

"I broke my standards," Putnam told author Joe Sharkey from his quarters at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester. Minn., where he is serving a 16-year sentence for first-degree manslaughter. "That was the compelling reason that I had to do what I did in confessing....

"I know I could be on the beach right now with my family in Florida. I lost all of that. I lost my children's childhood, and they lost their father. But I also know that now I can sleep at night: I can look at myself in the mirror. I couldn't do that for a whole year."

Putnam, who was an agent in the FBI's Pikeville office for about two years, confessed to strangling Smith in a fit of rage during an automobile ride June 8, 1989. He said he lost control when she threatened to expose him to his wife and superiors.

Putnam pointed officials to the body in exchange for being allowed to plead guilty to firstdegree manslaughter.

The 284-page book offers little in the way of revelations about the case. In fact, it backs up Putnam's account of the slaying, and vindicates state and federal officials' handling of the case.

What it does offer are the first details about what supposedly transpired during that last car ride, including Smith's alleged last words.

Putnam said he avoided Smith for several days but was finally forced to take her for a ride to discuss the situation where others could not hear. He said Smith became increasingly hostile as they drove.

"I'm going right down to your FBI 'Miami Vice' office and tell your new friends there how you solved your cases bying an informant and leaving her pregnant and barefoot to look after herself in Kentucky," he recalled her saying. "I own you, Putnam! I own you and your precious

Making the best better

An article appeared on the Business page of Sunday's Sanford Herald regarding the anniversary of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce. The organization was formed in October of 1920.

In supplying information pertaining to the creation of the group, Chamber Manager Dave Farr also had copies of what was then the Sanford Daily Herald from 1920, explaining the first goals of the chamber. The leading project was, "to improve the lakefront."

With the present activities of the Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee underway. It would appear as though this is a goal which has not been attained in the past 73 years.

On the contrary, the chamber did reach the goal. In 1920, the waterfront along Lake Monroe was a beach-type slanted area. Because of the chamber's work and through cooperation from the city, the lakefront was developed with a lengthy seawall, and a peninsula jutting out from the northern end of Park Avenue. The area contained boat docks as well as a band shell.

In the late 1950s and early 60s, another cry went out to remodel the lakefront.

The response was the demolition of the band shell, but the filling of land to the east, which resulted in the creation of the Monroe Harbour Marina on which the Holiday Inn and several other facilities are located. The Marina also has an abundance of docking

Now, Sanford is again hearing the call to develop the lakefront. This time however, the proposed development is for the land area rather than the actual shoreline.

The Strong Committee has been meeting regularly, discussing what direction should be recommended for its development. The key word is "recommended." Whatever is planned will have to be a city and/or county project, although no doubt, outside assistance and possibly financing will be necessary.

Some would say nothing is ever, accomplished because goals pertaining to improvements along the waterfront are always with us. It is good to seek continuing progress, no matter what has been accomplished in the past.

For the Waterfront Master Plan Steering

Committee, we suggest they adopt the motio of the 4H club, and continue to "Make the

On gun control

Criminals and juveniles do not buy cars from a licensed dealer. All the "Get Angry" gun-control laws on the books and currently before Congress today will not change this simple fact.

Responsible, law-abiding gun enthusiasts do not like but can endure waiting periods prior to purchase of a firearm. Legislation to keep guns out of the hands of juveniles (called "infants" under business law) will bother no law-abiding citizen. Current headlines would like for you to disbelieve that most gun owners keep their guns out of the hands of small children, but it is true.

In my opinion. Ellen Goodman recently presented an excellent editorial for those inclined to be of liberal persuasion. Objective reporting it was not. What bothers me is that her anger was directed at millions of law-abiding gun owners rather than the criminal, demented or stupid few who make the pages of newspapers with their

Race game heats up in election year

At a recent fund-raiser for New York City's mayor, David Dinkins, who is in a down-to-thewire race for re-election, Bill Clinton offered to analyse the mayor's basic problem. Democrats outnumber Republicans 5-to-1 in the city, so race must be the defining factor, said the president.

"Too many of us." Clinton said, "are still too unwilling to vote for people who are different than we are." The president added that "this is not as simple as overt racism ... it's this deep-scated reluctance we have, against all our better judgment, to reach out across those lines."

There are indeed some New Yorkers who did not vote for Dinkins the first time, nor will they again, because he is black. One popular radio talk-show host refers to him as "the men's room attendant." to the plaudits of a good many of his

But the president, eager to keep a Democratic mayor in New York, greatly oversimplified the politics of the campaign - and thereby the politics of race. Many nonblacks who voted for Dinkins four years ago may, with reluctance, choose Rudolph Giuliani this time, voting for him on the Liberal rather than Republican line.

Those whites who after previously supporting him are not acting out of racism, 'deep-scated" or otherwise. The basic criticism of Dinkins is that he is chronically incompetent, and too often lacks the courage to deal immediately and directly with deep rifts in New passionate than when he used to stiff-arm due has been selective in his concern with civil rights.

There is also a strong sense that Dinkins is elsewhere when the key decisions are made, and even farther off when they are being implemented. In New York magazine, political writer Eric Pooley quotes a former aide to the mayor who was present at a meeting where Dinkins had clearly not been briefed on a variety of substantive questions because those in the administration actually dealing with solutions "have disregard for his ability to make decisions."

As for discriminatory stereotyping on the part of the Dinkins team, I heard from Jim Zogby of the Arab-American Institute during Dinkins' first campaign for mayor that no Arab-Americans were being allowed to help in any way for fear of alienating Jewish voters. Bill Lynch, the mayor's political strategist, then as now, stoutly denied that anything of the sort was going on. I then called Percy Sutton, himself a former candidate for mayor and a longtime Dinkins supporter. Sutton, who is black, told me that Arab-Americans were indeed being shut out, and he was dismayed.

Give people what they want

The information Age, some people call it, a glowing, electronically interconnected world in which we will be wired for sound, pictures, reception and transmission. Others see it as the "Big Swamp," a world in which bad taste and the lowest common denominator will be rulers over all. It could be both, neither or something quite different. The outcome, simply because there is going to be so much choice, will be determined by the consumer.

The financial stakes are very high. That is what the pending coupling of Paramount to one of its free-spending suitors is all about. That is what Rupert Murdoch and Time Warner and Sony are all about. New technologies have produced gigantic, earth-girdling enterprises whose multibillion-dollar scope and multimillion-person audiences dwarf the previous empires of the Hearsts, Pulitzers, Gannetts and Knight-Ridders.

Much of the discussion of the new information age's potential has been dominated by contemplation of its giantism. Too little has centered on the question of what these vast conglomerates will actually deliver. One explanation for the relative silence is the depressing behavior of those who already set the mass media agenda. If the past were truly prologue, we could expect 500 channels of talking-head gong shows, "I Love Lucy" reruns and a news product indistinguishable from cop shows and sit-coms.

Dan Rather, the CBS anchor, made a strong case for pessimism in a recent speech to the Radio and Television News Directors Association in Miami. As he said:

"It's the ratings, stupid, don't you know? They've got us putting more fuzz and wuzz on the air, cop-shop stuff, so as to compete not with other news programs but with entertainment programs (including those posing as news programs) for dead bodies, mayhem and lurid tales."

His case is not hard to make. Take a look at local television news. Count the number of blood and gore stories. Note the array of tabloid-style offerings, some locally produced, others syndicated, all aimed well below the belt. Count the minutes devoted to chitchat and happy talk rather than the news. For that matter, observe the "dumbing down" of newspapers as well, with bigger graphics. more color, shorter stories and an aversion to the news industry says. Listen to that refrain, and you begin to understand the power of those modern witch doctors, the market researchers. "We pay them to fool us." Rather said. Their advice is invariably a variant of the old saw that you can never lose money by underestimating the public. They corrupt our note by adulterating our diets.

We are giving the people "what they want."

But that isn't the whole story. There are countervalling trends and examples whose existence in the here and now offers hope for the future PBS' "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour" provides depth. decency, and balanced inquiry. Ted Koppel's "Nightline" on ABC proves there is an audience for an intelligent, probing look at current events night after night. The triumphant maturity of CNN and its round-the-clock focus on the news has convinced virtually everyone that millions of people have an insatiable appetite for unadorned facts and pictures about the world around us. For that matter, the evening news shows are head-andshoulders better than they were in the so-called golden age of television.

That is why all those new channels are potentially so beneficial, despite the incontrovertible fact that the lords of the new "Information Age" universe simply because there is going to be so much choice, will be determined by the consumer.

The outcome,

don't give a fig for the public interest or the needs of a democratic society. There will be no way to attract a mass audience to each one. Instead, "narrowcasting" will be the dominant marketing tool, the matching of specific special interest audiences to narrowly tailored offer-

That already means home shopping channels as well as movie channels. But it will also mean news and information channels aimed for serious viewers as well as slash and trash channels for those more inclined to a tabloid view of life, documentary channels as well as endiess channels of "bubble gum for the

To put it another way, competition could and should work just the way it is supposed to work. With only three networks, everyone essentially went after the same mass audience. With scores of "networks," the programmers will be seeking many audiences simultaneously. The owners of the vast media conglomerates are deeply cynical about their viewers, but because their ideology and personal tastes take a back seat to the bottom line, they will offer anything for which there is a market.

Of course, converting an optimistic forecast into reality depends on the people. If it turns out that 90 percent of us want pablum. pablum is what we will get. The result will look more like Brave New World than Utopia.

Arafat needs results, fast

WASHINGTON - Two months removed from the historic peace accords between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel. PLO Chairman Yasir Arafat is in danger of becoming another Mikhail Gorbachev: outliving his usefulness as his dreams become

The grass is growing under the feet of this former guerrilla. Whether out of ego, a need for excessive control, or some other error.

Arafat has failed to come up with the financial, business and political resources to get things moving in Gaza and Jericho.

Others are beginning to take up the slack. Israeli businessmen, Palestinian entrepreneurs and wher internationa investors are rushing in to build where the United States and Yasir Arafat have feared to tread.

For Arafat, it's imperative that the recent peace accord be followed by tangible bricks-and-mortar results -- roads.

sewer construction and the like. Despite offers in the billions from the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, and others, Arafat lacks the financial infrastructure to put the money to work.

For outside money to be truly effective. Arafat must create a financial entity, tolerable to international bankers, to accept and distribute the promised funds. If he does, Gaza and Jericho will have access to more funds than any developing nation except Knowledgeable sources here and in the PLO suggest Arafat's hesitation stems from his reluctance to loosen the autocratic hold he's long had on PLO purse strings. He is also befuddled by the forces of capitalism the accord has unleashed - and is unable to capitalize on it.

Banking services in the occupied territories are severely limited. Prior to the 1967 war. banking activity was conducted through 26 branches of eight Arab banks. Under the occupation, Israel eliminated these banks while allowing some Israeli banks access to the territories. Since 1981, a few Palestinian-controlled banks have been allowed to operate, subject to a variety of restrictions and regulations imposed by the military

This is one case where simply throwing money at the problem won't work. "To a significant degree," writes a top U.S. Intelligence analyst in an internal Defense Department report, "Many of the Palestinians' banking needs are met by Palestinian money-changers, who continue to serve such vital functions as currency exchange, money transfers into and out of the country, and cashing bank drafts drawn from banks in Jordan and elsewhere.

"But the inadequate and patchwork variety of banking services continues to fall short of Palestinian needs, and will in no way adequately support the financial demands of progressive development in a newly autonomous Palestinian region.'

The report concludes: "A nation-state with funds but without essential financial institutions, networks and regulatory mechanisms is like a person with food but no digestive system." In short, the new Palestinian entity simply cannot handle the amount of money the United States and others are prepared to

With or without Arafat, the Palestinians have an uncommon talent for nationbuilding. Palestinians have proven to be some of the most adept civil servants in places like Lebanon and Saudi Arabia. In Jordan, where more than half the population is Palestinian, they comprise a hefty majority of the government's administrators.

The grass is lowing nuder the feet of this former guerrilla.

Girl Scouts break with tradition

Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS - Girl Scout leaders have broadened the group's pledge to try to appeal to a wider range of girls, allowing them to promise to serve the spiritual leader of their choice or none at all.

But some people outside the organization aren't cheering the decision to tinker with the Iraditional pledge.

"This is one more organization that has become morally relativistic and that's deeply dis-appointing." Tom Minnery, a spokesman for Focus on the Family, said Sunday. Focus is an evangelical Christian organization based in Colorado Springs,

Girl Scout leaders said the change acknowledges growing religious and ethnic diversity among the group's 2.6 million

Regions with large Asian and American Indian populations have had trouble recruiting girls whose religious tradition doesn't include a Judeo-Christian concept of God, said Ellen Christie Ach, a spokeswoman for Girl Scouts of the USA.

Delegates to the Girl Scouts national convention voted 1,560 to 375 Saturday to keep the official working of the Oirl Scout promise intact, but allow individual girls to substitute for God another word or words they deem more appropriate, such as takes effect immediately.

"I believe that Girl Scouts are an inclusive organization, and the idea is that we are across all lines, not just focusing on one group or religion or race," 18-year-old Angle Greiling, a delegate from Roseville, Minn., said last week.

But Dean Gupta, a Hindu board member of Geeta Ashram Church in Brooklyn Park. Minn., said the word "God" is not exclusively Christian.

"Saying the word 'God' I think creates some kind of un-iformity." Gupta said. "Lately. with crime and other things ... the word 'God' might be a little bit of a calming influence."

The official wording reads:

God and my country, to help people at all times, and to live by the Girl Scout Law."

The Oirl Scouts, modeled on the British Girl Guides, was founded in 1912. The preamble to the group's constitution lays out a spiritual motivating force. but has never defined that force as Judeo-Christian.

Like the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts of America have always pledged service or duty to God.

Boy Scouts will continue to say the word 'God," spokesman Richard Walker said. But "we understand that that may mean something different for you than it does for another scout. The deity is between the scouts and their parents.'

Death in Kevorkian' presence ruled homicide

By Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. - The medical examiner ruled that the death of a woman in the presence of Dr. Jack Kevorkian was a homicide, not a suicide.

"The moment there is someone else's involvement in death it becomes a homicide," Dr. Ljubisa Dragovic, Oakland County medical examiner, said Sunday. "Assisted suicide is a misnomer. It does not reflect the actual happening."

An autopsy showed Merian Frederick died of carbon monoxide poisoning. Dragovic said. The 72-year-old victim of Lou Gehrig's disease was the 19th person to die in Kevorkian's presence since 1990. She died in Kevorkian's apartment in Royal Dragovic has ruled all 11 suicides attended by Kevorkian in Oakland County, northwest of Detroit, as homicides. In three cases, murder charges were brought but later dismissed when judges ruled that there was no law at that time against assisted suicide.

Michael Alan Schwartz, one of Kevorkian's attorneys, said Dragovic's finding means Kevorkian could not be charged under the new assisted suicide law, because it requires that the death be ruled a suicide.

"And if the finding of homicide leads to a charge of murder, that if necessary.

Do you favor or oppose the police department in the charter amendment? Why?

That was brought up as a smoke screen, in my opinion, as an easy coattail campaign issue. Nobody after last year's election would want to get rid of it (the police department.) However, we have to understand too, from the president on down, if the president screws up, and need to be replaced, it only takes a majority vote of Congress to do it. If it look a unanimous voic, you'd have no voice because somebody's always got to be in the back pocket. So it's just as dangerous as it is good. I don't support the amendment. I do support the police department.

Would you vote to retain or dismiss the city administrator? Why?

I would have to see. He's done some good things and some not so good things, such as the county's ditch (located in the subdivision where Sargent lives. Flooding there, and not being able to get help, from city,

I have limited knowledge of the problem at this point. We're going to have to talk to Alta-monte (Springs) because right now I don't see how we can do anything else. We have to work it out with somebody because we don't have the money to spend on something that costly at this point. Those things again, have

I think we have to keep the city services at an acceptable level while we begin putting aside an adequate reserve (fund). We need to try and attact clean businesses to the city. In order to attact new businesses, we need to review the city's requirements for businesses. We need to make the city attractive to businesses. Boy survives seven-story plunge

NEW YORK - A 5-year-old boy whose mother said he "thought he could fly" plunged seven stories out his bedroom window onto a concrete courtyard without breaking a bone.

Paul Rosen was in critical condition because of the nature of the accident on Sunday, said New York Hospital spokeswoman Carolyn Migliore. But he had no broken bones, no external injuries and was conscious. He was being evaluated for internal

"Paul is a strong, brave child who thought he could fly," said the boy's mother. Christine Rosen. "It's amazing to us that he survived this.

The New York Post cited an unnamed hospital source as saying Paul was pretending to be Superman when he jumped out his window. He was wearing boots and a jacket on over his

Mrs. Rosen said her husband, Arthur, heard a moan and went to the child's room to investigate. She said he noticed the open window, looked down seven floors and saw Paul trying to

"We don't know exactly what happened," Mrs. Rosen said. The building's doorman, Jose Rodriguez, said the boy was crying after the fall. "I thought he wasn't gonna make it 'cause it's concrete," he said.

There were no guards on the windows of the Rosens' Manhattan apartment, said Sgt. Nick Vreeland, a police spokesman. City law requires window guards in apartments where children under 10 live.

Northwest, American cut holiday fares

MINNEAPOLIS - Northwest Airlines has cut its holiday fares up to 40 percent on domestic flights and rival American Airlines has vowed to match the offer on competing routes.

Northwest Airlines promised passengers flying round-trip between Boston and Chicago $238 tickets if purchased by Friday, a 31 percent cut. One of the larger discounts announced Saturday, 39 percent, is on $218 tickets for round-trip flights between Los Angeles and Scattle.

The non-refundable tickets must be bought at least 14 days in advance. Travel must take place by January 15 but tickets must be purchased by Friday.

American said Sunday it will match Northwest's holiday fare reduction in routes where the two carriers compete. American tickets must be purchased by Friday for travel between Nov. 7 and Jan. 15, with a Saturday night stay over, said spokeswoman Karen Cook.

Separately, Ms. Cook said American matched an increase on selected fares by United Airlines. Northwest did not match the increase, but most other major airlines did.

American's increase on domestic llights amounts to about $20 on a round-trip fare of more than 1,000 miles.

Administration urges passage of crime bill

By JIM ABRAMS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The administration stepped up its campaign for passage of a crime bill, and a key Senate Democrat said he would support stricter mandatory sentencing if Republicans agree to more gun controls.

"Its so important for us get this crime bill passed so that we can get people to the streets in a fashion that can truly help local law enforcement throughout America." Attorney General Janet Reno said Sunday.

Reno promoted the crime bill, aimed at putting 50,000 more police officers on the street and other steps, when asked on CBS' "Face the Nation" about the advisability of using the National Guard to combat violence in Washing-

Reno said federal officials were reviewing Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly's request Friday that President Clinton allow Guard members to augment police in the city, but she stressed the greater importance of building good police-community

"If the National Guard can perform a support facility or a backup facility that does not involve law enforcement, that might be an issue that should be addressed as well," she said.

Vice President Al Gore, speaking on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," also said violence in the capital "shows why President Clinton's crime bill needs to be passed this year by the Congress'

Congress will soon take up legislation providing $5.9 billion over five years to fight crime by hiring more police, expanding application of the federal death penalty, restricting death-row inmates' rights to federal appeals and establishing alternative punishments such as boot camps for young, nonviolent offenders.

Congress will separately consider the so-called Brady bill, named for former White House press secretary James Brady, who was shot in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan. The bill requires a five-day waiting period for handgun

The crime package died last year after Senate Republicans, including Phil Gramm of Texas, threatened a filibuster.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, told Gramm, a fellow guest on CBS: "I'll support everything you just said (in favor of tougher laws against illegal use of firearms) if you'll support the Brady bill where one in six of those people who commit murders walked into a store, purchased a handgun and killed someone with it.

Gang members seek unity, but activists miss chance to meet

By SONYA ROSS Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO - Gang members ended their fourth truce summit with a push for unity with the civil rights movement, as some national activists who rushed to support gang peace missed a chance to patch up their own differences. Members of gangs from 28 cities, including some longstanding rivals, gathered in Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan's Mosque Maryam after making a pledge to civil rights leader Jesse Jackson to abandon violence.

NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Chavis and Farrakhan followed through Sunday with a private meeting to reinforce their September pledge to bury their September pledge.

Jackson addressed summit participants Sunday morning and immediately left to campaign for New York Mayor David Dinkins' re-election.

'We're in a critical election cycle right now," Jackson said. He said he came to Chicago on Sunday because the peace effort fits into his own initiative aimed at stopping kids from assaulting each other in schools.

About 2,500 people heard Chavis speak as part of what the Muslim minister billed as "the scaling of a pledge of unity" made Sept. 16 in Washington.

'Our unity is not a sham. It's real," Farrakhan said. "But there are certain people God does not want at the table. If God does not want you there. I do not want you there. These young brothers do not want to be played with."

He told the Rev. Willie Barrow, though they had joined in the was representing Jackson at the mosque, to tell Jackson "that we love him and want to be in unity with him." Operation PUSH is a civil rights organization set up by Jackson two decades ago.

In his speech, Jackson acknowledged the peace effort as "the new frontier of the civil rights struggle."

"No one is losing their organizational identity," he said. "We're just coming together for one purpose."

Jackson urged the gang members to come forward and pledge to halt the violence immediately. About 100 of them did make the pledge.

This prompted Akmed Aktub. a member of the Crips of Los Angeles, to praise Jackson and admonish the gangsters, "This brother is here for me an all of you. When you go out there and kill another brother, you disrespect the (civil rights) movement, and what kind of brother

Church league heads into second half

By DEAN SMITH Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD - The 10 teams in the Sanford Church Softball League took a mid-season break from its fall schedule this past weekend to get some rest and relaxation for the last five weeks of the season.

Sanford All Souls Catholic Church in the Fun Division and Sanford First United Methodist Church in the Fellowship Division are both undefeated and have comfortable leads in their respective divisions, but with half a season remaining, anything is still possible.

All Souls (5-0) has only been pressured in one game, but the Lake Mary Nativity Catholie Church-Disciples (3-2) have been improving weekly and fell to All Souls by just one run, 11-10, in their last encounter.

The other two teams in the Fun Division, Sanford Christian Church Team No. 2 (0-4) and Antioch Missionary Baptist Church from Oviedo (1-3), have also been playing better of late and may be ready to put pressure on the two top teams.

First United Method(st (5-0) got some help from its nearest competitors last weekend as second-place Lake Mary Nativity Catholic Church-Crusaders (3-2) lost to third place Deltona Trinity Assembly Church of God-Majesty (also 3-2), but Majesty also lost, with Sanford First Nazarene Church pulling off the upset.

While First Methodist may be holding a good lead, it has hardly been easy as they have had to come from behind to win two games and had to snuff out a seventh-inning rally in another to remain undefeated.

First Nazarene and Sanford Central Baptist Church are now fled for fourth place with 2.3 records, while Sanford Christian Church Team No. 1 is still looking for Its first victory of the season.

Next weeks schedule at Chase Park has the Crusaders playing First Nazarene at 8:30 a.m.; the Disciples taking on Sanford Christian No. 2 at 9:30 a.m.: First United Methodist welcoming Sanford Christian No. 1 at 10:30 a.m.; Antioch challenging All Souls at 11:30 a.m.; and Central Baptist battling Majesty at 12:30 p.m.

Seminoles' win streak ends at six

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO - After reaching sty matches, the win streak of the Seminole High School girls volleyball team came to an end Saturday in the Bishop Moore Invitational

Seminole extended as win streak with a 15-2, 12-15, 15-8 win over Lake Brantley and a 15-11, 15-8 decision over Apopka. The Tribe then lost to eventual tournament champion Bishop Moore (15-7, 15-12) and Cypress Creek (15-5. $15 \cdot 10$).

The streak-ending loss to Bishop Moore didn't bother Seminole coach Beth Corso the loss to Cypress Creek did.

"We played well against Bishop Moore," said Corso, whose team was 6-2 on the week. "We did not play well against Cypress Creek. We. did that to ourselves.

"We had to beat Cypress Creek to et out of our pool, but we had a hard time handling the pressure. It was the mental mistakes that hurt us, histead of just going out there and playing like we had been all day, we went out there and just lost

While the Tribe didn't make it to the tournament playoffs, they were represented on the All-Tournament team by co-captain Yuleyma Otero. who played a near-perfect tournament.

At the service line. Otero was 25-for 25 with an acc. She also contributed 23 digs on defense and collected 32 assists to lead the offense. Over the Saturday's four matches, she was 116-for-120 setting the ball. Otero also registered eight kills.

Aubrey Nelson led the Tribe attack with 21 kills and 23 other good spikes. She also served 10 aces and had 19 other good serves. Defensively, Nelson collected eightdigs and one block.

Tanya Schlegel added 10 kills, 20 other good spikes, and three aces. Catherine Foye contributed nine kills, 21 good spikes, and 10%

Think before throwing your athletic career away

This is a pop quiz for those high school athletes in the audience. The adults can play along, if they like. Don't sweat it, it's just one simple

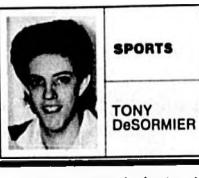

Which is more stupid? A. After seeing the first release of the movie "The Program," you decide to imitate one of the (recently edited) scenes in the film by lying in the middle of the street while traffic passes by to prove how tough you

B. Cut class and go riding around with a buddy and four girls. To compound the thrill of the experience, your buddy is drinking alcohol while driving. He also has a .22 callbre gun and two bags of marijuana in the glove box. You and your buddy are both 18 years old; the girls are between 14 and 16.

C. You leave campus during the school day with a friend, then return to campus in possession of two bags of marijuana. Your friend is carrying 17 bags of marijuana. You're 15 years old. Your friend is

The only correct answer is you've got to be three kinds of stupid to do any of the three.

This isn't meant to be funny. If anything, it's extraordinarily tragic. especially when you realize the incidents happened just last week.

I hope you heard about option "A" last week; It was all over the news, in print, on television, and on It seems that some teenagers.

several of them athletes, attempted to recreate the scene in question (which the distributors have since removed from the movie). One was struck by a car and died. Others were seriously injured.

There were two reports of such incidents. I wonder how many attempted the idiotic stunt and got away with it.

It would seem to me that the stunt is obviously insane and it would be ridiculous to attempt it. But it's no more insane than options "B" or "C", both of which should be just as obviously ridiculous to attempt.

Where the lying-in-the-road idiocy happened elsewhere in the country.

the other two incidents occurred right here in Seminole County and both involved varsity athletes at local high schools.

Not only did option "B" involve an athlete, but one who already has a state championship to his credit. He also had an outstanding warrant for aggravated battery to his credit.

These are not "kids will be kids" kind of discretions. These are criminal activities, filegal for anyone but carrying a double Jeopardy penalty for athletes.

I've shared my philosophy that participation in athletics for any extracurricular activity) is a privilege to be earned, not a birthright. If you want to play, then you've got to follow the rules. If you're going to be a campus leader, which athletes are, then you have to set a proper example.

Aggravated battery? Possession of marijuana with intent to distribute? Possession of marijuana on school property?

Perhaps the two athletes were in the wrong place at the wrong time. but that doesn't absolve them of the responsibility of their actions. Most of us have been in a situation where we were doing something wrong that seemed like a good idea at that time but took a very weird and/or dangerous turn.

That's when you have to bail out. friend or no friend.

Cutting class is one thing, but getting into a car when the driver is drinking alcohol or participating in transporting illegal materials onto campus is something else.

These are potential career-ending misdeeds. That's what I mean by double jeopardy; not only is there the regular punishment that goes with the crime, but the additional penalty of forfeiting your privilege to compete in athletics, a punishment that extends to the teammates who depend upon you.

Therein lies the curse of being young. At that age, it apparently is difficult to discern or easy to ignore what the long-range impact of a given action might be. That doesn't change as we get older; the actions just become less obvious at face value and seemingly minor actions suddenly carry long-term dues.

If there's a simple guideline, it's this: Athletes die two deaths, the end of their mortal existence and the end of their lives as athletes.

When faced with an activity of questionable merit, apply this simple test: is it worth my career as an athlete? Is it worth not being able to play ever again?

Your honest answer to yourself will tell you what to do.

Pumpkin season is here Spanish Halloween pumpkin used mainly for food

Halloween is called "Noche de brujas" in Spanish, and their favorite pumpkin is called Calabaza.

Calabaza is a name commonly given to several strains of pumpkins and squashes grown in the tropics. In Florida, Calabaza refers to the Cuban pumpkin (Curcurbita moschata), also called Cuban squash. Unlike regular Halloween pumpkins, Calabaza is used primarily for food, not as a "Jack-O-Lantern." Although the pumpkins will usually last several weeks and make a festive holiday decoration for Thanksgiving. as well as, Halloween. Most, however, use it boiled and mashed like winter squash. Calabaza is also excellent in pies or baked. It is high in Vitamins A and C, plus a good source of potassium.

Calabaza grows on a very long vining plant similar to other winter-type squash. Leaves are mottled, grayish-green in color. Fruits vary in size, shape and color due to crossing and strain selection. The most usual fruit weighs about 5 to 7 pounds, round but flattened a bit on top and bottom and mottled grey and buff-cream color. The light yellow colored interior is firm, meaty. and relatively thin due to a fairly large central cavity. Like all Moschata, the seeds are rather small for squash, with the dried, matted pulpy fibers at the seed edges giving the seeds a aomewhat ragged apperance.

Calabaza tolerates hot weather conditions

Cururbit family. It is a tender crop easily injured by frost and freezes. It should be planted early in the spring as soon as the danger of frost is past. In frost-free areas of the state, Calabaza may be planted from August through March. In central Florida. fall production is possible in most years.

Calabaza is started from seed, which is often saved from the fruits of a preceding crop. Since plants tend to be excessively vining, rows should be spaced 6 to 9 feet apart, with plants spaced four feet apart. Calabaza, as you can see, requires a considerable amount of growing space.

Cultural practices such as fertilization, liming, and soil preparation are similar to those for other more common kinds of squash for a given area. Due to the wide plant spacing, gardeners are advised to place a gallon or two of well-rotted compost or animal manure under each planting site as well or better than other members of the before seeding. Mix the organic matter well

About three months are required from seeding to harvest of the Calabaza fruits. Like other Cucurbit, bees are needed to transfer pollen from male to female flowers of Calabaza the crop is not without typical squash pest problems, foliage diseases are the most serious.

As the name implies, most Calabazas in Florida are grown by Latins living in South Florida. This group also uses most of what is grown there, cooking the storage type squash in a variety of ways according to Latin recipes. Like other winter squash, Calabaza keeps well for several weeks if stored in a dry, reasonably cool situation.

Seeds of Calabaza are seldom found in seed company catalogs. Gardeners should try to obtain a Calabaza in a South Florida market and save the seeds. Considerable variation in plant characteristics from these seeds is expected.

The above information was taken from an informative publication titled "Manual of Minor Vegetables." The manual was written by Dr. James M. Stephens and is available from the University of Florida for $3. The manual contains growing information and black and white photos for vegetables ranging from Achoccha (wild cucumber) to Tomatillo (husk tomato relative). Ordering information is available at the Cooperative Extension Office located at 250 W. County Home Road, across from Flea World.

Adopted child can't shake rejection

DEAR ABBY: I keep reading letters in your column from natural mothers who don't want to be found by the children they gave up for adoption.

Every time I read one of those letters. I feel both angry and hurt. Angry because of the selfishness of these women, and hurt because I am adopted and it hurts to think that my natural mother doesn't even want to know me. No matter what the reason for giving us up for adoption, the bottom line is that we live our lives feeling rejected by our "real" mothers - the women who gave birth to us. These women are more concerned about the questions that might be raised and the problems it would cause than they are about knowing the kind of people we turned out to be. Don't we have a right to know who we really are? Is it fair for us to grow up feeling that we never quite belonged and were never really wanted in the first place?

Being adopted isn't easy always wondering if I look like my mother, wondering if she remembers me on my birthday. or if she ever regrets having given me up. Maybe she's dead. or maybe she's the lady who was standing next to me in the grocery store last week.

I love my adoptive parents and I owe them more than I can ever repay. They gave me the best life they could, and they'll always be my "real" parents. but there's someone missing, someone I'm afriad to look for, because if I find her, she may reject me

JUST ANOTHER ADOPTED

DEAR JUST: Not all adopted children were "rejected" for the convenience of their mothers. Many (and probably most) were put up for adoption because their birthmothers wanted them to have better lives than they could have given them at the

DEAR ABBY: I recently leased a studio apartment in a small complex - it's just the right size for me. When I first moved in, it was filthy, but I cleaned it up and now it's immaculate. To my horror, I discovered that the neighbor woman with whom I share a wall is a prostitute and drug addict. Peo-ple come and go at all hours of the night, and the television is another three-day orgy. Her customers stand in the common patio and make a mess of it with cigarette butts and empty liquor bottles.

What should I do? Should I get a lawyer? Or are things so bad these days that the cops would be indifferent?

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your neighbor is clearly disturbing your peace. First, send written letters of complaint to this neighbor and to the building manager (keep copies for yourself). If the disturbance continues, call the police. And see a lawyer about getting out of your

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Ms. Future Doctor." I felt the need to write and give another view on career sexual stereotypes.

I am 27, a registered nurse for four years, and I am a male. I am frequently asked, "When will you become a doctor?" Or, "You're doing this just to put yourself through medical school, right?" Also, "What's the mat-ter, couldn't you get into medical school?"

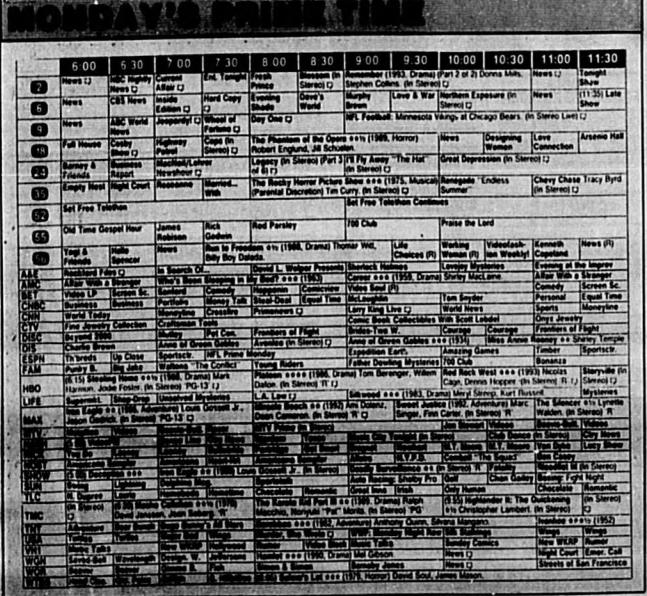

When I first started my schooling to become a nurse, I considered medical school, but the further I got into nursing, the more I enjoyed being a nurse. I enjoy comforting a patient in pain, teaching my patients about their diseases, and holding the hand of someone who is frightened and hurting. These feelings are experienced by every nurse, and being male did not exclude me from doing them. (Most doctors are too busy.) I still work hard being a competent and compassionate

More males are choosing nursing as a career, and we need to shed our preconceived notions about who nurses are and what they look like.

Also, you used the term "trained nurses." May I remind you that physicians are educated in medical school, and nurses are educated in nursing schools. Monkeys are trained to perform in circuses.

MR. NURSE IN TAMPA DEAR MR. NURSE: Excuuuze me! I've heard the term "nurses' training" since Hector was a pup, so it was only natural for me to use that term. I apologize to anyone whom I may have offended.

Liver disease progresses slowly

DEAR DR. GOTT: A friend dissolve in about two hours, as been diagnosed with switch brands. has been diagnosed with amyloid disease that has attacked his liver. Do you have any information on this condi-

DEAR READER: Amyloidosis is a fascinating disease that is characterized by an accumulation of protein deposits in various body organs, including the spleen, liver, kidneys, adrenal glands, and many others. The disorder may be secondary to other diseases, such as chronic infections and cancers. or it may be primary, for which no cause has been identified.

Symptoms depend on which organs are affected. Heart disease, liver enlargement, skin lesions, intestinal malabsorption, and goiters are common, as is renal involvement (excessive excretion of protein in the urine). Amyloidosis is diagnosed by Treatment is directed toward the underlying cause, if discovered, or to the specific organ involved. For example, cortisone is often used to retard the development of kidney failure. which may ultimately require renal transplant. Because the basic cause of primary amyloidosis is unknown, the therapy is not altogether satisfactory. In most cases, the disease progresses slowly and does not cause early death unless vital organs are extensively affected.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from osteoporosis and have been taking Calcium 600 with vitamin D for years. Will these products help my condition?

DEAR READER: Yes, depending on the amount you are taking. Patients with osteoporosis need about 2,000 milligrams of the mineral a day. Remember that some products may not be absorbed into the body. You can check out your brand by putting a tablet in a glass of water. If it doesn't

Most bridge deals are susceptible to a straightforward oach. You find the best line of play, adopt it, and either make the contract or fail, as the case may be. However, occasionally a certain subtlety, a degree of subterfuge, is necessary to improve your chances of success.

Today's deal was sent in by a reader from Kalispell, Montana. Against three no-trump, my correspondent had led his fourthhighest spade. Declarer won with the jack and immediately played the club queen from hand. East had won with the ace and returned a heart.

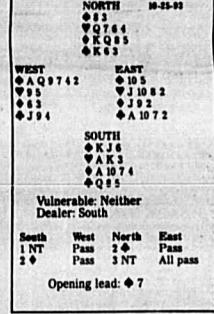

West wanted to know if he was right that his partner was wrong not to play back his spade five at trick three.

I dislike answering questions like this because I make one friend and one enemy. But of course, especially as the contract goes two down. East was wrong. From the auction, South was marked with at most spades. And it was unlikely a different attack would be more fruitful. However, did South play to best advantage? If the hearts are breaking 3-3, he has nine top tricks: one spade, four hearts and four diamonds. But a 3-3 split occurs only just over onethird of the time.

The line - practical, not technical - that appeals to me is to cross to dummy at trick two with a diamond and then to lead a low club toward the queen. If West has the club ace, the contract is always safe: whereas if East has the ace, he might play the "automatic" second hand low, whereupon declarer wins with the queen and runs for home.
