a violent fight for the presidency. Speaking recently in Milwaukee, he outlined at some length the aims and ideals of his party and the methods by which he would bring about his revolutionary changes "without bloodshed."

To begin with, he would not take everyone's property away from him the first day. "We cannot successfully confiscate everything at once today and have a smoothly running socialism tomorrow." Such things naturally require a little time. So he would begin, not by confiscation, but by condemning big corporate interests, like the utilities, for instance, which would have little support from the great mass of the people, and buy, them is, not with cashs of course, but with "bonds", and at prices not hased on the investment therein, but set arbitrarily by the inocialistic state.

"We should pay", Mr. Thomas declares, "in bonds not of the government, but of the socialized, industry—let us say the oil industry. These bonds should be amortized in of the government, but of the acclaimed industrys—let is say the oil industry. These bonds should be anatorized in their years. The income from these bonds and the inheritance of them should be subject to the same dragity graduated taxes we should lay on all wealth. This capital levy of itself would facilitate the actual social ownership of industry. In other words, if the socialistic operation of industry were not in itself sufficiently inefficient to make the bonds valueless in the course of their years, then the same to be actually penalty of the socialistic operation of industry were not in itself sufficiently inefficient to make the total real estate inspection of the bonds valueless in the course of their years, then the same to be accompanied to the pocame due.

So much for the big industries. Their confiscation would be comparatively bloodless because their owners are sent and working classes, according to Mr. Thomas, who then outlines his plan for acquiring control of the banks. He would do this simply by organising a system of government banks, which would be ac favored by government legislation as to quickly run the private banks out of the banks. He would act the simple to a favored by government legislation as to quickly run the private banks out of the two-acre farm.

There is the eleborate plan of socialism, succinctly expressed by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can unterested by Mr. Thomas, and t pressed by Mr. Thomas, so that the humblest man can un-derstand it. It embraces merely the policy of taking property away from those who bought it, or earned it, and giv-ing it to those who didn't, a policy which, when carried on conservatively is known as a hold-up, on a breed scale as

The Electoral College

The people of the United States do not elect their president. They elect the members of the Electoral College freight assessed and taken out from the various atates who in turn elect the president.

In the face of a presidential election it is interesting to study this Electoral College, particularly with regard to the membership from the various atates and catalogue for approximately four the membership from the various atates and catalogue to the membership from the various atates and catalogue. It would have paid the membership from the various states and sections. There approximately the same acreage tion throttles and prohibits are 531 members; 266 electors are required to elect the approximately the same acreage tion throttles and prohibits. The question that new arises in merce amongst ourselves.

Men have been elected president who did not receive the farmers' minds, and in the possible that the government the greatest popular vote. Also a landslide in the Electoral minds of other people in this ter-College does not necessarily mean a landslide throughout country.

It is perfectly possible for a man to be elected presirather he a house dog and dent without carrying a single western or southern state. And the stated Banate." And to these, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia and Maryland, and you have a total of 159 electors in the New England and Middle-Atlantic states.

Add to these, the Middle-Western states of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Hinoia, Wisconsin and Kansas, and you have a total of 268 electors, or more than half the college, with only one state west of the Mississippi River.

Following are the figures for the representation of the mississippi River. Following are the figures for the representation of the several states, in the Electoral College:

Bozo, the world's only mind reading dog, owned by Captain C. Lowery, and now on a good-will tour for R. S. Evans, Austin automobile dealer for seven Southern states, who appeared here this morning in a series of amazing tests of mental telepathy, at the R. J. Reel U-Drive-It garage on Myrtle Avenue.

Without any apparent coaching or assistance from Captain Lowery, this small two and one-half year old son of a Scotch Collie and Chinese Chow, would add and subtract any small numbers called to him by any person in the throng witnessing the demonstration; would signify by barking the exact number of coins a person held in his hand; would ugnify any number on a dollar bill, coin, or piece of paper although he did not see the article and would perform card tricks that were sensational.

Featuring the demonstration by the dog, recently pictured by Ripley of "Believe-It-Or-Not" fame, was the creature's amazing ability in locating a certain card in a deck. One of the spectators would shuffle the deck thoroughly, ask the dog where a certain card could be found, would hear the dog bark a certain number of times, and upon counting off that number of cards, would find the card

Sumners Declares Resubmission Will Be Considered Soon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30,-(P) Chairman Sumners, of the louse judiciary committee yeserday said "resubmission of the 18th Amendment" was a "foreg ne conclusion" and that may be considered at the oming sersion of Congress.

The Texas Democrat always has supported the 18th Amend-ment and he relterated yesterday hat he still held his convictions. However, he said!

"Regardless of attitude toward the liquer question, the position of the major political parties and the other indications of public attitude and purpose establish that it is a fact that the resubmission f the 18th Amendment as it is usually stated, is a foregone con

"Quite probably that issue will be submitted during the next session of Congress.

"It is my purpose to favor such submission. The question is right. "The national campaign will be over and it would seem as good time as any to get this question back to the people for he expresicn of their attitude and judgment with reference to it."
