Couzens, Member Of G. O. P. Accepts Call To Serve At Parley

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—The House foreign affairs committee today voted to instruct American delegates to the economic conference to work for bimetalism at a fixed ratio between gold and silver. The vote was 15-10.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—Senator Couzens of Michigan today accepted an appointment by the President as a member of the American delegation to the London economic conference. He is the first Republican named. The others so far named are Secretary Hull, Senator Pittman, Nevada, Representative McNamara, Tennessee, and James M. Cox, of Ohio. The delegation sails tomorrow afternoon.

Accepting polite refusals from two Republican independents, President Roosevelt was reported last night to have selected a third Republican senator—James Couzens, of Michigan—to be ready to sail within 48 hours with America's delegation to the London economic parley.

Senator Couzens, of California, and LaFollette, of Wisconsin, were invited to take part in the conference, but declined.

When the sailing hour fast approaching, the President yesterday selected as his definitely chosen for a White House discussion of plans. At the state department there were official frowns, meanwhile, at the action of Senate foreign relations committee in altering the Rooseveltian embargo resolution so that it would not be withdrawn as the first proposed—from one party to dispute and not the other.

Credell Hill, secretary of state, told newsmen the resolution on its modified form was not in harmony with the views of the President nor himself.

He asserted that this late in the session a small minority could hold up the measure, although he indicated the administration had not yet finally determined whether to abandon hope for its passage before adjournment.

The resolution, amended in committee Saturday on motion of Senator Johnson, originally provided that munitions could be withheld from either disputant.

Administration quarters regarded the committee action as definitely out of accord with the doctrine expressed at Geneva a week ago, to the effect that if the United States concurs with the actions of other nations in determining an aggressor, this country would refrain from any action tending to nullify their collective peace efforts.

LaFollette's refusal of a place on the delegation which leaves for the London conference Wednesday was made known as the President gave final instructions to the men already named.

"I regret that it will be impossible for me to attend," LaFollette said.

"I am very much interested in important legislation which I hope to be considered before Congress adjourns. I assured the President of whole-hearted hope for the success of the conference."

FEDERAL JUDGE RITTER ASKS FOR PROBE OF SELF

MIAMI, May 30.—(A.P.)—Federal Judge Ritter, of Miami, yesterday asked for a congressional investigation of his conduct in office and simultaneously Representative J. Mark Wilcox introduced at Washington a resolution directing the inquiry.

"It seems to be an open season on federal judges, and I'm ready," said Judge Ritter when told of Wilcox's action.

He said he requested the investigation because of "persistent rumors and charges" against his integrity as a judge of the federal court for the southern Florida district. Judge Ritter said he did not know the nature of the charges, or who had made them.

"Rumors coming to me," Judge Ritter wired Representative Wilcox "are so persistent that I urge you to have investigation made in some proper way."

"I welcome investigation of my court and my actions as I have no knowledge of anything wrong."

Mr. Wilcox's resolution directs the House judiciary committee to determine whether in its opinion Judge Ritter was "guilty of any crime or misdemeanor which in the contemplation of the constitution requires the investigation of the constitutional power of the House."

The resolution would give the committee power to summon witnesses and records; authorize the appropriation of $5000 for the investigation, and require the committee to report its findings to the House.

Judge Ritter, a republican, was appointed to the federal bench by President Coolidge, Feb. 25, 1929. Before moving to Florida in 1925, he lived in Denver, Colo., where he held many high civic positions and also was a member of the Colorado railroad commission.

Daytona Group Makes Goodwill Visit Here

Headed by Daytona Beach's official publicity automobile upon which was seated a smiling young woman attired in a white bathing suit and with the smartly garbed uniformed drum and bugle corps marching while furnishing lively music, a small army of business men from the East Coast city late yesterday afternoon invaded the business district to promote summer tourist business for that city.

Gene Johnson, director of the group, said that members of the group were on a two-day tour of interior Florida and south Georgia cities, and he asserted that Daytona Beach is preparing for one of the heaviest summer tourist seasons in its history.

Elaborate Program Held In Junior High Auditorium As 132 Members Graduate

An overflow audience composed of relatives and friends this morning assisted in final ceremonies held in the Sanford Junior High School auditorium where 132 boys and girls, members of the graduating class of 1933, brought their school year to a close after an elaborate program.

Songs by the school glee club, remarks by various local clergymen and persons who were present to award various contest prizes, and an address entitled "On Being Prepared," delivered by Rev. F. M. Marler of the First Christian Church, constituted the highlights of the program.

Before the address was delivered, the audience loudly applauded the presentation of the following awards to various members of the graduating class and the school: Edith Singletary and Billy Zachary were awarded first prizes of $10 in cash and a gold medal for the best essay entitled "Safety First." Second prizes of $2.50 in cash and a silver medal were awarded Mary Lou Lyles and James Calhoun. The awards were made by Rev. A. S. Peck on behalf of the Sanford Elks Lodge, members of the class.

The Schreier awarded first prize in the American Legion Auxiliary poster contest, with Miss Strange and Little Sharp awarded second prizes. Miss Arantaka made the presentation.

Mary Lou Lyles was awarded the highest honor of the year—the scholarship prize.

John Jones was awarded a prize for progress in agricultural work. Karla Wheeler was awarded a prize for progress in domestic science.

Eleanor Jones was given a letter of appreciation for her excellent work.

DEMAND IS MADE HOUSE VOTES TO FOR PROBE INTO DEPRIVE GOLD OF MELLON AFFAIRS SUPERIOR STATUS

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—A demand for reports on income tax assessments and payments by the Treasury department yesterday from Sen. McKellar (D-Tenn.) a resolution introduced in the Senate.

Meanwhile, from the other end of the Capitol came a resolution of the House, introduced by Representative Andrew W. Mellon (R-Pa.), in a statement introduced in the House, asking an investigation of the Treasury department.

FORESTRY AND TAX LEVY BILLS GET ATTENTION

TALLAHASSEE, May 30.—(A.P.)—Reforestation bills and general tax levy measures received legislative approval today as the Senate and House went into its fourth day of the regular session.

Two bills designed to allow Florida to benefit from and contribute to the federal reforestation program, sponsored by the President, were passed by the House. Both the Senate and the House passed a bill leaving a one-half mill general ad valorem property tax for the purpose of providing for the reforestation program.

Major measures went without attention this morning. One reforestation bill directs the board of forestry to investigate and determine lands available and suitable for reforestation projects.

Another would set aside timber lands for a period of 50 years and exempt them from ad valorem taxes and provides that until the forest crops are harvested the state shall collect a tax of three cents an acre and that after the crop is harvested, six percent of the crop value shall go to the general revenue fund and two-thirds to the counties in which the land is located. Proponents said 10,000,000 acres of timber land in the state are now idle.

Schmah Is Elected Head Of Growers Credit Corporation

Gus Schmah, Lake Monroe resident, has been elected as president of the Sanford Growers' Credit Corporation, succeeding J. J. Holly, who has headed this group since its organization in 1929.

Mr. Schmah's election came at the annual stockholders' meeting at the Court House last week. Other officers elected are: Henry Nickel, vice president; R. W. Deane, secretary treasurer; J. J. Holly, Henry Nickel, Gus Schmah, Peter Thurston, George E. Balms, V. M. Greene and T. F. Adams, directors.

Mr. Holly was given a rising vote of thanks for his efficient handling of the duties of his office. He was urged to continue at the head of the organization for the coming year, but he declined with the statement that "either activity will take up so much of my time that I do not think that I should be able to attend to this group."

Plans for the coming season have already been formulated by the new board. These plans will be discussed at a special meeting of the stockholders to be held Friday night, June 2, at the Court House.

Final Rites Paid To Harry E. Jones, 38

Funeral services for Harry E. Jones, 38, resident of Sanford for the past three years, were held in the past Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, with burial in a cemetery in that city.

Mr. Jones, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., died at an Orlando hospital Saturday afternoon after a short illness. He was employed at the Long Meat Market here for about six months. Prior to that time he was connected with local A & P stores. He resided in the Takah Apartments on North Park Avenue.

Emergency Meet Is Called To Protest Industrial Control

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—Opposition to the stiff enforcement of provisions in President Roosevelt's encompassing industrial control bill resulted today in the summoning of an emergency meeting here of the National Association of Manufacturers for next Saturday.

Robert L. 1933, president, announced he expected 1000 to attend and asserted that the industrial control public works taxation measure in its present form would "retard rather than promote industrial recovery."

Secretary Wallace said yesterday that his plan for administration of trade agreement provisions of the farm adjustment act will be handled so as to prevent overlapping with the industrial control public works bill pending in Congress.

While subjects which can be brought under agreements under the farm act and exempted from provisions of the anti-trade law are broad, Wallace said that it is not for us to control hours of labor, production and so on—that is set forth in the industrial bill.

He said that in order to cause the least irritation possible to manufacturers concerned it is essential for Mr. Johnson (Gen. Hugh L. Johnson) if he is appointed, to arrive at some sort of co-ordinated supervision.

Johnson is slated to carry out the industrial control features of the measure and is understood to be under consideration as director of the $3,000,000,000 public works program.

The farm act makes possible the setting up of trade agreements covering not only the processing and distribution of the seven basic commodities listed in the bill—wheat, cotton, hogs, corn, tobacco, rice and dairy products but commodities.

Half-Year License Tags To Go On Sale Thursday, June 1

W. H. Schmidt, local automobile tag dealer, today announced that half-year license tags will go on sale on Thursday, June 1, and that the following-automobile owners may secure licenses good for the half-year:

Persons who have not operated their cars in Florida prior to June 1.

Persons who purchase new cars on June 1 or any date thereafter.

Persons who bring cars into this state after June 1.

In order to determine the non-use of an automobile, the date of purchase or of entry into the state, Mr. Schmidt said, "an affidavit covering either or all of these points must be secured with each application for half-year license. Such affidavits must be properly drawn and the signature notarized. The actual owner of the vehicle in question should sign the affidavit."

Concluding his statement, Mr. Schmidt said, "Quite a number of people are under the impression that half-year tags can be obtained after June 1, regardless of whether or not the car has been operated prior to that date. Such is not the case."

Guards Kidnaped By Escaping Prisoners

LANSING, Kansas, May 30.—(A.P.)—Kirk Prather, warden of the Kansas penitentiary and two of his guards were kidnaped by a group of armed convicts who used them as a shield to escape. Another guard, John Stewart, was held when he attempted to prevent the break which came during a Memorial Day baseball game. One prisoner snatched up a loaded Prather, pinning his arms. Outside the gate the convicts entered an automobile and drove away.

REPLY IS MADE TO SHOLTZ TALK ON FUNDING BILL

CLEARWATER, May 30.—(A.P.)—Replying to Governor Shultz's charge in an address Sunday night that city officials are lobbying against the administration debt funding bill for selfish reasons, Mayor H. H. Baskin yesterday issued a statement condemning the bill and calling on citizens to muster sentiment to defeat it in the House.

Declaring the bill would "demoralize the communities affected by it," Mayor Baskin suggested that every citizen who has not done so to register a protest at Tallahassee. Nearly 100 persons signed a petition of opposition to the measure at a public meeting Friday night at the municipal auditorium.

Mayor Baskin is a vice president of the Florida League of Municipalities, which has been fighting the debt funding bill since its introduction. Mayor Baskin's statement follows:

"Last evening the governor said to engage a state-wide radio hook-up in which he made the statement that 'the League of Municipalities has an expensive lobby at Tallahassee, maintained at the expense of the taxpayers and without representing them.' This charge must be answered to give the people a full understanding of the seriousness of the situation."

"Regarding the present Legislature as a possible turning point in the affairs of Florida, the cities organized themselves for the purpose of getting before the Legislature comprehensive data upon which to base laws to help in solving the bonded debt problem. They were met immediately by the contrary policies of the Governor, based upon theories long found to be false, in regard to how this should be accomplished."

"Finally, a bitter clash has come about between the Governor's action and the Florida League of Municipalities."

"The debt funding bill was drawn under the direction of the governor without seeking the advice of the officials of the various cities affected, although for months before the Legislature met it was whispered throughout the state that the Governor had a drastic law in contemplation which affected the rights and even the existence of the municipalities and defiling districts."

"It has become increasingly apparent that this is the Governor's pet measure, because many of his political supporters are now carrying petitions among the people asking pressure on the Legislature to pass the bill. In his haste to pass the bill, he has not discussed the funding bill as a plank in his platform."

"Enactment of another bonded debt measure could increase the cost of government considerably in the hard pressed taxing districts, and the expenses would be charged up as a first lien against the revenues of the districts. If the bill would control the bondholders to the extent that we could be assured that the result would be a reduction of our bonded debt requirements, it might be possible to swallow the rest of it, but unfortunately there is no power vested in the Governor by which he can force the re-operation of bondholders."

LOCAL BILL PASSED

Advises received here this afternoon from Tallahassee indicate that the Senate has passed House bill No. 1201 which fixes the power of the city attorney of Sanford in connection with the sale of and foreclosure of all tax certificates and tax liens which are now held by the City or which may hereafter be held by it for a period of five years.

HOUSE PASSES 2 MEASURES TO ALLOW FLORIDA TO BENEFIT BY FEDERAL PROGRAM

TALLAHASSEE, May 30.—(A.P.)—Reforestation bills and general tax levy measures received legislative approval today as the Senate and House went into its fourth day of the regular session.

House Passes 3 Bills Affecting Seminole County

The House of Representatives last night passed three bills affecting residents of this county, and referred one bill that had just been introduced by Representatives C. W. Estrominger and R. J. Holly to a committee.

The bill that is to be studied is House Bill No. 1496 providing for the abolishment of the county court in Seminole County and to provide for the transfer of all matters of litigation to the County Judge's court and the Circuit Court.

The bills that were passed are: House Bill No. 1495 providing for the cancellation of state and county tax certificates on the Mayfair Hotel property owned by the City of Sanford. The bill also provides that the property shall be exempt from further taxation.

House Bill 1467 which prescribes the method of taking fish from the water of Lake Jessup.

House Bill No. 1491 providing for the cancellation of state and county tax certificates on the Old Fellows Hall in Sanford, for the cancellation of other taxes and for the exemption of the land from further taxation.

American Graves In France Decorated

PARIS, May 30.—(A.P.)—The French graves of 25,000 Americans who died in the World War, were decorated today with ceremonial commemorative wreaths.

A group of Gold Star mothers and widows here at Paris to the graves of their sons and husbands, visited the ceremonies.

Stiff Enforcement Of Measure In Present Form Is Called Menace To Business

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—Opposition to the stiff enforcement of provisions in President Roosevelt's encompassing industrial control bill resulted today in the summoning of an emergency meeting here of the National Association of Manufacturers for next Saturday.

League Told To Keep Hands Off

GENEVA, May 30.—(A.P.)—Germany in diplomatic phrases today told the League of Nations council today to keep hands off the question of Germany's treatment of the Jews.

The council, however, without Germany's vote proceeded to submit the juridical aspects of the problem to jurists with the understanding that there will be a complete airing of the entire matter later. This action followed Germany's refusal to accept the council's report on the treatment of Jews in German Upper Silesia.

Mrs. Owen Places Wreaths On Graves

COPENHAGEN, May 30.—(A.P.)—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United States minister to Denmark, today placed wreaths on the graves of American soldiers buried in Copenhagen cemeteries. She was accompanied in the Memorial Day ceremony by the staff of the American legation and the consular American World War veterans formed guards of honor at the graves which were covered with flowers from Danish friends of America.

Roosevelt Attends Memorial Services

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(A.P.)—President Roosevelt picked a quiet spot for himself in the Capitol's observation of Memorial Day ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery where military tributes were assigned the speaker. A special tribute was paid to those who died in the World War.

Even more significant in the Morgan investigation than the 167 interlocking directorates whose ramifications extend into practically every industry and every section of this country, more impressive than the enormous profits which the Morgan partners made during the late boom and the period immediately subsequent to the World War, was the revelation that these men, all supposedly millionaires, paid no income tax in 1931 or 1932. Such evidence as has been submitted indicates that there has been no violation of the law with regard to these income tax returns, and yet it will be difficult to convince the average citizen that there is not something radically wrong with a system which permits some of our wealthiest citizens to escape the payment of taxes on their incomes while at the same time laws are being enacted to increase the levies on the middle classes.

The fault would seem to lie with Congressmen who in an era which saw prices constantly rising and profits steadily increasing failed to confine the income tax strictly to income but made it applicable to profits as well. Since the tax was to include profits, losses also had to be taken into consideration. Believing that we were entering an era of perpetual prosperity, Congressmen decided that a tax should be levied upon the increase in the value of stocks, bonds or real estate, as if that were income, and as a concession to the taxpayer he would be allowed to deduct losses in the event of a decline in such values, providing these capital gains or losses were properly established through sale.

In other words, if you bought a lot for $10,000 and sold it for $15,000, your profit from the transaction was $5,000, but the government for tax purposes defined your profit as income, and compelled you to pay a tax on it. It was the same way with stocks. If you bought 10,000 shares of General Motors at 10 and sold them at 15 your profit would be $50,000 and you were compelled to add this to your income on which you paid a tax, just as if it were interest, dividends, rent, salary or wage, which, properly, are income.

The result of this system was that during the period of the boom, it worked amazingly well. Revenues invariably were unexpectedly high, and giant surpluses instead of deficits were the order of the day. They enabled the government to reduce the total federal debt by practically ten billions of dollars in the ten year period immediately following the war. But when the depression came and incomes fell off, unemployment developed to a discouraging level, and public revenues were in demand for welfare and relief work, the income-profit tax did not work so well.

Then capital gains were turned into capital losses. If a man owned a building which he bought for $50,000, and he sold it for $38,000, he was allowed to deduct his $12,000 loss from whatever real income he may have had, before computing his tax. If he owned a block of stock which cost him a hundred thousand dollars, but which at market prices was worth only $75,000, he could, if he anticipated a large tax due to salary, bond interest, or other income, establish his $25,000 loss by selling his stock and deduct it from his gross income, thus reducing or eliminating altogether the tax.

As with their banking system, it again appears that the English have got it on us with regard to income taxes. In England the income tax is truly an income tax. It neither taxes profits, nor does it allow deductions for capital losses. Mr. Morgan in 1932 paid no income tax in the United States while he had to pay one in England. There, he could not offset against his income from bond interest, commissions, and salaries, his losses on his capital investments. Here he could.

The consequence of the English system is a more even flow of public revenues. In prosperous years their receipts from income taxes are not so large as ours. But when the deflation sets in and greater demands than ever are made upon public funds, their receipts are relatively greater than ours.

Bringing War Into The Home

Paradoxically, the Frenchman is noted for being very practical and at the same time temperamental. These two characteristics, in the present instance of France's national preparedness seem to blend themselves plausibly into a racial emotion which nervously apprehends the future and conjunctly, deliberately and calmly plans to meet any contingency.

The French have no illusion about the smoldering fires of unrest and intrigue which are threatening to illuminate the skys of Europe in another blaze of bloody conflict, and, being practical, they have overlooked nothing to make themselves secure in case the worst happens.

On land, in the air, and on the sea, France has set its efforts to be prepared. Its army is the largest and best equipped in Europe; it has built a string of impregnable forts along its menacing boundaries; its air fleet is without a peer; and its navy has been enlarged and improved, with special attention being given to submarines which have been developed to such an extent that the country has comparative immunity from successful attack from the sea.

But the French have not provided only for the obvious dangers of attack; they have contemplated every possibility which the complexities of modern warfare offer. The military leaders have realized the fact that no matter how efficient is its own air force and how extensive is its defense against enemy planes, there is always a chance of a surprise and successful attack from the air.

With this in view the City of Paris is being given a course in military intelligence which instructs the population in what to do in case of an aerial attack. Army officials are co-operating with the chief of police in directing the training of the whole citizenry. Every inhabitant of the capital will be informed what steps to take in defense against aerial projectiles, gas, bacteriological and incendiary warfare.

Special attention will be given to school teachers, mothers, and women workers, who, because of the normal absence of the male fighting population, will be relied upon to keep constant vigil over the younger members of the family and to see that they do the proper things for their protection.

This military course for the civilian population may have a more helpful result than merely providing for preparedness. It may bring home the realization of the "devastating and diabolical" practices in gas and chemical warfare to such an extent that public opinion will be more amenable to the principles of peace.

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

Miss Lillian C. Gibson, of the High School Faculty, left today for her old home in Rockhill, left Monday afternoon for her home in Yelston, N. C., to spend the summer months.

Miss L. Josephine Dameron left Monday afternoon for her home in Yelston, N. C., to spend the summer months.

SANFORD HERALD
Sanford, Florida.
Sirs: Believing that the general public does not thoroughly understand the decision rendered in my favor by the Hon. William B. Smith in my case against the Florida Power & Light Company, I wish to make the following statement:

Since this decision was rendered I have been frequently asked why it was seemingly changed to apply only to me. As a matter of fact, Judge Smith did not change his decision, as there was only one decision rendered and that is on file in the office of the Circuit Court. Relief in this case could not have been granted to other consumers in Sanford because in our prayers for relief in the Bill of Complaint we did not ask for any relief other than that which was granted Judge Smith, under the pleading in this case, could have given any other or broader decision.

I may add that subsequently we applied for leave to amplify our prayers for relief, in order that relief might be extended to other consumers generally, but, in the meantime, the Power Company had appealed the case to the Supreme Court thereby, in the opinion of Judge Smith, divesting him of further jurisdiction in the case pending the appeal. In the event, however, that Judge Smith's ruling is sustained by the Supreme Court, I am advised that it will be only a matter of form to make the present order applicable to all consumers, after my test case is disposed of, and this we expect to do.

Also permit me to say that I have referred this letter to my counsel, who verifies these statements of fact.

Very truly yours,
FRANK L. MILLER.

THE GOLD STANDARD

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of discussions by Charles G. Hardy and Lester A. Lyon, economists of the "Federal Reserve Bank," on the functions of the International Gold Standard.

MR. LYON: All that is very interesting, but let us return to the practical situation. What about the abandonment of gold? I think a country can gain two quite distinct benefits by such a move. One is the raising of the level of domestic prices, wages, and incomes, so as to reduce the burden of debt. The second is to give exporters of manufactured products an advantage over competitors in other countries by increasing the price which they can get in foreign markets as compared with their costs at home. And isn't it a fact, Hardy, that those countries, like England and Sweden, which abandoned the gold standard a year and a half ago have had more stable prices and more stable employment than those which didn't? And isn't that a pretty strong practical argument that other countries should do the same?

MR. HARDY: I think the decline of the exchange rates of certain countries in 1931 was of some benefit to those countries; at least to export industries, and to those domestic producers who had foreign competitors. When the pound went from $4.85 to $3.50, the manufacturers in England paid no more wages in pounds, than they did before. That meant at first that an English manufacturer could produce at his old costs, for wages, interest and rent, and sell abroad for 40 per cent more in pounds than he could before. Foreign manufacturers trying to ship into England were put at a corresponding disadvantage.

MR. LYON: But prices of necessary imports went up also.

MR. HARDY: True, but the cost of living did not go up nearly so much because imported goods account for only about one-sixth of it. Nor did general wholesale prices rise nearly as much as was expected. In fact, over the past year wholesale prices went down in England as much as they did in the United States, in spite of the fact that the exchange rate dropped by 30 cents. So far as internal prices are concerned, the effects of the abandonment of gold were only noticeable for the first few months, and even then were not important.

MR. LYON: But of course the less the effect on prices at home, spend the vacation with the home folks.

Williams, of Chesapeake, Va., disembarked from their Ford roadster about 10:15 o'clock this morning at 10:15 o'clock after a ride of less than two hours from Lynchburg."

REV. DR. CHARLES W. BULL, late professor of theology at the Virginia Seminary, had many friends in Wilmington and was related by marriage with a number of prominent Church families. His friends were shocked and grieved to hear of his sudden death quite recently. The following is copied from one of the Church weeklies which gives the account of his last message to the students of the Seminary.

When told that he was dying, he gave his wife the following beautiful message to his students:

"Tell the boys that I've grown, sir of God every year of my life, and I've never been so sure as I am right now. Why, it's all set—it's a fact—it's a dead certainty, I'm so glad to find that I haven't the least shadow of shrinking or uncertainty. I've been preaching and teaching these things all my life, and I'm so much interested to find that all we've been believing and hoping is so. I've always thought so, and now that I'm right up against it, I know. . . . Tell them I say 'good-bye'; they've been a joy to me. I've had more than any man that ever lived, and life owes me nothing. I've had work I loved, and I've lived in a beautiful place among congenial friends. I've adored in its highest form, and I've got it forever. . . . I can see now that death is just the smallest thing—just an incident—that means nothing."

Any comment on such a truly Christian deathbed message would be superfluous. It will never be forgotten by those to whom it was addressed, the future clergymen who knew and loved him so well; and we doubt not that it will prove to be the most valuable lesson he ever taught them.

U. S. ACTION SEEN ONLY WAY TO END CUBAN TROUBLES

Bloody Open Revolt Is On Horizon Unless Nation Intervenes

HAVANA, May 30.—Only prompt action by the United States government will avert a bloody open revolt against the regime of President Gerardo Machado is the belief of observers who are keeping in close touch with the revolutionary movement here and abroad.

It was confidently expected by the Cuban revolutionary junta, with headquarters in New York, that the arrival of United States Ambassador Sumner Welles in Havana would mark the start of Washington's negotiations for a settlement of the Cuban problem. An underground revolt has been in progress for many months, during which many lives have been lost, mostly of students who opposed President Machado. But an open rebellion had been postponed pending long-awaited action by the United States.

Now, however, a crisis seems to be nearing rapidly. Gen. Mario Menocal, former president of the troubled island, who led the ill-fated revolt in Oriente province in 1931, is said to have broken with the rebel junta in New York and is reported to be making plans for direct action against Machado. The junta, according to information from well-informed sources here, had an understanding with official Washington not to make an offensive until the United States had had a chance to induce President Machado to resign. But, apparently, Menocal despairs of ever seeing that come to pass.

However, the possibility of Machado's resignation under pressure from the United States is not as remote as Menocal may suppose. Reports that the President has his yacht all provisioned and ready to sail at a moment's notice lend color to the belief that he plans to resign in favor of a provisional government and flee the country.

There is another factor that may also play a prominent part in a change of government. Disaffection has been growing in the federal army back of the President for some time.

Soldiers are behind in their pay from two to four months and many officers and men are reported ready to go over to the rebels. Should this disaffection become widespread, there would be nothing for Machado to do but make a hurried exit. For without the army he would not stand a chance.

Prominent Cubans state that it is only the army and the secret police that have kept Machado in power so long. It is the secret police, under the leadership of Arsenio Ortiz, on whom Cubans lay the blame for the reign of terror on the island.

If Machado goes, Ortiz will go with him—that is, if he is lucky. For the police chief is the most hated man on the entire island. Cubans speak in whispers about the "mark of Ortiz." If you are a stranger, the phrase will puzzle you, until they cautiously explain the situation.

In 1929 the Federal Reserve Board, rightly or wrongly, had a policy toward the stock market which called for drastic credit contraction. Most other countries had no such policy, and there was a conflict. The carrying out of our policy resulted in drawing gold from practically every important center, except France, to the United States. We were criticized at that time for non-cooperation. It was very convenient that the decisions of the Federal Reserve Board should tighten up the money markets of other countries and cause them to lose gold reserves and raise money rates. But it was equally inconvenient to the Federal Reserve Board that those countries did not co-operate by keeping their gold at home. Which was non-cooperation? That is entirely a question of one's point of view. But in any case a vast structure of credit money had been built up which required constant co-operation and management to sustain it. When this collapsed there appeared to be a shortage of gold; it would have appeared so, if there had been twice as much gold as there was.

MR. LYON: Then the money question is still an international question, whether we go to gold or go to paper? If we have paper money there must be co-operation to keep the different paper currencies in reasonable relationship to one another; if we have the gold standard there must be co-operation to avoid conflicting policies as to the value of the gold itself. I see no other way out of this case but to abandon the internal use of gold that the value of gold is no longer an independent thing—it is itself the result of the monetary policies of the leading countries. Changes in the amount of gold required as backing for currency and for bank deposits, changes in practice as to carrying balances in other countries, and changes in the use of gold for internal circulation, all have an enormous influence on the value of gold itself. We have not for many years had a pure gold standard in the sense of an independent commodity which fixed the value of money, though we have had a standard which could not be controlled by the government of any one country acting alone.

MR. LYON: And doesn't this evolution of the gold standard to what was really a managed currency explain the invention of the doctrine of central bank co-operation? The widespread plea for co-operation seems to me a direct result of this conflict between national autonomy and world solidarity. National objectives were being thwarted because those policies which certain countries regarded as desirable nationally cost them their gold. One remedy would have been to change the policy and get in step with the rest of the world. The other way was to try to get the rest of the world in step with them.

MR. HARDY: Yes, the main effort on the part of any advocate of co-operation is usually to get other people to support his policy. But when the purpose of the banking authorities are not in accord with one another, co-operation breaks down.

Under the provisions of the law of the State, the voters are invited to have received the personal attention of Chief Clerk Hunsaker.

Martha May Winner Of Honor In Daytona

The Rev. and Mrs. F. M. Maslar, who returned Saturday from Daytona Beach where they attended graduation exercises at the Berea High School have reported that Miss Martha Ann May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. U. May, formerly of this city, was one of the most popular members of the graduating class. Miss May was one of the three honor students of the class, is a member of the Senior Class (Glee Club), and served this year as her class cheer leader.

A great deal of interest is being paid to a group of old pictures, annuals, and invitations of the Class of '23. Many students can be seen hovering around it at noon hour and different parts of the day.

The date for the Junior-Senior Banquet has been definitely set for Tuesday, June 6. Mrs. Stinecipher and Mr. Lehman, as sponsors of the Junior Class, give promise that nothing else like the planned banquet will be seen. We wonder what it's all about.

Claude K: "What on earth do you mean by telling Pug I was a flirt?"
