New rules proposed

Customers of 900 and 976 numbers would have a better chance of disputing excessive charges under this set of rules. See Page 2A

Chamber banquet booked

SANFORD — Tickets for the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce annual banquet Thursday night are a premium today.

"We've sold 258 tickets, more than we expected," said chamber director Dave Farr. "We have people on a list waiting for cancellations."

Among the highlights of the evening, chamber officials will present the third annual Luis Perez Humanitarian Award, given to the person selected by the chamber for the greatest humanitarian contributions to the community. The chamber will also present the Topper Award to the person named as the top volunteer of the year. Both names will be revealed Thursday during the banquet.

Park on Park closure temporary

SANFORD — The city parks department has temporarily closed Park on Park, located at Eighth Street and Park Avenue, for annual maintenance.

Jim Jernigan, city parks director, said maintenance would take about four days, weather permitting.

Parks employees pressure cleaned the all-wood playground equipment Monday, but rain halted work on Tuesday, he said.

The equipment must be pressure cleaned and weatherized annually or as needed, Jernigan said.

The playground was built by volunteers with mostly donated materials 13 months ago.

Mystery solved

PENSACOLA — Archaeologists say they are fairly certain a mysterious object found submerged in Pensacola Bay is a once-watertight chamber used by the Navy in 1833 to study shifting currents and sands.

The copper-clad wooden object, measuring about 50 by 100 feet, was found two months ago during dredging beside a pier at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, once a Navy yard established in 1826.

The Navy hired an archaeological firm to study the discovery. The archaeologists have submitted a 20-page preliminary summary, Navy spokesman Harry White said Monday.

Prior to the study, hopes had been raised that the object might have been the hull of the USS Fulton, one of the Navy's earliest steamships. It was stripped and burned by retreating Confederate troops before they abandoned Pensacola during the Civil War.

Hope, fear clash

The sobering side of war told locally

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN

SANFORD — Of the more than 100 people who gathered in Sanford last night to talk about their fears and concerns over the Persian Gulf crisis, no one said the word "deadline," although the midnight deadline for war was but hours away.

And a Navy casualty coordinator, a civilian in charge of notifying the next of kin of dead service personnel from Central Florida, spoke clearly about the grim details of returning dead soldiers home, without ever saying the words "death" or "dying."

That's not what the crowd had come to the American Legion Hall for.

"They won't be coming home in body bags," Frances Oliver told Sanford's Operation Desert Shield Support Group. She is a Midway Elementary School teacher whose husband is stationed in Saudi Arabia and whose son is scheduled to return to duty overseas.

Judy Osborn, organizer of the group, shared in Oliver's sentiments. She talked about how she envisioned the day when her Marine son, Sonny Osborn, would return from the Saudi desert.

"We're going to have a picnic," she said.

Oliver shared with the group a portfolio of art work drawn by her second grade class. The crayon sketches of tanks and

Saddam defiant after deadline

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Saddam Hussein remained defiant after the U.N. deadline for an Iraqi pullout from Kuwait passed this morning, and President Bush met with his national security advisers to consider the next step.

The Iraqi president told his troops in a radio broadcast an hour before the deadline that they were ready to fight and said he would not bargain over Iraq's rights. Baghdad radio later issued air raid instructions.

As skies cleared today after 36 hours of rain in the Arabian desert, more than 1 million soldiers faced off for battle. Machinery capable of immense destruction stood at the ready, and tense soldiers penned last wills and checked their weapons.

"I just want to get it over with," said Staff Sgt. Brandon Jay, 27, of Pittsburgh, a transportation crew chief. U.S. military officials announced today that 10,000 more American troops have joined the 890,000-strong multinational force arrayed against Iraq.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters in Washington today that the Bush administration remains hopeful, but added:

"I think there is a certain feeling of resignation that the sanctions will have to be enforced ... There is a growing sense that we have to carry

Proposal submitted for math camp

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Clem Boyer is trying to get the state to help finance the day camp he's planning for Seminole County third through ninth graders this summer.

Boyer, the school district's coordinator of mathematics instruction, has submitted a grant proposal to the state Department of Education asking for $19,064 to pay part of the expenses for the math camp he wants to have July 1 through the 18.

"It isn't just sitting in the classroom doing math," Boyer explained.

The proposal calls for a program that will not only teach the youngsters in the program the practical uses of the math they learn in class, but "This is enrichment math. They're not going to have to take tests, they'll just be learning."

-Clem Boyer

also teaches them important environmental lessons.

If the state provides funding for the project, Boyer said, it will be an "outstanding opportunity" for the selected students to learn some valuable lessons.

Boyer said the students will have the chance to study the Florida State 4R (Reduce, Reuse, Recycle and Rediscover) solid waste project. After that, they will see how mathematical and computer skills can be applied to environmental problems.

"This is enrichment math," Boyer said. "They're not going to have to take tests, they'll just be learning."

He noted that he had been working in conjunction with the Seminole County solid waste department, the University of Central Florida and parent groups to plan the camp.

He said special attention would be given to getting female and minority youngsters into the program.

The program, if approved, would be open to third through ninth graders who earn all A's and B's on their most recent report card and who are

Jackson to kick off King celebration at college

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole Community College will kick off local celebrations of the Martin Luther King holiday with a presentation by Jesse Jackson Jr. in the college's fine arts concert hall on Thursday evening at 7 p.m.

Jackson, son of former presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, is president of the Keep Hope Alive Political Action Committee, vice president at-large of Operation PUSH and, at 25, the youngest appointed member of the Democratic National Committee.

The speech, which is free and open to the public, will also serve to kick off the college's observance of Black History Month.

Elsewhere in Sanford, the Martin Luther King celebration steering committee will sponsor three events beginning on Saturday, Jan. 19 with a tribute to King by young people.

The youth of Seminole County will take part in the tribute to Martin Luther King with a musical about the civil rights leader at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Sanford Civic Center.

The musical, written by Cynthia Oliver, is being performed by students from various Sanford schools.

"The community and the churches have really gotten involved in this event this year."

Jesse Jackson Jr.

said Doratha Fogle, chairperson of the celebration.

This year's theme, "Non-Violence: A Time to Act, A Way to Live," has been woven throughout the activities.

"It was very important to us," Fogle said of the theme.

On Saturday night, the winners of the oratorical, essay and art contests held last Tuesday will be honored. College scholarships will be given to the top winner in each category.

"We want the youth to become involved in the celebration," Fogle said.

Honors cops charged in Lake Mary bank heist

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Two Seminole County men who once garnered honors for their work as Altamonte Springs police officers have been charged in the Dec. 31 robbery of Seminole National Bank in Lake Mary.

The two men are also suspects in several other bank robberies in Seminole County where diversion techniques were used to draw police away from the crime scenes.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents in the Dominican Republic on Tuesday charged Michael McAfee, 36, Altamonte Springs, and William Lloyd Patch, 35, Lake Mary, in the New Year's Eve robbery, according to Ed Bodigheimer of the Orlando FBI office. Both men are former Altamonte Springs police officers.

U.S. marshals this morning were en route from San Juan, Puerto Rico to Santo Domingo, the Dominican Republic to pick up McAfee and Patch, Bodigheimer said. The two men could be transported back to San Juan to appear before a magistrate as early as today, he said. Once before a magistrate, he said, marshals will arrange to return the men to Orlando.

Investigators believe McAfee and Patch may have been responsible for a fire set at Lake Mary Elementary School moments before the robbery, what law officers think was meant to divert them from the robbery taking place just up the road on Lake Mary Boulevard. Although law officers are investigating a link between the robbery and the fire, Bodigheimer said, no arson charges have been filed against the two former police officers.

"There's a lot more to do since we know who the players are now," he said. McAfee and Patch may have been working with others in the robbery, he said.

McAfee and Patch are also suspected in four other Seminole County robberies. The two may also be linked to "other incidents," Bodigheimer said.

Because of similarities in diversionary tactics used, McAfee and Patch are also suspects in a Nov. 17 robbery at People's First Bank on State Road 434 in Altamonte Springs. In that incident, police were drawn from the robbery by a bogus bomb threat that created a four-hour traffic snafu on Interstate 4 and State Road 436.

McAfee and Patch are also suspects in robberies at these banks:

• First National Bank, W. State Road 434, Altamonte Springs, Dec. 7;

• Meritor Savings, W. State Road 434, Altamonte Springs, Dec. 28;

• CNB Bank, Wekiva Springs Road, Longwood, Jan. 8.

McAfee resigned from the Altamonte Springs police department Dec. 10, 1990, and Patch resigned Nov. 2, 1990, Altamonte Springs police spokesman Jeff Hawkins

State prosecutor arrested

TAMPA — A state prosecutor and a local attorney were arrested on bribery and extortion charges in an alleged scheme to reduce a murder defendant's sentence for a $35,000 fee.

Assistant State Attorney Brian S. Valenti, 38, and attorney Charles B. Corcea, 35, were arrested Tuesday. They could face up to 15 years in prison on each charge if convicted.

Valenti was the lead prosecutor in the case of Nelson Gonzalez, who had been charged with first-degree murder in the June 1 shooting death of Samuel Sierra.

Gonzalez's attorney, Manuel Machin, tipped authorities that Valenti and Corcea had approached him about a possible bribery scheme in which Valenti and Corcea would get $35,000 if Valenti would offer the court a reduced plea for Gonzalez to second-degree murder and a 12-year prison term.

Valenti was arrested in his courthouse office Tuesday; Corcea was arrested later in his law office. They were each jailed on $15,000 bond.

Jet crashes, pilot escapes injury

HOMESTEAD — An F-16 jet crashed in the Everglades west of Homestead Air Force Base, but the pilot ejected safely, a military spokesman said.

The plane, which took off from the base, went down 18 miles to the west about 9 p.m. EST Tuesday, said Sgt. Curt Lybengood.

"At the time of the accident it was on a routine training flight," he said, adding that the incident had nothing to do with preparations for hostilities in the Persian Gulf.

Lybengood said Capt. Charles G. Brown ejected safely.

A board of officers will investigate the accident, Lybengood said.

The Miami area was suffering thunderstorms and tornado warnings at the time of the crash, but Lybengood said he did not know if that affected the plane.

Man who killed mom pleads guilty

FORT LAUDERDALE — A man who clubbed his mother to death with a crowbar in a cocaine frenzy, then said he did nothing wrong because he is God, has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

Charles Moore, 32, was sentenced Monday to 17 years in prison by Broward Circuit Judge Robert B. Carney on that charge, as well as attempted first-degree murder.

Moore killed his mother, Lula Mae Moore, 54, in their northwest Fort Lauderdale home in April 1988. He also attacked his nephew and a passerby, injuring them.

Moore was charged with first-degree murder and two counts of attempted first-degree murder. According to police records and courtroom testimony, he proclaimed cocaine the bread of life and refused to let anybody cut his hair — worn in dreadlocks — because he said his hair was his godly crown and he was God.

Dead pilot's family sues airport

MIAMI — The parents of a Japanese helicopter pilot killed in a collision at a local airport have sued the U.S. government for poor air-traffic control.

Ishiro Nakajima and his wife Yoshiko accused the Federal Aviation Administration Tuesday of negligence at Opa-Locka Airport where their son, Keiji, 27, died in a midair collision.

According to the complaint, Keiji had been authorized to practice touch-and-go landings in a Bell 47-G2 helicopter on August 31, 1987.

At the same time as a nearby runway, a Cessna aircraft was also performing touch-and-go landings.

The aircraft collided above the airport as they performed the maneuvers. The helicopter fell to the ground and Keiji died instantly, but the instructor and his student pilot in the airplane were able to complete an emergency landing without injury.

Keiji, a licensed pilot, was training in the United States to become a helicopter instructor in Tokyo, attorneys said.

Demand: Restrict AIDS-infected workers

MIAMI — AIDS-infected health-care workers should be barred from the nation's operating rooms now that a federal report shows a Florida dentist gave the virus to three patients, a lawyer for one of the patients said.

The report from the Centers for Disease Control says genetic tests indicate a 99.4 percent probability that Dr. David Acer infected the patients, said Kimberly Bergalis, a patient of the Stuart dentist.

The CDC announced in August that 23-year-old Ms. Bergalis, from Fort Pierce, was believed to be the first person in the United States to contract AIDS from an infected health-care worker.

Bergalis read a final draft of the report Tuesday with her lawyers. The report is expected to be published Friday by the Atlanta-based CDC.

Phone dispute rules proposed

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Customers of 900 and 978 numbers would have a better chance of disputing excessive charges under a set of proposed rules filed with the state Public Service Commission.

The rules, proposed by Attorney General Bob Butterworth and Public Counsel Jack Shreve, ask the commissioners to require that 978 and 900 line charges be listed separately on telephone bills. Bills and other inserts would be required to inform customers how to dispute the charges.

The proposed rules also would protect customers from having their telephone service cut while they argue the charges and require companies to make sure that 978 and 900 number services and prices agree with advertisements.

Customers would also be allowed to block

The primary interest is for customers to find out how to dispute 900 and 978 numbers bills.

—Attorney Pat Gleason

the calls from being made on their telephones.

"While many people like to use 900 numbers there have been a number of complaints about the possibility of large charges," said Pat Gleason, general counsel for the Attorney General's office.

"The primary interest is simply to make information available to the consumers so they can find out how to dispute them," she said.

Shreve said the rules could help prevent gimmicks that drive up the cost of such services.

An example, he said, is when a customer calls a 900 number at the advertised price. The caller is then referred or transferred to another line without being told of additional costs or higher charges.

"There are so many different services. The one common point is the use of the telephone company," he said. "All of the legitimate businesses are not going to have a problem with this."

Jan Morris, a spokeswoman for GTE Florida, said the company already offers free blocking within the first 60 days of service or for a one-time $10 fee after 60 days. GTE already lists the charges separately, she said.

The company also tries to handle complaints for customers and already screens advertising, she said.

Woman tells about legislator's sexual harassment, payoff case

By GUY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Almost three years after accepting a $47,000 payoff to keep quiet about sexual harassment charges against a prominent legislator, Kathie Jennings told a grand jury her story.

Ms. Jennings, 35, spent a little more than an hour Tuesday before the secret panel, which is investigating the payment and her claims against Rep. Fred Lippman, D-Hollywood. She traveled voluntarily from Colorado to testify.

"I feel fine. I'm doing my best," Ms. Jennings said. "We'll see what the grand jury decides."

The panel also heard from four other current or former House employees, including two women who now work for the House majority office.

Lippman, a married, 12-year veteran of the Legislature, stepped aside as majority leader soon after news of the payoff surfaced, but has denied Ms. Jennings' charges. He has been invited — not subpoenaed — to testify himself.

The two employees, Susan Campbell and Edith Dunlap, said in depositions made public last week that Ms. Jennings had been sexually involved with Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher, who is single, and Rep. Mike Friedman, D-Surfside, who is married.

Gallagher has refused to discuss the issue and Friedman dismissed the talk as "hearsay."

While Ms. Jennings would not comment on those depositions, her attorney claimed the two women were "launching a smear campaign" to destroy her character in order to protect Lippman.

"I don't see any point in having these kind of low-life, gutter-snipe tactics," said lawyer Rick Johnson. "This is an attempt, also I think, to intimidate other people from coming forward when they have similar complaints, when they see how they can be bloodied and dragged through the mud."

Neither woman would comment upon entering the grand jury room Tuesday.

In return to the $47,000 payment in 1988, Ms. Jennings agreed not to file a sexual harassment lawsuit against Lippman or Ken Servis.

Tornadoes rip through Miami area

Associated Press

MIAMI — South Floridians are cleaning after a tornado slammed into Dade and Broward counties, smashing windows, flipping airplanes, ripping up roofs and leaving residents shaken but mostly unharmed.

The twister first touched down near Sylvania Heights Elementary School in West Miami Tuesday afternoon as pupils were gathering outside to go home. A teacher caught outside was slightly injured.

"It was a miracle only one person got hurt," Principal Lucy Williams said.

Teachers and administrators rushed the children into a corridor only moments before the storm hit, but one teacher was caught outside.

"It picked her up and dropped her down, and when she came in she was all covered in mud and had a cut on her forehead," said Ms. Williams. Metro-Dade Fire-Rescue officials told the school later that the injuries were not serious, the principal said.

The twister then moved north of Miami International Airport, touching down in Hialeah where it blew the roof off a United Parcel Service warehouse, the National Weather Service said.

It also knocked down telephone cables in North Dade.

Judge's remarks draw criticism

Associated Press

TAMPA — A juvenile judge said he thought babies whose parents are deployed for months in the Middle East should be put up for adoption if a relative can't care for them, but his comment was quickly criticized.

"That's outrageous," state Rep. Lois Frankel, a West Palm Beach Democrat, said after Circuit Judge William Gladstone made his comment.

Both Frankel and Gladstone, Dade County's chief juvenile judge, are members of the Study Commission on Child Welfare. Frankel was chairing a meeting of the 15-member group Monday.

"I don't care what the reason is, if the child can't be with its parents — and there's no capable relative to care for the child — the state should be able to take over," Gladstone said.

"It doesn't matter whose fault it is," he said.

The judge conceded, however, that state law would not allow such action. In all but the most serious abuse cases, the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services must work with parents to help them keep their children for the long term.

But Gladstone repeated his belief that young children have a great need for parental nurturing. Research shows that babies separated from their parents for months suffer "irreparable damage," and the children's best interest would be served by a new, permanent set of parents, he said.

Gladstone's stance surprised a Department of Defense spokeswoman.

For families in which both parents are in the Army, Navy or Air Force, and for single parents in those branches, a guardian must be designated before deployment, according to Susan Strednanaky.

"As a routine, parents take care of their children before they take off," she said. The department doesn't have statistics on how many couples with children or single parents are among the 370,000 troops deployed to the Middle East, Strednanaky said.

Murder-by-poison suspect thought he was too smart

Associated Press

BARTOW — George Trepal thought he could get away with lacing a soft drink with poison to kill a neighbor whose children and pets were bothering him, a prosecutor said.

"This is the story about a man who thought he was so intelligent he could commit first-degree murder and get away with it," Assistant State Attorney John Agüero said Tuesday in opening arguments in Trepal's murder trial.

"He never thought he would get caught," Agüero told a jury of eight men and four women.

Trepal, a 41-year-old computer programmer, is a member of a high-IQ Mensa club and orchestrated "Murder Mystery Weekends" for the group with some plots that dealt with poisonings.

The state will try to prove Trepal poisoned the neighboring Carr family, spiking Coca-Cola with thallium nitrate, a lethal heavy metal, in October 1988 because of a feud between the families.

Peggy Carr, 41, died March 3, 1989, after lingering in a coma for months.

Trepal is charged with first-degree murder, attempted murder and product-tampering. Prosecutors say they will seek the death penalty if Trepal is convicted.

Defense attorney Jonathan Stidham acknowledged in his opening argument the circumstantial evidence shows Trepal is a little strange, but that isn't proof of murder.

"Unfortunately, to this day they don't where the Coke bottles were purchased, they don't know how they got into the house and they don't know when they got into the house or how Mr. Trepal could have got them into the house," Stidham said.

He said the state has no fingerprint evidence from the vial of thallium or from the tainted soft drinks.

Stidham said the killer most likely is a member of the Carr family.

According to the arrest report, Mitchell had assaulted another woman on Oct. 23, 1990 during an argument and had hit her with a broken glass bottle. She had failed to report for her court date on that charge.

Woman charged with marijuana sale

Kathleen Roemer, 28, of 2842 Sanford Ave., Sanford, was arrested Tuesday on a charge of selling less than 20 grams of marijuana to an undercover police officer who was working a sting operation.

The arrest report said that the woman, a secretary at People's Work Force, sold him $45 worth of drugs at the corner of 19th St. and Sanford Ave., after getting them from her residence.

Bond has been set at $3,000.

An accompanying report noted that a room mate, Perry Donald Hopper, 33, was arrested for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana. His bond was also set at $3,000.

Man charged with auto theft

A Queens, NY man was arrested on grand theft auto charges yesterday in Sanford.

Charles Anthony Cannon, 24, was arrested near the intersection of 13th St. and Peristmon Ave. The Sanford Police Department report said that a routine check of the license plate on the black jaguar showed that the vehicle had been reported stolen by the Miami Beach Police Department.

The car reportedly belongs to a New York resident in Miami. Bond for Cannon has been set at $3,000.

Woman jailed on parole violation

Cheryl Lynette Medlock of 8340 Carter Rd. in Lake Mary was arrested in Bel Air, MD on an outstanding warrant from Seminole County.

Complaints swept clean

SANFORD — Sanford resident Michelle Gazil said she was shocked at the condition the City of Sanford left streets near her home after paving repairs.

"In my opinion it didn't even need it. Where Maplewood Drive and Dogwood intersect was left in a very horrible condition," she said.

Gazil said there was a lot of loose gravel and sand left behind.

"It does not show at all as a refreshed newly paved road. This to me is very upsetting," she said.

Paint on her car, she said, has also been damaged.

"I now have little indentations from where gravel has flown up and nicked the paint," she said.

Public Works Director Jerry Herman said the city has received "a couple of complaints here and there," about the idylwild area roads.

Herman said the city did not actually repave the roads. He said when asphalt ages, it becomes brittle. The rock and tar substance whitens as it deteriorates, with rocks showing through the tar. Workers recently applied an oily material which replaces oxidized components in asphalt. This makes the asphalt flexible and pliable again, just like when the road was new, Herman said.

"It's a new process for Sanford. We actually use it before the road deteriorates and has to be repaved. It makes our asphalt and paving money go further," Herman explained. The city hopes to save 25 percent of its paving budget using this process.

Herman concurred the oily substance is messy. Builder's sand was spread on the area near Gazil's home to help maintain traction for motorists.

"It won't hurt your car. It's a livable thing. We go back later and sweep up the sand," he said. Gazil said she had seen workers sweeping the streets, which she hoped would help.

Herman explained it takes the oil awhile to start penetrating, but things should be back to normal this week.

"I know it's messy. They did my street, too," he said.

Voters OK spending controls

LONGWOOD — Voters in Longwood yesterday decided in favor of a proposed charter amendment which will regulate the city spending any money on real property and capital improvements.

Deputy City Clerk Geri Zambri said 388 residents voted, with 278 in favor and 110 opposed to the amendment.

Acting City Administrator Don Terry said residents must now approve any large capital outlay by the city.

"We can't spend any money on real property or capital improvements if the payments extend beyond one fiscal year unless voters approve it," he said.

Terry said the amendment includes land purchases or major real estate transactions such as buying or building a new city hall. It does not include the purchase of city vehicles.

"Fire trucks and police cars are not included," he said.

The election results will be certified by the Canvassing Board, whose members include the City Clerk, Clerk of Elections and one member of the city commission. Terry, Don Delancy and Mayor Hank Hardy serve on that board.

Their duties also include reviewing absentee ballots.

Judge rejects fern workers court action

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Fernery workers have testified in federal court that they lived in trailers full of rats and cockroaches while working for a Volusia County fernery owner.

In a class-action lawsuit filed by 10 workers, grower Curtis Richardson was charged with failing to maintain adequate housing conditions and offering no benefits to about 100 full-time workers at his Pierson fernery.

The judge dismissed the suit on Tuesday.

Richardson, a fernery owner for about 35 years, testified Monday that he made repairs as soon as complaints were made known to him. He has stopped providing housing since the suit was filed in March 1989.

Labor attorneys want to convince U.S. District Judge G. Kendall Sharp that fern workers should be protected under laws that govern migrant or seasonal workers.

That would mean ferneries would have to meet federal standards for housing, wages and employment benefits.

Miscalculating crime equation

For years, Americans have been told that longer sentences and more criminals in prison equal a lower crime rate. But it's becoming increasingly obvious that this anti-crime equation doesn't add up. Crime rates continue to rise even as American taxpayers pay billions of dollars to incarcerate more of their fellow citizens than any other nation in the world.

The latest tally by the non-profit Sentencing Project shows that in the past decade, America surpassed both South Africa and the Soviet Union to top the world in incarceration rates. The title didn't come cheap. It costs $18 billion a year to house, clothe and feed those 1 million prisoners. Almost half that money goes to keep roughly one out of four black males behind bars.

All told, America has more than doubled its prison population since 1980. What effect did the crackdown have on crime? Apparently not much. During that same period, the crime rate dropped by only 3.5 percent and it's back on the rise now — up to 14 percent in the past five years. Meanwhile, America continues to lead the world in a second category — murder rates.

So do investments in prison time pay off? Partially, at least. Many, if not most, prisoners now behind bars deserve to be there. Public safety requires it. But experts agree that many others don't. They caution that prison time should be viewed as only one item on the menu of sentencing alternatives.

Many offenders would benefit more from such things as mandatory participation in drug-treatment programs, community service work or placement in a secure half-way house where they can continue to interact with their families. Money saved by utilizing these less-expensive alternatives could be invested in programs with proven success rates. A dollar for prenatal care is paid back manyfold in a healthy child capable of pursuing a bright future. Expansion of Head Start programs guarantees needy youngsters a chance to excel at school. Increased education funding, particularly when targeted for at-risk students, broadens future employment opportunities.

These programs fight the roots of crime — poverty, unemployment, alienation. They aren't as immediately gratifying as slamming the door on a crook. But, ultimately, they will do far more to ease the crime crisis than the most ambitious prison construction project.

Heed reformists' call

The government of Albania, an anachronism even by hard-line communist standards, is beginning to make a few small concessions to the wave of democratization sweeping Eastern Europe.

Albanian President Ramis Alla, who recently allowed the creation of a legal political opposition, has pledged to implement economic reforms and has scheduled a free election for February. He has promised religious freedom and ordered judges to stop sentencing Christians to three years in prison for making the sign of the cross. He also reined in his secret police, allowed more than 5,000 asylum-seekers holed up in embassies to emigrate and agreed to allow independent newspapers for the first time in 48 years of communist rule.

Does this mean democracy is about to flower in this tiny country wedged between Greece and Yugoslavia? Not exactly.

Despite these reformist overtures, Alla remains very much a despot. In early December, he dispatched troops to put down riots in several towns. About 160 of the rioters now face trial for illegal assembly, disturbing the peace and various offenses against the state.

Secret police still roam the streets, making sure that no one talks to foreigners or becomes too boisterous. Most Albanians are forbidden to own land, homes, or cars. Although individual gardens are permitted, the state punishes anyone caught selling produce. The monthly wage earned by Albanian workers is still regulated by the state. Consumer goods are in short supply because the government steadfastly refuses to trade with "decadent" nations, including the Soviet Union for breaking with its Stalinist past.

This lingering repression helps explain why thousands of Albanians are flooding across the border into Greece. Many have sought haven in the Greek city of Trikala, which now is heavily overburdened by the refugee flow.

Most of the refugees are ethnic Greeks, who constitute about 10 percent of Albania's 3.3 million population.

CHUCK STONE

Are ethnic criticisms off-limits?

The following three remarks may offend you. Test your threshold of indignation:

(1) "The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approves Norplant, a contraceptive that can keep a woman from getting pregnant for five years. A black research organization reports that nearly half the nation's black children are living in poverty ... Dare we mention (those two stories) in the same breath? ... To do so, (raises) the specter of eugenics."

(2) "There are a lot of people — Jews and other people — who want to take over our city, and we cannot allow that."

(3) "There is a grave family problem in the Puerto Rican ghettos of the United States, where there are thousands of single mothers, very young, who try to escape poverty through welfare or through new partners who then leave and leave behind other children to worsen the problem."

All three of these remarks recently ignited a firestorm of criticism within the ethnic communities who were the targets. The first set of remarks is from a Philadelphia Inquirer editorial. The second set is from a speech to a Muslim organization by a prominent black Philadelphia state representative, Dave Richardson. The third set is from a broadcast by a Cuban-American television commentator, Carlos Alberto Mon-tano, over a Spanish-language network. The Inquirer's black editorial employees, along with some whites, were enraged. Jewish-community leaders were furious, one of them to the point of belligerence. Puerto Ricans have organized a full-scale boycott against the network and its advertisers.

Did all three sets of remarks contain grains of truth? They did. Is freedom of speech compromised by ethnic or religious groups demanding an apology for remarks that offend them? It is. Should individuals have the right to make statements offending ethnic groups? They should. The First Amendment makes no exceptions for hurt feelings.

What then is at issue? It can be summed up in one word: context.

The First Amendment makes no exceptions for hurt feelings.

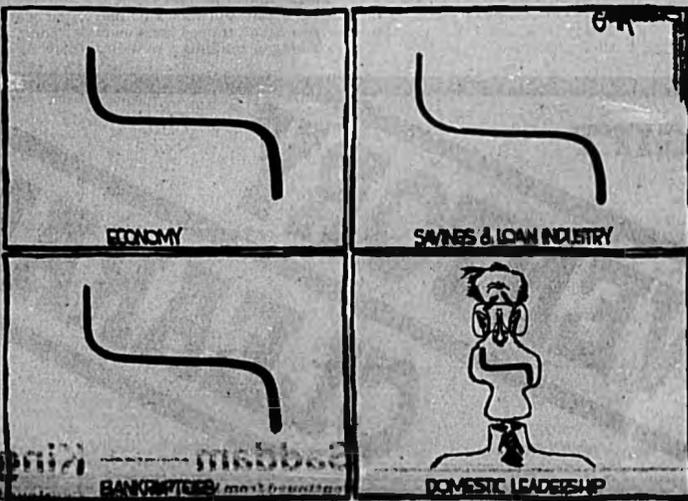

Within any ethnic community, members can criticize the group's practices (or perceived practices) and not expect retribution. Yet, let an outsider utter the same remarks, and he or she is condemned to purgatory.

The Inquirer's black editorial employees were particularly bitter about the Norplant editorial because its author, Don Kimelman, is widely viewed as hostile to black aspirations.

Within the Puerto Rican community, few would deny the irresponsible behavior of many of its men in abandoning women after they become pregnant. A similar pattern exists in the black community. But to blame most of the community's ills on the victim and exculpate the victimizer (institutional racism) adds insult to injury.

As for Richardson's remark, all ethnic groups would like to control Philadelphia. Richardson's bigotry was no unfairly single out Jews.

With the spread of volatile commentary and easily injured feelings, this country needs more than ever a Jeffersonian robustness of debate. Rather than shut down discussion, we must open it up. An individual has the freedom of speech to denounce an ethnic group's practices. The offended group has a concomitant right to object — loudly and vociferously.

BEN WATTENBERG

Americanizing of everything

Editor's note: In his new book, "The First Universal Nation: Leading Indicators and Ideas about the Burge of America in the 1990s," Ben Wattenberg predicts that America is on the brink of its most promising decade. Wattenberg, an expert on trends and demographics, is a nationally syndicated columnist for Newspaper Enterprise Association. Here is an excerpt from "The First Universal Nation" (which is published by The Free Press, a division of Macmillan):

What about the global situation? How does America look now?

We won the Cold War. It didn't just end. We won it because we stayed strong, because we rallied our allies, and because we were right.

We ought to understand that and say it. It was probably the most titanic biological struggle in the history of this planet, surely the most expensive, and we won it. No more of that pantywaist stuff about how one day it just ended.

We will gain a great deal from the end of the Cold War. There is a great discussion today in America about whether there will be a real "peace dividend." There will be. There already have been several.

The most important part of the peace dividend is peace. Next time someone tells you that we've mortgaged our children's future, and that they won't be as well off as we have been, tell him he's dead wrong. There is every indication that our children, unlike us, will grow up unthreatened by nuclear-tipped missiles in the service of a hostile and expansionist superpower.

Beyond that, because of recent events, after 45 years of trying, the United States has become the most powerful military force on earth. What a strange way to describe a nation in decline.

Try as we might, for the moment at least, we could not deem fast enough to become weaker than the Soviet Union. Those guys are in the process of losing a war to Lithuania. Indeed, it is hard today to even visualize the future correct name for our once-potential adversary: "Soviet Union" is a phrase which may soon become an oxymoron.

Our writ is not only military and ideological. America has become the most culturally potent nation in history.

We like to torture ourselves in America. We say: "Isn't it terrible, Americans invented the videocassette recorder, but the Japanese developed it, and marketed it, and now all over the world, there are Japanese VCRs."

True as far as it goes. The hardware is indeed Japanese. And the software is American.

The tapes being fed into the quarter of a billion VCRs around the world typically show

American movies, television programs, and, if you'll excuse the expression, American music. If you're in the superpower, superculture business, it's better to own the software than the hardware. The Japanese, in short, have mass-produced and mass-marketed a machine to disseminate American popular culture. Thank you, Japan.

Beyond that, there are three daily American newspapers in circulation around the world (the International Herald Tribune, USA Today and The Wall Street Journal), three weekly American news magazines in circulation around the world (Time, Newsweek and U.S. News & World Report) and a universal monthly (The Reader's Digest).

Ted Turner, by my lights, is a very strange piece of work, but hand him this: the Cable News Network, his idea, is revolutionary. The CNN signal is now brought down in 90 nations, not only in Moscow and Managua, but in Hanoi as well, at the request of our dear friends, the North Vietnamese.

And, of course, for the first time since the Tower of Babel, there is something approaching a universal language. It is American, or if you prefer the more archaic word, English.

In Eastern Europe today, schools are abandoning the mandatory study of Russian as a second language. The Czech ambassador to the United States was asked recently what was the most important thing America could do to help out Czechoslovakia. She didn't ask for money, or credits or food. She said, "Send us English teachers."

These too, are odd developments for a nation in decline.

Pentagon held at bay by computers

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense is facing an enemy as formidable in its own way as Saddam Hussein — multibillion-dollar computer systems that are so complex they threaten to immobilize weapons.

Computer-generated orders have become vital to the Pentagon's newest and "most advanced" weapons systems. Without computers, the weapons can't identify their targets and fire, and the aircraft and ships can't navigate.

Some of the Pentagon's big-ticket items are being held hostage to their computers. According to two congressional investigations, the Army's Apache helicopter, the Air Force's B-1B and "Stealth" B-2 bombers, the Navy's Los Angeles-class attack submarines and the Trident II missile program all have suffered cost overruns and production delays because of the computer system they have in common — called embedded computer systems.

Bugs and design changes in the BUSY 1 and 2 and the ALQ-161 embedded computer systems have left some of the newest weapons of war brainless.

The B-1B squadron, for example, is sitting in hangars waiting for Air Force computer programmers to "work out the bugs" on the ALQ-161, a congressional source told us. Before the bombers can successfully complete a mission, the computers must be installed and tested. Meanwhile, the entire $8.5 billion wing is grounded.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., and his staff have investigated problems with the embedded computer systems. "The real heart and guts of these systems don't work," one Conyers aide told us.

The Defense Department spends more than $30 billion a year to develop and manage computer systems for newfangled weapons. That's $21 billion a year more than the Pentagon was spending 10 years ago. But despite throwing billions of dollars at the problem, the Pentagon can't master the computers.

Government documents obtained by our reporter Paul Parkinson show, for example, that it takes more than 800 software programmers to input 3.2 million lines of instructions into the BUSY 2 on the Navy's latest super submarine, the Seawolf, can be launched.

The work is so complex and specialized on the BUSY 2 that the Pentagon contractor initially couldn't find enough qualified people to do it.

The Seawolf would be a bad idea even if its computer programs were as simple as Super Mario Brothers. As we reported last year, the Navy is hesitant on launching the first Seawolf at a cost of $2 billion to face down a threat that doesn't exist — war with the Soviet Union. The Seawolf is so expensive that even during the Cold War it would have been folly.

With too many weapons systems, there is disturbing evidence that the Pentagon is following a high-risk policy of "buy before you fly."

In the case of the Seawolf, the Navy is rushing headlong to develop BUSY 2 separate from the rest of the submarine. The Navy is betting your tax dollars that the BUSY 2 will be ready when the rest of the Seawolf is seaworthy.

The Navy is trying the same thing with its Los Angeles SSN-688 class of submarines. But problems with the BUSY 1 (the predecessor of BUSY 2) have already caused a 17-month delay and will cost taxpayers an extra $272 million.

Some of the Pentagon's big-ticket items are being held hostage to their computers.

Mayport preparing for possible war in the Gulf

By RON WOOD
Associated Press Writer

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION — This Navy base, which has seen its share of tragedy in the past, is bracing as eight of its ships and 11 helicopter detachments face possible battle against Iraqi forces.

Just last month, 21 sailors from the Mayport-based USS Saratoga died in a ferry accident in Israel. Almost four years ago, two Exocet missiles fired by an Iraqi warplane exploded into the side of the USS Stark, also based here, killing 37 sailors.

"If something did happen, I would like to think that we still could rally," Lt. Cmdr. John Diaz, a chaplain who participated in counseling the families of Saratoga victims last month, said Tuesday. "If we have any type of mass casualties, I think we have the resources to help to comfort the needs of the people."

Diaz said Navy wives are a pretty resilient group, "but each of them will have to find a way to deal with the stress" of events in the Persian Gulf.

"There is no question that the tension, the stress and the anxiety level is there," Diaz said.

Cmdr. Gerry O'Connor, who conducted the memorial service here Christmas Eve for the Saratoga sailors who died in Israel, said family members are seeking answers that aren't available.

"We don't have all the answers to what is happening in civilization. Why are we fighting a war?" he said. "We don't have the answers for these world situations."

"We're concerned about the fact that somebody is going to war against someone else," he said. "But human nature brings out the best of us in times of crisis."

An ombudsman for the USS Sampson has both her husband and son-in-law aboard the ship, which is part of the Saratoga battle group. Her first name is Ginger, but she asked that her last name not be used.

"Whatever is going to happen, is going to happen. My husband is ready and my son-in-law is ready, but I'm scared," she said.

It is her job to help families of Sampson shipmates through the ship's deployment and whatever might befall the crew members.

Sharon Mahaffey, deputy director of the Family Service Center, said "a lot of people are quite anxious," but she said nerves aren't yet to the breaking point.

"We haven't seen a lot of people who say I'm upset because my husband is in the Gulf," she said.

fighter planes included messages such as "I want peace" and "I hope, I hope, I hope ... brother is safe."

Like Oliver, other members of the group shared stories from overseas, letters and Desert Shield memorabilia.

Denise Osborn, 21, showed the group a "postcard" her husband Sunny had crafted from the lid of a tuna noodle Meal Ready to Eat box. The card's underlying message, she said, was that troops need paper and envelopes so they can keep writing home.

Penny Lougha, an Army recruiter, fielded questions about a possible re-instatement of a military draft, reservists' obligations to repay student loans and many questions families had about relatives serving in the military. She said her office has handled a number of calls in the past few days, and urged families to contact a recruiting office when they have questions or problems.

Lougha's involvement in the crisis is not just a professional one.

"I've got a niece over there, and I missed her," Lougha said. Her niece, Traci Williams, is the daughter of Verlynn Williams, of Sanford.

Dyke Shannon, American Legion of Florida department adjutant, told the group the Legion has coordinated services for families of service personnel. The organization's Family Support Network can be reached by calling 1-800-788-0801.

What are minor inconveniences when a family is together, he said, can become major catastrophes when a husband or wife is called away for duty. So, he said, the Legion is offering its services in mowing lawns, fixing cars, babysitting or other needs families might have.

"With the troops knowing there's that kind of support here at home, then they feel so much better," Shannon said. "It's a two-way street; they worry about us as much as we worry about them."

The American Legion is also working with West Lake Hospital to coordinate psychiatric care for families of military personnel, Shannon said.

The next meeting of the Operation Desert Shield Support Group will be Jan. 21 at 7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall, on Sanford Avenue.

interested in the project. Boyer expects that as many as 220 youngsters could be served by the program.

The grant proposal calls for the camp to last four hours per day and allow students the opportunity to conduct an environmental survey, evaluate an existing recycling program, use a computer to simulate projected situations and to make predictions.

"This is a fun educational experience," Boyer said.

Boyer said competition for the grant money has always been stiff. With increased budget cuts, it will be even more difficult to get financial backing.

Boyer said 15 of the 45 proposals, including one submitted by Seminole County last year, were rejected. He expects the number will be even higher this year.

"All we can do is send them our proposal and wait," he said. Boyer expects it will be March before he gets any word on the money.

Families hear grisly death plan

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Her words were crisp and without the emotion that most others have trouble disguising when talking about the grisly subject of war dead.

But, as Navy casualty coordinator Sunny Leatherman told Sanford's Operation Desert Shield Support Group last night, somebody has to talk about it.

Leatherman outlined military procedures for notifying families of dead service personnel. She said in the event of a troop death, information would be processed out of Wiesbaden, Germany, then through Washington, D.C., and finally through a local military base, who would notify the next of kin.

A team of 52 enlisted officers have been assigned to notify families of any Central Florida service personnel who may die in the Middle East conflict, she said. The officers will cover a 12-county area, including Seminole County, she said.

No family would be notified of a soldier's death by phone, Leatherman said. All such notification is done in person, she said, normally by at least one officer and a military chaplain.

"Sometimes we have to drive as far as three or four hours to do it," she said.

Families may call a toll-free number to ask about casualties. While families will be advised if their relatives are seriously or critically injured, Leatherman said, no other information would be available through that hotline.

"At least you would know they were not a casualty," she said.

The number is 1-800-321-3208.

Leatherman seemed to have no upbeat words to take the edge off the crowd of about 100 who remained quiet as she talked about the realities of military conflict.

"One thing you've got to remember is we're talking about chemical warfare. Some of the bodies won't be viewable," she said.

And the crowd groaned when Leatherman said that because the U.S. death toll could range between 30,000 and 40,000, the military would forego traditional services to honor dead soldiers at Dover Air Force Base, Del. But she assured the group the military will offer graveside services for any personnel killed in the Middle East conflict, unless mass casualties make that too big an endeavor.

Leatherman offered to answer any other questions regarding casualties. She may be reached at the Orlando Navy base at 646-4617, 646-4905 or 646-4114.

While McAfee and Patch have been considered suspects in thefts from the Altamonte Springs police locker room, Hawkins said, investigators have found no evidence to link the two former officers to that case.

War advice from Mister Rogers

By JEFFREY BARR
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — Mister Rogers, wearing his cardigan and using hand puppets from his make-believe world, videotaped public service messages aimed at easing children's fear of war.

"The least, and best, we adults can do is let our children know that we'll take good care of them no matter what," Fred Rogers, the soft-spoken host of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," said in a 15-second spot addressed to adults.

Rogers videotaped four messages — two for adults and two for children — to be aired beginning today on 300 Public Broadcasting Service stations that carry "Mister Rogers" on weekdays.

With images of U.S. soldiers broadcast into millions of homes, Rogers said in an interview, even the pre-schoolers who make up most of his audience can sense trouble. That's when it is most important for families to talk, he said.

"I've always encouraged communication among people. If that's what you call anti-war, then I guess that's what it is," he said. "I don't know if anyone can be pro-war."

However, parents should talk about general fears and not try to explain the Persian Gulf crisis if it escalates into fighting, Rogers said. "There is no way for a pre-schooler to understand war. It's much too threatening." During production at station WQED, Rogers, a 62-year-old Presbyterian minister, donned a green cardigan and used puppets from his show for the kids' spots.

Rogers said he avoided mentioning the Persian Gulf crisis or Saddam Hussein so he could address any kind of childhood fear.

Major oil facilities damage 'slim'

By DINK BEVERIDGE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Iraqis fighting to keep Kuwait could take aim at the machinery used to extract Mideast oil and ship it abroad, but industry experts don't expect any lasting damage.

They point to the Iraq-Iran war of the 1980s, when neither side could deliver a knockout blow, or even a very good punch, to the other's oil business.

"Although Saddam Hussein threatens to put the Persian Gulf on fire, he couldn't do it for eight years," said Christian Gohler, an oil broker with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

The Iraqis may be able to sabotage Kuwaiti facilities seized in the August invasion, but this time Saddam is up against a considerably more formidable foe that should be able to protect vital Saudi oil installations, analysts said Tuesday.

Still, an Iraqi attack on Saudi oil facilities could turn out to be more effective than some have predicted.

"You never know what kind of weapons these people have," said Peter Beutel, an oil analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc. in Hoboken, N.J. "They could make life tough for a while."

The oil fields themselves are safe, thousands of feet below the Earth's surface. And damaging Saudi oil facilities on the ground would be difficult, said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

"Oil wells are not all that big," Lichtblau said. "To target your missile on an oil well, that kind of precision, I don't think anybody has. Oil wells cannot be easily damaged. Pipelines can be fixed quickly."

He said, however, that offshore Saudi drilling platforms that are close to Kuwait and in the Saudi-Kuwaiti neutral zone could be vulnerable.

Iraqis might also seek to damage the Saudi refinery in Jubail, or the refinery and port in Ras Tanura, where most of the Saudi oil exports are loaded onto ships. The refineries can handle a total of about 600,000 barrels a day.

Damage to Ras Tanura could be partially overcome if the Saudis increased the amount of crude moved through a pipeline to the Red Sea, Lichtblau said. The pipeline, however, probably couldn't pick up more than half the slack, he said.

The oil installations of Kuwait are at greater risk because the Iraqis have had plenty of time to wire them with explosives, experts said.

Such destruction would hamper Kuwait's ability to recover quickly from the Iraqi occupation, but the effect on world oil supplies would not be great because the market has gotten by without Kuwaiti crude since August, experts said.

If wells are blown up, it remains unclear how widespread the damage would be or how long it would take to make repairs.

Beutel said the Iraqis could inflict damage that could take two to three years to fix. Lichtblau said six months to a year might be more likely.

Gulf news-coverage guidelines revised

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's final guidelines for press coverage of Persian Gulf combat includes a rule that will bar unescorted reporters from accompanying combat units and a clarification of the "security review" of press pool stories.

The new guidelines put into effect Tuesday add an explicit provision that the "ultimate decision" on what to publish will rest with "the originating reporter's news organization," not with the military.

News organizations protested last week when the Pentagon released a draft of guidelines calling for military review of reports produced by journalists who cover combat in "pools" that operate under official escorts.

If war breaks out in the Gulf, most press coverage will be confined to these press pools, organized by the military. Pool journalists share their material with correspondents who were unable to see the front lines for themselves.

In refining its guidelines, the Pentagon tightened its control over the reporting process by stating flatly that journalists who are not under military escort "will not be permitted into forward areas."

War flotilla: deadliest wild card in Gulf

By MARK PRITZ
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain — Attack planes, missiles and big guns from the biggest naval armada assembled since World War II could deliver some of the deadliest blows of a war with Iraq.

Some military analysts predict the flotilla will unleash a shower of radar-evading Tomahawk cruise missiles at the outset of any attack.

The U.S. aircraft carriers' strike planes and the World War II-era battleships Missouri and Wisconsin, equipped with Tomahawks and 16-inch guns, are most likely to see action.

"I think they will launch the Tomahawks and the air strike in the opening hours of the conflict," said Lawrence Korb, an analyst at the Brookings Institute in Washington and assistant U.S. secretary of defense from 1981-85.

Cruise missiles, with a range of about 800 miles, may even be launched from U.S. submarines as far away as the eastern Mediterranean, said Richard Sharpe, editor of Jane's Fighting Ships.

"I personally believe there will be a massive seaborne cruise-missile attack," he said Monday. "Not only does it have an accuracy to 10 meters, but you wouldn't lose a pilot."

Much attention has been focused on allied ground forces in Saudi Arabia and warplanes that would mount heavy air strikes. The Navy and Marines account for some 500 of the 1,300 U.S. military aircraft in the region.

Some analysts suggest the U.S. Navy holds the deadliest card of all if an attack on Iraq gets bogged down with heavy casualties or faces defeat — nuclear-armed cruise missiles.

President Bush has ruled out their use, but the analysts believe there could be a temptation to use them if the worst-case scenario develops.

As far as the waters of the Persian Gulf itself, experts generally agree that it will not be the scene of a major sea battle.

Bush has public's support

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Surveys in the days leading up to the gulf deadline showed two out of three Americans supported an attack on Iraq. "Whether that support lasts or whether that support dissipates is going to depend on the success of military action," said Robert Shapiro, associate professor of political science at Columbia University.

A USA Today poll Monday of 600 adults found 76 percent very worried and 18 percent somewhat worried "that many American soldiers will die in such a war."

A poll by the Gallup Organization in Newsweek found 62 percent support for combat if Iraq does not withdraw from Kuwait. But nearly half, 49 percent, admitted having some reservations about their position. The telephone survey of 751 adults was taken Thursday and Friday.

A poll taken Sunday for The Washington Post and ABC News found 69 percent said the United States should attack Iraq at some point if it does not pull out.

The random telephone survey of 781 Americans found support for an attack among eight in 10 of the 69 percent of Americans who said they think the war will be short. That was defined as "lasting a few weeks or months," as opposed to "a long time, a year or more."

If U.S. involvement drags on, the anti-war movement that already has captured support in Congress and among religious leaders could begin to chip away at Bush's support.

"Any public opposition that arises will immediately be deemed legitimate," Shapiro said.

The USA Today poll found 32 percent very worried and 22 percent somewhat worried "that this will become another drawn-out war like Vietnam."

Last-ditch peace protests continue

By JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press Writer

Demonstrators pleaded, prayed and continued to demand peace today as America girded emotionally for a war that many now realize could begin at any moment.

Anti-war protesters — many filled with a sense of desperation — surrounded government buildings, marched on college campuses or sat quietly in churches in every major city in the nation Tuesday as reckoning day drew near in the Persian Gulf.

Thousands were arrested. Hundreds of demonstrators remained outside the White House today after the midnight deadline passed for Iraq's Saddam Hussein to pull out of Kuwait or face attack.

"Wake up, Bush! Don't go to sleep tonight!" a demonstrator yelled as others shouted, pounded on drums or honked horns. The White House, surrounded by double its usual security force, was largely dark. There was no telling how much President Bush heard.

Earlier in the day, peace activists around the country began to acknowledge that their cause might be lost.

Saddam and Bush are playing "a game of chicken to see who gets off the road first," said

Vietnam veteran Ron Weekly, who took part in a Denver demonstration.

"We must pray that a miracle happens and war does not," the Rev. Bill Fontaine told a candlelight rally in Kansas City, Mo. "Only God can stop this."

Meanwhile, much of the nation went about the grim task of preparing for war.

Why do we have to fight, Lord?

Why is it Lord we have to fight, and send our service men and women out of sight? Why is each day in disarray when we cold talk things out and yes, even pray? Why do families face each day with fear, not knowing if its a day, month or year. When their loved ones they will again see, coming home from far across the sea? Why do countries across this land, join together and have to take a stand? Why can't we get along with one another, doing as we should and loving our brothers? Why are things so up in the air and everybody is saying it's just not fair? Why are little children lonely and sad, wondering if they will ever again see their dad? Mothers and wives continually shedding a tear having to live with the constant fear. That if war does come and we do have to fight, there will be many a sleepless night. We look at each other and ask the same thing, when will we again hear freedom's ring. Our leaders look tired and weary and worn, cause they know that war has a terrible scorn. In the past we have paid the terrible price, when our men had to survive daily on rice. We trudged through the jungles

Terry Christensen
As Americans somberly prepare for war, Sanford resident Terry Christensen shares an original prayer for peace, dedicated to his father, Carl Edward, who fought in Italy during World War II. Christensen never knew his father, who was killed in action.

the things that you have done. And we ask that you watch over and protect our daughters and our sons. We turn them over to you, in your loving and tender care. Knowing full well that moms and dads and husbands and wives are crying everywhere. Instill in each and every one of us your values we hold dear, And bring this quickly to an end, wiping away our tears and fear. Bring joy and happiness and contentment throughout this wonderful land. Teach us to lay down our weapons and guns, and extend a helping hand. That we may live in peace and love, not fighting but loving one another. And when someone slaps us on one cheek, be strong enough to turn the other. Take away the hate and evil and the constant war with words. Instead replace it with blue skies and rain and constant singing of the birds. Make us ever mindful day to day of why we continue to exist. Let the sun shine every day drying the dew and mist. Regardless of how ugly things get or how ungrateful we may be. Continue to watch over and protect us, from now till eternity. Thank you Lord for taking the fight out of me....

War may rile Arab anti-U.S. hostilities

Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan — The mere presence of U.S. forces in the Middle East has sparked anti-American outbursts across the Muslim world from Pakistan to the western Sahara.

Should America's armed might crush Iraq, some Muslim analysts predict a firestorm directed against the United States and its Western allies — although the U.S.-led force arrayed against Baghdad includes a number of Arab states.

"You may win one battle but you will lose the entire Arab world," King Hussein of Jordan told a recent interviewer. "I don't think the future (of Arab-American relations) would be very bright."

With the multinational force poised to drive Iraq out of Kuwait, anti-American demonstrations have sprung up in Jordan, Turkey, North Africa, the Israeli-occupied West Bank and elsewhere. In distant Pakistan, a non-Arab, Muslim nation allied with the United States, thousands of demonstrators have in recent days marched through all major cities, burning effigies of President Bush. The leader of a Muslim party is seeking recruits to fight a "holy war" against the Americans.

A State Department advisory issued Saturday predicted threats against American citizens in the Arab world would increase significantly. In the event of war and warned them not to travel to the region.

Army shows off missiles as Israelis wait

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israelis kept their windows shut and their gas masks ready Tuesday in case of an Iraqi chemical attack. Many stayed indoors and even canceled weddings and other ceremonies.

On Wednesday, an hour before the U.N. deadline against Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait passed, Israel's army closed all schools in Israel and the occupied territories. The order did not affect universities.

The army spokesman said the move was "an additional means of security for the Israeli population." The schools will be shut until Sunday, the army spokesman, recommending that schoolchildren "stay close to home."

The army showed off a battery of U.S.-made Hawk missiles.

Sometimes softball players are like mail carriers: neither rain nor gloom of night will keep them from their games. For example, all Tuesday afternoon's rain did was delay the start of Tuesday night's games, giving A1A Quality Sod pitcher Jamie Smith (above) and the other players a chance to get used to the conditions.

Recuperating Anderson wins Late Model events

Special to the Herald

Still recovering from serious leg injuries suffered in a motor-cycle accident, Wildwood's Dick Anderson posted a pair of wins in FASCAR-sanctioned Late Model action this past weekend.

At Orlando SpeedWorld on Friday night, Anderson won his second consecutive 25-lap feature. After starting 10th, he finished first.

Anderson was already in second place when a tangle on the third lap brought out the race's only caution.

On the restart, Anderson easily outgained early leader Steve Latham and led the remaining 22 laps to claim the win.

The next night in the ninth annual "Red Eye" 100 Late Model Championship at New Smyrna Speedway, Wildwood was the fastest qualifier. Drawing the outside front starting spot, he immediately took the point and built up a huge lead.

By the halfway mark, David Russell, the defending FASCAR high point champion, had moved up to second and mounted a very strong challenge over the last half of the race.

With two laps to go, a spinout created a two-lap shootout between Anderson and Russell. But Anderson edged Russell to score his fourth win in four starts since his accident.

"I was sure glad to get an easy ride because I'm not in good enough shape yet," said Anderson as he carefully climbed out of the potent Cement/Prest/Cash Register Insurance Pontiac.

After turning in the fastest qualifying time, Anderson still did not figure that he would be physically able to drive for 100 laps and had a relief driver ready to replace him midway through the race.

In other action at the New Smyrna track, Doug Mays won the hotly disputed Sportsman final while Mike Fitch, after three weeks of bad luck, was back in victory lane at the conclusion of the 20-lap Florida Modified feature.

Sanford's John Ripley, in a "refrigerator-white" Monte Carlo that he just completed after "burning the midnight oil" for the last two weeks, handily won the Bomber final over Randy Johnson and Barbara Pierce.

Luckily for Mini Stock pilot Jerry Symons, he lives a short distance from New Smyrna Speedway. So when he blew a head gasket in warmups, he sped back to the shop, made repairs and came back to beat Bobby Sears for the win in the 20-lap main event.

Popular young driver Marc Kinley took over first place midway through his race and went on to win the Limited Late Model final over early leader Allen Rhodes.

It was a night for first-time winners at Orlando SpeedWorld on Friday. In the 30-lap Bomber Special, young second-generation driver Dwayne Maddell set the fast time, drew the pole position and led every lap to win his first ever FASCAR race.

Ernie Muller was another first-time winner as he led every lap of the Mini Stock feature in his new Russell Auto Silvage Mustang.

Drivers who won for the second week in a row were Jeff Moyer, who survived a wreck-filled Late Model main, and Raymond Lovelady, who edged hard-charging Donnie Strickland in the Florida Modified division.

Leon Harriman led all the way to claim the Sportsman victory while Lori Loomis on the Powder Puff Derby. Spectator race winners were Shane Crowe and Dennis Blankebehlp.

World traveler turns caterer

Pampered in Panama, bride has it tough

By JOAN KING
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Donna Dondanville, who was born and raised in the Canal Zone of Panama, has had the best of all worlds plus several tragedies. Her parents were American citizens and her father worked under government contract there. He was an engineer who operated the locks that allowed ships to cross from the Pacific to the Atlantic and vice versa.

While Dondanville lived in the Canal Zone she visited the states a couple of times but had no knowledge of the average American's lifestyle.

She grew up with servants who cared for the family's every need. The chauffeur, butler, gardener, maid who dressed her hair, cook and kitchen helpers did it all. This gave Dondanville time to study, learn equitation, jumping, tennis, golf, swimming and diving. She trained for Olympic diving and planned to be an Olympic contestant.

Unfortunately, during the semi-finals competition in El Salvador she dove off a 45 foot tower and ruptured her vertebrae.

The accident squashed her dreams of being an Olympic contender. She then entered a program of therapeutic horseback riding. During a jump, her horse threw her and she landed in the charco chips layered in the riding ring of which she still has fragments embedded in one side of her face.

The Navy man who rescued her after the accident soon became her husband.

As a bride of 19 she moved to the states with her new husband. The first meal that she cooked was a 25-pound turkey. As the bird wouldn't fit into the tiny oven of the trailer in which they lived, she did the only logical thing to do. She pounded down the breastbone into the cavity until the whole thing fit into the oven.

Dondanville said, "I had to learn to cook from my grandmother's and mother's cookbooks and it was tough trying to teach myself without an absolute understanding of a cook's terminology."

Dondanville went from a self-taught cook to owning her own catering service years later. Previously she had been a drug counselor and a model. She has traveled the world including the Orient and has protected artifacts, art objects and collectibles from her travels of

HOT SEAFOOD SALAD

- 1 can crabmeat
 - 1 can shrimp
 - 1 cup diced celery
 - 1/2 cup diced onion
 - Parmesan cheese
 - 1 pkg. small French rolls
 - 1 egg, beaten
- Mix crab, shrimp, celery, onion. Add egg, blend well. Stir in about 1/2 cup cheese. Split rolls in half with the cut side up. Spoon mixture onto rolls like an open face sandwich. Sprinkle cheese over the tops of each. Place under broiler until edges of rolls start to brown. May be served as a meal with baked beans and cole slaw or as an appetizer.

Note: This sounds great for the pre-cooked pie shell or tart shells. After heating in the oven due to the raw egg used, it can be served hot or cold.

TERIYAKI RIBEYE BEEF STEAK

- (Donna's favorite food)
 - Marinate steaks in Teriyaki sauce for 8 to 12 hours.
 - Place on grill and cook to your taste, rare or well done.
- WINNI NOSSE (From Pennsylvania Dutch — means "none of your business")
- 1 lb. ground beef
 - 1 can mushroom soup
 - 1/2 can water or milk
- See Cook, Page 5B

Stuffed shirt insists guests wear black ties to wedding

DEAR ABBY: My brother's daughter will be married at 8 p.m. on a Saturday night. The invitation insert card has "black tie" written on it. Abby, my sons do not own tuxedos and cannot afford to rent them. When I explained this to my brother, he informed me that all men had to wear tuxedos, and if they did not, he would take it as a personal insult. Needless to say, I was shocked at my brother's attitude and told him so.

Abby, I want to know if it would be permissible for my sons to wear navy blue or black suits. I don't wish to offend my brother, so should my sons not attend their cousin's wedding unless they can come up with the money to rent tuxedos? My sons are very close to their cousin (the bride) and it would sadden me if they did not attend her wedding. What would you do?

ADVICE

take it as a personal insult if your sons dared to appear in anything but tuxedos, why doesn't this pompous snob offer to pay for the rentals?

DEAR ABBY: I live in Toronto, and I've been reading "Dear Abby" all my adult life. I trust your judgment. I just read that a Canadian jury has found the albums by a punk-rock group named Day Glo Abortions were not obscene.

One of the albums was titled "Feed Us a Fetus," and it was laced with four-letter words and described sex, satanism, bestiality, murder, rape and suicide.

Now, if that isn't obscene, I don't know what is, do you? DEAR ANGERED: My Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines "obscene" as: "disgusting to the senses, repulsive, abhorrent to morality or virtue; designed to incite lust or depravity."

I do not know a more appropriate word to describe the above-mentioned album. I would be interested in knowing how the jury arrived at its conclusion.

SISTER

DEAR SISTER: I would advise my sons to wear white shirts and formal bow ties with their navy blue or black suits, which very often pass for tuxedos. I assure you, very few people would notice or even care — with the possible exception of your brother. And since he would

Brown beef, loosely separate and drain grease. Blend water or milk with soup until smooth, add to meat. Season to taste and serve over toast points or hot biscuits split open.

RINK-DUM-DITTY

1 can tomato soup
1 1/2 cups grated cheese
1/2 cup milk
Heat soup and milk, stir in cheese until almost melted. Serve hot on toast points or saltines. Salad goes well with Rink-Dum-Ditty.

SINGLE PIE CRUST DOUGH

1 cup flour
1/2 cup shortening
1/4 tsp. salt
4 to 6 Tbsp. ice water (must be ice water)

Use enough water to make dough stick together when it is pressed gently.

Mix all ingredients together with a fork or pastry cutter until pea-size bits form. Roll into a ball and flatten on a floured cloth or counter top. Roll from center to outer edges. Place in pie pan. Flute or trim edges. Bake in hot oven at 450° for 15 to 18 minutes or until brown. Before baking the pie shell, prick the bottom of the shell several times to allow steam to escape.

PIE CRUSTS

Use the pie crust recipe. Cut out strips from the dough, paint with melted butter and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Bake at 450° for about 8 minutes.

TART SHELLS OR SEAFOOD SHELLS

Use pie recipe. Roll out and cut circles with a cup dipped in flour. Drape muffin tin wells with circles and turn muffin tin upside down and drape circles over each inverted well of the tin. Bake at 450° for about 10 minutes.

Enhance diabetic diet with appetizing dishes

Some of you have indicated a need for special recipes for the diabetic diet. I, myself, have had to change my eating habits and follow a diabetic diet because of the onset of diabetes. Fortunately, one tiny pill daily and close adherence to the Diabetic Exchange System is my prescription.

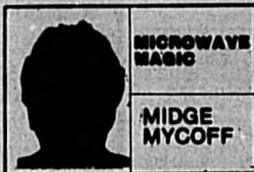

Diabetes affects about 6 million Americans and an estimated 5 million more have the disease and are not aware of it. The disease is characterized by excessive sugar in the body. Most younger diabetics must take insulin by injection since their bodies do not produce enough insulin to regulate the sugar. Persons who become diabetic later in life are usually required to lose weight to help control the abundance of sugar.

All diabetics, whether insulin-dependent or not, should follow a diet to either maintain or lose weight. The meal plan can be calculated by a dietician and a doctor to meet an individual's needs and preferences. The diabetic diet uses the Diabetic Exchange System which encourages a great deal of flexibility in food choices.

The six exchanges or categories of food are:

1. Milk (80 calories per cup for skim milk)
2. Vegetables (30 calories per 1/2 cup)
3. Fruit (40 calories per 1/2 cup)
4. Bread and other starchy foods (70 calories per slice)
5. Meat and other protein-rich foods (70 calories per ounce)
6. Fat (45 calories per teaspoon)

Here is an example of a meal pattern using the Exchange System. It is approximately 1800 calories.

This quick casserole can be used on a diabetic diet. One serving equals 1 bread, 1 vegetable, 3 1/2 medium-fat meat, 1 fat. Ground turkey can be substituted for the lean ground beef and a Jack cheese for the Cheddar.

LAYERED TORTILLA CASEROLE

- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 Tbsp. chili powder
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- 1 can (2 1/4 oz.) sliced ripe olives, drained
- 6 large tortillas or 18 small tortillas

- 2 C. (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1/4 C. water or tomato juice

Crumble ground beef into a 1-quart batter bowl. Add onion, garlic, chili powder, salt and pepper. Microwave on 100% power, uncovered 5-6 minutes or until no longer pink, stirring once to break up meat. Drain. Stir in tomato sauce and olives.

In 2-quart casserole alternate layers of 1 large or 3 small tortillas, 1/2 cup meat mixture, and 1/4 cup cheese. Repeat, making 6 layers. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top. Pour tomato juice around edges. Cover with casserole lid. Microwave on 100% power, 6-7 minutes or until heated through and cheese is melted. Makes 6 servings — 385 calories each.

This combination of crisp carrots, pineapple chunks, and green onions is both colorful and flavorful. One serving — 1/4 fruit, 1 vegetable, 1/4 fat exchange and 71 calories per serving. These amounts provide 6 servings.

PINEAPPLE-CARROT MEDLEY

- 4 C. carrot sticks, 2 inches long
 - 1 Tbsp. butter or margarine
 - 1 can (10 1/2 oz.) unsweetened pineapple chunks, drained and rinsed
 - 1/4 C. sliced green onion
 - 1/4 tsp. salt
 - 1/4 tsp. ginger
- Combine carrots and butter in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover. Microwave on 100% power, 10-12 minutes or until carrots are tender-crisp, stirring twice. Add pineapple, onion, salt and ginger. Cover. Microwave on 100% power, 1-2 minutes or until heated through.

Painful shoulder injury diagnosed

By Peter H. Gott, M.D. DEAR DR. GOTT: For the past 4 1/2 months, I've suffered from a painful shoulder injury. Three doctors have three opinions, ranging from "I don't know" to a separated shoulder. One suggested cortisone injections, followed by physical therapy. X-rays have failed to shed any light on my problem. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER: Most of the pain-sensitive structures in the shoulder are radiolucent soft tissues, meaning that X-rays pass through them without creating much of a shadow. Therefore, standard X-ray examinations for shoulder pain don't give particularly helpful information, unless an injury caused a bone fracture — or physicians are investigating unusual conditions, such as bone cysts, that can cause pain.

In the absence of fractures, shoulder injury usually affects the ligaments, tendons and supporting structures, none of which can be seen on X-ray. For example, you may have damaged a tendon, developed bursitis or torn the rotator cuff (the stabilizing tissue around the joint). These ailments are usually diagnosed by physical examination, rather than by tests. However, a special kind of X-ray, called an arthrogram, is often used to diagnose specific injuries of the soft tissues of the shoulder.

I suggest you get checked by an orthopedic surgeon. Such a specialist should be able to diagnose the cause of your pain and clarify the apparent confusion exhibited by your other doctors. You may eventually need medication, such as cortisone injections, and physical therapy, but I'd hesitate to recommend treatment until the cause of your problem has been identified.

To provide you with additional information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
How could North cue-bid three diamonds without a diamond control? It was just part of his bidding system. After West's two-diamond overcall, three spades would be a limit raise, only inviting game. And a jump to four spades would show less in high-card strength. So three diamonds showed a forcing-to-game spade raise. South bided his time with three spades, but then jumped to six when North raised to four. For those of you who do not know it, that sudden jump to slam usually shows a void in a side-suit. This time it was in clubs. Declarer had to watch his p's and q's after the club lead. If he won the ace and threw a diamond without thinking, he would be set. He could survive by throwing a low heart instead. But he would need to draw trumps ending in his hand and then lead a low heart up to dummy's queen. If West ducked, dummy's queen would win, and the heart king would be thrown on the other high club. If West took the heart ace right away, declarer would later take the king and then get to dummy to throw two diamonds on the good club and the heart queen. What declarer actually did was easier. He played low from dummy and ruffed. He cashed the A-Q of spades and then led a heart up to the queen. West ducked, dummy's queen won, and the K-6 of hearts went away on the A-K of clubs. Nice, but all of this play strategy would have been wasted if East had made a lead-directing double of North's three-diamond cue-bid. With an opening diamond lead, declarer is dead in the water. YOUR BIRTHDAY

Jan. 17, 1991

Several associations you have endured that offered little value will fade from the scene in the year ahead. They will be replaced by new friendships in which constructive sharing is a priority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Give a wide berth to a friend today whose present affairs are rather complicated. If you get too close, this individual may draw you into something you've been hoping to avoid. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You tend to be the center of attention today, whether you desire it or not. This has advantages as well as disadvantages. Be extra mindful of how you behave in public.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Views about which you are more emotional than logical should be kept to yourself today. Being a good listener could also be the right type of public relations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Think carefully before involving yourself with friends in any type of joint venture today. If things don't work out to everyone's satisfaction, hard feelings could result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you have to make a major decision at this time affecting your mate as well as yourself, be sure there is complete accord. If there isn't harmony of purpose at first, wait until there is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Much depends upon the way you respond today when others make requests of you. If your reaction is uncooperative, it will set the tone for their future behavior.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You must be very careful today not to be too protective or overly possessive of one you love. Your good intentions will count for nil if you hold the reins too tightly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Disagreements between you and your mate should not be aired in front of others today. Instead of resolving matters, it could furnish fuel to make things worse.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) For the sake of expediency today, you might be tempted to sell others on an idea you're not completely sold on yourself. Don't advocate concepts you cannot sincerely endorse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be doing yourself a disservice today if you attempt to launch a new endeavor prematurely. Let propitiousness dictate your timetable, not impatience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Objectives which are of extreme importance to you might not be of equal importance to your associates. No matter how hard you push them today, it won't enhance their interest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Upon occasion, you can be a bit more blunt than necessary. This could be one of those days, and, if you speak before you think, you might regret it. (C)1991. NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
