Airplane Thief Captured Here: Target Pot?

By MAX ERKILETIAN
Herald Staff Writer

A man accused of stealing a DC-6 airplane from Miami International Airport for alleged use in the transportation of marijuana from Colombia to Florida was apprehended by Sanford Police at the Holiday Inn about 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Bernard T. Watson, 48, North Lauderdale, was apprehended in room 206 of the Holiday Inn by police officers. He was in Sanford to work on an airplane at the Sanford Airport, according to a Manatee County Sheriff's spokesman.

Watson and his wife Laura, 43, were captured about the same time. She was taken into custody at their North Lauderdale home late Wednesday by Broward County deputies.

Both Watson and his wife are free today on bonds of $50,000 each.

"We suspect this stolen airplane was going to be put into service as a marijuana transport," said Wilton Martin of the sheriff's office in Manatee. He added the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) have been called in to probe that possibility.

Also under investigation is the possibility a third person may have been involved in the theft.

"We are looking for a third suspect," said Martin, "because no one can figure how one man can land that kind of airplane alone."

A second man was seen with Watson shortly after the plane arrived.

Watson is a flight engineer and aircraft mechanic, and capable of flying many types of aircraft, according to Martin. However, landing the DC-6 alone would be difficult, said Martin.

The 60-ton aircraft was taken from the Miami airport about 12:43 a.m. Sunday and flown to the Bradenton-Sarasota Airport before 6 a.m. Sunday according to Martin.

The Bradenton-Sarasota airport tower is not in operation between midnight and 6 a.m., according to Martin, so the landing of the stolen aircraft was not noticed by airport officials.

When the airplane was placed in a hanger rented by a firm headed by Watson, the rucker was damaged, according to Martin.

"They were probably in such a hurry to get the airplane into the hanger that they forgot to put the tail down and they hit it on the hanger roof," said Martin.

Damage to the rucker was estimated at $5,000 by the airplane's owner Cliff Pettit, of Ligon Air in Indiana. The airplane is valued at $200,000.

Originally Pettit had difficulty recognizing the aircraft, because its appearance had been altered.

"They altered the appearance of the plane by using adhesive tape to change the stripes and the plane numbers," said Martin.

Manatee County deputies were tipped to the location of the airplane by an airport firefighter and airport security.

"Our undercover people went down there and stalked out the plane to see what was going on," said Martin.

The undercover officers developed information that led to the identification of the aircraft and where Watson could be located in Sanford, according to Martin.

Rumble Strips Cause Rumbblings

The State Department of Transportation (DOT) is checking the possibility that rumble strips along State Road 415A in northeast Seminole County are above the maximum height required by the state.

"We are checking into their height today and if they are too high, we will get them down to where they were supposed to be," according to Al Young, DOT assistant district maintenance engineer.

State law requires the strips to be from one-half inch to three-quarters of an inch in height. "I can't swear to you that they are not may be a half inch too high, but we will certainly find out today," Young said. He added that after wear and tear on the strips they will eventually be worn down to below the allowed height.

The problem came to light when a motorist said the strips were too high and created a traffic hazard because many motorists avoid the strips by driving around them in an oncoming traffic lane.

Young noted that the strips were put in about four months ago at the urging of the Florida Highway Patrol. "The highway patrol requested something to make the driver aware that there was an intersection (SR 415A and SR 46) coming up," Young said.

The DOT engineer said that heavy fog in the area sometimes prohibited drivers from seeing signs warning of the upcoming intersection.

DOT District Engineer Bill Benedict added that his office has never received any complaints about the strips because "people recognize the need for such a device."

May Resume Peace Talks Weizman And Sadat Meet In Surprise Visit

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman made a surprise trip to Austria today to renew face-to-face peace talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The sources said Israel hopes to meet with Sadat and Egyptian War Minister Mohamed El-Baroudi in the one-day meeting could lead to the resumption of formal, full-scale negotiations broken off last January.

The unexpected meeting with Sadat comes just five days before a scheduled parley in London between the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

With both sides still deadlocked over the question of Israeli withdrawals from the occupied West Bank, little had been expected to come out of the talks. But Weizman's meeting with Sadat in Salzburg could alter those expectations.

The meeting, also followed talks in Vienna Sunday between Sadat and Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres. Israeli government sources said those talks, though unofficial, may have helped pave the way for today's meeting.

Wants $2 Tax Rate Piland Calls For Tax Cut

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Winter Springs Mayor Troy Piland has called for a cut in the property tax and for the third reduction in two years in the utility tax rate in his community in the new budget year beginning Oct. 1.

At the same time, Piland also agreed to prevent a recurrence of last year's problem of two budgets being under consideration by the council at the same time.

He noted the city charter calls for the mayor to present a budget to the council while it also charges the city's finance commissioner John Daniels with the responsibility of preparing the proposed budget. The mayor said for this year he has asked Daniels to prepare the budget, and that he, as mayor, will submit Daniels' budget to the council for consideration.

Last year both Piland and Daniels prepared and submitted proposed budgets to the council.

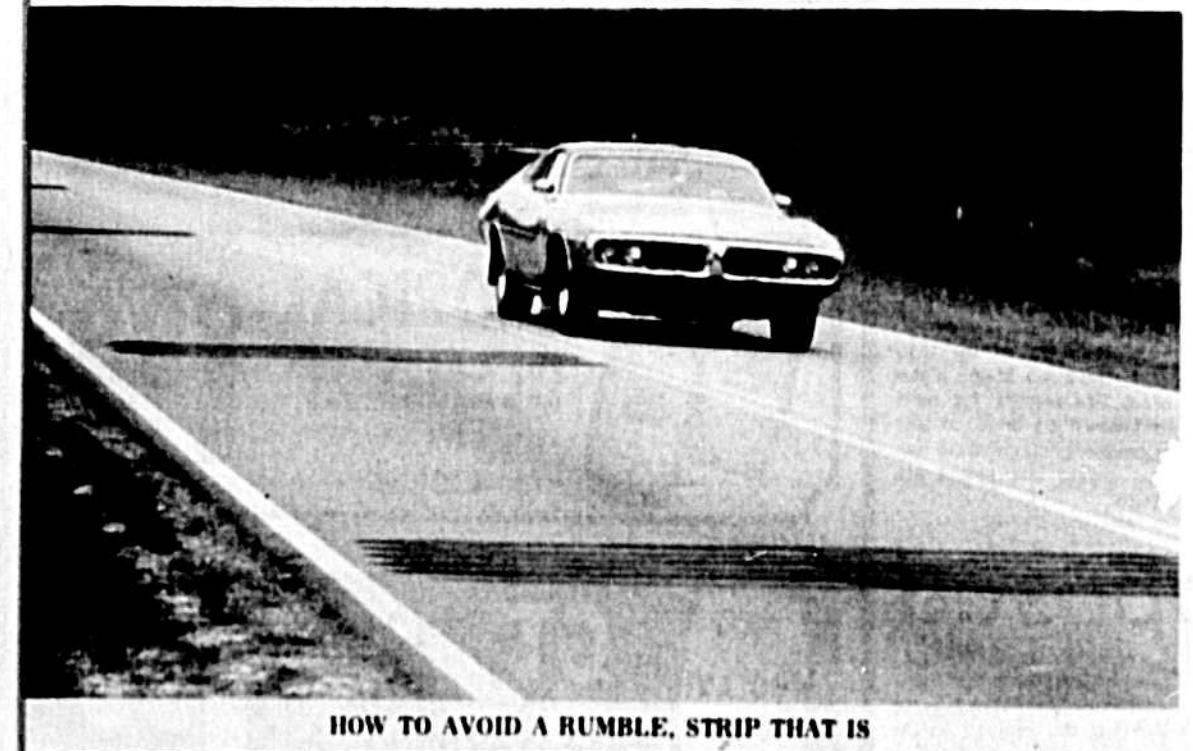

Piland urged Daniels to include in the budget recommendation a reduction in the utility tax rate to three percent. Four years ago the council reduced utility taxes from eight percent to six. In the past two years the tax was further reduced from six to five and the latest reduction to four percent was in effect in January.

Piland said he is urging the property tax rate be set at $2 per $1,000 assessed valuation, 10 cents less than the current rate of $2.10, which also is the rate certified by Property Appraiser Terry Goemmel.

The mayor at this week's council meeting recommended five percent increases in city employees' wages in the new budget, saying, however, that department head salary increases have to be considered on an individual basis.

Daniels said he will have a rough budget proposal prepared for submission to the council by next week's meeting. In other action, the council, in adoption of final reading the ordinance calling for the refund of utility taxes illegally charged on residents' sewer bills since 1971 and the overcharge of utility taxes on water service paid by Tuawilla.

Testing Aid Program Expected To Win Approval

By LEONARD KRANSORF
Herald Staff Writer

About 3,118 students in grade six through ten will be helped by an expanded county compensatory education program expected to receive state approval this week.

"Although I have not yet looked at the program, judging from the past I say I do not anticipate any problem in them getting the approval," said Phil Roundtree, administrator for the state compensatory education program, in reference to Seminole County's proposed $400,000 program.

The purpose of the program is to assist students who had difficulty in passing the 11th grade test or to prepare them for future tests. In its last session, the state legislature appropriated $25 million to the program.

The $221,234 allocation to Seminole County is matched dollar by dollar by the school district according to Roundtree.

Most of the money will be going to pay for the extra 35 teachers and aides being requested in the proposal. According to Andy Brachen, director of secondary education the extra personnel are needed to insure the 15 students to one teacher ratio the new program is aiming to achieve.

According to Roundtree, the state does not exactly specify where the money should be spent but does specify spending "where the greatest need for educational assistance exists."

In the last school year, the Seminole County program was designed for only 11th graders and on a trial basis for students at three middle schools, Lakeview, Sunset and Millview. This year the expanded program will include some students from every middle school as well as ninth and 10th graders, according to Charles Swaggett, school board program director of evaluation.

The students were targeted for the program after a basic skills test was given last year. Results of the tests showed students to be weaker in math skills than the communication skills, according to Swaggett. Additionally, those 11th graders who fail the next assessment test will be included in the expanded program. The next test will be administered in October and Swaggett said the rate certified by Property Appraiser Terry Goemmel.

Piland urged Daniels to include in the budget recommendation a reduction in the utility tax rate to three percent. Four years ago the council reduced utility taxes from eight percent to six. In the past two years the tax was further reduced from six to five and the latest reduction to four percent was in effect in January.

The Myrtle Lake Homeowners Association proved last week city hall can be beaten when they got a second delay in as many months to the plans by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS) to buy, for $80,000, a four-bedroom house and five acres off Dixon Road between the Shadow Hills subdivision and the Markham Woods area.

Proposition 13: A Family Matter?

California's vote on Proposition 13 is being dissected and analyzed just about everywhere — even at the convention of the American Home Economics Association in New Orleans, La. A panelist discussing the future of the American family ventured the opinion that the so-called tax revolt is evidence of a "backlash" against the drift of traditional family responsibility into the hands of government.

Florence R. Skelly, a professional analyst of social trends, believes people who supported Proposition 13 were expressing a willingness if not a desire to take back some of the authority surrendered to government in the growth of tax-supported social programs in recent years.

We'd like to believe she's right, not so much for the sake of lower taxes but for the sake of reversing the well-documented decline of the family as the conduit of moral and spiritual values in our society.

One of the intriguing questions raised at New Orleans is whether the myriad programs and agencies dealing with social problems in our society are not themselves part of the problem. Has their very existence encouraged a Let-George-Do-It attitude toward responsibilities once shouldered by families?

Senior citizen programs, for all their value, can weaken the sense of personal obligation of children toward their aging parents. The same can be said for youth programs that shift to professionals some of the parental responsibility for rearing their children. Day care centers and summer school programs which are casualties of Proposition 13 fill an obvious need in families with working mothers, but this begs the question of whether new attitudes toward marriage, divorce, parenthood and sex roles in our society are not exacting a penalty in diminishing the time that families are together.

We can't be sure whether the vote on Proposition 13 meant as much as some of the home economists at New Orleans believe. Time will tell, as our political process further reveals priorities in the public mind. Decisions must be made on which programs and services threatened by the new tax limitation will be continued with support from new sources of revenue, and which will be cut back or allowed to die.

If California voters were expressing impatience not only with high taxes, but also with the degree of authority which government has assumed in personal and family affairs, then our June 6 "revolt" was indeed of profound dimensions. Lower taxes benefit only the family pocketbook. A renewed sense of the importance of concern, responsibility and dependence within a well-knit family would have far greater benefits for the future of our society.

More Of Carter's Clumsiness

WASHINGTON — Try as they may, neither President Carter nor his White House aides seem able to master the art of winning friends and influencing people on Capitol Hill.

The experiences of one liberal Republican senator, who prefers to remain anonymous, illustrate the astonishing clumsiness of the Carter team in dealing with members of Congress.

This senator, as it happens, split with the majority of his GOP colleagues on the Panama Canal treaties and the bitterly-contested labor law reform bill, supporting Carter's position on both.

Hard on the heels of the Senate vote ratifying the canal treaties, Carter himself called the senator at home to thank him for his support. The helpful Republican wasn't there at the time, as his wife explained when Carter came on the phone. "Oh, that's right," the president said brightly, "he's at that Democratic gala tonight, isn't he?"

A few weeks later, following a crucial cloture vote to shut off the filibuster against the president's labor law reform bill, the senator's office received a call from a White House lobbyist. Good news, he said. A water project in the senator's state had been approved by the administration.

Why, that's wonderful, the senator's aide replied. We thought you'd be pleased, the White House staffer said, adding pointedly, "Be sure to tell your boss that we mentioned how much we appreciate his vote on cloture at the same time we called you to announce approval of the water project."

As if that display of deftness weren't enough, there's yet another incident involving the same Republican senator, this one involving the neutron bomb — which the senator vigorously supports.

Out of the blue one day, the senator's top aide received a frantic call from yet another White House staffer demanding to know "where that article we wrote for you on the neutron bomb? We need it to counter one Sam Nunn (a Georgia Democrat) is publishing in the Atlanta paper."

What article? the baffled senatorial aide asked. "The one we wrote for you," the White House staffer replied. "For heaven's sake, we did all the work — we just need your okay on it."

Gradually, a light dawned. "You seem to be slightly confused," the senator staffer said. "My boss agrees with Sam Nunn's position on the neutron bomb. You probably wrote our colleague (from the same state), Senator Stender."

Anecdotes like the above, multiplied a hundredfold, probably go a long way towards explaining why the president's legislative program is so much difficulty on Capitol Hill.

"Smell? You're imagining things!"

The Master's Voice

By LAROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Computer terminals which will respond to oral rather than written commands will be on the market in the United States next year, says a New York science research firm.

The first such system, called a speech recognition machine, is about to be installed for a commercial customer by Japan's NCE Corp., says Quantum Science Corp. It can recognize a spoken vocabulary of about 130 words.

Quantum Science, a multinational technological consulting firm based in New York, expects similar machines with recognition vocabularies of 50 words probably will be on the market next year in the United States priced to retail for $4,000 to $5,000.

A Quantum spokesman noted that the size of the initial vocabulary is not the most important index of a machine's value or quality; other considerations may be more important.

Quantum Chairman Mark J. Stevenson, said International Business Machines Corp. and the Bell Telephone System are the most advanced among American firms with designs for the speech processing terminals.

A study by Quantum, one of a series of ten the firm is producing, says the terminals, which concluded the long-term trend in man-machine communication will be to accommodate human rather than machine characteristics. Therefore, speech processing — speaker verification, speech recognition, speech synthesis — will be among the most significant new fields in information processing in the 1980s.

The speech processing computer terminals will save time in many businesses, Quantum said. They will be particularly valuable in air-

Quality In The Wasteland

By DON GRAFF

Public television, for most of its quarter century of existence, has not been a big winner with the public.

Viewers overwhelmingly have preferred tuning in on the commercial stations, to whose common denominator of mediocre public TV has sought to make its own quality alternative.

In working toward that goal, it has had to work around a number of serious handicaps.

Its stations, about a third the number of the commercial outlets, are concentrated in the ultra high frequency band and are less accessible to the mass viewing audience. It is a loosely organized chain of largely weak links, a few well-equipped metropolitan units but many more smaller stations operating often at a bare-subsistence level. Its financial resources have been limited and uncertain.

Much of this is true of public television today. But so is something else. In the past several years, it has made rapid strides in attracting attention and a public.

As noted by the newly installed chairman of the Public Broadcasting Service, Newton N. Minow, public television has never been more visible and expectations of it have never been higher.

Newton, it may be recalled, shook up the industry back in the 1950s when, as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, he surveyed commercial programming and declared it a "vast wasteland."

Nothing much has happened in the years since to challenge that evaluation. But a great public good is happening in public TV.

It has gotten its organizational and financial acts together in the PBS itself and the federal authorized Corporation for Public Broadcasting, set up in 1967. Government funds now account for 38 percent of financing. Private contributions are also up — sevenfold over 1970. Some two million individuals and families currently are contributing some $50 million annually.

And it has been making available to the TV public programming that is both quality and popular. British imports have contributed heavily to this development, but increasingly ambitious efforts are also coming from public television's own studios. Its success has at least in standards of quality, to no small degree.

Minow sees problems in this newfound strength, particularly in dependence on government funds as a potential threat to public television's independence. To be certain that the "delicate, always fragile fabric" separating assistance from control is maintained, public television must remain ultrastrategic to the slightest hint of interference in programming.

'Open' Government

The "secret" stamp has too often been used in Washington to conceal that which is embarrassing rather than that which is sensitive to national security.

Now President Carter has tightened the rules for classifying documents through an executive order, predicting that the move will increase "openness in government."

The order takes away the authority of 11 agencies to classify information at all. Five others will have reduced authority. Fewer officials will have the power to classify information. Automatic declassification will be given shorter timeframes. And documents will be evaluated section by section rather than in their entirety.

The National Archives estimated that the new procedures will lift secrecy classifications from an extra 260 million pages of information during the next 10 years.

The order will also enhance respect for the secrecy label by bringing a measure of credibility to the classification program.

He Charges Officer, Gets Psycho Ward

WASHINGTON — Staff Sergeant Erving Hayden, Jr., a 37-year-old Air Force veteran, had the indignity recently to file charges against a superior officer. As a consequence, he was handed off, Soviet style, to an Air Force mental hospital.

He was subsequently given a clean bill of health by examining psychiatrists and accepted the stigma of being locked up and labeled as crazy. The man he accused, Captain Mark J. Bower, also was commiserated by Hayden's charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. But it was alleged that the investigative report had been altered to favor Bower.

The high command at Barkeley Air Force Base in Louisiana has covered up the incident with a security blanket of denials and no comment. But our reporter Stephen D'Oliviero has interviewed and interviewed Hayden and the stigma of being locked up and labeled as crazy. The man he accused, Captain Mark J. Bower, also was commiserated by Hayden's charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. But it was alleged that the investigative report had been altered to favor Bower.

The high command at Barkeley Air Force Base in Louisiana has covered up the incident with a security blanket of denials and no comment. Bower, also was commiserated by Hayden's charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. But it was alleged that the investigative report had been altered to favor Bower.

A subordinate, Maj. Harold A. Rasmak, contacted a two-week interview. Fifteen of 18 persons he interviewed confirmed Hayden's charges, our source told us. Indeed, they furnished further detrimental information against Bower, charging him with petty theft, drinking on duty and calling the Air Force Secretary "a meddling fool and an idiot."

Rasmak submitted his report to Maj. Gen. Charles Demassey, Jr., the top dog with the authority over 312. But it was turned back and apparently rewritten. Our reporter asked Rasmak whether the recommendation to commiserate Bower was reached on his own. But both Rasmak and Bower refused to talk.

A spokesman for the general insisted there was no tampering with Rasmak's report. "Bower has not done anything wrong," the spokesman asserted. "There's nothing illegal going on down here at all."

Meanwhile, here's what happened to Sergeant Hayden. He was commiserated, according to his account, into Colonel Pughlin's office and was asked to drop the charges against his superior. The stubborn Hayden refused.

Not long afterward, he received an official letter from the colonel stating: "In order to clarify your mind and state of mind and to help you to remember us as to your unimpaired capability, request you to report to the USAF Hospital Mental Health Clinic here at Barkeley for evaluation."

At the clinic, Hayden related, he was again asked by a doctor to drop the charges. When he refused, papers were signed ordering him to the psychiatric facility at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. Hayden's wife told us the doctor at Barkeley advised her that his orders came from another office. Responded Dr. Kamal K. Rajani tersely: "I have no comment on that."

Rajani, according to our source, warned Hayden he would probably be issued eventually with discharge. Fortunately, the doctor at Lackland disagreed. They released him after two weeks of examination, with the clean bill of health.

Significantly, Dr. Rajani's case history on Hayden, including a diagnosis he was paranoid, partly almost verbatim a memo from Colonel Pughlin. Nonetheless, Pughlin denied ever having discussed Hayden except in general terms while the inquiry was in progress.

Why would the Barkeley brass go to such lengths to remove a sergeant's criticism of his captain? Up to command officials at Barkeley as a stepping stone to promotion, we were told. Virtually every officer at the base has brigadier general stars in his eyes. Wing commanders usually serve three to 12 months before moving up a ladder.

"The command members exert every effort to make sure they come out looking good," one insider explained. "They are a group of officers who are covering up for each other's mistakes." GASP PAPER — While Congress debates

SEA, School Board Find An Area Of Agreement

By LREN KRANSORF
Herald Staff Writer

For the first time since the contract negotiations began in early May, the Seminole Education Association (SEA) and the school board reached agreement Monday on an article in the new contract.

However, at the same meeting a stalemate was reached on two other articles causing them to be tabled by the SEA.

Each side has now tabled four articles in the proposed 28-article contract. The present contract expires July 31.

Additionally, the board team rejected an SEA proposal for future daily meetings, but did agree to July 16 and 18 Board negotiator Ernest Cowley noted he is currently negotiating with three other unions in addition to the SEA and that the board negotiating team members have other jobs during the day.

The agreement shared by both sides on that article was not shared on the other two articles. The bottleneck occurred over the Negotiations article, both sides came to quick agreement on the article of Political Activity.

The agreed on article is unchanged from the current contract and gives the teacher(s) "entire liberty of political action when not actively engaged in employment, provided such action is within the laws of the United States of America."

The agreement shared by both sides on that article was not shared on the other two articles. The bottleneck occurred over the Negotiations

Procedures section centered on whether the board should as they did last year provide every teacher with a copy of the agreed upon contract once it is ratified by SEA members.

The printing costs for the current contract was paid for by the board with the union supplying the paper. The board's cost for the 2,100 copies was $278 and the union's cost was $113.95.

In its new proposal the board said copies of the ratified agreement will be made available to teachers in the "school library or other accessible place at the school."

Cowley said the reason for the change was that "the board wants to get out of the printing business for private organizations which is what the SEA is."

SEA head negotiator Steve Rosenthal said it "was the board's responsibility as the employer to provide copies to its employees."

In one of the SEA's proposals they suggested the board pay 75 percent of the total cost.

In the board's response, Cowley did not mention cost but said the "board will appraise all teachers of the contents of the ratified agreement." Cowley noted that the process of appraising would depend "on the size of the school and the administration."

Rosenthal noted that he did not find it acceptable a proposal to delete the article. The other article tabled by the SEA was Professional Specialists.

The tabled came after the board submitted a proposal to delete the entire Professional Specialists section from the contract. The current contract calls for the school system to provide specialists to assist teachers and provide facilities for the specialists.

Included among these specialists are speech therapists and hearing specialists.

Cowley, in quoting state statutes noted that what the specialists provide is a service and determining what service is provided is a managerial (board) right and not an element that should be included in a contract dealing with working conditions.

Rosenthal in tabling the article pointed to a disagreement since it was in the current contract it should be included in the new one.

Commission Shows Appreciation

Seminole MVI Supervisor Retires From Post

FOR JOB WELL DONE Seminole County Commission Chairman Dick Williams presents proclamation of appreciation to Virgil Nieders, retiring Motor Vehicle Inspection supervisor.

Virgil Nieders, retiring after 18 years as supervisor of the Seminole County Motor Vehicle Inspection stations because of ill health was honored by the county commission. Commission Chairman Dick Williams presented him with a proclamation of appreciation for his service to the county.

Retired after 20 years with the Navy, Nieders went to work with the county in April, 1960, setting up the motor vehicle inspection program required by the state legislature. He supervised the building of the first stations in Casselberry and Sanford and later opened the third station in Sanford.

Nieders kept things running smoothly, but his job was not without its headaches. He recalls the first year of operation when the law required inspections every six months and there were only two stations. "Cars were backed up in lines several miles long," he said, "and it was a big relief when they went to annual inspections."

Popular with his fellow employees, he was guest of honor at a surprise party Friday at the county courthouse and the employees at the Casselberry station had their own surprise cake and punch for their boss.

"He was more than a boss," says Ruby Wolford, clerk typist at the Casselberry station. "He was a friend. There was never a time you couldn't talk to him. He was our sunshine. We are isolated here and he would bring us the news from the courthouse and the other inspection stations."

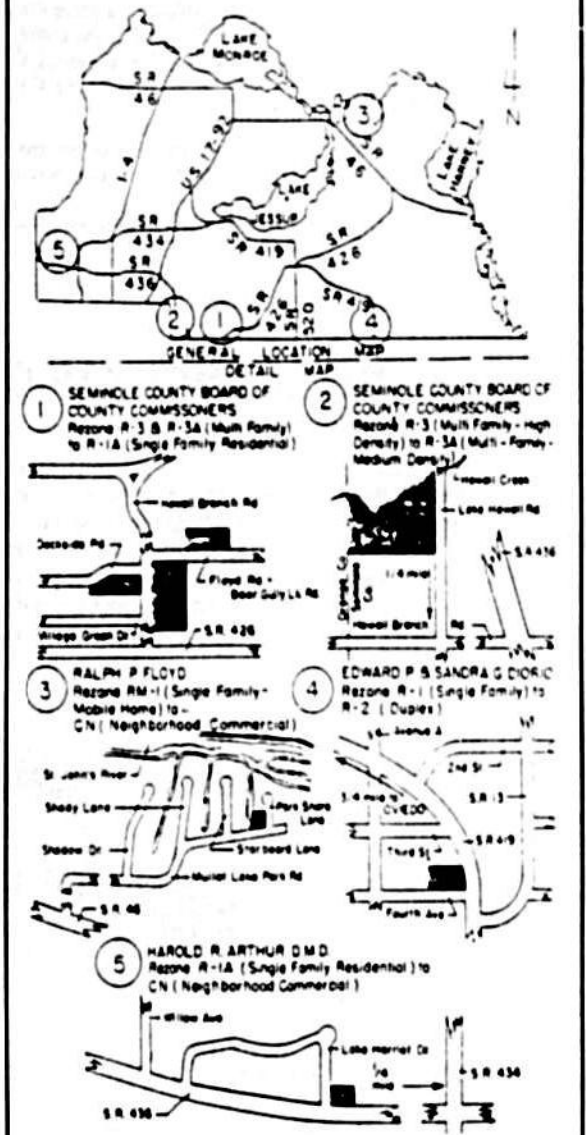

"He is so conscientious, he wouldn't take any time off. He got sick about a year ago, but stayed on and tried to do his job. After he collapsed at the Sanford station, they discovered only 10 percent of his kidneys were functioning. They rushed him to the hospital and they said, 30 minutes more he could have been dead," said Mrs. Wolford.

"I enjoyed working with the county and hated to quit," said Nieders, "but I had to be on the machine for five to six hours every other day. It was like another job. I tried doing it at night, but sometimes I was still hooked to the machine at 11 p.m. and I wasn't getting enough rest."

The machine was loaned to Nieders by the Veterans Administration, which also provides the tubes and other supplies needed.

"The machine is a lifesaver, a few years ago I would be dead," said Nieders. "They are even in the process now of developing a back pack dialysis machine, which would allow more mobility. The machine acts as an artificial kidney cleaning the blood of impurities and taking out the 'People Turn Their Backs'

Neighbors Blame Him For Beetle Blight

TURNER, Maine (UPI) — When Dennis Damon walks down the street, people who have known him for more than 30 years treat him like a stranger. They used to be friends.

When his wife goes to the corner store for groceries, people turn their backs and won't speak to her.

Damon is the production manager for the DeCoster Egg Farms, the nation's largest producer of brown eggs. And in the past two months, millions of beetles have crawled out of deep piles of chicken manure on the DeCoster farms and other nearby egg farms and infested more than 100 homes in the Turner area.

Angry homeowners have been forced to sweep down walls and vacuum the floors of their houses daily to get rid of the small, brown clinging bugs.

Damon worked closely with state officials in an effort to control the plague and the DeCoster Farms have spent thousands of dollars to kill the beetles.

But Mrs. Damon said Wednesday many townspeople, even close friends, blame her husband for the beetle invasion and now treat them with contempt.

"People have known for years now I even speak to me. They turn their backs and look away when I'm at the corner store," Mrs. Damon said. "It's very wrong and very unfair. A good neighbor of ours even yelled at me as I drove by yesterday."

Richard Dearborn, a state entomologist, said the beetles are common to chicken farms across the nation, but usually don't breed in large enough numbers to be a public nuisance. Scientists are unable to explain why the

Young Draws Sharp Rebukes

By United Press International

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's remark the United States holds "hundreds, perhaps even thousands" of political prisoners has drawn congressional threats of impeachment, an "unprintable" reaction from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and a rebuff from the White House.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Young should be fired if he could not substantiate the charge.

But the Russians said the ambassador's statement in the French newspaper Le Matin small, brown beetles are breeding in such large numbers this year in the Turner area, he said.

Dearborn said, if anything, DeCoster Farms, and Damon in particular, deserve a great deal of credit for voluntarily seeking state help and spending thousands of dollars to keep a way of killing the beetles.

Damon said he can understand why people are upset, because he would be too if his home was infested. He refused to talk, however, about how local people have treated him.

Ironically, the Damons' new green one-story ranch house near the DeCoster farm has not been infested by the beetles. But Mrs. Damon said she is afraid irate and resentful neighbors may try to collect beetles and turn them loose on the house.

Chip Off The Old Block

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you asked Pete Rose to choose between his kids, like most fathers, he wouldn't.

He'd tell you he's crazy about them both, Fawn, his 15-year-old daughter, and Pete, Jr., his 8-year-old son.

But all his hopes, all his dreams, are clearly entwined with baseball, capturing young Pete, who wears a replica of his father's Cincinnati uniform practically to bed with him and is a major leaguer in the making if ever you saw one.

The two kids could be one of the reasons Pete Rose and his wife, Karyn, are back together again. They had broken up briefly, but the Reds third baseman says the problem is all over.

"It was my fault," he admits. "She's a good lady. Sometimes I think she's too good for me."

Rose's wife was with him for the All-Star Game in San Diego and so was Pete, Jr., wearing his uniform that Frank Torre, vice-president of Haverly, had specially made for him.

Young Pete was never more than a few feet away from his father's side in the clubhouse before Tuesday night's contest in San Diego and for that, the man the Reds' switch-hitter had to thank was National League manager Tom Lasorda.

"Let my little boy come into the clubhouse and I'll never forget him for that," said an appreciative Rose, shoving his baseball shoes in front of his locker before the game. "I told him (Lasorda) I didn't want Pete to get in the way and he said to me, 'I love the kid.'"

"I said to him, 'Are you sure it's no imposition for him to be in the clubhouse, because he can understand how it would be if all the ballplayers brought their kids in,' but he told me it was perfectly all right."

Until this season, Pete Rose's boy had been a familiar figure in the Reds' clubhouse in Cincinnati, but now it's different. Sparky Anderson, the Reds' manager, laid down a rule whereby the players' children are allowed in the dressing room only after a game, and then only if the Reds win.

"I don't blame Sparky," Rose said. "I have a lot of respect for him, but I think this new rule of his all goes back to winning and losing. One day last season after we lost a ballgame, Sparky walked through the clubhouse and saw 25 people in it he didn't even know. He said, 'That's it. From now on, no unauthorized people in the clubhouse. No exceptions.' I told him I didn't think he could put a member of my family in the same class as outsiders. He said if he made an exception for one, he's have to do it for all and he wasn't going to do that."

For the last few years, Rose's son accompanied his father to spring training in Tampa, Fla., and served as bat boy for the Reds. This spring the boy made every exhibition trip with the club until the Reds traveled across the state to Fort Lauderdale and Anderson said no children would be allowed. "It broke the kid's heart," Rose said. "I said to Sparky that one of the advantages of being a ballplayer is that you can expose your son to baseball. That didn't make him change his mind, though."

"Look," Rose added, getting back to the present. "I want my boy to be a ballplayer. Why would I want him to be anything else? It was good enough for me, wasn't it? It's a great life."

At that moment, Pete, Jr., walked over to his father. He had just come from Lasorda's private office in the home team dressing room in San Diego Stadium.

"Mr. Lasorda's gonna make a trade for you," the boy told his old man.

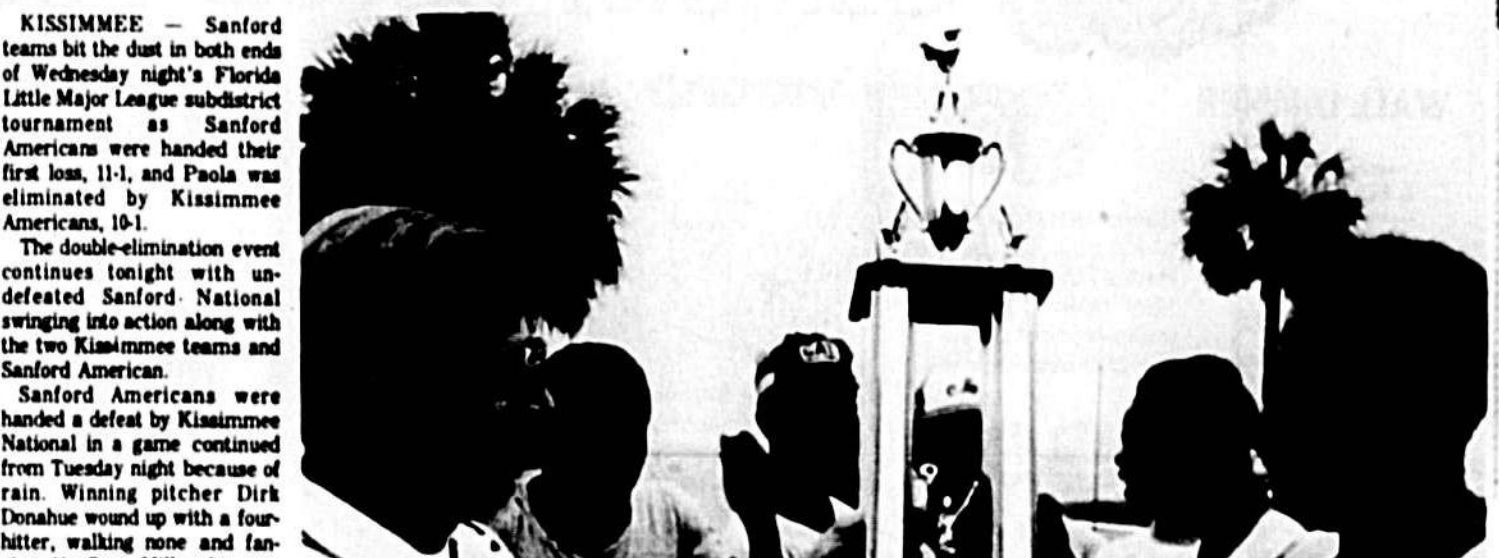

"You want me to go?" Rose asked, still shoving his shoes.

"No," said Pete, Jr.

When the youngster ran off again, Rose put the shoes inside his locker and talked about his boy some more.

"Petey said he wants me to be a Dodger instead of a Red. I never heard him say a thing like that before. Kids are really something, aren't they?"

Sanford Teams Bite Dust In Kissimmee Tournament

Sanford Americans were handed a defeat by Kissimmee National in a game continued from Tuesday night because of rain. Winning pitcher Dirk Donahue wound up with a four-hitter, walking none and fanning 11. Sean Miller hit two homers and Kent Donahue had three hits off lower Lee Charron and reliever Steve Barnes.

The only run for Sanford American was unearned. Willie Pashe reached base on an error and scored after singles by John Scott and Bobby Shaw.

Paola was one-hit by Troy Girdner, Jim Smith had the only hit, a third-inning single.

Jackson Files Cross-Charges

NEW YORK (UPI) — Reggie Jackson has filed a cross-complaint charging harassment against the woman who earlier accused the Yankee star of striking her in a Manhattan movie theater, police said.

Casandra Small, 23, charged Wednesday she suffered scratches and back pains after the outfielder hit her at the Loew's Theater on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

The woman told police she went up to Jackson for an autograph and he refused. She claimed he then slapped her, causing her to fall and suffer her alleged injuries.

Saints Open

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Five new members of the New Orleans Saints joined the club at the start of training camp with 50 players, and the remainder of the veterans are due in within the next week.

Sixteen veterans and 34 rookies and free agents reported to Vero Beach Wednesday for the opening day of training camp, which ends Aug. 23. The players were to complete physical examinations and equipment assignments today.

Two-day workouts begin Friday.

The Saints came to terms Wednesday with their last three unsigned draftees. Contracts were signed with Barry Benoit, the No. 3 choice, Eric Felton, the No. 5 choice, and Francis Chesley, the second selection in the sixth round.

The signings completed negotiations with the team's 12 draft choices.

Benoit is a 6-foot-4, 257-pound defensive lineman from Concordia College in Minnesota, where he played both tackle and end.

Shcharansky Guilty, Sentenced To 13 Years

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet court today found Jewish activist Anatoly Shcharansky guilty on charges of spying for the United States and sentenced him to 13 years in prison.

The verdict came on the fifth day of Shcharansky's trial on treason and espionage charges, which President Carter has denounced as "patently false."

Another Soviet Court Thursday sentenced dissident Alexander Ginzburg to eight years in a "special regime" labor camp as part of its crackdown on dissidents.

State prosecutor P. Solonin told the court that Shcharansky was guilty of espionage and deserved to die — but because he was young and a first offender he only asked for 15 years — three in prison and 12 in a hard labor camp.

The court ruled that the 30-year-old Shcharansky must serve three years in a close-confinement prison and 10 years in a forced labor camp.

In remarks before the Shcharansky sentence was handed down, Carter said: "It's obvious to us that the courageous dissidents in the Soviet Union, Shcharansky and Ginzburg, have been accused and tried and punished or will be punished because they have supported those who have sought the basic freedoms that were guaranteed in the final act of the Helsinki agreement that was signed by the Soviet Union itself.

"We deplore this action on the part of the Soviet authorities," he said.

The United States had repeatedly warned the Soviets Carter, Schmidt criticise Soviet trial during economic summit, page 2-A that harsh sentences against Shcharansky and Ginzburg could seriously damage Soviet-American relations.

The three-man Moscow court actually levied a 13-year prison sentence on the espionage charges against Shcharansky plus a seven-year sentence on charges that he committed anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda—but under Soviet law he will serve only the larger of the two sentences.

A crowd of Shcharansky's dissident friends shouted "Tolja, Tolja, Tolja" — Shcharansky's nickname — as the blue prison bus hauled him away from the courthouse.

His mother, Mrs. Ida P. Milgrom, and other women in the crowd broke into tears and cried out in sorrow.

Minutes after Shcharansky was taken away, a young boy and an older woman turned to the Soviet volunteer militiamen lining the steel barricades sealing off the courthouse and shouted:

"Think it over. It's not too late. Your children will be ashamed of you if you let this happen. Think it over."

Shcharansky's mother was again refused admission into the courtroom for the trial, but she read a letter of thanks to Carter. About 50 Jewish activists, friends and Western reporters stood by.

"Mr. President, in a few hours this disgraceful trial is going to be over. The verdict which was made beforehand will be announced," she said.

"My son is not guilty. He is convicted because he could not be indifferent to the suffering and injury of other people."

"He was pressing for his own right and the rights of all Jews who want to live with their Jewish people in Israel."

"Throughout the difficult days at this trial I am standing before the iron bars and the walls of KGB men and militiamen hoping to see from far away my son, my child."

"All of these days I can hear your authoritative voice in support of innocent men. Please accept our deepest and most sincere gratitude."

Ginzburg, 41, whose blood pressure shot so high during his four-day trial in Kaluga, 110 miles southwest of Moscow, that he had to be medicated, was hauled away in a van Thursday as supporters shouted his name and others urged that he be shot.

Shcharansky was accused of passing state secrets to the United States through former Los Angeles Times Moscow correspondent Robert Tolt, who the Soviets accused of being a spy.

Tolt has denied any espionage activity and Carter has repeatedly said Shcharansky had no connection with American intelligence.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met with Shcharansky's wife Avital on Thursday in Geneva following his arms limitation talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

"Mr. Vance said that the trial of my husband is a violation of all human rights and commitments," Mrs. Shcharansky said after their 35-minute meeting.

Vice President Walter Mondale will meet Mrs. Shcharansky Monday at his White House office.

No Tax Hike Seen

Budget For Seminole Schools: $47 Million?

By LEONARD KRANSDORF
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County school budget for the coming fiscal year could reach $47 million, a $3 million increase over this year's budget.

However, the anticipated increase will not mean a tax rate increase because the school district is already at the required cap of $8 per $1,000 assessed valuation, according to Roger Harris, assistant superintendent for business and finance.

The difference will be made up through increased state revenue and some carry over from the current school budget which totaled $44,883,501.45, Harris said.

The exact amount of the state allocation and other revenue sources is expected to be determined today or early next week, according to Harris.

At the board's regular meeting this week a July 26 date was chosen for the members to get their first look at the budget in a workshop session. The public will get an opportunity to give input Aug. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at a public hearing.

For the past several months the six-member budget committee has been reviewing budget requests from school district department heads.

According to state law the superintendent has to present the budget to the board no later than Aug. 15 and the board has

JOHN YOUNG OF FPC REPLACES TRANSFORMER DAMAGED DURING STORM

Storm Kills Power For Thousands Here

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County was inundated with more than two inches of rain and jolted by lightning Thursday night in what was termed by Florida Power Corporation (FPC) spokesman as the "worst storm so far this year."

Thousands of FPC customers were without power for 15 minutes to several hours after several transformers and a major line were struck by lightning, Joe High of FPC said today. Power was restored in most of the areas by 7 a.m., but repair crews were still working in two or three isolated areas where burned-out transformers were not discovered until early this morning, High said today.

The major storm moved to the western part of the county through Forest City, Weliva, Sweetwater Oaks, Altamonte Springs and Casselberry around 7 p.m. A major power line was burned down on the Weliva Springs Road, High said.

"It was a psychedelic experience," said a resident of the Tiffany Apartments in Fern Park. He said he witnessed a five-minute barrage of lightning, which exploded a transformer on Oxford Road near Fernwood Boulevard.

There were blue and red sparks, and a glow the size of a large billboard lasted five to five seconds when the transformer exploded, the man said.

Not far away from that location, lightning struck

Building G at Regency Apartments knocking some bricks out of the outer wall about 7 p.m., the manager, Craig McDaniel said today. There were no injuries, and damage was minor, he added.

Seminole County Fire Department recorded 28 calls in the southern and western end of the county during a half-hour to 45-minute period reporting possible lightning fires, 80 percent of which involved homes, a spokesman said. There was no major fire damage or injuries reported.

Altamonte Springs Fire Chief Tom Siegfried reported two fires started when lightning struck TV antennas. A rash of mechanical alarms set off by the storm were investigated he added. He said the storm, which dumped 2.1 inches of rain on the city in a short time, caused flooding on both sides of State Road 436 and on secondary streets. The heavy rains made visibility poor and driving hazardous, causing several "fender benders," Siegfried said.

Among the places receiving run-off from State Road 436 faster than the drains could take it away was the parking lot at Valley Forge Apartments. "It was knee-deep in the parking lot, but only came inside when a passing car caused a wake," an apartment spokesman said.

Winter Park Telephone Co. reported no major damage and Florida Power and Light Co. in Sanford said no power outages were reported by their customers due to the storm, which dumped 2.9 inches of rain at the Port of Sanford

Longwood Man One Of 4 Arrested In Marijuana Bust

By MAX EKILETIAN
Herald Staff Writer

A Longwood man is among four persons being held in Orange County Jail today in connection with what Orlando Police are calling a "significant" marijuana arrest.

James A. Costello, Longwood, was arrested along with three other men who allegedly transported a large quantity of marijuana to Hartsfield Airport in east Orlando Wednesday night.

Arrested with Costello were: Fred F. Haus, Ft. Lauderdale; Leonard B. Stovle, Atlanta, Ga. and a man who identified himself as Harold E. Bowling of Nashville, Tenn.

Orlando Police report Bowling is not the correct name of the fourth individual. An investigation is underway to determine Bowling's true identity, according to a police spokesman.

All four were charged with possession of more than 100 pounds of cannabis, both felonies. The man who identified himself as Bowling also was charged with possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony and aggravated assault. He reportedly struck a police officer during the arrest.

Costello and the other three men allegedly transported 1,750 pounds of marijuana to the airport in a rented U-Haul truck, according to the spokesman.

At the airport the four men were to sell the marijuana to men who were going to transport it by airplane. However, the men with the airplane were Orlando Police undercover officers.

The undercover officers had been working on the case for about one month, according to the spokesman, trying to gain the groups' confidence.

"The story was that our people had an airplane there, which they did not, and that they were going to fly the marijuana out," said the spokesman.

About 30 officers were on hand at the airport to make the arrest, according to the spokesman. Eight to 10 officers had been working directly on the case from its inception.

The marijuana was packaged in 24½ bales, neatly wrapped, according to the spokesman.

Former Official Denies Role In Winter Springs Recall

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Ex-Councilman Claude Ash denied today any involvement in the recall effort against Winter Springs Councilmen John Daniels and Laurent Pellerin.

"I signed the petition, but I did not circulate the petition and contacted no one to sign it," said Ash.

Meanwhile, Mayor Troy Piland, who may be the subject of a recall himself, termed the move against the two councilmen "a hell of a lot of bother."

"If Larry (Pellerin) and John (Daniels) wanted to, they could challenge the recall," the mayor said. "We have only two-year terms of office in the city and the people have the right to show their feelings at the ballot box."

Ash was reported as one of the circulators of the petitions for the Daniels-Pellerin recalls and was singled out in prepared statements by the two councilmen and accused of being a member of a group behind their proposed removal from office.

Daniels described Ash as an "embittered ex-councilman who was defeated fairly and squarely at the polls by Pellerin."

Pellerin said that the recall petitions were "drummed up by a group of individuals" including Piland, former City employee," but declined to name the employee. Of former city employee, Charles Mort, who lost his job when the federally funded job project under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act expired and who has been the leader of the petition drive, Ash said he barely knows him.

"I did give Mort about a week's work and let him use my car while he was working for me, but that's all," said Ash.

"I'm running nothing but my own business and I have my hands full."

Ash said he is building an apartment project in Gary, Ind. and is building homes in Winter Springs and Tusculum. "I don't care who they have on the city council I want to be left alone," he said.

"Recall is not good. It disrupts everything in the city government," he said, adding, however, if he had it to do over again he would still sign the petitions to recall the two councilmen.

"I'm too busy to get involved in this petty politics," he said.

Piland said that he does not support the recall effort, did not sign the initial petition and will not sign the second petition yet to be circulated.

"One of the men, Daniels, is us for election in November and Thursday night on the Piland recall effort.

"The city had begun to get a fairly decent reputation in the county for its quality of government and the fragility of which the mayor and council handled tax funds," said Piland. "Now the city has taken on a carnival atmosphere and become a spectacle," he said.

Daniels and Pellerin were served with certified copies of the recall petition and charges against them Tuesday. The charges are malfeasance, misfeasance and neglect of duty. The men have five days to respond to the charges with defensive statements containing no more than 200 words.
