Shots fired after routine traffic check yields surprise

By J. MARK BARPIELS Horald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County deputy Gerard Christy must have thought he had a routine traffic stop early this morning as he turned around to pursue a 1985 Ford Mustang with only one working headlight on U.S. Highway 17-92 near Lake Mary Boulevard.

But what Christy quickly realized was he was chasing his own car, apparently stolen from the driveway of his Winter Springs home.

The chase ended in Chase Groves near Sanford with what may have been gunshots exchanged between deputy and the suspected car thief. The suspect, a Jacksonville man, was arrested and charged with auto

The entire incident is still under investigation and an administrative review of the three gunshots fired by the rookie deputy is scheduled to follow, said sheriff's spokesman George Proechel.

Proechel said the chase apparently began at about 2:30 a.m. on northbound U.S. Highway 17-92. Proechel said Christy was driving south when he noticed a northbound car had an inoperative headlight. Christy told investigators he turned around to stop the driver to issue a warning or citation.

But as Christy pulled up to the car, he recognized both the car and tag number as being his own.

Proechel said the cars apparently continued north on Mandatory garbage pickup eyed

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County Manager Ron Rabun will ask commissioners to consider a mandatory garbage collection program this week, charging unincorporated residents $13.28 per month for service.

"It's just a talking sheet right now," said Rabun. "We'll take that to the commissioners and see what they think about it.'

Unincorporated residents now pay from $11.59 to $12.80 each month for garbage collection. They must also pay $1 per bag for yard waste. which can no longer be discarded with household garbage.
Rabun said if commissioners accept the proposal or have modifications, he will ask them to formally authorize him July 13 to allow county staff to negotiate with the five county garbage haulers to determine if the rate will be accept-

Rabun said the monthly fee should allow for twice weekly pickup of garbage without a restriction on the amount. The fee will also pay for one pickup of an unlimited amount of recycling materials weekly. The program will also include one pickup of yard waste weekly, limited to about 20 bags of leaves and other yard debris.

The fee includes $9.45 monthly for collection, $3.35 for disposal, 10 cents for recycling bins and 38 cents for the county franchise fee. said Rabun.

Extension opponents prepare for hearing

SANFORD - Opponents of the proposed extension of the Seminole County expressway between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Interstate 4 are geared for a confrontation with the Seminole County Expressway Authority tommorrow.

More than 700 signitures have been raised opposing the six-mile link, expected to cost about $140 million. Petition organizers say the names are primarily from people who live in Hidden Lake, Idyllwilde and Ravenna Park. More signitures are expected to be received by the meeting at 3:30 p.m. in the county commission chambers of the County Services Building.

The Seminole County Expressway Authority is not scheduled to consider the extension tommorrow. But county commissioner Jennifer Kelley assured residents earlier this month she would ask her fellow authority members to reconsider their May 27 vote approving the extension.

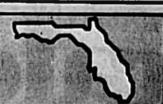

Kelley said she had supported changes to move the expressway closer to their homes after changes were made to screen it from homes.

State must return resettlement money

The federal government spent a total $6.8 million on refugee resettlement in Florida in fiscal year 1991.

While acknowledging errors found in the audit, state officials are disputing the amount they should forfeit.

"Any time you're talking about a million-dollar situation, that's a serious bite," Thomas Arnold, who administers the program for the Florida Department of Health and Re-habilitative Services, said last week.

Expert: Government environmental policy needs to be more preventive

By Associated Press

GAINESVILLE - Federal environmental agencies are designed to react to rather than anticipate environmental disasters, a University of Florida political expert says.

Some disasters could be avoided, according to Walter Rosenbaum, an expert in envirenthental policy-making, if government were to concentrate more on planning ahead.

"They're sitting back waiting for the alarm to go off," he said in a release issued Monday by the university. "They should be trying to find out what the problems are and where they're itkely to arise.'

Stalking enacted

TALLAHASSEE - Authorities will finally be able intervene before something violent happens and stop people who re-peatedly harass and threaten others under an anti-stalking Jaw that takes effect Wednesday.

The Florida law, modeled after a California statute, makes stalking a criminal offense. A prosecutor said Monday that offenders are usually men who pursue women.

"You punish the guy instead of it leading to a battery or a rape," said Ray Marky, seeistant state attorney in Leon County.
"Now, there is a price to pay."

Before stalking was made a crime, victims could turn only to the courts for restraining orders that were difficult to enforce and punishable only by a contempt of court citation. Marky said judges were often rejuctant to put offenders behind bars because of overcrowded jails.

The new law makes it a misdemeanor punishable by up to 60 days in jail to stalk nomeone. If a judge orders no more contact with the victim and the offender ignores it, the violation becomes a felony punishable by up to five years in prison.

"In a lot of cases, the woman's going to report it and the police are going to go out and talk with the guy," Marky said. "That's enough to stop a lot of them right there.

Other Florida laws that take effect Wednesday include:

• People who file lawsuits claiming their civil rights were violated in a job action or other activity could sue for up to $100,000 in punitive damages for the first time.

•Some private clubs where business is often transacted will be prohibited from discriminating against people on the basis of sex, race or religion. The measure will open up some tennis, golf and sailing clubs that now exclude women, blacks or Jews. Fraternal, religious and

Chopper pilot rains on nation's fires

By Accorlated Press

LEESBURG - Chuck Brainerd has rained on forest fires throughout the nation.

Brainerd, 42, is one of some 400 pilots in the country certified to fight fires with a helicopter. Along with most of them. Brainerd is a war veteran who learned to fly while facing a different kind of fire.

As a chopper pilot during the Vietnam War. Brainerd ferried everything from troops to food and usually endured a hailstorm of bullets while doing so.

He was shot down three times and earned a Distinguished Flying Cross. "It was a young man's game. It was exciting, and it scared us out of our wits," Brainerd says about those days.

"I didn't think anybody could survive a year of that. I didn't think I could make it."

61 didn't think anybody could survive a year of that. I didn't think I could make it.

-Chuck Brainerd

But when he came home and had trouble finding a decent job, he bought a chopper and began crop-dusting, setting air conditioners onto tall buildings and pouring cement for foundations on barrier islands.

He tested missile guidance systems for Martin Marietta Corp., and eventually began helping put out forest fires on the West Coast.

Now, he bases his two helicopters at Leesburg's airport and doesn't hesitate to fly for days to get to a fire.

Among the fires Brainerd has rained on were the 1988 inferno at Yellowstone National Park and last year's Good Friday fire in Mount Plymouth, not far from his home in Central Florida.

Brainerd aims his load of water at isolated fires that crews can't get to, at homes threatened by fire and at buildozers and crews trapped by unexpected shifts in a fire's direction.

Sometimes, he knows that the best efforts are uncless.

"I've wanted to call the guys on the ground and say: 'You need to leave. These trees aren't worth it," says Brainerd.

Astronauts experiment

By SUGAN INCHTOWN Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER. Houston — Columbia's astronauts today watched starry specks swirling in heated silicone oil in an experiment aimed at producing nearly flawless crystals and alloys.

This is the sixth day of the 13-day research mission, NASA's longest shuttle flight yet. The seven astronauts are conducting numerous experiments as well as undergoing medical tests to learn how humans adapt to space travel.

On Earth, movement in liquids and gases used to make crystals and metals can cause defects, limiting their potential use in products such as computer chips and turbine engine blades.

One of the causes of such movement is temperature variations. The temperature effects are much easier to measure in low gravity than on the ground.

Researchers also are interested in growing seer, more nearly perfect crystals in space for use on Earth in medicines and other

Physicist Gene Trinh carried out the experiments by pouring oil into a round copper container 4 inches across and 2 inches high, then heating it.

An infrared imager measured the oil's surface temperature, while a laser illuminated aluminum oxide particles mixed into the oil. The twinkling particles swam in circular patterns, first slow, then faster.

"Kind of interesting, isn't it? Sure didn't expect to see something like this," Simon Ostrach, a scientist from Case Western Reserve University, told Trinh from Earth. "Keep up the good work, Gene."

On Monday, astronauts Bonnie Dunbar and Lawrence DeLucas took turns inside a waist-high vacuum container that pushes blood into the legs. The treatment is intended to ease the body's transition from space to Earth.

Such sessions are planned throughout the mission, which ends July 8.

Judges edge closer to drawing minority seats

By CURT AMBERCON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Three federal judges who ordered an improved black House district in the Pensacola area are edging closer to drawing more minority seats in both House and Senate maps in Dade County.

"At some point, we may get down to where we have to draw lines in this case," said U.S. Circuit Judge Joseph Hatchett during testimony Monday in a Justice Department lawsuit.

The Voting Rights Act suit claims Democratic legislative leaders failed to draw the maximum number of Hispanic and black seats in Escambia and Dade counties in order to protect the political fortunes of white incumbents.

Hatchett and U.S. district judges William Stafford and Roger Vinson agreed Monday that Pensacola's black population was improperly fragmented to benefit white Democratic incumbents, including incoming House Speaker Bolley Johnson

The judges told attorneys for Democratic legislative leaders. Republicans and the Justice Department to quickly reach an agreement on how to reshuffle three House districts in Escambia and Santa Rosa coun-

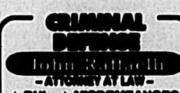

Rep. Dan Webster, R-Orlando. said a proposed Escambia

County accord would probably carve out a district with a 35 percent black voting-age population in the Penascola area. Rep. Busz Ritchie, a Democrat, would be the likely incumbent.

Even though Johnson would lose a solid Democratic voting bloc, it probably wouldn't jeop-ardize his chances of re-election. His proposed district, which would be overwhelmingly Democratic in voter registration, appears to go for Republican candidates in statewide and national elections.

"Definitely, it will strengthen our opportunities at some point in that district," Webster said. "It basically gives us another competitive area.'

In its lawsuit, the Justice Department also called for creation of two more Hispanic House seats in Dade County, for a total of 11. The Legislature's plan has nine; there are seven Hispanics from the Miami area

No more madness

The arms accord signed by President Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin signals the end of an era of madness in human affairs. For a generation, the United States and the Soviet Union "looked at each other through gun sights," as Yeltain put it, fingers on the trigger of nuclear arsenals structured to give advantage to the nation that fired first. With the agreement to cut the number of nuclear weapons by two-thirds over the next decade, that nuceiar showdown is coming to

The new accord moves beyond the beancounting of early arms treaties to strike at the heart of the nuclear nightmare: The thousands of multiple warheads sitting atop accurate land-based missiles.

The agreement, which will be put into treaty form over the next several months, requires the United States and Russia to phase out those multiple warhead missiles by 2003, and earlier, if the Russians receive enough technical assistance from the United States to speed the dismantling. Yeltsin started that process, announcing that he was taking off alert Russia's SS-18 missiles, its 10-warhead behemoths.

It is weapons such as the SS-18 that, over the last 20 years, have raised the risk of a holocaust. Each multiple-warhead missile was theoretically capable of wiping out two or more of the other side's land-based rockets in a first strike, potentially crippling an adversary's ability to retaliate. And because land-based missiles were potentially vulnerable to attack there was an incentive to fire them at the first sign of attack; use 'em or lose 'em, the dictum went. That created instability and magnified the risk of war.

As an exercise in weapons counting, the arms agreement leaves the United States a clear winner. But the most important advance on the accord is that it transforms the nuclear balance to increase everyone's security. Without multiple-warhead ICBMs, the United States and Russia will be left with just 3,000 to 3,500 weapons deployed on launchers bombers, submarines, small ICBMs - suitable only for retaliation.

Cuts of this scope — the accord requires the destruction of 14,000 warheads — are a massive technical undertaking, which explains why it will take years to carry it out. The time it will take to implement this disarmament underlines again to Americans and Congress, the enormous stake that this nation has in the continuation and success of democratic reform in Russia. Disarmament and Russian democracy will move ahead together.

So-called innocents on death row

By now we have had enough experience with the death penalty under the new Supreme Court rules to recognise the techniques that the American Civil Liberties Union and the criminal bar have developed for combating it. They are as rigidly ritualized as a Japanese tea ceremony.

First and foremost, of course, there's the contention that the defendant didn't do it - it's all a gross miscarriage of justice. There are well over 2,000 people awaiting execution in various states around the country, and it beggers belief that all of them are an innocent an new-born babes. babes, but that is usually the contention whenever one of them gets dangerously close to the death chamber.

Typically, it will be charged that the real killer was the defendant's accomplice, who turned state's evidence in return for a life sentence. Not infrequently some convict in for a long stretch elsewhere will confess to having committed the crime himself, in the hope of a little welcome

Invariably, as the execution date approaches, there will be discoveries of "new evidence" -allegedly providing the prisoner with a cast-iron alibi, or exonerating him by virtue of newly developed blood tests, or demonstrating that the prosecutors suppressed vital facts. Frequently, some member of the jury that convicted him, or even the judge or prosecutor, can be persuaded or of comprehending the reason for his execution to announce that, on this or some other basis, the execution should be blocked. Equally pre-dictably, it will be argued that all of the defense lawyers involved in the trial and the endless appeals (some going on for 10 or 15 years) were incompetent.

But what if. as often happens, there is simply no doubt that the individual in question committed the crime? What if dozens of people saw him do it, or he managed to make a confession so persuasive as to eliminate all uncertainty? Then we will be told that he has the 10 of a borderline moron, and was clearly incapable of knowing that what he did was wrong, or of assisting in his own defense,

There are well over 2,000 people await-ing execution in various states around the country.

Finally, there will be the pleas made to the governor at the elemency hearing. This is the point at which we learn that the defendant's mother drank during her pregnancy - thus afflicting him with fetal alcohol syndrome. Invariably, his father was a beast. If by any chance the prisoner served in Vietnam, he will be portrayed as the hapless victim of post-traumatic atress syndrome, even if he never got within earshot of military action.

On execution eve, after these and still other contentions have all been sifted by the state and federal courts and rejected repeatedly, some federal judge appointed in the Carter years can almost always be found who will issue as many stays of execution as necessary, on the basis of "new" contentions however flimsy, to boot the legal football down the field and launch a whole new round of hearings and appeals.

If even this fails, thanks to a vigilant and determined Supreme Court, the liberal media will indulge in one last orgy of exculpation. If the defendant is by any chance personable and articulate, an effort will be made to run him around the Donahue-and-CNN circuit, on the theory that nobody that nice could be guilty.

Economy, environment unite

To look at the debris left over from the collision between owls and logging in the Pacific Northwest, you might be guiled into accepting the Bush administration's perception of the environment and the economy. It's a belief that at some fundamental level the two are irreconcilably competitive, that when push comes to shove, one's got to give way to the

It's thinking that breeds polarization. You can see its results today in the Northwest fight: the courts running the logging industry, the administration admitting its plan to save the owl will lead to its eventual extinction, federal agencies snapping at each other, knives sharpened to gut the Endangered Species Act. jobs imperiled, general acrimony.

The potential for conflict in some of the nation's ecological hot spots is just as great as in the Northwest's ancient forests. But in some of those places a different approach is being tried. With the right leadership, people representing all interests involved are attempting with varying results, to be sure - a cooperative response to a shared set of problems.

Florida's Everglades, including the famed National Park portion, have been slipping toward biological collapse for at least a decade. Politically, the Everglades controversy was also fast slipping into another polarized federal court case pitting farmers and urban water users against the environment. Until last year that is, when newly elected Gov. Lawton Chiles dropped Florida's court fight with the federal government and asked, instead, what can we all do together to solve this problem?

It turns out a lot can be done. Plans now afoot will see 29,000 acres of wetlands restored to the Kissimmee River ecosystem to help filter out pollutants that flow into Lake Okeechobee. which feeds the Everglades. Another 35,000 acres of wetlands at four sites will be acquired to filter the lake's water before it gets to the giades. Maybe three times as much wetlands will eventually be needed to complete the job. Phosphorus runoffs from sugar cane fields will have to be brought under control. It may take $800 million and 15 years to put the pieces together and the farmers remain disgruntled. But huge strides have been made to replace confrontation with a cooperative effort to reverse the Everglades decline.

In the Lake Superior region, the idea is to prevent a fight over the economy and the environment before it begins. Last October, the United States and Canadian governments and the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Ontario agreed on a voluntary effort to restore and protect the entire Lake Superior ecosystem. A Lake Superior Forum has been created where mining and logging industry representatives meet with environmentalists and government officials.

As of now, environmentalists are assessing ways that economic development can occur without degrading the lake environment. That assessment is being developed with industry representation. The commitments implied by this joint effort are far from being realized. But the participants have chosen to put their energy into trying cooperation instead of building bunkers for a long battle ahead.

In the Pacific Northwest itself. endangered salmon stocks raise issues potentially more divisive than the ancient forest controversy. The difference is the whole community is trying to work out the issue instead of taking sides over it. The salmon stocks along the Columbia River watershed are disappearing. Some spawning waters are muddled by the soil captured in the runoff from clear-cut patches of ancient forest. Much of the problem centers on the rivers' dams. During downstream migration, huge numbers of young fish are lost in the turbines built into the dams. The lakes behind the dams have replaced fast and free running water. This lengthens the migration so much that many salmon mature into sea-going fish while they're still in freshwater.

The idea is to

prevent a fight before it

They don't survive. The interests involved range from the hydroelectric industry and its rate payers, to the rivers' transport system, to farmers who tap into the lakes for irrigation water, to the fishing industry that depends on the salmon. They also include the people of the Northwest who see the salmon as a symbol of their way of

This past year, technical committees representing every industry along the river system have met in the third phase of an effort to draft a plan to save the salmon. "They were interested in a recovery plan for the salmon. not in creating a collision course between their industry and the fish," says Merritt Tuttle of the National Marine Fisheries Service in Portland, Ore. That work is continuing. Delay could spell disaster for some salmon stocks that are already near collapse.

If 10 years ago a similar course had been chosen on the ancient forest controversy, the divisiveness surrounding that issue today might have been avoided. Our leaders failed us then. They continue to fail us by polarizing a conflict that their neglect helped to create.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Our nation has a rare opportunity

The news came as it often does, first thing in the morning with the snap of my alarm-radio coming on. And as often happens, I didn't know if I was dreaming the story or not; in the haze of almost being awake, I've dreamt stranger ones:

Boris Yeltsin, months after assuming control of the Russian Federation and on a mission to beg aid, admits to President Bush that American prisoners of war from as far back as World War 11 were taken to Soviet prison camps and mental hospitals. Some of them, he speculated, may still be alive.

If a tale like that popular wake you up. popular will. My first thought is how Bush kept from coming across the table and grabbing Yelisin by the throat. How long this? And if he knew it, who else did? Gorbachev? Oh, by the way, we've had your missing POWs. but they're probably all dead now.

Yeltsin tells Bush that this knowledge came with the recent opening of Soviet archives. And he claims that even the Russians have yet to unearth our soldiers' histories, whether they are alive, and if not, how they died. And yes, he says, Gorbachev knew. How unbelievably sadistic. All these years, all the heartbroken families, the terrible unknowing that never allows survivors a complete peace. What advantage was it they were hoping to gain, that they feared even to Next my rage jumps continents. If what Yeltsin says is true, there is no way U.S. intelligence could not have discovered at least some of the story. Yet as family after family beseeched its government for help in finding POWs from Vietnam, they were told their search was futile, that we had thoroughly investigated and believed no more prisoners of war to be living.

And now the ruler of the nation that devoured our men stands before us to ask for help. Are his confessions simply a carrot hung before us to win our aid, or an honest attempt to demonstrate that Russia comes to the table this time with all its cards showing. nothing held back? A canny combination of both? Surely Yelisin knew what effect such information would have on us, and could have mapped out a variety of possible plays.

The days since the collapse of the Soviet Union have brought surprise after surprise. and we continue to piece together the enormity of the cruelty and oppression of its Communist leaders. Apparently, that's something we share with the Russian people. A friend of mine, the Rev. Dorsey Levell, just returned from a mercy trip to Russia to deliver food collected by Missouri churches. He was struck by the sense of wholesale betrayal the Russians are feeling. "My most overwhelming impression," he says, "was that they feel like they've been hoodwinked all these years by their own government."

Watching the video Levell took in Russia deepens my belief that the Russian people were raped and plundered by these horrifle despots, and my sense of "evil empire" recedes to "evil band of old reprobates." Levell's priceless footage shows elderly Russians packing food in backpacks for long walks home in the cold, children of Chernobyl dying alone in hopelessly inadequate hospitals. Where are their parents? At home, working, trying to keep the rest of their families from starving in this land their leaders gutted.

Legislators debate whether we should promise aid and encourage economic investment in Russia immediately, or walt until the POW questions are answered.

Lawmakers battle as budget deadline nears

TALLAHASSEZ — The budget battle persists in Tallahassee but managers of State operations in the Sanford area are not immediately concerned about a shutdown if the budget is not approved on time.

Jack Scalera, chief of operations at the State Attorney's office in Sanford commented, "As of yesterday we were still declared an essential service operation. Unless we hear differently, we plan to continue operating as normal."

The local HRS offices will also continue operation regardless of the budget decision. Manager Dewey DeLouch said, "While we are allowing some personnel to take some leave time. we will have about 95 percent of our 130 member staff on hand and that's enough for handle all of our regular services."

The State Farmers Market, Corrections Depariment Probation and Parole, and Job Services offices while expecting to continue operations, are all waiting for final word from their individual headquarters in Tallahansee.

Today is the last day of Florida's flocal year. Although House leaders and Senate Republican tax foes ventured cautious approval of a $339.4 million tax plan by Senate budget writers, there is a feeling by some government leaders that it may not be approved in time.

Gov. Lawton Chiles put off signing an executive order Monday designed to keep essential workers at their desks in case of an impasse, though he said he might sign it today.

Somehow, some way, things have to come to an end." Senate Minority Leader Ander Cremhaw, R-Jacksonville, said Monday night. "I think this has the makings of being the end."

"We're getting closer," anid House Speaker-designate Bolley "Bo" Johnson, D-Milton, as lawmakers tried to break the deadlock before the new flacal year begins Wednesday.

House Speaker T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, said he didn't know if House members would go along with specific Senate proposals.
"But it'll work," he predicted.

"That'll get us out of here," said Senate President Gwen Margolis, D-North Miami Beach.

Budget leaders met with Wetherell and Margolis and debated details after both chambers recessed Monday night.

The package included some new taxes, the largest being a one-half mill intangible tax increme expected to raise $134 million.

It also included ways to gain revenue without new taxes, such as a crackdown on an existing sales tax on residence lesses of less than 6 months, aimed at tourists and transient renters. It would raise an estimated $35 million.

With or without a budget, Chiles has said the state will maintain services and has encouraged everyone to report to work July 1.

Workers needed to protect life and property would be paid under an executive order, while non-emergency workers would technically be volunteers and would be paid retroactively after a budget agreement, he said.

Pennsylvania state employees worked under such an arrangement during a budget dispute, said. Chiles' spokeswoman. Julie Anbender. "That's what would happen in Florida. People would not even know the difference."

"We're advising everyone to go in to work. business as usual. Arrangements are being made to compensate them." American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees spokesman Larry Coggins said.

Chiles' office released a list of emergency services Monday night, such as Medicaid and other public assistance payments and programs, alcohol, drug abuse and mental health services; prison operations; traffic law enforcement; Marine Patrol operations; care of hatchery and laboratory animals; and matters such as building security and maintenance in all agencies.

The voluntary agreement with employees would avert the need for other service cutoffs, such as closing the gates at 113 state parks that hosted 318,250 visitors last Fourth of July weekend, pulling the plug on 12,000 lottery ticket machines that account for more than 96 million in revenue daily, or closing school doors to 524,365 pre-kindergarten through 12th grade pupils and 206,000 adult education and job training students who have started or soon will start summer classes.

Animal rights group objects to transplants

PITTSBURGH - Animal rights activists protested today outside the hospital where the world's first baboon-to-human liver transplant was performed. "We don't believe you should sacrifice one species for another." said frene Simko, a member of Pittsburgh Animal Advocates. "No one asked the baboon what he thought."

Before Sunday's 11-hour operation, the 35-year-old patient, whose name was withheld at his request, was dying from recurring infections of hepatitis B. which destroys the liver.

He was not a candidate for a human liver transplant because the virus probably would have damaged the new organ. Doctors believe baboon livers are not susceptible to the virus.

RACINO KMARI Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria - Flags were lowered to half-staff today and public celebrations were canceled in mourning for slain leader Mohamed Boudlaf, whose killing could indicate a highly organized underground of Muslim fundamentalists.

An assassin in a policeman's uniform killed Boudiaf on Monday and 41 people were injured in gunfire and grenade blasts at the hall where he was speaking. state news media said.

No group claimed responsibility for Boudial's assassination. but suspicion fell on Muslim fundamentalists, who have organized strikes and violence since the military-dominated government suppressed their electoral victory in January. If proven to be the work of an slamic assassin, the killing would show a high level of organization in the extremist underground. It also could provoke further government crackdowns in Algeria and other nations such as Tunisia and Egypt, that face violent fundamentalist movements.

Graffiti appeared on walls in fundamentalist strongholds in Algiers today: "Boudisf was the devil in person" and "Divine justice at work."

The High State Committee said the assassin was arrested. but there was no immediate information on the suspect. It appeared other assailants were involved, but details were also sketchy. The official APS news agency initially reported that the assessin was killed by Boudiaf's bodyguards.

The State Committee declared seven days of mourning. July 5 independence day celebrations were canceled.

Television showed Boudiaf speak his last words in Annaba. 375 miles east of Algiers, before two bursts from a sub-machine gun tore into his head and back.

'Economy won't stall this year'

By JOHN D. McCLAM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Despite recent signs of renewed weakness. many analysts believe the economy will not stall out later this year as it did in the second half of 1991.

Officials of many of the 400 companies participating in a new survey believe the caution lights that existed late last spring still are flashing, but not with the same strength.

"There were a number of warning signs that the strong post-Gulf War gains of last year would be difficult to sustain: debt burdens were oppressive, income gains were nonexistent and consumer confidence was still depressed," according to a summary of the survey by Cahners Economics in Newton.

"These problems are still with us today, but their severity — and, therefore, the likelihood that they can effectively stall the recovery — has diminished significantly," it continued.

"Consequently, economic growth this year has a more stable foundation and the gains we've seen are sustainable.

The Commerce Department today was releasing its Index of Leading Economic Indicators. which was expected to support the business survey. The index is designed to forecast the economy six to nine months in

A consensus of economists had suggested the index would rise 0.6 percent in May, the fifth straight advance and the longest string since the forecasting gauge rose for six consecutive months through last July. Still, that would be less than half the 2 percent monthly increases posted after the 1981-82 recession and consistent with forecasts of a less-than-robust recovery.

The report was being released on the same day the Federal Reserve's Federal Open Market Committee was meeting privately to assess the economy and determine monetary policy for the next eight weeks.

Many economists said in state they believed the committee sould adopt a wait-end-see stance and not slash rates further at this time. despite the economic picture and pressure from the White House for more economic stimuli.

A day before the report. Commerce Department said sales of new homes had fallen in May for the fourth straight month. Analysts said it con-firmed that the housing industry had given up its traditional role of leading economic recoveries.

"It was another of many weak signals recently that give cause for concern over how sustainable this recovery is," said Daryl Delano, a Cahners economist.

Other recent government reports have shown lackluster consumer spending and con-tinued high unemployment, including a troubling increase in first-time applications for jobless claims in mid-June.

Still, Lyle Gramley, a former Federal Reserve Board governor and a consulting economist with the Mortgage Bankers Associa-tion, said he believes "the recovery is doing reasonably well. It seems to me it should produce 2.75 percent growth this year, the best since 1988."

Gramley said that "while housing is not strong enough to drag the economy along with it." the economy is benefiting from other sectors — growing exports, low inventories and rising business demand for durable goods.

The Commerce Department reported last week that the gross domestic product - the nation's total output of goods and services - grew at a 2.7 percent annual rate in the first quarter. The Cahners survey showed the June Business Confidence Index was 4.3 points higher than the 62.5 level a year ago.

Both the level and the recent trend' ... suggest that the economy is in much better shape now than it was in June 1991," the summary said.

A survey of 50 top economists surveyed by Blue Chip Economic Indicators earlier this month showed a consensus expected the economy to grow 2.1 percent this year.

And rather than stall out, the economy will continue to gain. advancing 3.1 percent in 1993, it predicted.

A look at the abortion ruling, likely impact of the decision

WASHINGTON - A woman's constitutional right to abortion is nafe, for now, but the Supreme Court is giving states more leeway to impose restrictions that make it harder for women to end a pregnancy.

The court recessed for the summer Monday after issuing its most controversial — and dramatic - ruling of the 1991-92 court term. And neither side in the continuing national debate on abortion is satisfied.

Here, in question-and-answer form, is a look at the court's ruling on Pennsylvania's restrictive abortion law and the likely impact of that decision.

What did the court say about its 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade that established a constitutional right to abortion?

At By a 5-4 vote, the justices said that right still exists. Justice David H. Souter, a coauthor of the court's main optnion Monday, said overturning the 19-year-old landmark would be "a surrender to political pressure" that "would subvert the court's legitimacy."

Que Why then are abortion rights advocates so unhappy?

At The court dismentled much of the framework supporting the 1973 ruling, including the trimester approach that was an ant underpenni

That now-discarded standard held that:

•A woman's decision to have an abortion during the first three months of her pregnancy must be left to her and her doctor.

•States may regulate abortion during the second trimester only to protect the woman's health.

OStates may protect fetal life in the final three months of pregnancy.

Monday's ruling "lets states seriously nibble away and cut the right to abortion." said American University law professor Herman Schwartz.

Norma McCorvey, the "Jane Roe" of the 1973 decision, said in Los Angeles the court had issued a "death warrant" for teen-agers, indigent women and rural women.

Or What did the court put in place of the trimester approach? As Adopting a test first enunciated by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor nine years ago, the majority said abortion restric-tions will survive constitutional scrutiny if they do not place "an undue burden" on women. The test means states may not put substantial obstacles in the way of a woman seeking an abortion before her fetus is capable of living outside the womb.

Or What is an undue burden. and what is not?

As Ultimately, the votes of five of the nine justices will decide. Justice Antonin Scalis, in a dissent, said "philosophical predilection and moral intuition" of unelected judges will decide what is lawful.

On Monday, the court used the undue burden standard to uphold Pennsylvania abortion restrictions that impose a 24-hour waiting period for women; force most teen-agers to get parental consent or judicial permission for abortions; require doctors to keep detailed records on abortions they perform; and require that women seeking an abortion be told about fetal development and alternatives to ending their pregnancies.

But the lustices struck down a provision that required wives in most cases to notify their husbands before retting an abortion.

On Why are abortion opponents unhappy with this out-

At They anticipated a conervalive court, or by appointees of Presidents Reagan and Bush, was on the verge of overturning Roe vs. Wade. Monday's decision "is an incredible betrayal," said Ran-dall Terry, founder of the antiabortion group Operation Re-

Who might be most affected by likely new laws limiting access to abortions?

A: Poor women, less-educated women and those in areas far from the nearest abortion clinic. These women are most likely to be deterred and intimidated by additional hurdles states may now raise. Or What is the likely political fallout in this presidential election year?

At President Bush could be the big winner. Democrats were counting on a clear-cut body blow to the 1973 ruling to galvanize abortion rights activists and stir fears of Big Brother intruding on the right of

SANFORD - Removal of underground tanks and surrounding contaminated soil at a descried service station was completed yesterday, one day before the end of a state program that defrays some of the owner's ESS was contracted by property owner, Joe Gazelle for Poxfire Restaurant Inc. to remove the tanks. The state has ordered that tanks. The state has ordered that all underground storage tanks abandoned in or before March, 1990 must be inspected and either sealed or removed as quickly as possible. Kazakis said no date has been set by which all tanks must be inspected.

"There's no time frame. It's immediate. They're doing them.

immediate. They're doing them as fast as they can," Kazakis

Begun in 1990 and ending today is the Abandoned Tank Restoration Program, in which the state pays up to 100 percent of the removal fee. Kazakis said Gazelle's property "has met eli-gibility for the program. Now it's a waiting game with the state to see how much of the expense they will share with him." He 'said it was just coincidence that the removal was complete the day before the assistance program deadline. "They have been acheduled for some time. We just got to it," Kazakis said. His firm averages 20 to 30 removals per month, but because of the deadline for the state program, ESS has removed 42 tanks in June.

The head of the county's underground storage tank in-spection program said there may be two other contaminated storage tank sites in Sanford.

Joe McLuan, supervisor of the Hazardous Materials Storage Bureau, said crews will be removing tanks at a former gaso-line station on U.S. Highway 17-92 at Park Avenue to determine if any leakage has occured. Another tank will be removed from a site on U.S. 17-92 and 27th Street to determine if there has been contamination.

Ruth McLemore, supervisor of Central Florida county tank inspection programs for DER, said there are a total of 19 contaminated abandoned underground storage tanks sites in Seminole County, but the number is expected to grow as data is received today.

The three-day job at Thrifty, completed Monday, will cost between $10,000 and $20,000. including soil removal, Kazakis said. He said he estimates the state might pay 50 to 100 percent of the cost for this job.

The property was originally inspected by a county environmental agent.

"Some sort of leakage was discovered. Gas, diesel, waste oil and other chemicals were found. It doesn't necessarily mean the tanks were leaking. It could be spillage from delivery or overspill from years ago. It could be from 20 to 25 years ago," Kazakis said.

MANILA. Philippines - Fidel Ramos, a shrewd political veteran who served under dictatorship and democracy, was sworn in today as president of a nation plagued by corruption. poverty and rebel violence.

lt was the first peaceful transfer of power in 26 years in this nation of 65 million, a former American colony that has been the base for U.S. naval power in the Pacific since World War II.

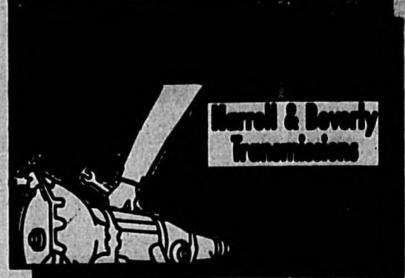

"Let us begin by telling ourselves the truth," Ramos said in his 30-minute inaugural speech. "Our nation is in trouble and there are no easy answers. no easy fixes for our basic ills."

Hours before the inauguration peremony, bombs believed planted by right-wing extremists exploded at branches of a bank owned by a Ramos supporter. Several thousand leftists marched through the streets denouncing the former defense secretary as a "fascist." "There will be no honey-moon," leftist leader Nathaniel Santiago said.

The explosions did little damage but underscored the difficulties Ramos will have in uniting this fractious nation.

Rain wins JGA event

For the Junior Golf Association of Central Florida, the 1992 season has been filled with a record-number of golfers, cooperating parents and volunteers and plenty of Tommy Finwall captured the fifth flight title with a six-over-par 42 at Hunter's Creek. Bobby Hazel came in second with a 43 while Chris Yuskaitis grabbed third with a 44. Jarred Denerline acorched the net division with a 31. Daniel Hedrick finished second, three shots behind Denerline. Brock Kelsey defeated Jeff Ryan in a putt-off for third place in the net division. They both shot 35.

The Pee Wees also finished their three holes, but no trophies were given out for individual scores. Each child received a participation trophy, however, the JGA wanted the youngster to play for enjoyment, not competi-

"We want the kids to have fun and not put pressure on themselves," said JGA executive director Bill Shiles. "I have had 100 percent support on the new Pee Wee format from the parents. I would like to thank the parents for their cooperation.

Shiles said the Pee Wee division is growing rapidly. with 69 players showing up at Hunter's Creek Monday.

A total of 325 golfers came out for Monday's action. Shiles this year has been very smooth and almost everyone has cooperated except for Mother Nature. "Things are going great except for the rain," Shiles said. "All the volunteers have done a great job. The Golf Academy guys have done a great job. It makes it a little tougher when they have the rain."

Next week's action features the nine-holers at Winter Park Pines while the 18 holers challenge the tough layout at Gary Player-designed Alaqua. The Pee Wees will play at Deer Run starting at 7:30 a.m.

The nine-holers will begin their assault at 10:00 a.m. while action gets underway at Alaqua at 9:30 a.m.

SANFORD - Making success last means always looking toward the future. As the Sanford Cyclones prepare to play in the American Legion Fourth of July Tournament starting Thursday, the summer team to defending 3A state champion Seminole High School looks to gain greater depth in their pitching staff and develop their young talent. "We're trying to get our pitchers ready for the Fourth of July Tournament." said Sanford manager Kenne Brown. "Deion Daniels is on vacation, and that definitely is hurting our pitching staff. Matt Diemer is coming along strong and getting himself into pitching shape. "Robby Morgan threw 60 pitches without any pain on Sunday," added Brown. "I was very pleased with that. So with Robby, Chunat and Diemer pitching well, we'll do pretty good." The Cyclones, 14-3, will concentrate on giving their younger players experience while resting the older players this afternoon when they travel to Lake Brantley High School for a 4 p.m. contest with the Dodgers. Freshman Brian Dwyer is the likely starter. 'Sanford's game with Deltona Trinity was rained out Monday. and they split a doubleheader with DeLand Sunday, losing 11-1 and winning 20-4. Todd Braden, who has shined on the mound and struggled at the plate, hit a grand slam on Sunday, as did Matt Freeman.

Braden needs to work on his plate appearances," said Brown. 'He's working on some new things to improve his hitting. He's been a good hitter in the city leagues, and as with some other guys on our team, it's just a matter of reaching another level. We have some good talent to build on."

Kessler (2-for-3, double, two RBI. one run). Johnston (2-for-3, triple, one run. one RBI). Warner (2-for-3, one run, one RBI). Rovito (1-for-3, triple, one run). and Brandon Hanshaw (1-for-2). Lake Mary, now 4-6, will travel to Altamonte Springs for a 7 p.m. ball game tonight with the Dodgers at Lake Brantley High School. The game will follow a 4 p.m. contest between the Dodgers and the Sanford Post 53 Cyclones. Discuss politics with humor, respect draws near, we see a downright hostile intolerance to anyone else's opinions. I want to share our experience - perhaps others will benefit from it.

I married Jack at the end of World War II. We were so opposite (I'm Catholic, he was Protestant: I'm a Republican, he was a Democrat: I like black olives, he liked green; etc.). Yet we had total respect for each other, and a wonderful marriage for 46 years — until he passed RWRY.

Come election time, we sat at our dinner table, trading information from both political parties, trying to convince each other not to go to the polla and cancel out each other's vote.

Oddly, we both wanted the same thing for our country, but Jack felt government could do it better and I was for private Dinnertime could get pretty heated with our four sons taking part. When they were older, we ended up with two registered Democrats and two Republicans.

A sense of humor helped us to keep our perspective. As we finished our dinner, Jack would always conclude with a twinkle, "Well, Honey, you are entitled to your erroneous opinion." and we'd all laugh.

Let's keep it respectful and humorous. We will be better served. What do you say, Abby? MINI CUTTER,

SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF. DEAR NINE: I say you're absolutely right! Political differences at the dinner table are rarely respectful and goodhumored. Lucky you!

is in love with our cousis. The feeling appears to be mutual, but obviously legalities are prevailing. We know it is illeast in some states for first cousins to marry. We also know that it is legal for second cousins to marry, in this sate of divorce and remorrishs. where do the half-cousine fit in?

Our grandmother was married twice, to different men. A daughter of the first marriage had a son. A daughter of the second marriage had a daughter. Grandma's children are halfsiblings. But what are Grandma's grandchildren? (The only common link is Grandma.)

Might any of your readers or advisers know of a place where the marriage of these grandchildren would be legal? Or should they remain just "kissing cousins"?

Well, I was just diagnosed as having lung cancer, and I have never amoked a cigarette in my entire life. However my husband smoked 2½ packs of cigarettes a day for more than 40 years, and he is as healthy as a horse.

How can this be explained?

DEAR DUMBFOUNDED: It is possible that you are a victim of secondhand amoke. (However, in fairness to your spouse, not all lung cancer is caused by cigarette smoke.)

DEAR ABBIT: Next week, I will celebrate 25 years as a registered nurse. I have seen it all, and now may I share some pointers for visitors?

(1) Do not bring small children to the hospital to see "Grandpa" or "Grandma." The hospital is teeming with germs that small children have trouble fighting. (2) Piesec wash your hands after using the bathroom. It's the best way to stop infection. (3) Do not smoke around oxygen. (Yes, I have seen visitors who don't know better.) (4) All electric fans, radios and CD players brought from home must be checked by the engineering department. Many fires have been started by a faulty electrical appliance.

(5) Please don't eat the patient's meals. We want to see how much the patient has eaten when the patient's tray is returned to the kitchen.

(6) Leave the pets at home. (Last Christmas, a mother brought a hamster in her purse for her little boy. It got loose, and created a big fuse until it was finally found and captured.) Abby, if you use this in your

Fears rise for tourist industry in California

LOS ANGELES — Don't mind riots? Gridlock? Gang warfare? Smog? If you still want to come here for vacation or business, how do you feel about the biggest earthquake in four decades?

No one can say for sure what the economic effect of the quakes will be on Southern California. But it's clear they won't help.

"Basically, stability has been challenged," Lynn Resser, chief economist at First Interstate Bank, said Monday. "Now there are too many question marks."

No major visitor attractions or batels had any question marks."

Y No major visitor attractions or hotels had any aignificant physical damage. Still, there may be innancial damage to come.

"The greater fear is that this will hart the tourist season," said Rolle Arnhym, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce in Palm Springs, near the earthquakes' epicenters. "The riots were bad, the recession was worse, and this will scare off the rest of them."

and this will scare off the rest of them."

Mayor Tom Bradley was quick to note that the quakes were strongest 100 miles to the east of

"Let me make it clear to a national audience," he said Sunday. "This earthquake was not in Los Angeles. It was clear out in Palm Springs. We don't want people to confuse that issue."

"Is this a good thing? No," said Michael Collins, vice president of the Convention and Visitors Bureau. "Is it going to hurt? Probably. But not for "

Earthquakes in California are common, of course. But the latest quakes, while causing relatively little damage, arrived at an especially bad time for the state in general and Southern California in particular. Almost every sector of the economy is troubled. Defense and aerospace are staggering, the computer industry is in a slump, residential real estate is stagnant, commercial real estate and the construction industry are sorely depressed, and Llayoffs have hit banks. 'I'm not sure that this particular event is operating at the margins of importance or is very aignificant." said David Hensley, director of the Business Forecasting Project at the University of California at Los Angeles. "The place has taken so many blows, I don't know how the image can get any worse. You almost have to laugh over the series of bad hits we've taken."

The April riots are expected to cost the city $1.1 billion in lost visitor spending and 31,000 Jobs over the next year, according to the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

California is the world's No. 1 travel destination, with state tourism and travel revenue of more than $52 billion a year, according to the Office of Tourism.

After the riots but before the quakes, Hensley predicted local tourism would be off 21 percent this summer compared with a year ago, down 18 percent this fall and off 14 percent this winter.

Serbs retreat as support dries up

Do BLOGGOAN LOKE Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The tide may be iturning against heavily-armed but poorly-led Serb militiamen in Boania-Herzegovina, who until recently controlled two-thirds of the former Yugoslav republic.

The rebeis have been reeling from a string of defeats at the hands of Bosnian government forces, despite superior weaponry handed over when the Serb-dominated federal army withdrew the last of its troops in late May.

Now military analysts say the Serbs have been caught off guard by a two-pronged offensive converging on the embattled capital of Sarajevo, which could break a three-month siege.

Ethnic Serbs, who make up a third of Bosnia's 4.3 million people, rebelled at the end of February when the Muslim and Crost majority voted for independence from Yngoslavia.

Backed by the Serb-dominated Yugoslav federal army, they swiftly captured two-thirds of Boania in a bid to create their own republic linked to Serbia. now alone with Montenegro in the new Yugoslavia.

But the Serba' momentum alowed earlier this month when Yugoslavia, under international condemnation for its role in a civil war that has killed at least 7,500 people, pulled the federal army out of Bosnia.

According to Western sources, the federal army gave Bosnia's Serbs 200 armored vehicles — including 100 T-55 tanks, hundreds of field guns and about 30 jet fighters. They estimate the insurgents are able to field some 40,000 men.

Bosnian Crost and Muslim troops number about 50,000.

But lack of discipline and poor leadership have hurt the Serb campaign, especially in eastern Herzegovina, the republic's western region bordering Croatia.

Once a rebel stronghold, an eastward offensive by 7,000 Croat fighters has pushed the Serbs back from the Neretva River. The attackers appear intent on continuing toward the regional capital of Trebinje, about 80 miles south of Sarajevo.

"Indiscipline and constant drunkeness has transformed the Serbs into a useless rabble," said Milos Vasic, a Belgrade military analyst.

"Their morale has hit rock bottom because they were promised an easy victory and the chance to loot captured Crostian and Muslim villages," he said. "It is not easy to motivate such men to fight against a determined and disciplined enemy.

The comments are apparently borne out by reports of mass defections that have reduced the Serb ranks in Herzegovina to fewer than 3,000

Belgrade's waning support for the rebels is partly) the result of international pressure. including aweeping U.N. sanctions May 30 against Yugoslavia. But lack of good leadership is cited as a decinive factor in several key Serb defeats.

Extra heartbeat is usually harmless

DBAR DR. GOTT: My 29-year-old son recently volunteered for a study being conducted at UCLA and was rejected because he has an extra heartbeat. Is his condition cause for concern?

for concern?

DEAR READER: Usually not.
In healthy young people, premature contractions (extra heartbeats) are common. On occasion, such cardiac irregularities may reflect heart disease but in these instances, other signs, such as an enlarged heart, are ordinarily present.

I suggest that your son check with your family physician, who will assemble and heart him fauth.

I suggest that your son check with your family physician, who will examine and test him (with a cardiogram) to determine the source, frequency and seriousness of the premature contracbie for a hormone imbalance to cause extreme fatigue, ahortterm memory loss, headaches, muscle/joint pain, digestive problems, hypoglycemic symptoms, PMS and a host of additional problems? I've been told I have chronic mono/Epstein-Barr virus and that I have to live with my condition. Do you agree?

whether to agree or disagree, since your symptoms are so wide-ranging and non-specific. Evidently, your doctor has tested you and discovered previous Epstein-Barr (mononucleosis) virus infection.

Could this be the cause of a chronic fatigue syndrome? Yes, in some patients. However, many more have positive EBV tests without symptoms, so the role of the mononucleosis virus is currently ill-defined.

A hormone imbalance could certainly cause some of your symptoms, such as weakness, malaise and emotional swings. However, such an imbalance is probably not a cause for memory loss, joint pains and digestive problems. Nonetheless, your hormone levels could be checked with blood and urine tests.

White she's at it, have your doctor order a Lyme disease blood test, too. This infection, which is spread by a tick bite.

may cause many of the symptoms you mention.

Most players restrict their talk during a bridge hand to their bids and other essentials. But there are those who insist on giving free information to their opponents with an occasional gratuitous comment.

Decide how you would play in a contract of four spades on today's deal. West leads the club

North's four clubs is what the English call an out-of-the-blue cue-bid. It shows a good raise to four spades with the club ace. Having no slam interest. South signed off in game.

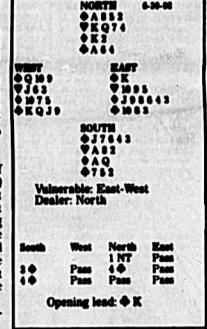

It appears that declarer, faced with two club losers, can afford only one spade loser. That would require finding the opposing spades divided 2-2, or West with a singleton queen or king. So declarer ducked the first trick (good technique, to try to cut the opponents' communication in the suit), won the club-jack continuation and cashed the spade ace, felling East's king. Now, instead of leading another spade, declarer cashed his two diamond tricks and turned his attention to the heart suit. When the opposing cards broke 3-3, South discarded his last club on dummy's fourth heart. West ruffed, but declarer had only three losers: one club and two spades.

This was a reasonable line of play, but if East had had the K-Q doubleton of spades and West only two hearts, the contract would have failed, while playing a second spade at trick three would have worked. Why did South play as he did? When he cashed dummy's spade ace, East dropped the king with the comment "Peeping Tom!"
