

Miami Talks Fight Hour Nears For Sharkey-Scott Go

London Gob Is Heavy Favorite To Defeat Englishman Quickly

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor.
MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Tunney was fight day along the palm-lined boulevards, with the crowds and chatter, the halcyon breeze and the twittering of the ballyhoo birds that flood the midwinter carnivals of Florida.

Behind all the gaiety and the glaze of tropical scenes, the 1936 battle of the coconut palms were hoping for the best and fearing the worst—hoping an exhilarating rush for the turnstile would materialize but fearing a financial flop; hoping that Phil Scott, the London fire-lad who would make a gallant fight of it all but fearing that the rugged and rugged American, Jack Sharkey, would turn the main event tonight into a one-sided punch-up.

Thirty-six years ago in Jacksonville, Florida, Jim Corbett, former holder of the world's heavy weight championship, knocked out the pride of England, Jerry Little Charley Mitchell, in three rounds, in a fugitive prize fight that resulted in the arrest of all concerned as law violators.

Tonight, in the Miami arena built by the Madison Square Garden Corporation of New York, Jack Sharkey enters the ring an overwhelming favorite to repeat Anglo-American boxing history by knocking out Phil Scott in the 15 round feature of an all-star heavyweight card of five bouts.

Although there is no chance whatever of a sellout, the show appeared certain to attract a notable gathering of wealth and fashion, of talent and celebrities to the ringside.

No title was at stake but the championship aspirations of the principals were involved, for the winner, whether Sharkey or Scott, will be with a strike a decisive match for the world's heavyweight crown put aside by Gene Tunney a year and a half ago. Only Max Schmeling, the German champion, is considered to stand at present in the path of the survivor, and Max, who is in perfect health in Germany in spite of alarming, ballyhoo-inspired reports circulated yesterday that he had been injured, is prepared to meet either Sharkey or Scott in June of next year.

The contract in the setting of the Miami fight, between the at-fall and the fugitive venture of the fight ring that followed the death of Tex Rickard, was no less marked than the difference between tonight's principals.

Scott, the pat and apprehensive looking Briton, holds the championship of his homeland, but has yet to demonstrate that he has a punch or a jab that he can push, or a ability beyond that of a fair boxer. Quiet by nature and a fair boxer, Scott has shown well conditioned but lacks the punch and stamina of a champion.

TUNNEY PLANS TO ENTER BUSINESS IN NEAR FUTURE

Undeclared Champion Talks Freely About Various Subjects

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, retired undefeated heavyweight boxing champion of the world, plans to "get well" he said today, and then go into "some business." Convalescing from a recent operation in New York, the man who left the ring and the banishment behind 18 months ago looked forward with keen anticipation to seeing the heavy weights, who seek the honor he has discarded, do battle tonight. He has not seen a ring since he slumped between the ropes at the Yankee Stadium in July 1928 after his farewell bout with the great Tom Heehey at the Yankee Stadium in July 1928.

After a man has been knocked down, said Tunney, the most important thing for him to do is to get up. After a man has an operation like the most important registration should be to get well. He is now making satisfactory progress toward recovery of his strength and when that is accomplished he will turn his mind to thoughts of business.

There was no sign of the invalid who the former champion as he walked into the home of his oldest friends at Miami Beach where he did much of winter confinement when he was the ruling champion of the heavyweight group.

He carried a cane to bolster a leg weakened by the surgical knife but the supporting stick came to apologize for its presence. There was no semblance of excess padding and in fact Gene reported his weight 192 pounds, the figure at which he boxed at his best.

With this ease and nonchalance of the championship behind him, Tunney was the "old Tunney" of pugilator and sportsman before he won the title from Jack Dempsey. The same bright twinkled in his eyes and as he talked of boxing and boxing and he suddenly became serious as he contemplated an evening home, the exact shade of meaning he wished to emphasize.

"A really game boxer never hears the count of 10," he said. "If he can hear, he will get up." And again "the boxer who knows his business, after he has been knocked down, remains until the count of 10, that time counts down to him and he is up." He said he had no plans to clear his head. Only a foolish person, he perhaps, might have been proud to see him bounding to his feet before he had his nine seconds rest.

He said he will be knocked down again and then he may not be able to get up.

The former champion talked freely and authoritatively of his only knock-out in the seventh round of the second fight with Dempsey. "I had often thought, I guess, that I might be knocked down sometime and I had considered ways to effect this moment when and if it came. I usually there are two courses. I can get up and get down again for another count after the blow to the body which is sure to come and again if necessary. The other is to take advantage of a likely carelessness in your opponent and try to get in a telling punch at once. I decided neither. Dempsey kept his chin against his chest and I could not hope to knock a man there. In 29 rounds I gave him a good thrashing on the chest. I adopted a third solution. I circled and got in two terrific punches, one of them the hardest I landed in either fight with Dempsey."

One Killed As Hoist Takes Fatal Plunge

NEW YORK, Feb. 23—(AP)—Loaded with three tons of mud and rock, an electric hoist plunged to the bottom of a 600-foot shaft in the Bronx today, killing one man and injuring seven. The hoist was being sunk as part of a new aqueduct between Yonkers and Brooklyn. Officials said the accident was caused by the snapping of a cable following the breaking of a flange on the lifting mechanism. The dead man was George Gillis, 54, of the Bronx.

used dry—is a new convenience in cooking

Rich cow's milk to begin with, KLIM is powdered for your convenience. Only the water is removed. Restore the water and you have rich fluid milk again—instantly! But for cooking—you needn't even trouble to rehydrate KLIM. Spoon it from the can—dry.

You can use it this new way in any of your own recipes. For each cup of milk called for, use four tablespoons of KLIM—mix it in with your other dry ingredients and then add water equal to the amount of milk called for in the recipe.

No risk of spoiled milk—with KLIM on hand. It keeps fresh indefinitely.

The KLIM recipe below makes a savory white sauce.

White Sauce for vegetables
(1 CUP OF WHITE SAUCE)

2 1/2 cups KLIM 1/2 cup milk 1 cup water 1 1/2 cups flour 1/2 cup butter 2 cup water

In the top of a double boiler thoroughly mix 1/2 cup of flour, a 1/2 cup of KLIM, 1/2 cup of milk and 1/2 cup of water. Add 1/2 cup of water and let it cook until thick. Add remaining 1/2 cup of water and mix smooth. Place over direct flame, turn up low and stir constantly until water is thick. Then place top of double boiler into hot water and cook the water in boiling and cook ten minutes, stirring constantly. This last ten minutes cooking removes all lumps. Remove from fire and stir in the 2 cup of water.

What's wrong with this sentence? "I never touched a drop of liquor before in my life and I didn't know it was loaded."

We have every reason to believe that the delegates to the disarrangement conference will accomplish something before they come home. They will have to adjourn.

Among other notables in Florida spending the season here is Chairman W. B. Wood, but he isn't spending any of the government's money to eradicate the fruit fly.

In his investigation of the plant board, Chairman Wood found determined that there is a "bugger in the woodpile," or rather, should we say, a "fly in the ointment."

Women who are worried over changing styles, and more particularly the rise and fall of the modern dress, should remember that you can't keep a good skirt down, as the sage of Longwood remarked the other day.

The Chamber of Commerce has an ambitious program for 1930, but one which can readily be accomplished if the men who are willing to do the work have the support of the rest of the community, and we believe they have.

Thirty earthquakes rocked the Imperial valley in California Tuesday as no infant in arms was ever rocked during an epidemic of measles. Not living in a glass house, we can afford to throw rocks. No earthquakes ever rocked Florida.

According to the budget recently prepared by the state road department some nine million dollars will be spent this year for the construction of state highways. Florida is already known for its excellent roads, but we expect that within a very few years it will surpass any other state in the country in this respect.

The House Appropriations Committee blames the plant board for not enforcing the prohibition amendment. It seems to us that it has almost more than it can do to enforce the quarantine regulations, and more than the treasury department backed by the whole federal government can do to enforce prohibition.

Chairman Wood of the Appropriations Committee investigating the fruit fly has adopted rather vigorous methods in his interrogation of Dr. Newell. This is, of course, pleasing to those who think that the fruit fly has been in Florida for thirty years, and also to those who think there never has been a fruit fly, but it is accomplishing little in reaching the meat in the coconut, which was understood was the fundamental purpose of the investigation, to discover the exact truth of the fly situation.

The war is on," said Chicago gangster McElrane, who with pistol shots from his hospital bed replied to other shots from gunmen at his bedroom door. Such men have a strange but powerful code. McElrane would not tell police who had attacked him, but vaguely suggested, "The next time you find some dead rat in a ditch, like a slave, remember what happened to—nevermind." McElrane will get the men who tried to get him and some day their friends will get him. And so it goes. It's a great game, this racketeering.

 of charm for the lover of that romantic period in American history when Spanish soldiers and Spanish monks were blazing a trail through the state of Florida as a visit to the ruins of the old mission on the outskirts of New Smyrna.
 In the latter part of the seventeenth century, about one hundred years after Pedro Menendez had made his first settlement at St. Augustine and put Jean Ribaut to the knife "understanding this to be expedient for the service of God, Our Lord, and of 'Phillip the Second', the Franciscan friars founded this mission for the purpose of converting the Indians.

In the early eighteenth century, the mission was burned and partly destroyed by the Seminoles. There follows a hundred years, during the period when the United States was becoming a nation, when the old mission drops entirely from the leaves of history and nobody knows what happened to it. What mystery and romance can be woven around this unrecorded time! What dramas of courage, and love, and bloodshed were probably enacted under the great moss-hung live oaks in that lonely piece of Florida wood!

In the early nineteenth century, however, we find the Spanish mission reappearing in a very utilitarian mundane role. It has been turned into a sugar mill by a gentleman from South Carolina. Two enormous iron sugar kettles, rusty with the years, a walking beam, and some crude attempts at masonry are silent witnesses to day of the authenticity of this phase of the mission's existence.

And now we come to the last metamorphosis of the old mission, which brings the story up to date. The late Mrs. Washington Connor of New York, who was an authority on early Spanish history in America and the translator of a book on Pedro Menendez, written by his brother-in-law, Gonzalo Solia de Meras, became fascinated by these Spanish ruins even in the sad state of neglect in which she found them. She prevailed upon her husband to buy the place for her, had the mission excavated and cleaned, and arranged that a guide be nearby to show the ruins to visitors. The Florida Daughters of the American Revolution have done a fine thing in placing a bronze inscription there which "he who runs may read."

No pilgrimage that one could make would be a more fitting climax for "Know Florida Week" than a visit to this mission and while it seems a shame that anything so charming as this should be so neglected and so little known, it makes the pleasure doubly keen for those who do find the way off the beaten track on the little dirt road that winds from the main highway to a spot so completely unexplored, uncommercialized, and so uncluttered by hot dog and souvenir stands. The old pasture gate swings open hospitably and the visitor does not even have to pay as he enters.

We went to the mission with friends who said that it suggested the old Spanish remains they had seen in the jungles of Central and South America. Two of the arches, which are very lovely, are without keystones, and there are three others in a row with keystones that lead into what was once a chapel, then a sugar mill, and now a place for lizards to sun and for incurable romantics to dream and recreate the past. There is an ancient well, where the monks quenched their thirst into which one may peer and imagine the shadowy reflection of the cowed head and shaven pate of the old Franciscan who used to draw the water mirrored in the green depths below. There are evidences of cells in which the friars lived, and one room, which has only two walls still standing, is supposed to have been the prison.
 One of the outside walls is marked with bullet holes where the condemned were shot. A rarely beautiful silver altar candlestick was found in the ruins, and Mrs. Connor had it restored and presented to a Museum.

Even the chateleine, a gentle little old soul, who lives in a cottage nearby, wears a quaint grey calico bonnet and haque fitting galien dress, and calls the interior of the mission the "in part", suits the picture perfectly. She has a soft voice, a fascinating dialect, and a few of the inevitable postcards for sale, but she carries the cards in her little wicker work basket, and does not seem to care in the least whether the visitors buy or not. In fact, she confided to us that "them cards ain't got no livery on the back so you wouldn't want 'em."

It would be difficult to find a place so rich with quiet charm and so untouched by the world. A huge oak tree grows in the center of the mission, and from its branches grey moss hangs in festoons throwing a shadowy veil about the old walls below. There is about the spot a magic, the triple magic of beauty, age, and mystery, and the old mission sleeps here like a thing enchanted, "the world forgetting, and by the world forgot."

A Rare Combination

We are just in receipt of another letter regarding "sulphur, celery, and sunshine" from one who apparently has been reading the letters advocating Sanford as a health resort recently written us by F. J. McDaniel of Okeechwee, Mich. Our new correspondent is more hesitant about addressing himself to the penetrating scrutiny of publicity and requests that his name be withheld from whatever use we may make of his letter, but he offers such a sincere and interesting testimonial of the benefits he has received while visiting in Sanford that we are glad to pass it along to our readers for what it may be worth.

"I first came to Sanford," he writes, after first mentioning the letters of Mr. McDaniel, "many years ago, when your city was but a village and when I was in such ill health that my doctors in the north shook their heads and said:
 'We can offer you little hope.' I was a young man, then scarcely out of my twenties, and had little thought of being a cripple the rest of my life, much less of passing out altogether. A friend of mine owned an orange grove in your county, near Sanford, and suggested that I go down there thinking that the change of climate and environment might do me good.

"I went, and believe me, within a month I was a new man. I don't know whether it was the orange juice, or the sulphur water, for I drank plenty of both, or the celery and fresh vegetables that I ate, but I almost immediately began to get strong and feel like a man again.

"I have no doubt that the warm sun-line and outdoor exercise I got had much to do with it, but I can tell you one thing there was certainly something about your section which drives the pain away."

"For the past few years, our correspondent continues, he has not come to Sanford since he has quite recovered his health and his friend has sold his grove. He does, however, still spend a few weeks each winter somewhere in Florida and more recently has been going to Sarasota where he finds the climate much like ours, and where celery and fresh vegetables if not as plentiful are nearly as good as our own.

"Such proof as this of the healthful effects of our section and the things produced here is by no means new. We are constantly running into some new evidence that Nature has been more than generous in bestowing health-giving qualities upon the products of this county such as sulphur water and celery, and while the sunshine is not exactly produced here, it is received here in such warm abundance that we can hardly be blamed for laying claim to it.

"Sulphur, celery, and sunshine" is a combination hard to find elsewhere and when the Nation learns that Sanford is the home of all three, the whole world will beat a path to our door.

The World's Window

By Pierre, Van Paasens

Although he has recently been the object of executive clemency, which permitted him to return to France, Leon Daudet, leader of the French Monarchists, does not feel in the least that he should temper his language in regard to political leaders like M. Herriot or M. Tardieu, who took the initiative in granting for him an executive pardon. As a matter of fact the air of his native Paris seems to be working wonders on M. Daudet in so far as increasing his powers of invective and vituperation is concerned. He has a whole new stock of epithets, one for each leader, from M. Poincare to M. Briand. He has also, he says, brought new proof with him from Belgium that Germany is planning a new war and a new invasion of France. He places the coming catastrophe between 1932 and 1935. And if there are more than a million and a half war dead in the next struggle, this will be solely the fault of M.
 Briand, who, according to Daudet, is betraying the interests of France right along in the frequent international conferences that the Foreign Minister attends. War with Germany is inevitable," says M. Daudet, "unless France repudi-cates the republican regime and calls back the King." He thinks the coming John III. will be a great day of reckoning. "Ah," he says, "the day of one of his recent murders by concerted action, when Briand and Calhoun and Herriot moved the steps of the guillotine, they may rest assured I will be there!"

"Sally" is adapted from Miss Miller's greatest stage success and is a First National and Vitaphone picture entirely in color. It is also Miss Miller's first picture. Joe E. Brown, famous on stage and screen, has the principal comedy role, the same one originated on the stage by Leon Errol. T. Roy Barnes is cast as the flip theatrical agent, Otto Hopper. Ferdinand plays the German restaurant proprietor, Jack Duffy portrays an old time, who is out for no good with the cuties. Pert Selton, who starred in Ziegfeld's "The Flirt," has the ingenue role and sings a number of comedy songs.

In addition there are scores of other players to contribute to the fun, and the handsome Alexander Gray is cast in the romantic role opposite the star.

With his superlative cast, Director John Francis Dillon is said to have given to the screen one of the very finest entertainments in its history.

"Sally" has some of the biggest stage ensembles yet screened. "Look For the Silver Lining," and "A Wild, Wild Rose," song hits of the stage version are retained, while new, snappy and up-to-date musical numbers have been provided by the First National Vitaphone staff song writers.

"Dad, our teacher says George Washington couldn't tell a lie, why couldn't George Washington tell a lie?"

"Because even as a boy he knew that it was wrong to tell a lie, and his conscience wouldn't let him."

"Why wouldn't his conscience let him?"

"Because his conscience was a very sensitive one, and he knew that if he ever told a lie it would make him unhappy."

"Can you tell a lie?"

"Of course I can tell lies, but I don't."

"Didn't you ever tell a lie, dad?"

"Certainly not."

"Why did you tell Ma her socks were delicious?"

"Because I am a diplomat."

"What's a diplomat?"

"One skilled in diplomacy."

"What's diplomacy?"

"Tact, shrewdness, or skill, in conducting an affair."

"Is a diplomat a liar?"

MOTHER GAVE BLACK-DRAUGHT

"Fine for Constipation and Sick Headache." Writes Alabama Lady.

Montville, Ala.—"My mother gave Black-Draught to all the children in our home," writes Mrs. W. T. Taylor, of Sixth Avenue, this city. "It was the only medicine I knew of when I grew up. We took it in the winter (as a preventive for colds, and whenever we ate anything that disagreed with us she gave us a course of Black-Draught."

"After I grew up, I took Black-Draught for constipation and sick headache. It surely is fine for that. "I make a tea out of Black-Draught and take it at night, when needed. It is the best laxative I know anything about, and the only one I ever use. After a lifetime of experience I can heartily recommend it."

The medicine which this Alabama lady recommends is the name "Theford's Black-Draught" which so many others have had of having used, all their lives, because of the good results obtained from taking it.
