Court Overturns Murder Conviction

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer
A Florida man was convicted of the 1970 murder of a Decatur newspaper worker on circumstantial evidence that did not adequately link him to the killing, the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals said Tuesday.

The appeals court unanimously overturned the conviction and life sentence of 52-year-old Glenn Dolvin of Key West, Fla.

Writing for the court, Judge William Bowen said there was "a glaring insufficiency of evidence" to link Dolvin to the killing of Charles Ray Lovett, 27, a composing room employee of the Decatur Daily.

Bowen said Dolvin "was convicted on speculation, suspicion and conjecture."

Florida medical examiners said Lovett apparently died from a shotgun blast to the chest.

Dolvin and his wife, Sue Dolvin, were both convicted in the Circuit Court of Morgan County in 1971 of Lovett's kidnaping and sentenced to 10 years in prison. Dolvin was charged with murder when Lovett's remains were identified by a Miami forensic odontologist.

State prosecutors claimed Dolvin's motive for killing Lovett stemmed from a grand larceny case in which Lovett was the chief prosecution witness. Other evidence in the case put Dolvin in Lovett's neighborhood the night he disappeared and one witness said Dolvin asked for directions to Lovett's street.

But the appeals court said the state failed to meet the "test of sufficiency of circumstantial evidence."

"While the motive is always a proper subject of proof, proof of motive alone cannot support a conviction for murder," Bowen wrote. "The mere presence of a person at the time and place of a crime is not sufficient to justify his conviction for the commission of the crime."

Bank Robbery Spree Hits New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — While Police Commissioner Robert McGuire was telling reporters of his plan to halt New York City's bank robbery spree, two more banks were held up. And two more. There were a $2 million armored car robbery.

Today, authorities were still trying to figure out how much money was taken in the 11 robberies on Tuesday — 10 banks and the Brink's armored car.

—In July, a record 125 banks were held up in the city. The old record was 84 in a single month. In the first 21 days in August, there have been 119 bank robberies.

—So far this year, police said, there have been more than 570 bank robberies, compared with a total of 677 for all of last year.

—Last Friday, a police officer was killed after a bank robbery near Grand Central Station; Monday, a bank teller was killed when a gunman robbed a European-American bank branch; last month, a plainclothes officer was seriously wounded in a shootout near Times Square after another holdup.

McGuire said he will talk with bank officials about what he said was a "vicious" among detectives that banks have reduced their attempts to stop the robberies.

—There is a sense now there is no viable security in banks," he said. "The suggestion people are safer by giving in to lawlessness is not borne out by experience."

The recent fatalities, McGuire said, proved it was not productive to "do away with all security, allow people to rob your institution, and hope you're not injured in the process."

A spokesman for Citibank acknowledged there was "always a trade-off" between security and providing a pleasant environment for customers to do business.

—Richard Kovacevich, senior vice president for Citibank's New York banking division, said Citibank has not found armed guards or bullet-proof glass to be particularly effective in stopping robberies.

"We have robberies in branches where there are bullet-proof barriers and armed guards," he said.

McGuire said the FBI and city police were preparing a joint team of investigators to handle the robberies.

But he said it is unarmored "no-passing" robberies that are escalating the fastest. In those incidents, a robber simply hands a cashier a note demanding money and walks out with the cash.

Seven of Tuesday's holdups were "note jobs."

In the Wall Street area, two gunmen forced their way into a Brink's armored car carrying $2,100,000 in 38 bags. The FBI said 34 of the bags containing $2,015,000 were taken by the robbers, who drove off in a fish truck with a guard and a driver who were not identified.

NATION IN BRIEF

Carter Plays Cello, Leaves Policy In Air

ABOARD THE DELTA QUEEN (UPI) — President Carter played the cello, went fishing and left unclear questions about U.S. policy in the Middle East and who is carrying it out.

With the United Nations Security Council beginning debate today on the Palestinian issue, Carter cruised for a sixth day on the sternwheeler Delta Queen toward a "town meeting" in Burlington, Iowa.

There was little elaboration aboard the riverboat on Carter's terse reply when asked who was in charge of U.S. Middle East policy.

"The president," he said as he walked up the gangplank after a visit Tuesday in Davenport, Iowa, and Moline, Ill.

U.S. Government Rapped

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) — Fresh from a tour of oil slick-struck areas of the Texas coast, state Attorney General Mark White charged the federal government with being lax in preventing and assessing damage from Mexico's rampaging oil spill.

White's salvo Tuesday against the U.S. government and Petroleros Mexicanos, the Mexican agency that owns the well, came during a two-day oil spill oil spill symposium. Slick observers said the spill had allowed them to remove much of the pollution from tourist areas.

But White, speaking in Austin, stressed his continued concern about what may happen in the coming weeks, particularly as the slick approaches the wide-open mouth of Matagorda Bay, a sizable estuary some 80 miles up the coast from Corpus Christi.

'Studs Lonigan' Writer Dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — James T. Farrell, the author of 83 books, including three novels about the Irish in Chicago, "Studs Lonigan: A Trilogy," died early today at his Manhattan home of coronary arrest. He was 75.

Farrell's trilogy was the basis of a recent television series. He recently completed his last novel, "The Death of Nora Ryan."

Farrell received the 1979 Emerson-Thoreau Medal of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Ray Files Libel Suit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Convicted assassin James Earl Ray filed a $300,000 libel lawsuit against Rep. Harold Ford Tuesday and promised to seek a trial for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. — if Ford is exonerated.

The suit, prepared by Ray at Brushy Mountain State Prison where he is serving a 99-year sentence for the King slaying, charges that Ford libeled him July 18 when he said that Ray fired the rifle that felled the civil rights leader.

Ford, D-Tenn., was a member of the House Assassinations Committee that concluded Ray may have been motivated by rumors of the $500,000 bounty on King's life allegedly offered by two St. Louis businessmen who are now dead.

Local Strikes Authorized

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers union has authorized local strikes at seven plants in four states in a move that could hamper car production by General Motors Corp.

Election Committee Cleared

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's election committee and the advertising agency run by his image-maker, Gerald Rudolph, have been cleared of any illegal financial actions in the 1978 general election.

New Oil Production?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The decade-long decline of U.S. oil production could end by 1985 if oil companies are freed to drill for new fields with money they might otherwise lose to a windfall profits tax, an industry spokesman says.

Presley Estate Settlement

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Elvis Presley's estate will pay $500,000 to two companies once controlled by fugitive Robert Vesco and a Bahamas firm to settle a breach of contract lawsuit over the sale of a custom Boeing 707 jet.

Longwood Rejects 'Final Offer' To Buy Hotel

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer
"Thanks, but no thanks," was the reaction of the Longwood City Commission to what Mrs. Marion St. Laurent, owner of the historic Longwood Hotel, termed her final offer.

Mayor John Lormann said Monday night a letter had been received offering the hotel property to the city for $225,000, even though the price to others is still $330,000.

Other city officials had been more enthusiastic about acquiring the 86-year-old three-story structure as a new city hall. At that time they hoped to acquire the property in the center of the Longwood Historical District for between $75,000 and $79,000.

Negotiations fell through, however, when Mrs. St. Laurent abruptly withdrew her previous offer.

A public hearing was held prior to Monday night's meeting at the request of the church's pastor Rev. Ken Holt. It is the usual procedure for the commission to authorize ordinance and then set up a public hearing, but when Holt first appeared before the commission July 9, two of the four commissioners said they opposed the annexation.

At the time, Commissioner Ray Leibensperger said he and Commissioner Larry Goldberg would vote against building a church there even if the property were annexed. Both claimed that they had received many objections to a church in that area by residents.

The hearing was scheduled so that residents could be heard, but none showed up Monday night to complain.

Energy-Saving Motives: Economic, Not Patriotic

By JEANNE LEMSE
UPI Family Editor
West Virginia farmer Henry Blankenship, 63, is teaching his calves to pull plows and other farm machinery.

Hilaris Heying, a former Iowa state senator, hooked his machine system to his chicken house so the chicken droppings provide gas for direct heating and some generation of electricity on his farm.

Alan and Diane Zeithamer use 150-proof alcohol from their own still to run equipment and cut their reliance on gasoline on their farm outside Alexandria, Minn.

In New Jersey, state legislators aide Monica Walsh, 27, moved 45 miles to a Trenton suburb, Hamilton, "because I couldn't afford the gas" to drive from her old apartment in Lakewood, and public transit was not available.

These are among the more unusual ways in which individual Americans are conserving fuel energy. Many others resort to more conventional methods such as:

—Adding insulation to their homes.
—Making fewer but longer business trips.
—Switching to energy-saving kitchen appliances.
—Some are cancelling vacations or vacationing closer to home.

A spot check by United Press International indicates people's motives are mainly economic. Patriotism, when it was mentioned at all, appeared to be incidental.

"I did it for the money but if the electricity I save really helps the country, then that's all right, too," said Ben Camarina, a Fresno, Calif., sheet metal worker. Camarina replaced his perfectly good home air-conditioning system with a device that cools by blowing air over water-soaked filter pads.

He said the new system has cut his summer electricity bill from about $100 a month to less than $60 "because we went from a three-horsepower motor to a one-half hp motor."

Young Had To Go...

Despite Sincerity

Andrew Young had to go. His error was intolerable — not so much that he held an unauthorized meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization but that he concealed his action from the State Department and did not tell the whole truth about it.

His successor is likely to be more experienced in diplomacy and the conduct of foreign affairs. But Young's service in the post was not without its pluses for this country. He restored a great deal of the respect for the United States among the nations of the Third World which had been alienated by the rhetoric of his predecessor, Daniel Moynihan.

But he embarrassed the president. He interfered with the Mideast peace process and made it much more difficult. And he was not candid. So he had to go.

Black Progress

There is good reason for some of the pessimism and self-doubt that afflicts the American psyche these days. Even a cursory survey of the economic and political landscape affords cause for serious concern. But Americans do themselves and their institutions a disservice when they permit acknowledged shortcomings in one area to cloud perceptions of genuine achievement in another.

The measurable and heartening progress made by black Americans since 1960 is a cause for pride. By almost any yardstick, black Americans are better off today than they were in 1960. Saying this loud, however, strikes some Americans of both races as a sign of opposition to further progress. It need not and should not be so. If the past is prologue, the record of the last two decades ought to be examined honestly.

Figures for family and individual median income show disproportionate gains for blacks. In 1960, the median income of working blacks was $3,723, just over half the $6,263 income median for whites. For 1977, the latest year for which statistics are available, the comparable figures were $11,028 for blacks and $14,917 for whites. The gap between white and black family income is also closing notwithstanding the massive influx of white females into the labor force in recent years.

The larger percentages of blacks holding high school and college degrees signifies past progress as surely as it holds forth a promise of greater gains in the future.

Nineteen years ago, a mere 13.9 percent of black Americans were high school graduates. In 1977, the figure stood at 28.4 percent. During this same period, the percentage of whites with high school degrees increased from 25.8 percent to 37.7 percent. The percentage of blacks with college degrees rose from 3.1 percent in 1960 to 7.2 percent in 1977 — a rate of increase slightly above that for whites over the same time span.

Election of black candidates to public office is a sure measure of political power. The number of black elected officials has nearly quadrupled just since 1970.

BERRY'S WORLD

Around The Clock

Folks are donning new shirts all over Seminole County. And I'm not talking about the kids showing off their new threads Monday when school opens. The most widespread case of youngsters wearing a sweaty, dirty pullover is explained by the second week of football practice at area high schools.

Calvin Lingelbach and Doug Dyer, the two most outstanding prospects from the local amateur program, have signed professional contracts. "I have given it a lot of thought," said Lingelbach just the other day, "and it isn't like baseball where you can set goals. I thought about a certain number of games I'd like to win, but afterward I realized the sport of baseball is so unique that a good year for me will be to miss a ball and look back and not see my partner giving me a disgusted look."

They signed the two because they felt the presence of a pair of young, aggressive Americans could instill new vigor into the lineup. Plus, the day when ja-lal was restricted to the Baqaos and a few Mexicans has passed. Fern Park front fans are likely to identify with Calvin and Doug rather strongly. Joey Corbit became the dance star of Miami, and was on the tongue of South Florida's aficionados in his very first season.

How Do You Judge A Judge?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Congress is preparing to tackle one of the most ignored problems in the federal establishment — what to do with federal judges accused of corruption, favoritism, inability or senility.

Because the Constitution gives federal judges lifetime appointments, little can be done about their shortcomings short of a lengthy impeachment trial in the Senate.

Eight judges and one Supreme Court justice have been impeached in the nation's history, the most recent in 1906. But many congressional and legal experts believe Congress has become so burdened that future impeachments of judges are only a remote possibility.

Democratic Sens. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona have an answer. They want to give the courts greater power to discipline their errant members.

The public with its increased skepticism demands that all branches of government account for their actions," said DeConcini. "Although most Americans have a high regard for the overall integrity of the federal judiciary, the past and recent publicity surrounding the acts of several U.S. judges have provided ample opportunity for questions to arise."

The critics cite several examples of judges who have disgraced the courts. Perhaps the most notorious was Willis Titter of Utah, a curmudgeon who ran his court according to his own rules. Often he would refuse to schedule any criminal cases for months at a time and then conduct dozens of trials within several days. Cases usually resulted as jurors lacked the time to read all witness and present evidence.

Herbert Fogel of Philadelphia made it a practice to show up late in his courtroom and treat all parties with contempt. Local lawyers have not had to worry about him since he resigned in 1976 after refusing to testify on the basis he might incriminate himself before a grand jury investigating judicial conduct.

Then there was the Ohio judge who handed major labor cases and employed as a secretary a labor-union officer who performed no secretarial services.

Nunn and DeConcini have drafted legislation that gives any citizen the right to file a complaint about a judge's conduct. A group of local judges could hear the complaints and its decisions could be appealed to a national court on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

Either body could request judges to retire, recommend that no further cases be assigned to them, or censure or reprimand them. Although judges would not lose their seats against their will, the national court could recommend that they be impeached by the House of Representatives.

Opponents of the bill contend that it threatens the independence of the judiciary. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said during an earlier debate on the bill: "We must have judges who have the courage to stand up and say, 'This is what the Constitution provides,'" without having to fear being run out of office by other judges or Congress.

What were the U.S. options? "We would have bought the shell back container if they wanted to sell it," one high-level official told me recently. Peter Gray, "But we were very worried that Hanoi would have every contingency in Asia."

It seemed likely that the U.S. committee would vote in favor of the U.S. committee, probably with a 10-9 vote. One CIA report noted the presence of a landing craft loaded with U.S. hardware used in Haiphong harbor, apparently ready for shipment.

Rooting For Wrong Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Life's turning points sometimes come upon us at odd times in unexpected places. I personally entered a new phase in the above world while watching the movie version of "Hair."

For the first time in a career of movie-going that dates all the way back to silent films, I found myself rooting for the wrong side.

I'm not talking now about anything so commonplace as watching a western and suddenly realizing you hope the Indians win. That is one of the universal experiences and is generally transitory. In most cases, it is simply a manifestation of the old palling-for-the-underdog syndrome.

I am talking here about a complete, against-the-grain sentiment reversal. The movie-makers put heart and soul behind a certain point of view and you end up, heart and soul, in the other camp.

"Hair," as my companion of the evening rather testily pointed out, I was the only person in the theater who was cheering for the straight. Audibly at least.

That reaction was entirely out of character. I had no identity problems at the stage version of "Hair." I knew who the good guys were even if the symbol had changed from white hats to rampant capitalism.

The movie, by contrast, was an emotionally disorienting in its way as "Billy Jack Goes to Washington."

It was Billy Jack who first made me aware that I harbored a latent desire to see a movie hero get clobbered. During "Hair," I let it all hang out.

What I regarded as the two finest scenes were even mentioned in the reviews I have read.

In one, an Army MP is being handed by a carload of Flower Children who went to visit the base during an armistice. I wish I had gotten the name of the actor who played the part of the MP. It was an Academy Award performance if ever I saw one.

Security Of U.S. Periled?

August in Washington, D.C., is usually notable for only three things: high temperature, high humidity and the absence of Congress. Early this August, however, something else worth noting — and seriously discussing — happened. The Intelligence Subcommittee of the Advisory Council on National Security and International Affairs of the Republican National Committee presented to the public and press a policy paper, "Intelligence and the Role of the Intelligence Community."

Although the subcommittee chairman, Richard V. Allen, an international affairs consultant, and the Advisory Council chairman, Fred C. Ikle, former head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, are Republicans (and, I assume, the other members of the intelligence subcommittee are, too), the paper is not partisan. Far from it. In fact, its first paragraph notes that the deterioration of the nation's intelligence capability began during the last two Republican administrations (though it adds that pressures from Congress were the major cause).

It states that "the intelligence community has been subjected to debilitating political attacks which have harmed our national security. The intelligence community has been losing its ability to supply the president, senior U.S. officials and Congress with the best possible information and timely warnings of threats to our security."

The paper cites numerous examples (via Iran, Afghanistan, the Horn of Africa) where our reduced intelligence capability led to setbacks in our foreign policy.

The report describes an "inadequate and unacceptable" the pending "Intelligence Reorganization and Reform Act of 1979 (Senate bill 2525). The legislation's faults lie with the assumptions of its advocates and drafters, the report says. The bill "has been drawn up by a small group of individuals who seem to have based on an old anti-CIA crusade than in creating an effective intelligence community. By accepting their charter, we would in effect be accepting a further erosion of the main threats to our liberties come from our own government, instead of from our external enemies."

The paper claims that the "charter" would smother the intelligence community in needless red tape and would not "provide the necessary personal sense of dedication and initiative."

First, they call for a comprehensive set of congressional hearings "designed to elicit the best available information as to our intelligence requirements for at least the next decade."

They recommended rebuilding the intelligence community, as a result of these hearings, within the framework of the National Security Act of 1947.

They recommended that the president have his own chief adviser for intelligence matters, "who would serve as (the president's) pleasure and should communicate the president's priorities to the intelligence community, should present to the Congress the president's views of the community's needs."

As a member of fact, Publisher Industries of Greenwich, Conn., already has offered to exchange alcohol fuel for raw sugar. This would save millions and reduce oil consumption. The offer is being reviewed by the Agricultural Department. Disclosure of the offer to the Energy Department. So far, the company hasn't even received a response. There seems to be no problem that the bureaucrats cannot solve.

Apparently, they would rather study problems that solve them.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Shelling Prompts Term: 'Children's Massacre Day'

By United Press International
Palestinian guerrillas traded artillery and rocket fire with Israeli gunners today and hospital officials in Sidon and Tyre said more than 30 persons were treated for shrapnel wounds and three others were pronounced dead on arrival from the war-torn area of southern Lebanon.

Most of the casualties were women or children and the English-language newspaper the described Tuesday as "Children's Massacre Day."

In the frontier town of Haabays, two children were killed by shelling. In the market town of Nabatiyeh, a 14-year-old boy was killed in a school run by Maronite Christian nuns and eight other students were wounded.

Wait And Hope On Infants

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — Doctors said today it will be at least 20 days before the three surviving infants of octuplets born to a Naples housewife are out of danger. "The three girls, weighing about 26 ounces each, are in serious condition, the doctors said, and are still vulnerable to a host of potentially fatal illnesses."

Dancer, 21, Raped On School Grounds

A 21-year-old Orlando woman who's a dancer at a topless lounge was raped this morning on the school grounds of a Fern Park elementary school, according to Seminole County deputies.

The dancer, who's employed by Circus-Circus in Fern Park, told deputies she left work shortly after 2 a.m. with three "male acquaintances" to retrieve one of the men's cars. She said she was told the man's car was parked at St. John's Village Apartments on Oxford Road.

When they arrived at the apartment complex, the woman and a man she knew only as Jamie left the car while the other two men drove away.

Suddenly, the man forced the woman to the school grounds of English Estates Elementary School, where he sexually assaulted her and physically attacked her, deputies say.

U.S. Abandons Palestinian Proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has "abandoned" plans to introduce a U.N. resolution supporting Palestinian rights, Middle East Ambassador Robert Strauss said today.

Strauss also angrily denied reports President Carter's policy toward the volatile area is in disarray, plagued by infighting among his top foreign advisers.

He indicated strongly that, while the administration has scrapped plans to put a compromise before the U.N. Security Council Thursday, the United States intends to veto any Arab resolution calling for an independent Palestinian state.

Refugee Orphans Await Uncertain Future

By PAUL WEDEL
KHAO LAN, Thailand (UPI) — They clap and sing, but the Cambodian orphans at Khao Lan refugee camp have a stolid, vacant look — a reflection of their terrible past and uncertain future.

The 109 "orphans" or "unaccompanied minors" at Khao Lan, 180 miles southeast of Bangkok, are given special care by the Thai Red Cross but they miss the individual attention a parent would provide.

The children ranging in age up to 15 cannot be legally considered orphans since in war-torn Cambodia there can be no proof that their parents are actually dead.

Many of them tell of seeing death from war, disease and starvation during their brief lives and their eyes cloud over as they remember.

They seven-year-old Sieng Tho recalls that his mother "swelled up and died" in a Khmer Rouge commune in Kampot province and her father left to fight the Vietnamese along the border. She said she never saw him again.

Sarong Sao is 13 years old, but hunger has etched lines of age into his face.

Sarong said he was forced to leave his mother behind as Khmer Rouge soldiers herded a column of civilians away from a Vietnamese military advance.

"She was too sick to keep up with the march so the leader said we had to go on without her," he said.

Sarong said he had eight brothers and sister, but some died during the Pol Pot regime

Refugee children have seen war, disease, death and some were missing on the trek to Thailand.

"Now I am alone," the frail boy said.

Hai Hoon, a 15-year-old boy with big brown eyes and long lashes, said he was given three liter cans of rice for the march to Thailand. The trip took two months.

"We boiled leaves and roots to eat," he said. "We were very hungry."

The Red Cross director at the camp said he had health care in Cambodia and malnutrition during the war had probably caused permanent damage to some of the children, but most were recovering well.

The director, who asked that her name not be used, is in charge of a growing health and activities center for the children.

A more protein-filled diet is given to the children than at other camp residents. The director said the center has been improved at the order of Thailand's Queen Sirikit, president of the Thai Red Cross.

Volunteers at the center said they sometimes dig into their own pockets to buy extra food for the children. Additional funds are received from the International Red Cross and private Thai donors.

Much of the effort of the Red Cross has been psychological as well as physical. The children, taught to be passive followers of orders under the Khmer Rouge, are being encouraged to sing songs and play games. A few donated toys were being distributed.

United Nations refugee officials said their future should be much better, although there are still some question marks.

The impossibility of proving that parents and relatives are dead makes legal adoption of the parentless refugees virtually impossible.

"We recommend they be placed into foster homes," one refugee official said. "That way there are fewer problems if the real parents show up sometime later."

Resettlement abroad in foster homes can only be done through national governments, she said. No individuals can become foster parents of refugees other than except through their national child welfare organizations, the official said.

So the children must wait action by the various governments.

Already the United States, Switzerland, Denmark, Canada and a number of other countries have expressed specific interest in resettling unaccompanied minors.

But the children in Khao Lan must await a decision by the Thai government to transfer them from military to United Nations jurisdiction.

The Thai government, worried about security threats from Cambodia, has kept the refugees, who include many Khmer Rouge soldiers, at Khao Lan under strict military control.

Their future is still uncertain, but for now they are adequately fed and housed for the first time in a long time.

As the Red Cross camp director put it as she watched the children play, "After all they have been through it is good to hear them laugh."

PUSH Having $$ Problems

GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI) — Operation PUSH, the Rev. Jesse Jackson's nationally acclaimed self-help project for blacks, has achieved some success but faces serious financial problems in Jackson's hometown.

When Jackson, who runs Operation PUSH out of his Chicago headquarters, set up the Greenville office 11 months ago, he said it would be only the first of 10 offices in South Carolina.

So far, Greenville is the only South Carolina city to have PUSH, an acronym for People United to Save Humanity. There are other southern PUSH offices in Memphis, Little Rock, Columbia, Ga., Chattanooga, Tenn., and New Orleans, and PUSH officials say they have chapters in 20 cities nationwide. But the Greenville office is on shaky financial footing.

Although money remains a problem for the Greenville PUSH program, a pilot project designed to motivate students has been successful at two schools. The program has been funded with local government money.

"It certainly is needed," said Lullierborn Spangone, Greenville County Board of Education coordinator for Project PUSH. "It does need to be expanded."

PUSH was founded by the civil rights activist in the 1960s to deal with discrimination in employment and housing, and to lead the expectations and goals of students.

In cities such as Los Angeles, the project's success has drawn widespread attention, turning Jackson into the national spotlight. The civil rights leader was one of a group invited to President Carter's "civility summit" recently.

While Operation PUSH's Greenville program has received money from several offices for the school program, the organization has been unable to get grants to support other projects, officials said.

The small storefront office, which is located by the South Carolina National Bank building behind it, is not even open to the public.

The organization, which paid about $50 a month to lease the storefront building, has virtually emptied the bank, and will have to close the office soon, said Jackson, 44, the office manager.

"The office will not be able to stay open a few more weeks," he said.

PUSH board members, including clergy, businessmen and doctors, may contribute some personal money to make the office work, but we can't go on that way," said Davis.

"We will have to make some drastic changes," said Davis, the owner-operator of a mortuary.

The organization has about 100 members who contribute to $5 a year, but Davis said the real problem is the lack of a full-time executive director.

"We are definitely lacking in strong leadership," said Davis. "We believe it could be a vital and moving program if we had an executive director."

Jackson's presence helps when he visits the area, "but the motivation goes when he goes," Davis said.

While a membership drive will be undertaken to build up the organization's treasury, "I think great money is the real answer," Davis said.

The group is seeking funding through the Greenville Urban League to hire two related persons to staff the office for eight hours a day during the week.

It is open now only when Davis or another PUSH official can spare the extra time to man it — usually in the late afternoon and early evening.

The plan for operating several offices across the state "has not developed at all," Davis said.

"Many, it's because of a lack of interest in the other areas and the absence of anyone else to promote it."

The Greenville PUSH office has spent much of its initial funds on developing PUSH chapters in other areas. It has a program at Overbrook Elementary School and Greenville Senior High School.

Alberta Ortman, who coordinates programs for PUSH and is in charge of the school program at Overbrook Elementary School and Greenville Senior High School.

"The school district has contributed $10,000 for the first year, and PUSH officials hope to get $20,000 in federal funds for community liaison workers and office help."

It is a voluntary program in which students sign a pledge to study hard, get good grades, and avoid trouble.

The program, which is being implemented in several schools, is designed to help students who are having trouble in school.

We've had a fuel adjustment charge since 1925. Here's why you've just noticed it.

Very simply, it's higher. Because of higher fuel oil costs. What does the cost of fuel oil have to do with your monthly fuel adjustment? Practically everything.

Like you, we have to buy fuel oil at current market prices. We need it to generate more than half of the electricity you use. And when the cost of oil shoots up—or drops down—your monthly fuel adjustment reflects it.

Right now, we're paying dramatically more than ever before. As a matter of fact, Florida Power & Light's fuel costs for the month of June 1979 were considerably more than our total fuel costs for the entire year of 1970!

Add an extra hot summer — already causing Florida Power & Light customers to use record-high amounts of electricity — and you come up with the other big reason for those higher electric bills.

You and we can't control the skyrocketing costs of oil. Or the weather. But you can control the amount of electricity you use. And that should help to lower your electric bills.

For some helpful energy-saving tips, stop by your local Florida Power & Light office and pick up a set of our free folders. They could help you notice something new: a lower electric bill.

Kucinich Runs Again; 'I'm People's Mayor'

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mayor Dennis Kucinich, who barely survived an ouster effort a year ago this month, is running for reelection.

The 32-year-old mayor Monday vowed a bare-knuckles campaign for a second two-year term at Cleveland City Hall despite what many describe as monumental opposition from Cleveland's political and business establishment.

He started by bitterly describing his top challenger — Lt. Gov. George Voinovich, a Republican — as a candidate who would take "dirty pieces of silver" from Cleveland's "monied special interests."

School Lunch Week Adds Up To Nutrition With Love

Food served with loving hands adds up to "Nutrition With Love," the special focus of this year's National School Lunch Week, October 14-20. "Chips with cling peaches for dessert will be one of the special menus offered during that week to children of all ages. And like every other day served by qualified National School Lunch program every weekday of the school year, it provides approximately one-third of a child's daily nutritional needs, based on the current Recommended Daily Allowance.

At the same time, this menu reflects the school foodservice industry's more versatile approach to planning and their growing commitment to give their young patrons the foods they enjoy.

Since 1946, when the school lunch program began with the passage of the National School Lunch Act, an increasingly professional school foodservice industry has worked with the United States Department of Agriculture — following the most up-to-date nutrient guidelines — to allow managers to plan lunches at a reasonable cost that reflect the regional, cultural and ethnic choices of the children to whom they are served.

In search of the sometimes elusive "clean plate," the USDA Type A lunch program has been revised periodically with the most recent changes (1977) allowing a new menu flexibility and opening the way for such childhood favorites as pizza, corn dogs, tacos and fish 'n' chips. Among other changes: portion sizes vary according to age group served; lunches containing rice and pasta are no longer required to contain bread as well; flavored low-fat milk, skim milk or buttermilk can be offered in addition to whole and chocolate milk.

It's almost as important as the new menu flexibility is the current trend toward student participation in menu planning. Once cafeteria captives spending "mystery money" every Thursday, today students — even at the elementary school level — work with teachers and school lunch professionals in planning their daily fare. It's a real-life situation in which students not only learn nutrition principles, but get first-hand knowledge of the "foodservice market" and economics.

AT SCHOOL...
OR AT HOME...
 Official National School Lunch Week (October 14-20) menu. Fish 'n' Chips with peaches for dessert, is easy to call on at home with pure white batter or breaded North Atlantic Cod, and crispy crinkle-cut potatoes from the frozen food case and ever-ready canned cling peaches. Or make a hot and satisfying, delicately flavored Home for Lunch Chowder. It's ready in minutes, using new "no-bake" fish powder. With it, serve America's favorite finger food — French fries — hot and crispy from the oven. Buy them frozen, bake one or two (or more) servings at a time and keep the rest frozen for use another day.

 After lunch, give the scholars a take-along dessert... miniature Danish Peach Pizzas, a Ginger Jewel Bar of a Peachy Lunchbox cookie. Canned cling peaches and fruit cocktail keep these quick mix meals fresh and moist all week... if they last that long, of course!

HOME FOR LUNCH CHOWDER

1 lb. frozen North Atlantic Cod, Haddock, Ocean Perch or Pollock
 2 cans (10 ounce) condensed tomato soup
 1 1/2 cans water
 1 (10 oz.) package frozen mixed vegetables
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 Dash pepper
 Allow frozen fish to stand unwrapped at room temperature for about 15 minutes. With a sharp knife, cut in cubes. Combine soup and water and heat. Add fish cubes, frozen vegetables and seasonings to hot liquid. Stir 8 to 10 minutes. Fish is ready to serve when it becomes opaque and flakes easily. Serves 6.

DANISH PEACH PIZZA

1 can (29 ounce) cling peach slices
 2 packages (8 ounce, each) refrigerated crescent rolls
 1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
 2 tablespoons butter
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 Drain peaches. Separate crescent rolls and divide each package into 4 rectangles as cut marks indicate. Pinch diagonal cut marks together and cut each rectangle into 2 squares (approximately). Roll up corners and edges of dough to form rim and make circles about 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Place circles on greased cookie sheet so edges do not touch. Mix brown sugar, butter and cinnamon until crumbly. Sprinkle about 1/2 teaspoon sugar mixture into center of each circle. Top with 1 or 2 peach slices. Bake in 375 degree F. oven 20 minutes. Serve warm with whipped cream or ice cream, if desired. Makes 16 miniature Dessert Pizzas.

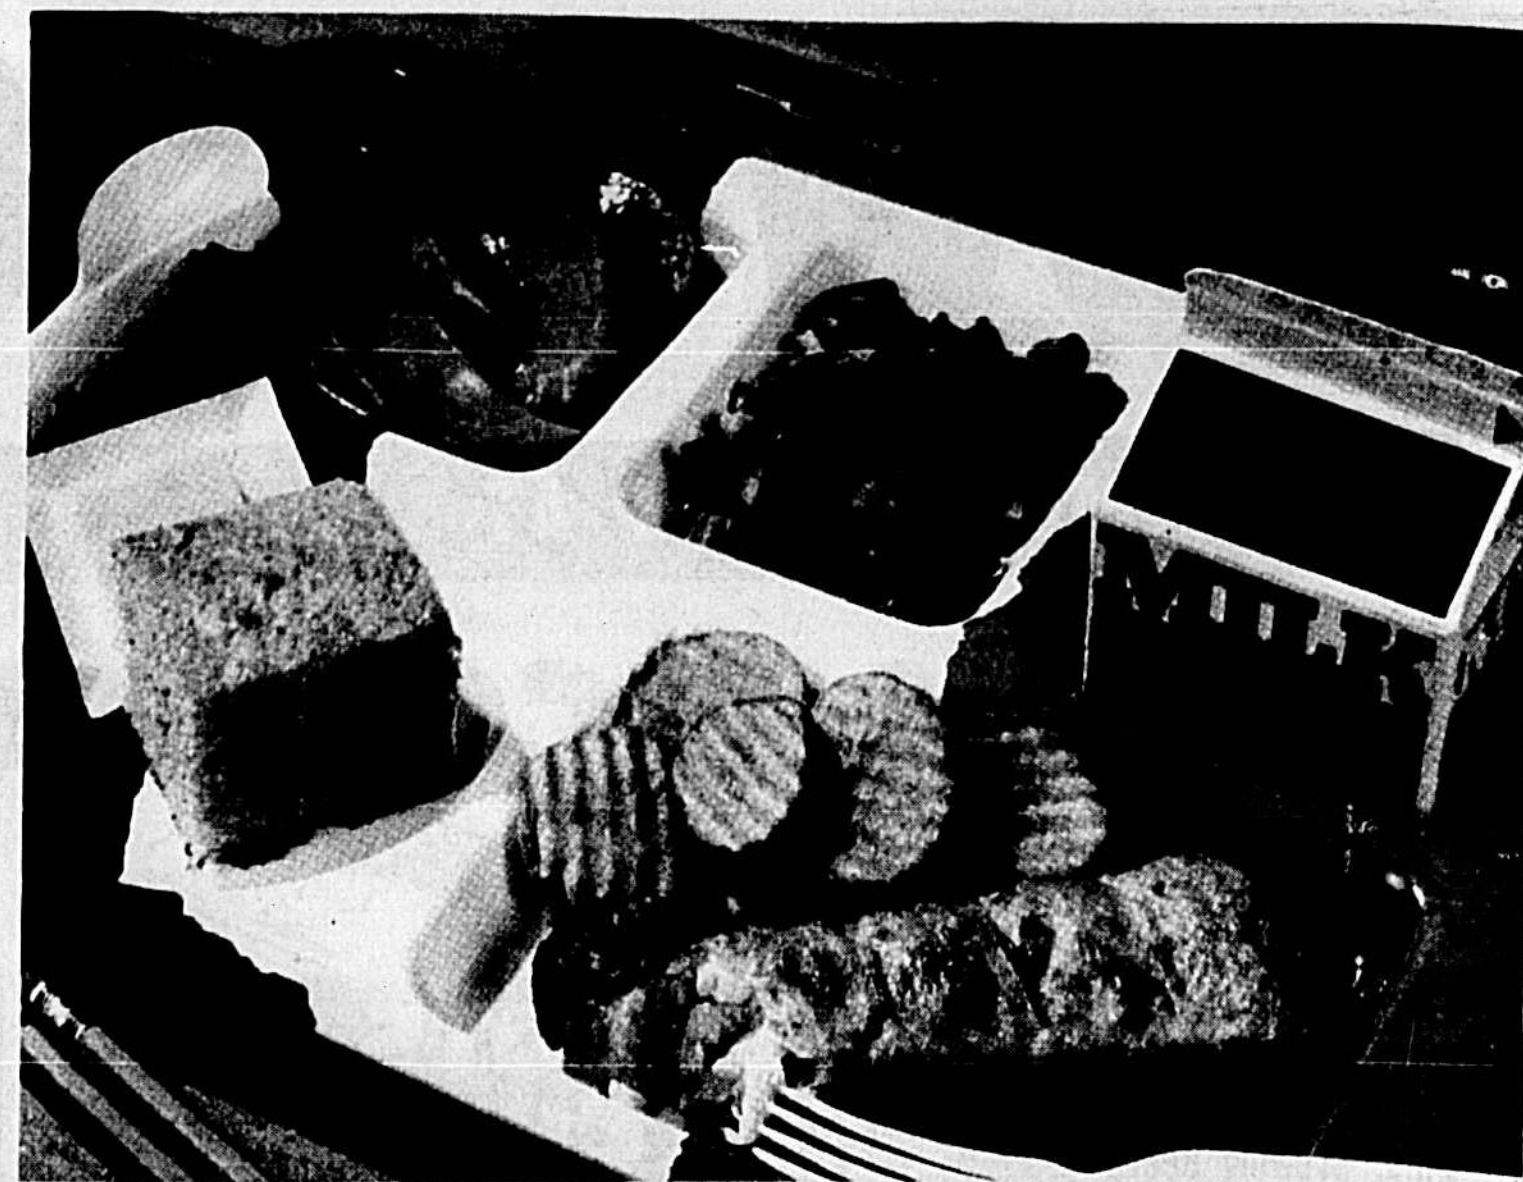

PEACHY LUNCH BOX COOKIES

1 can (29 ounce) cling peach slices
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
 1/4 cup peach syrup
 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
 1/4 teaspoon lemon juice
 Drain peaches, reserve syrup. Combine peaches, cinnamon, nutmeg, and syrup in medium-size sauce pan. Cook over medium heat for 15-20 minutes or until mixture cooks down to a jam-like consistency. Remove from heat, stir in walnuts and lemon juice. Set aside to cool.
 Dough
 1/2 cup shortening
 1 cup sugar
 2 eggs, well beaten
 3/4 cup sifted, all purpose flour
 3 teaspoons baking powder
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cup milk
 1/4 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs, mix well. Sift dry ingredients together and add to creamed mixture alternately with milk and vanilla. Mix well after each addition. Roll dough 1/4 inch thick on floured surface. Cut into 2 1/2-inch rounds. Place on lightly greased cookie sheet, placing level teaspoon of filling on half rounds and cover with another round. Seal edge with tines of fork. Bake at 400 degree F. (hot) oven 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes approximately 30 cookies.
 If dough becomes difficult to work with, refrigerate until it is firm.

GINGER JEWELS

1 can (17 ounce) fruit cocktail
 1 package gingerbread mix
 1 1/2 cups sour cream
 3 tablespoons sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 Drain fruit, cocktail and reserve syrup. Grease a 13x22-inch rectangular cake pan and dust with flour. Mix gingerbread according to package directions using reserved fruit syrup for part of required liquid. Turn into pan. Bake at 350 degrees F. about 20 minutes. Remove from oven; let stand about 10 minutes. Whip sour cream until fluffy. Beat in sugar, vanilla and cinnamon. Fold in drained fruit cocktail. Spread over cake in pan. Bake 10 minutes longer.

Serve A Tasty Main Course Salad

In all Italian landscapes, the olive tree poses a sweet, rich background. And that's how the Italians use olive oil. It's a background, an enhancer of the delicious vegetables they prize so highly in salads or cooked dishes.

Salads of meat or fish, pasta and vegetables make interesting main courses for lunches and suppers — whether they're served overlooking the bay of Naples or right in your own backyard.

Insalata di Pasta e Tonno combines tuna, pasta shells, fresh vegetables and roasted peppers. The dressing of olive oil, Italian seasoning and red wine vinegar is made first and set aside for flavors to develop. You can time it so the pasta shells finish cooking just about the time the dressing is ready. Toss the warm pasta shells with the dressing first so the shells won't stick together, then combine with other ingredients. Refrigerate at least two hours; serve either chilled or at room temperature. The second salad, Insalata di Ouve e Pomodoro is a light tossing of hard-cooked eggs, tomato wedges and sliced scallions, well-seasoned and bathed in a richly flavored olive oil dressing. Wonderful with chunks of Italian bread to mop up any extra dressing.

INSALATA DI PASTA E TONNO (TUNA AND SHELL SALAD)
 1/2 cup olive oil
 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
 1 teaspoon salt
 2 1/2 cups cooked medium-size pasta shells (1 cup raw)
 1 cup thinly sliced zucchini
 2-3rd cup shredded carrot
 1-2rd cup thinly sliced radishes
 1 can (7 oz.) light tuna, drained and chunked
 1/2 jar (7 1/2 oz.) roasted red peppers, diced
 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
 In a small bowl combine olive oil, Italian seasoning and salt; set aside for 10 minutes for flavors to blend. In a medium bowl combine pasta shells, zucchini, carrot, radishes, tuna and red peppers. Add vinegar to oil mixture; mix well. Pour over pasta mixture; mix well. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours. Serve on lettuce leaves, if desired.
 Yield: 4 to 6 portions.

INSALATA DI OUVUE E POMODORI (EGG AND TOMATO SALAD)
 1/4 cup olive oil
 1 1/2 teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
 Dash ground black pepper
 3 medium-sized ripe tomatoes, cut in wedges (3 cups)
 5 hard-cooked eggs, cut in wedges
 1/2 cup sliced scallions (green onions)
 2 tablespoons lemon juice

Lettuce
 In a small bowl combine olive oil, basil, salt, garlic powder and black pepper; set aside for 10 minutes for flavors to blend. In a medium bowl place tomato wedges, egg wedges and scallions. Add lemon juice to oil mixture; mix well. Pour over tomato mixture; toss lightly. Spoon onto a serving platter lined with lettuce, if desired.

School Panel OKs Search Of Student Cars, Lockers

Thanks to a new "search" policy, school administrators will be able to keep a keener eye out for any drugs or drug paraphernalia brought on campus by students.

The Seminole County school board unanimously approved a search consent policy whereby students would give written consent to having their lockers or automobiles searched for suspected drugs.

Acquiring a parking permit, students would be issued a consent form stating the principal or his designee may search his locker or car for contraband substances. The search would be conducted in the presence of the student and one other certified person. Any student's failure to cooperate in the locker or vehicle search will be grounds for suspension.

The new search policy is the school board's answer to deter students from bringing contraband substances to school and thus, decrease their usage.

School board member Pat Telson, who initiated the drive for a stiffer drug policy, said she wanted to keep the school campuses "as drug-free as possible."

Currently, the school district has the legal right to search students' lockers for any contraband material, said Ralph Ray, administrative assistant and public information officer.

Although policy varies from school to school, a student normally is suspended for five days for his first offense and 10 days for subsequent offenses.

Ray said, "But if we suspect he is selling drugs, we recommend him to the school board for expulsion."

90 Minutes More For Kindergarteners

Board Says No To 'Early Out' Busing

By SHARON CARRASCO Herald Staff Writer

Despite the protests of parents and teachers, the Seminole County School Board elected to take no action Wednesday to reinstate busing for "early out" kindergarteners in the proposed 1979-80 budget.

The school board is expected to approve the $75.8 million school budget Monday at the public hearing. Approval would mean a 90-minute longer day for kindergarteners.

For the past several years, the school district had instituted a practice whereby kindergarteners leave school at 1:25 p.m., about 90 minutes before the older children, who leave the school grounds at 2:45 p.m.

But in his recommendation of the proposed transportation budget of $2,903,955, Superintendent William Laver did not include money to continue the "early out" route. The elimination of this practice would save the school district an estimated $90,000 "for gas, oil and salaries," Laver said.

Wednesday, Laver told the school board the two major cost items in the transportation budget were supplying buses for students on double session at Lake Brantley High School and Teague Middle School and for exceptional children.

The 12 kindergarten teachers and parents who spoke against the bus elimination said the longer day would cause the youngsters to grow tired and thus become less attentive in classroom activities. One teacher said the additional classroom time would subtract from her opportunity to prepare educational activities for the children and schedule teacher-parent conferences.

After listening to a string of protests, Laver told the audience they could take some action on their own to remedy the situation: "Parents who are really concerned about lengthening the day should not put them into public kindergarten, but them in private kindergarten where the hours are as long as they want."

Sherry O'Leary, a first grade teacher at Lake Orienta Elementary School, brought applause from the protesters in her rebuttal to Laver's suggestion: "As a taxpayer in this county, I am appalled that Mr. Laver would say take your child out and put him in private school. Mr. Laver, I will remind you this is my school system, not yours."

She reminded chairman Robert Feather and school board members Allen Keeth and Pat Telson they had voted to keep the "early out" kindergarten program last year when a move was made to streamline it.

"Make the educational decision, not a financial one," she said. "Other parents, including Jean Morris, told the school board they had not heard of the proposed elimination until it was too late. "I resent the fact that this decision was made one week ago."

Mrs. Morris, whose child will begin kindergarten at Lake Orienta this fall, said, "We didn't have a chance to do anything about it. You can't get your kid into a private school now. It's too late."

Rick Harris, president of the Seminole Education Association (SEA), told the school board it had been able to afford the shorter day in past years and presented past carryover figures of several thousand dollars.

During 1977-78, the transportation budget of $1.9 million had a carryover of $101,000 or 5.3 percent of the budget amount, said Harris, according to the financial report. For the past year, the transportation budget of $2.5 million carried over $326,000 or 13 percent. He predicted the proposed transportation would carry over 10 percent or $290,000.

"In each of those years, you had a short kindergarten day," Harris said. "I don't see how they could be costly items."

One mother asked the school board if parents could organize their own car pool and transport kindergarteners home early. Laver said state law would prohibit the car pooling but kindergarteners must be in school a minimum of four hours per day for attendance credit.

Carol Slessinger, a kindergarten teacher at Wekiva Elementary School, told the school board: "My obligation is to see they (kindergarteners) don't get turned off to school at five years old. If we are putting dollars and cents before their attitudes, we are doing the wrong thing."

Airport Fight To Obey U.S. Nears End

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

The end of an 18-month to two-year struggle waged by the Sanford Airport Authority to obey federal regulations by clearing the approach to the north-south runway is in sight.

The authority at a special meeting this morning instructed attorney William Hutchison to negotiate the purchase of two parcels totaling 34 acres south of the airport for the approach.

Hutchison said trial has been set for Aug. 27 for completion of condemnation proceedings for the properties, adding since the airport began procedures to acquire the properties values of the land have gone up by 33 to 56 percent.

The attorney said the latest appraisals for the properties would be the "bottom line" — the least amount — a jury would consider awarding the property owners if the lands were taken.

The award could be much greater, Hutchison said, and in addition the airport authority would have to pay appraisal fees, court costs and attorney fees for both sides in the issue.

He recommended the negotiations to settle on price out of court.

Airport Manager J.S. (Red) Cleveland said the issue began 18 months to two years ago with the necessity of clearing some trees which had grown up into the approach to Runway 26. When a new lighting system was installed the federal government required the clearing of the approach.

"We were not successful at that time in negotiating to get the trees down and unable to get the county to remove the land as the trees would be removed," Cleveland said. Ultimately the trees were cut and the runway was designated for a "non-precision instrument approach," he said.

Cleveland noted before the authority could negotiate for the purchase it was required by federal regulations to arrange two appraisals and an appraisal review the results of which formed the basis for the federal grant application.

After the grant was approved, based on those figures, updated appraisals were obtained showing that values of the properties had increased substantially.

With the grant amount locked into the first appraisal, the acquisition of the land will require a higher than anticipated outlay of money by the authority, Cleveland pointed out. The exact amount will not be known, he pointed out, until negotiations are concluded.

Aide from increased costs, Cleveland said, "we want to be good neighbors and settle this and not drag it through the courts further."

In other business, Cleveland said he will be talking today to officials of the Superior Training Service with main offices in Indianapolis about leasing airport facilities for a 18-month period for a training school.

The school trains persons in the operation of heavy equipment and the trucks. The lease would include a taxiway, office space and an area for parking the heavy equipment and trucks. Cleveland said lease payments for all the property involved would be about $1,400 monthly including utilities.

The school system is a participant in the economically needy policy under the auspices of the National School Lunch Act. Recently, the federal government elected to raise the income levels of families who qualify for the program.

Last year, a family of five was eligible for reduced-price lunches with an annual income of $14,530 compared with the new figure of $16,200 this year, Mrs. Whitmore said.

To be eligible for the free lunch program, that same family of five needed an annual income of $7,400 last year compared with $10,300 this year, she said.

To be eligible for either program, the family size and Hoisted to the sky in a cherry-picker, Seminole County Sheriff John Polk painstakingly nails the sheriff's department emblem to Building 310. The sheriff's department recently moved to the facility and acquires "a little more elbow room." As he hammers away, Polk says, "The sheriff's department has found a new home."

Goldberg Resigns, Regrets Unfinished Longwood Budget

By JANE CASSELLBERRY Herald Staff Writer

Longwood City Commissioner Larry Goldberg ended the suspense late Wednesday afternoon by submitting his resignation from the District 1 seat to City Clerk Linda Martin, effective at 5 p.m.

He did so to comply with a court order by Circuit Court Judge Richard Muldrew, who gave Goldberg until midnight today to resign or go to jail for contempt of court.

Goldberg previously had submitted his resignation effective at 11:45 p.m., Sept. 3, to run in the Sept. 4 special election to fill a vacancy in District 5, where Goldberg has lived since last September. The seat was vacated when the resignation of Stephen Barton on May 31, because he had moved out of the city, with 1 1/2 years left in his term.

Goldberg today expressed regret that he could not stay on until the city's budget for the coming fiscal year is completed. "I am very upset that we were unable to finish the budget Tuesday night and I couldn't get the other commissioners to hold another budget session Wednesday night," he said. "We had gone through all the departments' budgets, but there were still some loose ends not agreed upon, so we couldn't finalize it."

"If it were not for completing the budget, I would have resigned earlier," he added.

An effort by Mayor June Lorman to appoint Goldberg to fill the vacancy at the June 11 meeting failed to gain the support of the commission, so a special election was called.

Should Goldberg defeat the only other candidate in the race, William Mitchell, he will be back on the commission in two weeks.

The basis for the court decision requiring Goldberg to resign is the city charter which requires commissioners to reside in the districts they represent. Goldberg has since moved from his home in Sandalwood subdivision in District 1 to a new one in Tiberon in District 5 either just before or just after the special election which ratified the charter last September. He said he moved only after City Attorney Ned Julian Jr. gave the opinion the move would not violate the city charter or ordinance.

Julian has defended the city commission and Goldberg, in a suit filed last October by Robert Daves, unsuccessful city commission candidate in last December's election, seeking to oust Goldberg from his District 1 seat.

The city commission has continued to resist efforts to vacate the seat. Forced to vote on the issue or go to jail for 10 days, commissioners at a special May 31 meeting voted 2-1 not to oust Goldberg.

Later Judge Muldrew ordered Goldberg to resign by

Aug. 7 or go to jail. The decision was appealed by Julian, but the judge on Aug. 16 set aside the automatic stay of his original order.

It is expected the District 1 seat will remain vacant until the regular December municipal election.

School Lunches Could Top 1.25 Million

Seminole County schools can expect to serve more free and reduced-price lunches during the 1979-80 school year than the 1.25 million meals tallied last year, predicts Charlotte Whitmore, director of food service.

"It should go up because the income scale (for eligibility) is up over last year," Mrs. Whitmore said.

The school system is a participant in the economically needy policy under the auspices of the National School Lunch Act. Recently, the federal government elected to raise the income levels of families who qualify for the program.

Last year, a family of five was eligible for reduced-price lunches with an annual income of $14,530 compared with the new figure of $16,200 this year, Mrs. Whitmore said.

To be eligible for the free lunch program, that same family of five needed an annual income of $7,400 last year compared with $10,300 this year, she said.

To be eligible for either program, the family size and income scale should be as follows:

Family size	Free Lunch	Reduced-Price Lunch
1	$4,500	$7,100
2	6,000	9,200
3	7,400	11,600
4	8,900	13,900
5	10,300	16,200
6	11,800	18,400

Families whose annual income does not meet the above criteria may still be eligible to participate. Those with unusually high medical bills or special education expenses are urged to apply, Mrs. Whitmore said.

The cost of reduced lunches has been reduced even further this fall, from 20 cents to 10 cents for all grade levels.

Last year, the public schools served 2,800 reduced-price meals per day totaling 300,000 meals during the entire 1978-79 year.

Approximately 5,000 students receive a free lunch daily last year or a total of 880,000 lunches for the entire school year.

Application forms for the program will be sent home with students. Additional copies and more information concerning eligibility is available at each principal's office. All information received is confidential.

Each application is reviewed by the principal who determines whether a family may participate in the program. If a parent is dissatisfied with the principal's ruling, he may request an informal hearing by calling or writing the food service director, 407 W. Fourth St., Sanford, 323-2220.

Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. If an annual income or family size should change, the family should contact the principal to file a new application to determine eligibility.
