The Treatment Of A Goiter

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please tell me all you can about a goiter. I have an inside goiter in my neck. My neck is swollen behind, in front and on the side. I have lumps in my neck and my face is swollen. My doctor gave me thyroid tablets which will take from three to six months to reduce it and I have arthritis in my neck, back, arms and legs. Is it something that might choke me? Should it be taken out or wait? I had a thyroid scan.

I have heard that taking thyroid tablets makes you hungry all the time. Is there a good diet? I have just been taking thyroid eight days.

DEAR READER—An inside or inward goiter refers to an enlarged thyroid gland that extends below the breast bone just at the bottom of the neck. If part of the goiter is trapped behind the breast bone, it can produce pressure on the wind pipe.

Since you've had a thyroid scan, I would presume that you had a rather careful evaluation of your thyroid status. I am not optimistic that your goiter is going to disappear in just a few months, however, even if you are taking thyroid medicine. It is true that thyroid is given to help reduce the size of the goiter. It works best when the gland is relatively small. From your description, it sounds as though you may have an enlargement that is rather marked.

In any case, I am sure it's worth a trial to see if it starts to decrease the size of the thyroid gland. If it doesn't, you may need to have surgery to relieve the pressure created by the goiter. Whether this is necessary depends on what symptoms, if any, you may have.

Taking thyroid medicine shouldn't increase your appetite.

Most cases of obesity, however, are caused by simple overeating and not enough physical activity. Nevertheless, if you were low on thyroid, that can be a factor in contributing to obesity.

petite an awful lot unless you had a low thyroid state to begin with. You can cause a goiter and have normal thyroid function. If you were low on thyroid, that can be a factor in contributing to obesity.

Whatever the diet and add other foods you like to maintain your weight level. If you want to lose weight, then just limit your foods to the items listed in the diet.

I would like to emphasize that most overweight people do not need thyroid medicine. In fact, thyroid pills are overused if anything and are often given when they shouldn't be. The Food and Drug Administration is making an extra effort to discourage the use of thyroid medicines to treat obesity.

If you have normal thyroid function and then take thyroid medicine, all that really happens is that your own thyroid gland quits producing so much hormone. The end result is no real change in the amount of thyroid hormone available to your body. The difference is that your thyroid gland is less active.

Extend Herndon Subsidy?

The Seminole County Commission will make a decision on going into the ambulance business by the end of the month, according to Commissioner Dick Williams — and may opt to continue subsidizing Herndon Ambulance through the end of the current fiscal year Sept. 30.

A decision on the matter, expected to come during a public hearing today on Herndon's franchise to operate in the county, was delayed until the full commission could be present next Tuesday.

Commissioners Sandra Glenn and Bob Starn are in Tallahassee today attending conferences for newly elected county commissioners sponsored by the Florida Association of County Commissioners.

Idus Willis, president of Herndon, said his firm will have figures ready for the county within the week on whether it is

Researcher Ends The Search Mystery House Found & Lost

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

The case of the "mystery house" has been solved. Thanks to research by Pauline Kriz of the Sanford Credit Bureau office, the hunt for the old William Murray house has ended.

But, though the mystery has been solved, the old two-story home with its gingerbread trim is no longer standing. In its place is a quiet subdivision of affluent homes. The frantic search by Sanford residents for the house was prompted by an appeal for help by 75-year-old Earl Townsend Ware of Pine Grove, Calif.

Ware, who was visiting Sanford with his wife for the first time since he left her 70 years ago, was trying to locate the property that had belonged to his grandparents, William and Mary E. Murray, when he was a child.

All he could remember was it was near the river and a creek ran along side the five-acre piece, but he had a photograph showing how the house looked back about 1906.

Scores of people called or came in to tell us where they thought the house was located or had formerly been before it was torn down.

But it was Mrs. Kriz, whose job it is to research records at the courthouse, who actually discovered the legal description of the property.

She found the deed recorded in the Seminole County Courthouse when the Murrys, then living in San Bernardino, Calif., transferred the property to Nicholas Zernowen on Feb. 3, 1919.

Seminole did not become a county until 1913, so the area was still a part of Orange County when Murray had acquired the five acres.

The property changed hands again on July 18, 1919 when Zernowen sold it to M. Hanson, who in turn sold it to W. M. Scott on Nov. 16, 1919.

On March 13, 1928 the property was conveyed by W. M. and Mary Scott to Marvin Investment Co., which developed a subdivision known as Marvans, located north of Second Street to Lake Monroe, east of the Mayfair Section.

Mrs. Carl Dalzell of 3 Tappen Zee Lane, Longwood, a friend of Ware, verified that Mrs. Murray's name was Mary E. and that they had lived in California after leaving Sanford.

She said that it was a "sentimental journey" for Ware to come back to Sanford so many years and that although he had to return home to California before the old home place was located, she and her husband are keeping him informed of the results.

"He was so pleased and surprised with the attention given him and everybody's efforts to help him," said Mrs. Dalzell. "He is still very alert and active and even backpacks in the mountains."

She said that she hopes to get in touch with some of the old-timers in Sanford and tape some of their remembrances to send to Ware.

Shah Splits

ASWAN, Egypt (UPI) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of Iran arrived in this Egyptian resort city today on a military jet from riot-torn Iran, apparently en route to exile in the United States.

The Shah, weeping openly when he left Tehran today at the controls of the military jet, insisted he was only taking a "vacation" to give the new Iranian civilian government a chance to end 14 months of rioting. But high sources in Tehran said he was headed for permanent exile in the United States.

Egypt and President Anwar Sadat had awaited the Shah with promises of a welcome that would show "eternal gratitude" for the monarch's support of Cairo's politics over the years.

Thousands of people spilled into the streets of Tehran and cars honking loudly jammed up all traffic as Radio Iran announced the Shah's departure in 10:45 p.m. broadcast.

Mobs of youths deliciously hopped around in the streets, threw candy inside cars and hugged and kissed each other.

Military units made no attempt to stop the demonstrations.

High palace sources said that after the Shah has visited Egypt, he will travel on to the United States to join other members of the royal family.

Most of the rest of the Shah's family has

School Breakfast? Edict Hinges On Two Key Votes

By LEONARD BRANSDORF
Herald Staff Writer

The decision on whether Seminole County schools have a breakfast program apparently will rest on the votes of veteran school board members Pat Telson and new member William Kroil.

"Yes, we see Mrs. Telson and Mr. Kroil as the swing votes," said Treana Kaye, managing attorney for the Sanford office of Central Florida Legal Services.

That group, along with several others, has been contacting board members and county residents to rally support for the program.

And both Telson and Kroil said today they are undecided and will make their decision at the meeting scheduled for Wednesday night.

School Board Chairman Robert Feather and member Allen Keech have both expressed opposition to the program in the past and Roland Williams has expressed his support.

"It will probably be a last-minute decision and really, I can't see either way," Kroil said today.

"I am really torn on this issue and it really has to be one of the tougher decisions I will have had to make," Mrs. Telson said.

Mrs. Telson, the former chairman of the school board, said to her the idea of a breakfast program boils down to three issues.

"I think the three issues have become blended together," she said, "and what we have here is one, whether it is the parent's responsibility, two, is the breakfast really essential for the child to learn and three, whether we should have independence on the child's part or whether a child should be dependent on the school system instead of the parents," she said.

She added she believes it is the parents' responsibility, "but I am really not sure whether the child should be dependent on the school system or whether the parent does not do."

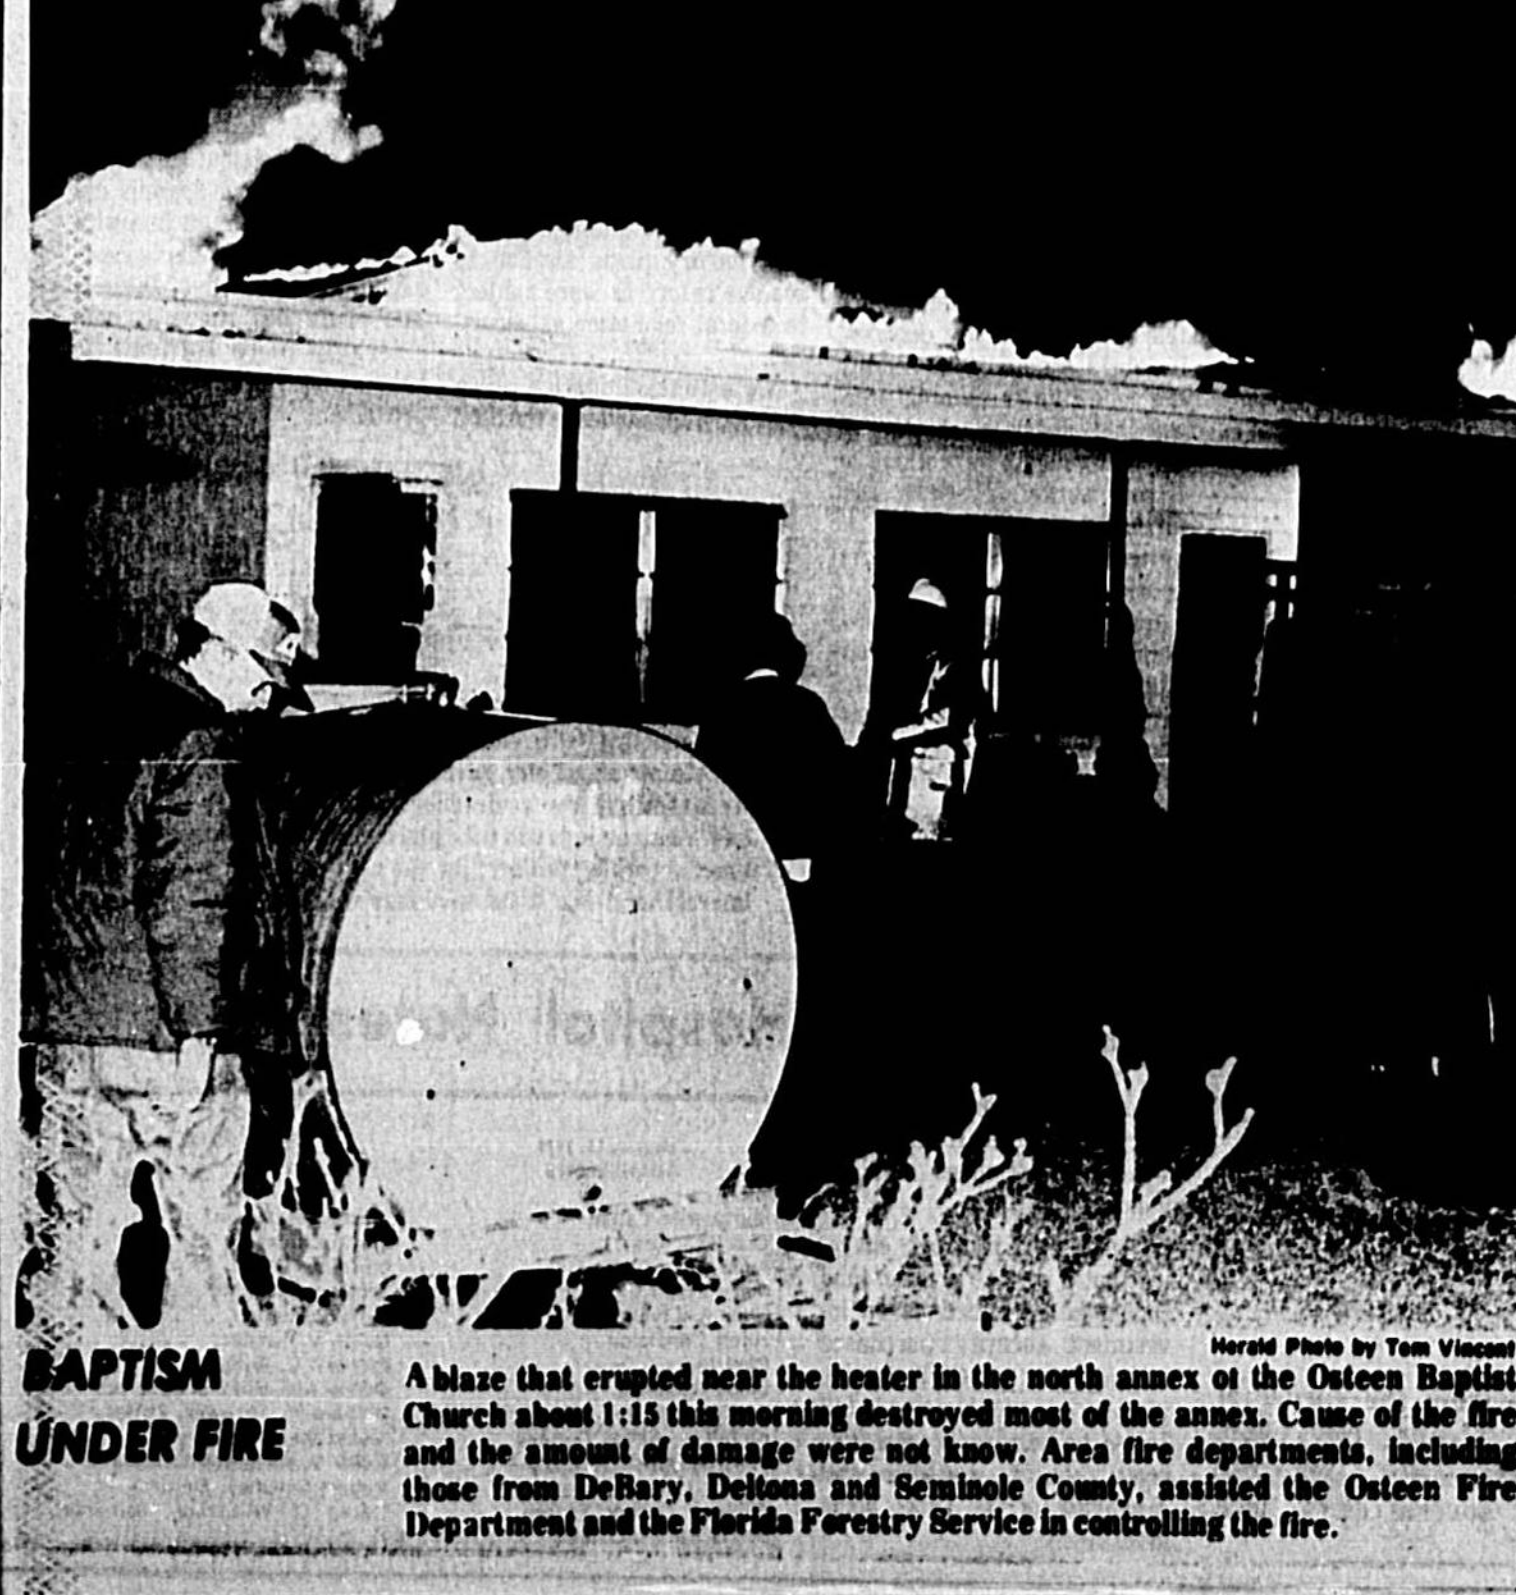

She noted she has also talked to several doctors who have told her the breakfast program is essential. "If we are here to educate and if the kids are not fed then it would be important to determine whether feeding makes it easier to educate," she said.

Both Mrs. Telson and Kroil noted if they voted in favor of the program, it would be more likely to be on a pilot basis.

Superintendent William Layer has told the school board

BAPTISM UNDER FIRE
A blaze that erupted near the heater in the north annex of the Osteen Baptist Church about 1:15 this morning destroyed most of the annex. Cause of the fire and the amount of damage were not known. Area fire departments, including those from DeBary, Deltona and Seminole County, assisted the Osteen Fire Department and the Florida Forestry Service in controlling the fire.

Getting Grip On Energy

We can think of no more urgent domestic challenge before the Carter administration, the Congress and the people in the new year than getting a better grip on our energy problem.

We have drifted and debated far too long about how to lessen our dependence on foreign oil, with nothing more accomplished than a paralyzing stalemate and no policy. This year has to be one of decision or the United States will face some incalculable penalties.

The stunning 14.49 percent increase in crude oil prices — from $12.70 to $14.54 per 42-gallon barrel — announced in mid-December by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) far exceeded anything the industrialized West had expected.

Moreover, the political convulsion in Iran that has denied six million barrels of oil daily to Japan, Western Europe and the United States is creating a world shortage that promises to bring an even higher OPEC price in the not-distant future.

The soaring world price of oil makes the controlled prices over both oil and gasoline in this country not only ridiculously unrealistic, but now, increasingly dangerous from an economic and production standpoint.

Federal price controls on old U. S. oil wells, which account for 35 percent of our domestic production, at less than $6 per barrel, have predictably resulted in a reduced flow of more than 50 percent since 1975; new oil production, which is permitted a price of about $13 per barrel, has increased correspondingly.

The economic stupidity of expecting U. S. producers to sell oil at $6 a barrel while the government subsidizes the importation of OPEC oil at nearly $15 a barrel caused our allies at the economic summit meeting in July to urge corrective decontrol.

President Carter promised publicly to do this, but his delayed action because of domestic pressures — to avoid criticism about the inflationary impact of such a move.

The need to decontrol the price of gasoline is equally compelling.

In the first place, the gasoline controls imposed during the Arab oil embargo in 1973 have not kept prices down; the high-octane unleaded fuel is up to $3.9 cents per gallon in some places.

What controls have succeeded in doing is to discourage oil companies from investing in the expensive facilities required to produce unleaded gasoline, increasingly demanded by newer-model cars in compliance with federal anti-pollution regulations.

The resulting shortage in unleaded gasoline, which will become more acute with continued price controls, will not only drive the per-gallon price ever upward but also, in time, lead to a repetition of the 1973 filling-station lines.

Yet, President Carter said recently he has not made up his mind about ending price controls on gasoline.

And Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Energy Committee, has suggested that the Senate veto gasoline decontrol even if the president recommended it.

Fortunately, the Senate this year promises to be even more opposed than previously to the president's ill-considered plan to equalize U.S. and world oil prices through additional taxes. Still the stalemate of energy in Washington shows no sign of being broken.

Obviously, the only way to encourage increased oil production in the United States is to decontrol the price both at the wellhead and at the pump.

The higher price would at once discourage our profligate over-consumption of gasoline, bring forth more U. S. oil, and lessen our dependence on imported oil, now supplying 45 percent of our needs at an annual cost of $43 billion.

By JIM HAYNES
Tommy John is my favorite baseball player. Oh, I know Nolan Ryan has the best fastball, and Luis Tiant can break off the meanest curve.

What I always liked about John was the fact that he is one of those guys who play with the heart.

I ran into John the other day in Tampa. He was getting ready to play a round of golf.

"You know, I am going to feel like a 19-year-old rookie when I walk into spring training at Fort Lauderdale," said John. "It could be the best time ever assembled in modern baseball."

For the uniforms, John now pitches for the Yankees and his bank account shows it. The addition of John and Tiant to the Yankee staff makes New York a hands down favorite to make the World Series again.

I first ran into the flashy lefthander in Sarasota, where the White Sox train each spring.

John was the apple of manager Al Lopez' eye, and John always came through in the early stages of the season. At all-star break, John has been 7-0, 9-1 and 8-2 throughout his career. Basically, he is a cold weather pitcher. That is, he pitches well before the heat of summer sets in.

That's another reason he is always sharp at World Series time.

I hadn't seen John since 1974. That particular spring, he was attempting a comeback with the Dodgers. He had undergone his second operation on his chucked arm, but had high hopes.

His problem stemmed from a July 17, 1963 injury. He was 19-3, and carried a 4-0 lead against Montreal. He threw a slider to Hal Breen, and it was as if his entire arm fell out of the socket. The ruptured ligament veered from his forearm at a 30 degree angle.

For most pitchers, especially those 31 years of age and with 13 years in baseball, retirement would loom on the horizon.

Not John, however.

The More Things Change...

By DON GRAFF
The more things change... as the French and others might be inclined to comment on several aspects of the Cambodian situation.

Norodom Sihanouk is off to the United Nations to present the case against the Vietnamese-backed takeover of his country. After that, in apparent anticipation of nothing more effective in way of response than words, the on-again, off-again leader intends to take up residence in Peking as an exile.

Nine years ago Sihanouk was similarly protesting the loss of his country and off to exile in Peking. Only that time the takeover was by American-backed Cambodian rightists.

The complex course of events in Cambodia may not be coming exactly full turn. But, as the Sihanouk story is a current if minor example, it does have a way of doubling back on itself.

And Cambodia, unfortunately for that gentle land, has a way of being in the way when it happens.

During the early phases of the three-decade Indochinese war, Cambodia appeared to be lucking out. It was not in immediate contention itself and managed to remain on the fringes of fighting, thanks in very great part to the fast diplomatic footwork of Sihanouk.

He added some more indignity by intercepting the Rams "didn't have the class" to play in the Super Bowl. And then, as if that weren't hard enough for the Rams to take, he intercepted a pass by backup quarterback Vince Ferragamo and hit it back 68 yards for the Cowboys' final touchdown in the game.

Henderson hasn't zeroed in yet on the Steelers, and there is nothing to say he will, but Joe Greene has heard all those things he said about the Rams. And when you ask him what he thinks about Hollywood Henderson, an someone died Monday, he smiles and says he thinks the Cowboys' "leaguelyoung-four-year man is "a tremendous athlete."

And what about Henderson as a talker? Another smile. "He tackled me for the first time. If it doesn't affect his teammates and their overall operation, more power to him. You should have more of that in football. I wish I had the courage to talk like that. I think if we feel we're gonna kick the Cowboys' butts, we should say it."

"This you will?" one writer wanted to know. There was that smile again.

"Next question," he offered, laughing.

From the way he said it, you could sense 33-year-old Joe Greene was thinking back a few years to when he was 23 like Hollywood Henderson and to when people — especially those who didn't know he was really like — always referred to him as Mean Joe Greene.

The Steelers are so completely capable, so well balanced, both offensively and defensively, that nobody on the team is indispensable. They agree on that. Similarly, they also agree that Greene, from his tackle position, is the one who holds them all together. To a man, the Steelers all say the same thing.

"Joe has been the foundation of this team the last 10 years," says Terry Bradshaw, the Steelers' voluble quarterback. "Joe is a good friend. He said what I wouldn't say when things got tough. He's been like a brother to me."

Keep in mind this is an offensive player talking about a defensive one. Frequently, offensive players hardly recognize defensive players' existence due to the completely different nature of their jobs. L.C. Greenwood plays alongside Greene at defensive end. He has been doing that for 13 years now and he sees a big change in him.

"When he was young, he used run all day," says Greenwood. "Now he's mature and he knows what he's doing. He talks about cuts without grousing. Personally, I would say he was having his nature of the Joe. L.C. Greenwood plays alongside Greene at defensive end. He has been doing that for 13 years now and he sees a big change in him."

"The real consequence was that not only had the Vietnamese stance been expected to Cambodia, but the country had acquired its very own civil war between the military regime that had overthrown Sihanouk and the local Khmer Rouge communists. When the end came, Cambodia went under along with Vietnam and Laos, and with, according to reports out of Southeast Asia, the isolated country in the hands of the most horrendous consequences of all for the civilian population.

According to sworn testimony, he raised some of the money for a presidential grand jury who has questioned the president's brother, Billy Carter, about one loan for $1 million from Lance's bank, but Billy took the Fifth Amendment.

President Carter's first choice to come to the White House with him, told us a year ago, was Bert Lance. On the eve of Lance's nomination as budget director, the U.S. attorney in Atlanta abruptly closed an investigation into Lance's financial management. But a new grand jury investigation was ordered after Lance resigned under fire in September 1977.

But sources close to the family believe David committed suicide. One source says that he had overdrafted on two accounts checking accounts at Lance's bank for $25,000 and $10,000. The dead man also had bank outstanding notes at the Calhoun bank totaling $100,000. Yet his assets at the time of his death were said to be $137,700.

Our source says that David's widow, Linda, was found dead in his own car on Nov. 24, 1974. The dead man also had bank outstanding notes at the Calhoun bank totaling $100,000. Yet his assets at the time of his death were said to be $137,700.

Reader Acts: Why?

As residents, citizens, and registered voters in Seminole County, we would like to express our concern, along with many others, the undue publicity Police Chief Ben Butler and his family are receiving.

When a family, joined by their friends, cannot enjoy an evening out in public without harassment, something is vastly wrong.

How shocking that in such a short time, so few people can influence the media and the State Attorney's Office, to be a critical of a man such as Chief Butler. He has been dedicated to his job, the citizens, and the City of Sanford for 27 years; 12 years as Chief of Police.

We feel it is in the name of our state, and to be heard from, with praise to Chief Butler and the fine police force he has worked so hard to build.

Our full support to Chief Ben Butler and all of the Police Department.

And Cambodia, unfortunately for that gentle land, has a way of being in the way when it happens.

During the early phases of the three-decade Indochinese war, Cambodia appeared to be lucking out. It was not in immediate contention itself and managed to remain on the fringes of fighting, thanks in very great part to the fast diplomatic footwork of Sihanouk.

He added some more indignity by intercepting the Rams "didn't have the class" to play in the Super Bowl. And then, as if that weren't hard enough for the Rams to take, he intercepted a pass by backup quarterback Vince Ferragamo and hit it back 68 yards for the Cowboys' final touchdown in the game.

Henderson hasn't zeroed in yet on the Steelers, and there is nothing to say he will, but Joe Greene has heard all those things he said about the Rams. And when you ask him what he thinks about Hollywood Henderson, an someone died Monday, he smiles and says he thinks the Cowboys' "leaguelyoung-four-year man is "a tremendous athlete."

And what about Henderson as a talker? Another smile. "He tackled me for the first time. If it doesn't affect his teammates and their overall operation, more power to him. You should have more of that in football. I wish I had the courage to talk like that. I think if we feel we're gonna kick the Cowboys' butts, we should say it."

"This you will?" one writer wanted to know. There was that smile again.

"Next question," he offered, laughing.

From the way he said it, you could sense 33-year-old Joe Greene was thinking back a few years to when he was 23 like Hollywood Henderson and to when people — especially those who didn't know he was really like — always referred to him as Mean Joe Greene.

The Steelers are so completely capable, so well balanced, both offensively and defensively, that nobody on the team is indispensable. They agree on that. Similarly, they also agree that Greene, from his tackle position, is the one who holds them all together. To a man, the Steelers all say the same thing.

"Joe has been the foundation of this team the last 10 years," says Terry Bradshaw, the Steelers' voluble quarterback. "Joe is a good friend. He said what I wouldn't say when things got tough. He's been like a brother to me."

Keep in mind this is an offensive player talking about a defensive one. Frequently, offensive players hardly recognize defensive players' existence due to the completely different nature of their jobs. L.C. Greenwood plays alongside Greene at defensive end. He has been doing that for 13 years now and he sees a big change in him.

"When he was young, he used run all day," says Greenwood. "Now he's mature and he knows what he's doing. He talks about cuts without grousing. Personally, I would say he was having his nature of the Joe. L.C. Greenwood plays alongside Greene at defensive end. He has been doing that for 13 years now and he sees a big change in him."

The real consequence was that not only had the Vietnamese stance been expected to Cambodia, but the country had acquired its very own civil war between the military regime that had overthrown Sihanouk and the local Khmer Rouge communists. When the end came, Cambodia went under along with Vietnam and Laos, and with, according to reports out of Southeast Asia, the isolated country in the hands of the most horrendous consequences of all for the civilian population.

According to sworn testimony, he raised some of the money for a presidential grand jury who has questioned the president's brother, Billy Carter, about one loan for $1 million from Lance's bank, but Billy took the Fifth Amendment.

President Carter's first choice to come to the White House with him, told us a year ago, was Bert Lance. On the eve of Lance's nomination as budget director, the U.S. attorney in Atlanta abruptly closed an investigation into Lance's financial management. But a new grand jury investigation was ordered after Lance resigned under fire in September 1977.

But sources close to the family believe David committed suicide. One source says that he had overdrafted on two accounts checking accounts at Lance's bank for $25,000 and $10,000. The dead man also had bank outstanding notes at the Calhoun bank totaling $100,000. Yet his assets at the time of his death were said to be $137,700.

The More Things Change...

The more things change... as the French and others might be inclined to comment on several aspects of the Cambodian situation.

Norodom Sihanouk is off to the United Nations to present the case against the Vietnamese-backed takeover of his country. After that, in apparent anticipation of nothing more effective in way of response than words, the on-again, off-again leader intends to take up residence in Peking as an exile.

Nine years ago Sihanouk was similarly protesting the loss of his country and off to exile in Peking. Only that time the takeover was by American-backed Cambodian rightists.

The complex course of events in Cambodia may not be coming exactly full turn. But, as the Sihanouk story is a current if minor example, it does have a way of doubling back on itself.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

In-State LD Telephone Call Rates Investigated

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—The Public Service Commission is going ahead with an investigation that could lower rates for in-Florida long distance telephone calls, but limiting it.

The PSC decided Monday to proceed with the probe, but staff members were instructed to try to jeopardize negotiations for cash refunds underway with most telephone companies or get into complicated issues which might take several years to resolve.

Fifteen companies, including giant Southern Bell, which provides long distance lines and equipment for most of Florida, are being ordered to show cause why their intrastate rates should not be reduced.

Bundy Asks For Farmer, Again

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Theodore Bundy, accused in the slaying a year ago of two Florida State University coeds, plans to try one more time to get a judge to allow controversial defense attorney Millard Farmer to represent him.

Bundy, 32, lost his fight in state and federal courts last summer and fall to get the Atlanta-based defense specialist on the case, but the assignment of a new trial judge gives him another chance.

Bundy filed a motion requesting Farmer's representation on Jan. 9, shortly after Dade Circuit Judge Edward Cowart was assigned to take over the trial from Leon Circuit Judge John Ruid.

UFOs: Migrating Insects?

GAINESVILLE (UPI)—University of Florida entomologist Dr. Philip Callahan says he thinks virtually all of the many UFO sightings over the years have been swarms of migrating insects.

Callahan said he began to think about the possible connection of UFOs and migrating insects when he read a book about UFO sightings in the Uinta Mountains of Utah between 1965 and 1968.

He said eyewitness descriptions of blinking, erratic objects sounded to him like swarms of locusts he had observed flying toward gas burn-off pipes in oil fields in Iraq after World War II.

PSC Chairman: Stiff Fines

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Public Service Commission Chairman Bob Mann wants fines for trucking violations stiffened so truckers will know his agency means business.

"It has to get bad before anyone begins to take the commission seriously and it is my hope the regulated industries will take us seriously," Mann said Monday.

The commission can impose fines of up to $5,000 but $100 is usually the maximum, and "it's cheaper to violate the law and pay the fine than obey it."

Pollution Case Up In Air

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—State Attorney Gerald Blair says he's investigating the Occidental Chemical Co. air pollution case, but is nowhere near filing criminal charges.

Blair's bailiwick includes the White Springs phosphate plant which violated fluoride emission standards for more than two years and doctored reports to cover it up.

Panel To Study Inspections

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Sen. Vernon Holloway, D-Miami, plans to appoint a subcommittee of his Transportation Committee to study whether the auto inspection program should be abolished, modified or left intact.

If he has his way, it will be modified or abandoned and Holloway leans toward change rather than dropping it altogether.

He hopes the group can determine if money spent for the program—$15 million a year—is justified if more lives could be saved by some other safety measures, such as stepped up enforcement of speed and drunk driving laws.

He Admits His Guilt, But

JACKSONVILLE (UPI)—A Kansas City, Mo. man admitted in federal court Monday that he called the Florida governor's mansion, asked to speak with "Rube" and then threatened to blow up a national monument at St. Augustine.

But Paul Keith Ballew, 35, said that at the time he telephoned then-Gov. Reubin Askew last November from Daytona Beach he was intoxicated and feeling down because his 15-year-old bride-to-be had just jilted him for a yacht captain in St. Augustine.

In And Around Winter Springs

Snowbirds At Home On Golf Course

Snowbirds is what they are called. They migrate South when the snows start to fly up North. We love them and need them for the tourist industry. Even here in Winter Springs we have our fair share. Our snowbirds are golf pros who have come to sunny Florida to enjoy participating in their favorite sport.

Paul Kennedy is a Canadian from Toronto. At present he is making Winter Springs his home and Winter Springs Shoah Golf Course his base. According to Andy Montval, Shoah Golf Pro, "Paul is one of golf's upcoming future stars. I think he will make it big on the circuit."

Vern Besant, popular resident of Old Town had a serious accident just after holidays. After almost a week in the hospital, the doctors said with a little home rest he would be just fine. His many friends will be glad to hear that he will be going back to work in the very near future.

Golf footnote... I almost forgot to mention that P.K. Long, assistant golf pro at Shoah golf course is headed for the Florida Winter tournament at Cape Orlando. Lots of luck!

Sophie Bottlen, popular lady at Shoah Condominiums, had a host of company recently. First to arrive was a friend from Vero Beach, Mrs. Dee Blume. Mrs. Blume spent several weeks in the area. Next to arrive was Sophie's nephew, Todd Owen from Rochester, Md. Todd is a student at the University of Maryland.

Good news for the many friends of Helen Mattel of Hacienda Village. Helen, who some months ago suffered a serious accident and as a result, had to have pins put in her legs to aid healing, is well.

She recently spent several days at the Winter Park Hospital to have the pins removed, and, according to reports, is doing just fine.

Winter Springs Ladies Auxiliary to the VFW Post No. 448 will hold a meeting on Jan. 17. The meeting will be held at Post Home, 187 No. Highway 17-92 Longwood, at 8 p.m.

INSTALLATION AND AWARDS LUNCHEON

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford held installation of officers at the awards luncheon Saturday at the Heritage Inn.

Special guests were the club sponsor, Mrs. Dottie Karns, and Mrs. Bill Gielow, president of the Woman's Club of Sanford, and a former Junior Club sponsor, who conducted the installation ceremony. She also presented the Bill Gielow Award, a silver tray to Peggy Deere.

Among the other awards presented were the Five Star Leadership Award to Patty Hunt.

Mrs. Roche To Lead Seminola Rebekahs

Closed installation of the new officers of Seminola Rebekah Lodge Number 43 was held recently at the Odd Fellows Hall. Mrs. Virginia Roche was installed as noble grand of the lodge. The ceremony was under the direction of Mrs. Hattie Raynor, district deputy president of District 10.

The installing officers were from Lucerne Rebekah Lodge of Orlando. Mrs. Marie Norman of Lucerne, was guest musician for the installation service and regular meeting.

Other officers installed with Mrs. Roche were Myrtle Wallin, vice grand; Doris Rogers, recording secretary; Elizabeth Hanman, financial secretary; May Rubow, treasurer; Margaret Schneider, past noble grand; Alice Kretzman, warden; Eva Williams, chaplain; Emily Jameson, musician; Theodore Schneider, color bearer; Mary Strauch, I.S.N.G.; Eva Beckham, R.V.V.G.; Henrietta Zorn, I.S.V.G.; Hazel Gibbuly, inside guardian and Henry Jamison, outside guardian.

Mrs. Margaret Schneider, retiring noble grand, presided at the meeting until installation. She was then escorted to the station of the past noble grand. A gift of appreciation and her jewel was presented to her from her officers and members.

Mrs. Raynor's gift was given to her in a rather unique way. She was told that Seminola members had recently gone on a treasure hunt to the bottom of the ocean. There, held firmly within the grasp of Davy Jones, they came upon the wreck of an old pirate ship. In the captain's quarters of the wreckage they found a sea chest encrusted with barnacles. The chest was filled with pearls, rubies, diamonds and other treasures. This little shell covered chest was given to Mrs. Raynor. When she raised the lid she found among the fake gems her monetary gift.

Wife Won't Nurse His Mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife, Bess, is a registered nurse. She worked until our children came along, but quit to be a full-time mother. The kids are all out of school, and Bess went back to part-time nursing because she enjoys it. I have a good income and it's not necessary for her to work at all.

My mother recently suffered a serious stroke. She divorced my father when I was four, and devoted her life to raising me. She made many sacrifices to send me to the best schools, etc. Mother is in the hospital now, but when she is well enough, I want her to make her home with us. No way will I put her in a nursing home.

I told Bess this and she said, "Fine, but you had better plan on getting someone in to take care of her because I am going back to work full-time."

I was shocked. My wife is a registered nurse, would rather care for strangers than stay at home and nurse my mother! She knows I never could repay my mother for all she's done for me. What do you make of this?

DEAR ABBY: I was divorced at 37, after 30 years. I lost my husband to his secretary who was 25.

I soon found out that men my age prefer women half my age. I didn't want to settle for a sick

DEAR ABBY: I joined the weird world of wandering widows, and made the best of it.

I got a job and decided to be good to myself, instead of waiting on a man who'd never appreciate it.

I still weigh 130, have beautiful clothes, do what I want to do, eat when I'm hungry, sleep when I'm tired, and have had some exotic vacations!

I have never been happier! And as for my ex-husband — who needs him?

DEAR H: That 25-year-old girl he married.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I've seen a letter in your column about a family feud, I've wanted to write and tell you about my own experience, but never got around to it. Today I'm getting it off my chest with the hope that some feuding families will patch up their foolish quarrels.

When I was in my teens, my parents and an aunt and uncle got into an argument about some petty thing that got so blown out of proportion they quit speaking to each other. My cousins and I still associated with each other, but we didn't go into each other's houses because of our feuding parents.

Things went on that way until one morning our phone rang at 7. It was my aunt calling to tell us that her son had been killed in Vietnam. My folks went over there immediately and, of course, the feud was forgotten.

I hope other families who are feuding will open their eyes and try their petty grievances aside before it takes tragedy to bring them together.

RAYON RUGS

Rayon is a fiber which is used mainly in the manufacture of scatter rugs. Rayon is sometimes also used in the manufacture of wall-to-wall carpet for bedrooms. Rayon is popular because it can be dyed many different colors.

Rayon has been known in this country since about 1911, but was not used in the manufacture of rugs until after World War II. As you probably already know, rayon is the oldest man-made fiber.

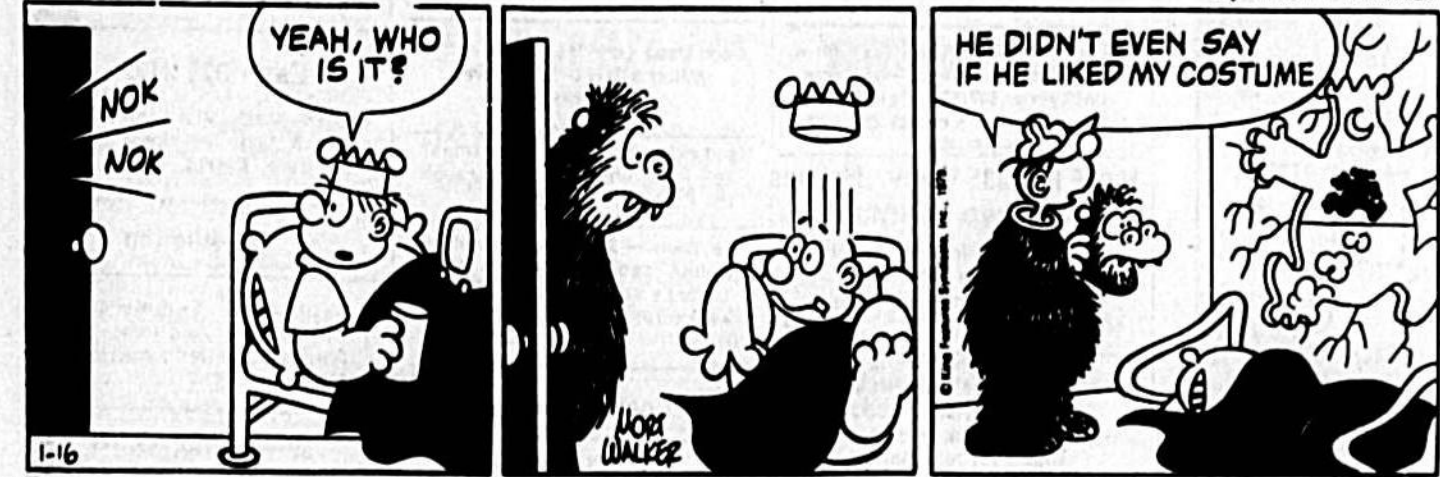

Our personnel know carpet, and the fibers used to make carpet. Tell them your needs and they will be happy to assist you in making the right selection.
