

What Effect Sun Has On The Skin

DEAR DR. LAMB — What can a person do about gray or brownish spots on the face? They seem to come and go but don't get much larger. I protect my face from the sun as much as I can. Should a person see a dermatologist or could a regular physician prescribe something? Have been using creams and vaseline which seem to help some.

DEAR READER — You are probably describing keratosis spots. These are prone to develop from overexposure to sun and wind. Your family doctor can examine them for you and see if you require a specialist to see you. I don't think they should be ignored. Some of these progress to skin cancer. At this early stage they can usually be removed by simple office procedures — often using a saline.

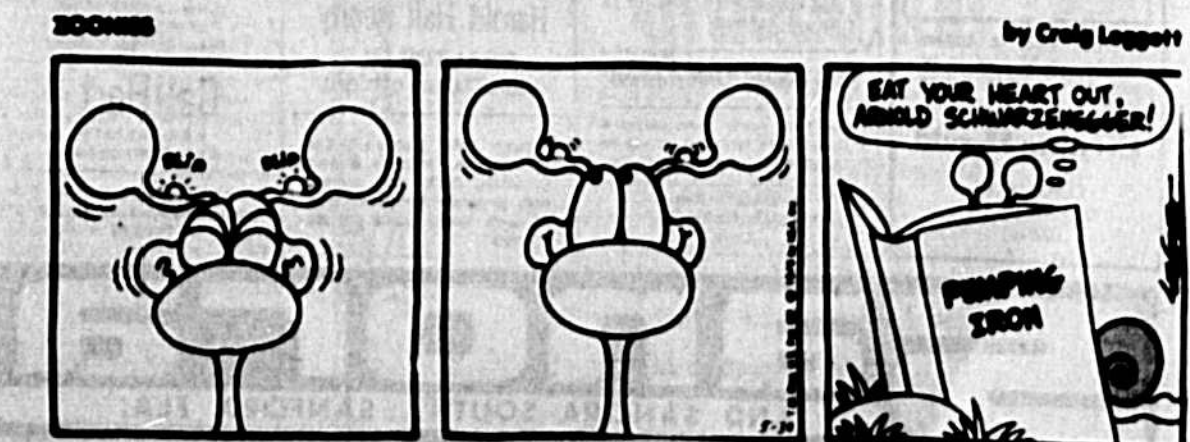

Since summer is here again it is time to remind all my readers that the sun can cause spots, and is the greatest cause of skin cancer in the future. Also, it ages the skin. That's what everyone seems to want in the summer is really a reaction of injury to the skin. I suppose my saying this is not going to influence many young people who think youth with a beautiful skin is going to be theirs forever, but believe me it isn't. At least try to limit your exposure to the sun. You can get some protection by limited exposure — no more than 15 minutes of sunlight a day — to gradually develop a tan, and avoid a sunburn. But I must say even a sunburn that you avoid still means skin injury. Also some preparations are better to apply to the skin and protect it than others. To give you more information I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10. Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You need to be in the function of your club and be faced with a bill larger than has been approved. If you pay the difference, don't expect to get it back. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be close-mouthed about a deal someone has lined up for you or the other party may back out, causing the deal to sour. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to play favorites today and reward the wrong person. The one you should have taken care of will certainly have hurt feelings. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Price these items in your garage or basement sale very carefully today. If you're too timid, you'll just break even. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In the planning phases you're hard to beat today. When it comes time for action, however, you may discard your winning formula for a loser.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If something is owed you today for services rendered in the past, you'll get it today. You may lose a friend or two in the process, but that's showbiz. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Put a curb on your generosity in the desire to close a deal today. You may get so carried away you could give the store away. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) No matter how much you put yourself out to help other today, recognition will be hard to come by. You might as well grin and bear it. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) As long as the going is easy and you're having fun today, you'll be with it. If things get tough you'll probably be inclined to beat a hasty retreat. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't spend funds earmarked for your rainy day for frivolous purposes today. You'll be sorry when the real rainy day arrives. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Where normally it's easy to get others enthused about your ideas, today you may be unpleasantly surprised when you find most people talking at you. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) People today extend themselves to help accomplish your ends. It's too bad, but you'll find it hard to be properly grateful.

County Studying Options For New Five-Points Jail

STEWING... SUING

LONDON (UPI)—Britain's royal family, which weathered the end of Princess Margaret's marriage, today faced the prospect of a family member marrying a Roman Catholic who is divorced. Queen Elizabeth's top advisory group was meeting today to consider the marriage plans of Prince Michael, 16th in line to the throne. Prince Michael is expected to announce within a few days his engagement to Baroness Marie-Christine von Balthus, 25, a convent-educated Austrian whose six-year marriage to a London merchant banker ended in divorce in 1977. Both Catholicism and divorce have been anathema to the British royal family in the past. Under current law Prince Michael, 25, Queen Elizabeth's cousin and an army major working at the ministry of defense, would have to renounce his claim to the throne. He and the baroness could not be married in a Church of England church, which is Britain's "established" church.

Seminole County has two options for funding construction of a new jail at its Five-Points complex. It can come up with $1,068,130 or try to trim that amount from the proposed project. Lowest bid for the work was $4,208,689 or $1,068,130 more than federal-state money available. The county commission voted unanimously to see what can be cut from the proposal. Next week commissioners will vote on whether to go with the scaled-down proposal or come up with the rest of the money. Architect John M. Dragash, Sanford, will meet with county officials Thursday to see what items might be cut from the original jail plan. Commissioner John Alexander proposed Tuesday that the commission negotiate with Standard Construction Co. of Maitland, the low bidder, to determine how costs might be cut by eliminating some of the project's specifications. Standard's bid of $4,208,689 was $1.4 million more than had been proposed. The two other bids received were from Stratton Construction, Tampa, $4,767,711 and Norfolk Construction, Orlando, $4,678,000. A minority contractor, making it ineligible for the project according to federal regulations, Norfolk declined to negotiate their price, according to County Planner John Perry. He serves as project coordinator for the $3 million Economic Development Administration (EDA) grant given the county to help build the jail. The commission received the EDA funds from a direct federal grant and from EDA funds distributed by the office of Gov. Reubin Askew in June 1977. Askew later added $500,000 to that total, provided the project is completed in its entirety. "What we would do," Dragash told the commission, "is meet with your designated representative and establish a shopping list of things we could negotiate such as the pods." Alexander had suggested one pod, or wing of the jail, which would house 60 inmates. He estimated that might be cut from the original proposal. He estimated that might drop the expense of the jail by $1 million. However, he said the negotiations should be reviewed next week by the commission. "I want to make it clear that we don't have to accept what is negotiated," said Alexander. In a written appeal to the commission, Sheriff John Polk claimed the full complex should be constructed as a savings to taxpayers and to meet federal and state requirements. "Due to the state and federal regulations concerning classification of inmates before they are put into the population of the jail, I feel that it is necessary that the entire project as proposed be completed," wrote Polk. "Without the completion, I am going on record as stating that we will be unable to fulfill these regulations which require classification and separation of inmates according to adult male-adult female; juvenile male-adult female; pretrial felon-pretrial misdemeanors; pretrial felon-post trial misdemeanors; trusts and work-release prisoners." If the county does not meet the state and federal guidelines, noted Polk, it may be forced to do so by a court order. Polk also argued that completion of the jail now would save money in the long run. "It will be a tremendous savings to the Seminole County taxpayers if completed at this time rather than delaying the project or portions of the project for an additional two or three years," Polk wrote. Polk noted that a plan to enlarge the present jail was used by the commission in 1976, because a three-year delay had escalated the construction costs. That delay was caused by a court battle to move the county seat to the southern portion of the county. The present jail was designed to house 97 prisoners, according to Polk. However, the daily prisoner population ranges from 118 to 130, according to Polk. He estimated average daily population for the new jail when it is scheduled for completion will be "in excess of 150 prisoners."

A BOP OR THE BUMP? Taking a pitch is one thing, but — as Rhaine Lee found out Tuesday — sometimes it depends upon where you take it. In this case it was a spot that hurt the least. And, besides, it was all in a good cause: his Twins team won in Sanford's Pee Wee League. Details, Pages 3A and 3B.

$6.6 Billion Budget On Way To Floor

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—A conference committee today approved a $6.6 billion budget fixing some spending of $700 million and forwarded it to the House and Senate floors for action Thursday or Friday. Senate Appropriations Chairman Phil Lewis warned against spending all of their money, saying he expects the economy to take a "disastrous" turn early next year, requiring a cut in the budget or tax increases by the 1979 Legislature. House Spending chief Ed Fortune was less pessimistic, saying he expects "a slowdown next year, but not the inflation-recession we had in 1975." The conference committee left $73 million unappropriated for working capital reserves for emergencies, but that will be depleted if legislators pass out money-spending bills before adjourning Friday, including a package of tax breaks for business being pushed by Fortune, D-Pace. Approval of the compromise budget was made possible when Lewis, D-First Palm Beach, agreed Tuesday night to a special $100 million raise for Florida Highway Patrol and and community colleges $194 million, a $15 million hike. State employees get 4 percent across the board raises, plus another 2 percent in merit hikes at the discretion of supervisors across the board and 3 percent in merit. Elected officials and judges get 3 percent raises. The budget would be the largest in Florida history. It also is the last spending plan covering a single year. The state returns to biennial budgeting in 1979. State funding for schools was $1,285 billion, about a $120 million increase over this year. Universities would get $228 million, a $24 million increase.

Florida Marine Patrol officers and game wardens, and the education subcommittee worked out a "hold harmless" provision guaranteeing each school district a 7.25 percent increase in funding over this year. The budget would be the largest in Florida history. It also is the last spending plan covering a single year. The state returns to biennial budgeting in 1979. State funding for schools was $1,285 billion, about a $120 million increase over this year. Universities would get $228 million, a $24 million increase. The agreements came after the House accepted a conference committee report to give lower retirement benefits to law officers and other government employees with high risk jobs. House speaker designate Hyatt Brown, D-Daytona Beach, of blocking Senate bills implementing reforms in automobile, workers' compensation and products liability insurance. Brown said lawmakers are carefully reviewing the insurance bills to make sure the legislation will not force raises in rates. Brown said he's concerned that a Senate bill, preventing many law suits for pain and suffering claims from going to court, may hike personal injury insurance. Brown said the insurance bills will get fair hearings in the House.

A Changed Candidate Eckerd: The Air Of A Winner

By DONNA KESTER
Herald Staff Writer

Jack Eckerd, GOP gubernatorial candidate, attributes his new self-confidence in the political arena to experience — experience as a businessman and as head of the U.S. General Services Administration — and from past mistakes in two unsuccessful campaigns for statewide office. But, whatever the explanation, he has the air of a winner about him, a far different image than he projected during his previous campaigns for governor in 1970 and for the U.S. Senate in 1974. Not surprised at hearing predictions that he will handily defeat his Republican rival, U.S. Rep. Lou Frey of Winter Park, for the party nomination, Eckerd points out the Gannett newspaper chain in a March poll showed him the victor by 51 over a poll he commissioned the same month predicted a win by just 9-1. Eckerd is quick to add that both polls were conducted prior to Public Service Commissioner and "Maitland housewife" Paula Hawkins joining the state as the lieutenant governor candidate. "I was not surprised at the results," Eckerd said, during his campaign swing through Seminole County, See ECKERD, Page 7A

Swords Or Plowshares?

In the vast global shopping center, the market for swords these days is much greater than that for plowshares.

Reality, however, does not obscure the idealism behind the U.N. General Assembly's Special Session on Disarmament, which began May 23 in New York City and will continue through June 28.

All nations are in favor of arms control and a reduction in arms sales—in principle. Considering the lofty peacekeeping objectives assigned to the United Nations when it was organized following World War II, it is remarkable that the current effort is the first special session devoted to the arms issue.

The tentative agenda for the meeting stressed four basic goals: a review of the relationships of disarmament, peace and economic development; adoption of a declaration on disarmament.

But, while there is no lack of enthusiasm among the participants in the conference, there have been few expressions of optimism.

President Carter is among the most staunch supporters of disarmament, which spotlights the problem. In his inaugural address, the president emphasized his "ultimate goal—the elimination of all nuclear weapons from this earth." He referred to the arms trade as an "unsavory business."

But the recent Carter proposal to sell warplanes to Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia won Senate approval.

It is a fact of life in a world struggling for economic stability that the tools of war are a significant factor in balance of trade figures. Weapons withheld from the market by the United States will soon be provided by other suppliers.

The conference should have no trouble in agreeing to condemn the arms trade, but the outlook for a formal accord is dim indeed.

When the United States and the Soviet Union debate for months—over years—without being able to hammer out permanent SALT agreements, it is apparent that the 150 nations represented in New York are not going to produce a pact in a mere month.

But the session has drawn, according to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, "the largest, most representative gathering ever convened to consider the question of disarmament."
The purpose is admirable.

He Dared Too Much

When the Soviet Union signed the Helsinki agreements in 1975, the physicist Yuri Orlov was one of those Russians who dared to assume there was going to be a change in the attitude of his government toward human rights.

He formed an organization to monitor Soviet compliance with the Helsinki principles of respect for individual freedom and the right of dissent.

Dr. Orlov dared too much. The result: a seven-year prison sentence, to be followed by five years of exile from Moscow. This is harsh even by Soviet terms. The Kremlin generally strikes its more prominent dissenters of their citizenship and throws them out of the country.

But the Orlov case demanded something special, one of those "public trials" the Communists are famous for.

The public was excluded, of course, except for an audience picked by the government and coached to booie Orlov when he tried to speak in his defense. There were no defense witnesses permitted, and Dr. Orlov was usually ruled out of order when he tried to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses accusing him of "standing" the Soviet state.

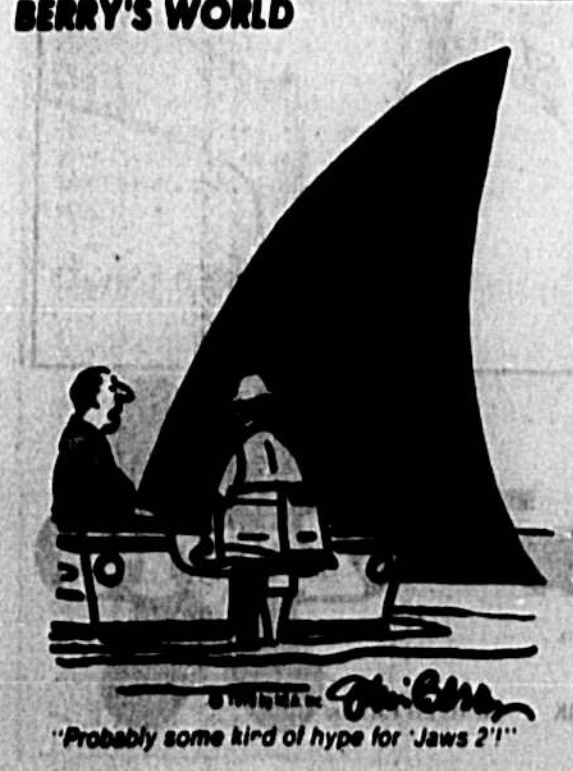

At least, that's the version we have from Dr. Orlov's wife, who suffered her own indignities for daring to describe the proceedings to journalists who couldn't get in.

Heinrich Furgal, it, the Kremlin is saying. There'll be no meddling in the internal affairs of the Soviet Union, and Western statesmen protesting about repression of human rights should mind their own business.

Dr. Orlov made the mistake of thinking he could get away with a challenge of the Communist policy forbidding open expression of disagreement with party ideology. Maybe he should have known better.

The West assumed at Helsinki that the opening of doors for trade and diplomacy under détente would cause the Communists to change. Maybe we should have known better, too.

Another Poor Choice?

WASHINGTON — The prize for the year's most inept political proclamation surely belongs to Hugh Carter Jr., for his explanation of the need to almost double the authorized number of high-paying senior staff positions at the White House.

"We wanted to have plenty of flexibility for the future in the event of an emergency like World War III or something," young Hugh, a cousin of President Carter, said recently. Fortunately for the Republic, a) World War III is not yet upon us, and b) the bill to increase from 55 to 100 the number of White House jobs paying between $42,500 and $57,500 annually remains to be approved by the Senate.

But the Carter family faces, to paraphrase the president, the political equivalent of war: Uncle Jimmy's ratings in the national popularity polls continue to sag and each passing day brings him closer to the 1980 presidential election.

Existing legislation provides the authority to make somewhat more modest increases in the size of the White House staff, and in the five weeks following Cousin Hugh's pronouncement, two senior staff members were added — political operative Anne Wexler and advertising executive Gerald Rafshoon.

These moves are disconcerting because they have produced the spectacle of an issue-oriented president beefing up his staff not with policy advisers but rather with a political agent and a public relations expert.

The selection of Rafshoon is bothersome on other grounds as well. Like most other members of the president's inner circle, he owes his elevated status not so much to innate talent but to many years of dedicated service to Carter.

Political observers and media experts in both major parties are virtually unanimous in their assessment of Rafshoon's 1978 television advertising on Carter's behalf as uninspired if not inferior.

Carter Caters To Zambia

Who is Kenneth Kaunda and why is he saying all those terrible things to us? — things such as his claim that the Rhodesian internal settlement is a scheme to perpetuate a "white-black master-slave relationship."

WASHINGTON — The prize for the year's most inept political proclamation surely belongs to Hugh Carter Jr., for his explanation of the need to almost double the authorized number of high-paying senior staff positions at the White House.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of the Senate now have suffered for the first time the harrowing agony of laying bare their personal finances. Nobody got hurt.

Another Poor Choice?

WASHINGTON — The prize for the year's most inept political proclamation surely belongs to Hugh Carter Jr., for his explanation of the need to almost double the authorized number of high-paying senior staff positions at the White House.

"We wanted to have plenty of flexibility for the future in the event of an emergency like World War III or something," young Hugh, a cousin of President Carter, said recently.

Existing legislation provides the authority to make somewhat more modest increases in the size of the White House staff, and in the five weeks following Cousin Hugh's pronouncement, two senior staff members were added — political operative Anne Wexler and advertising executive Gerald Rafshoon.

These moves are disconcerting because they have produced the spectacle of an issue-oriented president beefing up his staff not with policy advisers but rather with a political agent and a public relations expert.

The selection of Rafshoon is bothersome on other grounds as well. Like most other members of the president's inner circle, he owes his elevated status not so much to innate talent but to many years of dedicated service to Carter.

Political observers and media experts in both major parties are virtually unanimous in their assessment of Rafshoon's 1978 television advertising on Carter's behalf as uninspired if not inferior.

High Court: What It Did, Didn't Do

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Here is a summary of the Supreme Court actions Tuesday:

Legal Aid
Re-emphasized, in an 8-0 ruling, that lawyers who solicit clients — in a practice generally known as "ambulance chasing" — are subject to discipline by the organized bar.

Obscenity
Rejected 6-3 a challenge to methods used by U.S. customs officers to seize and destroy allegedly obscene material entering the country.

Fair Trial
Reversed a Kentucky bank robber's conviction because the judge failed to instruct the jury at his trial that he was presumed innocent unless proven guilty.

Equal Protection
Agreed to rule on constitutionality of state laws allowing the award of alimony payments to women but not to men.

Government Agencies
Upheld the Conservation Act, under which districts are formed to regulate stream flows and prevent flooding.

Media
Refused to review new government rules relieving broadcasters of the duty to air contrasting views about ordinary product commercials.

State Rights
Promised to hear arguments on Nevada's challenge to a $1.15 million damage award returned against it in a California court.

Gas
Turned down an appeal by Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. that a lower court is taking much too long to rule on the legality of a gas curtailment compensation provision.

Moot
Formally dismissed an appeal filed on behalf of the late Mary Northern, a 73-year-old Tennessee woman who resisted doctors and state officials seeking to amputate her gangrene-infected feet. Miss Northern died May 2.

AREA DEATH
Mrs. Myrtle B. Torrey, 88, of Sandy Lane Drive, Apopka, died Monday in Rochester, N.Y.

Ryder Cup Makes A Major Change

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (UPI) — Ryder Cup teams from Britain may now use European players following a rule change by the American and British Ryder Cup committees made to even up future matches. The decision means the British teams may include any players of the European Tour. The Earl of Derby, president of the British PGA and chairman of the British Ryder Cup Committee said the expanded selection process was helped by Spain's recent victory in the World Cup, where Severiano Ballesteros and Antonio Garrido finished 1-3. Ballesteros also won this year's Greater Greensboro Open.

La Dolce Vita--The Sweet Life

Desserts Are The Berries

La dolce vita -- the sweet life -- is how the Italians like to describe their zesty approach to living. And nowhere is that credo more evident than in their remarkable cuisine, where desserts are rich, lavish and supremely satisfying.

Fresh Berry Tortoni is an updated version of the traditional dessert featuring fresh blueberries and strawberries for summer.

Blueberries and strawberries are both good sources of vitamin C and a variety of other nutrients. Also, they're low in calories!

Fresh Cherry Zuppa Inglese is an easy version of the classic Italian dessert which means "English soup." It is not a soup, of course, but it does resemble the English trifle, a pudding and fruit layered offering.

Summertime is berry and cherry time which means lots of delicious eating either out-of-hand or in an impressive, yet easily made, dessert such as an Italian-style tortoni.

Hot Chinese Salad, is perfect for a weekend supper. This meal-in-a-bowl features rice, water chestnuts and cheese with a combination of Oriental and Occidental seasonings.

Hot Salad Is A Meal In A Bowl

- For change of pace dining, stir up an Oriental-flavored main dish salad. Home economists have created Hot Chinese Salad to stretch leftover ham, but any leftover cooked meat can be substituted.

One-Pot Suppers Save Time, Cash

Controlling Acne: Some Good Tips
by Dr. Lamb
Box 1551, New York, NY 10019

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 25 and have a bad acne problem with my chin and the corners of my chin. Just recently the acne has flared up and it seems nothing I use helps. I am not on birth control pills or any medication. Would you please send me some information on what to do or a Health Letter if you have one?

DEAR READER — In some instances birth control pills help control acne. It depends upon the mix of female hormones used.

Acne is usually related to an overproduction of oily secretions called sebum. This forms the white heads and black heads. The sebum is broken down into fatty acids that irritate the tissues and start the formation of the pimple.

My best home remedy suggestion is to keep the areas involved as dry and free of oil as possible. You can do that with washing with warm water and mild soap — don't use a beauty soap that contains oils or creams in the soap — and wipe off the area regularly, either with plain rubbing alcohol or a half-alcohol half-water mixture. You can use the alcohol sponge technique as many times as needed a day to keep the area free of oil.

Then avoid using any oily preparations on the face. That simply aggravates the problem. If it doesn't clear up, go to the dermatologist. He can use a more aggressive treatment that may include agents to peel the abnormal skin surface and perhaps antibiotics to eliminate bacteria that split the fat into irritating fatty acids.

Meanwhile I am sending you The Health Letter number 62, Acne Can Be Treated, that you requested. Other readers who read this issue should also get a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O.

WIN AT BRIDGE
By Donald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The auction took a bad turn for West when his four-heart bid was overcalled by North's four spades. West's heart holding was sensational and altogether he could count nine top tricks. Because of his heart suit and North's vulnerability, West decided to take an inexpensive sacrifice and bid to the five level. North persevered to five spades. The bidding illustrates the power of the airtight suit. Spades outrank every other suit at the same level. The late Adam Meredith of England, and later, the United States, was very aware of this point.

Presently, Meredith would bid the airtight suit as a bluff to force the opponents to a higher level of bidding and to steal their premier weapon, spades.

On the diagrammed hand, West won the opening trick with the king of hearts. He realized that South had the ace of clubs, how else could he have such sufficient strength for his opening!

Ask the Experts
West saw the irony of the situation. Spades, the trump suit, would have to provide the setting trick.

At trick two, West led the ace of hearts, forcing declarer to ruff in dummy. Declarer then led a trump to his king. West won with the ace.

West next led the two of hearts, providing declarer with a ruff and sluff, but also forcing East to use his remaining trump, the 10. This was a brilliant stroke when South overrudded with the jack of spades, there was no way for him to shut out West's nine of trumps.

Water Safety: Strong Swimmer Gets Taken By Surprise
By ELLIE GROSBMAN
NEW YORK — Sam Cynamon is a strong swimmer. The American Red Cross would have him working as a Safety Services Specialist for Water in the Greater New York Chapter if he weren't.

Still, he says, "There are situations I get into the water when I'm taken by surprise. I won't panic, but I get this sudden sick feeling in my stomach."

But since Cynamon knows how to react, he probably won't end up as one of an estimated 7,000 who drown each year according to the National Safety Council.

Not only didn't they know what to do, they probably didn't know they were in dangerous situation to begin with.

Or maybe they overestimated their own ability.

Or ignored safety regulations like the sign that says don't swim near the rocks. There's a reason for that, you know. A rambunctious wave can lift you up and distribute you over those rocks or any nearby jetties or pier or surfacing U-bait.

How did you get out there anyway? If you ran better shelter into the surf like Bert Lancaster and Deborah Kerr without warning signs on the beach, or testing the undertow, you could find yourself struggling to return to shore because the water gouged whole buckets of sand from under your feet, and pulled you out with it. For company.

Now acknowledge the fact that the lifeguard is on hand not just to pat next term's tuition by sunning himself on his perch.

"If you're not a good swimmer to start with," Cynamon says, "stay near the lifeguard. If the beach isn't that busy, you may even want to ask him to keep an eye on you."

And don't pretend you don't hear him if he whistles you back to shore.

In a boat, Cynamon says, the best safety procedure for everyone, water-tily or not, is to wear a personal flotation device, or PFD. A life-jacket or buoyant ring that fastens around the waist. Make sure it fits, there are sizes for children and adults — and carries a sticker of approval from the Coast Guard.

"All lifesaving equipment should be checked for defects, too, and everyone should practice using it," he says, just like a fire drill.

But suppose you find yourself in the water 20 miles offshore without a PFD, or even a boat to hang onto (which you should always do, he says, when you capsize. Better still, climb on top of it if it's not burning or about to sink.

If the water is warm, you can try down-proofing, a survival method of flotation created for downed pilots.

The necessity for warm water, Cynamon says, is to combat hypothermia, which is subnormal central body temperature.

"When the core body temperature reaches 90 degrees F, unconsciousness can occur; when it drops to 85 degrees, you can die."

"Fifty percent of body heat is lost from the head, and water conducts heat faster than air. Since down-proofing requires your head to be in the water a lot, that means you're liberating cool air quicker through down-proofing than by treading water with your head above it — even though you expend more energy treading water."

What down-proofing does do, though, is enable you to rest. You don't breathe too comfortably, but you do rest.

Begin by relaxing everything so the body curves forward in a semi-vertical position, arms and legs dangling, your face in the water. When you need air, bring your arms up, crisscrossed in front of you, spread your legs apart, then simultaneously do a scissor-kick — one leg forward, one back — and press downward with your arms.

This will lift you out of the water. Take a breath and then return to the original dangling position. Continue until help or the shore materializes.

If you find yourself swimming alone (bad idea to begin with) and you develop a cramp, you can handle that through the jelly fish float.

That, too, is a semi-vertical floating position with your back at the surface of the water and your face submerged.

Again, let your arms and legs dangle, then reach down and knead or rub the cramped muscle until it eases up.

To breathe, raise your arms and push down, pick up your head and get some air. Then assume the original position and continue managing the cramped muscle.

"When you feel comfortable enough to swim again," he says, "do a different stroke from what you were doing when you got the cramp so it doesn't happen again."

All of this sounds very good. But the fact of the matter is, Cynamon says, to a person without some facility in the water, survival techniques won't mean much.

Playing with water, after all, is just like playing with that other natural element — fire.

If you're not in the mood for our fish & chips tonight, let us tempt you with something else.
Arthur Treacher's
There's more to Arthur Treacher's than just great fish and chips. For a delicious change, try our chicken and chips. It's all boneless white bread of chicken. Cooked to golden perfection in our special secret batter. And served up with a generous portion of the chips we're equally famous for. Arthur Treacher's Chicken & Chips. Just another reason we're something else. No bones about it.
