MINOT, N.D. — For pet owners who think they've run out of ways to pamper or show off their pets, the Humane Society in Minot has an idea.

How about a picture of your pet with Santa Claus?

The Souris Valley Humane Society began the pet photo sessions Sunday. The money raised will go to the Humane Society shelter.

"To some people, this is really important to them," said Caleen Larson, manager of the shelter. "For others, it's a novelty kind of thing."

Diane Thompson brought in her three-year old beagle, Sammy. While Santa, a.k.a. Ken Williams of Minot, tempted Sammy with a variety of snacks — all of which were rejected — Thompson and Larson tried to get Sammy to look at the camera.

Behind the photographer Larson jumped up and down, squeezing a squeaky toy and saying, "good girl."

Don and Rae Keeth of the Minot Air Force Base had pictures taken of Jake, their two-year-old poodle, sitting on Santa's lap. The shot will adorn the Keeths' Christmas cards this year.

"We thought it would be pretty cute," Mrs. Keeth said. "We don't have any kids, so this is our baby."

The name game

FORT LAUDERDALE — Goon, Wierdo and Tickle were really tired of their names, so they went to court, swore they weren't running from the law and bought new ones for $200 a pop.

For name changers, it's cash well spent. Richard Lee, formerly Richard Goon, said his name had brought him grief since he was a child.

"It wasn't as bad as it used to be in school and everything, but still, it bothered me," said Lee, 36, of Hollywood.

He picked a new one that reflected his Chinese heritage.

"I'm a fan of Bruce Lee," he said.

About 300 people have paid the $200 filing fee to have their names changed in Broward County this year.

Some judges hold hearings. Others merely sign a form if it's filled out properly.

Joseph Smith, a chiropractor in Fort Lauderdale, became Dr. Joe Smith, Dr. is now his first name. He wanted the title on the ballot when he ran unsuccessfully for mayor in 1991.

Jeffrey Lyle Tickle became Jeff Zachery Lyle.

And Sigmund Brody of Tamarac has a story to tell. No one had called him Sigmund since he was born in 1912.

"What happened was we had a German maid who gave me that name," Brody said. "At that time, there was a guy named Steven Brody who jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge, so pretty soon everyone was calling me that."

A lawyer setting up a trust fund for Brody recommended he make Steven his legal name. He did so in August at age 80.

It's Mayor Lovestrand

New Longwood commission discusses personnel package

By GEORGE DUNCAN
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Paul Lovestrand was unanimously elected mayor of Longwood Monday night after an initial nomination of fellow Commissioner Fred Pearl failed to get a majority of votes.

Commissioners Harvey Smerilson, Steve Miller and Rex Anderson voted against Pearl, even though Miller had nominated the incumbent commissioner. After Pearl's defeat, the vote for Lovestrand was unanimous.

"I'm surprised and pleased," Lovestrand said after the meeting.

One of the first actions of the new council was to postpone a vote on an ordinance amending the city's personnel policies because the cost of the package was not included.

City Administrator Jim McFellin admitted that, although he had negotiated the pack with city unions, he did not have a cost estimate for the council.

Lovestrand also noted that, in the past, administrators had briefed the council before the final package came up for a vote. Although some financial details were in a package given to the then-mayor Rex Anderson, the details were not given to other commissioners.

"I want to know the cost of the overall package," Commissioner Smerilson said.

Commissioner Miller said the agreement contained "a lot of perks," although he did not specify which items he felt were perks. He did ask, "Who agreed to all this?"

McFellin said the city has had no union grievance procedure in two years and said he did not feel like the pact "was excessive," but said he would provide a financial breakdown.

Lovestrand said he would object to one portion of the agreement: an increase on the cap on longevity pay from 10 years to 13 years of service, which would be computed at $75

Tony Vanderworp addresses members of SHDWA this morning.

With strategy, future growth is promising, county planner says

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Future growth in Sanford looks promising but much work needs to be done, especially in obtaining more jobs and improving the tax base.

Seminole County planning and development director, Tony Vanderworp, discussed the continuing work of the Economic Development Task Force at this morning's meeting of the Sanford Historical Downtown Waterfront Association.

"We have narrowed down our priorities to 61 items so far," he explained, "but we have three or four more meetings, and we will probably add ten more."

Although SHDWA is dedicated to improvement primarily in the downtown area, Vanderworp addressed needs on a county-wide basis. Among the actions called for by the task force as the most prominent goals were six points:

• The development of an action plan to bring more industry into the county.

• Promote and support features such as the Central Florida Regional Airport and the Port Authority through development of better roads and other needs.

SANFORD — The Seminole County Commission is tackling land purchases for the continuance of the Lake Mary Boulevard widening project today. Requests for agreements are being presented by County Manager Ron Rabun.

In all, six purchases involve land acquisition for phase II of the boulevard, which runs easterly from the railroad crossing near Country Club Road in Lake Mary, to Highway 17-92.

Even though widening work along phase I of the boulevard is at a standstill, the property for the extensions has not been fully obtained.

Complexion of school board changes tonight

Chairman to be chosen at swearing in

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The complexion of the Seminole County School Board changes this evening as Larry Strickler is sworn in to replace two-term member Joe Williams.

Williams did not seek re-election to the board.

Strickler, a manager with Southern Bell and a long-time school activist, was elected two weeks ago after a hard-fought battle with opponent Bob Goff.

Strickler has pledged to bring what he calls "a much needed business perspective to the board."

Strickler, who served as a member of the school board-appointed business advisory board since its inception, thinks there needs to be a blend of business and educational expertise in order to run the school district in the most efficient manner. He quit the advisory board when he was elected to the school board.

Also being sworn in this evening will be Nancy Warren.

Warren is beginning her fourth term on the school board. She presided over the board as chairman during the last year.

With more than a decade of experience, she has a longer tenure on the board than the other four school board members combined. Three of the board members were elected in November of 1990 and Strickler was just elected.

Warren, who has experience as an elementary school teacher, is currently a full-time board member.

At this evening's meeting, the school board will also choose who will serve as the board's chairman for the next year.

They will also select the times and dates for the board meetings for the next year.

Supt. Paul Hagerty has recommended that the board continue to meet at 3:30 p.m. on the second Tuesday of each month and at 7 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of the month.

Tonight's board meeting is at 7 p.m. in the district meeting room, 1211 Meillonville Ave., Sanford.

Food service manager intern program sought

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Following some controversy within the food service department of the Seminole County school district, Eldon Chambers, director of that department will go before the school board to request permission to begin a manager intern program.

Chambers and the school system were accused of racial and sexual discrimination when a man with more than 10 years experience was passed over for a promotion to lunchroom manager on five separate occasions this summer.

Despite the man's years of experience as an assistant manager, Chambers argued that he lacked some essential skills required for the managerial position.

"But we want to give people like that a chance to move into management," Chambers said.

He added that lunchroom operations did not allow for "on the job training," but that he believed the intern program would allow those interested in managerial jobs to train for the position.

Interns would work closely with managers already in place. They would assume all the duties of the manager, but remain under the watchful eye of the existing manager until they could master the necessary skills.

"They would then be ready to assume a manager's position when one became available," Chambers said.

He compared the pool that the potential managers would enter to the principal's pool from which the top school administrators are selected.

"I think this would serve everyone well," Chambers said.

According to Chambers the money to pay for the program is already available within the food service budget as interns would continue to be paid at their current level.

Supt. Paul Hagerty has recommended that the food service intern program be fully implemented. He has also recommended that Chambers organize a district committee that would monitor and serve in an advisory capacity to the program.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Drugs, AIDS, suicide, sex

Students acting out serious themes in high school

By Associated Press

WINTER PARK — Kids who want to be taken seriously are putting on shows with some heavy themes in high school these days: drugs, AIDS, suicide, sex.

"If you are doing only prom-dress shows at your high school right now, you've lost touch," says Jerome McDonough, a high school drama teacher-playwright who has written many teen social-issue plays.

The latest play by McDonough, a drama teacher in Amarillo, Tex., is "Carriers," a story about teens with AIDS.

Another play, "Alky," about teen alcoholism, is dedicated to two Florida teens McDonough met at a Tampa drama conference several years ago. When he returned the next year, he learned both had died in an alcohol-related car accident.

In Winter Park, a high school is presenting a play about a girl who overdosed on her mother's sleeping pills. An Orlando school had a performance about teens dealing with drugs, suicide and sex last year.

A third is considering a script called "Eraser," which is about teen suicide.

Such plays are popular, said McDonough, because they take kids seriously.

That's one reason why cast members performing "The Girl in the Mirror" at Lake Howell High School like their roles so much. Lake Howell drama teacher Olga Campbell said she selected Bruce Jacoby's play when she realized last year that her students had the same feelings as the main character but never talked about them.

In the opening scene this weekend, a 17-year-old student named Susan lies in a hospital bed in a coma. She has tried to kill herself with pills.

An alcoholic mom, her parents' bitter divorce and a beautiful blond best friend who gets all the guys have taken their toll on Susan. But before she dies, a visitor appears. He reviews events leading up to the suicide attempt, showing Susan how others really saw her. Then she must decide to live or die.

"I think this will be good for parents to see — to get them thinking about their own children. They are always the last to know," said Alicia Brody, a senior.

Workers' comp rates to rise

TALLAHASSEE — Workers' compensation insurance rates for employers will rise an average of 8.9 percent beginning Jan. 1 under a decision by Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher.

Gallagher on Monday rejected a much higher 18.5 percent increase in premiums that had been sought by the National Council on Compensation Insurance. NCCI represents 300-plus insurance companies licensed to sell workers' compensation policies in Florida.

"We examined the rate filing carefully, looking for every way to reduce it," he said. "But the workers' compensation system is burdened by heavy losses, and companies are paying out $1.44 for every $1 they are taking in."

The total value of the rate increase is $283 million. It would have been $689 million had the full request been approved.

Although the overall rate increase comes to 8.9 percent, Gallagher said employers in the "voluntary" insurance market will see their premiums go up 6.3 percent. Those in the "assigned risk" plan will receive an increase of 17.1 percent.

Tax collector's death accidental

PENSACOLA — A former Escambia County tax collector apparently shot himself to death in a hunting accident, authorities say.

E.J. Gibbs Jr., 55, of rural Molino had been hunting alone about a half-mile from his home Saturday when he apparently slipped on an embankment near a pond and his shotgun discharged, said sheriff's investigator Ted Roudy.

The blast struck Gibbs under the chin, Roudy said. He said there were no signs of foul play.

A neighbor found the body about 9:30 p.m. CST Saturday after Gibbs' wife asked him to search for her husband when he failed to return home from his afternoon hunting trip.

4 indicted for federal drug conspiracy

JACKSONVILLE — Four Jacksonville men have been indicted on federal cocaine conspiracy charges for a drug operation that spanned five years, a prosecutor said.

Indicted were Leroy "Big Daddy" Tillie, 42, the alleged leader of the cocaine ring and Anthony Jerome Thompson, 23; Martin F. Warren, 20; and Little John Tillie, 34, a brother of Leroy Tillie, said U.S. Attorney Robert W. Gensman in a news release.

The conspiracy lasted from 1987 through October 1992, Gensman said.

The investigation by a task force of agents of the FBI; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; the Florida Department of Law Enforcement; and the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office began last summer.

Twenty-eight other alleged co-conspirators were arrested last summer and search warrants were executed at two alleged crack houses. About a kilogram of powder cocaine and 500 grams of crack cocaine were confiscated.

Man killed after shooting at police

ST. PETERSBURG — A Tennessee man, who a friend said had been drinking and claimed he was going to kill himself, was shot to death during a standoff with police, authorities said.

Joel Quillen, 26, a roofer from Bristol, Tenn., died Sunday. Quillen fired a .357-caliber Magnum once at officers and missed and officers fired back about 10 times, witnesses said.

Quillen, who had been hospitalized in the hospital, fired a shot outside with a gun. Officers said they believed he had a small handgun on him by threatened to kill his life.

But instead he pointed the gun toward the officers and pulled the trigger, said police spokesman Bill Donnell.

The officers involved, Sgt. Greg Tots and Michael Gornish, were placed on routine administrative leave with pay as an internal investigation continues into the shooting.

Woman pleads innocent in son's death

SAN DIEGO — A woman who authorities said killed her mentally handicapped son by giving him a drug overdose in an attempt at murder-suicide pleaded innocent in the case.

Josephine Dowell, 66, of Miami, was released on her own recognizance after surrendering herself in court on Monday. She moved to Florida in February, after the death of her mentally retarded son, 34-year-old Mark Dowell.

Josephine Dowell, charged with murder, was ordered to return to court Dec. 10 for a preliminary hearing.

Deputy District Attorney David Seumowski said the son is believed to have died sometime between Jan. 25 and Jan. 27, while visiting his mother at her apartment in San Diego.

She was discovered lying comatose next to her son by a social worker looking for the son after he had failed to return to his board-and-care facility, Seumowski said police found a suicide note in the apartment.

CREOL gains reputation as a high-tech research center

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — An Orlando research center is in the beginning stages of developing entrepreneurial ideas that create high-tech businesses, some officials say.

The Center for Research in Electro-Optics and Lasers — born six years ago at the University of Central Florida — is rapidly gaining a reputation as a place to teach, study and experiment.

"CREOL is certainly one of the newer and faster-growing laser centers in the country," said Peter Baker, executive director of the Laser Institute of America, a trade group based in Orlando.

"When you look at the list of faculty they've assembled there, they have some pretty well-known people in the laser community," Baker added.

Some executives believe CREOL may develop along the lines of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Stanford University, where entrepreneurial efforts by university faculty and students led to high-tech creativity in business.

"They developed business plans as a direct result of their research," said Robert Hendren, president-elect of the Laser Institute of America and a scientist at the U.S. Department of Energy's Livermore Laboratories in Livermore, Calif.

"You can see parallel development in the New England area, where MIT has produced a large concentration of companies involved in lasers and electro-optics," he said.

Central Florida, high-tech officials said they expect small businesses, not large corporations, to be the source of growth in laser-related jobs.

"The growth of jobs in the 1990s is going to be in small businesses, and that is where CREOL can help the most," said Joe Wallace, executive director of Central Florida Research Park.

He added that the laser center has become a drawing card for the park, which is adjacent to UCF.

"CREOL is like a magnet for business activity," Wallace said. "People come to the park to do business with CREOL because it has the technology-transfer capabilities and the lab resources that laser companies need. Without CREOL, this is just another business park."

Seventeen companies, including space-and-weapon giant Martin Marietta Corp., have signed on as "industrial affiliates" of CREOL, said M.J. Solesu, director of the university center. They contribute money, lab equipment and other resources and often hire CREOL as subcontractor on laser projects.

CREOL has received millions in government contracts and grants and is engaged in joint ventures with numerous regional companies.

The center's annual budget has risen from $1.5 million in 1987 to $4 million in 1992. About 70 percent of it is state university funds, while the rest comes from government contracts, grants and industry contributions.

In celebration of education

When Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Oliver Wendell Holmes was 90-plus years of age, the president visited him in the hospital. He found Holmes reading a book in Greek.

"What are you doing?" the president asked, astonished.

"Improving my mind, Mr. President," Holmes answered. "Improving my mind."

Although Sanford and Seminole County are celebrating American Education Week, it is the attitude of Justice Holmes that all people should adopt. The chief justice was already well-educated but he realized that education is a process that continues throughout life. Once you stop reading, you begin stagnating. Once you stop pursuing education, in whatever form, you have given up on life.

Area schools will celebrate the week with a variety of activities. Some will, appropriately, honor those local groups who provide support for both schools and educational activities.

Education is a challenge but it's also a tough job nowadays. Computers have changed the face of education. Television, sometimes detrimentally so, vies with school for the attention of students.

Teachers and administrators are faced with a variety of problems unknown in the school systems of years ago. Today, education means not only teaching students, it means dealing with unions, lawyers, mass parents, government bureaucrats and other groups.

In spite of the frustration, low pay, paperwork, and irritation, schools continue to attract dedicated teachers who put students first. And despite complaints about the quality of education, a look at any local school will show there are some very good teachers and administrators.

Teachers and administrators are faced with a variety of problems unknown in the school systems of years ago. Today, education means not only teaching students, it means dealing with unions, lawyers, mass parents, government bureaucrats and other groups.

San fishing nets

A species that is nearly extinct of fish not overfished by Florida's commercial netting industry is the mullet. On Oct. 22, 200 commercial fishermen signed a voluntary moratorium on mullet netting in the state's waters. Their goal is to ensure the sustainability of Florida's fishery resources and I wish to debunk some of the myths on these fish.

"We feed America" I doubt that one single resident of Sanford eats 20-dollar-a-ounce mullet-roe sushi. The Japanese roe market gets the fish eggs and we get depletion of the food source of pelicans, cormorant, osprey, and many other creatures that depend on mullet for survival. If the Florida's lucrative roe mullet industry is intent on protecting the goose that lays the golden egg, why don't they let the Marine Fisheries Commission do their job and regulate the resource? There may not be no resource left to regulate as netters deplete the very source of their sustenance.

"Jesus fished a net boat" True, but he didn't have spotter planes, power winches or miniflotation nets that caused marine mammals to a drowning death. He also didn't throw ten pounds of dead baby fish overboard for every pound of shrimp caught. The fishing industry today is nothing like it was just a few short years ago. The advance of high-tech equipment and techniques has brought the industry to levels of efficiency never dreamed of a generation ago. And speaking of generations, I had a fisherman for a father, and grandfather, and great-grandfather.

"We have fed you, who will feed us?" I recently paid a visit to three popular supermarket chains and spoke with the managers of each store's fish department. There was not one fish in their boxes that was netted in Florida waters. Grouper...hook-and-line. Snapper...hook-and-line. Catfish...aquaculture. Trout...aquaculture. Shrimp...also aquaculture. The heart of the commercial fishing industry in Florida is the female mullet laden with roe, not the popular table fare found in the supermarket. How long can any species withstand the slaughter of its pregnant females?

"Work or welfare - the choice is yours" California enacted a "buyout" program that helped the commercial fishermen make a transition to other methods or jobs. A temporary surcharge on sport fishing licenses funded the program. Most recreational fishermen would support such a program here in Florida.

It is obvious that the government of Florida continues to drag its feet on this issue. That is why we need a constitutional amendment to ban commercial netting altogether as they did in California. So consider my arguments when you are asked to sign a petition that would put the question on the 1994 ballot. That's how we got the government in the sunshine law enacted when fishermen refused to act. And don't buy any red herrings, they'll stink up your kitchen.

Victims' rights making headway

The victims' rights movement continues to gain momentum. On Election Day, voters in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico approved amendments to their constitutions that accord victims of crimes the right to be both present and heard during court proceedings.

This guarantee seems almost incidental. Many of us assume that the interests of victims are adequately represented in criminal trials. But nothing could be further from the truth. America's criminal justice system is tilted decidedly in favor of the criminal as opposed to the victim.

When a criminal case enters the system, the government supplants the victim, who becomes little more than a witness and has no legal standing. Victims are frequently excluded from courtroom proceedings, and prosecutors are under no legal obligation to consult with them before striking a plea-bargain agreement.

"I wasn't at the hearing, I wasn't at the sentencing," says Betty Jane Spencer, who survived a mass murder attempt that claimed the lives of her four sons. After the horrible tragedy at her rural Indiana home that was further aggravated by her indifferent treatment by the criminal justice system. Spencer helped establish the Protect the Innocent Victims Advocate Foundation.

Spencer still sees much injustice in the way victims and their families are treated. She notes that, even with the progress of the victims' rights movement over the past decade, the families of victims normally are not attending trials. That is because defense attorneys contrive legalistic excuses to exclude victims or their families, she says.

The reason that defense attorneys can get away with well, murder, is that in all but a handful of states victims' rights are covered by statutory rather than constitutional law.

Thus, in states without constitutional amendments, victims have no recourse if pertinent laws are not followed to the letter. Meanwhile, the rights of criminals are scrupulously observed throughout the judicial process.

This imbalance owes, in large part, to our constitutional tradition. The Founding Fathers thought it important to provide certain protections for those charged with criminal offenses. Thus, five of the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution have to do with the rights of the accused.

When the Founders ratified the Bill of Rights, they hardly could have imagined that, two centuries later, one of every eight citizens of the Republic would be victimized by crime year by year.

Maybe it is time that the modern Congress do what the Founding Fathers neglected to do: Balance the constitutional rights of crime victims with those of the accused. We need a national standard that ensures equal treatment under the law. Offenders in criminal cases ought not to be favored at the expense of victims.

The victims' rights movement continues to gain momentum.

Ozone loss hastens action

International negotiators will meet in Copenhagen, Denmark, at the end of November to address one of humankind's worst enemies on the global environmental destruction of Earth's protective ozone shield.

The meeting is the first time in more than six years that the scientific evidence of ozone loss has compelled the world community to speed up the timetable to stop the production of chemicals responsible for the problem. The Copenhagen agenda contains some forceful new measures. But disturbingly, it also includes the end of what could become a disastrous loophole. A vaguely conceived plan will be considered to permit continued production of ozone-destroying chemicals for "essential uses." It is a prescription for a potential abuse.

First to the problem. Scientists have firmly established that atmospheric ozone that shields humans and other life forms from being rapidly depleted by reactions with chemicals that society has been pouring into the atmosphere by the loss of thousands of tons in recent decades.

The latest evidence is this year's Antarctic ozone hole. This autumn it is larger in area than the whole of North America. It is of greater extent than any recorded since a seasonal ozone hole was first documented over Antarctica in 1985. For the first time, the edge of the ozone hole encompasses areas of human population.

But ozone loss is not just a danger over the South Pole region. Based on ground and satellite measurements, "ozone losses are now occurring in both hemispheres, not only in the winter but in the spring and summer," Dr. Robert T. Watson, a National Atmospheric and Space Administration expert on the subject, told a Senate hearing chaired by Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., earlier this year. "We saw a three percent ozone loss in the summer over populated areas of the USA and Europe," during the 1990s, he said. That rate of depletion was 200 percent greater than the loss recorded in the 1970s.

"For every 1 percent of ozone loss, we will have 2.5 percent more incidence of skin cancer," Dr. Jan C. van Der Leun of the Institute of Dermatology in the Netherlands told the same Senate hearing.

Accelerating ozone loss, in short, is a direct threat to human health on large portions of the planet.

In an unprecedented display of united environmental purpose, the international community drafted the Montreal Protocol in 1987 to begin cutting back on the production and consumption of ozone-destroying chemicals. In 1990, even stiffer measures were adopted. Now, in the face of evidence that ozone loss is occurring even faster and on a more widespread scale than had originally been thought, the diplomats will meet again, this time in Copenhagen.

A plan is on the table for industrialized nations to completely stop the production of the predominant ozone depleters, like chlorofluorocarbons, by the end of 1995, five years earlier than previously contemplated.

The deadline would be extended by 10 years to developing nations. These measures deserve emphatic support.

However, the diplomats are also set, with U.S. support, to agree that rules should be written to allow the continued production of prohibited chemicals for loosely defined health, safety and welfare "essential uses." Misapplied, this new provision could become a loophole damaging to the integrity of all that has so far been accomplished.

"Those who have worked hard to develop the Montreal process do not want to see it undermined," says Stephanie S. Kinney of the U.S. State Department. The intent, as described by Kinney, is not to cut off extremely limited supplies of ozone-depleting chemicals that also have vital medical uses, such as inhalers for asthma sufferers, and that are needed for such things as specialized preservation techniques for historical artifacts and art work. If that were all that was involved, there would be little room for objection. But we all know where the road of good intentions can lead. The clear danger is that "essential uses" will become a license to stall the development of substitute chemicals while sanctioning large-scale production of substances we know create a threat to human health. The public has a right to demand stringent limits to essential use exceptions.

As the diplomats gather in Copenhagen, it should be with a clear sense of concerted scrutiny by all of us who will be affected by what they do.

This autumn (ozone hole) is larger in area than the whole of North America.

We know changes that we really want

In the wee hours of the morning after Bill Clinton's election, a National Public Radio reporter commented that voters had demanded change, although just what kind of change they didn't know.

Wrong, too-much-coffee-and-too-little-sleep breath. I think most of us who voted for change have a thoroughly fleshed-out portrait of the kind of change we want. We don't all want the same changes, but we do all fit into several major categories.

Some of us want a simple philosophical change in the people directing the country: an atmosphere of inclusion rather than exclusion, where the personal life choices of people of all races, religions, creeds and gender are safe. We believe the Constitution guarantees it, and that it was crafted expressly in response to intolerance. We didn't see ourselves included in this year's Republican Convention.

We want to be able to afford health care and health insurance. Those of us old enough to remember a time when treatment went only to the wealthy are now elderly and worried about what the future will wreak on our bodies and savings. Those of us too young for that know working-class people today who are ineligible for public assistance, working at jobs with no benefits at wages too low to enable them to buy health insurance. With more and more of us falling into those cracks, what choice do we have than to ask for change? It's become a matter of life or death.

We want to be able to help our children through college, but even the upper-middle class is finding that increasingly hard to do. In the 1990s, the college-educated, upper-middle echelon saw the greatest decrease in wages and increase in taxes and unemployment.

We want jobs with living wages for our children after college, instead of the minimum-wage positions many of them are having to settle for. We don't believe our kids should have to be the first generation of Americans who cannot hope to equal their parents' economic scale, much less better it.

We want an equitable tax scale. In the last 20 years, taxes for the middle- and lower-class worker have stayed the same or increased, while many of the country's wealthiest folks have enjoyed dramatic cuts. We want our leaders to get about finding causes and trying solutions for some of the problems we face: generation after generation of children reared in poverty, where the chances of getting out of the slums and succeeding decrease with each successive generation; astronomical teen-age pregnancy rates, mothers too young and ill-prepared to nurture; children being shot and killed on their way to elementary school.

What we got from President Bush was the feeling that these problems are so complex that one best not be too impulsive on deciding a course of action - it might take a presidential term or two to come up with something effective. The remedies he proposed when his campaign was faltering were an amorphous and weak they couldn't inspire much confidence in anyone who cared. What help will it give troubled schools to give tax vouchers to parents who can simply send their kids to a safer one?

We want an end to the welfare system as it has stood, and an end to eligibility scales that make it more probable to stay on public assistance than work, to maintain single-parent households than for both parents to live together. We want programs that force able-bodied people into the work force, into training and jobs that enable them to better themselves and society.

Wrong, too much coffee and too little sleep breath.

Development and promotion of tourism. "Not the Disney kind," he explained, "but our natural resources such as the river and lake."
Better involvement by local governments.
Encourage development agencies to help promote the area.
Encourage the development of a solid economic action plan.

Regarding the local government involvement, Vanderworp said, "Right now, 31 of our 81 points of action involve local governments in one way or another, and we will be needing their support and action in order to accomplish what the task force is proposing."

"Most of the local employment," he explained, "is in the service industries rather than being industrial. Seminole County and Sanford have, in the past, had lower unemployment rates than most of the nation, but now we are about even."

While he predicted possibly 120,000 new jobs will become available in the area over the next 20 years, he commented, "As this takes place, we want to be certain that they will increase our standard of living, and bring about an improvement in the local wage scale."

Vanderworp said, "One big goal should be to improve the tax base. It's good right now, but we are overly dependent on taxes from single family residences."

He continued, "Seminole County obtains 70 percent of its tax income from the residential taxes, compared to Orange County which gets only 30 percent. The goal here is to reduce our homeowners taxes by increasing the amount of industry and commercial business."

Among problems in increasing the industrial areas of Seminole County, he explained, "We really don't have enough land for large scale industrial parks, and when large businesses look around the county, they find we don't have the 50,000 square foot buildings they might need." He added, "We really don't have that much available office space either."

"Another problem," he said, "is that we have too many vacant shopping centers. These not only produce no taxes, but bring the property value down in the surrounding areas."

Vanderworp said the task force is still considering more needs and plans for economic development of the area. "We hope to have our master plan completed in about three or four more months," he said. "Then, we'll have to see what can be done from that point forward."

The Economic Development Task Force has been working on its master development plan for the past 18 months. It is comprised of representatives from government, real estate, bankers, business and professional leaders from throughout the county.

where I have requested purchase of particular pieces of property for the extension," Rabun said. "We have something like this at just about every meeting, and eventually we will have all of the land purchased for the overall project."

He explained, "This is part of the major transportation network project that will cover the next ten years. The expansion of the boulevard widening will probably come some time during the second five year period of that project."

If the commission agrees to the purchases, it will involve the expenditure of $233,530. The largest portion of this meeting's requests would go for property owned by Larry and Joanne Lucas of Heathrow, for two parcels at a total of $173,110.

for its help in a drug investigation. The $238,000 must be divided with other law enforcement agencies who also helped with the investigation.

The City of Sanford will receive approximately $23,000 and the Seminole County Sheriff's Department will receive approximately $70,000 from the drug funds.

In a letter to McFellin, Assistant Police Chief Terry Baker noted the investigation "was initiated by the Longwood agent, assigned to the task force in June of 1985, which later resulted in the arrest of several defendants."

The arrests resulted in the forfeiture of properties and houses valued at more than $1.6 million, Baker stated.

Although the Longwood agent eventually had to be pulled from the investigation due to a manpower shortage, the city still receives benefits from the case due to the agreement between local and federal agencies.

The new Hendrix Antiques van. Look for it around town.

Hendrix Antiques - Where Your Satisfaction Is Our Business

Located two and a half miles west of Oviedo on State Road 419/434, is Hendrix Antiques. Hendrix Antiques is owned and operated by Walter Hendrix. A father of six children, one of which still lives at home. Mr. Hendrix has spent the last 31 years with the same loving wife, and working in the same business, making old look new.

When asked what makes him different from other refinishers in the area, he replied, "nothing, I just feel that the customers should be satisfied to the best of my ability." He learned the art of refinishing antiques from "one of the area's best refinishers," D.L. Montgomery.

He takes a lot of pride in his work and it is guaranteed. Some of his customers have had their furniture shipped in from miles away to have it redone. People are pleased enough with his work to ship their furniture from Miami to have it refinished. He has had repeat customers for more than 21 years, and has been in the same location for over 23 years.

Mr. Hendrix says he will take in any wood piece in any condition, strip it to the bare wood, repair it and prepare it for a new finish. All stripping is done by hand, not dipped, for more careful attention to quality and results. Mr. Hendrix can also handle pieces for commercial offices, such as desks, chairs and typing stands. Some pieces Mr. Hendrix recently worked on are from some of the area churches such as: All Souls, Mt. Calvary, and First Baptist. He recently refinished all of the church furniture for St. James Methodist Church.

Besides refinishing, Mr. Hendrix also pastors Friendship Missionary Baptist Church in DeLand, for the past three years, so you can be assured that Hendrix Antiques is a Christian Family Business. Mr. Hendrix has even taught 4 of his children the art of furniture refinishing.

Mr. Hendrix is always happy to give a free estimate, and does free pick up and delivery six days a week. Mon.-Sat. 8:30 am - 4 pm. No job is too small. "If it's broken, I will fix it, if it is dull and scratched, I'll make it look new".

Mr. Hendrix refinishes and sells antique furniture. Some of the items he has for sale are chairs, mirrors, tables, rockers, buffets, chest of drawers, and much more. Mr. Hendrix says "we try to please everyone." So if you're looking for someone who will do a quality refinishing job or would like to see some of the items for sale call Walter Hendrix today at 365-3740 or stop by at 3 miles west of Oviedo on S.R. 419/434.

Hendrix Antiques will be holding their big holiday furniture sale within the next week or two. See next week's Business Review ad for sale dates and savings. Items featured in the sale are beautifully refinished dressers, dining room tables, chairs, stands, mirrors, china closets and more.

Deadline pressure, fights with boss: Heart attack risk

By DANIEL G. HANEY
AP Science Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Deadline pressure, fights with the boss and other pulse-raising situations appear greatly to increase the risk of a heart attack, a study shows.

Doctors have long known that heart attacks frequently seem to occur during stressful situations. But stress is common and usually leaves people no worse off.

So a team of Boston researchers set out to learn whether stressful events are indeed substantially more frequent in the hours before heart attacks strike.

The answer seemed to be yes. "Events that people feel are psychologically stressful appear to trigger heart attacks," said Dr. Sue Jacobs, a psychologist who conducted the study at New England Deaconess Hospital.

Potentially hazardous events included such things as attending important meetings at work, giving presentations or being laid off.

Others were "emotionally meaningful interactions" with spouses and children, deaths in the family and financial problems, such as paying bills, getting notice of a bounced check or coming into a financial windfall.

Jacobs presented the findings Monday at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association.

Researchers studied 129 heart attack survivors, interviewing them about everything that happened to them in the 26 hours before the attack. They found 51 percent reported experiencing serious stress.

Each victim was then matched with a randomly chosen resident their age in the town where they lived. These people, called controls, were each given beepers that went off at the same time of day and day of the week as when their matched partner had a heart attack.

The researchers found only 12 percent of the controls had experienced stress they judged to be serious during the previous 26 hours.

Of the 129 pairs, 57 of the heart attack victims reported stress when their controls did not. Six of the controls reported stress when their partner did not.

From this, the researchers calculated that the presence of stress during the previous 26 hours apparently made the risk of a heart attack nine times greater.

Among other reports at the meeting Monday: — Pressurized oxygen therapy, long used to help deep-sea divers avoid the bends, may also help doctors treat heart attacks.

Dr. Myrvin H. Ellestad and others from Long Beach Memorial Medical Center in California found that oxygen seemed to improve the ability of clot-dissolving drugs to minimize heart damage.

In research on 46 patients, they found those getting oxygen had an earlier end to chest pain and more strongly pumping hearts. They theorize that the therapy works by reducing accumulation of blood in the injured heart cells.

— Dr. All Marian and others from Baylor College of Medicine in Houston said they had discovered a genetic defect that puts people at high risk of dying suddenly from cardiac arrest. The mutation occurs in a disease called familial hypertrophic cardiomyopathy, which is the most common cause of sudden cardiac death in the young, especially athletes.

Doctors can test for the defect in families where the disease occurs. Marian said those who have it should not do heavy exercise.

— Healthy eating habits can significantly reduce blood cholesterol levels in young children. Beginning in the third grade, 400 students at 12 schools in the Baltimore area received regular classroom instruction in basic nutrition for two years.

Dr. Kerry Stewart of Johns Hopkins University said the youngsters' cholesterol levels dropped about 6 percent. Among other things, the children were encouraged to opt for healthier snacks, such as fruit.

Dairies in bid-rigging schemes still eligible for federal contracts

By JENNIFER DIXON
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is allowing dairies convicted or indicted on charges of rigging bids for school milk contracts to keep bidding on new contracts for school programs, federal investigators say.

The USDA's Food and Nutrition Service says it doesn't have the expertise to suspend or bar dairies from supplying school cafeterias, according to a report by the General Accounting Office.

Although the milk contracts are awarded locally, USDA subsidizes the cost of the milk and in fact does have the authority to bar or suspend suppliers.

The Justice Department's bid-rigging probe has spread to at least 21 states and has uncovered conspiracies involving dozens of dairies. Three dozen corporations and 35 individuals have been convicted of federal antitrust violations and have paid fines and civil damages exceeding $33 million.

Phil Shanholzer, a spokesman for the Food and Nutrition Service, said the agency also has not seen any reason to ban the convicted dairies because they have reimbursed losses caused by bid-rigging.

"Our position is that as long as they make it up to the state programs, that's the greatest interest we have. We're not interested in using this as a punitive measure," he said.

But GAO said the threat of losing access to government contracts is only a deterrent if "those dairies that improperly bid-rig have a reasonable expectation that, if caught, they will be suspended or debarred from federally funded programs."

Since the Justice Department began investigating in 1988, it has brought 75 federal antitrust cases against 39 corporations and 48 individuals in 10 states.

Federal grand juries in 21 states continue to investigate the scandal, which has implicated some of the best-known names in the business, among them Flav-O-Rich and Pet Dairies. Both companies pleaded guilty and settled their cases with fines totaling $13 million for Flav-O-Rich and $2 million for Pet.

Hillary Clinton expected to play activist role

By WVA LILYVELD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton hasn't talked about what she'll do as first lady — a taboo subject since the final weeks of the campaign. But early indications are that she'll soon let down her guard and play an open and substantive role in her husband's presidency.

She participated in the discussions at President-elect Clinton's dinner with top congressional Democrats in Little Rock, Ark., on Sunday night. Clinton made a point of saying so at his news conference Monday morning.

He also made it clear Mrs. Clinton wasn't just playing hostess, but "knew more than we did about some things."

Clinton's comments are likely to raise the hopes of many who see potential for a new kind of first lady in the 46-year-old lawyer who has always had a career outside the home.

In some ways the hopes of a generation of women rest on her shoulders.

Hillary Clinton has been married to Bill Clinton since 1975. They have a 12-year-old daughter, Chelsea. But Mrs. Clinton is also a high-powered lawyer who has served on major corporate boards, and she's known to be her husband's closest adviser.

"People will have to adjust to a new phenomenon, having a first lady who's always had a career outside the home and who's been effective in the business world," said Ruth Harkin, a successful Washington lawyer and the wife of Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin. "It's still hard for some people to imagine."

Historian Betty Boyd Caroli, author of "First Ladies," says Mrs. Clinton will be the first president's wife to come to the White House firmly committed to the causes she plans to espouse there.

"Hillary Clinton is different because she approaches them from her professional life as opposed to as a do-gooder, which has been the way with most others," Caroli said.

Mrs. Clinton has been a children's advocate since she graduated from Yale Law School and became a staff attorney and later a board member of the non-profit Children's Defense Fund in Washington.

Author Gary Wills calls her "one of the more important scholar-activists of the last two decades" for her writing on children's legal rights.

Mrs. Clinton will not practice law in the White House. She has said only that she will be "a voice for children" and a role model.

But Jan Percy, a Wellesley classmate of Mrs. Clinton's who has been her friend since 1966, said Mrs. Clinton won't just be a showpiece. She'll be "a Johnny Appleseed," spreading ideas and keeping her husband in touch with the people, Percy said.

"She sees something and she puts it automatically in a broader context," Percy said. "People are going to have the feeling that if Hillary sees the work that they're doing, she'll really do something to help them. She'll spread the word."

Over the past year, Mrs. Clinton has been compared often to Eleanor Roosevelt, who played a very active role in the White House, talking policy and advocating women's rights.

Early in the campaign, Mrs. Clinton spoke of Mrs. Roosevelt as her ideal. But in the final weeks, she wouldn't even go that far.

"I've seen where people are asked who they think was the best first lady or the most effective first lady, she (Eleanor Roosevelt) usually ... comes out on top," Mrs. Clinton said in an interview just before the election. "But you know, I think so many of the other women have also made contributions as well."

The Clintons have backed off suggestions that she might be appointed to a Cabinet-level post.

During the New Hampshire primary, Bill Clinton described his wife as his best asset and treasure. "Buy one, get one free." In the final days of the campaign, he was more guarded.

It's hard to blame him. At the Republican convention, Patrick Buchanan and others raised the specter of a dual presidency — with an unelected Mrs. Clinton making major decisions. They painted Hillary Clinton's views on children as extreme and revolutionary.

The Clintons protested that Mrs. Clinton's opinions had been misinterpreted. But they also stopped talking about them.

Mrs. Clinton no longer makes comments like she once did about how she doesn't see why people fussed when Rosalynn

Carter attended Cabinet meetings.

In the days before the election, Mrs. Clinton said only that she would promote "my husband's agenda" as first lady.

But many believe that was just pre-election rhetoric.

"I have this feeling once she's settled in, she'll start talking like she used to again," Caroli said.

"One can only hope."

Now you can make heat out of thin air.

A few years back, scientists developed something that could keep you warm in winter without burning a single drop of oil or molecule of gas in your home. And keep you cool in summer without using one kilowatt-hour of electricity more than necessary.

They called it a 'heat pump' that innocent-looking thing you see at the right.

But it wasn't until today that anyone developed something to help the average homeowner afford such sophisticated technology.

We call that the 'FPL Heat Pump Discount'

You don't have to understand all the technical details of how a heat pump works (and they can get pretty technical) to take advantage of its efficiency.

All you have to know is that there are scores of reliable, hard-working contractors ready to knock up to $584 off the price of qualifying* equipment if you just tell them FPL sent you.

You'll save money on the cost of a heat pump system. And the system will save you every month on your energy costs.

If you'd like a list of FPL participating independent contractors, plus a buying guide and discount details, call us at 1-800-DEAL-FPL (1-800-342-5575).

We can help make high heating and cooling bills vanish into thin air.

Mice are champs again

CASSELBERRY — The Paddy McGee Mice from Oviedo put together one of their best performances of the season to pound Don Covey 12-1 and clinch the title of the Seminole County Recreation Department Women's Class C Monday Night Fall Softball League at Red Bug Park.

The win improved the Mice's record to 9-1 as they won their third straight league championship. Don Covey ends the season 8-2.

Connie Thomas scattered eight hits, allowing only one unearned run on two errors in the first inning. Her defense also helped out with two double plays and nine assists.

Thomas and her daughter, Teresa Walburger, led the way at the plate, combining to go 7-for-8. Walburger was 4-for-4 with a home run, two triples, three runs scored and four RBI.

Thomas and Kathy Tollefson had three hits each, with one of Tollefson's being a double. Terri Mann and Jackie Janowiak both had a double and a single. Denise Levinson and Lori Lingo both contributed clutch two out, two-RBI singles in the second and sixth innings.

Dolphins mistakes boost Bills

MIAMI — The last time Miami played Buffalo, mistakes beat the Bills. This time, mistakes beat the Dolphins.

The Bills took advantage of two Miami turnovers and three key defensive penalties to beat the Dolphins 26-20 in an AFC East showdown Monday night. Buffalo, which had five turnovers in a 37-10 loss to Miami last month, this time had none.

Buffalo improved to 8-2, and the Dolphins fell to 7-3. Because of the NFL's tiebreaker system to settle playoff slots, the victory in effect gave the Bills a two-game lead in the AFC East because they have two fewer losses than Miami within the division.

Defensive penalties against the Dolphins helped set up two Buffalo scores, and a pass interference call against rookie Troy Vincent with three minutes left negated a third-down incompletion at the Bills 18.

Long activated

MIAMI — The Miami Heat on Monday activated forward Grant Long, who ended a lengthy contract dispute when he signed with the team Saturday.

To make room on the roster for Long, the Heat put guard Steve Smith on the injured list. Smith, who has yet to play this season because of a knee injury, will be sidelined at least 10 more days.

Long likely will play in Tuesday night's game at home against Golden State.

Sharp shoots down Stars

TAMPA — Derrick Sharp scored 24 points to lead South Florida to a 112-97 victory over the Florida Stars in an exhibition game.

South Florida, which had jumped out to a 16-2 lead in the first four minutes, had a 21-7 run in the game's final 4:47. The Bulls were ahead 53-49 at the half.

Jesse Salters scored 22 points, including 5-of-12 three-pointers, for South Florida, a loser to Georgetown in the first round of the NCAA Tournament last season.

Former DeLand star Oliver Lee had 28 points and nine rebounds to lead the Stars.

Seminole hosts first Lady 'Noles Invitational

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — The prep basketball season gets underway tonight as Seminole High School hosts the first annual Lady 'Noles Invitational at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

The eight team field features some of the best teams in Central Florida, including Daytona Beach Mainland, Port Orange Spruce Creek and New Smyrna Beach from Volusia County. Tavares from Lake County and Lake Brantley, Lake Howell, Lake Mary and host Seminole from Seminole County. Lake Mary joined the elite field late last week after Jones had pulled out.

"It should be a real good tournament," said Seminole head coach John McNamara. "There are a lot of good teams entered. It'll be interesting to get the season started. From what I saw at the Jamboree there is a lot of talent in the county this year. It's the toughest the county has been since I've been coaching girls basketball. I think it's going to be an interesting year."

The event will run today through Saturday, taking Friday off for football.

Mainland and Tavares will open the tournament with a 6 p.m. tipoff today. At 7:30 p.m., the host Tribe will welcome the Baracudas of New Smyrna Beach.

The loser's of today's games will meet in a consolation game Wednesday at 4:30 p.m., before Lake Howell and Lake Mary meet at 6 p.m. and Spruce Creek takes on Lake Brantley at 7:30 p.m.

Thursday's schedule has the loser's of Wednesday's games playing at 4:30 p.m., the Mainland-Tavares winner playing the Spruce Creek-Lake Brantley winner at 6 p.m. and the Lake Howell-Lake Mary winner taking on the Seminole-New Smyrna Beach winner at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday, the loser's bracket final will be at 4:30 p.m., Thursday's winner's bracket losing teams will meet for third place at 6 p.m. with the championship game set for 7:30 p.m.

With four starters returning from last season's ninth-ranked, 22-8 squad the Tribe figures to be the favorites leading into the tournament. Leading the way will be forward Nikki Washington, who earned all-state honors as a junior.

The 6-foot senior averaged 15.3 points, 13.8 rebounds, 7.1 assists, 6.3 blocked shots and 6.3 steals per game last season and has already signed a national Letter-of-Intent to play Division I basketball at the University of Houston next year.

Also back will be sophomore point guard Tennesha Eason, guard Cindy Boone and forward Kay Kay Mullins. Part time starter Katilya Ware also returns.

Lake Mary also figures to field a strong team as center Diane Daber, forward Karen Morris and guard LaShaun Merrick return as well as several tall players are up from the junior varsity.

Lake Howell also has a wealth of experience returning from last year's 20-9 team, including Deanna Graves, Stephanie Clarke and Kelly Kohn. The school also got a boost when guard Connie Boneventure transferred in from 4A state champion Dr. Phillips.

The two Volusia county entrants are also expected to be strong as Mainland is a perennially tough 4A team and Spruce Creek only graduated two players from last year's successful team.

Miss St. Lucia

Search on for 1992 pageant contestants; deadline Dec. 3

Candidates for the 1992 Miss St. Lucia crown have until Dec. 1 to enter the contest, with interviews being set for 5 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 3, according to Gail Stewart, chairman.

The crowning of Miss Lucia, who will lead the annual Christmas parade during the St. Lucia Festival, will take place Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. in Magnolia Mall during "Light Up Sanford."

"All young ladies ages 16 through 21 are eligible," said Stewart, who has chaired the event since its inception. "We are looking for young ladies who have poise, are attractive, and a community spirit, as Miss St. Lucia will represent the festival at special events throughout 1993."

Each entry requires a $25 sponsorship with all contestants receiving a small gift. The winner will be awarded a monetary prize.

The Annual Christmas Parade will be held this year at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 12. Miss St. Lucia will arrive, weather permitting, in a Viking boat, docking at the quay wall at Ft. Mellon Park and taking her place in a horse-drawn carriage to lead the parade.

For an application or information call Gail Stewart, 323-6690 or 323-1978.

Group helps blended families to cope

DEAR READERS: In recent years, the mall from stepchildren, stepparents and steprelatives has increased at an alarming rate. Perhaps it's due to the fact that divorce and remarriage have become more popular and less stigmatized in the last 20 years.

Take heart — there is help out there for stepmothers, stepchildren, stepfathers and all manner of steppeople. It's called the Stepfamily Association of America. The group was founded in 1979. It offers information and advocacy for stepfamilies; self-help programs through local chapters, educational resources, a quarterly bulletin, annual national conference, and chapter start-up information.

You need not send a self-addressed envelope to receive information. Simply write to: Stepfamily Association of America, 215 Centennial Mall South, Suite 212, Lincoln, Neb. 68508. The toll-free telephone number is 1-800-735-0329 (U.S.A. and Canada).

This organization provides helpful information for people contemplating becoming stepparents, and those already involved with a blended family — who are having a difficult time dealing with her kids by her first husband, his kids by his first wife, or the new set of grandparents who find competing with biological grandparents more than they bargained for. The association offers some intelligent guidelines that will make those new steppeople less threatening and more welcome.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was married before and has a 12-year-old daughter who lives with her mother in a distant state. I'll call my stepdaughter "Carla." My husband can afford to fly Carla here only twice a year. My husband and I also have a daughter of our own who will soon be 3 years old. The problem is that we would like to have a family portrait taken and can't decide whether Carla should be in it or not.

I do not dislike Carla, but we see her so seldom, it's hard for me to consider her part of the immediate family. I would hate to hurt her feelings, but I also don't want to pretend to be a family because actually we are not. When Carla visits us, she is more like a guest.

Should we have the portrait taken with just my husband and me and our baby, and hide it when Carla visits? Or should we wait several months for her next visit to have the family portrait taken?

Abby, how important would it be for your readers who are stepchildren (grown or otherwise) to have been included in their absent parent's new family portrait? Maybe it wouldn't mean anything to Carla. Am I making a big deal out of nothing? Sign me...

UNSURE STEPMOM
DEAR UNSURE: Please do not have a picture taken that you will have to hide when your stepdaughter visits. Better to include her in the family portrait whether it will mean anything to her or not than to exclude her and risk hurting her.

DEAR ABBY: If your readers are beginning to make Christmas lists and are wondering what to give the "old folks," here's a suggestion:
How about a once-a-month cleaning person? Many "old folks" are able to handle the daily chores of dusting, vacuuming, laundry, grocery shopping, cooking, cleanup, etc., but when it comes to heavy-duty cleaning, they can't manage it.

They would like to remain independent (if they are lucky) until they drop dead, and a little assistance of this sort would make their remaining years easier and more comfortable.

There are a lot of us out there. Think about it!
