BILL INGRAM HAS MANY SYSTEMS AS GRID MENTOR

Navy Coach StateHe Teaches Conglomeration Of Styles
JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Navy Bill Ingram, who modestly describes the kind of football he teaches as a conglomerate of styles, is set to start in getting the first of his new systems into practice at the University of California today. Ingram, who has been at the helm of the Navy football team for the past three years, has had formed his opinion of the quality of the players California has to offer. He is going at it with boundless enthusiasm and no worry about overemphasizing on football.

Exercises At School Staged On Arbor Day

In celebration of Arbor Day the student body of the Junior High School assembled on the campus Friday morning and participated in an Arbor Day program. The exercises opened with Scripture and prayer followed by the song, "Florida, My Florida." Many quotations, suggestive of trees, were given by various groups of students.

An attractive feature of the morning's exercises was the word, "Trees," which was formed by a group of boys and girls. Two readings, "Trees" by Joyce Kilmer and "Trees from the Different Seasons" were given by various students and a song, "A Hymn to Trees," was sung by the entire group.

The entire program centered around the planting of a Florida holly which was done with impressive ceremony. Mrs. C. R. Mason, representative of the Mayfair Circle of the Junior Garden Club, gave a paper on "Do Trees Have Personality?" Mr. Lawton further emphasized the idea of the personality of the tree by its strength and sturdiness as compared to citizenship in a student body that is in making for future generations. By way of closing his talk, Supt. Lawton, announced that the Sanford Junior High School has been recognized as one of the best in the state.

He paid tribute to the principal and faculty as well as members of the P. T. A. who have all made the conferring of this honor possible.

City to Party

Operating expenses figured on the tentative budget then in existence in which the operating expenses were based on a 15 mill levy, a total savings of $50 would have been required. The Commission, in their counter-proposal, declared that 30 mills was the maximum amount which should be levied. They expressed it as their belief that the city could be operated on a 12 mill levy, which would allow 18 mills for interest and debt service, a ratio of one to one and one-half.

One of the original nine points offered by the bondholders required that the City turn over to them all of the surplus funds held by the City at the end of the fiscal year, Oct. 1, 1930. Since that date, the City has used for operating expenses about $200,000, and has expended about $19,000 in revenue bonds for the same purpose, making a "loan" of about $18,000 from the general fund.

Saturday the bond attorneys advised that out of the present surplus balance, a sum of $18,000 must also be "loaned" to the City to allow it to operate for the balance of January and all of February. That "loan" of $18,000 must be repaid out of the first tax money collected this year. The bond attorneys contend. They expressed the belief that a tax collection of 30 per cent can be effected, supporting that belief by introducing the suggestion that the City should provide legislation which would allow foreclosure proceedings to be instituted as soon as the tax books are closed, instead of a two-year grace period as is now in existence.

The payment of the $32,000 was the subject of at least an hour's discussion, and was not approved by the Commissioners, who, through Mayor Dumas, expressed the hope that this sum would be allowed to remain in the City's hands until the end of the year, as an emergency fund. At the end of the year, the Commissioners agreed, it should be used to purchase bonds. The committee could not agree to that proposition, and much time was spent in pointing out, on the basis of a budget which the bond attorneys had prepared from budget figures used in previous years by the City, that the City could operate efficiently and yet repay the $32,000 from the first tax money collected.

Near the close of the meeting, it was discovered that both sides had been working with a different set of figures and different estimates of budget expenditures. The closeness of the hour prevented a careful check-up, and it was agreed to adjourn until Wednesday.

The early part of the meeting saw J. W. Shands, of the law firm of L'Enzie and Shands, Jacksonville, acting as spokesman for the bond delegation. Commenting upon the counter-proposals which the City had made to the nine-point proposition, Mr. Shands said, "We found some difficulty in agreeing with all of the City's suggestions, especially in the matter of a tax levy, but we are willing to make concessions if other concessions are made to us." Before launching into a recital of several new suggestions, Mr. Shands said, "The original nine-points must stand ment to an announcement of the personnel of the nation-wide committee and the text of his invitation to the citizens to serve.

Mr. Coolidge will be the honorary chairman. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, will serve as chairman. Mr. Smith, Democratic opponent of Mr. Hoover in 1928; John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee in 1924; Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. Abel Davis of Chicago, will be the vice chairmen.

House leaders are looking for a compromise. The issue will be before them early in the week.

Without a record vote, the Senate approved the fund Saturday but at the request of Reed, it agreed to reconsider to permit him to offer the postponement resolution.

Reed himself is one of several Republican regulars who are prepared to support the appropriation, but Reed does not want it to interfere with the Red Cross campaign for private subscriptions. Democrats contend the citizens are without money to meet the Red Cross appeal although they hope it will be responded to.

Men and women prominent in virtually every phase of American life were named by President Hoover to be members of the nation-wide committee to aid and sponsor the American Red Cross drive for $10,000,000 for drought sufferers.

Former governors, labor leaders, college presidents, churchmen, both Protestant and Catholic, professional men and business men, have accepted the Chief Executive's invitation.

President Hoover's letter asking them to serve follows:

"I am appointing a nation-wide committee to sponsor the American Red Cross drive for drought sufferers."

Mr. Keeffe said that "Your attorneys should get out foreclosure proceedings as quickly as possible. Are you going to make a small proportion of your citizens carry the burden forever? Our contention is that no real effort has been made to collect taxes, and that it is your duty to enforce collections immediately." When Mayor Dumas told Mr. Keeffe that tax payments on at least 25 subdivisions in this city make up 40 per cent of the delinquent roll, Mr. Keeffe said "Foreclosure proceedings should go forward at once. This City should not be afraid of all the state and county taxes which will have to be paid on this added property. That matter will adjust itself."

clothes she charges her ex-secretary with buying out of her own checking account.

Miss Bow said she was angry because her faith in people was gone. "That's why I wept on the stand."

"I shall never trust anyone again," she said bitterly.

"And then she sits up there on the stand and sneers at me. I used to think she had a sweet face but now she looks so hard."

Miss Bow had more to say about Daisy's assertion the famous hair was bonned.

"My hair has always been red. At times, for different pictures I've had it dyed. Once black, another time I was a blonde, just like Daisy. Anybody seeing her in court can tell hers has been bleached."

"The thing I hate worst of all is having to pass up that picture 'City Streets.' I'm broken-hearted over that because it was a big dramatic part, not the sort of thing I have been doing at all."

Miss Bow will be called as a witness and be given a chance to refute the story told by Miss deBoe.

following, and apparently they enjoyed watching the big cranes swinging as they stood in the early hours of the morning in open country along a disordered track.
French railway officials ordered a special train up from Bayonne with all speed and the passengers on the south bound express were transferred for the remainder of the journey to Spain.
This had caused a delay of four hours, and as the Prince of Wales knew the liner was straining to get off, he asked railway officials at Bayonne to telephone the captain, requesting him to hold up sailing a few hours. This was at noon.
Late at night, after obtaining motor cars at Hendaye, just across the French frontier, they arrived, safe and tired, and went aboard the Oropesa, which had been brought to a dock from its anchorage in the stream in order to facilitate the embarkation.

"blue law."
Mayor Val C. Cleary, who recently donned his official robes, bowed firmly to the line of law enforcement in a public statement to the delegation of millionaires. Later, however, with the plea of a business and tradesmen for a relaxation, Cleary stated that the council would adopt a "liberal policy" in regard to entertainment features along this section of the gold coast.
"I am no long-haired reformer," he said.
D. Richard Mead, president of the City Council, said there would be no "blue laws" passed, but that he and his conferees would enforce the law.
A high light in the situation was the arrest Saturday night of eight men on vagrancy charges.
