

Non-Military Aid Approved For Contras

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a major foreign policy victory for President Reagan, a House-Senate conference committee today endorsed $27 million in non-military aid for the anti-Sandinista guerrillas fighting the Cuban and Soviet-supported Nicaraguan government.

The assistance is attached to the $12.7 billion foreign assistance bill but it denies the White House a chief goal — allowing the CIA or the Defense Department to distribute the clothes, food, medicine and similar supplies to the Contras.

"I do not see any way the House will do it," Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., of the House Foreign Affairs Committee told Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "This is nitpicking (demanding a CIA role)."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., an ardent backer of the Contras, said it was "dumb" that Congress would not allow the agency with experience in dealing with the rebels — the CIA — to distribute the assistance.

"But the House will not allow it. It will have to be the boys with striped trousers and cut-away coats," he said, meaning the State Department and its Agency for International Development — a non-military group that oversees the distribution of economic aid.

Lugar was warned by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, that a CIA role would wreck passage of the bill.

"I have qualms," he said in dropping the idea. But he cautioned that the State Department should "not be harassed every point along the way" by Congress as it takes on the distribution role.

The bill goes to both chambers for approval. However, the Senate and House appropriations committees must authorize the expenditures.

Approval of aid for the estimated 15,000 guerrillas came three months after the House, upset with the CIA role in Nicaragua and failing to see any real benefits in the covert program, killed a modest $14 million aid bill passed by the Senate.

Immediately afterwards Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega visited Moscow seeking economic aid, embarrassing many House Democrats who worried about the political effects of doing nothing to pressure the Sandinistas toward democratic reforms.

On June 6 the Senate approved $38 million in non-military aid for the Contras and the House passed $27 million shortly afterwards.

The overall bill provides $6.2 billion in military assistance — $438 million below the administration's request.

Economic aid was set at $5.5 billion. Other amounts increased the bill to more than $12.7 billion — $200 million less than the current spending level.

The divided conferees dropped language on family planning that would have denied any assistance to any organization working with China, which some congressmen have accused of performing coerced abortions and infanticide.

The administration had also asked for $100 million in military aid for the Philippines, but the conference limited it to $70 million in non-lethal assistance — uniforms, and communications equipment — and called for reforms in its armed forces. Economic aid was set at $110 million.

Workers Search For Killer Bees

LOST HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Insect experts today searched 400 square miles of central California in hopes of destroying the first swarm of "killer bees" to arrive in the United States before they form more colonies.

The Africanized bees were first observed by a man who saw them sting a rabbit to death.

The helicopter-aided search of rich Central Valley farmland for the queen of the swarm was begun when entomologists confirmed that dead bees found in rural Kern County were cross-bred African and Latin American bees.

The insects are known as killer bees because they are fiercely aggressive and far more likely to attack people and animals than ordinary bees, even though their sting is no worse than that of other varieties. They also have been known to attack in a swarm 100 yards long.

Officials told reporters Thursday a swarm of the dangerous bees was spotted last month by an oil field worker who saw the swarm attack and kill a cottontail rabbit.

The worker tried to destroy the swarm, found in a fox burrow in the semi-desert region about 140 miles north of Los Angeles, by pouring hot asphalt into the hole. The next day he found that the bees had tunneled around the asphalt and reached the surface.

It was the first time such bees were found in the United States, the state Food and Agriculture Department said.

New member of the group, not shown, is Kenny Hicks. Others appearing on the program are Calvin Messick, Ml. Dora, Theresa Moriarty of Ml. Dora, and Mel Hall of Dellona. The quartet has been singing for three years in churches, campgrounds and gospel concerts.

Would Lead To Censorship

ACLU: Don't Regulate Child Pornography

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union opposes the regulation of pornography, including child pornography, because censorship is an inadequate defense against sexual violence, an ACLU official told a federal commission.

In testimony before the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, Jane M. Whicher, staff counsel of the Illinois ACLU, said the government should not regulate the pornography industry, even if a link is established between crimes of sexual violence and pornography.

"There's been attempts to get at the problems in society by regulating speech, and those attempts have not worked," Whicher said. "Attempts to regulate child pornography are a perfect example.

"Regulating speech does not stop the crime, so I suggest to you to reject the attempt to link pornography with rape, sexual assault and organized crime. Go after the rapist. Go after organized crime. Go after those who sexually abuse children."

The 11-member commission was formed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III in May at the request of President Reagan to study the effects of pornography and recommend appropriate measures to control its production and distribution.

Prior to Whicher's testimony, the commission heard from two women, identified as "Evelyn" and "Diana," who described how their husbands' interest in pornography had destroyed their marriages.

Brenda Mackillop, a bunny at the Los Angeles Playboy Club from 1973 to 1976, testified that her work caused her to "treat my body as a marketable item."

The commission, which is holding a two-day hearing that concludes today, also heard from police officers who described the difficulty of prosecuting pornography cases.

But Whicher charged that the focus of the hearing had shifted too far toward linking pornography with crime.

"The aim of your efforts at pornography is going in the wrong direction," Whicher said. "The ACLU rejects your attempts to tie pornography to crime."

Asked by commission chairman Henry Hudson, chief attorney of Arlington County, Va., if the government should be allowed to "interfere" in pornography if a link to crime is "scientifically" established, Whicher replied, "No."

Asked by Hudson if the ACLU supported government interference if a child were exposed to pornography by an adult, Whicher again answered negatively.

"It's the parents' responsibility and the parents' duty to teach their children the type of values they want them to have."

Car Bomb Rocks Lima

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Security officials ordered sharpshooters stationed at government buildings and sealed off parts of downtown Lima today after a car bomb exploded in front of the Peruvian Interior Ministry.

Police also defused a second bomb Thursday behind the four-story ministry — headquarters for Peru's police forces.

The explosion believed carried out by leftist guerrillas injured one police officer, destroyed three parked cars and damaged at least 15 others. The front windows of the ministry and those of neighboring houses were shattered.

Police said the car that exploded, a cream-colored Datsun, had been stolen from a police detective. It had been packed with dynamite and was parked about 75 feet from the ministry entrance.

Five people were arrested in connection with the bombing, which came as foreign dignitaries began arriving for the inauguration Sunday of President-elect Alan Garcia.

Prime Minister Luis Percovich said "This was obviously meant to spoil the (inauguration) and create a climate of uncertainty." He and other officials pledged to tighten security before the ceremony.

No one claimed responsibility for the blast, but police said they suspected one of two leftist guerrilla groups, the Maoist Shining Path or the newer urban Tupac Amaru, also a leftist organization.

Earlier this month, guerrillas exploded dynamite at four offices of president-elect Garcia's party, the social democratic Popular American Revolutionary Alliance.

Some 5,100 people have died in five years of guerrilla warfare aimed at weakening the outgoing government of President Fernando Belaunde Terry.

Panel To Study Safety On Theme Park Rides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has rejected a bid to give the Consumer Products Safety Commission the power to inspect rides at theme parks, despite claims the examinations could prevent accidents or deaths.

By a vote of 52-41 largely along party lines, the Senate opted instead to set up a special commission to study the issue of ride safety at theme parks for the next 18 months.

The Senate also moved Wednesday to allow the National Bureau of Standards to send inspectors to theme parks but only if they are called in by state and local authorities.

The inspection proposal introduced by Sen. John Danforth R-Mo., was accepted by the Senate in place of a stronger one written by Sen. Paul Simon D-Ill., who as a House member won passage last year of a ride safety bill. The bill later died in the Senate.

The CPSC already has the power to inspect rides used by traveling carnivals but it does not have the power to inspect rides at fixed site parks such as the huge theme parks visited by millions of Americans each year.

Simon's stronger alternative to Danforth's proposal would have given the CPSC the authority to inspect the fixed-site rides in the 24 states that do not have their own inspection programs.

Handle Dirty Money — Get Sent To The Cleaners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Congress passes legislation to make money laundering a federal crime, lawyers, accountants and bankers who knowingly handle billions of dollars in illicit drug money could go to jail.

A House Judiciary subcommittee held a hearing Wednesday on several bills that would subject those who participate in the illegal laundering process — including bank tellers — to stiff fines and prison terms.

Because current law is ambiguous, many bankers, lawyers, accountants and others involved in drug money laundering can escape punishment.

It is frequently difficult to prove that they knew the source of the illegal money — even though millions of dollars in small bills often is brought in for deposit in cardboard boxes, duffel bags and other unconventional methods.

Bills submitted to Congress by the administration would loosen provisions of the Right to Financial Privacy Act and the Bank Secrecy Act to help improve federal prosecutor's access to bank records of suspected money launderers.

The bills also would make it easier to convict those who exhibit a "reckless disregard" for their actions.

Among those might be bank tellers who do not know the specific origin of the money they accept but who know that the deposits are illegal.

Lawyers and accountants who earn fat commissions for helping to launder drug money, even if they do not know the source, also would be easier to prosecute if the bills pass.

Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime that held the money laundering hearing, has filed a bill that "makes it a crime for racketeers and drug traffickers to use the banks."

"Equally important, the bill would make it a crime for banks and other financial institutions to knowingly accept criminally derived funds," Hughes said.

"It would apply to lawyers, accountants and others who knowingly assist in transactions with criminally derived funds," he said.

"Money launderers are profiting from the misery of drug abuse just as wantonly as drug traffickers themselves and ought to be punished accordingly," Hughes said.

The government estimates that Americans spend about $80 billion a year on illegal drugs.

Asking For Keepsakes After Funeral Is OK

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away. A cousin who was especially close to her since childhood asked if he might have some kind of memento as a keepsake. His request astonished and offended my brother. I said I thought the request was in good taste and reflected the love and closeness our cousin felt for our mother. Such gifts have been offered to me, in two instances, and I was deeply appreciative of them.

My husband's favorite brother died many miles from us, and his widow sent no keepsake to my husband. My husband wouldn't presume to ask for anything, but I know he was both saddened and hurt by the oversight.

What is your opinion about the practice of giving such keepsakes, and of relatives and close friends requesting same?

NEVER WRITTEN BEFORE
DEAR NEVER WRITTEN: Grieving people have their minds on other things and should not be faulted should they overlook the giving of keepsakes to close friends and relatives.

Most people would rather do without than ask for one, but I think to make such a request is a compliment to the deceased — unless, of course, one asks to be "remembered" with the loved one's valuable stamp collection or diamond brooch.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I want a big church wedding, but we can't afford one, and it would take us four years to save the money, so we have come up with this idea.

We would like to have a Dutch-treat wedding. We could charge $32.60 a couple or $16.30 a person to cover food, drinks and a portion of the other expenses, like the hall, the music, flowers, table decorations, wedding cake, etc.

I am 18, and so is my boyfriend. We are both virgins and want to stay that way until we're married.

We wouldn't expect any wedding gifts other than pitching in for the Dutch-treat wedding.

I don't know how much longer we can wait, Abby.

Don't you think a lot of folks would pay $32.60 a couple toward getting two good Christians married?

Thank you for any advice you can give us.

IN LOVE IN W. VA.
DEAR IN LOVE: You'll never know until you ask. Poll your friends and you'll have your answer.

DEAR ABBY: I am a registered nurse, married to a trucker. When I'm not working, I enjoy riding with him. It may be illegal to solicit over a CB, but that doesn't stop the hookers. Truckers are besieged with offers from hookers everywhere — not only in Nevada.

Many truckers have beds built into the cab of their trucks and prefer to sleep there instead of a motel. Law enforcement officials try to keep these hookers out of the parking areas. In some instances, the areas are fenced to keep the hookers out. I once had a hooker knock on our truck door to offer her services.

As long as there are truckers who use their services, the oldest profession in the world will continue to thrive. Truckers' wives will just have to trust their men. There are plenty of decent truckers on the road. I married one.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday I prepared an especially good company dinner and invited my mother-in-law. After dinner, my husband and three sons helped clear the table, while my mother-in-law went right to the living room and sat down. She's a young 60 and could have offered to do something, but she didn't.

I'm the type that doesn't like to put things off, so I just dug right in and cleaned up the kitchen myself. Three times. I heard my mother-in-law say to my husband, "What's taking her so long?"

It took me an hour and a half to straighten up, and just as I was finishing, she came in the kitchen to say she was leaving.

I said, "Can't you stay a while so we can visit?"

She said, "No, I'm tired. And by the way, don't you have a dishwasher?"

I do, Abby, but the dishes have to be scraped, all edibles put away, floor mopped, etc.

Anyway, she left and I really was hurt. Was I wrong to clean up my kitchen first? I can't relax knowing I will have to do it later. How would you have handled it, Abby?

HURT
DEAR HURT: I would have put away the edibles, joined my guests in the living room and cleaned up my kitchen later.

BILLY'S QUEEN BEE, LAMAR, COLO.

Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cent) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Collision

USA, Canada Go To Battle At Memorial Stadium Saturday

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

It's a little late for the 1984 Olympic Games and much too early for the 1988 edition. Just the same, baseball fans can get a look at past and future Olympian performers Saturday at Sanford's Memorial Stadium when Team Canada collides with the USA Senior Division team at 7 p.m.

Tickets are available at the stadium for $2. The matchup is a natural. Canada, managed by Eric MacKenzie, has made great strides in the south-of-the-border's national pastime. MacKenzie, who has guided the Canadians for two years and assisted for nine more, said he feels his club can play with any amateur squad in the world.

The Canadians are doing very well on their southern swing. They have compiled a 17-3 ledger. They have fattened up on several local teams the past week. MacKenzie said he feels the team's hitting has come around at just the right time.

Wednesday night, the Canadians clubs broke loose for 32 runs while pounding the Buddy Lake League All Stars (16-0) and DeLand's Boulevard Tire (16-2). The Boulevard team is no slouch either. Comprised of former DeLand High School standouts, it burst the local competition with a 19-0 regular season mark in the Buddy Lake League. The Tires didn't lose until the Canadians hit town.

MacKenzie, though, said Boulevard and the All-Stars won't compare to the USA's collection of college stars that Canada will confront Saturday.

Saturday's contest is just a prelude to what both teams are working toward — the International Cup Games at Edmonton Aug. 8-18. This prestigious tournament is held during the odd-numbered years and draws the finest players from Cuba, Japan, South Korea, Nicaragua, Taiwan, Australia, Canada and the USA.

Canada's best performance came in 1981 when it finished in fourth place with a 4-3 record. "It's a very difficult tournament," said MacKenzie. "But we're not in over our heads."

Five of our boys signed (pro baseball contracts) from last year's team. That's an indication that baseball in Canada is catching up with the rest of the world. There are also a lot more Canadians playing baseball in colleges and universities in the United States."

MacKenzie, who is a recreation instructor in Mooretown, Ontario when not coaching the summer team, said he looks at Saturday's

Scotty Maxwell

encounter as a way to gauge his boys' progress. Canada's lineup features an awesome left. See COLLISION, Page 8A

Hampton Tames Altamonte, 4-0

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

WINTER GARDEN — Crystal River left hander Mike Hampton was pretty tough Monday in a 5-2, seven-inning victory over the Altamonte Americans. He was even tougher when he returned to the mound with two days rest Thursday night.

Hampton tossed a nifty four-hitter and Dean Roach and John Balmer each drove in a pair of runs as Crystal River eliminated Altamonte, 4-0, in the Section 1 Major League All-Star Tournament final.

Crystal River, which won the section in three straight, goes on to the State Major League All-Star Tournament in Rockledge starting July 29.

It was the first time in tournament play that Altamonte was shutout. After two days rest and the butterflies gone, Hampton pitched an impressive ballgame as only four Altamonte hitters got around on his fastball. Hampton struck out six and walked only one.

"I was pretty nervous the first time we played Altamonte," Hampton said. "They sent a team to the World Series last year. But I was pretty confident this time."

Altamonte manager Mike Morro was the first to agree. "That pitcher (Hampton) was really tough tonight," Morro said. "He's the first one that shut us out. Crystal River definitely earned it."

As has been the case throughout the tournament, Altamonte's line defensive alignment kept Crystal River from breaking on top in the early going. Chuck Lamb, pitching with just one day's rest, set Crystal River down quietly in the top of the first and Hampton retired Altamonte in order in the bottom half.

In the top of the second, Ray Perry ripped a shot that looked to be the first hit of the game. But Altamonte shortstop Eddie Howard gobbled up the grounder behind second base and gunned to Jeff Jackson at first for the first out. Lamb then struck out Roach on three pitches and got Wade Hampton on a soft liner to Howard.

Mike Hampton continued to battle Altamonte's hitters in the bottom of the second as both Terry Brown and Jared Soto grounded to the right side and Hampton struck out Chris "Bulldog" Jackson.

Two defensive gems turned Crystal River away in the third. Jessie Thomas smacked a grounder to third baseman Steve "Squaky" Sheiman who uncorked a low throw to first. Jeff Jackson, however, dug out the low throw and stretched for all he was worth to stay on the bag.

With two outs, Todd Waldhauser reached on a rare error by Howard, which Morro said may have been his only one of the tournament. Waldhauser took second on a wild pitch and Mike Hampton followed with a hard shot toward right field. Second baseman T.J. Gluftrida niftily picked it up on the short hop, though, and threw to Jackson to nab Hampton for the third out.

After giving up a one-out walk in the bottom of the third, Hampton got Gluftrida on a liner to first for the third out.

The first of two big blows for Crystal River came in the fourth. With two outs, and Perry on first, Roach launched an 0-1 fastball over the fence in right center for a 2-0 lead.

Altamonte got its first hit of the game in the bottom of the fourth when Lamb singled up the middle with one out. But he was forced at second on Brown's grounder for the second out and Hampton struck out Soto to end the inning.

Crystal River picked up a pair of insurance runs in the top of the fifth, again on a clutch two-out hit. Lamb struck out the first two hitters of the inning but Waldhauser kept the inning alive with a single to right. Mike Hampton then worked the count to 3-2 and took a curveball low for ball four.

Both runners advanced on a pitch that bounced in front of the plate and Balmer then ripped a 2-2 pitch into left field for a two-run single and a 4-0 Crystal River lead.

Altamonte had its best threat in the bottom of the fifth when, with two outs, Sheiman singled to right and Jeff Jackson beat out an infield hit. A wild pitch moved the runners to second and third but Hampton reached back and struck out.

See ALTAMONTE, Page 8A

Jeff Jackson turned in a stellar defensive play at first base and collected an infield hit but the Altamonte Americans still lost to Crystal River Thursday and were eliminated from post-season tournament play.

Livernois Leads 11-1 Thrashing Of W. Seminole

By Rob Laris
Special to the Herald

FOREST CITY — Seminole manager Gene Oliver was confident his club could bounce back. It had suffered a heartbreaking defeat the night before, 4-3, on a home run. He figured, though his players wouldn't stay down too long. Oliver had seen them rally back before.

Thursday night at Richard Colley Field in the Bronco State Tournament, Seminole showed no signs of the loss, and Oliver's hopes were realized in the form of 11-1 thrashing of tournament host West Seminole.

The win puts Seminole into the semifinals of the Pony Baseball State Bronco Tournament and eliminates West Seminole, which was defeated Wednesday 14-0, by Town & Country.

Seminole plays Lake Worth, a 3-0 loser to Town & Country in Thursday's second game, tonight at 6. A win there advances Seminole to the 8 p.m. game with T & C. Seminole would have to beat the powerful Tampa club tonight and Saturday morning to earn a trip to the Southern Regional Tournament in Marietta, Ga., July 29.

Seminole used a 14-hit attack to make things easy on itself. The game was stopped in the bottom of the sixth inning when Seminole came up with two runs to invoke the 10-run slaughter rule.

Benefiting from the offensive explosion were starter and winner Kevin Twiggs, who allowed no hits in his three frames of work, and left Livernois West Seminole starter Fred Tucker encountered a shaky first inning and never recovered. He went three and two thirds, allowing six runs on 10 hits, before giving way to Jason Froemming.

"I knew they could do it. I felt confident they could come back," said Oliver about his 11- and 12-year-old performers. "They're that type of team."

Livernois, cut in the mold of older brother Derek who starred for Lyman High School and signed recently with the Boston Red Sox organization, led off the first inning with a sharp single to deep right field. He stole second and a Twiggs single put runners on second and third. Jon Eltonhead followed with another single to score Livernois. Then Jamie Mooney ripped a double, bringing home Twiggs and Eltonhead for

Criser: Gators Will Remain In SEC

Colleges

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — Approximately two months after threatening to pull the University of Florida out of the Southeastern Conference, Florida President Marshall Criser has backed off and says the Gators will remain in the SEC.

Criser announced Thursday he was dropping a study of what effect a pullout from the SEC would have.

"I have determined that the time and effort required for careful analysis and action are not now available and the conclusions of such a study, if change were indicated, would probably be suspect regardless of its stated rationale," Criser said in a prepared statement. "Furthermore, existing contractual relationships make any abrupt change impossible."

The Gators were placed on two years probation by the NCAA on Jan. 4 after being found guilty of 59 rules violations. The charges were announced during the fall of 1984 and led to Florida being banned from participating in the Sugar Bowl by the SEC.

In April, the SEC's executive committee voted to allow the Gators to keep the football title, but that vote was overruled in May by a 6-4 vote by the SEC presidents. The championship was left vacant.

It was after the Gators were stripped of the SEC title that Criser angrily announced the school would not recognize the vote by SEC presidents and would look into leaving the conference.

Last week, there were reports the Gators were talking to major independent football powers including Pittsburgh, Boston College, Penn State and Miami about forming a conference.

Criser said he based his decision to stay in the SEC on two factors. He said if the school did leave, it would appear that being stripped of the football championship was the sole reason. Secondly, it would give the appearance that university officials were concerned only with leaving the SEC and not with the other day-to-day problems confronting the university.

"I am terminating any formal study of this time," Criser said. "We will continue to work within the SEC where, as previously stated, we will attempt to be a constructive force."

In addition, within the SEC and the NCAA, we will align ourselves with other universities that seek the successful completion of the reforms instituted by the NCAA in convention in late June," he said.

"Specifically, we will advocate minimum standards to restore academic integrity."

Selmon Goes On Reserve — Marino Holds Out

Football

TAMPA (UPI) — Defensive end Lee Roy Selmon, a six-time all-pro performer, will miss at least the first six games of the regular season because of a herniated disc in his lower back.

Tampa Bay Buccaneer Coach Leeman Bennett placed Selmon on injured reserve Thursday and the soonest he can begin practicing with the Bucs is Oct. 15.

The loss of Selmon further strains the defensive line situation for Bennett in his first year at the helm of the NFC Central Division club.

Selmon was seldom blocked by just one man and frequently, three players were needed to hold him off from his right end position. Tampa Bay selected University of Washington defensive end Ron Holmes with its No. 1 pick and Bennett expected Holmes to take some of the heat off Selmon.

But Holmes still is unsigned and not in camp, and his agent said he and the Bucs are far apart on money.

Selmon, 30, first experienced some back pain after the Pro Bowl in January, his sixth straight appearance in the game which features the NFL's top players. The problem flared up again in the spring mini-camp, but Selmon thought the injury was muscular.

The 6-foot-3, 250-pound former Oklahoma All-America was examined by doctors in Tampa, Oklahoma City and Los Angeles and tests revealed a herniated disc in the lower back.

Selmon held a news conference last Friday to discuss his options and said he would announce his decision last Tuesday. But he called off that news conference, saying he was still deliberating.

"We are in the process of diagnosing my back problem and after that I'll be able to decide what's best for me," Selmon said at the first news conference. "I've been told the problem wouldn't go away if I played football and surgery has been mentioned."

After winning both the Outland and Lombardi Awards, symbolic of college football's premier lineman, Selmon was the first pick in the 1976 draft — Tampa Bay's first year in the NFL. He was named NFC Defensive Player of the Year in 1979, leading the Buccaneers to a berth in the conference title game.

OFFER IS UNACCEPTABLE

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins' star quarterback Dan Marino walked out of training camp Thursday because of what he called an unacceptable offer from Joe Robbie in the renegotiation of his contract.

Marino, who reported to training camp Monday, was present for a weigh-in Thursday, but left to join a negotiating session between his agent, Marvin Demoff, and Dolphin representative Charley Winner.

After Basic Good Cultural Care Orchids Need Dividing, Repotting

Orchids are one of the most spectacular plants you can grow in your home, greenhouse, or in your landscape. Last week you found out how easy orchids are to care for and will usually do well with the basics of good cultural care. But, when they reach a certain point in their growth, they need to be divided and repotted.

To keep orchids growing well, most need periodic division and repotting. Depending on variety, there are many ways to do this. For the sake of clarity, I'll mention one kind — the Cattleya — which is the most popular orchid grown in Florida.

When a mature Cattleya has grown over the rim of its pot, then it is time to divide it. Timing for this procedure is not critical — do it when you have the opportunity. Begin by separating the plant from the pot, being careful not to damage the roots.

Now, inspect the plant closely. You'll see a number of enlarged bulb-like formations on the stem. These are known as pseudobulbs. And, it's from these pseudobulbs that new plants will grow. Several new plants can be started from one mature Cattleya. Use a clean, sharp knife, make clean cuts, leaving three or four pseudobulbs in each division. Place the divided sections on a clean surface, being careful not to let the cut surface come in contact with the old potting medium. To be sure, it's a good idea to dip the divisions in a solution of fungicide, such as Captan. Then, rinse them with clean water, and dry them off. Cut off any diseased or damaged roots — those which are brown or black. The healthy roots you'll want to save are white and firm.

Use only sterilized containers for potting the orchid sections. Best to use a special orchid pot — one made of clay with slits down the sides. Always begin with brand new potting medium. Fill the container. Then, place the divided section against one side of the pot, with its growing eye pointed towards the center. Pack the potting medium around the roots. The orchid should actually sit right down on top of the medium. But, its roots should be securely held in place by the potting medium.

The final step is to stake the plant securely to hold it in place while the new roots are forming. You can purchase orchid stakes at your favorite garden supply shop or make your own with firm wire rods and twist ties. That's all there is to it! Soon, you'll have a number of healthy new orchids for your collection.

Last week, as I mentioned, most orchids need a warm, moist environment. But, such conditions are just perfect for disease development. Frequent inspections and fast action are vital.

One of the most common orchid ailments is Black Rot, or seedling damping off caused by a fungus known as Pythium. This problem starts as small, water-soaked black spots. For light infections, carefully remove and destroy the affected parts. For a severe infection, you may have to dip the plant in a special fungicide, available from your garden supply shop. Avoid overhead watering and make sure they're all getting good aeration.

Fungus leaf spots are fairly common on orchids. They may be yellow, light brown, or purple in color. There is a bacterial leaf spot, called Brown Leaf Spot, also. Most of these disease can be controlled by strict sanitation practices, keeping work benches clean, and disinfecting tools by washing them in a mild bleach solution. Also, make sure you're providing good ventilation, and avoid overhead watering.

Rusts often attack orchids. These appear as pustules of powdery yellow or orange spores on the undersides of the leaves. Cut off and destroy any infected foliage, and keep infected plants isolated from others that haven't been attacked. There is no approved anti-rust fungicide for orchids. Severe cases may require destruction of an entire plant.

Botrytis Petal Blight is a fungus that attacks orchid flowers. To guard against Botrytis, keep humidity as low as possible, and eliminate old flowers and plant debris. If petals become infected, spray with Benlate before the blooms open, and spray again in six to eight days.

Bacterial Soft Rot is another common orchid disease. It's often foul-smelling, starts as small, water-soaked areas on leaves. The only remedy is to cut off and destroy infected parts. Keep knives and tools sterilized with a flame, and disinfect them with a bleach solution before other use.

Since orchids are subject to a number of disease you should inspect your plants often and take prompt action if trouble is seen. Don't let these problems discourage you from growing orchids — the blooms are well worth the effort.

If The BUNs Rise, There May Be Kidney Trouble

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — What does BUN mean? My BUN was tested as 15.3, but I don't know what this means. I hoped that my doctor would let me know if this were a problem, but he hasn't.

DEAR READER — BUN is an abbreviation for blood urea nitrogen. Yours is normal.

Urea is a natural byproduct of the body's protein metabolism. It is carried in the bloodstream to the kidneys, which excrete it in the urine. Therefore, in a person who is using proper amounts of protein, measurement of the blood urea indicates, in a general way, whether the kidneys are functioning efficiently. A rising BUN usually means kidney malfunction. It is a relatively simple and useful test and is included in most routine screening analyses.

I hope your doctor lets you know what your medical tests mean. If he keeps the values secret, what use are they to you? After all, you paid for the tests so you are entitled to a report. The "don't call me, I'll call you" philosophy may be agonizing for you as for an entertainer, but it is also a dangerous practice when your health depends on a free flow of information.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A friend who had hepatitis was told he should never drink alcohol again. Is this true for anyone who's had the disease, or is this unusual? What is the connection?

DEAR READER — The hepatitis virus poisons the liver. Alcohol also poisons the liver. Therefore, patients who have or are recovering from hepatitis must avoid alcohol, otherwise, healing may be delayed or prevented. I'm not clear why your friend's doctor prohibited him from ever drinking again. That seems a little extreme unless your friend's liver was seriously and irrevocably damaged by hepatitis. Interestingly, people who have had hepatitis may not choose to consume alcohol for many months; the stuff just doesn't taste right. Ordinarily, moderate drinking is permissible once the liver has returned to normal.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I want to have a flat stomach so I try to do situps, but they make my back ache. Am I doing something wrong? What exercise can I do instead?

DEAR READER — If you are doing situps with straight legs, you are a candidate for continuing back problems. When done with knees extended, the exercise puts abnormal stresses on the lower back. First, don't do situps until your pain goes away. Then begin again, but this time flex your knees to about 90 degrees. That modification should do the trick. However, if you continue to have back pain, stop doing situps. Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

South had such a strong hand that he made an artificial jump shift to three clubs after North had made a one-spade response. The jump shift showed 19 or more points and was forcing to game.

When North raised to four clubs, South was impelled into slam. Not that he minded. After all, if the diamond finesse wasn't working, maybe the heart finesse would be successful. And that's what happened.

Declarer won the club ace, played a spade to the king and took a finesse in diamonds. West won the king and continued clubs. Declarer drew trumps, got to dummy with a spade, and took the heart finesse. When that held, he claimed the rest of the tricks.

The West player probably still doesn't know that he almost surely could have set the slam. All he had to do was pull a wrong card. That is, factious, but do you see the trap that a shrewd West can set for declarer?

Go back to trick three, when South played a diamond to the queen. Just let West casually play low. Which of us, as South, would not now return to dummy and play another diamond? After all, surely the diamond king is with East.

Remember the concept. When declarer has a very strong hand and very few entries in dummy, don't be in a hurry to take your sure trump trick on the first lead of the suit. Maybe you can persuade the declarer to waste his only remaining entry to take what you know to be a losing finesse.

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY JULY 27, 1985

The course you elect to steer in the coming year may be a trifle difficult, but it will be the right one. When you attain victory — and you will — you'll have full pride of achievement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In your social involvements today you may have to spend a bit more than you anticipated. Do it with a smile so you won't look stingy in front of friends. Major changes are ahead for Leos in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something in which you're presently involved may appear to have only a dark side. Your analogy is wrong because it is going to suddenly turn for the better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you switch tactics today and take an "I don't care" approach, something potentially profitable may slip through your fingers. Be both conscientious and consistent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something good is going to develop through someone presently indebted to you. However, you may not get the payment he or she owes you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Chances for achieving your immediate goals will lessen today if you narrow your outlook. Broaden your perspective and be hopeful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't jump to conclusions today until all of the facts are in and assessed. The picture you get from your initial perceptions may be erroneous.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Results will be better today if you rely more upon yourself and less upon others. You'll perform better on your own and also will be luckier.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Success will not be denied you today, provided you have staying power. Don't toss in the towel just because the going gets tough.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're going to be getting some assistance for that tough task you've been trying to do. Be patient and wait until the expert arrives.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Everything should go off smoothly today if you deal with people in whom you have complete trust. Don't let questionable entities replace proven producers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In arrangements today where compromises are required don't hold out for a one-sided deal. Be prepared to give as much as you expect.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your work will be much easier today if you concentrate on the rewards you hope to derive rather than the muscle and sweat it takes to get the job done.

Getting In The Swim

The modern girl is triumphant. She can wear anything she wants to wear, but if she is wise, she will be careful not to let her freedom go to her head. After all, a bathing suit tells a more honest story than any other form of dress...

—Vogue magazine, 1920

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

In olden days they even wore stockings, but today, anything, including nothing, goes for swimwear. "Oh, honey, it would be shocking" for the modest swimmers of yesterday to trek over to Brevard's nudist haven where until recently bathers basked in the buff, 82-year-old Lee VanLandingham said.

Even a trip to any Sanford lakeshore, riverside or family pool would send waves of shame over a modest turn of the century bathing beauty who would certainly shy away from today's string bikinis and scantily cut suits.

Mrs. VanLandingham, of Sanford, said she's not one to judge or criticize, but admits the old-time swimwear, including the fashionable one-piece suits she wore as a model in the 1930s, were more in line with her personal tastes.

She can barely remember the bloomed, sailor-style suit her mother made for her outings on Miami Beach in 1910.

As an 8-year-old mermaid, Mrs. VanLandingham would take a dip in her weighty wool suit, complete with sleeves, and a ruffled edged, fabric cap.

"You didn't sit around in a wet suit," Mrs. VanLandingham said. It could take days to dry. You sloshed into the public, beachside dressing room and slipped back into your dress.

The seashore or poolside was the only place to be seen in bathing dress, Mrs. VanLandingham said, so suits were donned only at the shore.

Eight years later, Mrs. VanLanding, now 16, had discarded her bloomer suit, although other fashionably dressed swimmers were still sporting them. She took to the water in a more streamlined, black, one-piece slip-on tank suit, but was still modestly dressed with stockings rolled above her knees and a rubber bathing cap, she said.

By 1934, styles had progressed and Mrs. VanLandingham was tapped by Eastman Kodak to model a sleek, one-piece aqua blue swimsuit. This brief style was topped off with a coral colored tam.

"Everything was very proper," she said. "My mother didn't mind at all. I sat on the beach in front of a good hotel.

"Girls were plumper then," said Mrs. VanLandingham, who at the time was 5-foot-5 and weighed about 120. In that Depression era she was paid $5 per hour to pose and $10 for each picture that was published. Not bad for a day at the beach, she said.

But Mrs. VanLandingham said she would be at a loss for what to wear to the shore today, because "I've always been very old fashioned."

She wouldn't be comfortable in the old, old fashioned get-ups either and would surely be an oddity in the bathing dress of the late 19th Century when women first took to the beach en masse and began actually swimming instead of just wetting their shoe-clad toes.

Until women began taking swimming seriously in the late 1920s, the fairer sex out for a romp at the beach were even more heavily dressed than Mrs. VanLandingham was on her girlhood outings.

The bare necessities included a pair of drawers, a long-skirted and long-sleeved dress, a small cap, plus a pair of cotton gloves, an oil cap, a straw hat and gum overshoes to guard tender feet.

That was the stylish advice offered in an 1856 issue of Peterson's Magazine, but the modest publication failed to mention the corset usually worn under the ensemble — all of which turned the bather into a human anchor if she dared to become waterlogged.

In America's youth, long before women began wading the shores, men swam nude and women stayed away from the old swimming hole, according to Claudia Kidwell of the Smithsonian Institution.

In colonial days women might privately and modestly immerse themselves in water, but men and women swam separately, with women wearing long loose gowns.

Mixed bathing at public beaches came on the scene in the 19th Century as improved transportation brought more people to the shores.

That, in turn, dictated that men dress for the occasion and the ladies dressed in bulky garb to maintain the modest standards of the day, Ms. Kidwell said.

During the early days of the 20th Century, the keepers of public morals began measuring the length of women's beach bloomers, which could not be shorter than four inches above the knee. There could be no "all-white or flesh-colored suits" and no suits that exposed "the chest lower than a line drawn at a level with the arm pits."

Such prudishness preceded the flapper era when women began to dare greater exposure at the shore. Prior

In this 1922 photograph, beach cop Bill Norton is enforcing the law: the superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds had issued an order that bathing suits at the Washington, D.C. beach must not be more than four inches above the knee. It was a tough job, but somebody had to do it.

'Body Language' Is Peppy But Is That Really Enough?

By David Handler
 Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Can you explain to me why we watch game shows?

Is it to see those witty celebrity contestants? Certainly that was the appeal of "Hollywood Squares."

Or is it to see regular people make total fools of themselves? Certainly that was the lure of "Let's Make a Deal" and "The Gong Show."

Or is it to see regular people triumph? Certainly that's behind the success of "Family Feud" and "Wheel of Fortune," the two most popular game shows of the past few years, which offer no celebrity guests and treat their contestants with unflinching courtesy.

Watching a show like "Body Language" on CBS makes me wonder about this, I mean, this is a cheerful enough show, but I don't get why anybody would want to watch it. Of course, I'm not a big fan of the game Charades, so maybe that's my problem.

"Body Language" calls itself "a game for the uninhibited."

False advertising this isn't. The contestants are unfailingly peppy and outgoing. This is no game for wallflowers, sufferers of iron-poor blood or devotees of Emily Dickinson. But is that enough to make it worthwhile?

There are two contestants. Each is paired with a celebrity guest like Roger E. Mosley of "Magnum, P.I." or Shelley Smith of, gee, who can remember? Recently, they had Teen Month. Teen contestants got to be teamed with youthful idols like Malcolm Jamal Warner of "The Cosby Show" and Jason Bateman of "It's Your Move."

One member of the team tries to act out a series of words for the other — clown, Chicken McNuggets, surfboard, Quarter-pounder, shoes. The words fit into a word puzzle, which they then try to solve. The day's winner gets a shot at 10 grand.

A flair for Charades is a big help here, but not a must. "There is no logic to this game," said an exasperated Mosley at one point. "It's all luck and prayer."

Our host is Tom Kennedy, the polished veteran. Watching him, I realized how hard it really is to be a good game-show host. He had to show genuine interest in Shelley's boots. "They really are beautiful," he exclaimed. He had to behave kindly during Teen Month to some unbelievably obnoxious fat kid who's in the movie "Goonies."

Plus, he has to act like it's a tough, dramatic battle being waged. "That was good," he told one contestant. Then he added with utter conviction, "I would never have guessed you'd have gotten Chicken McNuggets."

Face it, not just anybody can do his job.

Like I said, I'm not sure why people watch a game show like "Body Language." The only thing I'm sure of is if they weren't giving money away, nobody would.

NBC's All-Star Coverage Led Week's Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The All-Star game was the top-rated show on network television last week, leading NBC to its ninth consecutive week as leader in the off-season ratings race.

Prime time averages for the week ending July 21, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., saw NBC win with a 13.1 rating and a 24.9 share. CBS came in second with a 12.3 rating and 23.2 share. In third was ABC with a 10.6 rating and 20.1 share.

The three-hour broadcast of the All-Star baseball game last Tuesday ranked No. 1 among the week's most-watched shows, followed by the "Miss Universe Pageant" on CBS and "The Bill Cosby Show" on NBC.

NBC had four other shows in the Top 10: "Facts of Life," "Family Ties," "Miami Vice" and the "All-Star Pre-Game Show."

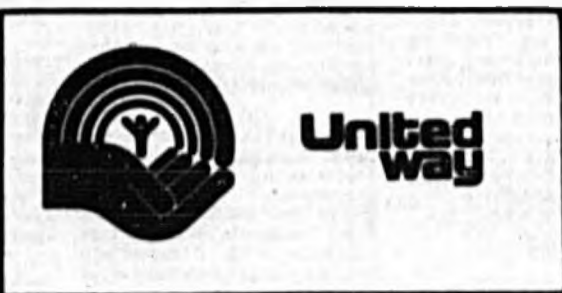

In addition to the beauty pageant, CBS scored with "Crazy Like a Fox," "Simon & Simon" and "60 Minutes" in the Top 10.

"20-20" again was ABC's only entry among the top-rated shows, coming in at No. 9.

"CBS Evening News with Dan Rather" was the No. 1 news show for the week, with a 10.8 rating and a 23 share. ABC's "World News Tonight" was second with a 9.8 rating and 21 share. "NBC Nightly News with Tom Brokaw" pre-empted in some areas on Tuesday night because of the All-Star game, was third with a 9.0 rating and a 20 share.

The top prime time shows for the week ending July 21, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. All-Star Game (NBC)
 2. Miss Universe Pageant (CBS)
 3. The Bill Cosby Show (NBC)
 4. Facts of Life (NBC)
 5. Family Ties (NBC)
 6. (tie) Crazy Like a Fox (CBS)
 7. Miami Vice (NBC)
 8. Simon & Simon (CBS)
 9. 20-20 (ABC)
 10. (tie) 60 Minutes (CBS)
- All-Star Pre-Game Show (NBC)

Celebrities Join Campaign To Locate Missing Children

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A group of rock stars and athletes will begin appearing on television commercials with pictures of missing children in an effort to help locate more than 1.5 million youngsters reported missing each year.

The television stations are not obligated to use the segments, but Taylor believes they will join in the movement to find the 1.5 million children reported missing every year in the United States.

The group, Athletes and Celebrities Together (ACT), will feature appearances by singer Jermaine Jackson, brother of Michael Jackson, Dodger second baseman Steve Sax, and former Olympic gymnast Cathy Rigby.

He said more than a dozen celebrities and sports figures have agreed to make the appearances and expects more will follow.

The personalities will take turns appearing in 30-second public service announcements with photographs of missing children and will ask viewers to telephone a toll-free number if they have clues, spokesman Toper Taylor said.

Lyle Alzado, Los Angeles Raiders defensive end, said he was glad to do the television spots.

Taylor said the first spot will be filmed by a video company in Los Angeles, Pro Video News Service, and led to its 650 subscriber television stations across the country on Wednesday.

"I know I can't go around the streets looking for missing kids — I wish I could — but I can make people aware of the problem," Alzado said.

"I think that anything will help at this point."

Viewers will be asked to telephone the Child Find Center in New York at 1-800-IAMLOST with any information on the missing children, and asked to send tax-free donations to the private non-profit agency.

Ryan O'Neal And The Beaver Never Met

Dear Dick — I recently saw Ryan O'Neal on a "Leave It to Beaver" rerun. Could this have been his first part on TV? And what year was this show? — M.R.B., Pasadena, Texas.

O'Neal says that while he was on a "Dobie Gillis" and a "Bachelor Father" as a teen-age actor, he does not remember being on a "Beaver." His first TV work was as a stand-in and stunt youth and bit player on a German series, "Tales of the Vikings," when he was living in Germany with his parents. "Beaver" ran from 1957 to 1963.

Dear Dick — I would like to know the name of the woman who played on "Dynasty" about a year ago. She played the butler's daughter, who came from Paris. Is she the same person who played on "Lost In Space" as the daughter, and "The Chisolms," as the daughter who got pregnant by their guide to the West? — H.B., Killeen, Texas.

We have four different young ladies playing those three different parts. Angela Cartwright was the daughter on "Lost In Space" and both Stacey Nelkin and Delta Burke played that Chisolm daughter at various times. And Kathleen Beller was the butler's daughter on "Dynasty."

Dear Dick — Would you please settle an argument between me and my son. He says that on the video, "We Are the World," Dan Ackroyd is standing next to Harry Belafonte, on his right side, in the back row. I say he's not. Who's right? If I'm correct, who is he? — E.L., Reading, Pa.

Your son is right, although Ackroyd is actually standing on Harry's left side. But as you view it, he's on the right.

Dear Dick — Whatever happened to the movie, "Anne of the Thousand Days"? It's never shown on TV and it's not on video. I read somewhere that it will never be released. What happened? — S.N., Whittier, Calif.

That film, starring Richard Burton and Genevieve Bujold, was certainly released and was a big critical success. And it was listed in Leonard Maltin's book of "TV Movies," so it must have been shown on TV. I suspect that, if it hasn't been put on a video, that's because the video makers don't think it will have big sales.

Dear Dick — There's a 88 bet on this one! I say Bosley on "Charlie's Angels" was Peter Boyle and my friend insists it was Peter Doyle. Who pays who? — S.M.H., Houston, Texas.

You both pay me. It was David Doyle.

Dear Dick — I heard that "The Jeffersons" is leaving the air. Is this true? If so, why? Also, why was "Alice" eradicated earlier? — K.H., Rock Island, Ill.

Yes, "The Jeffersons" has not been renewed for next season. Seldom is a show dropped for any reason other than poor ratings. "Alice" had run a long time, and the ratings had slipped badly. The same thing holds true for "The Jeffersons." In the last ratings, it was 67th. And there are only 70 shows.

Dear Dick — A few years ago, I saw a movie starring Donald Sutherland and Gene Wilder. They played twins who were separated at birth. It was a comedy and the story line was similar to "The Corsican Brothers." I can't find it listed in any of my movie trivia books or TV movie books. Please help me find the title and year. — W. B., Bismarck, N.D.

That was "Start the Revolution Without Me," released in 1970.

Vietnam Veterans Group Pickets 'Rambo'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A group of Vietnam veterans picketed a theater showing Sylvester Stallone's box office smash "Rambo: First Blood II" because they said it presents "a twisted glorification of combat."

Half-a-dozen members of the Veterans Speakers Alliance appeared Wednesday carrying signs with messages such as "Rambo Opens Wounds That Were Healing" and "The Greatest Warriors Are The Ones Who Stand For Peace."

In the movie, Rambo single-handedly rescues American prisoners of war still held in Vietnam and kills hundreds of Vietnamese and Russians in the process.

"We feel it is promoting war in South America like John Wayne movies got us ready to go to Vietnam," said Jim Hendrickson, who lost his right arm in a rocket blast.

"The veterans want people who feel they must see the film to do so with the knowledge 'Rambo' does not represent real Vietnam veterans and that the film presents a twisted glorification of combat that in no way imparts to the viewer any idea of what the real horror and tragedy of war are like," organizer Eduardo Cohen said.

Cohen said other veterans organizations have voiced support for their protest.

"We plan to ask Sylvester Stallone to refrain from being a spokesperson for Vietnam vets," Cohen said.

"If he's really concerned, why isn't some of the money self-help programs for the veterans?" Hendrickson asked.

Judge Cans Suit Against Comedian

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When comic Robin Williams ripped into Rege brand wines during a videotaped comedy performance, the owner of Rege Cellars wasn't laughing.

Instead, he sued, but a state court of appeal dismissed the suit Wednesday, saying that "figments of a comic's imagination" are protected by the First Amendment.

David Rege accused Williams, Polygram Records Inc. Home Box Office and other firms of defamation and "trade libel" through a joke in which Williams spoofed wine snobbery by suggesting Rege wine was a black wine "tough enough" to be advertised by football player "Mean Joe Green."

According to Appeal Court Judge J. Anthony Kline, the basis for Rege's suit was that "Williams joke associates Rege brand wines with blacks, allegedly a socio-economic group of persons commonly considered to be the antithesis of wine connoisseurs."

Kline called Rege's argument "completely untenable"

"Rege's contention that the joke disparaged his wine products by associating them with blacks is repugnant to values embedded in our Constitution and must be resoundingly rejected," Kline wrote for the three-judge panel.

The comic's thoughts "are obvious figments of a comic imagination, impossible for any sensible person to take seriously," Kline wrote.

Kline said to rule otherwise would "chill the free speech rights of all comedy performers and humorists, to the genuine detriment of our society."

to public acceptance of this flashing of female flesh, some daring damsels were hauled from the beach in paddy wagons, Ms. Kidwell said.

By the late 1920s as women became more involved in the sport of swimming, their swimwear began to mimic the chest-covering tank styles favored by men. Women became more liberated in the water as well as out and their new freedom was reflected in scantier beach attire.

By the 30s men had discarded their bathing shirts and soon women began showing more skin than swimsuit as well.

1964 brought topless bathing and the bikini shrunk to practically nothing. Lots Dyeus, a Sanford fashion shop owner, said Sanford residents shied away from topless suits, but are stepping unabashedly into today's revealing swimwear, which in some cases is little more than strategically placed strings.

And some self-confident bathers have even reverted back to the days of skinny-dipping, she said, with trips to what was until a recent sheriff's crackdown Brevard County's nudist haven, Playalinda Beach.

A real shock for the likes of Mrs. VanLandingham, with memories of a more modest day.
