

England Drafting New Note In Hope Of Getting Relief

Memorandum Expected To Set Forth British Financial Situation In Detail

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(A.P.)—Drafting of the new British war debt note to Washington was begun last night at a special meeting of cabinet members with Prime Minister MacDonald.

Nevil Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, foreign minister, and Stanley Baldwin participated in the conference. A full meeting of the cabinet probably will be held this morning to discuss the note.

The document may be dispatched this afternoon or Tuesday but it is suggested in some quarters that publication may be indefinitely delayed because of delicate secret information which it may contain.

The new memorandum is expected to inform quarters to set forth the British financial position in detail and to indicate if it does not directly state reasons why the mid-December British war debt installment of $5,500,000 should be postponed.

It was emphasized last night in semi-official quarters that decisions of whether to pay or not to pay is not being made at this time for the government feels that Washington is still open to negotiations.

The government is represented by regarding the situation as a test of the original British request for postponement of the October 4th instalment as an invitation to present further facts and an exhaustive study of the subject.

It was generally understood that the British government will keep the French government acquainted with its views in view of the agreement reached between the two last summer not to take steps in matters "relative to those settled at Lausanne without frank exchange of views with each other with complete candor."

Menick Wins Prize For Guessing Size Of Roosevelt Win

James A. Farley, chairman of the National Democratic Campaign Committee has congratulated J. H. Menick of Longwood upon his having won a prize in a recent contest in which Mr. Menick guessed within one point of the actual outcome of the election. Franklin D. Roosevelt would receive as the result of the result of the election.

Mr. Menick wrote Mr. Farley some days ago, explaining how he had won a prize. Mr. Menick said: "I was never in doubt as to the actual outcome of the election, having closely followed the methods of the campaign through the press and otherwise. It was a perfectly conducted campaign, the best managed in the 36 years that I have observed while interested in national political affairs, and I want to personally congratulate you for the fine work accomplished."

In his reply Mr. Farley, who is report it as having written nearly 1,000 personal letters to Democratic workers during the past year, said: "Thanks very much for your recent letter, with newspaper clipping attached, and I want to congratulate you upon your forecast as to the election result. Let me assure you that I deeply appreciate your kind reference to the management of the campaign."

Best Safety Record Is Made By Railway

Mayo T. L. Dumas, who is also superintendent of the Jacksonville District of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, today expressed satisfaction over an announcement made from road headquarters that his district has made the best safety record during 1932 that has ever been made in the history of the railroad—there has been but one personal injury among employees in the territory during this year.

This unusual record is the direct result of a vigorous educational campaign taught every employee of the railroad. The single injury this year occurred to a colored employee who had been in the service only two or three days, and had little opportunity of being instructed in the safety program.

SUPREME COURT MAY PROVE BAR TO "LEGAL BEER"

Chances Great That Body Will Be Called On To Settle Issue

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(A.P.)—Cold law may tangle over the foaming glass of real beer which anti-prohibitionists are looking to Congress to provide.

Those legal experts of the government to whom the President would turn before signing or rejecting any congressional act designed to modify the Volstead Act have placed a big question mark after their finding:

"So far as the legality of modification is concerned, they say much will depend upon how Congress approaches the problem."

The Supreme Court has held that it is for Congress to gauge the enforcement of the 18th Amendment. The amendment fixes its penalties and provides no enforcement. It simply prohibits the other hand, the Volstead Act defines and provides for prohibitory enforcement. It limits the amount existing liquor to one-half of one percent alcohol by volume.

Modification advocates have contended Congress could amend the Volstead Act simply by inserting 2½, 4 or 5 percent in the place of one percent, and real beer would flow from barrels and beer taxes would flow into the treasury.

Government legal experts have listened to these arguments and have scrutinized the law, only to reply: "Not so fast please."

Should Congress attempt to modify the Volstead Act it is certain some legislation is needed to validate the validity of such modifications just as the wet prohibition in the first place.

Their attack would center mainly on the question of when is liquor intoxicating, for the 18th Amendment would still prohibit intoxicating beverages. Thus the Supreme Court could hold an amendment to the Volstead Act unconstitutional if it regarded the alcohol content permitted by such amendment to be intoxicating and therefore in violation of the 18th Amendment.

In a repeat of the Volstead Act and the passage of a moderately new enacting law permitting higher content beverages might follow, of course, if held into court. Such a law could well be held, it was said, to be unconstitutional on the grounds it permitted something prohibited by the Constitution.

Such an up-set as this would leave no prohibition except that in the 18th Amendment. To enforce it would involve a complex legal procedure which probably could be covered only by injunctions against violators.

Legal experts speculate that without any enforcement machinery whatever for the 18th Amendment only injunctions against violators could be obtained, with a penalty applicable only in the event of a contempt of court should the injunction itself be violated.

In his reply Mr. Farley, who is report it as having written nearly 1,000 personal letters to Democratic workers during the past year, said: "Thanks very much for your recent letter, with newspaper clipping attached, and I want to congratulate you upon your forecast as to the election result. Let me assure you that I deeply appreciate your kind reference to the management of the campaign."

Former postmaster George W. Gray, who underwent a serious and painful operation upon his injured limb in St. Vincent's Hospital in Jacksonville last week is resting as comfortably as might be expected, it was reported today.

Mr. Gray, who was injured when his motorcycle collided with a delivery truck which turned into his path some months ago, has undergone various operations and is taking an effort to secure the proper use of his limb, several important bones of which were broken when the heavy motorcycle fell upon him. He is now under the care of one of the most outstanding bone specialists in the South, who, according to Mrs. F. M. Venable, Mr. Gray's mother-in-law, promises that Mr. Gray will have more room to park them in January. WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(A.P.)—An extensive rise of farm prices and higher bidding is being made by Mr. Roosevelt in the course of his tour of the country, the short session of Congress will deal with the negotiations planned by the Senate early next week.

In his annual report to the President, Chapin said he saw signs of improvement in commodity prices at the beginning of the current fiscal year were described yesterday by Secretary

West Point Won't Accept Bid To Play In Rose Bowl Game

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Although declining to make a statement in the absence of any official action so far on the subject, West Point athletic authorities, it was indicated yesterday, will not consider an invitation to send Army's football team to Pasadena for the Tournament of Roses game Jan. 2, regardless of the outcome of the battle with Notre Dame today.

The practical reasons against any post-season activity, from Army's viewpoint, include the lateness of the season, closing Dec. 3 with the Navy game, the term examinations starting immediately afterward and the opening of military classes for the New Year in Jan. 3.

It is understood Army, for similar reasons, rejected an invitation to play Southern California in the Rose Bowl classic last winter. Tulane was the final choice.

Army's one and only visit to the Far West was to play Stanford at Palo Alto in 1929. As a result of the scholastic burden this put on the Cadet players, Army officials decided then it was the last post-season trip of such length that they would ever attempt.

Scotland Trying Various Schemes For Helping Idle

EDINBURGH—An effort is being made to link up the various schemes for self-help for the unemployed in Scotland. The idea is that the unemployed "might thus benefit by each other's experience and extend the range of services which they can render to each other."

The scheme was inaugurated in Falkirk, where an old foundry is used as a center where the men exchange services—i.e., baking bread which can be sold another unemployed man for the cost of the material only, and another mending shoes for his neighbor again for the cost of the materials only—has been working well, despite some criticism from local tradesmen.

In response to this criticism, however, it is pointed out that the unemployed men could not afford to buy in the ordinary way, and this system of self-help in no way interferes with the trade of the town, while it affords them a way of using their time of enforced leisure.

A similar scheme has been in operation in Cupar, where it absorbs some 92 per cent of the unemployed population, and Dunfermline also has a self-help scheme, the first of its kind to be started in Scotland. It is now proposed to join these various schemes in a national federation, and a meeting to that end has been called for next month in Cupar, and interest in the Scottish scheme has spread south of the border.

Prohibition Or Control
The problem of Florida's dry law amendment is one which has been uppermost in the minds of many leading citizens ever since the election this month which demonstrated beyond all question that federal prohibition enforcement, if not the amendment itself, doomed at a surprisingly early date. The situation was clearly expressed in a letter from Judge Akerman, attorney for the Miami published in the World-News of Miami, the immediate action in order to prevent demoralizing results from an increased liquor traffic without legal supervision.

Pending repeal of the federal Eighteenth Amendment, modification of the Volstead Law now appears imminent. There seems to be no reason to believe that failure will be met in the attempt to legalize 2.74 percent beer in the early days of Congress next month. Beer of six percent or more, however, might be considered illegal. Amendment, since it is a "mild" one, would not affect the Volstead Law, and the Volstead Law, in its present form, makes no provision for the persons who drink beer. It is the intent of the Senate to change the Volstead Law so that it will not affect the Volstead Law.

Now, in this state of Florida such a drink would come in conflict with the nineteenth article of our own constitution which says: "The manufacture, sale or barter of all alcoholic liquors, except beer, is hereby forever prohibited in the state of Florida." The use of that word "prohibited" makes Florida's constitution drier than the federal constitution. Plainly enough drink might not be intoxicating and yet possess some alcoholic content. It is evident that 2.74 beer might not be held intoxicating.

However, in this state of Florida such a drink would come in conflict with the nineteenth article of our own constitution which says: "The manufacture, sale or barter of all alcoholic liquors, except beer, is hereby forever prohibited in the state of Florida."

The paper quotes the Volstead Law as follows: "A hundred minorities have signed the Volstead Act to permit light wines and beer."

Repeal or revision of the Volstead Law will be added to every pound of tea and six cents to every package of cigarettes. He said that the price of gasoline and motor oil will be raised.

"I believe that the 18th Amendment could change the state enforcement act but the constitutional prohibition still would be in effect until it is removed from the state legislature," he said.

Admiral Byrd said that if the Volstead Law is modified, or the Eighteenth Amendment repealed, "the National Economic League," he said, "is the people's instrument—their battle cry to cut at the root of the evil. We must protect our law-makers from these self-sacrificing organizations."
