Flagship Leads In Helping Employees Care For Tots

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

What should parents do with the kids while they're at work?
And how can they pay for child care?

Child care and its cost constitutes a growing problem today particularly for single working parents.

But Flagship Bank of Seminole County has found a way to help ease the dilemma for its workers.

The bank began to subsidize part of the child care costs for its employees some 18 months ago, providing them with an additional fringe benefit while increasing morale, according to Janice Springfield, executive vice president and cashier who spearheaded the effort at her bank.

And she recommends the idea not only to other banks but to other businesses as well.

"I saw that most of the employees were women and most of them have children," Mrs. Springfield says of the three months of research she and bank personnel officer Kamiyn Campbell did before presenting the plan to the Seminole bank's board of directors which gave it hearty approval.

Phoebe Carpenter, administrator of the Community Coordinated Child Care program (4C's) of Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties, provided technical assistance and expertise during the planning stage.

The program, called "Flagship Bank of Seminole Child Care Assurance Plan", began Jan. 1, 1982.

"Child care costs are expensive for an employee and we looked at what could be developed to help them," Mrs. Springfield said.

Under the program, the bank reimburses full-time employees for 20 percent of weekly child care costs at established day care centers and 10 percent for part-time employees. The bank does not reimburse employees for home care and doesn't differentiate between bank officers and other employees.

"In the beginning, we were trying to get the children into 4C approved facilities. While we found facilities of that type all over the county, we also found that some of the bank's branches which are also all over the county might not be near one," she said.

The state-funded 4C program contracts for child care services with nurseries and day care centers for single, working parents and has standards higher than those required by either the state or federal governments.

When the program began 18 months ago, 22 Flagship employees were eligible. A requirement for participation is that the child be under 12 years of age. Currently, there are 12 employees with 14 children involved and the annual cost to the bank is about $6,000.

Mrs. Springfield said. During the program's first year, more children were involved and the annual cost was about $12,000, she said.

Mrs. Springfield said the child care fringe benefit is tax deductible for the sponsoring business. "It is still a cost, but it is a wonderful thing to give people," she said.

A statement outlining the bank's purpose in subsidizing its employees' child care costs states: "It is our belief that parents' concern for the welfare and safety of their children is of paramount importance. We understand that parents that leave children with others, in order to fulfill their obligations to our bank, must be comfortable in the knowledge that the care provided their children during the work day is satisfactory to both child and parent, and that the activities in which the child engages during the day will be beneficial to the child's mental and physical growth and development."

As a result of the program, the bank's goal was "to see reduced absenteeism, lower turnover and ease in recruiting top quality workers, as well as increased employee morale among current employees."

"We've accomplished that and I wish more companies would go into child care programs," Mrs. Springfield said.

"Flagship of Seminole was the first bank in the state and the first in the nation to offer a program of this kind," she said.

SCC Road Job Vetoed

Seminole County Engineer Bill Bush said a week ago he would not celebrate the legislative approval of funding to improve the major entrance road to Seminole Community College until the governor signed the bill.

Gov. Bob Graham vetoed legislation that would have provided $250,000 in new funding to be combined with $225,000 approved earlier to four lane East Road from U.S. Highway 17-92 to Main Road on the college campus, to modify the road's intersection with the federal highway and to provide a traffic signal at the intersection.

A furious state Rep. Carl Selph, who sponsored legislation on the appropriation, said Friday that Graham is saying he vetoed the legislation because the project was not approved by the state Department of Transportation.

"I just don't believe that," said Selph, R-Casselberry. Saying the major reason for the improvements is for safety, Selph said someone is going to be seriously injured at the intersection of U.S. 17-92 and East Road and "I hope the governor can handle that."

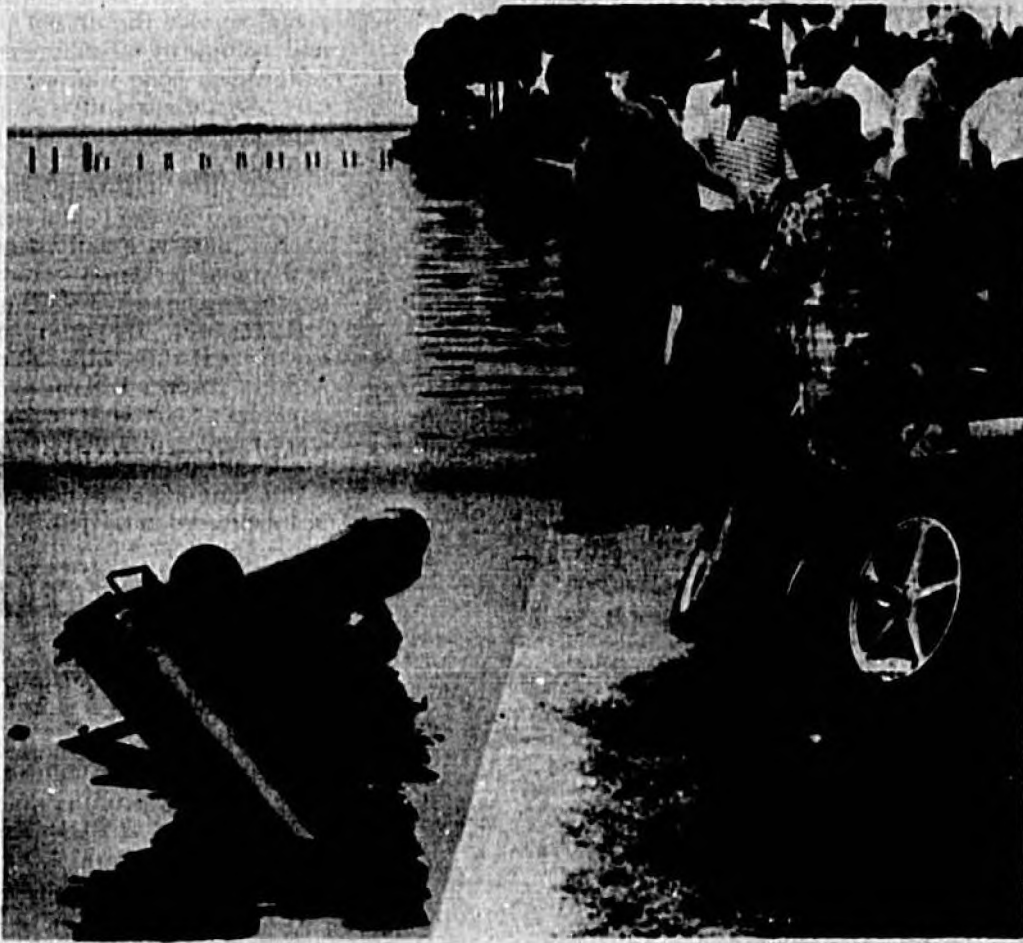

Selph said he will confer with legislative colleagues about the possibilities of a veto override. If that's not possible, he said, he will bring the funding up again next year.

Last week with the announcement that the additional $250,000 in funding for the road had been approved by both houses of the Florida Legislature, Bush said he was excited about the appropriation, but that past experience told him not to celebrate until the bill was approved by the governor.

Bush had earlier encouraged the legislative delegation to work toward providing the balance of funding for the improvement. Former state Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, was successful several years ago in gaining $225,000 for the road. Bush said at the time that much of the engineering and planning for the road was being done without additional charge by the state DOT.

Bush said he had only recently discussed with DOT officials the possibility of going forward with right-of-way acquisition with the earlier approved funds.

"Our first priority is to acquire the right-of-way to protect it from development. Once we nail down the right-of-way and if the new appropriation is for real and doesn't get knocked out, we should be able to substantially complete the job," the county engineer said. — Donna Estes.

Sanford Parks Department employee Larry White was treated for scratches and bruises at Central Florida Regional Hospital Friday and released after the tractor mower he was operating along the seawall hit a washout hole and flipped over into Lake Monroe across from the playground in Fort Mellon Park. Wetter and wiser, White said he plans to be back on the job Tuesday.

Oviedo Man Drowns

An 18-year-old Oviedo man drowned Friday as he attempted to swim across a drainage pond at the Heathrow subdivision construction site in Lake Mary.

Efforts by Seminole County Fire Department rescue personnel to resuscitate Cornell Michael Gould, 18, of Wilson Street, Oviedo, at the scene proved futile.

The 10 a.m. swim was apparently an effort by workers at the site to cool off, witnesses said. Gould, a sodasayer, was last seen going down in the middle of the small pond on the northeast corner of the site at Interstate 4 and Lake Mary Boulevard. Seminole fire department units responded to the scene with divers and a boat. They recovered Gould's body at approximately 11 a.m.

Education

3 Area Senators Satisfied With School-Aid Funding, To Attempt Veto Override

By Donna Estes

(First of two parts)

Gov. Bob Graham is not the most popular official in the state with Seminole County's three state senators.

And the governor's popularity with them — Richard Langley, John Vogt and Toni Jennings — hasn't been enhanced by his "pep rallies," as Vogt calls them, around the state selling the idea that the Legislature didn't do anything for education during the recent session.

"The governor is grossly underselling what we did in the budget," said Langley, a Clermont Republican.

"We increased funds for education by more than 9 percent above last year," Langley said with $111 million just for teacher raises and to increase the per student funding to school districts when the inflation factor was only 3 percent."

Langley said that at the same time what the Legislature did for education was more meaningful than last year.

"We got some meaningful education reform, requiring more credits for high school graduation, higher requirements for English, math and science," the senator said.

He added if more money were poured into education as the governor proposes, the programs called for in the education legislation could not be funded with that money because they are not ready to go.

"If we did what Graham wants, it would only result in paying teachers more, not good teachers, but all teachers," he said.

"The whole plan would get lost in Graham's quest for a higher quartile," Langley said.

Vogt of Cocoa Beach, the only Democrat on the Seminole Legislative delegation, also believes the Legislature did "fairly well by education, considering everything."

"There's enough money to give school teachers a modest pay raise, while there is no money in the budget for raises for any state employees," Vogt said.

"I view the whole thing as a political scenario where the governor is out on a limb and can't get back in. He pledged a veto and had to give it," Vogt said.

In Graham's talks during the past week around the state, Vogt said his audiences were comprised largely of teachers. "Strangely, teachers were not talking to us (legislators) during the conference in Tallahassee. The teachers were afraid of merit pay and kept a low profile to see what happened. Now when the Legislature has come out with a study on merit pay, we'll probably see a full fledged lobbying effort," Vogt said.

"The education lobby has been laying very low and has not come forward to tell its story. Now the education lobby and teachers have shown up at all of Graham's pep rallies," Vogt said.

Langley went so far as to say that while the Legislature was trying to represent the people, the taxpayers, Graham, with no real plan on education, is representing the school teachers.

Vogt agrees that Graham has no education program except to throw money at it.

Vogt said about three weeks ago he studied a list of comparative dollars for education by states and found that some of the northern industrial states are down on the list too.

State Tax Base Estimate Off

Shortfall Or Windfall For Schools

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

A budget shortfall of $401,000 is predicted for Seminole County schools because of high state estimates of taxable property in Seminole County.

State Rep. Carl Selph, R-Casselberry, said the state estimate of taxable property in the county was about $260 million higher than the actual amount of taxable property.

But Selph said a state funding package which will be discussed when the Legislature reconvenes could turn that shortfall into a windfall for Seminole County's schools.

State officials estimated the county's taxable property at $3.86 billion. But according to Property Appraiser Bill Suber, the official figure he will send to state officials on Tuesday is "rounded off" at $3.6 billion.

While Seminole County schools have been operating under the assumption of a temporary 1983-84 budget at the same level as the 1982-83 budget, the difference between the state's estimate and the actual figures could play havoc with the schools when a funding formula is finally approved by the state.

Assistant Superintendent for Business and Finance Roger Harris said the state Department of Education uses the state projections as a budget tool to determine how much the schools will receive in state funds. He said the state provides 69 percent of county school funding. Local taxes make up another 23 percent with the remainder coming from the federal government and other sources.

Harris estimated the shortfall at about $300,000 and said the district would be hard pressed to come up with the money from other sources. Because of caps on the tax rate, the school board cannot raise the rate enough to recover the full amount.

But there's hope for the district's funding problems according to Selph. The freshman legislator said Gov. Bob Graham has proposed a change in the funding formula which could bring the district as much as $2 million without raising taxes.

Selph said the windfall would benefit Seminole and other districts which are levying the maximum $1.60 per $1,000 assessed valuation in discretionary tax.

Selph, a certified public accountant, said the plan would require "property rich" counties such as Dade, Broward and Pinellas to levy the discretionary tax.

The plan would generate an additional $70 million for the state, which would then distribute the funds to all 67 counties.

The net result of the program would be a $2 million increase in state funds for Seminole County schools without a tax increase, Selph said.

IN BRIEF

Casey's Resignation Over Carter 'Book' Case Sought

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., has called for the resignation of CIA Director William Casey for his alleged involvement in helping President Reagan's 1980 campaign obtain briefing materials prepared for President Carter.

"I have consistently doubted the integrity of Bill Casey," DeConcini, an old critic of Casey, said at a news conference Friday.

James Baker, White House chief of staff, said that, to the best of his recollection, the Carter materials were given to him by Casey and turned over to the Reagan debate preparation team headed by David Gergen, now the White House communications director.

Casey, who served as Reagan's campaign manager, said he does not recall having seen the Carter staff documents that wound up in the files of Reagan campaign aides.

Chicago 7 Judge Dies

CHICAGO (UPI) — Acquaintances from both sides of the bench said they will miss Senior U.S. District Judge Julius Hoffman, the gritty jurist who presided over the raucous Chicago Seven trial of Vietnam war protesters.

Hoffman, a state and federal judge for more than 35 years who gained national attention when he ordered one of the eight original Chicago defendants bound and gagged, died Friday in his home. He was 87.

Hoffman, who had planned to officiate a wedding Friday afternoon, had not been ill and the cause of his death was not immediately known.

Anti-Race Bias Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has given minorities a potent weapon to fight racial discrimination in the future but, at the same time, has curbed their ability to be compensated for past bias.

In a key civil rights ruling Friday, the court split 5-4 to hold that people may use a major federal civil rights law to stop discrimination by local governments or other agencies receiving federal funds by proving they were victims of bias, not that it was intentional.

Proving a disputed practice had a discriminatory effect is enough to convince a judge to order the practice stopped and even to strip such groups of federal aid, the court said.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: A string of violent thunderstorms that rode 80-mph winds from Texas through the Midwest caused flooding and thousands of power outages and derailed an Amtrak train. Another round of the same today threatened Fourth of July weekend activities. The third worst flood in the history of Austin, Minn., chased dozens of families from their homes Friday night as the Cedar River swelled from an earlier 8-inch rainfall. Families in Rice and Carver counties dug out from wind storm. Tom Stueger said. "A full basement can make a big mess because it's not clean water. It's almost like raw sewage."

Residents of Hayfield, Minn., were isolated by floodwaters that washed over highways. In Arizona, prison inmates piled sandbags along the swollen Colorado River. The violent weather threatened to interrupt the weekend celebrations.

"We're in a fairly active pattern right now," said Rick Cundy, a meteorologist at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. The National Weather Service reported at least 19 tornadoes from Idaho to Pennsylvania. Golf ball-sized hail and high winds battered northeast Texas and a Georgia construction worker died when he was struck by lightning at a runway site at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta. Three others were slightly injured.

Without U.S. Aid: Reagan

Central America In Danger Of Falling To Communists

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — President Reagan says a "Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan war machine" is being built to impose communism on all of Central America, not just El Salvador.

He also charges that failure to get a military package through Congress for El Salvador "will leave the door open to more subversion."

Reagan made the remarks at a California Republican fund-raising dinner on a pier at Long Beach Harbor adjacent to Howard Hughes' massive "Spruce Goose," a wooden airplane weighing 400,000 pounds, the largest ever built.

Outside the dome, about 100 demonstrators shouted slogans against U.S. involvement in El Salvador and called for peace.

After gathering with fellow Republicans, the president flew to his mountain-top ranch near Santa Barbara for a long Fourth of July weekend of rest.

"The Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan war machine is not being built to make Central America safe for democracy," Reagan said. "It's not being built to pursue peace there or economic and social reform. It is being built to subvert the peace and impose communism by force, and not just in El Salvador or Nicaragua but by their own boasts — their open declarations — in all of Central America."

The speech contained some of his toughest rhetoric to date on the threat of communism in Central America. He was applauded several times by the partisan audience. Before he spoke, some in the crowd unfurled a large banner reading "Run, Ron, Run," a reference to the 1984 election.

The sharp admonition on aid to El Salvador, addressed to Congress, came just one week after a group of congressmen, most of them conservative supporters of his policy, advised Reagan to speak out more strongly and frequently on the need to support the U.S.-backed regime in San Salvador. Congress is set to resume work on the El Salvador aid request after the July Fourth recess.

It also followed a White House acknowledgment that late polls indicate slippage in public support for Reagan's policy of arming Salvadoran troops and anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, coupled with a larger package of economic assistance for allies in the region.

Reagan said he appreciated "the sincere motives" of those who point out the faults of Salvadoran government and insist on reform.

At the same time, "I just wonder why the news media so seldom reminds the public that we are giving almost twice as much economic aid as military aid."

"But I must come back to the main point: U.S. security, the safety of American citizens, that's why Central America matters so much. Either we pay a modest price now, so we can prevent a crisis; or we listen to the New Deal nothingness and risk an explosion; or violence that will bring real danger to our borders."

"We must not turn our back on our friends," he said. "We must not permit dictators to run communism down the throats of innocent people, one country after another. If we are to be successful in helping the forces of democracy, then we must have the full financial package we requested."

"If we do not get what we asked for," he added, "we can not do the job, and we will leave the door open to more subversion."

According to President Reagan, Nicaragua is part of an effort to impose communism on all of Central America, by force if necessary. The Soviet Union is helping by constructing new port facilities at San Juan del Sur. A new port at El Bluff is being developed with Bulgarian assistance.

Postal Rates To Stay Same Thanks To 9-Digit Zip Code

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The new nine-digit ZIP codes will increase the volume of mail the Postal Service will be able to handle without increasing postal rates, Postmaster General William Bolger said Friday — the 20th anniversary of the ZIP code.

On July 1, 1963, the Postal Service introduced ZIP codes, which gave the postal service the ability to increase its mail volume by 50 billion pieces a year.

The new code was promoted by "Mr ZIP" — the sprightly creature with big eyes and a mailbox dangling over his shoulder.

"Mr ZIP" has been placed in semi-retirement by the Postal Service, but the agency now is about to introduce four new digits for large volume mailers in another move to increase automation.

Bolger said, "By adding four new digits to the existing ZIP codes, electronic address readers will spray bar codes on envelopes, so that computer driven equipment can quickly sort mail for city blocks and even specific buildings."

The nine-digit ZIP code is expected to be introduced in the fall.

Bolger said the ZIP code already has had a beneficial effect on the Postal Service, saying in 1963 the service had about a $1 billion deficit.

At that time, he said, "about 25 percent of our income came from the taxpayers. Today, while we do pay 20 cents for a letter, there's no money going into the Postal Service from taxpayers' dollars."

Bolger said the nine-digit ZIP will be a price incentive for businesses, which generate about 8 percent of the mail.

He said when the nine-digit ZIP is in full service by 1986-87, the Postal Service will save about $600 million a year.

Asked if the new ZIP system will cost Americans more through increased postal rates, Bolger said, "No, sir. I don't think so at all. We've already purchased about one-third of our automated equipment. ... Our expenses will go up and of course at some point in time, but not in the foreseeable future, we'll be able to deploy our automative equipment without having to spend too much money."

3 Restaurant Employees Are Charged With Drugs

Late Friday Seminole County Drug Task Force agents contacted a dishwasher on duty at Molly Magee's Restaurant on South Park Avenue, Sanford, and asked if he could obtain any drugs.

According to sheriff's reports, the dishwasher said he could and returned a few minutes later with two hand-rolled marijuana cigarettes which agents purchased for $1. The agents then asked if he could obtain more marijuana and the dishwasher responded by introducing the agents to the bartender. After receiving $1 from the agents to set up a transaction, the bartender told the agents he could "take care of them."

The agents were introduced to the waiter.

Reports say the waiter took out a clear plastic bag filled with marijuana and sold it to the agents for $5.

At this point the dishwasher, bartender and waiter were all arrested and the money used to purchase the marijuana, which was marked, was seized.

Released from the Seminole County jail on $5,000 bond Saturday were Roy Anthony Lawson, 18, of 2910 W. Second St., a dishwasher; Robert William Fish, 102 Borada Road, a bartender; and Brian Kenneth Donnelly, 26, 111 Hidden Lake Dr., a waiter.

Lawson and Fish were charged with selling marijuana and conspiracy to sell a controlled substance. Donnelly was charged with the sale and possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Flagship Bank Robbery Suspect Arrested

An anonymous phone tip has led to the arrest of an Orlando man in connection with the October 1982 robbery of Flagship Bank, Hunt Club Boulevard, Forest City.

Ronald William Briggs, 18, was being held at the Seminole County Jail Saturday in lieu of $10,000 bond. He was arrested at his residence at 313 Pine Hills Road, Orlando at 5:25 p.m. Thursday and charged with bank robbery and grand theft.

On Oct. 28, 1982, a man entered the Flagship Bank and initiated a robbery by passing a note to a teller demanding all the money. No weapon was seen.

The teller gave out $4,214 in a garbage bag provided by the man.

On June 23 a phone tip was received which led deputies to charge Briggs, deputies said.

ARSON ARREST

A Sanford man was arrested on a charge of arson in connection with the Friday night burning of contents of 123 Alden Drive, Sanford.

Ralph Eugene Chappell of 123 Alden Drive was arrested at 9:26 p.m. Friday as he left a residence. Police reported Chappell was carrying a container of fluid which is commonly used to accelerate fires.

Chappell was being held at the Seminole County Jail Saturday in lieu of $10,000 bond.

McDOUGALL'S LAWYER STAYS

Seminole Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. has refused to allow accused murderer Donald Glenn McDougall's lawyer to withdraw from the case.

Altamonte Springs attorney Leon Cheek had asked to be taken off the case because a prosecution witness is a former client of his, thereby creating a conflict of interest.

But after the witness, Lewis Raymond Dowda, 46, agreed to waive his attorney-client confidentiality privileges, Mize Thursday denied Cheek's request.

Dowda is expected to testify about a conversation he had with McDougall in the Seminole County jail.

McDougall is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse in the death of 5-year-old Ursula

On July 5, Mize is expected to rule on the permanent custody of Assaid's baby, born May 30. The infant is in temporary custody of the department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Assaid has said she wants a couple she knows to adopt the child. HRS officials have argued the baby should be put up for adoption like any other baby.

GUILTY PLEA BY EX-DEPUTY

Sanford resident Aaron Claude Sanders pleaded guilty in Orange County Friday to a charge of dealing in stolen property. The charge stems from an investigation of an alleged theft ring made up of employees of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

Sanders, 101 Country Club Circle, a former sheriff's deputy, was charged with stealing from a Casselberry resident who was being evicted.

According to a plea agreement entered before Circuit Judge Tom Powell, Sanders will be sentenced in September to two years probation and will be required to pay restitution. He will also have to continue to cooperate in the prosecution of two other indicted former sheriff's employees, Ed Schuckman and Stephen Ray Parrish.

Officials at Bear Lake Elementary School report that during a break-in between 5 p.m. Tuesday and 8:45 a.m. Wednesday, someone took the entire inner workings from an air conditioning unit, leaving only the outer shell.

Police said the thief cut loose a second unit but did not take it. The inside parts were apparently cut loose with a hacksaw. The stolen air conditioner parts are valued at $800.

-Donna Leigh Dial, 18, of 3 Carriage Hill Circle, Casselberry, was arrested Wednesday at County Road 426 and Aulin Avenue in Oviedo. Police said her red Dodge van drove off the road approximately five times and crossed the center line several times.

-Michael Anthony Libby, 39, of 114 Hamlin Ct., Longwood, was arrested at 2:50 a.m. Tuesday in the Big "C" parking lot, County Road 427.

-Douglas Hiney, 22, of 1711 Reppard Road., Orlando, was arrested at 2:14 a.m. Saturday at Lake Mary Boulevard and 8th Street, Lake Mary, after his vehicle crossed a center line three times and ran off the road to the right twice, police said. He was also charged with failure to maintain a single lane.

IN BRIEF

Police In Miami Seize Two Tons Of Fireworks

MIAMI (UPI) — Police seized two tons of fireworks — enough to demolish several city blocks — from a public warehouse where the explosives were being loaded into vans for delivery to holiday customers.

Metro Dade police said Friday they arrested 50-year-old Luis David Schnier, and two teenage helpers, after catching them loading 100 boxes of illegal cherry bombs, M-80s, bottle rockets and smoke bombs into vans late Thursday.

Had a single firecracker gone off, it would have sparked a chain reaction lasting two to three minutes that "would have taken out most of the area" near the warehouse north of Miami, said Metro-Dade County police officer Bill Thompson.

"Everyone in the immediate area would have been killed," he said.

Metro-Dade County Fire Lt. Ed Reineke said a flash from a car battery, a lit cigarette or even a hot tail light could have ignited the fireworks. "It would have been a big, big boom," Reineke said.

Little Room No Problem

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — America's first woman astronaut found it easy to work for days in close quarters with men in space and said the next American spacewoman, set to fly early next winter, needs no special advice.

"We had no problems with a mixed crew on our flight," said Dr. Sally K. Ride, 32, who flew with four men on the seventh space shuttle mission June 18-24.

Dr. Judith Resnik is scheduled to fly on the 12th space shuttle mission next winter with a crew including Ms. Ride's husband, astronaut Steven Hawley.

"Judy is going to have a great time. I happen to know from firsthand experience. She's got a great crew," Ms. Ride said. "I don't think she needs any advice."

NASA Associate Administrator Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson came to the news conference to present Ms. Ride and fellow crewmembers a certificate "from 714 women in the federal government" honoring their flight.

Art Imitates Garbage

MIAMI (UPI) — Thirty-five tons of pink plastic used to wrap Biscayne Bay islands for artist Christo's "Surrounded Islands" project is being hauled away for burial.

Workmen planned to finish late Saturday dragging the fragrant pink plastic to a public landfill where the material is being dumped in 15-foot-deep trenches and buried underneath shredded waste.

"It was only art when Christo breathed his spirit into it," said Jan van der Marck, director of the Center for the Fine Arts and a Christo expert. "Once it was taken down, it reverted to raw material — and used material at that."

The pink polypropylene is the only remainder of Christo's $3-million "Surrounded Islands" project in May. Inspired by French Impressionist Claude Monet's paintings of water lilies, the huge pink circles around the islands produced the illusion of giant lilies in Biscayne Bay between Miami and Miami Beach.

Cabinet Eyeing Tougher Teacher Training Rules

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Cabinet is being urged to establish tough new requirements for teaching degrees and licenses, including a thorough knowledge of computers.

The Education Standards Commission proposed some major changes this week in the way teachers are educated in college, licensed — or "certified" — and then re-certified periodically.

The Cabinet will consider the report of the panel, which advises it on teacher qualification policy matters, Tuesday, then decide at some later time which recommendations to implement, either by administrative rule or going to the Legislature.

Some of the recommendations were included among the various school improvement plans discussed by the Legislature during the 1983 regular session and just-completed special session.

This discussion will continue and intensify during the 1984 regular session because statutes on the certification and re-certification of public school teachers expire next year and must be re-enacted by the Legislature.

"The changing nature of society requires greater rigor in Florida classrooms and better teaching skills for individuals entering the profession," said the commission, chaired by David C. Smith of Gainesville. "In short, business as usual is simply not satisfactory in Florida classrooms."

Course requirements in the state's education colleges should be examined and, where appropriate, strengthened, Smith's group said.

"Priority attention" should be given to requirements for class work in math, science, computer education, English, social studies, reading, elementary education, and vocational and exceptional child education.

The Legislature also has been concerned with course requirements for would-be teachers. The "RAISE" bill passed by legislators last week increases the number of courses in regular academic disciplines that are required and decreases the number of education courses to be allowed.

The Smith group said the number of areas in which teachers can be trained and licensed probably should be reduced from the current 96 because many are "either obsolete or redundant."

It said the number of teachers allowed to conduct classes in an area in which they are not certified should be kept to an absolute minimum and that special scholarships should be given to teachers who return to college to become certified in math and science because of the critical shortage of teachers in these disciplines.

Legislators also were concerned with the shortage of math and science teachers, but none of the programs they considered became law because of lack of money. The programs may be resurrected if Gov. Bob Graham gets tax increases for schools during the special session he will call for the middle of July.

The commission called for teacher pay raises to continue the Cabinet's goal of making Florida the 12th state in the country in teacher pay by 1985.

Monroe Doctrine Is Forgotten

The arrival of a new force of Soviet tanks in Nicaragua is a harsh reminder of the terrible error committed by the Carter administration in discarding the historic Monroe Doctrine.

The doctrine was discarded when President Carter surrendered the Panama Canal and allowed and encouraged a Marxist regime to take power in Nicaragua. The fruits of that terrible decision are now evidenced in the massive build up of the Nicaraguan armed forces, which threaten the country's lightly armed neighbors. The American departure from Panama means that the United States no longer has a powerful strategic base in the region from which to oppose the Soviet surrogates operating in Central America.

This Monroe Doctrine should remain American policy. It was designed to keep foreign forces out of this hemisphere. Such forces are gaining a foothold in Central America. As President Reagan said in Miami recently, "Today a new colonialism threatens the Americas. Insurgents, armed and directed by a faraway power, seek to impose a philosophy that is alien to everything in which we believe."

In the early decades of this century, the United States had the vision and the will to send the marines into Nicaragua to defeat the revolutionary forces led by Augusto Cesar Sandino. The new Marxist revolutionary regime claims to be the political descendant of Sandino. Unfortunately, the United States, though much more threatened in the 1980s than the 1920s, lacks the will to intervene directly to protect vital U.S. and hemispheric interests.

The bugaboo of Vietnam continues to prevent decisive U.S. action, though Vietnam became a quagmire because President Lyndon Johnson failed to use American military power in a decisive manner. Today, the congress and the major media go into a tailspin at the suggestion that U.S. "advisers" be increased above the miniscule 55-man level.

President Reagan understands the dimensions of the threat in Central America, but is denied the means to deal with it. Congressmen such as Stephen Solarz of New York and Edward Markey of Massachusetts oppose every administration attempt to counter communist insurgency. The effect, if not the intention, of their efforts is to strengthen the position of the Nicaraguan Marxist regime and its masters in Havana and Moscow. Americans, who in the 1940s were so mindful of the Axis influence in South America, prefer to avoid facing the reality of the erosion of American security in a region that isn't distant from our southern border.

One is reminded of the ancient saying that a nation will perish if a people lacks vision. One wonders: will Marxist revolutionaries have to advance to the Rio Grande before Congress wakes up and supports strong action to expel communism from this hemisphere?

Show Of Patriotism

If you are as most people who enjoy a good holiday to bring the family and friends together for a picnic or fine meal and celebration, you're looking forward to the Fourth of July holiday Monday.

Residents throughout Seminole County are sure to pack the streets and parking lots along the Sanford lakefront or malls or other locations throughout the county where they'll witness colorful and beautiful displays of fireworks. Not a bad idea.

It's in fact a good way to remind ourselves that the Fourth of July is the commemoration of the signing of the Declaration of Independence way back during the American Revolution. And although Old Glory carries a few more stars than it did back then, many of our citizens — private, business or industrial, will be displaying her proudly that day as a symbol of their own patriotism.

We think that's a fine way of showing it. Nice to see it flying in the breeze.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Some say you don't have enough fire in the belly to become president. I think our motel cuisine will remedy THAT!"

By Doris Dietrich

High school class reunions can generate excitement on the social scene during an otherwise dull, dry summer.

A few years down the road after graduation, classmates get a wrinkle here, an unwanted pound or two there, become the parents like their own whom they once considered "too strict," and are looking forward to the class reunion — no matter what year.

Everybody wants to put their best foot forward at this grand and glorious gala.

This weekend the 1958 class of Seminole High School is gathering for its 25th class reunion at the Sanora Club. Classmates will be arriving from throughout the United States for the festivities. There will be lots of hugging and kissing — and lots of unsolicited flattery including, "John, you son-of-a gun, you haven't changed a bit."

On Friday, July 15, the 1933 class of Seminole High School will gather for the 50th class reunion at Mayfair Country Club. According to classmate Andrew Hanson, a festive celebration is being planned.

Thumbing through the yearbook, Salmagundi, for 1933 is like a trip back into history. Seminole High School was the now Sanford Middle School and construction was completed in 1927. A picture in the yearbook describes the school — tastefully landscaped with shrubs, trees and swaying palms — as "of Spanish architecture, an imposing and modern structure."

Sponsors for the class that year were Mrs. Margaret Wright and Mrs. May Belle Maxwell for whom the yearbook was dedicated.

Senior class officers were: Theodore Wade, president; Lois Britt, secretary; Cornelia McRae, chaplain; Bryan Riser, vice president; and Hollis Phillips, treasurer.

The 97 pages in the 1933 yearbook tell all about the 97 graduates, as well as undergraduates.

It is interesting to note that of all the congratulatory advertisements, only Sanford Electric Co., the Sanford Kiwanis Club, the Sanford Rotary Club, Sanford Lodge 1241 BPOE, and Sanford Sporting Goods exist today, by the same name of 50 years ago, that is.

The city of Sanford congratulated the grads. The Sanford City Commission included: V.A. Speer, mayor; H.J. Lehman, T.L. Dumas, S.O. Shinholser and W. A. Leffler, commissioners.

The SHS Football Team played 10 games that year and won seven.

The classmates had loads of fun which they will review and renew at the long-awaited 50th class reunion.

WASHINGTON WORLD Fertilizer Abounds On The Hill

By Ira R. Allen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most of the old Southern power barons who made laws in back rooms over bourbon and branchwater are gone, but Capitol Hill is still a plantation.

Staff members are paid whatever their lords and masters want to pay. There are no equal opportunity or health and safety laws that apply, and good field hands are rewarded with comfortable, high-paying jobs close to the power.

The outward serenity of life on the Hill can mask the rampant ambition that causes each of the 100 senators to look in the mirror each morning and see a future president of the United States. Or at least hear the staff sharecroppers tell him so.

The ease with which information can be obtained led to a formulation by this columnist that should be of help to newcomers in the Capitol press corps. Namely, anything newsworthy that happens in Washington or the rest of the world can be learned within 45 minutes on the Hill. If a rumor cannot be confirmed in that time span, it simply is not true.

Like any rule, there is an exception. For those not favored by the well-aimed leak, it did become impossible to confirm last fall that Sen. Edward Kennedy was indeed dropping out of the presidential race. Thus, an important corollary to the theory is that a scoop can last only 45 minutes, except when it involves Congress itself.

Capitol Hill is a breeder reactor of good stories. Every imaginable issue either starts in Congress or finds its way there in a hurry, and most issues take at least 10 years from inception to final action, generating more accusations, hearings, debates and recriminations than can be consumed.

Ending a six-year term covering the Senate, I have been blessed with good stories — not so much the budget and tax and defense battles, nor the social issues of abortion and school prayer. But what raw meat came from feuds between senators, or rackets committee hearings with hooded witnesses and testimony that Jimmy Hoffa was "ground into little pieces like hamburger and dumped in a swamp."

Even a story on the impeccably tended Capitol gardens produced a truism: "They spread 40 tons of fertilizer on Capitol Hill every year, and that doesn't even include what's in the Congressional Record."

Early in my career, I was sent to cover the Maryland legislature and given directions — "look for the cash register with a dome."

After reporting on these congressional creatures for precisely the length of a senator's term, I have been gradually disillusioned, mostly because things aren't all that different on Capitol Hill than in the state legislatures that are so often laughed at.

The members frequently are state-house alumni all too willing to barter their statesmanship for campaign contributions.

Agency Lagging May Have Cost Lives

WASHINGTON — Critics of overzealous government regulation often state their case in terms of the cost in dollars and cents. But reluctant regulation often has a cost measured in human lives.

A grim example of regulatory foot-dragging is the 18 months it took the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to announce that there was a rear-brake problem with 320,000 General Motors' 1980 X-Cars. During that long stretch of bureaucratic dilly-dallying, NHTSA recorded 10 deaths and at least one crippling injury in X-Cars.

Here's a partial chronology of death and delay:

— July 1, 1981: NHTSA safety engineers decided to begin an investigation after receiving 312 owner complaints of brake lockups, involving 58 accidents. GM was notified privately; no press release was written, though this is customary.

A week later, initial tests gave evidence that "gripping" brake linings were causing lockups. GM was notified; the public was not.

— Aug. 2, 1981: Kim Sutton, 18, of Maryville, Tenn., lost control of her Buick Skylark after applying the brakes on a rain-slick road, spun into the opposite lane and was hit by an oncoming jeep. She died 12 days later.

Robert Olive, the Sutton family's attorney, told my associate Tony Capaccio the accident "sure looked like brake lockup."

— Aug. 3, 1981: GM voluntarily recalled 47,000 X-Cars (though not the model Kim Sutton had been driving). NHTSA had evidence linking the linings to the brake lockups, yet the agency allowed GM to replace only the valves that control the rear-brake hydraulic pressure.

— November 1981 to June 1982: Further NHTSA tests confirmed that the brake linings, not the hydraulic valves, were at fault. The new data lay in the files for seven months before it was collated, and even then was not made public. During those months, three more people died and one person was permanently crippled in X-Cars suspected of brake lockup.

— June 1982 to December 1982: After the brake-lining report was prepared, NHTSA inexplicably sat on it.

— Dec. 16, 1982: Kathryn Tapp, 17, of Teton, Wyo., was driving her Citation in a light snow when its front end went into a slight fishtail. According to witnesses, when Tapp put on the brakes, the car swerved violently into an oncoming vehicle. She died of her injuries.

Robert Tapp, Kathryn's father, said he "didn't know about the X-Car problem," and added: "Had we known about it, my wife would have taken the car in, or she would not have allowed it to be driven until it was fixed."

— Dec. 17, 1982: NHTSA sent GM a stern letter demanding more information on the brake problem and implying that a recall might be necessary.

— Jan. 13, 1983: Dorothy Belt of Elmhurst, Ill., was driving her Phoenix on a slippery road, applied the brakes and spun across the center line into the path of an oncoming car. Mrs. Belt and a passenger died.

— Jan. 13, 1983: NHTSA safety engineers recommended a formal "defect finding."

RUSTY BROWN Take My Laundry ... Please

Just when you think keeping house is getting more simple, it gets more complicated.

Take laundry for example. Remember when miracle fabrics first came out? Women cheered. Easy washing and no more ironing, they thought.

Then the complaints started. Synthetic fabrics were too shiny, too hot, too whatever.

Some clothes can only be washed in cold water. Worse yet, some have to be washed BY HAND in cold water. Do not wring or twist, we are warned. Hardly anything can be washed in hot water anymore and woe to the one who forgets.

I once threw a pair of terry-cloth jogging pants in with the towels, but they weren't really terry cloth. They were three sizes smaller by the time I read: "Hand wash, cool water, do not bleach."

Likewise, not everything these days can be tossed in the dryer. Some clothes want to drip dry on hangers. Others must dry in a supine position away from sun or heat. Who has enough formica counters to spread out all these special-care garments?

Last week, I did a batch of acrylic sweaters, one blouse and a knit dress. All had to dry flat. I had them spread over the bathtub, patio bench, kitchen shelf and kitchen table. We ate dinner amid soggy sweater sleeves.

And what about these so-called perma-press fabrics? Whatever that magic ingredient is, it washes out in time, and shirts and sheets begin to look perma-mussed instead. Of course that's why the makers say on the label: "Touch up with cool iron, if needed. They know darn well it will be needed."

I was ready for convenience foods long before they came on the market. I consider prepared cookie dough, cake mixes and ready-to-bake pies a boon to womankind. Gravy mixes and frozen lasagna? Love 'em.

Unfortunately, along came the "purists" who decided that convenience foods were "out." Not gourmet enough, by their standards. Purists prefer to make things from scratch, whatever that means. They take pride in their homemade bread, soups and jams. They serve them when they invite you for dinner — or give them as gifts in fancy wrapping tied with yarn.

These things take extra time, so they're extra good. Right? I suppose so, but somehow the homespun spin-off makes me feel guilty. The stuff from my oven is never so lovin' no matter how much time I take.

I have been thinking about all this since I read a Los Angeles Times article recently that said Americans are more "harried, hurried and haunted," than ever these days; that we spend more time in shopping, maintenance and housework, leaving us less time to enjoy life or leisure.

I'm not surprised. That's what happens when status triumphs over simplicity.

I'll take carefree polyester and instant Beef Wellington any day.

Debate On SS Disability Benefit Help Goes On

I read in the newspaper recently that the Social Security Administration notified a heroic Medal of Honor winner that his disability benefits were terminated, even though he has two pieces of shrapnel lodged in his heart, severely impaired arms and legs, a punctured lung, and cannot remain sitting or standing for very long.

I know there are those who probably abuse the system — who receive disability benefits when they are actually capable of doing some work. However, like the Medal of Honor winner, my husband is not abusing the system. Yet, he too was denied benefits after 42 years of working and paying Social Security.

He is now 81 and has progressive liver failure. According to his doctors, he is incapable of any kind of meaningful employment, even the most menial type of clerical work. I am told he still may not qualify for disability benefits. His eligibility will be determined in appeals court soon.

My husband worked hard for his government. Now, when he must seek help from the government, he may be denied assistance.

What is being done to correct this injustice?

A. Your concerns regarding the problems facing potential and current Social Security disability beneficiaries are not unusual.

As you may know, the Social

Growing Older
U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper

Security Administration pays benefits to about 3 million people who are too disabled to hold a job.

In 1981, citing a congressional mandate to remove from the disability rolls those capable of working, the Department of Health and Human Services sharply narrowed its interpretation of eligibility to reduce program expenditures. The result has been the continuing denials that force hundreds of the disabled each week to prove their inability to work.

Several weeks ago, new HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler announced her desire to correct this unintended problem by expanding the number of disabled who would be exempted from review, by suspending reviews of some of the mentally impaired and by promoting more face-to-face interviews with disability clients.

The House Select Committee on Aging, chaired by Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., convened hearings to examine problems with the disability program as well as Secretary Heckler's latest proposals to improve the administration of the program. Witnesses agreed that Secretary Heckler's recommendations were sensible and constructive — but simply did not go nearly far enough. They argued that the government should not allow people to become dependent on its support and then cut them off through a reinterpretation of rules.

Testimony highlighted the fact that something is drastically wrong with a disability insurance program which, by the Social Security Administration's own definition, pays benefits to less than one-third of severely disabled Americans and less than one-fourth of Americans confined to homes or wheelchairs. Yet this year, HHS wants to terminate benefits to over 300,000 people.

Congress is making some progress in curbing unintended denials of disability benefits. The Senate supplemental appropriations bill includes a moratorium on determinations of those with mental impairments. I support this, but it provides significant relief to only a minority of the disability beneficiaries. Older people, cardiac patients and people suffering extreme pain will receive no relief from it. What we need is a complete reform of the entire disability review process.

Legislative measures designed to reform the disability insurance program will be the subject of much congressional debate in the coming weeks — as the House Ways and Means Committee will soon consider such proposals.

I would urge you to bring your views regarding the future of the Social Security disability insurance program to the attention of that committee.

REP. CLAUDE PEPPER is the ranking member of the House Select Committee on Aging.

Remember Our Vietnam MIAs

On this Independence Day of 1983, and the twentieth anniversary of the Covenant Presbyterian Church of Sanford, we pay solemn tribute to one of its members who served in Vietnam, who is still listed as "Missing in Action." He symbolizes many hundreds whose names have not yet appeared on the casualty lists, but are still carried as MIAs.

He was one of those veterans who served in Southeast Asia. These did not dodge and run, or scream tirades against the government, but they served with courage at a time when patriotism was unpopular, when draft-dodging and flag-burning were the order of the day.

Hostilities finally ceased in Southeast Asia, at least as far as the American government was concerned. The seemingly endless lists of names of Americans whose candle of life was snuffed out, over 52,000 of them, are now memorialized on the shiny black granite walls of the Vietnam Memorial dedicated on Washington's Mall in November of 1982.

But some had disappeared into the jungles and the prison camps never to be heard of again. The MIAs of Vietnam continue to live only in the memories of those who loved and cared. For too much of the rest of America it was like an unwanted page torn from the history of our land, and tossed in the scrap piles of forgetfulness and regret.

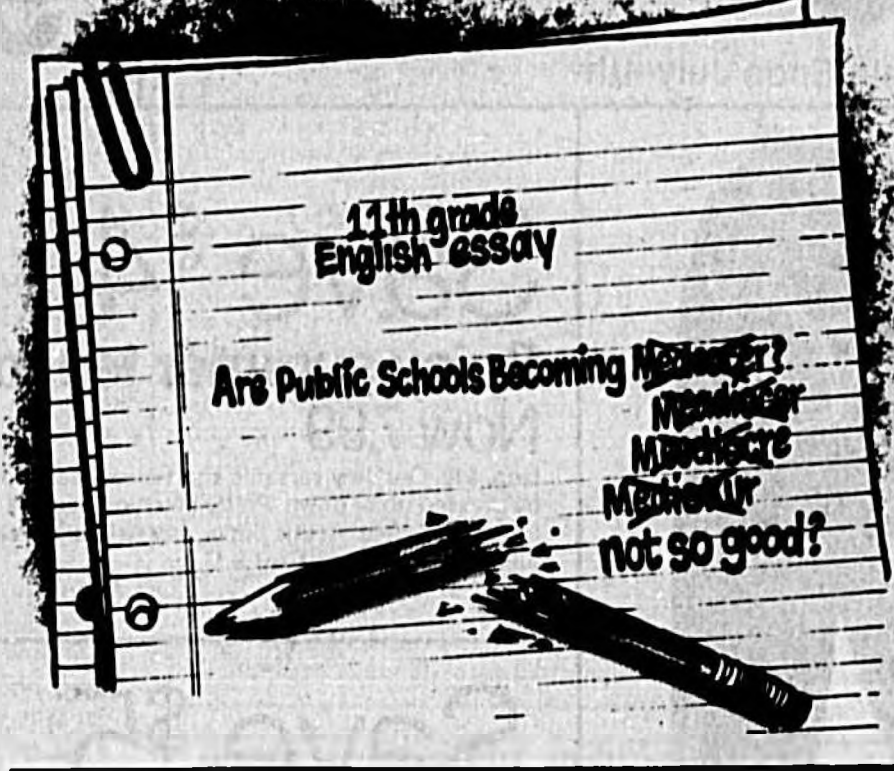

They served, however, in the sincere and compassionate belief that they were serving the cause of "freedom." They did not have time to debate the issues. "Their's was not to reason why, but to serve with courage — and some to die!" They should be doubly honored for their loyalty to the American nation in difficult times. For their loyalty and sacrifice they deserve a place with all those other veterans of the past two hundred years who helped establish and preserve our free democratic nation.

While many are presumed forever gone in unmarked graves in the jungles and waterways of the Indochinese peninsula, others may still be alive as prisoners of the communists in Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam. Recent fact-finding excursions into those remote areas seem to substantiate this opinion.

Our prayers, our concern is for those still Missing-in-Action, and for their families who will never know a moment's peace until they find some of the answers.

Independence Day of 1983 can only carry out its full meaning as we remember these, the MIAs, and resolve to focus full effort until a full accounting is made. We hold these in honored memory, the Missing in Action of Southeast Asia.

Seminole County Resort Tax Suggested

Recently numerous newspaper and television news articles have been published on the upcoming budget proposals for Seminole County.

Media coverage suggests a major shortcoming in revenues over the next few years caused by: the state of Florida's change in homestead exemption laws, the decrease in taxable commercial buildings being built in Seminole County, and the never-ending annexation of taxable properties to the surrounding cities. These mentioned reasons, as well as many others, greatly burden our county's endeavors to fund much needed improvements in our area.

To name a few: an addition to our already overcrowded correctional institute, a courthouse annex, major remodeling of the old Seminole hospital building, a new county health center, road improvements and added sheriff and fire/rescue services. Many suggestions have been made in regard to these problems, such as raising property taxes (that in the past our commissioners have kept down), passing a 4-cent a gallon gasoline tax (which none of us need). Both of the above suggestions would hit us property and business owners in our pocketbooks where it hurts.

We need the tax dollars urgently to fund our county's rapid growth. Our county is playing host to the overflow crowd from neighboring Orange County, and this overflow will continue to skyrocket in the next few years. To accomplish the above mentioned improvements to our county, my suggestion is to maintain our existing tax rate and prevent gasoline tax.

Since we host the overflow of tourists from Orange and Volusia counties when their motels and hotels are full (which is quite often) why can't Seminole County follow suit with our two neighboring counties and create a county resort tax here. Let our visitors help carry the burden of rapid growth and inflation. Other businesses reap the bounty of tourist trade, why not let our tourists also help our county. They too use our roads, our sheriff's department and fire/rescue services.

I feel this proposal would help offset the trend in budget deficits and also take the burden off our local residents by the lower taxes and gasoline prices. Take a look at Orange County's receipts for just the first half of this year. (It's staggering). We have a much smaller county and a lot fewer hotels, but what proceeds could be brought in seems would greatly reduce our projected budget deficits.

In closing, I hope if I have overlooked the reason why we don't levy such a tax I hope someone will respond with an answer.

Governments Enjoy Gas Tax Bonanza

Our U.S. Government has put on a 5 cents per gallon tax on gasoline for the purpose of bringing our highways up to standard. It is my hope that our government officials use good judgment and set up a department that will use and distribute this money wisely so that we can get the most from it.

Our Department of Transportation and DOT have not proven themselves to be worthy or responsible to handle this large a project and its distribution of finances. In taking a trip from Florida to Canada and back and traveling through 14 states, I observed 16 different DOT crews with from 8 to 22 men in each either lying, sitting or standing under shade trees with their equipment standing idle and I only saw two men working. This was not at any specific time of the working day.

Since our government set this example of easy money by the taxing of people for gasoline, the states, counties and towns are following in line. No one knows how to economize anymore. We are living in this computer age and everyone wants to travel in only one direction. That is, up, up and up. I predict that unless many radical changes are made within the next 10 years, our computers will become obsolete. The trend has already turned in that direction.

Idyllwilde Loses Principal, Assistant

After reading the new appointments for principals and assistant principals, I wonder why Idyllwilde Elementary is the only one losing both of their principals.

Couldn't we keep one of them and have an assistant at least for a year so the change won't be so drastic for the children?

It is such a shame we are again having to go to battle for our school. We are already having our problems over Sanford Middle, Crooms, and Seminole. Please let us keep one of our principals.

Please, parents, call the school board or Mr. Robert Hughes and give your opinion as an Idyllwilde parent.

Help Small Businessmen First

I was listening to some big shot bull-shooter on television the other day, telling the citizens of Central Florida that the 4-cent gas tax was needed, and we need more millions to buy better education in Florida. He failed to tell you what the eleven and one-half billion dollar state budget would be spent for.

When our money hungry Gov. Bob Graham says our schools are 23 states from the top, he doesn't mean our educational standards are lower than theirs, he means they are squandering more money on education than we are.

Buying better education is like buying friendship from under developed nations. We have tried both and it has failed. We have to have a good educational system in Florida. Everyone agrees that the school teacher should be paid a living wage, and you can't blame them for wanting a raise every year, but don't pay them more than the taxpayer can afford.

If you listen to Gov. Bob Graham you would get the idea that the only people in the state of Florida are school teachers. There is a group of people in Florida much more important than a school teacher. There is no way that mankind can survive without the farmer. Our governor will never veto any budget in order to get more money for the farmer, because he can't organize them into a block vote for his future ambitions.

Governor Graham, what about the small businessman in the state of Florida? I haven't read where you were going to veto part of the budget in favor of him. The small businessman is the backbone of the nation, but they are going bankrupt like flies. He is being robbed by city, county, state and federal taxes. He is being robbed by the power company, phone company and rent. He is being robbed by insurance, regulations and red tape.

Governor Graham, we all want better education for the young and more pay for the teachers, and you can raise the money if you will find a way to increase the income of the small businessman, farmers, plumbers, carpenters and 856,479 people in Florida on food stamps.

When will this spending binge of Gov. Bob Graham come to an end? I urge the voters of Florida please don't send him to Washington or our national debt will go up another trillion.

Regulations For Rule Makers Needed

The article in the 6/24/83 Evening Herald "Congressional Power To Keep Agencies in Check Cut By Court" should have carried a Wide Black Border, for it was certainly a day of mourning for "We the People" as it places us totally at the mercy of the "Bureaucrats." To paraphrase Willa Cather: "Do not trust your individual freedom to the charity and good will of bureaucrats."

While much-a-do is made by the TV and the major media about taking the reins off of the Presidential Powers, as in the War Powers Act, YOU HLT the nail right on the head with the headline you used, for it is removal of restraints on the Agencies of the Federal Government. (These are extensions of the executive power) that will put us, the taxpayer citizens, at the mercy and good will of the bureaucrats. This action by the Supreme Court is but "the dark-foreshadow of a coming despotism, that will put (you) citizen beyond Freedom and Dignity."

The Federal agencies are given by Congress the power to make rules and regulations, that when published in the Federal Register for 45 days become law. Just as they were acts passed by Congress, up until this Supreme Court ruling, Congress could veto such rulings if done within a certain period of time. Now, as I see it, we the people are completely at the mercy and good will of those in power in the Federal Agencies (IRS, The 2 DOE's OSHA, PSRO, etc.)

Now, as never before do we need a Constitutional Amendment. That shall read: "No rule or regulation issued or promulgated by any federal bureau or agencies, shall take effect, until approved by Congress. The foregoing shall apply only to Federal bureaus and/or agencies created by acts of Congress, not to presidential executive orders unless specifically acted upon by Congress, in each individual case."

The 1877 Declaration of Independence says: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that man and woman are endowed by the Creator, with certain inalienable rights. Among these are life, liberty and freedom from bureaucratic domination of our lives."

Additional 4-Cent Gas Tax Opposed

The power of taxation is an awesome responsibility not to be taken lightly. The wisdom of the state Legislature in granting the separate counties power to levy a 4 cent per gallon gasoline tax without a referendum vote is highly questionable. We are just beginning to mount a recovery from the worst depression this country has seen since the 1930s.

The huge increase in oil prices engineered by OPEC was largely responsible for the double digit inflation which, in turn, was a major cause of the depression. The Federal Government's recent 5 cent per gallon increase in gasoline taxes along with the state of Florida's addition of sales tax had the immediate effect of increasing the rate of inflation. Why should anyone think a gasoline tax levied by the counties will not have the same result?

Because the economy of the United States is so enormously dependent on the consumption of oil, most of which is in the form of fuel powering trucks and automobiles, even small increases in prices, whether from taxes or oil company manipulation, have a detrimental effect on sustaining economic recovery. Elected officials should understand this simple economic fact, but the speed with which they leaped to take full advantage of this taxing authority indicates they are either unaware of the possible impact of their actions or are ignoring it. Either way taxpayers will lose.

At the Howey-in-the-Hills meeting on June 17, the State Association of County Commissioners expressed fear that the constitutional amendment due for a referendum vote in 1984 to limit taxing authority will be passed. In the face of this fear, Orange and Seminole County commissioners are preparing to increase their tax take on gasoline from the present 4 cents to 8 cents per gallon. This action will surely guarantee passage of the Amendment in 1984. Perhaps then politicians will have an incentive to consider the previously unheard of possibility of reducing spending and eliminating the gross waste for which government is so famous.

Citizens Group Tries To Give White Kids Black Awareness

ACTON, Mass. (UPI) — When a 3rd grade teacher asked her students what they knew about black Americans, the youngsters in the all-white class said they make good athletes, dancers and musicians.

No one knew a single black professional, and one girl said her father would never hire a black engineer.

"I wanted to determine what they were thinking and the degree of awareness," teacher Ann Jacobs said. The class had a lot to learn.

The old stereotype that educators thought they had licked after the civil rights movement of the 1960s still prevailed in the affluent town.

The children's perception of blacks as fit for menial jobs "obviously came from their parents or television," said Quinton Brathwaite. He is with Citizens for Multi-Cultural Awareness, a group of teachers and minority parents formed to remedy the situation.

Brathwaite said the lack of a single black teacher, administrator or staff member in the Acton and neighboring Boxborough school systems inadvertently reinforced a stereotype.

The 24-member group is working with school officials to effect changes.

"It was not a case of overt bigotry but the type of problem that sneaks in," Brathwaite said, noting black and Hispanic students make up only 2.6 percent of the area's school population.

Educators and parents cite Mrs. Jacobs as a positive example of responsiveness. After launching a unit on black history, she "brainstormed ways to get the children aware of blacks."

"We talked about what contributions they were making, famous black Americans, and read poetry by black authors," she said. Each child did a report on a prominent black.

"Awareness does not come from lecturing," she said. "I let sensitivity evolve within the class."

"There has been a real lack of sensitivity," Brathwaite said, citing inadequate educational materials, omission of formal black history instruction starting in the early elementary grades, and lack of contact with blacks of stature.

Assistant School Superintendent Gary Baker described the initial views of the 3rd graders as "disconcerting but not surprising."

"This type of things tends to happen when children and adults have such a limited experience with a minority."

He said school officials are seeking qualified black teachers and other staff members for the fall.

There are currently 162 blacks in Acton out of a population of 20,000.

Rubin Williams, the father of two elementary school girls, said, "There is a real concern that black children learn who they are."

"How many youngsters know of black participation in the space age? They learn about John F. Kennedy, but what about Martin Luther King?"

"There is a need for black history instruction from kindergarten on up," said Williams, employed by a high technology firm.

The citizens' group's goals also include sensitivity training for teachers on the needs of minorities, introducing textbooks that more fairly represent the role of minority groups, lining up prominent black guest speakers and organizing career days in which minority professionals would participate, awareness, Baker said.

There was no "Slave Day" this year, once a tradition in the Acton high school.

Brathwaite said he was shocked to learn that "Juniors and seniors were buying the services of younger students as a way to raise money."

Students thought of the half-day occasion as fun and some painted themselves black and carried chains for the occasion.

Paralysis Cure May Lie In Fetus Cells

BOSTON, Mass. (UPI) — Cell transplants from aborted fetuses may some day be used in cell regeneration to provide a cure for disease and paralysis that confines thousands of victims of accidents to lives in wheelchairs, doctors say.

The research, called embryonic cell transplant, only has been conducted on laboratory animals. However, physicians said they now know nerve regeneration is possible and the technique could lead to a cure for paralysis.

"The use of fetal cells is very encouraging in the laboratory so far," said Kent Waldrep, president of the American Paralysis Association.

"Of course, the source is aborted fetuses," said Waldrep, confined to a wheelchair since his neck was broken in a college football accident in 1974. "The implications of this research is foremost in our minds."

Research now focuses on rats and monkeys and no human fetuses have been used at this time, said Dr. Vernon Mark, a Harvard Medical School researcher.

"Eventually we will have to face the question of where will the cells come from," he said. "In the human, this would have to arise from abortion. But its possible we could use cells from the brain and spinal cord of other animals such as apes."

Mark emphasized he was talking about "a possibility and not a clinical reality."

Some 500,000 Americans are afflicted with chronic long-term paralysis and thousands more suffer from other degenerative diseases of the central nervous system, such as Parkinson's disease and Alzheimer's disease.

The most common cause of paralysis is automobile, motorcycle or sports accidents in which the nerve fibers of the spinal cord are bruised, cut or damaged. The injury blocks messages that travel along the cord, which is like a telephone cable containing thousands of wires.

The average victim is 19 years old.

"We're talking about gaining the consent of the parents in treating it (the transplants) like an organ donation," said Waldrep. "We called this news conference so we could lay to rest any fears so that the research can continue."

Researchers refused to say how long it would take before human experimentation could begin, saying only it is "on track." However, they agreed the many medical, ethical and legal questions involved needed to be discussed.

Rev. Paul Murphy, president of New England Chapter of Morality in Media, said the research offered hope to many people but its "potential for traffic in human fetuses is great."

"I am afraid it could develop into a lucrative commerce in (aborted fetuses)," he said. "I hope in providing the opportunity for this medical technology we make it a servant and not a dictator of the dignity of human life."

Boston attorney William Carnahan said the research raises legal questions about when a fetus is considered legally "viable" or able to live outside the womb.

Other unanswered questions include the possibility the cell could transfer cancer or viruses to the recipient, Mark said.

Payback

Shirley Schilke, center, president of Schilke Enterprises, Inc., presents a check for $1,000 to Dennis Courson, chairman of the board of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, right, and Jack Horner, chamber president and chairman of the Fourth of July Committee. The gift boosted the chamber's fireworks fund to its goal of $3,000. In an accompanying letter, Mrs. Schilke spoke of the many times she and her husband had taken their children to see the fireworks and said her gift was "my way of paying back all those wonderful people in days gone by who made that enjoyment possible." This year's fireworks display is scheduled for 9 p.m. Monday at Lake Monroe.

Americans Urged To Buy Energy-Efficient Goods

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. utility companies could avoid building dozens of new nuclear and coal-fired power plants if consumers purchased highly energy-efficient home appliances, new report by two conservation groups argues.

The study also advised that Americans with all-electric homes could cut their electricity bills by more than half if they bought only such energy-efficient appliances.

The report was issued by the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy and the Energy Conservation Coalition.

It contrasts sharply with a recent Energy Department study that warned the nation must build new power plants or face a serious shortfall in electric generating capacity by the year 2000.

"The technology is here and the economics are compelling," said Howard Geller, a research associate with the council and author of the conservation report. "With energy-efficient appliances, consumers have the opportunity to realize higher economic returns than on any other consumer investment."

The study calculated that the typical American household paid more than $700 in electric bills for 1981 to operate a refrigerator, freezer, water heater, cooking range, clothes washer and dryer and lights. An all-electric home would have cost an additional $800 for heating and air conditioning.

He said the nation's refrigerators alone consume the output of about 25 large power plants.

Flagship Executives Take Managers Course

BRUCE BROUSSARD

WAYNE KEELING

Wayne R. Keeling, assistant vice president and branch manager of the downtown Sanford Office of Flagship Bank of Seminole, and Bruce K. Broussard, assistant vice president and branch manager of the Longwood office of Flagship Bank of Seminole, both received certificates of completion at the fourth annual Flagship Banks Inc. Branch Managers Training Seminar.

Forty-one branch managers and branch manager trainees from many of Flagship's 146 offices throughout the state attended the four-day training session. Participants received specialized training in asset and liability management, business development, personnel motivation and other banking-related disciplines.

Pizza Hut Opens

The opening of the Sanford Pizza Hut Friday afternoon was dedicated to the Humane Society of Seminole County. The ribbon cutting, in the form of a ribbon made of $20 bills, was donated to the society.

"Hopefully Pizza Hut's contribution will cause other businesses in the community to consider a contribution at this time to the society since they are fighting the deadline for the matching funding on their new shelter," said Tom Riggs, president of Semoran Management Corporation, a franchisee of Pizza Huts.

The Humane Society is constructing a new shelter near the Pizza Hut, which is located at 3852 Orlando Dr. (U.S. Highway 17-92 at Lake Mary Blvd.). According to Helen Wolk, the society president, the society needs to raise about $10,000 more by August 1st., to total the $50,000 needed to receive a matching grant from Edyth Bush.

Jeno's Leases Office

In a relocation move of its corporate headquarters, Jeno's Frozen Foods Inc. signed a 26,226-square-foot office lease at Live Oak Gardens office park in Casselberry.

The aggregate rental for the three-year lease is more than $800,000.

Representing the landlord, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, in the transaction were Jack W. Saltman and Andrew E. McCaw of Cushman & Wakefield of Florida in Orlando and Peter Boehme and Paul Boehme of Cushman & Wakefield Inc. of New York.

Jeno's Frozen Foods will house their executive, data processing and marketing offices in the park.

Bank Promotes Tramell

Dennis H. Courson, president of Flagship Bank of Seminole, has announced the appointment of Wendy Williams Tramell to commercial loan officer and consumer compliance officer.

A graduate of the University of Florida, Mrs. Tramell began her banking career with Flagship in 1979 as a management trainee.

Freedom Financial Center has announced the appointments of new Advisory Board members to branch locations.

I. Talmadge Luke has been elected to the Board at Freedom/Longwood. He is president of Automobile Dealer Services Inc. in Altamonte Springs.

Freedom/Sanford has elected two new board members. J. Wallace Schoettelkotte is the owner of two Holiday Inns in the Sanford area. Schoettelkotte is also active in many civic and political organizations in Seminole County.

Also elected to the Freedom/Sanford board is Thomas A. Speer. Speer is a native of Sanford and is a lawyer. He is past president of the Seminole County Bar Association and has served as assistant public defender and assistant state attorney for the 18th Judicial Circuit of Florida.

Mules Punch In Altamonte

Mules Punch Solar Inc. a Central Florida-based company that rents solar hot water and energy management equipment to the residential market has announced its recent move from Orlando to its new corporate offices at 720 N. Lake Blvd., Altamonte Spring.

Mules Punch President H. George Louser said the move will allow the company to better serve its customers because it is now more centrally located.

Mules Punch's energy management system involves the use of a solar hot water heater, a Honeywell programmable thermostat and a duty cycle which allows the air conditioning compressor to turn off while the fan continues to circulate the already-cooled air, thereby decreasing the amount of energy consumed.

Construction Begins On Howell Place

Ground was broken and construction was started this past week on Howell Place, a $5 million, 94-apartment congregate senior adult facility off Airport Boulevard behind the Zayre's Shopping Center.

Robert Little, developer, said plans are to have the construction of the complex completed by May 1984 for occupancy soon thereafter.

Howell Place, Little said, is named after his grandmother, Mattie Howell, who lived in Sanford for many years.

Little, the son of former Seminole County Commissioner Homer Little, grew up in Sanford and worked in city management for nine years before going into the senior adult congregate center business. He was an assistant city manager in Winter Park for a time.

Howell Place is Little's fifth senior adult congregate centers and he said others are planned in the Central Florida area.

He said he chose Sanford as the site for his latest development because of his roots here. Little's father lives in Sanford and may become one of the residents of the senior adult apartment complex.

Little's fourth complex, also called Howell Place, is under construction in Tavares, Lake County, while three others are operating in Tennessee.

"The complexes are not old folks' homes," Little said, but rather apartment developments geared to senior adults. "We are putting the senior adults in touch with their peers."

Howell Place is to have 94, one-bedroom and two-bedroom units. About two-thirds of the units will have one bedroom and one-third will have two bedrooms, Little said. Each unit has wall-to-wall carpeting, central heating, air-conditioning, horizontal blinds, personal security alarm, living room, dining room area, refreshment center, vanity-dressing area, walk-in closets and private patio.

Howell Place will also feature a central dining room where two nutritionally balanced meals are offered seven days a week, Little said.

An arts and crafts room will feature a kitchen. A TV community room will include a big-screen TV. An exercise room with therapeutic whirlpool, a central laundry, a beauty salon, and a central post office will also be included at the facility, Little said.

Little said there will be no admission fee for residents at Howell Place, but a $100 deposit will be required. The fees for single-bedroom units for one person will be $920 monthly which includes meals. Two-bedroom units will rent for $1,120.

The developer said that in 1980 some 25,000 persons over 60 years old lived in Seminole County and it is projected that by 1990 some 104,000 seniors will live here.

Airline Expects Profit On Low Fare

By Gary Klott
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — When People Express inaugurated daily service between the United States and London one month ago, travelers on both sides of the Atlantic rushed to book a flight at the astonishingly low one-way fare of $149 — nearly half the lowest regular fare of competing carriers.

What may be more astonishing is that People Express fully expects to make millions of dollars in profit on the $149 tickets.

Harold Paret, a managing officer of the two-year-old Newark, N.J., carrier, said the airline has projected an operating profit of $8 million to $11 million a year from flying five roundtrip flights a week between Newark and London.

That projection does not even assume the cabin of the Boeing 747 will be filled to capacity with 390 coach passengers and 44 who pay $439 to sit in first class.

Only an average 72 percent of the seats need be filled for the airline to meet its profit goals.

Recent booking levels indicate the flights will be 80 to 90 percent full during the heaviest vacation period this summer, Paret said. It may be difficult to maintain those kinds of load factors during the off-season — especially since the major carriers have announced fares as low as $197.50 beginning this fall. But Paret says People can break even at 63 percent capacity.

Continued from 9A. League lead in runs scored with 36 and hit .378 for the season. Rotary has four players on the All-Star team including Eddie Korgan who is undoubtedly the best catcher in the league. Korgan had a good percentage in throwing out base runners attempting to steal and was also among the league leaders in hitting with a .477 average. Rotary's top pitcher, Craig Dixon, should see plenty of action in the mound in the upcoming tournament. Dixon is a versatile player who can do the job in the outfield or at shortstop. He had a 3-2 pitching record and hit .389. Also off of Rotary is Ron Blake who is a versatile player, although he played first base most of the season. Blake was one of Rotary's top hitters with a .364 average and he showed in the city series that he can also hit for power. Also from Rotary is fleet-footed Mike Edwards, the best base stealer in the Junior League. Edwards, who also hit .364 for the year, can play either second base or shortstop and is a fine lead off hitter. Of the 18 players on the Junior League All Stars, five were on last year's team while four were on the Little Major League All Stars. The key for Sanford in the tournament will be defense, which was probably the weakest aspect of the game during the regular season. The pitching is there along with the hitting and the speed. If Sanford can put it all together, this team could go far in the upcoming tournament.

Mexico Says It Will Indemnify Former Bankers

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican government announced a plan to gradually indemnify stockholders in private banks nationalized last year.

The estimated 50,000 former stockholders will receive negotiable bonds for the assessed value of their expropriated holdings plus interest the stock would have earned during the one-year period beginning the day before the bank expropriation, the Treasury and Public Credit Ministry said in a communique.

The government will consider each bank's credits and liabilities at the time of the expropriation and reassess the value of bank properties to determine the amount owed the former stockholders, the communique said.

Nicaragua Blasts U.S.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua accused the CIA, anti-government rebels and Honduran authorities of plotting an air attack on its territory and a mock retaliatory raid on Honduras to provoke war between the neighboring countries.

Interior Minister Tomas Borge said Friday the plan called for "unmarked planes to attack Nicaraguan towns and immediately attack a Honduran village to create public opinion that it was a response by Nicaragua to the bombardment."

He said Nicaragua had information the military government of Chile might later participate by providing landing craft for an assault on the Pacific coast of Nicaragua, a region not yet affected by the current conflict.

Israel Rejects U.S. Plan

United Press International

A Palestinian delegation will visit Syria in a bid to end the mutiny within the Palestine Liberation Organization but guerrillas opposing Yasser Arafat warned a cease-fire in eastern Lebanon will not last long.

In Tel Aviv, Israel rejected a U.S. proposal to leave Lebanon before Syria and the PLO and said it plans to redeploy its troops in southern Lebanon, a move the Lebanese government fears will lead to the permanent partitioning of the nation.

A five-man delegation dispatched by the PLO's 15-member Executive Committee was expected to arrive in Damascus late Saturday.

$440,000 Extra For Schools Is Possible

Seminole County could receive about $440,000 more in taxes than previously anticipated, said Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber.

Suber said his official tally of taxable property will be about $100 million higher than the estimate county commissioners were working with for their 1983-84 budget.

He said the county has about $3.6 billion of taxable property. Original estimates had been about $3.5 billion. Using last year's tax rate of $4.44 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, the county should receive $444,000 more than previously expected.

That should be good news for county commissioners who this past week left the tax rate at the same level as last year but dipped into reserves to balance a budget which featured a deficit of more than $1 million in programs funded by countywide and special district taxes.

The additional taxable property should also increase the amount of revenue generated by the special taxing districts in unincorporated areas.

...Senators Pleased With School Funding

He said he asked the staff director of finance and tax committee to compare the cost of living, the tax burden and the salaries of teachers in the north to those in Florida.

He said a comparison done by the governor's office in the 1980-81 year was found.

"When you take the salary adjusted for cost of living and tax burden, Florida ranks 16th in the nation and a raise of only $347 per year would be necessary plus adjustment for cost of living to place Florida's teacher salaries in the upper quartile (25 percent)," the Cocoa Beach Democrat said.

Vogt said the staff is now pulling together later figures. Apparently Texas did some similar work as this in relating salaries to cost of living and tax burden. Vogt said. He added that he had the information the last day of the special session, but the computer model was not yet available then.

Miss Jennings backed up the statistical information Vogt has and added further that using raw salary adjusted for cost of living and tax burden placed Florida community college instructors in the top 20 in the nation and salaries for university instructors in Florida to sixth in the nation.

"The important thing is not how much you get, but how much it will buy," the Orlando Republican said.

"While Florida may rank lower on numbers of dollars, when the salaries are adjusted for Florida, it can be seen that Florida teachers do substantially better. Let's be honest with the public. I'm not saying that some teachers don't deserve more money. Let's not give them all more money because they are not all necessarily doing the same work," Miss Jennings said.

She said telephone calls from constituents in the past few weeks have said,

"Let's tie in accountability standards before spending more money," she said.

What will happen during the special session the governor is calling for later this month since he has vetoed the funding for the education budget?

Miss Jennings said she believes the Senate will try to override the governor's veto.

"I am confident the Senate will try to override. Whether we have the necessary support for a two-thirds vote (the number necessary to override a gubernatorial veto) or not, I don't know," Miss Jennings said.

"Let's look where we are," said Vogt. "We have data available and I think the Senate will make an effort to override, if the senators think the House can succeed."

"I don't feel the Senate will go to the wall and twist arms, attempting to override," Vogt said, adding he has heard that Dade County has a collective bargaining agreement with teachers that it will have a problem with if Dade doesn't get more money.

"There are seven senators from Dade County who may have to cut their position or Dade will have a problem, because in living up to the collective bargaining agreement they may have to cut their position. Seven senators out of 40 means a tough time in overriding a veto. Something like that can put a lot of pressure on to help fund education," Vogt said.

Langley said the Senate could probably override, but in the House the story will most likely be different.

"House Speaker Lee Moffitt favors the veto. I would bet the House will not override but there is a majority there in favor of the legislation we passed," Langley noted.

"I think we are going to end up where we were when the House refused to settle two years ago. We'll be looking at a liquor tax or an insurance tax which would bring in $80 million to $100 million in new dollars. Graham is never going to get what he wants," Langley said.

He said a new liquor tax would bring in $100 million more and there is also the possibility of a computer software tax.

"The $111 million and the $64 million we raised during the session are already spent," Langley said, adding he will not vote for new taxes, with the exception of a liquor tax. "I like liquor taxes," he said.

"The best thing that could come out of all this is division in the teachers' union when the good professional teachers get tired of carrying the poor ones," Langley said.

Langley reiterated a statement made at a Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce personality breakfast this past week. He said, "Everyone knows that Graham is running against Paula Hawkins for the U.S. Senate in two years. Graham wants to be able to say he left Florida with a billion dollar surplus."

Langley said Graham is out of touch with the people, the taxpayers. "When I go out for coffee, to the Lions Club or the Kiwanis Club I hear applause for my position against taxes," Langley said.

"Graham knows we are in the midst of a recovery. Economic researchers are forecasting an 8.7 percent growth increase in Florida. If that happens we will have $765 million new dollars to budget by next year and with the 'raise bill' (the law requiring concentration on math, science and computer science in high school and more credits for graduation) we will have something to fund. Perhaps we will have a merit pay plan for teachers to fund. It's foolish to pour more dollars in now," Langley said.

Vogt said considering the fact the economy is not well right now the Legislature has put a substantial amount of new dollars into education.

Vogt said the input he is getting from the business community is that business people are willing to pay higher taxes if the state has a plan on how to spend that money.

"But when you are just throwing money into education when the whole country is upset about the quality of education, there can be no good results from what is spent," Vogt said.

Vogt says the "raise bill" attacks some of the basics in minimum standards for graduation, math, science, computer science and in-service training programs for teachers, especially those teaching out of field, and summer remediation for students.

"When we do all those things, we are making a fairly substantial impact on education," the senator said.

"I'm pleased with what we do have and anxious to see what turns out," Vogt said.

"I think we should take the budget we have and put it in place," said Miss Jennings.

"We should put the raise bill and education accountability bill and teaching in service in place to fund next year," Miss Jennings said.

"We should study the merit pay issue and the extension of the school day," she said, adding if the state had the money to fund these programs, the method in not in place to spend that money. "We don't have the time. If we could have started with the original budget, it might have been different. The Senate in budget negotiations came up with $300 million and the governor asked for $4 million, then he wouldn't take it."

"Let's give it another year," she said. (Monday, representatives speak on education).

Science Notes

Reason Exercise Good For Hearts Found

A team of Houston scientists has pinpointed a biochemical mechanism that may explain why vigorous exercise like jogging is good for our hearts.

According to Josef Patsch of the Baylor College of Medicine, a regimen of vigorous exercise raises the blood level of a chemical called high-density lipoprotein (HDL2). Patsch and his colleagues have found that people with high HDL2 levels are better able to clear fats from their blood, thus avoid coronary heart disease.

It is believed that hours after a meal, fat-containing chylomicron particles appear in the blood. They are partially digested by an enzyme, leaving a remnant that moves on to the liver for more digestion. As a result of this initial enzyme action, certain components are freed from the surface of the chylomicrons which combine with another blood chemical to make HDL2. Exactly how exercise increases HDL2 levels remains a mystery however.

"It takes several months to increase the HDL2 level but only a short time to lower it," Patsch said. "So exercise should not be used as a handy medication, to be taken only when needed. It should be a lifelong habit."

The USSR has finally given up on its version of the Concorde, the TU-144.

According to the German daily Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, the supersonic jet was plagued with problems from the start. It was so noisy, passengers could barely hear one another. It ran short of fuel when bucking headwinds. What's more, it had a tendency to fall out of the sky. Observers at the Paris Air Show in 1973 were shocked when a TU-144 plowed into the ground during a demonstration flight. And there are persistent rumors that at least one more crashed behind Soviet borders.

In response to all these problems, the plane, which the Russians hailed as "the pride of Soviet aviation," has officially been scrapped.

Hypochondria may be a strong motivator for people who become physicians, according to Vanderbilt University psychiatrist Charles Ford.

In his new book, Ford explains that hypochondriacs often use their extreme anxiety about their health as a device for eliciting sympathy from others. But as symptoms of imaginary illness grow worse, victims may take the offensive.

"We call it reaction formation or counterphobia," Ford says. "People turn their fear around in an attempt to master it."

An unusually large number of doctors, he found, seem to admit, during therapy, to having experienced a preoccupation with health during early childhood. And 80 percent of all medical students manifest "med students' disease," an obsessive conviction they have contracted a disease they are treating or studying.

Jenny Gruby, as an orphan on stage, left, is a typical 10-year-old girl with her cat, right, at her Sanford home. But the love of Jenny's life is dancing which she hopes to pursue professionally.

Sanford's 'Annie' Orphan

By Katherine Burkett
Special To The Herald

A stage light flashes on, spotlighting the end of tossed bed in a dingy girls' orphanage. As the scene unfolds we meet seven orphans deprived of childhood pleasures, but filled with childhood dreams. They work together, fight together and share dreams of lost parents together.

This is Annie, a musical based on the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," which is playing for the summer at Theater on Park in Winter Park.

One of the soot-faced orphans is Jenny Gruby, 10-year-old daughter of Marsha and Jim Gruby of Sanford. This captivating and talented young lady is no stranger to performance - she has been dancing in recitals and contests for the past four years.

Although she debuts on the professional stage as the orphan Kate, Jenny has had some past acting experience in school productions. Most recently she had the role of a jester in The Royal Problem, written by her fifth grade class at Lake Mary Elementary School.

As far as her participation in Annie, Jenny said that she and eight of her friends, including her 6-year-old sister Jill, decided to respond to the cast call after an auditions ad appeared in the newspaper. Two hundred kids showed up to try out for the 18 kids' parts, including two sets of youth cast, and four understudies.

For the first try-out, each girl came prepared with a song to sing for the casting crew. Jenny sang "Tomorrow," one of the hits from the musical.

What followed were three callbacks, in which the dwindling number of would-be orphans demonstrated their talents for reading script and singing and flaunted their stage presence. The first try-out was during Easter vacation and it wasn't until the first of May that Jenny was informed that she had been chosen.

Jenny was a little surprised. "I didn't think I'd make it - I wasn't enjoying myself," she said. Rehearsal began pretty soon after that, but was not very formal because so much of the cast was still in school. After school ended and the opening date began approaching, rehearsals became longer and more demanding, but remained enjoyable.

Annie opened June 21, but because of the double cast, Jenny's group did not perform on opening night. Jenny's first performance was Friday, June 24.

Currently, the other cast performs Tuesday through Thursday nights, and Jenny's group performs Friday through Sunday nights, plus a Sunday matinee. In five weeks, the casts will switch nights.

Marsha Gruby learned the first night what having a daughter who looks like an orphan can do for a mother's reputation. "On the way home the first night we stopped at a Mr. Donut to get a treat for Jenny's little sister who could not attend the first performance. Jenny was still dressed in her costume and make-up when we went in."

"The people behind the counter looked at her, then at me - I had a nice dress on, then back at her. . . Then, finally one of them got up the courage to ask if she were in some kind of play. They told her when she hit Broadway to remember the donut-shop girls in Sanford," Jenny's mother said.

Being in the play offers Jenny a behind-the-scenes view of the greasepaint and trappings. For instance, is that really dirt on the smocks and faces of the orphans? Do their parents have to roll them in the mud before every performance? Jenny says no, the dirt on the costumes is spray paint and the grime on their cheeks and faces is burnt cork.

What about Annie's dog? Is the dog on stage really named Sandy? Is he really a wayward mutt like the character he plays? According to Jenny, Sandy's real name is Klaus, and he's a very professional canine indeed. "He's wonderful, and so simple to work with. He does everything you tell him to - he has hand signals for everything," Jenny said.

One thing that surprised Jenny a lot about the performance is that she gets paid for having so much fun. Her mother and she have compromised on a budget which includes money for traveling expenses to the theater, a $5 allowance and a hefty weekly deposit in Jenny's savings account.

What will Jenny do with her savings? There are a few large things that she'd like to get, including a motorbike, which is as yet just at the discussion stage, and a disc camera. There will also be school clothes to buy when September nears.

As for her weekly allowance, Jenny spends a lot of it playing video games. She said that her favorite game used to be "Ms. PacMan," but she likes "Dig Dug" a lot now. The game she says she plays best however. (See 'ANNIE,' Page 5B)

SHS 35th Reunion 'As Near Perfect As Possible'

For the Seminole High School class of 1948, the 35th class reunion was truly a weekend to remember.

Reunion chairman Mona Walker, who hails her husband Rick as an "uncrowned prince" for his assistance, speaks fondly of her classmates. "We are a close and caring group and it could only be perfect if none were absent. But we must say our 35th reunion was as near perfect as possible."

Festivities got underway with a cocktail-buffet on June 17 at the Sanford home of class president Herb Stenstrom and his wife Carolyn when 75 classmates and their spouses gathered for the event hosted by Barbara Saunders Swanner and her committee.

Orange and black, the class colors, were carried out in the decor and refreshments including a unique cake featuring a Seminole Indian made and decorated by Hazel Routh Madden.

In And Around Lake Mary

CIA Plans Fun-Filled Family Fourth

The Lake Mary Community Improvement Association (CIA) has a fantastic day planned for area residents on July 4. The CIA's "Fun Filled Family Fourth" celebrations will include music, games, food and lots of fun.

The celebration begins at noon at Crystal Lake Beach, corner of Grand Bend and Country Club Road with a patriotic speech by retired Rear Adm. Tyler Dedman, and a flag raising ceremony by Lake Mary's Explorer Post.

Following will be an "unofficial" ground breaking ceremony for the soon to be Lake Mary/CIA Community Center and Shelter. Although the actual building will not start until the plans and lease are approved by the planning and zoning board and city commission, no problems are foreseen in the outcome, a spokesman said.

Special guests for the ceremony will include Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson, Police Chief Harry

Karen Warner

Benson, Fire Chief Jim Ortoles, and representatives from Lake Mary's Rotary, Woman's Club, Garden Club, Extension Homemakers and Chamber of Commerce. Each of the organizations instrumental in helping make the center a reality will take a turn with a shovel, turning over a shovel of soil.

The CIA has scheduled a day with fun for all ages, which will include performances of students from the Betty Vaccaro School of Dance at 1 p.m., the Dixieland Cloggers at 2 p.m., the Paragators Sky Divers (weather permitting) at 3 p.m., Belly Dancers at 4:30 p.m., and a watermelon eating contest at 5 p.m., followed by a "Fifties Dance" in the parking lot of Cafe Sorrento.

Entry fee for the watermelon eating contest is 50 cents. Disc jockey's for the dance will be city commissioner Ken King, Charlie Craig, Jim Smith, and Mack Blythe.

During the day homemade food will be judged. Categories will include pies, cakes, jams and jellies. Entries to the contest should bring their goodies up to the beach by 11 a.m. Ribbons will be awarded to the winners. Following the judging, most of these foods will be on sale.

For the smaller children, activities will include the Clowns of America, a raw egg throw, duck pond, balloon games, ring toss, and for children of all ages, a sack race, a chance to dunk our fellow man in a dunking machine, and a chance to throw sponges at Cindy Brown, who was volunteered to act as the clown face for the game.

Professional entertainer James Michael Evans plans to spend most of the day singing songs for the crowd and plenty of great food will be available including barbecue, chicken, hot dogs, corn on the cob, and soft drinks.

The Management Club of Stromberg/Carlson held a "Pig Roast" at the picnic site of the Lake Mary plant last Saturday. Employees and their families who had purchased tickets earlier were able to spend the day "pigging out" so to speak.

The menu included a whole roasted pig, barbecued chicken, baked beans, cole slaw, potato salad, corn on the cob, soft drinks and beer. Following a great meal, a volleyball game was played to get the bodies back in shape.

The Management Club Association is a non-profit group of SC's employees. Profits from the annual picnics go into a scholarship fund for employees' children.

Bob and Evelyn Donaldson of Van Buren Road, Lake Mary, have special news this week. They are thrilled to announce the birth of another grandchild. Their son, David, and wife, June, became parents of a healthy 9 pound 4 ounce baby girl on June 10. Their newest granddaughter will be named Mary Jane Elezabeth Donaldson.

David and June live in St. Louis, Mo., along with 11-year-old daughter, Amy.

The Donaldsons have also had some special company this last week. Bob's brother, Charles, wife, Connie, and children, Chuck and Benji, and a friend, Leslie, are visiting from Columbus, Ohio. Seventeen-year-old Chuck has decided to stay here in Florida for a while. He will enter his senior year of high school at Lake Mary High, and help out in his uncle Bob's air conditioning business.

Sunday morning the pool and patio area was the setting for an informal continental breakfast to say farewell until 1988.

Attending the weekend festivities were 52 classmates and spouses for a total of 97. Mrs. Walker says that from a total of 105 graduates, 10 are deceased.

Another the other class members attending were: Phyllis Bach Chapman, Jack Benton, Bill Brinson, Bill Cagle, Joe Dugger, June DuttonWilkins, Dickie and Viola Skinner Frank, Walt Gardner, Vernon Hardin, Judge Harold Johnson, Don Knight, Emma Kethvin Walker, Glenn McCall, Alvin Penley, T. Other classmates attending were: Frankie Wilson, Birmingham, Ala.; Tom Stringer, Winder, Ga.; and Frances LeFils Stanaland, Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. Walker describes the afterglow, as she puts it, as follows:

Nick Pfeiffauf said, "I've never played for a better group. It was fun all the way."

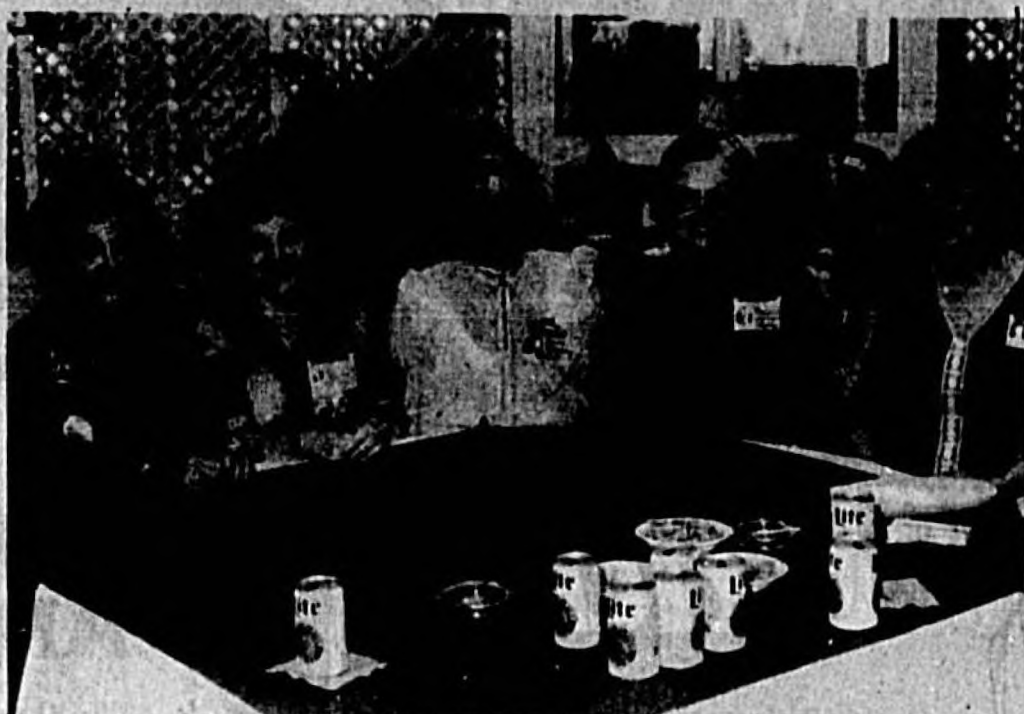

LeRoy Strawder never missed a beat on the dance floor with his wife, Virginia.

Glenn McCall danced the night away including his coat, tie and trousers which he exchanged for jogging shorts to boogie on down for the rest of the evening.

Vivacious Tish Methvin Walker is Europe-bound again, maybe for new fashions to show off her new figure.

Mrs. Walker cites Henry "Bud" Freeman as a faithful participant and the man of blue orbs and few words.

Before the festivities were over, plans were begun for the 40th class reunion. But, according to Mrs. Walker, classmates unofficially reunite frequently for various get-togethers. "We always have a good time," she says.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a long-distance truck driver. When he's home he eats constantly. He doesn't like to eat alone, so I have to eat with him. In addition to the meals I make, he brings home treats like fried chicken, ribs, pizza, etc. He loves ice cream and puts away a quart at one sitting. (I can imagine what he eats when he's on the road!)

In the five years we've been married, he's gained 80 pounds and I've gained 70. I never say anything about his belly, but he says plenty about mine. When he's watching TV he snacks on potato chips and drinks beer. His eating drives me to drink. (Wine. More calories.)

I love to dance, but he doesn't take me anywhere anymore because he's ashamed of the way I look. Now he's threatening to dump me. I'm so far gone (fat), dieting is out of the question. I dream about being thin again.

What should I do?
BEING DUMPED IN IOWA
DEAR BEING DUMPED: Begin by seeing your physician for a thorough checkup. Then locate the nearest Overeaters Anonymous chapter and attend a meeting. (I've attended some, and have found the group to be incredibly loving, caring and understanding.) You need support and encouragement from people who have been where you are now. Please go. Get yourself in shape, then go to work on your husband. And if he doesn't follow suit and shape up, you might want to dump him!

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Recently I met an interesting professional man at a party. (I'm a woman in the same profession.) We hit it off rather well and he asked for my phone number. A few days later he called and asked me to have "a drink" with him that evening. I declined, saying I had an invitation for cocktails and dinner.

Abby, it's been years since I accepted a date for "a drink only," but I still remember how humiliated I felt, sitting in a cocktail lounge, nursing a drink, and hoping the guy would decide I was worth a dinner too.

Please give me a snappy reply to let a man know that I think "a drink only" invitation is tacky and insulting and I'd rather not hear from him again.

NOT THAT NEEDY
DEAR NOT: Why bother with a snappy reply? Just tell the man how you feel about "a drink only" invitation, and you won't have to worry about hearing from him again.

DEAR ABBY: I am going to give your readers (if you print this) some information I paid a psychiatrist $15,000 for—not to mention the hours I put in on his couch.

I was a "respectable" married woman, married 18 years. I had great kids and a terrific husband—a handsome, successful businessman, admired by all who knew him. I'm sure he never cheated on me.

My problem? I cheated on him with so many men in the last 15 years. I can't count them. My idea of a great afternoon was picking up a man and going to bed with him. If you think my husband was a slouch in bed, you're wrong. He satisfied me sexually. So what did I need these other men for? I wasn't looking for sex; sex is what I gave them in return for a little warmth, intimacy, affection and a few compliments.

My husband never touched me, held my hand or kissed me unless we were having sex. He never told me I looked nice. He never gave me a compliment. He never said, "I love you." I needed it so desperately. I found strangers who provided it.

So, Dear Abby, please tell husbands and wives everywhere that if their spouse is cheating on them, they aren't necessarily looking for sex. They may be starved for affection. I was. Sign me...

er, is "Donkey Kong" because the convenience store near her dancing studio has it. She and her friends often go there after their lessons to get something refreshing to drink and wind down with a few games.

Outside sports that Jenny likes to participate in include baseball, kickball and bike-riding. She also used to enjoy riding a friend's horse. However, many of her former favorites have had to be put aside for the real passion in her life, dancing.

Jenny began taking ballet a couple of years ago, and has added courses each year as her interest in the dance deepened. She now takes jazz and tap dancing as well as ballet. She belongs to the Junior Dance Company at Rolann's School of Dance in Longwood, where she takes her lessons. When school is in session, she practices three or four nights a week. Although she feels she is more advanced in ballet, Jenny enjoys jazz the most.

Dancing has become a way of life for Jenny. While most students walk unenergetically through the halls, Jenny dances to the lunch room.

Jenny has participated in many recitals and performed several places with her company, including Walt Disney World and Lake Buena Vista. She recently did a jazz solo at the Florida Invitational Dance Competition in Melbourne that won second place in the 9 to 12 age category. At the same contest, she and her sister Jill danced with two other sets of sisters and won first place in the open category.

Jenny has also done some modeling. She enjoys it, but she soon discovered that the modeling world is not all glamour—the model is responsible for making any outfit seem appealing, even if the style is a little young for her or the fit a little tight.

Next year, Jenny will attend Lakeview Middle School. She is looking forward to auditioning for the chorus and participating in theater productions or talent shows. Jenny's biggest ambition is to dance professionally. Although, she says she would enjoy modeling or acting, too.

Jenny would like to attend a school of performing arts, and says she is hoping one will open soon in Seminole county.

Covenant Presbyterian Observes 20th Birthday

The Covenant Presbyterian Church, Highway 17-92 at Lake Mary Boulevard, celebrates its 20th anniversary Sunday with a special morning service at 10 a.m. At noon an old-fashioned dinner on the grounds will be served with members bringing their favorite dishes. At 1:30 p.m. the afternoon session will be devoted to the history of the church, a memorial for deceased members, and a tribute to those that have given their lives in defense of their country and especially the church's servicemen Missing in Action.

Special guests taking part include Dr. Howard Geoss, former executive secretary of the St. Johns Presbytery; Dr. Marshall C. Dendy, former moderator of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church, United States; and Dr. Don Langfitt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Maitland, which has assisted the congregation in many ways.

The Rev. John Jackson, pastor, will bring the morning message and will be assisted in the communion service that will conclude the celebration by the guest ministers. Former members from many miles away are expected to return for the occasion. This celebration is being arranged by charter members still active in the church. There will be a fellowship time so that visitors can look over the display of items that are part of the church's history.

They are working with Baptist churches in the Seminole Baptist Association this summer. The young missionaries will share their testimonies and participate with the young people in their activities.

The week begins with an after-church fellowship at Farrell's Ice Cream Parlor in Altamonte Springs on Sunday night welcoming the missionaries. On Monday at 7 p.m. at the church the youth will have a "Oh, Say Can You See" party. On Tuesday a "people scavenger hunt" will be followed by a pizza party.

Luther's 500th birthday:

Theologians Take A New Look

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON — Lutherans around the world — some 55 million of them — this year are celebrating the 500th anniversary of the birthday of Martin Luther, founder and major shaper of the Protestant Reformation.

Amid the celebrations, festivals, hymn sings and pageantry, Lutheran theologians are also using the occasion for a major reappraisal of one of the darker sides of Lutheranism — their founder's attitude toward Jews.

That attitude — vitriolic, anti-Semitic, and passionately proselytizing — makes many Lutherans uneasy.

Their unease stems from two factors: the religious pluralism and tolerance that has become a fact of life in the Western democracies, especially the United States, and the continued use, generally in minor ways, of the Nazi distortions of Luther's writings that were used to justify their campaign of genocide against the Jews.

And many Lutherans have a tendency to attach to Luther's words the same kind weight Roman Catholics attach to that of the pope.

"Martin was wrong," is the blunt assessment of Dr. Franklin Sherman, professor of Christian ethics and dean of the faculty of Chicago (Lutheran) Seminary.

Writing in the Lutheran magazine, publication of the Lutheran Church in America, Sherman said that Luther, born Nov. 10, 1483, could not know that his writings about Jews would be used to support the violently anti-Semitic, neo-paganism of the Nazis.

"Yet so sharp were his words, and so pervasive his influence, that he cannot be absolved of all responsibility for what happened despite the vast historical gap between his time and ours," Sherman said.

In a 1543 tract, for example, written near the end of his life, "On the Jews and Their Lies," Luther urged that Jews be expelled, their lands confiscated and their books and synagogues burned, and he urged civil magistrates to forbid them to use the name of God in public since, Luther claimed, they are blaspheming Jesus Christ in their hearts.

The scholars are divided on whether Luther's later and extreme views are consistent with his early views and whether they were milder or more extreme than the general cultural anti-Semitism of the time.

Some contend that Luther

"indulges even greater (verbal) violence and abusiveness in attacking Catholics," and in one tract the Reformer compared the followers of the pope "to pigs or asses."

Early in his career, for example, Luther said: "Were I Jew, and saw what blockheads and windbags rule and guide Christendom, I would rather become a sow than a Christian."

Dr. Gordon Rupp, retired Cambridge University Professor, writing in the current issue of "Face to Face," the publication of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, notes that all of Luther's writings on Jews were solicited by others.

He suggests that part of Luther's anti-Jewishness may have stemmed from his fear that some of the radical Christian sects spawned by the Reformation were lapsing into acceptance of Jewish laws and practices.

Luther's 1523 advice contrasts sharply from his later polemic: "I would request and advise that one deal gently with them and instruct them from Scripture; then some of them may come along. ... If we really want to help them, we must be guided in our dealings with them, not by papal law but by the law of Christian love."

Today, most major Lutheran bodies have officially said what Sherman said: that Luther was wrong in his attitudes toward the Jews and they have repudiated those views. The Lutheran World Federation, for example, has issued a statement declaring that "Luther made certain vitriolic statements about the Jews that the Lutheran churches today universally reject."

Handbell Concert

The Ringers On-the-Green, a nationally known handbell choir from the Presbyterian Church in Morristown, N.J., will present a concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the First United Methodist Church, 419 Park Ave., Sanford. The group is composed of 12 high school students who perform with five octaves of bells. Directed by Dwight K. Menard, the group will perform music from the 17th century to the present— sacred as well as secular pop and classical.

'Christian' TV Channel Opens Orlando Studio

WTGL-TV 52 is furthering its outreach to Central Florida by opening a second studio in Orlando, in addition to the existing Cocoa facility. Located downtown on 1201 W. 29th St., this will be Orlando's first Christian television studio.

The building and equipment were made available to TV 52 by Dr. E.J. Daniels, president of "Christ for the World" ministries, where the program of the same name will continue to be produced.

As in Cocoa, the Orlando studio will provide services such as a counseling center with prayer lines, and "Operation Blessing," a revolutionary ministry through which a person in need of food, clothing, or services is matched to a person who has the resources to give. "52 and You" is a new daily television program with a magazine format hosted by representatives from area churches and other Christian leaders to be produced at the new studio.

TV 52 is one of only a handful of non-profit television stations in the country that offer all-Christian programming. The format features a variety of interesting shows such as musical programs, Christian dramas, testimonies, children's shows, local church services, in addition to national ministry programs, such as the "700 Club."

Dedication of the new studio will take place August 15-20, which coincides with TV 52's first anniversary.

School Bible Class Constitutionality Challenged

By Cindy McAfee

ABINGDON, Va. (UPI) — Two preachers denounced Bible classes in Bristol's public schools, testifying in a federal courtroom packed with Bible-toting observers there is no way to teach the Bible without teaching religion.

Robert Rainwater, a Baptist minister and chaplain at Virginia Intermont College — a man who said he sits behind the school superintendent in church every Sunday — called the classes in nearby Bristol "fundamental, evangelical Christianity."

Roger Hilton, former pastor of the State Street United Methodist Church in Bristol, about 100 miles southwest of Knoxville, also said in testimony Tuesday that he would not allow his daughter to take the classes because he believes they "break the law."

Both men said their churches have suffered splits since Bristol Councilman Sam Crockett, his wife Sally and the American Civil Liberties Union filed suit challenging the classes' constitutionality in February.

The Crocketts allowed their daughter Kathleen, 11, to attend the classes in fourth grade but had her opt out of them in fifth grade.

The trial began in U.S. District Court Monday, and officials expected it to run through the end of the week.

Both the Crocketts and the ACLU say the classes violate the Constitution's separation of church and state. Class supporters say the voluntary course teaches only the Bible — not religion.

"When a person says they're teaching the Bible as it is, they're saying they're teaching the Bible as it appears on the page," Rainwater said. "They take it as face value. Any Biblical literary interpretation course shows you that's a literal interpretation."

"The Bible itself is doctrine. It doesn't just contain doctrine, it is doctrine. It doesn't just contain religion, it is religion," he said.

Mrs. Crockett, a substitute teacher, said her elder daughter Suzanne, 18, took the Bible classes. She said she did not want her younger daughter Kathleen, 11, to attend a second year because she was tired of trying to "undo" what she was taught in class.

"I learned from her that there are specifics about heaven — that there are streets of gold, gates this way, certain pearls, that hell is an actual place out here with fire for people to be thrown away forever, that the devil exists and that Jesus is coming again in a very special way," she said.

Hilton said his daughter Allison was the only child in her school to opt out of the course in the 1981-82 school year. He said he and his wife Mary Earl do not believe the classes should be taught in public school.

"We felt this was in violation of the Constitution," said Hilton, who has been transferred to a Kingsport, Tenn., church at his own request.

Godliness Pays Off Here And Hereafter

There are areas which are yours to conquer in your own personal Christian life. Paul said to Timothy, "...but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." (I Timothy 4:8)

Some foreigners come to our shores as to a promised land. The shadow of old-world oppression is still upon them. They begin with beautiful taste and visions of what they expect to find here.

They look for liberty already won, a freedom provided like a "ready-to-wear" suit of clothes. They expect to have it given to them. They come to receive it, not to achieve it.

They come with a feeling that when they arrive on our shores the struggle is over. But they are disappointed, for none of God's best gifts can be "grabbed up."

The "Promised Land" of the Israelites was not given over to them unencumbered, clear and ready for their comfortable occupancy. It was full of enemies. There were Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites which were not of the children of Israel.

They had to take the land from the enemies of "the good life." There was a warfare to be waged and battles must be fought. They had to subdue and earn it before they could have and hold.

We never receive any "land which he promised" conquered, cleared, ready for occupancy of our lazy souls. If we did, we would be too feeble to keep it. The "promised land" is ours — the good life is ours — to be won. Too many times we do not have any objectives — we,

Pastor's Corner

By Dr. JAY T. CORMATO
Seminole Heights Baptist Church

quoting William Ward Ayer in "Marked Men," aim at nothing and hit it with accuracy. Few — very few — have any ambition to climb the shivering ladder from drab earth to heaven sublime. The thought of conscientious and continuous progress is far from the minds of the multitudes." None but the conqueror can receive.

Do you want to discover the joys of nearness to God? Do you want to feel his power possessing your soul? Then undertake something for him which is too great and beautiful for you to accomplish without coming back again, and yet again, to him. Do that, and abide in his presence. All of the aforementioned accomplishment is the result and shall always become the reality of faith. Godliness has to do with Christ, the "mystery of godliness." (I Timothy 3:16) This is, according to Dr. A.J. Robertson, "the revealed secret of true religion, the mystery of Christianity, the Person of Christ." If we follow his leadership with that implicit trust, we can conquer and possess that which he has promised. This will be the pay-off of godliness.

The Messengers

North's double of one diamond was typical of rubber bridge bidding, in which every one likes to get into the act early.

Also, both sides were vulnerable and North-South had 60 on score, so North had reason to hope that his double would lead to a rubber-winning contract of just two or three in one of the major suits.

South might well have just bid two clubs with Intention of showing his spades later on if East and West contested. Even with the 6-0 trump break against him South would be able to make three clubs, but South was one of those slamomaniaes who think that slams grow on bushes. Anyway, South cue-bid two diamonds to show that he held a right good hand.

West decided to cause his opponents some trouble and jumped to four diamonds. North really wanted to double since his original takedown double had been weak, but he decided to pass and let South make the final decision. South went to four spades.

West opened the king of diamonds. South false-carded by playing his queen. West cashed the ace of hearts and received the five from his partner. Then West decided to do some gambling. He led his deuce of diamonds.

East ruffed, recognized that the deuce was a suit-preference signal and led a club for West to set the contract with a ruff.

West had been ultrasuccessful. He would have been set 800 at four diamonds but had come out plus 100 with his fine defense.

Phil Pastoret

Some of us unwind at the end of the day, but most of us weren't spoiled very tightly first thing in the morning, either.

Look on the bright side: If you get a traffic ticket, you'll at least be able to prove where you were at such-and-such a time.

Some get answers when they put two and two together. All we've ever been able to come up with is the numeral "22."
