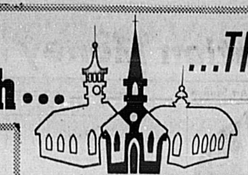
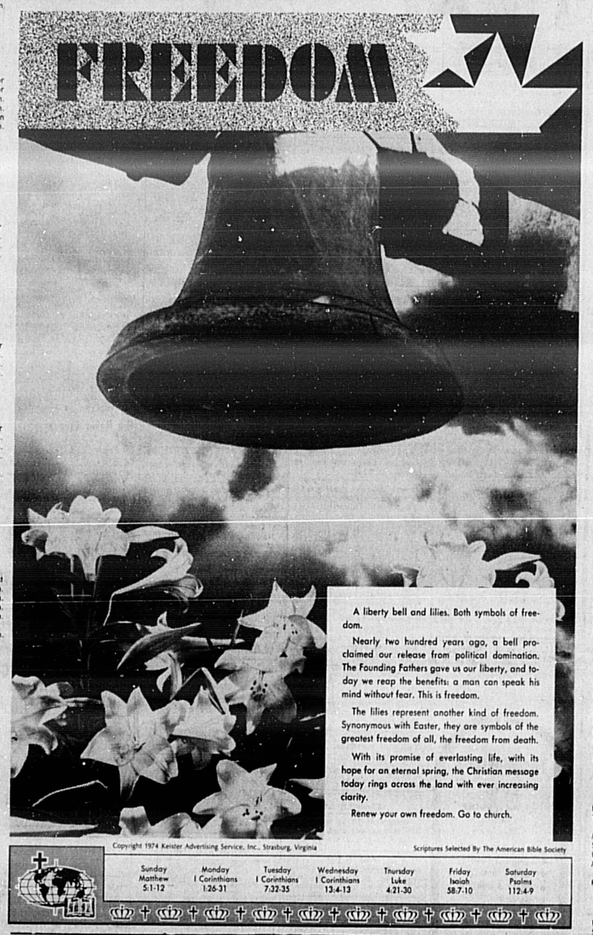
The Church... ...THE HOPE OF OUR COMMUNITY, OUR NATION!





A liberty bell and lilies. Both symbols of freedom.

Nearly two hundred years ago, a bell proclaimed our release from political domination. The Founding Fathers gave us our liberty, and today we reap the benefits: a man can speak his mind without fear. This is freedom.

The lilies represent another kind of freedom. Synonymous with Easter, they are symbols of the greatest freedom of all, the freedom from death.

With its promise of everlasting life, with its hope for an eternal spring, the Christian message today rings across the land with ever increasing clarity.

Renew your own freedom. Go to church.

Seminole's Elderly Poor Eating Pet Food

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

A handsome white-haired couple searches through the super market shelves, reading carefully the labels on pet food cans.

They finally settle on a variety of Alpo brand — chicken and liver dinner, 14¼ ounces, 33 cents; lamb dinner, 14 ounces, 35 cents and beef chunks, 14¾ ounces, 35 cents. They do not own a dog or cat.

A widow whose children have long since left home selects Recipe 35, Bacon and Egg Dinner with liver, and a variety of vegetables, 14½ ounces, 35 cents and she does not keep a pet. Another elderly woman selects Gaines burgers with cheese, four pounds eight ounces $2.45.

She lives alone.

It is the last week in the month. Social Security checks will not come in until next week and a person has to eat, even if it is only pet food.

"It is terrible, it really is," said Amos Jones, executive director of Seminole Community Action (SCA)." The average person has no inkling of an idea what is happening right here in Seminole County.

"This is happening not just among poor blacks, but among the forgotten elderly who can manage on fixed incomes only by cutting down on the quantity and quality of the food they eat," Jones said.

"Persons existing on animal food came to our attention some months ago when it was observed that pet foodcans werein the trash at homes where no dogs exist-ed," he said.

Jones said the pet food is being consumed by itself and in combination with other foods.

While some local super market managers have noted an overall increase in sales — including pet foods — most declined or said they were unable to break down on pet food con sumption. Others refused to comment.

Lester A. Ferguson, director of the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council's areawide program on the aging, said the situation is "appalling."

He cited a recent example of volunteers in Orlando finding a 90-year-old woman who has been living for six months on cat food. "More of this is going on than is realized," he said.

"Senior citizens are hurting. There's no doubt about it," Ferguson said.

"Do people really save food dollars by eating dog food? Is the food sanitary and fit for human consumption?" Seminole County officials were asked.

Dr. Julian Fried could see "no real health objections to eating dog food." "Actually cans of dog food have a composition of nutrients, vitamins and minerals and are better labeled than foods placed on the super market shelves for human consumption, he added.

"The big problem," Fried said "is the taste and ulitization of animal parts that humans do not usually eat.

"Veterinarians are very careful about inspecting dog food products. Most are fortified with vitamins and nutrients," he said.

"It is not a health problem. It is a problem of morale and the dignity of human beings reduced to circumstances where they cannot eat human food. It is degrading.

"The indignity is very serious. The psychological objections are strong and important," Dr. Fried said.

"Eating canned dog food will not harm anyone physically," agreed David DeVoll, Seminole County agriculture extension agent. "The food is sterilized in the canning process. Dogs and cats have a higher protein requirement than humans and certainly pet food is better than nothing."

"As far as nutritional value, horse meat is as good as beef. At least it supplies much of needed protein and carbohydrates. But many people would not eat dog food if they knew what it contained," DeVoll said.

A check of super market meat prices lends credence to the belief that the seniors can save considerable money by buying canned meat intended for animals rather than much higher priced fresh meat intended for human consumption.

One brand of dog food indicating "beef chunks" sells for 37 cents for a 14 ounce can. The cheapest stewing meat Herald reporters could fine in a local supermarket one day this week had a price tag of $1.39 a pound.

A can of dog food labeled chicken was selling for 33 cents per 14¾ ounce can. The least expensive chicken in the meat refrigerator was backs at 29 cents per pound. At least 75 per cent of chicken backs is bone. One pound of chicken backs would yield about four ounces of meat.

The least expensive ground beef with a high percentage of fat was priced at 59 cents a pound. As noted earlier 4.5 pounds of Gaines burgers were $2.45 or 50 cents a pound.

This is one place where the seniors are spending excessively for a pet food when food intended for humans would be more nutritious and have higher protein value, according to Louise Gill, Seminole Extension Home Economics agent. The packaged dog burgers contain only 20 per cent protein.

"People do not have to turn to dog food," Mrs. Gill insisted. "People can eat at less cost with wiser shopping and by using high protein meat substitutes. All it takes is planning," she said.

"There is nothing wrong with dried beans. They are a good source of protein. Soy bean products are also high in protein and not costly.

Noting that 30 pounds of TVP (texturized vegetable protein) can be purchased for $12, Mrs. Gill said TVP is a good ground meat extender that does not change the meat flavor.

She said good planning and information available from her office will permit anyone to eat well, but econom!cally, Mrs. Gill invited anyone in search of moderately costing meal suggestions to call or visit her office in the county agricultural building at Five Points.

"Right now eggs are a good buy and except for those who must watch cholesterol, eggs are an excellent source of protein," she said. "Fresh vegetables are in good supply at economical prices and can be canned for use around the year."

"It takes a little effort, but there is no excuse for anyone eating dog food," she said.

The 1970 census showed that 12 per cent — 11,145 — of Seminole County's population were senior citizens 60 years old and older. The income of 25 per cent — 2,731 — was considered below the poverty level four years ago. Ferguson said Seminole County's senior citizen population has increased by 22 per cent since 1970 and those with below poverty level incomes have increased correspondingly.

Fully 25 per cent of the seniors told interviewers in a recent survey that the lack of adequate incomes to live decently was a major problem. Sixty per cent indicated their major need as health services. Thirty-five per cent said they needed proper housing and 20 per cent told of problems providing themselves with adequate nutrition according to Ferguson.

"The plight of those senior citizens on a fixed income in these inflationary times has been and is critical," he said. "They are being hit below the belt."

Just like it says on TV--delicious!

Swofford Silent After Jury Talk

By CHRIS NELSON
Herald Staff Writer

Former Altamonte Springs mayor Lawrence Swofford's desire to testify before the Seminole County grand jury probing his 20-year reign has been fulfilled, but he emerged from a 3½ hour grilling visibly shaken and testy.

State Atty. Abbott Herring said the grand jury might stay in session to mid-week, but would not comment on when its report will be written — or what indictments, if any can be expected.

Swofford entered the witness room at 2:15 p.m. Friday, pausing to tell newsmen he is the victim of a 10-year conspiracy by the grand jury and the state attorney's office, and left, without comment, at 5:45 p.m.

Chief Investigator Jack Fulwinider, who has spearheaded the probe into Altamonte city government relations with area developers, builders and contractors, cautioned Swofford to speak to no one about his testimony, "not even your wife."

When Swofford arrived in the courthouse shortly before lunch he indicated he might be having some second thoughts about waiving immunity to prosecution in return for being allowed to testify.

Herring has said Swofford and any past or present city officials are welcome to testify only on the condition they waive immunity from prosecution.

Friday, noting he had been informed of the witnesses already called and the nature of some of the questioning, Swofford said "perhaps I should have taken this thing more seriously."

The former city and county political power said he was considering retaining Orlando trial attorney Jim Russ to advise him on the implications of waiving immunity.

When the time for testimony came, however, Swofford marched into the witness room where he remained for more than three hours with only a 15-minute coffee break.

At that point, Swofford held a worried huddle with Assistant State Atty. Bill Staley out in the hall, explaining that while he may have made statements attributed to him about forbidding fire department coverage outside his city, he was concerned with insurance company problems.

Swofford, in detailing to The Herald what he charged was the conspiracy against him, said his present troubles began only after an alleged $100,000 contribution to the city firemen's retirement fun was made by "insurance companies."

After the contribution, Swofford charged, city firemen began the program of inspections which led to his warning the fire chief to stop volunteer firemen from making them.

Fire Chief Tom Siegfried and former chief Gary Kaiser, now Seminole County fire administrator, have publicly accused Swofford of preventing them from enforcing the fire codes.

Former city building official Jack Stowe, interviewed by The Herald prior to the grand jury investigation, said he resigned after four months in 1973 because Swofford interfered with his efforts to enforce building codes.

Kaiser, who resigned as Altamonte fire chief in 1971, Friday labeled Swofford's charges "unbelievable. I couldn't even begin to figure out what he's talking about."

Kaiser said city firemen have nothing but the normal state retirement program, and that the inspection policy began because city council passed a new fire code.

Another part of the conspiracy, Swofford said Friday, came from failures by the state attorney's office to honor his previous requests to testify — finally accepting his May 20 demand to be called just this week.

Fulewider earlier told The Herald that he explained to Swofford during last Fall's grand jury probe of the county building department that Altamonte was not the target of any investigation "at this time," and that his testimony would not be needed.

The grand jury in the past two weeks, according to sources, has been investigating not only building code violations, but also campaign contributions and Christmas "gifts" of money and other items to past and present city officials.

Witnesse called since the probe began include Altamonte Mayor Norman Floyd, who scored a stunning upset victory over Swofford in December, and city councilmen Helen Keyser and Don Meyers.

Other present or former city officials called included Police Chief Justus East, Siegfried, Kaiser, Stowe, ex-firemen Don Harkins and former building official Joseph Turanchik.

Developers called included long-time Swofford campaign contributor Lester Mandell, Wilson Knott and Lester Zimmerman.

Robbers Hit Man In Knee

A 22-year-old Casselberry man was shot in the knee when he attempted to wrestle a pistol from three robbers who stole his wallet and $50, according to Seminole County Sheriff's deputies.

Clifford Jackson, 22, of 1 Lotus Circle, was treated and released from Florida North Hospital.

He told sheriff's deputies he walked out of the ABC Lounge at the corner of Wildmere and U.S. 17-92 when three men in a yellow Volkswagen called up next to him and demanded his wallet.

In a separate incident a Forest City man was arrested for breaking and entering after police said he opened fire on one officer who was checking a tripped burglar alarm at the Longwood Veterinary Clinic at 1000 W. Sanlando Springs Road.

Kenneth Charles Cheever, of Box 450, is in the county jail in lieu of $8,000 bond.

One shot was fired by Cheever and one shot by officer Bob Fawdry but no one was struck, according to police.

County Gets 'Gas Lake'

If you're planning a shopping spree at the Altamonte Springs Interstate Mall, it would be best to leave your smokes inside the car.

Early this morning up to 1,000 gallons of gasoline being pumped into the Montgomery Wards' Service Station overflowed and ended up in an unnamed drainage lake behind the mall.

Altamonte Springs fire department spokesmen say they expect clear weather to help evaporate the gas and there is no real danger to shoppers.

The fire department flushed out the parking lot with its hoses to clean up the small gasponds from 12:30 a.m. to 5 a.m. for five hours.

Nixon, Brezhnev Sign Pact For 10-Year Trade Deal

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev today signed a 10-year agreement to facilitate economic, industrial and technical cooperation between the Soviet Union and the United States.

It was the fourth agreement signed by Nixon and the Communist party general secretary since their summit talks began Thursday. Others concerned fields of health, housing and energy.

Today's agreement includes sales of machinery and other equipment for modernizing production facilities and for annual exchange of economic information.

The accord also deals with purchases and sales of raw materials, agricultural products, finished products, and consumer goods and services. Other provisions concern patent rights and training of technicians and specialists.

The agreement was signed after Nixon and Brezhnev held a fourth round of talks in the Kremlin.

They were to leave for the Crimea to continue their talks on such subjects as further limitation of missile defense systems.

Trade between the two countries last year totaled $1.4 billion, but the advances sought by the Nixon administration as an instrument of detente are threatened by congressional resistance to permit trade credits and to lower tariff barriers. A majority of both houses stands opposed to such advantages until the Soviet Union permits free emigration of Jews and other Soviet citizens.

By the Soviet leader's own public account, the talks are "passing into an atmosphere of frankness"—an indication that hard bargaining has been done. At the top of the list is nuclear weapons.

In 1972, the two powers agreed to limit themselves to two defense complexes, one to protect the capital. Up to 100 launchers and 100 interceptors were permitted at each site.

The Soviet Union has an outmoded system around Moscow while the United States has an ABM complex guarding the Grand Forks, N.D., Minuteman base. Neither country built the second system.

U.S. officials say privately that now Nixon and Brezhnev have virtually agreed to tighten the 1972 curbs. A joint statement said that "in particular, the question of additional measures to limit the ABM system of the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. was discussed."

The two leaders also had "an exchange

Spanish Statues Now Out Of Coop And Into Church

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — When anthropologist E. Boyd first arrived in Santa Fe in 1930 from her native Philadelphia, the art work we now regard as priceless relics of the Southwest's past was virtually ignored.

The multitude of paintings, carvings and furniture done by native New Mexican artisans to decorate their churches were being supplanted by outside, modern art.

"The priests hated it," Miss Boyd said. "They wanted to modernize and were promoting plaster statues based on modern California designs."

The influx of artists and scientists into New Mexico after World War I began to reverse that trend. Many became enthused about these representatives of Spanish colonial art, bought them and restored them.

Miss Boyd, who is now curator emeritus of Spanish Colonial Art at the Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fe, scoured the countryside in the early days looking for the santos and furniture that is so characteristic of Spanish colonial art.

"We'd find the most beautiful santos stored in old chicken coops," she remembered. "Cartloads of it would be given away or sold very cheaply."

Her years of work with and research on santos will culminate this winter with the publication of her one volume "general principle book on santos."

Since so much Spanish colonial art, especially the santos, was done anonymously, researching the artists and their work can be an intricately woven path.

"You have to start out with the folklore, then work your way through the old Spanish archives," Miss Boyd said.

Church records from both the 18th and 19th century list how much money was paid to what artists for santos and inventory records of the same time reveal what objects were in the churches.

"You must remember how limited the artists' materials were here," Miss Boyd pointed out. "They had to make everything from scratch with no hard wood and no iron tools.

"So their approach was to simplify everything. Compared to what was going on in other places at the same time the work was quite crude."

Paintings had to be done on wooden slabs, as many of the santos are on animal hides due to the lack of canvas. While artists in Spain and Mexico were doing portraits, their contemporaries in the Southwest did only religious work.

"Their brush strokes were clear and forceful," Miss Boyd said. "So few of the santeros, artists who painted santos, ever signed their work, but we can identify them by style and preferred color schemes."

The Museum of International Folk Art has its own extensive collection of santos as well as several on loan from private collectors. Santos can either be images of saints painted on wooden slabs or carefully carved and painted statues of saints, the Virgin or Christ.

"The artists who produced this wealth of Spanish colonial art were untaught country people," Miss Boyd said. "During the summer they worked on their farms and in the winter they worked on santos or furniture."

Teacher Grew With Students

By JEAN PATTESON
Herald Staff Writer

Miss Hettie Arnett (Mrs. John MacNamera today) was 16 when she graduated from the eighth grade at what is now Lyman High School to become a school teacher herself.

"Hettie, I can't have you teaching around here," the school superintendent for Seminole County, also her former fifth grade teacher, told her. "Why, half the kids are older than you are."

He suggested she teach out of county for a couple of years before seeking a job in her hometown Longwood.

'Miss Hettie,' as her pupils were to call her, doesn't count her first teaching experience as part of the 42 years she devoted to the profession. "After a month at a little school down the east coast I was so homesick I packed up and came right home," she confessed. "I suppose that seems childish today, but girls then didn't grow up as fast as they do now."

It is doubtful, however, whether many modern day misses would brave Miss Hettie's next appointment as teacher, principal and janitor all rolled up in a one-room schoolhouse in Yelvington near Palatka.

Fifteen students, grades one through eight, were in her charge and the oldest girl, as Miss Hettie puts it, was "September to February older than I."

In class this student, Ethel Kennard, was a model pupil, but once the old school bell clanged the end of lessons she was Miss Hettie's closest girlfriend.

"We'd tidy up the schoolhouse for the next day and then walk home together. We double-dated and had the best time," recalls Miss Hettie.

She taught two years at Yelvington and had trouble with just one little boy — "but his big brother told on him and his father took him out to the woodshed . . ." Miss Hettie's tone became ominous ". . . and that was the end of my discipline problems."

'MISS HETTIE' WITH YESTERDAY'S STUDENTS

A yellowing photograph shows her as a slender, wide-eyed girl surrounded by a group of smiling-faced, bare-footed children in pinafores or knicker-bockers.

Her black hair is pulled back in a severe knot at the nape of her neck and a high-collared white blouse is ticked into a heavy dark skirt. "I tried to dress to look older," smiles Miss Hettie — though even today, a little white haired lady, she still looks younger than her 70-some years.

She was sitting in a wicker rocker on the screened porch of her 212 Bay Ave., Longwood home — the same in which she was born — with photograph albums, newspaper clippings and the 'Who's Who In Florida' book in her lap.

Twenty-five of her 42 years in teaching were spent at Lyman, Miss Hettie was saying, and it was from Lyman she retired in 1956.

During her ling career Miss Hettie was principal at several schools including Samsula, Osteen and Christmas. After her marriage to John Macnamera in 1943 she taught a year each at Howie In The Hills and Melbourne, but thereafter returned to Seminole County.

All the while she was studying and attending night classes for her high school certificates and two-year University of Florida diploma.

In 1941 Miss Hettie graduated from Steston University with her B.S.E. degree. And old photograph shows her in a low-waisted, calf-length white dress, bespectacled and a little more grown up, but still with an air of sweet youthfulness. Miss Hettie is proud of her graduate teaching certificates.

Over the years she has seen a lot of changes in the school system and teaching methods the most remarkable being the new math method which Miss Hettie admits she still doesn't really understand.

Today's children are more difficult to handle, says Miss Hettie, probably because their mothers are at work all day and the children don't get the needed love and affection.

A firm believer in the value of order and discipline, Miss Hettie doesn't carry the 'spare the rod and spoil the child' rule too far.

"You've got to love the children to be a good teacher, and they've got to know you love them," she says firmly.

"It gave me such satisfaction to know I was training those children and to see their love for learning and for me. Some of my pupils have gone on to become ministers and teachers themselves," she beams with pride.

Among her many momentos are cards made by her pupils. 'To my sweet teacher,' reads one, painstakingly illustrated with blackboard, slate and pencil.

"The little rascals always found out when my birthday was, and in my last year at Lyman, even after the principal had forbidden any more parties, they just marched right into his office and invited him to the farewell party they were arranging for me," she chuckled.

Today Miss Hettie is kept busy visiting her friend in the Longwood community — many of them ex-pupils. She also loves to crochet, read and write to her 40-some penpals. Fishing has always been one of her favorite pastimes , although she hasn't done much since her husband died in 1954, and Miss Hettie loves puttering in the garden of her old family home.

Watergate's Even Beginning To Bug Pat Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Late at night, when Pennsylvania Avenue is deserted, Pat Nixon sometimes leaves the White House to walk the quiet nearby streets.

Often she covers her blonde hair with a scarf so she won't be recognized, her daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, reports.

The late-night walks, two or three times a week, are something new. In a Watergate-troubled time, the strolls offer the First Lady privacy, relaxation, an escape from the "hermetically sealed-in" and constantly bustling White House, says, the youngest Nixon daughter.

Some evenings, Mrs. Nixon is joined by Julie. Others, she walks alone, save for the ever-present Secret Service agents.

Those close to the First Lady see the signs of Watergate strain.

She "feels very deeply about this," and sees in Watergate an attempt by some people to get "her husband's last pound of flesh," says a very close friend, Mrs. Helene Drown, who has known Pat Nixon for 35 years. They were teachers together at Whittier High School in California before the Nixons married.

"But I don't think Watergate has affected her any more than any crisis they've gone through in their lives," adds Mrs. Drown. "Pat Nixon's motto has always been: It's better to laugh than to cry."

The laughter, the good spirits are what the public usually see. Hundreds of people who meet Mrs. Nixon in receiving lines find her a warm, friendly, smiling and responsive hostess.

"She goes merrily along as if nothing was happening," says Curator Clement Conger, who works with Mrs. Nixon to refurbish and replace White House furnishings.

"She tries to relieve the tension," daughter Julie adds.

The First Lady's social secretary, Lucy Winchester, bears that out with a report about Mrs. Nixon carrying off a poster showing a kitten clinging to a curtain rod. It was captioned, "Hang in there, baby." Mrs. Nixon took it to display in the President's bedroom.

The Nixons observed their 33rd wedding anniversary last Friday (June 21) and Mrs. Nixon expects to observe two more as First Lady, Mrs. Drown says.

"She doesn't seem to think her term in the White House will be terminated."

Reports think Mrs. Nixon, 62, is showing signs of strain and her press secretary, Helen Smith, admits that "it's a difficult time for her."

In the few times she has spoken out after being pressed by reporters, Mrs. Nixon has proclaimed "I'm full of faith and confidence ... I'll have faith until I'm proven wrong."

PAT NIXON

When a reporter said, "This has been a hard year for you and you seem to be holding up marvelously ... what is it that sustains you?" Mrs. Nixon responded:

"The truth sustains me, because I have great faith in my husband. He's an honorable, dedicated person. And when you know the truth, you have nothing to fear. I have a very positive outlook."

While criticism mounts against Nixon, almost nothing is said against his wife and partner in 28 years of national politics.

Except for the fact that she was a wifely co-signer of the income tax returns on which Nixon was found to owe $476,000, Mrs. Nixon has not been linked personally to any of the President's Watergate-related problems.

Mrs. Nixon disclosed recently that she has read all of the published Watergate transcripts. "It takes 9 to 12 hours," she said.

Mrs. Drown says Mrs. Nixon felt that the Presidential tapes should have been considered "like personal, sensitive diaries ... never to be released to anyone."

Julie Eisenhower, frequently the family spokesman on Watergate, has described her mother as "able to take things with a grain of salt. She's very philosophical and I guess she finds she can hold up under all this because she loves my father and believes in him."

It was a year ago that Mrs. Nixon expressed her faith and confidence in her husband on Watergate. When someone gave her a copy of a weekly Pennsylvania newspaper during a reception, she joked, "Well, I don't see Watergate on the front page. Something's wrong here."

Since publication of the transcripts, Mrs. Nixon is less inclined to joke about Watergate.

Once friendly and relaxed with reporters, she has become irritable with them.

"I'll pray for the press," she flung over her shoulder in turning aside questions on one White House occasion.

Mrs. Nixon even has displayed what her press secretary described as "a flash of anger" during a talk with reporters aboard her plane on the way back from her six-day Latin American goodwill visit last March.

It came when she was asked about "the strain of the past year."

"I really don't wish to speak of it," Mrs. Nixon said, standing up to cut off the interview. "It's just a personal thing and why bring that into the trip ..."

Mrs. Nixon reportedly is distressed at the news media's constant efforts to get Mrs. Nixon to discuss Watergate at social events.

"She wants to focus on the positive," Mrs. Smith explains. Mrs. Drowns adds that Mrs. Nixon has complained to her that reporters ignored events at the White House and she wishes they would give more recognition to volunteers and other groups she entertains.

Just as President Nixon has sought friendly audiences for his public appearances lately, Mrs. Nixon also entertains apparently supportive groups.

Sometimes as often as three afternoons a week, she will have two events on her calendar to greet such visitors as the Daughters of the American Revolution or wives of a doctors' group.

Though she once traveled across the country promoting volunteer work, Mrs. Nixon now confines her efforts to meeting groups in the Washington area. Since the fall of 1971, her travels in the U.S. have been limited solely to trips with the President.

There seems to be general agreement that Mrs. Nixon spends an unusual amount of time on her mail, which is said to average as much as 3,000 to 4,000 letters a week.

She works an estimated four or five hours a day at it.

Julie says her mother is "a compulsive worker" and often spends four hours at night on her mail, staying up after an official dinner party.

Some associates think Mrs. Nixon works too hard. But Mrs. Drown explains "she's a perfectionist" and she "cares about people."

When she first came to the White House, Mrs. Nixon promised to open it to as many people as possible — not just "big shots." And she has kept that promise, claiming to have entertained more Americans at social events and worship services than any other First Family.

"Meeting people," is the thing Mrs. Nixon says she likes best about being First Lady.

The First Lady sleeps only a few hours at night; is up and about at 7:30 a.m. Mrs. Drown explains that from Pat's early years — she was orphaned as a teen-ager — "she had no time to lounge around."

Reporters rarely hear of Mrs. Nixon seeing friends other than Mrs. Drown, whose husband is a publisher's distributor, and Louise Thompson Johnson, another old friend from Whittier days, whose husband for years was an oil company representative in Washington.

But Julie says her mother has "a nice circle of friends. I wish she'd see them more often."

Julie describes her mother as an "outdoor girl, who grew up on a truck farm" and would like nothing better than to work in a garden. She settles now for potted plants at the White House.

'Tiger' Wins Hearing

MIAMI (AP) — A new hearing has been ordered for former stripper Lillian (Tiger Lil) Reis because of what a district judge called "an unconstitutional search."

Mrs. Reis, 44, who has spent eight months in prison, was set free Thursday on $5,000 bond. A hearing was scheduled for July 5.

U.S. District Judge William Mertens indicated that he might set aside her 1965 conviction for possession of marijuana. He said he would also hear a challenge to Mrs. Reis' conviction for obtaining prescription drugs under a false name.

Mrs. Reis, who once took off her clothes for pay at Miami Beach clubs, had been serving two-year concurrent terms at the Lowell State Prison for women.

She was arrested in March 1965 by police who arrived at her Miami Beach apartment after apparently learning that she had obtained prescriptions under the name of Renaldo. Officers said they found one marijuana cigarette in her apartment.

Lansky's Conviction Dismissed

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A federal appeals court has thrown out the contempt conviction of reputed underworld financial leader Meyer Lansky, saying the U.S. Justice Department did not give him enough time to answer a subpoena.

Lansky, 72 and ailing, was found guilty last year on a charge of not answering a subpoena issued by a federal grand jury in Miami. He had been sentenced to a year and a day in prison.

The verdict was reversed by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Neither Lansky, free on bail pending the appeal, nor his attorneys could be reached in Miami for comment.

The grand jury, probing reports that Lansky skimmed gambling profits from a Las Vegas hotel, ordered him on Feb. 22, 1971, to appear in 19 days. Lansky was in Israel and was not served with the subpoena until March 4.

"When the government requested that the court fix March 11 as the return date of the subpoena, it made compliance by the defendant virtually impossible," Judge Robert A. Ainsworth wrote in the appeals decision.

Ainsworth said U.S. District Judge James L. King should have told Lansky's six-member jury to acquit because the government failed to prove that Lansky willfully and contemptuously avoided compliance.

Lansky had suffered a heart attack and was being treated for stomach ulcers in Israel when the subpoena was served.

He said his physician advised him not to make the trip to the United States and that he offered to make a sworn statement to U.S. officials in Israel for submission to the grand jury. The offer was refused.

Lansky did not leave Israel until being expelled in November 1972.

Mideast Jaunt A Big Success

When President Nixon announced that he was going to the Middle East there were two schools of thought among those Americans who believed that he should stay at home.

One viewpoint was that he should not go because of his weakened domestic political condition; a fear that he might be tempted to make concessions that were not in the national interest in order to divert attention from the trauma of Watergate. The other school of thought was that because of a presumed degradation in his international image, the President's visit could be cosmetic at best.

Events have proved both groups wrong. Time and again the recent Middle Eastern diplomacy has driven home a point that we would ell do well to ponder. The President of the United States is the head of the world's strongest and most respected state. Whether he is politically strong or weak at home, abroad he is still a major influence because of the country that he represents.

It is the strength of the United States that made the Arabs retreat from a posture of extreme militancy to a spirit of compromise. It is the strength of the United States that caused Israeli territorial concessions that were considered impossible a year ago.

Acting as a catalyst for the strength has been the even-handed, constant policy of the United States in the Middle East. For this, the President deserves a full share of the credit.

That the trip turns out to have been far more than cosmetic is implicit in the growing concern about the U.S. agreement to furnish Egypt with nuclear technology and supplies for peaceful uses.

Drawing the worst possible picture, the agreement does mean that Egypt could, if this were her intention, convert the peaceful nuclear installations to instruments of war, and that the Middle East could be the cockpit of the world's first nuclear war.

On the other hand, it generally is overlooked that Egypt already has two nuclear reactors, furnished by the Soviet Union for peaceful purposes. There is something to be said for having the United States do the nuclear advising rather than having the Soviet Union be the sponsor. The Russians want to keep the pot boiling in the Middle East and we want to lower the flames.

Summed up, the President's personal diplomacy must be considered a success abroad and at home.

Abroad it reminded the world that the United States among the first magnitude powers , still is the world's only major honest broker for peace. Beyond this, because of its clear success in banking some of the fires, it forced the Soviet Union's Middle East diplomacy into disarray. America is favorably in the limelight in an area the Soviets had begun to count as one of their own spheres of influence.

At home the trip has given us a little better perspective of Watergate. We should perceive that the United States is strong enough and great enough to survive the wretched political scandals we are enduring, bitter and repugnant though they are.

Dear Sir:

As a citizen of Lake Mary, and a frustrated one at that, I must speak out.

It has become so obvious that the city council (with the exception of Lou Blankenship and Mrs. Virginia Mercer and Mayor Marge Hess, who has no vote save a tie) is totally irresponsible to the wishes of the citizens and the city of Lake Mary.

Mrs. Delores Lash brought a motion to the floor to table the Babcock project and before she had the words out of her mouth the motion was seconded by Terry. The vote was three to two to table .

This was an obvious maneuver on the part of the council to prevent the issue from coming before the people for discussion.

Mrs. Lash had, together with the police chief, already decided on a new part-time policeman before the position was ever advertised or discussed in public.

What is the purpose in springing these things on the people of Lake Mary? Aren't we entitled to open discussion?

The vibrations of utter frustration in the City Hall at this recent meeting were absolutely disgusting.

I feel we have less say in determining the future of Lake Mary than was ever so, before we incorporated.

Was not our reason for incorporating that we would have more say?

Apparently the only recourse is to back the charter recall vote with all we've got. Namely our vote.

Maybe then, at least, the power will be taken away from the power-hungry council who refuse to represent the people of Lake Mary.

Dear Sir:

Due to the large volume of mail I have received in my Congressional office on the issue of tax reductions for church contributions, I would like to ask that you print my letter in the Letter to the Editor in order to clarify the intent of this legislation.

This legislation was originally introduced in the 92nd Congress as H.R. 15230, however, since no action was taken on the bill, it automatically died at the end of that Congress.

An identical bill has been introduced in the 93rd Congress as H.R. 636. Although technically, if this bill were passed and stood on its own, it would eliminate these tax deductions, this is not the intent of the bill. The House Ways and Means Committee is currently studying the entire area of tax reform and hopes to have a bill ready for consideration by the whole House during this session of Congress. In order to make a transition from our current tax laws to any new laws which might be passed, H.R. 636 provides for the termination of current laws over a three year period. New laws would then take effect when the old laws expire.

The Ways and Means Committee assures me that tax deductions for churches and non-profit organizations will be retained in any new provisions. I strongly support allowing tax deductions for gifts to churches.

I appreciate the interest of my constitutents and other citizens of Florida in this matter, and I hope this information will answer any questions in their minds as to the purpose of the legislation, and my stand on the issue.

Churchill Still Remains One Of History's Greatest

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER
The Herald Services

This year marks the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Winston Churchill, and naturally the great British statesman is coming in for a lot of re-evaluation.

For my generation, Churchill will probably always loom considerably larger than life. And maybe we are right, at that. I remember my father's remark, when he first noticed his teenage son's extravagant admiration for Churchill: "Well, if you had to have a hero to worship, I guess you picked a pretty good one." I have since outgrown the need for heroes, but Winston Churchill remains, for me, something pretty special.

On the other hand, there is no lack of serious historians nowadays to study the Churchillian achievement coolly and put it in its context, or of outright denigrators whose delight is to diminish the reputation of a man whose shoes they were not fit to shine.

One of the former is the respected British historian of World War II, A. J. P. Taylor, who contributed a thoughtful and balanced reassessment of Churchill to the "New York Times Magazine" a few weeks ago. Taylor argues that Churchill, as Prime Minister in 1940-45, made three major strategic decisions, all of which were at best open to criticism: to approve the mass bombardment of German cities; to concentrate on minor victories in the Mediterranean, thereby delaying victory in the main theater of war; and to gamble that Japan would not attack Britain's defenseless Far Eastern empire.

He also thinks Churchill allowed Britain to be treated shabbily by her American ally in everything from gold reserves to nuclear technology, and points out that Churchill's determination to destroy Germany's war potential altogether assured the postwar emergence of the Soviet Union as the dominant power in Europe. Taylor is quick to concede, however, that many of these decisions, and especially the last, may have been inevitable.

But to dwell on this or that alleged Churchillian mistake has always seemed to me to miss the essential point about the man. In a political career spanning sixty years, mistakes, and even disasters, were inevitable. In a way, Churchill's experiences illustrate the vanity of human hopes: he knew defeat and rejection and futility as only an active and energetic figure can know them. But the real story, and the real triumph, are not to be found in Churchill's accomplishments, vast though they were, but in his life itself.

Born into a noble house, he started near the top and stayed there, by right of his own spectacular qualities, for ninety years. Educated to be a soldier, he had his hat shot off on India's Northwest Frontier in 1897, participated in history's last great cavalry charge — at Omdurman in the Sudan — in 1898, and was captured by, and escaped from, the Boers in South Africa in 1899. Entering politics at 25, he was elected to Victoria's last Parliament in 1900 and ultimately held almost every major post in the British government.

And always at the most ticklish times: Home Secretary in 1909-11, First Lord of the Admiralty and Minister of Munitions during World War I, Colonial Secretary in charge of the explosive Middle East in 1921, Chancellor of the Exchequer during the General Strike of 1926, then First Lord again in 1939 and Prime Minister at last in 1940, in Britain's "finest hour." And from his pen there flowed some forty books — reminiscences, military history, essays and biography — of a quality so high that he justly received the Nobel Prize for Literature.

And they talk about "mistakes"! The British humorist A. P. Herbert hit it on the head in a sentimental moment at a Churchill birthday party after World War II, when he tossed off the following little poem:

"Many happy returns of the day
To the father of purpose and plan;
To the one who was first in the Fray—
Never doubted or rested or ran.
May he live to hear history say,
'This was then finest man.'"

Worried Presidents Offered Survival Kit

By RALPH NOVAK
The Herald Services

A pair of young British writers, Raymond Hawkey and Roger Bingham, have published a new novel, "Wild Card," about an American president who faces turbulent domestic problems. To create a distraction, he organizes a team of scientists to create a simulated invasion from outer space and cause all kinds of havoc. Hawkey and Bringham finished writing the novel long before the current White House incumbent fell upon hard times, so the good timing of the release of their book and its relevance are only a happy coincidence for them. But as the old saying goes, if the carping criticism and insidious innuendoes fit, wear them.

So it may be instructive to consider some alternative plans of action for presidents in distress who might find the Martian invader route a little too far out. One might effectively distract the populace, for instance, by:

Starting rumors that "Bridget Loves Bernie" is going to be revived on network television.

Nominating hints to the Washington Post that Henry Kissinger was not only responsible for the plumbers and wiretapping of government officials, but he caused the Civil War, the Great Potato Famine and Tom Seaver's slump, too.

Persuading the Pentagon to announce that radar installations were reporting huge swarms of 17-year locusts about to descend on the country, even if it was the wrong year for them.

Announcing gleefully that a new study of the White House tapes has uncovered a previously unreleased record of Enrico Caruso singing "Volare."

Running for Congress in California.

AMERICAN MORALITY TODAY

By ALLEN PHILLIPS
The Herald Services

The writer is an editorial writer for The Detroit News.

DETROIT—(NEA)—While Detroit police recently were installing padlocks on moviehouses accused of showing obscene films, the highlight of the American Psychiatric Association's convention at Cobo Hall was an exhibit of explicit sex filmstrips said to have therapeutic value. Detroit's news media, and apparently the public, took both events in stride.

Detroit, like most other cities, is uneasily contending with the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 guidelines on obscenity. And in the absence of definable local official policy the viewing habits of physicians seems to many here about as valid as the police busily padlocking theaters on a judge's orders.

A decade ago the city had a definite bluenose reputation thanks to the vigilance of a police censor squad which judged the fitness of films and reading materials placed on the local market. The view of those censors, in turn, was often accepted as informal guidelines to law enforcement in the metropolitan area and throughout the state of Michigan.

But under relentless legal attacks in the state and federal appellate courts the censor squad disbanded, and their primary tool, an old state obscenity statute, was riddled with opinions which caused local prosecutors endless confusion.

Detroit became less than a wide-open town, and lacks the "sin strip" labels attached to Times Square in New York, or sections of Chicago or Los Angeles. But it has its share of X-rated movies, adult bookstores, and some nude modeling and massage parlors which police suspect of being fronts for prostitution. There are few sex-selling emporiums in the downtown area, but they are strung out the main thoroughfares leading to the suburbs.

Their locations, perhaps more than their wares or services, seems responsible for a wave of citizen protests to Detroit city officials. Predominantly residential neighborhoods complained about adult movies and bookstores, and topless go-go bars in their midst, and stimulated police and the courts to do more about them than when they previously were limited to commercial areas.

The same problem, proximity rather than degree of pornography, was raised in Detroit's suburbs were homeowners railed against drive-in theaters whose X-rated films could be seen from front porches, and adult bookstores opening near schools.

60 local city councils were quick to extract from the Supreme Court's opinion encouragement to set local community standards on prurient interest and offensive materials. Since the Michigan legislature can't seem to get around to revising the old obscenity statute, municipal ordinances quoting extensively from the Supreme Court ruling are being enacted on all sides.

What constitutes an offensive, and obscene, nuisance now seems to be the question. In years past the city's basically church-going, factory worker culture had a low tolerance for the open purveying of sexual matters and materials. Now things have changed and the outer limits are unclearly marked, both in terms of local law and scanctioned morality.

Added to this is Detroit's interest in promoting itself as a convention center where visiting salesmen, or psychiatrists, can have a good time, and yet another factor emerges. And for contrast across the Detroit River is Windsor, Ont., where Canadians frown on obscenity but tolerate a burlesque house which advertises itself as the liveliest show in either of the two cities.

(NEXT: Annapolis, Maryland)

WASHINGTON — Even as President Nixon was courting political support from George Meany, the White House "dirty tricks" crew was conducting a back-door probe to see whether the crusty, then 77-year-old AFL-CIO boss would survive a serious chest hernia.

As part of the snooping, according to "dirty tricks" chief Jack Caulfield, the White House used a management consultant posing as a doctor to try to squeeze medical data out of Meany's personal physician.

Meany's doctor denies he furnished medical information. The consultant agrees, saying he told Caulfield he obtained the information from two labor officials. But Caulfield nevertheless fobbed the "medical" reports off on President Nixon as coming straight from Meany's doctor.

According to Caulfield, the clandestine operation on Meany was ordered by former White House counsel John Dean, probably at the direction of ex-Nixon aides H. R. Haldeman or John Ehrlichman.

In a room locked to the public and the press, Caulfield told the Senate Watergate Committee of the Meany caper and previously undisclosed details of his other hidden White House chores.

These, he reluctantly confessed, involved presidential nephew Don Nixon, former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, the Ford Foundation, the newsmen who revealed the My Lai slaughter, the Nixon campaign's chief of Jewish affairs, "Newsday" and many others.

To carry out his probes, the "dirty tricks" impresario got the willing help of a New York FBI agent; the White House resident Jesuit, Father John McLaughlin, who recently defended the President's foul language, and presidential secretary Rose Mary Woods, to name a few.

The once ruddy Caulfield, who has been weakened by serious abdominal surgery, turned out to be a slippery witness, the classified transcript of his testimony reveals.

"Do you know for a fact that the President was interested in getting some discreet information on the condition of George Meany" in 1971, Caulfield was asked by committee lawyer Terry Lenzner.

"Apparently a memorandum went from Dean to the President," said the ex-New York City detective. "There was intense interest, I do recall, . . . on the part of many people at the White House. (Meany) had a (chest) attack . . . The thrust of the inquiry was how serious . . ."

When Lenzner pressed him on how he got his information, Caulfied weaved and dodged.

"I received it from a friend of mine," said the ex-White House official.

"Who was that?" demanded Lenzner.

"Mr. James Juliana," Caulfield finally acknowledged, naming an ex-investigator for the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., who is now a Washington management consultant.

"Do you know how he got it?" persisted Lenzner.

"I think he got it from a physician friend of his."

"Your memorandum indicates that Dr. Marvin Fuchs, who was George Meany's personal physician, was talked to on a very discreet basis by another physician."

"Yes," said Caulfield.

"Was that Mr. Juliana?"

"Yes," swore Caulfield.

Both Dr. Fuchs and Juliana deny this as a baseless whopper. Juliana told us he was advised the attack was serious by two friends in the labor movement. He gave Caulfield a full report of his talk, he said, adding that the President should visit Meany in the hospital or send flowers. Within a few days, sure enough, not flowers, but cigars reached Meany from the White House.

In another case Caulfield probed the Long Island paper Newsday which was preparing an expose of presidential crony Charles "Babe" Rebozo.

"The forthcoming Newsday article was a matter of constant conversation around the White House," recalled Caulfield. One day, he said, "I bumped into (Rebozo) in the hall of the White House," Rebozo was "concerned." But Caulfield assured Rebozo he was already on the case.

As Caulfield recounted under oath, he and FBI agent Pat Henry were drinking in New York when Henry said, "There is an article coming out on Mr. Robozo . . . Would you be interested if there's any information?' and I said, 'I sure would.'"

Although Caulfield first tried to withhold Henry's name from the record, he finally admitted that Henry passed on information about Newsday. "Mr. Henry, as I recall, had friends at the newspaper (and) spoke to those friends about the publication date of the article," Caulfield testified.

The White House gumshoe dutifully relayed this information to Dean.

Caulfield said he also believed that Newsday reporters in Florida who worked on the Rebozo story were under Secret Service surveillance. The Secret Service and FBI deny they ever authorized any probes of Newsday.

Even some White House friends, however, drew suspicion from the President's inner circle, Caulfield testified. Dean once ordered a probe of Nixon's chief campaign aide on Jewish affairs, Lawrence Goldberg.

Caulfield was worried about "a potential question of loyalty" to the campaign on the part of Goldberg. Caulfield suggested the issue had been raised to him by Father McLaughlin. The staffer-priest refused to return our repeated calls.

Footnote: A spokesman for Meany said the tireless old labor worker had "absolutely no idea" he was being probed. Caulfield could not be reached.

Last Effort Saves Girl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 5-year-old girl suffering from a disease that prevents her body from producing its own defense against infections has been saved from death by a drug never before used in humans, doctors say. When Heather entered a hospital here two months ago, she weighed only 26 pounds and was near death. Doctors said she will be going home soon thanks to use of an experimental hormone developed by a research team at the University of California Medical Center. Heather's thymus gland malfunctioned and was unable to produce the hormone thymosin. UC doctors produced thymosin from the thymus glands of calves and injected the substitute hormone into Heather as a last ditch effort to save her life. It worked.

Manson Attorneys Indicted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The prosecutor and a defense attorney in the Charles Manson murder trial have been indicted on perjury charges for denying that they leaked information on the case to a newsman. Vincent Bugliosi, the prosecutor, and defense attorney Daye Shinn were indicted by a county grand jury on three counts of perjury each. Newsman William Farr, who on Thursday was found in contempt of court for refusing to reveal his sources to the grand jury, has said only that two of the six trial attorneys gave him the information. All six attorneys testified under oath before the trial judge and a grand jury that they did not give Farr the material for his story. Both Shinn and a spokesman for Bugliosi protested their innocence of the perjury charges and vowed to fight them.

Cigarette Regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decade after the surgeon general's famous report on smoking, the secretary of health, education and welfare has for the first time requested power to regulate the safety of cigarettes. Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger asked Congress to "consider legislation providing this department or some other appropriate agency with the authority to set maximum permissible levels of hazardous ingredients in cigarettes." Although Weinberger is the first HEW secretary to seek that power, lower-ranking officials have testified in favor of laws banning cigarettes high in tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide.

Dem Telethon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Democratic national party has planned a television extravaganza to beat all extravaganzas. And if it's not the best show ever, at least it will be the longest ever scheduled for network television: 21 hours.

"Answer, America!," the Democratic national telethon, is to be aired on CBS from 10 p.m. Saturday until 7 p.m. Sunday EDT.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, DMinn., will be host for most of the show. The list of performers for the show, which is intended to raise money for the Democratic party, includes 150 personalities from the world of entertainment and politics.

Ethiopian Revolt

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Heavily armed troops impatient with the pace of reform in feudal Ethiopia are occupying parts of the capital in a new threat to the civilian government.

Residents reported the city calm, but the presence of troops and police occupying metropolitan areas posed the threat of an imminent military coup against Prime Minister Endalkachew Mankonnen's four-month-old government.

Helmeted soldiers from the 4th Army Division burst in at the government radio station Friday and forced employees to broadcast statements denouncing 25 former cabinet ministers, army officers and other officials held by the military.

Teddy Kennedy III

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Teddy Kennedy played Scrabble in a Dublin hospital today and asked to go to the Irish Sweepstakes Derby.

A spokesman at St. Vincent's hospital here said the 12-yearold son of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was "very much improved."

Young Kennedy suddenly fell ill on an Irish holiday and was hospitalized Thursday, apparently suffering side affects from treatment for cancer. His right leg was amputated last November in an attempt to arrest bone cancer.

Peron Ill, Condition 'Serious'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Juan D. Peron is seriously ill in his official mansion, apparently with infectious bronchitis.

Doctors prescribed "absolute rest" for the 78-year-old leader, who came down with the flu two weeks ago.

Unofficial medical sources said the president appeared to have infectious bronchitis that was complicating an old heart condition.

The president's wife, Isabel, vice president and next in line for the presidency under the Argentine constitution, returned home Friday night from a twoweek European trip.

Argentines were concerned that Peron's illness would leave the country without the active presence of the only man many consider capable of controlling Argentina's violent politics and implementing economic programs to stabilize the inflation-prone economy.

Numerous political groupings call themselves "Peronist" but have different ideologies and often quarrel among themselves. Peron said recently, "I am the only element holding the (Peronist) party together."

Peron has been in delicate health since he returned triumphantly to his homeland last year after 18 years in exile. He spent three weeks at home in November, a month after assuming the presidency, and his activities since have been limited. Doctors diagnosed his problem in November as a bronchial condition; qualified sources called it a mild heart attack.

Turf Club Fireworks

CASSELBERRY — An Independence Day fireworks display will be enjoyed by Casselberry residents for the first time in many years tonight at the Seminole Turf Club.

Although admission is free, members of the Bicentennial Committee will be collecting donations for the celebration of the Nation's 200th birthday, in 1976.

The event was approved two weeks ago by the Casselberry City Council following a request from Turf Club director A. A. Grillo.

By staging the display in the infield, accident and fire hazards will be reduced to a minimum. Police Chief George Karcher said he could forsee no problems at the display and Mayor Bill Grier said he would have a fire unit standing by throughout the display.

Auto Insurance Firms Say Rates To Rise

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Automobile insurance rates, headed downward the past four years, will begin to rise soon because of inflation and a new upswing in accident rates, according to industry spokesmen.

"The trend at this point is that rates will go up because of inflation. There is no way to circumvent this," said a spokesman for the Insurance Services Office in New York, which provides 1,300 companies with statistics on rates and claims.

Spokesman for five of the nation's largest insurers said rising medical bills and auto repair costs are forcing companies to pay more for each accident claim. And they said motorists now are having more accidents since the gasoline shortage of last winter eased.

"During the early months of 1974, the frequency of accidents dropped substantially," a spokesman for the Travelers Insurance Cos. said. "But other costs, hospital and repair work were going up. It was a standoff.

"Now the gasoline is more available and the accident frequency is not so low, and the other costs are still rising.

"These facts show that we're virtually going to have to raise rates, but it's too early to tell how much."

None of the companies would estimate the amount of increase.

According to the federal Consumer Price Index (CPI), since 1971 hospital rates have risen 15 per cent, medical costs 10 per cent, doctors' fees 9 per cent and auto repair and maintenance 14 per cent. During the same period, the CPI recorded a 3.4 per cent drop in auto insurance rates.

Spokesman for the Hartford Insurance Group and Aetna Life and Casualty said the lower premiums were the result of competition between companies, federal controls, rate cuts ordered by some state insurance commissioners and "no-fault" laws more than 20 states have enacted to take auto-accident cases out of the courts.

No-fault systems vary among states, but generally enable an accident victim to be compensated by his own insurance company rather than have to prove in court that someone else caused the accident. Many states mandated rate reductions to reflect administrative savings under no-fault.

Allstate, the largest auto insurer, said it is waiting for a study by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners on the energy crisis.

IRS, Justice Staffs Bungled Probe Of Milk Case, 'Gate Report Claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Internal Revenue Service Director Johnnie Walters took an interest in a tax investigation of the nation's largest dairy farmer cooperative that failed to uncover massive illegal political donations, the Watergate Committee staff says.

In a confidential staff report obtained by The Associated Press, the staff cites evidence that then-Treasury Secretary John B. Connally was contacted about at least one aspect of the case. The report says Connally may have contacted Walters about it.

But the report also said it found no evidence that the IRS or the Justice Department behaved improperly. The report blamed bureaucratic bungles for the agencies' failure to follow up on recommendations for an expanded tax audit and possible criminal prosecution.

The report said that a new IRS agent mistakenly concluded that the dairy cooperative, Associated Milk Producers, Inc., had too little income to make an expanded audit pay off in tax dollars.

And it said the Justice Department, which had been asked by the IRS to look into possible criminal prosecution of the co-op, misplaced the records of the case until the statute of limitations expired, making any prosecution impossible.

The IRS story — as outlined in the staff report — started when a routine audit of the milk producers found they had spent $90,000 in corporate money to produce a political picture book of former President Lyndon B. Johnson's messages to Congress in 1968. Federal law prohibits corporate donations to political campaigns.

Eventually, the co-op agreed to drop its claim of a tax deduction for this expenditure.

Meanwhile, the co-op hired one of Connally's senior law partners, Marvin Collie of Houston, Tex., to handle the case. Another co-op lawyer, Jake Jacobsen, checked with Connally before hiring Collie and Connally raised no objection.

About the same time, Walters handed a subordinate IRS official a document, apparently drafted by a representative of the co-op, giving its side of the case. The subordinate, Albert Brisbin, was quoted as saying he believed Walters got the document from Connally or one of his aides, but Walters was quoted as saying he is almost certain he got it somewhere else.

In any case, Brisbin gave it to the IRS man in Austin, Tex., Robert Phinney, an old friend and former business partner of Connally. Phinney passed it along to the IRS agent conducting the audit, writing on it, "Al Brisbin quoted Commissioner Walters to me saying, 'Do what's right but let's close it as soon as we can!"

Nevertheless, the agent, Doyle Bond of San Antonio, recommended that the $90,000 matter be sent to the Justice Department for possible criminal action, and that the IRS look at two more years of the milk producers returns.

Records for those years, which surfaced later as a result of Watergate and antitrust investigations, show evidence of illegal political gifts to Republicans and Democrats alike, totalling several hundred thousand dollars.

But the IRS didn't discover that evidence because Bond was taken off the case and the new agent concluded that the co-op had too little income to justify an expanded investigation. Actually, the co-op reported more than $7 million in income in the year the decision was made, the report said.

Although Phinney objected to it, Brisbin referred the $90,000 matter to Justice. The report quoted the head of the criminal division, Henry E. Petersen, as denying that his office acted improperly in misplacing the file until too late to prosecute.

Home Food Bill Rising, Farmers' Share Slides

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures show farmers are getting lower prices than they did a year ago, while consumers are paying about one-fifth more for food.

The Agriculture Department said Friday its farm price index skidded another 6 per cent between May 15 and June 15, putting the indicator 4 per cent below a year earlier.

It was the fourth month in a row that farm prices declined.

But in another report earlier this week, USDA said a market basket of farm-produced food in May sold in retail stores at 19 per cent above year-earlier costs.

The middleman share of food costs has risen partly because just about everything is more expensive these days, including labor and transportation.

But many administration officials, including Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, say those markups could be reduced so that consumers can get lowercost food. Meat prices, in particular, have caused concern.

Reacting to the widening gap between what farmers get for livestock and consumers pay for meat, Butz announced Friday a new task force to examine the markups and come up with recommendations on how they can be trimmed.

"I hope that we can get more efficiency in the whole marketing and distributing and processing chain, and that improved productivity can be passed both ways," Butz said. "Retail prices to consumers should reflect prices to producers, and prices to beef growers should reflect retail prices."

Declining prices for livestock have led the downward march in farm prices for months. As a group, meat animal prices declined another 12 per cent from mid-May to mid-June and averaged 29 per cent below a year earlier.

Cattle prices, for example, were $32.20 per 100 pounds on the hoof, down $4.90 from May and $11.60 below a year earlier. The June 15 average also was $19.40 per 100 pounds below the record last August.

The market basket figures showed retail counter beef in May averaged $1.35 per pound, one cent less than in May 1973.

LITTLE LEAGUE

The first day's mighty have fallen. Winners in the Sanford City Pee Wee and Little League playoff opening games. The Panthers and Jack Prosser Ford, respectively, have tasted defeat.

The Rebels, who fell to the Panthers, 8-4 in their first meeting, bounced back with a 45-29 victory to tie the Pee Wee championships at one game apiece in the best-of-three series.

The Railroaders cut off any early championships hopes Jack Prosser Ford harbored in the Little League playoffs, beating the first-round winners over Seminole Petroleum, 5-1 in a war of nerves.

Prosser Ford had earlier defeated Stromberg Carlson, 5-4 on a three-run Mike Link home run.

Against the heads-up pitching of Solomon Hardy of the Railroaders, Link was held hitless, and Prosser Ford saw its 1-0 second inning lead blown away by five Railroader runs in the fifth inning.

Hardy, who "pitched out" to Link, a powerful home run hitter throughout the season, issued free walks to the Prosser threat every time he came to bat, and limited the rest of his teammates to just two singles.

He had control problems, walking nine while fanning eight, but was sharply effective with runners in scoring position.

Losing pitcher Walter Law, who was touched fo five singles by the Railroaders, fan ied five and walked four.

A bases-loaded single from Tico Perez, and the bunt and run strategy of the fifth inning Railroader uprising payed off with the late inning rally win.

Mark Huaman, Justin Hunt, Andy Russi and Carl Presley also singled for the winners, who played it cautious on the basepaths and took advantage of two Prosser errors with scoring base-running.

Law and Pat Leonard singled for the losers, who had bases-loaded situations in two innings, but they couldn't touch Hardy when the chips were down.

Having to play by regular rules, there were no inning-limits or run rules in the Pee Wee League contest that saw an amazing 74 runs scored in a three-and-one-half hour marathon game.

Brett Von Herbulis, who led all batters with five singles in as many trips to the plate and Bobby Shaw's single were all the hits the winning Rebs had.

The Panthers got four safeties from Tony Cook, two from Mike Baker, Stanley Hodgin and Greg Parker and both Vernon Law, the losing pitcher, and Wayne Story had one base hit.

Mike Knight took the win.

Finals in the Little League will be Monday night.

First Night At Work Hard On Giants' Boss

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Wes Westrum calls managing the San Francisco Giants his "secret ambition," and despite what he saw Friday in his first night on the job, he's not ready to give up just yet.

The Giants blew an early 3-1 lead, allowed 10 runs over the last four innings and bowed to the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-3 for San Francisco's seventh loss in the past eight games.

Five errors by the Giants, three of them in one inning, didn't help their cause — or Westrum's outlook — any. But the 51-year-old skipper, who took over for Charlie Fox earlier Friday, remained undaunted.

"You don't expect me to panic after one game, do you?" he said. "You just have to forget about this game and think about next two we have with them.

"There certainly aren't too many words of wisdom you can say after a game like this."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs and Montreal Expos split a twinight doubleheader, Chicago winning the opener 8-7 in 18 innings — the longest game of the season — and Montreal romping to a 15-0 win in the nightcap. The Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves also split a twi-nighter, Cincinnati taking the first game 6-5 and Atlanta coming back to win the second 1-0 in 10 innings. San Diego nipped Houston 5-4, while St. Louis at New York and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh were rained out.

Dodger relief ace Mike Marshall, who came on in the seventh for Tommy John, 11-2, tied a major league record by appearing in his ninth consecutive game, but was more happy with the come-from-behind victory.

Steve Garvey drove in three of the Dodger runs, raising his league-leading total to 61, while Joe Ferguson smacked a two-run homer.

Reds 6-0, Braves 5-1

Johnny Bench capped a five-run second inning with a tworun single and Tony Perez belted a solo homer in the fifth to carry Cincinnati past Atlanta in the opener of their twi-night doubleheader, but the Braves gained a split by winning the nightcap on Dusty Baker's 10th inning home run.

Cubs 8-0, Expos 7-15

Jerry Morales tripled home Don Kessinger with the winning run in the 18th inning of the first game at Montreal, breaking up the longest major league game of the year and the longest game ever played at Jarry Park. The marathon took four hours, 55 minutes.

In the second game, Dennis Blair, just recalled from the minors, blanked the Cubs on two hits while Ron Hunt drove in five runs and Tim Foli and Jim Cox delivered three RBIs apiece.

Padres 5, Astros 4

Enzo Hernandez singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and then scored what proved to be the game-winner on Nate Colbert's sacrifice fly.

Perry Two Shy Of AL Win Mark

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

They had a friendly little shower for Gaylord Perry in Cleveland Friday night but it simply poured on the Boston Red Sox.

After heavy rains held up the start of the game between the Indians and Red Sox for an hour, the unperturbed Perry went out and stopped Boston 2-1 on three measly singles for his 14th consecutive triumph, just two short of the American League record.

"The rain delay didn't bother me," he said. "We've had a lot of rain this spring. I'm getting used to it."

Not only did the Red Sox suffer their third loss in a row when Dick Drago walked Leron Lee with two out in the ninth inning and George Hendrick doubled him home, but they may have lost All-Star catcher Carlton Fisk for the season.

In scoring the winning run, Lee slid into Fisk, who was blocking the plate, and the catcher suffered ligament damage to his left knee which probably will require surgery.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Oakland A's trounced the Kansas City Royals 7-1, the Minnesota Twins flattened the Chicago White Sox 10-3, the Detroit Tigers outslugged the Milwaukee Brewers 9-7 and the Texas Rangers downed the California Angels 5-3. The New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles were rained out.

Twins 10, White Sox 3

Minnesota's two hobbled sluggers — Tony Oliva and Harmon Killebrew — had big nights. Oliva collected four hits, including a pair of home runs, and Killebrew hit his 552nd career homer. The triumph was the third in a row and fifth in six games for the Twins.

Tigers 9, Brewers 7

Mickey Stanley and rookie Marvin Lane drove in two runs apiece for Detroit. Lane gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead with a two-run homer in the second inning off loser Kevin Kobel and Stanley's bases-loaded single in the sixth boosted the lead to 6-1.

Glenn Abbott stopped Kansas City on six hits.

Charlie O.'s A Great Guy; He 'Gave Away' Williams

ANAHEIM (AP) — Owner Gene Autry of the California Angels says Charlie Finley wouldn't allow Dick Williams to manage any other big league team except the Angels.

Autry, the former movie cowboy, said his friendship with Finley, the Oakland Athletics owner, enabled the Angels to approach and reach agreement with Williams to take over the last-place American League West team.

The Angels fired Bobby Winkles Thursday and hired Williams for 3½ years, starting Monday when the Angels host the Athletics, the team Williams managed to World Series victories the past two years.

"I doubt if we could have made the deal if it wasn't for our friendship with Charlie. He's a helluva guy," said Autry, who met with Finley Wednesday in Oakland.

"He told us, 'If I was dealing with any other club, I wouldn't make the deal.'"

Williams will receive about $100,000 a year from the Angels, which may make him the highest-paid manager in baseball history.

"That's in the ball park," Williams said of the figure.

Williams quit Oakland after the World Series last fall, then signed a contract — reportedly for $100,000 — to manage the New York Yankees. Finley, who had Williams under contract through 1975, had the American League void the contract, then got a court order to prevent Williams from managing any team except Oakland for two seasons.

Williams retired to private business in Florida.

Finley may not be popular in New York but he's the toast of Anaheim after giving his blessing and having the court order rescinded.

Furthermore, Finley, who didn't like the manner in which the Yankees approached him on Williams, said he wouldn't take $10 million in Yankee money for the rights to his services.

He didn't ask for a penny from the Angels in compensation.

"We expected him to make a lot of demands," said Autry, who was in Oakland with coowner Bob Reynolds.

"Then he told us, 'I'm not out for blood. If I wanted to I would ask you for a Nolan Ryan. You can't do that any more than I can give up Reggie Jackson.'"

Williams, 45, said he will take part in a charity game Sunday in Hartford, Conn., then fly to Anaheim. He has a news conference scheduled Monday at noon.

Finley paid Williams about $70,000 last season, which was Dick's eighth as a big league manager. Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Billy Martin of the Texas Rangers and perhaps Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles are the closest to Williams in salary among active managers. Alston, dean of active managers, reportedly is making $80,000 in his 21st season.

The ousted Angel manager, Bobby Winkles, was getting $35,000 this season.

Winkles said Friday that he has two job offers in private business but he's hoping to catch on with another big league club as a coach.

Ashe Sees Wimbledon Salvation

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — At the age of 30, Arthur Ashe doesn't know how many more opportunities there will be for him to strike at tennis super stardom.

He knows he's already blown one, and another is close at hand.

"At the beginning of this year, I set two goals for myself," the slender native of Richmond, Va., said after smashing into the men's third round Friday at Wimbledon. "One of them was to win the WCT finals at Dallas, the other was to win Wimbledon.

"I went to Dallas with high hopes after leading the Green circuit. Then I played miserably against Bjorn Borg. I was disappointed. But here I am at Wimbledon."

The World Championship of Tennis finals, the top prize of the touring pros, went to John Newcombe of Australia, who is the No. 1 seeded favorite for the men's crown here.

And young Borg is having to be protected from screaming, screeching admirers while Ashe plays in semiprivacy on the outside courts.

Ashe looked very sharp — although he didn't think so — in beating the Soviet Union's Taimurez Kakulia 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

"I thought I should do something to help along the summit conference," Arthur remarked impishly afterward, showing that he reads other parts of the paper besides the sports pages and is aware of President Nixon's trip to Moscow.

But it's easy to see that Ashe has his sights on the Wimbledon crown.

Fischer Starts Chess 'Psyche'

NICE, France (AP) — Bobby Fischer has resigned his world chess championship in a dispute with the International Chess Federation over rules for next year's title defense, his representative said today.

But Fred Cramer, who represents the eccentric Brooklyn-born chess genius, said he hoped the matter could be resolved at a meeting of the federation here later today and that Fischer would retract his resignation.

Fischer was reported to be in the Los Angeles area but could not be reached for comment.

Cramer, a federation vice president, said the resignation was included in a cable Friday to federation president Max Euwe.

Fischer became world champion with a triumphant mixture of superb chess and aggressive public relations in a series of games against Russia's Boris Spassky in 1972. He was the first American to gain the world crown since Alexander Alekhine in 1937.

His title defense, under federation rules, is set for next year against a Russian challenger.

I'm Union Man: Dolphin Player

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins' player representative Doug Swift says he's opposed to the National Football League world champions crossing a picket line to play the College All-Stars on July 26.

"If there's a strike called, I don't see why we should play the game," Swift told The Miami News in a telephone interview from his parent's home in Syracuse, N.Y.

Several Dolphins, including veterans Howard Twilley and Norm Evans, have said they want to play the game because it's mostly for charity.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm not necessarily a Dolphin in this," said Swift, a veteran linebacker. "I'm a union man."

The NFL Players' Association has threatened to go on strike Monday against team owners over a series od disputes.

"I think it's in management's interest for a strike to be ralled," Swift said. "They want to test us, I believe, to see how strong we are. If they see us in camp and some of the other players running in all directions, I think it would hurt our position."

Swift said Twilley had written to NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey on behalf of several players, saying the Dolphins should play the All-Star game that traditionally opens the NFL exhibition season.

Not Enough Gas, But Plenty Of Ducks

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Preparations for Sunday's Schaefer 500 mile championship auto race continued indoors today, leaving the 2½-mile Pocono International Raceway to the many ducks and other wild animals which regularly inhabit it.

The key to the right mixture of fuel economy and power was the object of concern to many crews readying their cars for the $400,000 event. Several teams have yet to find a way to make their alloted 280 gallons of methanol fuel last the race. And the unpredictable mountain climate is giving them more troubles.

Meanwhile, race officials were trying to roust the herds of wild animals that scurry across the track in front of the cars.

"This place is crawling with animals," said Indianapolis 500 winner Johnny Rutherford. "A duck ran across the track in front of me during practice the other day.

Heavy Rains Return Good Fishing

LET'S GO FISHING With Bob Orrell

In last week's column we said the low water in the rivers and lakes was hurting fishing, and that only some heavy rains would ease the situation. The paper had hardly hit the streets when the rains started.

As a result, we have taken some good natured kidding this week about ordering "too much rain," or having some kind of "political pull" with the weatherman.

Be that at it may, reports of high water and good fishing have been numerous this week.

Irene Faulk of Camp Seminole on the Wekiva River tells of a rise of 26 inches from the low water mark and mentioned several good strings of catfish landed since the rains began. The Wayne Harmon family brought in a good catch and Vernon Garman and wife had an equally good day.

Jake Shedd and son found bluegills and shellcrackers biting along with a few catfish to add weight to their stringer.

On the lower part of the Wekiva, several parties out of the Wekiva River Haven Camp located bass, the best string being a catch of six. Three different catches of catfish, numbering 15-20 per boat, were landed while the rain poured down.

Lake Jessup anglers were not venturing very far from camp, according to Lowell Hiley. With one eye on the cork and the other on the river, Bob Swager, Harmon Williams and Olin Williams managed to take 45 bluegills and shellcrackers.

Catfish have been mixed with the bream catches; Roger Broomfield and David Lamuert took nine nice cats near Howell Creek. Ralph Clark and Paul Nichols of Orlando had a combined catch of 16 catfish late last week and later, Clark took 15 as he fished solo.

David Hiley and Jess Gessner also landed seven cats.

The St. Johns River yielded an 11 pound bass to a fisherman out of Osteen Bridge Camp early in the week and another party out of the same camp had a beautiful catch of 85 bream.

Here too, the catfish catches have been good with a couple of strings of 35 to 40 per boat coming in.

This is is probably the best report for this area in many weeks and the camp operators all are giving credit to the rising water.

Around Marina Isle, bream fishing has improved greatly with crickets the best bait.

A few school bass made an appearance near Lemon Bluff Camp Sunday morning early. For a while it looked like the striking grounds should look with schools of shimmering minnows breaking the surface and bass exploding the stillness as they fed.

RASH, DILLARD WITH BASS

The Lake Monroe seawall again is producing some good catches—mostly bream, but speckled perch have been hitting here this week also. One customer bought a dozen live minnows and returned a short while later with eight specks to show off.

Jerry Dillard and Ernie Rash stopped by the Seminole Sporting Goods Store to display four beautiful bass they landed in an inland lake using live shiners for bait.

Puzzle Lake, which has been one of the best bass spots in recent weeks, failed to produce for Jake Knight and Tom "Hoppy" Hopkins on their latest excursion. A hard day of fishing only yielded three small bass, and that is way below par for this pair.

Fred Knight at the Plaza Sports Shop told of several reports of tarpon in the surf South of Daytona. This was backed up by some of the pier operators who said many of the silver kings had been hooked, but few landed.

A Virginia visitor to the Main Street Pier hit the jackpot with an eight-and-a-half pound sea trout Thursday and a four pound flounder. The trout was entered in the Daytona Chamber of Commerce tournament.

Other catches for the day included a nine pound drum, angelfish, spots and sheepshead.

Stormy weather has kept all the charter craft at the docks for most of the week but with the passing of the current tropical depression, action is slated to resume this weekend.

Wayne Brady at the "Fishin' Hole" in Daytona relayed information of "gator" trout hitting top water lures in Mosquito Lagoon in the early morning hours. Bridges have been extra good until rain slowed the fishermen down and in the Tomoka area, snook and tarpon are plentiful.

Fight Looms For Florida Fan Dollar

MIAMI (AP) — With the World Football League's season opener set for July 11, the men who sell Florida college football are girding for what is shaping up as an epic battle for the sports fan's dollar.

The winners get full stadiums. The losers probably will go the way of the University of Miami and Georgia Tech in Atlanta, both awash in red ink in the wake of successful pro teams.

By next year, Florida's seven million people will have more major league football teams — four pro, six college — to choose from than New York City, population 10 million.

Most of those teams — three pro, five college — are tucked between Tampa Bay and the Georgia line in North Central Florida, population under three million.

"What happens between the WFL and the colleges depends on what they do and what we do" in the win-loss column, University of Florida athletic assistant Norm Carlson said Thursday from Gainesville.

Gainesville, once clearly the center of "Gator Country," now finds itself precariously planted between the WFL's Jacksonville Sharks to the north and the Florida Blazers in Orlando to the south.

And in 1975, a National Football League team gears up in Tampa.

"One thing certain, the new teams will dilute the press coverage for all of us," says Carlson.

Carlson says sales of UF's season tickets — at $48 for six home games — have dropped off about 8 per cent from last year.

Anticipating problems, the Gators have scrapped night games and are considering major staff changes to help the school "become more aggressive in promotion," said Carlson.

Smaller Florida schools say they've encountered few problems from the WFL — yet.

"We attract the small college fan, and that's a different type of football fan," says Roscoe Camp, public relations director of private and predominantly black Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach.

R.N. Niles, athletic business manager at mostly black Florida A&M in Tallahassee, also sees no pro intrusion yet. But he remembers that nearly 15, 000 expected fans failed to show up for the Rattlers' Orange Blossom Classic last year, played in Miami during the Dolphins' 13-game winning streak.

Florida State, formerly the Gators' only rival for football dominance, is recovering from a winless season last year with ticket sales so far barely reaching 1972 levels.

"We'd like to do more, but after the financial bath we took last season, everything has to be adjusted to a tight budget," said an FSU spokesman.

The announcement of an NFL franchise for the Bay area in 1975 has actually boosted 1974 ticket sales at the University of Tampa, says UT promotion official Rick Hensler.

"Football interest has been heightened by the announcement," he said, adding that university development efforts are being stepped up and that "next year remains to be seen."

Bethune-Cookman's Camp says colleges and pros aren't the only ones who will be competing for the football dollar.

"The people who really stand to lose are the high schools," says Camp. "They're caught on Friday nights between the Wednesday night World League games and the Saturday college games. They'll be hurt the most by wall-to-wall football."

The WFL owners say business is booming. College officials have from mid-July until their seasons open in September to see how much of that business is theirs.

Sharks spokesman Jim Chitwood claims about 18,000 season tickets sold — many at a bargain $3 per game for 10 games, and many of those from the neighboring South Georgia towns of Waycross, Savannah and Valdosta.

Blazers ticket manager Charlie Vasseur claims "in excess of 5,000 seats sold" at $9, $8, and $6 apiece for 10 games, even though the team has yet to come to Orlando from training camp in Virginia.

"Sales should get a lot brisker when the team gets here and everyone gets to see them as real, live people," said Vasseur.

Volatile Weiskopf One Under Par, Leads Western Open Golf Tourney

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, who once had one of the shortest tempers in the business, says it takes patience to handle the subtle terrors of the Butler National Golf Club course.

"It's a demanding course, a very exacting course," Weiskopf said Friday after his one-under-par 70 had given him a one-stroke lead over Al Geiberger following two rounds of the $200,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

"You have to have a lot of patience to play it.

"If you're playing good, it's a lot of fun," he said, then offered a wry grin.

"But I can see how, if you're playing bad, it'll make you curse and cry and scream and tear your hair," he said.

Weiskopf's total for two trips over the 7,002 yards of trees, trouble and traps that make up the new layout was 141. That's one under par and the only subpar figure after two rounds.

Geiberger, who had a 71, was even with par at 142.

All the rest were over, some were many, many over. And, as Weiskopf said, there was plenty of crying, screaming and tearing of hair as the touring pros found par difficult on an unyielding master for the third week in a row.

Billy Casper, a four-time Western winner and the defending champion, had a 78 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 156.

Bob Goalby, who shared the first round lead, blew to a second round 80.

Lanny Wadkins once shared the second round lead, then went double bogey-double bogey.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin once had the lead alone — then hit two shots in the water and made a quadruple-bogey eight on the 10th hole.

Longshot Gary Sanders led alone with three holes to play and finished double bogey-bogey-bogey for a 72 and 143. He was tied for third at that figure with Tom Watson, Bobby Mitchell, Tom Evans and Larry Wise. Watson had a 71, Mitchell 70, Wise 69 and Evans had a course record 67.

Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino each struggled to a 72-146 total.

OAK BROOK, Ill (AP) — Top second round scores Friday in the $200,000 Western Open Golf tournament on the 7,002-yard, par 71 Butler National Golf Club course:

Tom Weiskopf	71-70—141
Al Geiberger	71-71—142
Tom Watson	72-71—143
Bobby Mitchell	73-70—143
Larry Wise	74-69—143
Tom Evans	76-67—143
Gary Sanders	71-72—143

Newfoundland Race

CLARENVILLE, Newfoundland (AP) — The United States riders increased their lead over the Canadian national team Friday during the International Cross-Newfoundland Bicycle Race.

Over-all leader John Howard of the United States crossed the finish line in Friday's leg from Gander, Newfoundland, in three hours, 42 minutes and 40 seconds, inches ahead of countryman Wayne Stetina.

Over-all, the United States leads with a time of 42 hours, 49 minutes and 51 seconds followed by Canada at 43:03:58. Quebec is third with 43:04:52.

Robinson As Boss?

ANAHEIM (AP) — Deposed California manager Bobby Winkles says he recommended that the Angels make Frank Robinson his successor.

"He's got a good baseball mind and I told Harry he would make a good manager," Winkles said he told Angel General Manager Harry Dalton.

But Robinson was not named to the position. Instead, Dalton maneuvered Dick Williams out of baseball exile with a $350,000 offer over three years and Williams will arrive to take over the club Monday.

Robinson did not appear distraught Friday over again being snubbed as baseball's first black manager.

Russians Lead

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Vladimir Buriakov of Russia took a narrow lead over Russell Fritts of the United States Friday in the men's decathlon at the teenage track meet between the two countries.

Buriakov finished five of the 10 events with a total of 3,947 points, followed by Fritts 3,858, Anatole Novikov of Russia 3,790 and Steve Alexander of the United States 3,410.

Coaching Shero?

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fred Shero, who coached the Philadelphia Flyers to the Stanley Cup this year, is seeking a little coaching himself.

Shero announced Friday he has signed a long-term contract for management with Mark Stewart of Sports International Inc.

According to Shero, the contract, perhaps the first of its kind for a coach, will provide him with professional services in his financial, personal and career management.

Simon Retires

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Kentucky Colonels forward Walt Simon has announced his retirement after 12 seasons.

The 6-foot-4 Simon, who played 7½ seasons with the New York Nets and 4½ seasons with the Colonels, said he plans to enter business here and may become a scout for the Colonels.

Soccer 'Wingers' Key To World Cup

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — George Raynor, one of the most successful coaches in the history of the World Soccer Cup, predicts the 1974 tournament will be won by a winger.

"Watch Johnny Rep of Holland and Grzegorz Lato of Poland," he said. "They could be the key men in this World Cup."

Raynor, an Englishmen who has never coached in his native country, scored an amazing success as coach of the all-amateur Swedish team when the World Cup was staged in Sweden in 1958. The Swedes, against all predictions, reached the final.

Previously he coached in Hungary and has often been given the credit for starting Hungary's rise in international soccer.

By extolling wingers in an interview, Raynor went directly against poplar fashion. Most of the teams still in contention don't use wingers in the old-fashioned sense of the word.

"But wingers have always won the World Cup ever since 1950," Raynor said.

"That year it was Ghiggia of Uruguay, in 1954 it was Helmut Rahn of West Germany and in 1958 and 1962 it was Garrincha of Brazil."

Raynor admitted his theory broke dwn in 1966, when England won the cup on their home ground.

"I am cheating a bit there, because although Alan Ball played with a No. 7 on his back he was really a midfielder," he said. "But 1970 was the year of Jairzinho, who scored for Brazil in every round."

Raynor said the men he had named were not necessarily the best players on their teams, but they proved decisive watch winners.

The two wingers Raynor singled out in the present tournament have been outstanding performers thus far. Lato shares top scoring honors with his Polish teammate Andrzej Szarmach with five goals, and Rep has scored four.

Meanwhile, Jairzinho, Brazil's winning winger of 1970, is playing for the defending champions again. But he has been used in midfield for most of this tournament.

It is possible for Lato and Rep to be on opposing sides in the final at Munich's Olympic Stadium July 7. Poland and Holland are in different groups in the second round and both are well placed to win their group and advance.

Holland, new favorites at odds of 13-8 according to the London bookies, is expected to win again Sunday when it faces an East German team hit by injuries.

The East Germans will be without key defender Erich Hamann and possibly without another defender, Siegmar Waetzlich. A reserve, Joachim Fritsche, has the flu.

Holland faces East Germany in Group A, and Brazil plays Argentina, also plagued with injury troubles, in the same group.

AMOROS CATCHES BERRA FLY

New York, 1955

It's called the greatest rivalry in baseball, and this year's Dodger-Yankee clash in the 1955 World Series is no exception.

After the Yanks beat the Dodgers in the first two games it looked as if the same old script had been brought out for one more drama.

"Wait til next year" was already being heard along Flatbush Avenue in Brooklyn.

The Dodgers have been in the World Series six times in their long, colorful history. Never have they won it all and no team has ever lost the first two games of a series and emerged world champions.

But the Dodgers don't roll over that easy this time. The big bats of Roy Campanella, Duke Snider and Gil Hodges along with some great pitching by young Johnny Podres give the Dodgers three straight victories.

The Yanks even it up in the sixth game. It's all come down to this seventh and final showdown.

Podres, pitching for Brooklyn, has a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the sixth inning, but he's in trouble. He's walked Billy Martin and Gil McDougald beat out a bunt. The Yankees are threatening and Yogi Berra is up.

Berra hits a fly ball down the left field line. It looks like a hit — maybe extra bases. Racing towards the ball is Brooklyn leftfielder Sandy Amoros. He was playing Berra in leftcenter making his dash for the ball all the farther. Can he get it?

Amoros sticks out his glove as he approaches the fence. He's got it. Sandy spins and throws the ball to Pee Wee Reese who relays it to Gil Hodges and doubles off McDougal at first base. The Rally and the Yankees are dead.

Podres goes on to hold the Yankees at bay. "Next year" has finally arrived arrived for the long waiting fans in Brooklyn. The Dodgers are champions of the world.

Sandy Amoros makes catch of Berra fly ball in 1955 World Series.

School Major Factor In Child's Problems

By MARK WEINTZ
Herald Staff Writer

Modern medicine has virtually eliminated those diseases which once weighed heavily against a child— any child, anywhere — ever reaching manhood.

Diseases that once terrified parents have largely been eliminated entirely or medicines discovered and treatment refined to the point that they are now regarded more as inconveniences than preludes to tragedy.

But there remains one problem area that was virtually ignored for years and is just becoming the subject of serious discussion and debate within medical and academic circles.

This mysterious disease: Emotional problems.

The theory now under debate: Are the emotional problems brought into the schools or caused by the schools.

As might be expected psychologists differ, although there seems to be a consenses that the schools play a larger role than has been generally assumed.

"School plays an important part in creating behaviors considered inappropriate," says Dr. Richard Tucker, assistant professor of psychology at Florida Technological University (FTU).

He is not alone in his thinking. David Elkind, professor of psychology at University of Rochester (N.Y.) says, "When a child is given to understand that his world resides in what he achieves, rather than what he is, academic failure becomes a severe emotional trauma."

Tucker on the other hand tends to discount the achievement theory. He feels the major problem area is the way teachers respond to 'different' behavior.

As he points out," I see teachers attending to the wrong kind of behavior in the classroom. They tend to the negative — with punishment or reprimand — and what they should be doing is recognizing the positive. The good actions of students should be noticed.

An opposing view is offered by Dr. Burton Blau, clincial psychologist and associate professor at FTU, who says emotional problems are created in the home and only made more obvious by the schools.

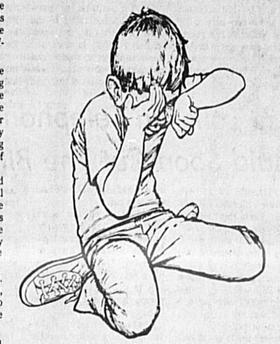
Seminole County School Supt. William P. "Bud" Layer, says, "Sure, school contributes to emotional problems — to some extent."

Layer said the county school office employs two psychologists whose main function is to administer tests to students to determine which students should be placed in special programs for the emotionally disturbed.

"There are now 351 students on the waiting list to be tested," Layer says adding that the number of emotional problems appear to be on the rise.

Moreover, the county school office is scheduled a psychometrist in July and sole function will be to give the tests, Layer said.

"The problem is definitely increasing, but, I feel it is mainly due to the inability of certain young people to cope with the many rapid changes; moving from one area to another and a lack of security at home being the main factors in the problem," according to Layer.



The psychology of a changing environment is also cited by many psychologists as a reason for emotional instability.

Psychologist have long been divided as to what has the greatest impact on children — the school or the home.

Tucker feels the school system has long been "unique in that it blames the failure of the product (students) on the product. Teachers should be held accountable for what they produce in the classroom," he says.

However, Tucker feels the process of socialization begins in the home and it would be unfair to hold teachers accountable for much of the success or failure in that area.

Elkind cites loss of faith among adults as a major factor producing change in children. "...Today we are undergoing a genuine loss of faith in reason and its handmaidens, science and technology."

He explains the youth of today have less with which to identify...everything is changing so rapidly the young people are having problems establishing an identity according to Elkind.

"The term identity crisis has been misused. People have always questioned their identity, wonder where they were going in life, but I feel that the advent of mass communication has made people more aware of the search for identity," Blau explains.

"Nonetheless we still have to resolve the identity problem. I think teachers are concerned for the growth of each individual student, but what can you do when there are 35 or more students in a class?" Blau asks, referring to emotional problems caused by schools. But, he reiterated, "if a student is going to have emotional problems those problems will usually begin in the home."

On the other hand, Tucker says some of the innovations of science and technology could be applied to education "I don't think we are applying the resources we have in education. We have the capacity to do fantastic things in education, but what is happening is we are moving away from the standards of excellence."

Tucker is an advocate of setting a high standard for students, while Elkind indicates a major part of the growth of emotional problems lies with the very fact that students are constantly confronted with the word achievement.

"Again, the emphasis on achievement is a function of the home environment," Blau says. "Success orientation is propagated in the home. It is a part of our middle class values," he adds.

It is Elkind's theory that being judged by classroom achievements does little for a student except shelter him from reality.

"I am afraid that we are going to see more and more children whose emotional problems are the result, rather than the cause of, school failure Elkind reasons.

"If teachers were more attuned to emotional problems it would be helpful, but what it boils down to is that we need more teachers. The system needs to be modified to meet the needs of the students," Blau says, adding , "It is difficult to change the system and I think the people who run the school system are trying to do so, but they are faced with multiple problems."

In Seminole County students with emotional problems of a short-term nature are counselled by the Mental Health Association, Layer says, adding that not all schools are staffed with a psychologist.

"At some point in time the school system will come into line with the needs of the children, but right now it is impossible to tell when that will be," Blau affirms.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Fifty students from Florida are included in the 895 on the dean's list of Bob Jones University, Greenville, S.C. Students listed earned at least a B average during the second semester.

Those included from the Seminole area are Harrison Dale Goembel, freshman, son of Glen G. Goembel of 2472 Sanford Ave., Sanford, and the late Mrs. Goembel.

Bob Jones University, known as the "World's Most Unusual University," is a liberal arts, coeducational, Christian institution. Each year the university matriculates more than 5,000 students who come from every state in the Union and about 40 foreign countries and territories.

Women Help Open Space Agency's Doors

By FRANK MACOMBER
The Herald Service

Another federal government agency has turned its attention to giving women and minorities a boost up.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has launched the National Aerospace Fellowship Program, a pilot project, to encourage women and minority group members to seek careers in engineering and some scientific fields.

The space agency has firmed up agreements with seven colleges and universities to award 20 aerospace fellowships to students in their junior or senior year who are in the top third of their class and have displayed a potential for space-related science or engineering.

Dr. Dudley McConnell, NASA's assistant administrator for equal opportunity programs, says if the program is successful this year it will be expanded in the next academic period.

"We're trying a number of things to increase the flow of minorities and women into aerospace fields," McConnell explains. "This program is new and exciting, and as we work out the kinks it may change during the year. But the goal of the program is clear.

"NASA also will continue to increase the number of minorities and women in cooperative work-study programs. We are providing a range of options to attract and encourage outstanding minorities and women into technical areas."

Students who achieve outstanding records in the fellowship program will be offered jobs with NASA when they graduate if appropriate job vacancies exist, according to McConnell.

Participating schools and the number of fellowships are: Howard University, Washington, D.C., four; Goucher College, Towson, Md., two; Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C. two; Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., two; Spelman College, Atlanta, two; New Mexico Highlands University, Las Vegas, N.M., four and Southeastern State College, Durant, Okla., four.

Each fellowship-winning minority member or woman student receives $2,500 for the academic year to cover tuition, fees, books, supplies, and other education-related costs.

Fellowship recipients also are being invited to work at NASA installations this summer. They will be reimbursed at the prevailing rate for federal summer intern participants — about $600 a month.

Four centers have been selected by students for their summer jobs.

Exercise Care With Kids' Eyes

By SHIRLEY GALLINA
Herald Services

LOS ANGELES — Your youngster is forever running into the doorjam or when he tries to get something from a shelf, he drops it.

You think he is just clumsy or careless.

Maybe, or maybe not.

"Children with perceptual problems have a spatial disorganization," says Dr. John E. Chase of nearby Torrance, an optometrist specializing in development vision.

"When they look at a thing, they don't relate to where the object really is. It's and orientation problem.

"Little things, like spilling milk or missing the door are what these children do. They seem clumsy, and often trip."

Dr. Chase says children with perceptual problems have trouble hopping or catching a ball, and they are more apt to stumble on stairs.

"The hyperactive youngster will have a tendency to hurry up and down the stairs.

"But the other type will just freeze. He'll hang onto the banister, or want help. He's scared to go up or down."

Dr. Chase says it is often the child who walks early (between 9 and 11 months) and who skips the creeping stage who will develop the perceptual problems.

When he says "creeping," he means moving about on both legs and arms.

"Many of these youngsters haven't developed the coordination between their body sides. That is what is called an 'interweaving of body sides,'" says Dr. Chase, an associate member of the College of Optometry in Vision Development.

"This type often will show lack of coordination of both sides of the body so they don't work together as a team.

"They will have trouble in skipping rope, catching a ball or hitting a ball.

"There is a good chance they might show hyperactivity and they forge ahead without thinking.

"They will climb up on a bed or bathtub to get into things, then slip and fall.

"They do things without thinking about them. As they don't handle their bodies well enough, they fall."

Dr. Chase says a youngster like this who is swinging a bat or a stick can't judge distance, and he is apt to hit someone or a wall accidentally.

"These youngsters seem to be accident-prone, and they're always the ones who get the bawling out."

Dr. Chase says the child with perceptual problems often is lower in his general development. He will have trouble with simple things like hopping, and seems constantly to have accidents.

With such an accident-prone child, it's a good idea to check and see if he does have perceptual problems and have them corrected.

Mrs. Swain, Mrs. Murray Co-Host Thompson Shower

Mrs. L. M. Swain and Mrs. Edna Murray were co-hostesses for a miscellaneous shower honoring Miss Sheryl Thompson, bride-elect of Steven Walthers, at the home of Mrs. Swain, 914 West 20th St., Sanford.

Gerbera daisies and greenery adorned the Florida Room and entrance to the living room. Sheryl greeted her guests attired in a red and white print dress, complemented by white accessories and a white carnation corsage, a gift from the hostesses.

An identical corsage was presented to Mrs. John Carver, grandmother of the honoree.

A cake elaborately decorated in pink and green with figurines at a "Wishing Well", was served with lime sherbet punch, nuts and rainbow mints.

Other guests included: Mmes. S. T. Nix, Joe T. Corley, Joe L. Corley, Naomi Durham, Noah Booth, Joseph Picone, Ray VanLandingham, Gloria Walters, V. M. Arnette, Hostess gift was a set of eight green crystal goblets.

The refreshment table, overlaid with white lace over blue, held a centerpiece of pink and white daisies, baby's breath and fern, flanked by two branched crystal candelabra with pink tapers.

Quotable Women

By The Associated Press

Here are some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"I'll never leave that place. I've been offered open-end contracts and everything, but this is going to be my life." One-time film star Betty Hutton, lately housekeeper-cook of a Rhode Island catholic rectory, at a New York $100-a-plate dinner in her honor.

"That you sentence me is of some importance. For how long you sentence me is of no relevance to anything. I regard it with the contempt it deserves." Dr. Bridget Rose Dugdale, sentenced to nine years imprisonment for art theft by a Dublin, Ireland, court.

"It was an outrage and a shock. Six of us got together and said this nonsense has got to stop. Today, we have about 6,000 people on our list. Why do people have to be defined by race, or sex or age?" Margaret Kuhn, speaking in protest of doctor's treatment of the aged on behalf of the Gray Panthers at the American Medical Association convention in Chicago.

"The terrorists ran up our stairs shooting at every door. I turned off all the lights, and we pushed the piano against the door to keep them out." Hanna Halevi, a 24-year-old housewife who survived an Arab terrorist attack on her apartment building in Nahariyya, Israel.

"After five years, if this hadn't come about, I don't know when I would have given up hope. This has renewed me." Mrs. Walter Gourley, whose Air Force son is missing in Laos, after the Laotian government reported it would forward her last letter to him.

MARGARET WINGFIELD SMITH

Margaret W. Smith To Wed B. Rodlun

Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Brooke Smith of 118 N. Summerlin Avenue, Sanford, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Margaret Wingfield Smith, to Barry Andrew Rodlun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rodlun of 323 Claremont Road, Lake Mary.

Born in Miami Shores, the bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. Howard Parrish of Birmingham, Ala.

She is a 1970 graduate of Seminole High School where she was a member of The Marching Band, Swim Team and Pep Club. Miss Smith was graduated from Seminole Jr. College in April, 1973, and is employed at a doctor's office.

Her fiance, who was born in Lake Hurst, N. J., is the grandson of Mrs. Katherine Elmore of Port Orange.

At Seminole High School where he graduated in 1971, he was president of Interact Club and was a member of Latin Club and Science Club. He is presently serving a tour of duty with the U. S. Navy.

The wedding will be an event of Aug. 10 at 2 p.m., at All Souls Catholic Church, Sanford.

How To Alter Dress And Make It Lovely

By JANET ROHAN
The Herald Services

If the shoe fits, wear it.

The same might be said of clothing — particularly home-sewn fashions. Many seamstresses can tell a sad tale of trying to save money on a new outfit or making a special garment simply because the right garment couldn't be found ready-made.

The tale may end — well, I saved money on material, but it didn't fit so I never even hung the outfit in the closet.

Mary Behlman, a representative of Simplicity patterns, offers home sewers some ideas on altering patterns before the material is cut.

"It's much easier to alter the tissue paper than it is the dress," says Miss Behlman, who has a home economics background from Stout University in Wisconsin.

She says figures are usually categorized into seven figure types, young junior-teen, junior petite, junior, miss petite, misses, half-size and women's. However, most women, even if they find the correct category, will not fit their pattern perfectly.

Waistlines may have to be shortened, hips widened or shoulders squared off to get a good fit.

Before the seamstress can make the alterations it is necessary that she know "her figure type." This type is determined by two measurements — your height and your back waist measurements.

The young junior teen has a very small, high bustline and larger waistline in proportion to the bust.

Junior petite is designed for a short, well-developed figure with small body build. It has a shorter waist length than any other type.

The junior figure is slightly shorter than the misses. It is also a well-developed figure. Miss petite is designed for a figure that is as well-proportioned and well-developed as the misses but [illegible] The waist length is shorter than the misses but the bust and hips are the same size with a slightly larger waist.

Misses type is often considered the tallest type and still could be considered the average figure with good proportions.

Next is the half-size. This figure is well developed but has narrower shoulders on a shorter frame. The waist is larger in proportion to bust than to other mature figure types.

The women's size caters to the fully mature figure. The height is about the same as the misses, however, because of a fuller back, it has a longer back waist length.

To determine one's figure type and how to alter the pattern, Mary says, "you must first determine where your waist is and the location of your neckline."

By tying a cord around the center area of the body, the cord will find the waistline. The neckline also is found with a cord loosely placed around the neck. The cord will rest on the large vertebrae at the base of the neck.

The top of the shoulder is found by tying other cords around the top of the arm and underneath. By locating the shoulder top, the base of the neckline and the waistline, the seamstress can do almost all the altering that is necessary for the top portion of a garment.

Mary recommends that "someone else help with determining these areas" on your body.

The bust area also has to be considered when fitting a pattern. However, both the full-bust measurement and the high-bust measurement, which goes underneath the armpit, have to be considered.

The bustline darts should angle toward the fullest part of the bust and end "Within one inch of that area." If the seamstress needs to lower or raise the bustline, "she must move the whole area up or down and bring the darts to the same [illegible] of tissue paper."

Nancy's Newsnotes

WINTER SPRINGS — The busing of a number of Winter Springs middle school children 23 miles each day to Jackson Heights Middle School in Oviedo, is a matter of deep concern for the parents of those students involved.

Principal Gordon Hathaway and Assistant Principal James Jones gave me a tour of the school and answered many questions in an effort to clear up misconceptions that have surrounded their school.

From 1952 to 1960 construction on the present school site was done piecemeal. There are two sections laid out similiar to Longwood Elementary School, the older section is far from modern, but contains larger classrooms, while the newer section is more appealing to the eye. Both sections are scheduled for renovation — carpeting, painting and air conditioning — in the next nine months.

Until 1967, Jackson Heights was an all-black elementary school for the first six grades, and then the six and seven grades. When intergration arrived the school gradually lost the all black image and by last year the school, on double sessions, was 83 per cent white and 17 per cent black.

Over a million dollars was allocated this year for construction of a large, modern addition, which will contain rooms for band, exceptional children programs, four science labs, UAV rooms, home economics rooms, art, planning, administrative offices, library, and nine general classrooms. In 1975-1976 an industrial arts classroom will be added. Completion date for the new addition has been set for January 1975.

Until that time eight portable classrooms will be utilized to provide additional room for eighth grade students. The school will be on single sessions, housing approximately 676 students with a teacher-student ratio of 20 to 35.

Jackson Heights has a satellite lunch program with meals being prepared at Lawton Elementary School in Oviedo. Last year the cafeteria was used for classrooms and the children ate in their rooms. With the addition of portable units, it is hoped that the cafeteria can return to its original function.

The school is on a naturally wooded 36 acre lot and, for that reason, has been chosen as one of the two schools in Seminole County to institute a pilot science program termed, "outdoor classroom." Utilizing the animlas and plant life that abourds on the site, there will be three science programs offered. The sixth grade will study Earth science, the seventh grade, life science and the eighth grade, physical science.

Band is the only extra-curricular activity being offered until the addition is completed, but a sports program is under consideration.

The Board of Adjustment recently notified residents of the Ranchlands who own horses or ponies, that they were in violation of the zoning classification of the area which does not allow animals unless an exception has been granted by the Board.

Due to the resignation of one of the Planning and Zoning Board members and the proposed ordinance raising the members of the Board of Adjustment from three to five members, there are openings on both Boards.

The Mayor makes appointments to the board which must be ratified by a majority of the council.

Chauvinism Goes When Roles Changed

ENFIELD, Conn. (AP) — By switching family roles, Elwood and Alma Exley say they have created a "dechauvinized" household.

"When we first got married 10 years ago, I didn't help with the housework. Alma was working and she just accepted that she had to take care of the house too. With this role reversal of ours, things have broken down as far as what is woman's work and what is man's work," said Elwood.

For six months, Elwood took over the daily responsibilities of raising a young child and running a household while his wife went back to work as a junior high school teacher. Elwood worked as a night editor for a local newspaper.

"During this time, we developed an understanding of the other person's role. She knew what it was like to work and come home to a spouse and child, and I knew what it was like to take care of my son Zack, now 4 years old, and the house," said Elwood.

The time he spent with his son was gratifying. "It was really great to be so close to my son at what was an important age. It's too bad more fathers can't be that close to their children when they're growing up," said Elwood, who was given credit by Alma for toilet training Zack.

"Elwood now knows how demanding it is to take care of kids. I came home one day and he hadn't done anything. The laundry was sitting at the top of the stairs and I asked, 'What have you done around here?' We both burst out laughing," said Alma.

Although their roles have once again changed with the birth of a girl, Alexandra, Alma says once the children reach school age, she plans to return to work.

"I really enjoy being home with the children. I worked for six years before Zack was born so I know what it is like. I consider this a vacation. I'd love to give Elwood a chance to be home. I think it's unfair for a man to work year in and year out without a break."

Alma says she would recommend their style of living to other young couples.

"It's just the greatest for our kids to have two parents. In our society children don't have two parents; the fathers are too busy working to get ahead and can't spend the time they should with their families. It's so much easier for a woman to raise children when she has someone to help her.

"Women aren't the only ones suited to raising children. I think men also have this quality."

Alma notes that Elwood helps with the cooking by baking bread and rolls for the family in addition to cultivating their organic foods garden.

Less Talk On Telephone Could Soon Cut The Bills

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Public Service Commissioner Paula Hawkins says the PSC should adopt rates recognizing that some people gab less on the telephone than others.

She says she plans to propose to the PSC Monday a "budget lifeline service" allowing telephone subscribers to buy limited service at half-price.

Customers would get 30 calls a month, an average of one day, for the basic half-price rate and would have to pay 5 cents each for extra calls.

"Our senior citizens, school teachers and traveling business people should not be required to pay for service they are not receiving," Mrs. Hawkins says. "If a person chooses to place only 15 calls each month, that person should only be required to pay for those 15 calls."

Ken Mingledorff, Mrs. Hawkins' aide, says he is one of the frequent travelers who must pay full fare for a telephone that sits idle while he's on the road.

"I'm never home," Mingledroff says. "Why should I have to pay the same rate as someone who's got a teen-age daughter at home making calls all the time?"

The budget service rate proposed by Mrs. Hawkins would run a bit more than $4 a month in most Florida cities, about 14 cents each for the first 30 calls.

Linen Shower For Ms. Harper

Mrs. Louis Temple and daughter, Judy Temple, were co-hostesses for a linen shower at their home 2606 Iroquis Ave., Sanford honoring Daneen Harper, bride-elect of Hal Read, New Smyrna Beach.

The party area was decorated with arrangements of shrimp plants and greenery. Hostess gift was a hand-cut glass pitcher and matching candy dish. The honoree was also presented a pink and white carnation corsage to complement her ensemble.

The refreshment table was highlighted by a center arrangement of red, pink and white carnations, pintas and gerbera daisies, flanked by white tapers in silver holders.

Lime sherbet punch was served from a silver punch bowl, surrounded by fern along with marmalade petit fours, topped with pastel roses, assorted open face and ribbon sandwiches, nuts and cream mints.

Invited guests included, Mrs. E. C. Harper Jr., mother of the honoree; Mrs. Harold J. Read, mother of the future bridegroom and Mmes. Bretice Read, George Touhy, Henry Hernandez, Joseph Dennison, Daniel Smith, Jean Jacoby, Kenneth Hickson, Fred Collum, Ellsworth Harper, E. C. Harper Sr., Sal Manfree, G. A. Speer, Steve Ward, Herbert Stenstrom, Relda McCall, Jean Marcel and the Misses Lisbeth and Beverly Read, Anne Abrams, Susan and Sylvia Williams, Jolene Dennison, Joan Jacoby, Lori and Jill Harper, Cindy Johnson, Sharyn Stenstrom and Tara Marcel.

Farewell Party

DELTONA — A farewell party was given for Mrs. Paul (Pauline) Rose, director and organizer of the Deltona Woman's Club Choral Group, by members of the group on June 20 at the Deltona Inn.

Following cocktails and luncheon, Mrs. Eleanor Robbins, chairman of the event and 21 members enacted a skit depicting Pauline's life as a gifted musician and choral leader.

The group presented Pauline a gold baby grand piano charm center with a diamond for her bracelet.

Six years ago, Pauline founded the Woman's Club Chorus, which grew from six members to 21. She is now moving to Lake Mary and is resigning as director of the chorus.

"But first we are going to travel — my husband Paul and I — because I have promised him that we will take this trip for a long, long time," she said. "We are going to Mexico, Canada, Texas and California, and will return in about six months to our new home."

Mrs. Robbins will serve as temporary director of the group.

Woman Pays Most In 'Oldest Profession'

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Is a man who buys sexual favors as guilty as the woman who sells them?

The question is being debated in two separate court actions and in the Louisiana Legislature. Prostitution laws in most Southeastern states already have some provision for prosecuting the payer as well as the payee, although police say it seldom happens.

John E. Miller, a Baton Rouge attorney, argued before the Louisiana Supreme Court recently that "any law which begins by saying 'A woman who...' violates equal protection provisions of the U.S. Constitution."

Miller argues that the law should apply to male prostitutes as well and should provide for prosecution of the buyer — male or female.

He won agreement from a district court judge in Baton Rouge who declared the law unconstitutional. The state appealed, arguing that the legislature based the prostitution law on "what prostitution historically is."

"According to the Bible and dictionaries, prostitution means indiscriminate sexual activity for pay by women," said Warren Hebert, who argued the case for the state.

Hebert said later that male buyers of a prostitute's services could be prosecuted for "aiding and abetting" a crime. But he conceded there is no law covering male prostitution.

Hebert told the court there is no market for men to sell themselves to women. "I can't even give it away," he told a laughing courtroom.

In striking down the law, Dist. Judge John S. Covington said:

"In applying principles of logic to the case, we are met with a horrifying conclusion. Since sex is not criminal, and money is not criminal, and female-male monied sex is not criminal, but male-female monied sex is criminal, the law is irrational."

The law also is being attacked in a year-old suit in U.S. District Court, which is pending until the state's high court rules. The suit already has resulted in a temporary injunction forbidding New Orleans police from enforcing an ordinance which prohibits "known prostitutes" from frequenting bars and nightspots.

The Louisiana legislature has taken up the question in its current session. A measure to remove the reference to women in the prostitution law, and to make the buyer as guilty as the seller, passed the state Senate by a vote of 32-5.

It is being considered in a House committee, where it is expected to run into more opposition.

Laws in North Carolina, Mississippi, Florida and Georgia have some provisions aimed either at male buyers or at male prostitutes. Police say, however, enforcement is aimed at women.

"I suppose if a male was caught in the act of soliciting, we could prosecute him," said Dist. Atty. Lewis Slaton of Fulton County (Atlanta), Ga. "But it just doesn't happen that way."

Buyers are not covered by the Georgia statute, as they are in the other three states.

Police Chief Robert Goodwin of Raleigh, N.C., said he can't remember seeing a man charged with prostitution, but said some have been tried for "aiding and abetting" in the crime.

The Florida law — which covers buying and selling of both male and female prostitutes — was declared unconstitutional on grounds that it is too vague. But a federal appeals court reversed that decision and sent the case back to U.S. District Court for more hearings.

Prostitution laws in Alabama and Tennessee, like Louisiana's law, do not cover men. The only way a man can be convicted under the Tennessee statute is on a charge of procuring, and a spokesman for the district attorney's office in Nashville explained, "That's the pimp, not the man who pays for the prostitute's services."

U.S. Dist. Judge Herbert W. Christenberry, in a hearing last year on the federal court suit against the Louisiana law, commented on the issue:

"Considering the great amount of violent crime on the streets and the alleged shortage of police officers, it seems they ought to have better things to do than to make (prostitution) arrests...."

Chess

Poor Health Hurts Game

By JOSEPH MILL BROWN
The Herald Services

The 19th Century chess master Amos Burn once lamented that he never had the satisfaction of beating a healthy opponent. In that respect, things haven't changed too much.

At the Candidates' chess semifinal, in Leningrad, Boris Spassky scored an early point against Anatoly Karpov, who then won a postponement of the next game because of "illness." Karpov stormed back to grab a 2-1 lead, and it quickly became Boris' turn to play musical medical chairs. Nor was it surprising that Tigran Petrosian, on the edge of defeat to Victor Korchnoi, resigned their match from a hospital bed.

If the tension in big-time chess accelerates, a player will soon choose his seconds from among surgeons with an aptitude for heart transplants. The proliferation of tournaments across the globe hasn't helped.

Victor Korchnoi's new vitality reportedly stems from his determination to give up smoking and drinking. If he becomes Bobby Fischer's challenger, the champ should consider playing the patch at the Paul Masson Vineyards in Satatoga (San Jose), Calif., site of the company's Memorial Day weekend chess tournament. The wine cellars might provide pleasant relief from the soda pop (inevitable in any Fischer entourage), and might diminish the Soviet's penchant for all-night game analysis.

Should the middle-aged Korchnoi (he was born in Leningrad, in 1931) make it to the summit, the attendant journalists will probably include the chess correspondent for the American Medical Association; the Russian's flaring ulcers are almost as famous as Fischer's sensitive ears. Indeed, the alibis in most chess tournaments are invariably medical.

After Bent Larsen's 6-0 loss to Fischer, the Dane told one journalist his mistake was to play in Denver where, he claimed, the heat and dry air affected him no end. But a year later, at San Antonio, Tex., it was the inclement weather that was responsible for his mediocre showing. (it left him with a head cold and a backache.)

Novelists love to dwell on the psychosomatic aspects of chess defeat. "Winnie the Pooh" author, A. A. Milne, hinted at ulcers when he wrote, "It is impossible to win gracefully at chess. No man has said mate in a voice which failed to sound to his opponent bitter, boastful and malicious" -and which will often turn a cool, coherent mind into a collapsed bundle of nerves.

It remained, however, for E. M. Forster to identify with the potzer who experiences a sense of drowning when he finds his "perfect game" slipping away out to sea.

"The invention of a naval officer, the Evans gambit, is noted for its liquidity. A heavy current rapidly sets in from the southwest and laps against the foundations of Black's king's bishop's pawn. The whole surface of the board breaks into whirlpools. But (observes Forster), sooner or later out of this marine display there rises a familiar corpse. It is mine."

Fertilizer Swap

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A Senate candidate who has criticized past dealings with the Russians says he's also leery of a new $20-billion deal to swap fertilizer chemicals.

Secretary of State Richard Stone said that he's mostly concerned with protecting Florida farmers.

Stone's comments were made after Armand Hammer, president of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., announced the fertilizer deal in Moscow during President Nixon's meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Hammer said the exchange should help ease world food shortages.

Double Murder

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Police speculate that a 5-year-old boy was murdered after he watched a killer beat his mother to death.

The bodies of Charmaine Meade, 28, and her son from a previous marriage, Charles Foulk, were found Friday in a blood-splattered bedroom of their small west Orlando home.

Officers said the child may have known the killer but refused to elaborate.

The bodies were discovered early in the morning by a babysitter who told police she went into the house after receiving no response to her calls from the front door.

The child's body was half draped over his mother's legs. Both were fully clothed.

Prather To Head Health

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services conducted a nationwide search for a new state health director, then found one in its own backyard.

The appointment of Dr. Charlton Prather, 44, a veteran state health official, was announced by O. J. Keller, HRS secretary.

Prather succeeds Dr. Wilson Sowder, who is retiring June 30 after 30 years of service as Florida's chief health official.

"Dr. Prather is one of the most highly respected men in the medical profession and has an excellent relationship with not only public health people but with voluntary health agencies and the private medical sector," said Gov. Reubin Askew.

Prather was selected by a search committee appointed by Keller. The committee received close to 40 applications for the position. They found Prather in the state Health Division headquarters in Jacksonville.

"The unanimous choice of both the search committee and myself is right in our own backyard," Keller said. "Dr. Prather, who has a national reputation as an epidemiologist, is highly regarded by his colleagues."

The new health director's speciality is epidemiology, the study of contagious diseases.

Prather, a native of Jasper, received bachelor's and master's degrees in bacteriology from the University of Florida and his medical degree from Bowman Grey Medical School. He also has an advanced degree in public health from the University of North Carolina.

Prather has been associated with public health in Florida for 22 years. He has been an instructor at the University of Miami School of Medicine and associate professor at the University of Florida College of Medicine.

Prather said one of his first moves as director would be to restructure the division's Jacksonville office to improve delivery of health services.

Florida May Change Bank Charter Method

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Senate President Mallory Horne says the state may change the way it grants bank charters in the wake of a grand jury investigation of Florida Comptroller Fred O. Dickinson.

Dickinson's longtime personal secretary Mamie Mitchell has pleaded innocent to charges that she perjured herself in the grand jury investigation of her boss.

Horne, D-Tallahassee, said the publicity given the Dickinson probe may generate a new method of granting bank charters.

However, he added that he believed the present method which allows Dickinson final approval over bank charters operates satisfactorily.

"I don't know any state that does it differently," Horne said, adding that no banks chartered by Dickinson have gone bad.

Horne has twice appeared before a grand jury in Tampa which indicted Mrs. Mitchell. The grand jury recessed Thursday for at least two weeks. It was in its eighth week of investigation into Dickinson's personal finances and regulatory role as state banking commissioner.

Mrs. Mitchell, 65, was released on $5,000 signature bond. Her trial was scheduled for the week of Oct. 7-14 before U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman.

Her son, John Gifford Mitchell of West Palm Beach, drove her to the Tampa courthouse for arraignment Friday and accompanied her into a holding cell where she was fingerprinted and photographed.

Mrs. Mitchell, 65, was indicted June 18 on three counts of perjury. She was accused of lying under oath about ownership of $10,000 worth of stock in the Worth Avenue National Bank, West Palm Beach, and of making false statements about a promissory note for $10,000 to her boss.

The petite gray-haired widow stood between attorneys Walter Arnold of Jacksonville and Raymond LaPorte of Tampa for the five-minute arraignment.

U.S. Magistrate Paul Game scheduled a pre-trial hearing for Aug. 20 but said Mrs. Mitchell would not have to appear.

Mrs. Mitchell, who has had a working relationship with the comptroller for the past 20 years, had been his secretary when he was in private practice in West Palm Beach before becoming comptroller in 1963.

Mrs. Mitchell was the second close Dickinson associate indicted on perjury counts in the inquiry. Dickinson's former law partner, Frederick Pryor, a West Palm Beach banker, faces trial in September on seven counts of perjury stemming from his appearance before the grand jury.

Prosecutors claimed Mrs. Mitchell's testimony was necessary to "determine whether stock in the Worth Avenue National Bank was or had been held in behalf of Fred O. Dickinson."

The indictment alleges that Mrs. Mitchell lied when she said that 1,000 shares worth $10,000 in that bank were hers.

She said Dickinson turned down an opportunity to buy the stock and that she decided to buy it herself. She said that her boss lent her the money to buy it and she repaid it at 6 per cent interest.

Jax Police Concentrating On 2 Known BLA Killings

JACKSONVILLE, FLA. (AP) — Unless more evidence of reported abductions shows up, Jacksonville police say they will be focusing their investigation of purported Black Liberation Army actions on the known slayings of two white youths.

During the week, citizens told of seeing two other white youths forced into cars by blacks in seperate incidents. But Detective Chief Matt Touchton said that nothing else had turned up to support the reports.

"We are of the opinion they were not bonafide abductions but events which appeared to be abductions," Touchton said. "But we haven't quit looking for the hitchhiker reported abducted Tuesday night and the boy reported abducted on West Beaver Street on Thursday."

He said efforts will be concentrated on two "BLA-connected crimes on which we have evidence."

The body of Steven A. Orlando, 18, of Jacksonville Beach, was found south of that city June 17. He had been shot and stabbed.

Five days later, the body of Stephen Lamont Roberts, 17, of Roseville, Mich., was found along a Jacksonville industrial street. He had been stabbed numerous times.

A note was left at each death scene, claiming the youths were executed by the BLA as the start of a revolution.

Tape recordings mailed to news media after each death carried similar messages.

Another tape claimed that a third white youth was killed and tossed into a "body of water" but no such body was found.

Police are holding three men on narcotics charges. Touchton said the trio may be BLA organizers but probably didn't kill Orlando and Roberts.

The three in custody came here from Michigan about four months ago, the detective chief said, and were supposedly planning to organize a commune of the Black Law Society in Florida.

They were identified as Ebins Charles Brown, 25, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Henry Bracey, 24, of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Charles Sutton, 26, of Newark, N.J.

Brown is on probation from a grand larceny conviction here.

Faulty Line Blamed In Coastal Blackout

MIAMI (AP) — A blackout that plunged an estimated one million people on Florida's Southeast Coast into darkness was traced early today to a faulty transmission line, an official for Florida Power & Light said.

"A split insulator that caused the transmission line to short out caused the problem," said FP&L spokesman Tony Bothwell.

The power outage affected customers from the middle Florida Keys to as far north as Riviera Beach but the lights were back on in most areas within 30 minutes.

When the transmission line short circuited, it kicked off safety equipment that shut down four major FP&L generating units.

"It was just an unlucky chain of events that happened on a major transmission line," Bothwell said. "But we were able to get service restored fairly quickly and it proved that our safeguards do work."

"We're back to normal, even isolated areas have power back on," a spokesman said.

FP&L vice president Ralph Mulholland said about a third of the company's generating power was cut off. FP&L serves 36 of the state's 67 counties.

The faulty transmission line knocked out two generating units at Turkey Point and another at Cutler Ridge in south Dade County and a one in Fort Lauderdale, he said.

"The units go off the line as a precautionary measure and we started putting them back on as quickly as we could determine it was safe," Mulholland said.

Mulholland said that the units go out to protect themselves rather than be burned out by a fault in the system.

Yarns About Young People Often False

By: GEORGE W. CRANE Ph. D., M.D.

CASE A-672: Norma W., aged 28, is a high school teacher.

"Dr. Crane," she added, "I also try to inject a little wholesome moral instruction in my courses.

"This is what I call a fringe benefit.

"Since I have read your column ever since I was a freshman in high school, I realize your great stress on accentuating the positive.

"So I have urged my students to focus their attention on the constructive and moral aspects of scientific data.

"For example, many of the teen-agers routinely claim that 'Almost everybody is a cigarette user.'

"Or that 'A majority of college girls indulge in sex before marriage.'

"Well, I cite current surveys to prove the falsity of those glib generalizations.

"A recent cigarette advertisement thus stated in a headline that $6,000,000 people smoke cigarettes here in the U.S.A.

"So I had my students analyze that headline more fully.

"At present we have an estimated 210 million Americans, which means that 56 million smokers are only 26.6 per cent of our total population!

"Stating the facts prositively, that means that 73.4 per cent of all Americans still do NOT smoke cigarettes!

"And even if we focus just on the adult population of voting age, that 56 million still is a minority!

"Dr. Crane, this surprised my pupils for I am sure most of them had thought the non-smokers were much in the minority.

"Then one of the coed students brought in a recent report about a survey at Stanford University.

"The headline suggested that 'Every coed was sexually loose or promiscuous.'

"For it reported that Dr. Warren Miller, psychiatrist, said that of the 1974 graduating class, 35 per cent of the freshmen girls admitted to having been sexually active before they came to the campus.

"But the figure for the boys was only 20 per cent.

"By stressing the positive aspects of those data, I showed my class that 65 per cent of the girls and 71 per cent of their Stanford male classmates had NOT indulged in sex during high school or earlier years.

"Dr. Miller added, however, that by the end of their freshman year at Stanford University, the figure for cohabitation among the girls had risen to 41 per cent while that for the men students had dropped to 27 per cent.

"Again, I had my students look at the positive aspect of those statements.

"So they found that 59 per cent of the sophomore coeds and 73 per cent of the men students had still NOT indulged in sexual affairs!

"And this was for the current 1974 class of 400 students!

"So the screaming headlines about immorality, cigarette addiction and other sensational behavior need to be offset by these positive data!

Taking Pill New Way Of Life For Women

By RUBY SEXTON
The Herald Services

When you talk about the pill, no one is likely to ask, "What pill?"

Birth control pills have been around for nearly 15 years now. A major pill manufacturer estimates that they are being used by more than 10 million American women.

There is no doubt that the pill has changed our way of life, in making pregnancy a matter of choice rather than chance. It has slowed population growth and given women the option of choosing roles other than motherhood.

The pill is also variously credited or blamed for a revolution in sexual attitudes and an increase in sexual activity among the young.

A sex therapist and researcher is looking at how women feel about the pill and how it has changed their lives.

Dagmar O'Connor, a family counselor and sex therapist at New York Medical College, is conducting a survey of women's attitudes for Lederle Laboratories, a manufacturer of birth control pills.

Women almost universally report that they feel freer and more relaxed in their sexual relations when they are taking the pill, she said in an interview. They no longer have to worry that they may become pregnant.

But Mrs. O'Connor does not find from her research that the pill has led to greater promiscuity. For most people the emphasis is on good, steady, one-to-one relationships, she says.

The sex therapist, whose background includes training at the Masters and Johnson Clinic in St. Louis, is "not so sure" there really is so much more sexual activity than in the past.

The sexual revolution "may be a verbal revolution," she said, with more talk about sex rather than more sex.

"As far as I know, the most active period was during the war of the 1940s," she added.

Mrs. O'Connor, who is 39, was born in Sweden and grew up during the sexual revolution there. But there as here, she says, the emphasis was on couple relationships and those who "slept around" were frowned on.

With most other birth control methods previously in use, the responsibility for contraception was either shared or left up to the man.

The advent of the pill placed the responsibility squarely on the woman. And on the whole she likes it that way, Mrs. O'Connor is discovering.

Although women may have some feeling of resentment at the responsibility, they would be unwilling to give it up in favor of an equivalent male pill, she says.

In meeting with groups of women across the country, she said, she has found "an overwhelming reaction that you would not trust the male to take the pill."

Why would women feel this way? An immediate reaction is "I'm the one who's going to get pregnant. He's not."

Other answers are varied: My husband can't even keep track of his socks. He doesn't even want to take an aspirin. It might affect his libido, make him feel less adequate sexually.

Or he'd never remember. One woman recalled that when she had to be in the hospital for eight days, her husband failed for eight days to take the medication he needed for hypertension.

Another thing Mrs. O'Connor has found from her interviews with women is that they would like to have better communication with men about birth control. Most feel their sexual partner doesn't want to talk about it, that the burden is theirs alone.

Teen-agers and younger women also express a desire for better communication with their parents about sex and birth control.

They feel they will handle things differently, that they will be able to talk more freely with their children when they themselves are parents, she said.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I think the safest way for Naomi to have a nice looking scrapbook for her keepsakes is to get a photograph album that has plastic filler pages so no tape will have to be used. Newspaper clippings, wedding napkins, etc., will stay in place in the fillers and will not fade. Flat articles could be placed back to back and show from both sides. I also know from experience that odd photographs stay pretty this way, too.—DOLLIE

DEAR POLLY—Some of the less expensive children's wash-and-wear shirts turn up from the hemline when worn on the outside of pants, shorts, etc., so they look unsightly. With the zig-zag stitch on my sewing machine I sewed bias tape in place on the underside of such shirts just over the hemlines where they were prone to fold up. This was a satisfactory solution to an annoying problem.—DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY—I had a very good half slip that was too tight to wear but too good to throw away. I cut away the elastic, laid a slip belonging to my small daughter on the half slip to use as a pattern for cutting the neck and armholes out and taking up the side seam a bit. Using the zigzag stitch on my machine I stitched the turned under hems at the neck and armholes, sewed up the side seams and had a very cute little girl's slip. — MARGARET.

Dear Abby

Nephew Wants To Become Lover

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have a nephew (my sister's son) who is 48, and has been divorced three times. He's always been quite a ladies' man. Very handsome, but something of a fortune-hunter; I've heard. I've seen him perhaps half a dozen times in his adult life. (He lives in New York and I live in Canada.)

I lost my husband last year, and suddenly this nephew started writing me the loveliest letters. I answered each one, thinking how sweet of him to be so attentive to his old aunt.

Then came a letter saying: "May I come and visit you? I have something important to talk to you about." I thought maybe he'd found a ladyfriend and wanted to bring her out to meet me, so I wrote back: "Don't keep me in suspense, but please give me a hint."

In his next letter came the shock of my life. He wrote, "Now I can finally confess how I feel about you. I've always thought of you as a woman — not as an aunt, but I never dared to let you know." He closed with: "I want you. I need you. I love you."

Abby, I am 71 years old, and couldn't possibly think of this nephew as anything but my sister's little boy. How can I put an end to this without insulting him outright?

AUNTIE

DEAR AUNTIE: Tell him that you're flattered by his "confession," but you don't feel the same way about him. And if he still wants to visit you, put him up at a hotel. You don't need a handsome, fortune-hunting ladies' man as a house guest. He probably walks in his sleep.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have wanted to trace my family as far back as possible, but I don't know where to begin. My forebears came from Ireland. Do you know of any agency in the United States or in Ireland with whom I could communicate to inquire?

HOPEFUL IN BOSTON

DEAR HOPEFUL: Call yours "the luck of the Irish"—I think I can help you. My column appears in the Sunday News, Northern Ireland's largest circulating Sunday newspaper, and one of my colleagues there specializes in tracing Irish family histories. The information you seek is available for a small fee. Write to: Family Tracing Services, 33 North Circular Rd., Belfast 15, Ireland.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old happily married woman. I used to have a beautiful figure. (In high school I was 38-35-36.) After nursing three babies, I lost my bust. Now I have to wear a padded bra to look presentable. Nobody except my husband and a few very close friends know what I'm really like.

and filled out again that I made an appointment with a plastic surgeon. He explained all about silicone implants, and I can hardly wait to have it done, but something is holding me back.

Would such an operation be considered deceitful, and therefore sinful in the eyes of the Lord?

HOLDING OFF

DEAR HOLDING: Your clergyman can tell you what the ruling in your church is concerning reconstructive plastic surgery, so ask him to "fill you in" before you ask the doctor to "fill you out!"

CONFIDENTIAL TO "GRAMMARIAN" at N.Y.U.: All right, have it your way. That picture ain't me, and it ain't I. It's a Picasso. Satisfied?

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

South wins the spade lead and has to go after the club suit. How should he play it?

Old books on bridge said to go to dummy; lead the queen and let it ride. If the finesse lost to the king, go to dummy again and take a second finesse. This play would succeed 76 per cent of the time. Any time East held at least one honor.

A better play would be to lead dummy's nine. This would succeed almost 81 per cent of the time (any time East held an honor or West held all four cards of the suit).

The old books on bridge were all wrong here. The best mathematical play is to lay down the ace. This wins 83 per cent of the time since it only loses two tricks if East holds K J x or K J xx.

It also loses two tricks today. But the really expert play, as used by experts against players not good enough to play low from king-small, is to lead low toward dummy with the intention to play the nine if West plays low and finessing against the king if the nine loses to the jack.

This play only succeeds 80 per cent of the time against a man good enough to duck with king-small, but it works 94 per cent of the time against ordinary bridge players.

Of course justice doesn't always triumph. The best mathematical play is a loser today. Almost all other plays work.

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

SUNDAY, JUNE 30, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day and evening to prepare a course of action whereby you can follow the principles and precepts under which you want to be living in the future. Plan a new schedule of events for the coming week.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can tap your intuitive faculties for the answers to perplexing problems. Do nothing to undermine your fine reputation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find out what your position is with associates and come to a true meeting of the minds. Concentrate deeply on a personal matter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to repay obligations to others and express your gratitude. The new week should be planned in a clever way. Be alert.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 22) Pleasing those you like and showing them real affection is wise now. Do nothing that can in any way be dangerous.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan some way to make your family members appreciate your finest qualities. Establish more harmony in the home. Be gracious.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) First attend the services of your choice, and then get together with friends and relations at hobbies that are mutually enjoyed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to raise your level of consciousness. Discuss finances with one who has been successful in your line of endeavor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to ask others if you want the support needed to achieve your personal aims. Join a social group in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideas are given to you in a confidential manner so be sure you don't confide in others. Don't neglect health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Seek the support you need from good friends. Also, try to deepen relationship with new acquaintances. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Whatever you do today in a civic or cultural realm is very important. Show you true ability to bigwigs you chance to meet.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get together with the wisest persons you know and exchange philosophical concepts. Show appreciation for the good things in life.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to stick to one course of action so be sure that early in life you expose your progeny to only that which is worthy. Make sure you give fine religious training early in life. Sports are a must here since there is much strength and energy. Give good grounding in mathematics.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

MONDAY, JULY 1, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite your urge to start the new week by getting off to some more interesting, different outlets, do the job you have agreed to do first so you won't lose future support of those relying on you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Put your efforts into improving your home and having more harmony there instead of going off to far fields that look enticing, but aren't.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A romantic tie may be demanding, but don't neglect a partner who can keep things humming, or you lose a good deal. Study bills for accuracy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not the right day to talk with a pressing partner about a new deal, since there is unfinished work to be completed. Avoid an angry person.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep promises made and do important work before you get into anything new, up health and take no chance with reputation.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care of some important personal matter before you step out for a good time. Try to help that friend who is upset first also.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Go after that aim even though kin oppose you vehemently. It is right for you. Keep promises to avoid trouble later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get down to important business instead of letting some friend take you out on some tangent that could be expensive. Take care of credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 32 to Nov. 21) Some new acquaintance could give you the information you need, so stop being so concerned about money right now. This can lead to greater success in the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You know how to gain personal aims but you must first take care of government, business and other matters that are pressing. Don't argue with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy with work connected to agreement with partner. One who opposes you should be calmed down and then you can get into the fun things you like tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Cooperate more with co-workers and get production going more successfully, then you can get out with friends for fun. Take health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have a fine idea that should be put in operation quickly to get the benefits therefrom. Discuss plans with those who can help.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be best served if you plan now to give a fine education plus duties that teach the habit of work. Teach also to complete whatever has once been started. Much travel is indicated in this chart and foreign languages should be added to the regular curricula. Religious education is very important beginning early in life. Sports are a natural here, also.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Seminole Loses Claim To Fast Growth Title

By JULIAN STENSTROM

Seminole County is no longer the fastest growing county in the nation. It is not even the fastest growing county in Florida.

Seminole has been surpassed by two west Florida coastal counties — namely Citrus and Hernando — according to the latest edition of the "Florida Growth Report," a Miami-based publication.

Soaring land values in Hillsborough and Pinellas have caused an exodus from the two Tampa Bay counties," says the report, "and triggered a population explosion in nearby Citrus, Hernando and Pasco counties."

The report says a University of Florida study shows that the population in Citrus jumped 18 per cent a year to 30,253 people. Percentage-wise, Hernando is the second fastest growing county — up 16 per cent a year to 25,921.

Seminole, the report indicates, had a 15 percent rise to 124,000 people. Pasco County's population rose to 110,000 — jump of 14 per cent.

By the way, after these top four growth counties, the next six — the report says — were Osceola, Collier, Martin, Okeechobee, Charlotte and Highlands. That should tell us something.

According to "Realtor Headlines," a publication of the National Association of Realtors, emergency housing legislation is now on track toward action in the U.S. House of Representatives. This legislation could come as a part of a larger omnibus housing bill or as a separate action.

The House Banking Committee has just approved the Consumer Home Mortgage Assistance Act as a new section in the big bill. In a concurrent move, the Banking Committee also approved it as a separate piece of legislation giving the measure a degree of independent life in the event the omnibus bill dies.

Many of the features of the Realtor-backed Emergency Mortgage Credit Act is contained in the housing legislation. The EMCA measure calls for increased home lending powers for national banks, and contains vitally needed new lending flexibility for a savings and loan association.

If someone ever tells you that you can find people in the real estate business with all kinds of backgrounds, please believe 'em.

A perfect example is Jack W. Hoyt, head of Hoyt Associates, a Longwood based realty firm.

Hoyt is a graduate of Purdue University — class of '48. He earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering. He did post graduate work at Butler University in Indianapolis. He spent a dozen years with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, another five years with IT&T in the ballistic missile program, seven years with General Electric engaged in the moonshot program and finally a year with Walt Disney World before entering the real estate game.

He has 10 years of real estate experience under his belt — the last two and a half years operating his own brokerage house in Longwood. Prior to coming here he resided in Cocoa Beach.

The Indianapolis native is a member of the Longwood Chamber of Commerce, the Air Force Association and is a Kiwanian.

In the field of telecommunications, Hoyt was exposed not only to engineering facets but also participated in management. He and his wife, Doris — who assists him in his realty business, and their five children reside in Longwood.

Recession? They're telling the story about the minister who went to call on a builder who'd lost his shirt in his most recent development. When he entered the home the pastor noticed that the builder was sitting in the middle of the living room fishing from a pail of water. The minister nudged the builder's wife and asked, "Don't you think you ought to get him to a psychiatrist?" The wife replied, "I've been thinking seriously about it preacher, but to tell you the truth we need the fish."

What does the tourist industry mean to Florida? We hear lots of answers and, no doubt, there are many. But here are some figures which might be more impressive to a lot of people than mere opinions.

The figures come from the most recent edition of "Florida Commerce," a publication from the Florida Department of Commerce headed by Secretary Don Spicer.

Tourism brings in about 25 million vacationers each year. These people pour more than $4 billion directly into the state's economy and they pay $250 million in sales, gasoline and other taxes.

And, here's a little known fact. The sole source of income for some 300,000 Floridians is provided by tourism. The major source of incomes for another 450,000 people who work in tourist-related industry is provided by tourism. Although tourism touches the lives of practically every Floridian, it provides a way of life for some 2.5 million citizens of Florida who are significantly dependent upon tourism for their livelihood.

Florida's growth — much of it due to tourists who enjoy Florida so much they return here to live — still continues at the rate of some 6,000 people every week.

To explain what this means, let it be said that Florida adds enough people each year to populate Honolulu or St. Paul.

Try this one on for size! The newest thing on the real estate horizon is "time sharing" ownership of vacation condominiums. What this means is that several parties form a multiple ownership of a single condominium in the mountains or at the beach. Owners buy time shares for only the amount of time they wish to occupy the unit each year. The plan has already been a success in Acapulco, in the Carribean and at Lake Tahoe in California. Time sharing has been popular in Europe for several years.

Don't Let First Look End Dream Place

By ADELE FAULKNER
Herald News Services

It looking for a new apartment, townhouse or condominium, one seldom finds the place that's "exactly right." The fly in the ointment might be a bedroom that is too small, a kitchen that is too dark, or a living room too long and narrow.

The impulse might be to pass up a dwelling that otherwise fits all your needs and continue looking elsewhere. This could be a mistake, since "dream houses" are usually found only in one's imagination or in the pages of a magazine.

Instead, rent or buy that new place; then call into play the creative art of color to help transform it into a closer approximation of your ideal dwelling.

Color is one of the least expensive interior design tools, and can work wonders in changing the mood, light and even the proportions of a room.

That too small bedroom, for example, will appear more spacious through the use of a subdued color treatment. And if one nonaggressive color is repeated in different tones, the illusion of size is further enhanced.

Imagine that bedroom with a deep gold floor; with a lighter tone of the same colors for the walls, draperies and upholstery; and orange and red accents to relieve the monotony. You can almost envision the room expanding, can't you?

If your kitchen is too dark, it can be made bright and sunny through the use of warm colors. Rich gold, deep saffron, terracotta, bronze green, and earth red and sunny yellow can be used. In addition to creating a brightening effect, these colors contribute to a relaxed, happy atmosphere.

At the same time, greater depth can be given a room by introducing a receding color from the blue or green family on the wide walls. Sapphire blue, forest green, grotto blue or Wedgwood blue is a good choice.

In addition to room size, light and exposure, the function of a room and the mood one wishes to create within it also determine the colors to be utilized. A family room should offer a relaxed, freiendly atmosphere, and can be achieved through the use of warm colors. On the other hand, a bedroom can seem to be cool and serene ff blue or green tones are used.

Finally, it is important to remember that the creative use of color contributes to the emotional well-being of you and your family. Therefore, perhaps the most important factor in determining the color to be used in a given room is the individual personalities of the occupants.

Determining their color preferences beforehand will not only help you learn about them, but will help create a color environment harmonious and psychologically pleasing to everyone.

A room's exposure to light is the single most important criteria for the color scheme you select.

There's an old clich that north and east rooms should have warm colors and west rooms should have cool colors — which does not always hold true. It is, instead, the brightness or value of the color choice which is most important.

The room with warm exposure can use warm colors, but should be more neutral than those selected for a north and east exposure. For instance, a room with a sunny exposure should have a color scheme taken from the warm side of the color wheel (red, orange, yellow or yellow-green).

These shades could be used for a family room or a living room located on the warm side of the house. One combination would begin with avocado green for the floor with walls of pale green cream toned with umber. If painted wood or paneling is used, it should be treated with an umber-beige overglaze.

Matching draperies and sofa could be in a cotton plaid fabric of burnt sienna, browns, persimmon, red, melon gold and touches of avocado green. The burnt sienna tone can be repeated in one of the chairs, and the soft persimmon and melon gold in other upholstered pieces.

If you wish to give a further lift to tired pieces of wood furniture, paint them avocado green — and don't be concerned with trying to match colors.

Instead of matching them, try blending colors. Working from light to dark within the same family of color also gives rhythm to the room.

For example, if the room has strong light coming in, paint one wall a deeper shade to cut down on glare. Some darker values of color make a room more restful and livable.

In the final analysis, color really is the key to a pleasant home environment.

Simplest Tools Help Gardener

By DAVID DeVOLL
Extension Agent

With close observation and knowing the time of year when certain pests or symptoms are likely to appear, most people can do a creditable job of diagnosing many lawn problems.

A few simple tools can be helpful. A hand lens to magnify insects, disease lestons and nutritional deficiencies is useful. It is also helpful when examining roots for nematode damage.

A metal can with the bottom cut out is the best tool for determing the presence of chinch bugs in a lawn.

A soil tube is useful to take soil samples for making comparisons between good and bad areas in the lawn. It will help in determining root depth, the condition of roots, and indicate compaction, layering or the presence of mat or buried materials.

While not exactly a tool, a patch test can be utilized to determine the presence of nematodes. A small area of lawn can be treated with a nematicide and watched to see whether or not the grass responds to the treatment. If the area responds, it is a good indication that nematodes are present and the whole lawn may be treated. In the same way, patch tests may be made for worms or nutritional deficiencies.

Check first for physiological problems — many lawn problems are the result of improper lawn care.

Improper Mowing — Scalped areas, general thinning of grass, or split blades, indicates dull mowers, mowing too fast, or improper mowing height can cause these problems.

Improper Watering — A soggy soil under thin, weak chlorotic turf is a sign of too much water. Light, frequent watering often causes weeds such as dollar weed and water sedge to appear. Wilted grass and localized dry spots indicate insufficient watering caused by not watering frequently enough or by poor water distribution by the sprinkler.

Chemical Damage — usually shows as streaks or patches of dead grass. This is normally caused by faulty or dirty equipment, improper calibration, use of the wrong material or the improper rate.

Thatch or Mat — the presence of mat and thatch often indicates improper watering, fertilizing and mowing procedures.

INDICATIONS OF INSECTS

Chinchbugs — Patches of grass yellowing and gradually turning brown in the center. This condition usually shows up first in sunny areas and along the edges of the lawn.

Armyworms and Sodwebworms — Damage usually begins in shady areas. The grass blades are notched and chewed back raggedly and piles of the worms' excrement can be found.

Mole-Crickets — Wilting, a restricted root system and small tunnels are indications of mole cricket damage.

Grubs — damage the roots of the grass. Chlorosis and wilting are the first symptoms observed.

How Many Beer Drinkers Are Fully Aware Of Basics?

By DAVID JORDAN
Written for Associated Press

If you enjoy beer, no one needs to tell you about its pleasures — whether you're celebrating spring's arrival with a picnic, sitting around your apartment pool this summer, or just relaxing after a long, hard day. But maybe you're not aware of what a wide variety there is or how beers differ. Here are some basics about the brew.

Beer is the generic term for all fermented malt beverages. American beer is about 3½ per cent alcohol by weight; ale, malt liquor and imported beers run up to 6 per cent.

The brewing process begins by combining malted grains with other starchy cereals, and hops. Yeast is used to ferment this "mash" into alcohol. Scientifically controlled operations assure that beer from a given brewery will always taste the same. Subtle variations in ingredients and techniques are what differentiate one company's beer from another's. Brewers can add cereals, roast the malt differently, or use more or less hops than their competitors, but the key ingredients are the yeast cultures and the water.

The result is a beverage with a great deal of nourishment, including riboflavin, an important B vitamin. Beer also contains protein and carbohydrates, so if you're dieting, figure on about 175 calories per 12-ounce bottle; more for ale.

Lager is a light-bodied, effervescent, clear, tangy brew. It's bottom-fermented — the yeast sinks and works from the bottom of the mash — and is aged in refrigerated tanks under controlled conditions. Lager is the biggest seller in this country.

Pilsner on a label tells you that a beer duplicates the stuff brewed in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia. It's a pale-colored, light lager beer.

Dark beer is lagered from a more highly kilned malt, usually with caramel added. It's heavier, richer-tasting, and almost chocolate-brown in color.

Bock beer falls somewhere between pilsner and dark beer. It's heavy, dark lager, sweeter than most, made especially for the six-week-long bock beer season dedicated foamers date as the beginning of spring.

Draught beer was once sold only by the keg and in bars. It's not pasteurized (a process used to stop fermentation at a given point for shipping); but now by filtering out the active enzymes, brewers can make it available in bottles or minikegs everywhere pasteurized beer is sold.

Ale is top-fermented from yeasts that float. Full-bodied and slightly hoppier (more bitter) than beer, it's also more alcholic. English variations are porter, dark brown, full-bodied, and less hoppy than ale, and stout, sweeter still, darker, and stronger, with a decided malt flavor.

Malt liquor is lighter than ale but hoppier than beer. It's also considerably higher in alcohol content — about 6 per cent.

Foreign beers include porter and stout from Great Britain; ale from Canada; light and dark lager beer from Germany, Japan and Mexico. Sake, that highpowered stuff (14 to 16 per cent alcohol) served in Japanese restaurants, is technically a beer, too. It's brewed from rice instead of barley and unlike beer, is almost colorless and has no carbonation. You have to develop a taste for foreign beers to appreciate them. One good way to do that is to buy an assortment, some exotic cheeses, and invite some friends for gourmet guzzling.

Design For Distinction To Enhance Your Home

By ADELE FAULKNER
The Herald Services

One of the best ways to add disfinction to what might be a rather routinely constructed apartment is to do the unusual, exciting and unexpected when it comes to design.

A dramatic effect can be achieved by utilizing a decorative material in another context. Take wallpaper, for example. Only the unimaginative would insist that wallpaper need be limited to walls alone.

Actually, wallpaper can make a highly effective floor covering. It can be used with equal success in the kitchen, study, bathroom, children's room or any room you so desire.

Another thought might be to wallpaper the walls and floor in the same design to create a dramatic, total effect. Or a contrasting design can be used to bring on another mood entirely.

So far as durability goes, wallpaper topped with two coats of a clear polyurethane or varithane lasts for a long period of time.

Not only does this usage of wallpaper create an interesting look, but it is practical as well. The plastic flooring which protects the wallpaper can be cared for by sweeping and occasional damp mopping.

Also, the clarity of the plastic allows whatever wallpaper color and design you choose to show through; and the rich texture of the wallpaper topped with the plastic gives the room a carpeted look at far less cost. However, remember to select a "nondirectional pattern."

Salads Suit Light Moods Of Spring And Summer

By LOUISE L. GIL
Extension Home Agent

Salads suit the lighthearted moods of Spring and summer, and the desire for casual foods. Take it easy on the heavier entrees and concentrate on salads.

You can always fortify a salad with cheese chunks, cubes or strips of meat, chicken or fish to make a main dish out of it. If you're cooking casually out of doors, you can always prepare the salad in advance to nibble on while chicken, steak or burgers cook on the grill.

With this garden salad bowl, there's a medley of Florida vegetables: cauliflower, carrots, green or wax beans that have been marinated in a zippy dressing with cheese. The Cheddar and Parmesan cheese not only add protein to the salad but also give it a distinctive piquant flavor.

This salad does not become limp or wilted since only cooked vegetables are used. Cook vegetables until just tender to be at the [illegible] Bowl salad with your favorite broiled meat, fish or chicken. Add relishes, French bread and tall glasses of chilled milk for a delightful menu.

Here's the recipe for Garden Salad Bowl:

1 lb. carrots, peeled and cut into 1-inch pieces
1 sm. head cauliflower, broken into flowrets
¾ lb. green or wax beans OR 1 pkg. (9 oz.) frozen beans
¾ cp. salad oil
½ cp shredded Cheddar Cheese
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1-3rd cp. vinegar
3 tblsp. sugar
½ tsp. dry mustard
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. basil
1-3rd cp. sliced green onions

Cook vegetables separately in boiling salted water just until tender; drain and cool. In a small bowl blend together salad oil, Cheddar cheese, Parmesan cheese, vinegar, sugar, mustard, salt, and basil. In a large bowl combine cooked vegetables and onions; add cheese dressing and toss lightly. Cover and chill [illegible] several hours. Makes 8-10 servings.

Real Estate Question Box

By JULIAN STENSTROM

(Editor's Note: Do you have a question about real estate, taxes, planning, zoning, or anything else which affects your lifestyle? Send your inquiry to Editor, Lifestyles, The Sanford Herald, Sanford, Fla. 32771. Please sign your letter. Upon publication, however, only initials will be used.)

Editor:

Is there any kind of a course you can recommend which would provide a newly licensed real estate salesman a fairly good idea of how to operate in the best interest of his broker and himself? I realize I have taken courses in real estate to get my license but experienced real estate people tell me I'm still going to have to learn the actual operations. That's why I'm asking about some sort of a course. — RJB

Dear RJB:

Right now there is no course you can take to give you a background in the real estate business and to tell you "how to." However, officials at Florida Technological University are working on a five-day course especially designed to provide the new practitioner with exactly what you're talking about. Several meetings have been held with leaders of the Orlando-Winter Park Board of Realtors and the Seminole County Board of Realtors. I seriously doubt if the course can be put together before September or October. The practioneer taking the course would be exposed to ethics, multiple listing,contract writing, closing, basic investment analysis, salesmanship, motivation, financing and other phases of the business. The student would be in class eight hours a day for five days. No college credit would be given. If the plan materializes it's the closest thing we know of to what you need.

Editor:

I've heard that Sanford has an extremely high tax millage. What is the present rate? — Mrs. HGH

Dear Mrs. HGH:

Sanford's present millage rate is set at 7 mills for general government and 1.5 mills for bonded indebtedness for a total tax rate of 8.5 mills. The 7 mills is subject to homestead exemption. The 1.5 mills for bonded indebtedness is not subject to homestead exemption. Sanford's highest rate was 21 mills back in 1950. In 1960 it was 18 mills. In 1966 it was reduced to 16. In 1971 it was reduced to 11 mills and in 1972 to the present 8.5 rate. The rate compares favorably with most Florida cities of comparable size.

Editor:

I recently ran across a copy of the Florida Realtor-Attorney Accord. I read it with a great deal of interest even though I am not involved in the real estate profession. Would you be kind enough to explain just why the accord was established? — Mrs. BHB

Dear Mrs. BHB:

To answer your question in a nutshell the reason was to keep the lawyers out of the real estate business and to keep real estate people out of the legal profession. A Realtor must always be on the alert not to express opinions discouraging the consummation of a realty transaction other than in the interest and the protection of his client.

How You Can Get More Out Of Your Camping Trip

By ROLLA WILLIAMS
The Herald Services

Camping suddenly is the "in" vacation these days.

It's "in" because it's not wasteful of energy and because it's ecologically pure in its motivation. Besides, it's fun.

You can vacation on less money if you camp, particularly if there are several of you in the group. And you can get closer to the root meaning of "re-creation" in a woodsy setting, beside a glowing campfire, under a sparkling dome of stars.

But, these days, the camper must be prepared to share his campsite with his neighbors. A government report attests to the popularity of camping and estimates that million Americans camp out each night of the summer, and not many fewer than that in spring and fall, as well.

It is an alluring pastime, for the effete as well as the hairy-chested, and both will enjoy camping more if they'll follow a few suggestions gleaned from the periodicals of the sport.

When you change the mantle on your lantern do it outside. not in a confined area. Especially, burn the mantle in the open since it contains beryllium, and recent studies relate increases in cancer of the lungs, gall bladder and liver to breathing beryllium dust. It is recommended that the mantle be burned initially for at least five minutes out in the open before moving it inside. The bad effects of beryllium, which is used as a hardening agent for the ash-like structure of the mantle, is dissipated in the first 65 minutes of burning.

If you are driving a motor home with extra gas tanks, inquire at each fill-up about a truck discount. It can be worth five cents a gallon to you if you require 30 or more gallons.

fruit and fresh vegetables and lettuce for efficiency and balanced nutrition while camping. Frijoles con chorizo — canned home-style beans and crumbled Mexican sausage — is fast to cook, filling and delicious.

Potato soup with minced clams, often on sale, is another — ideal for lunch or as a hot snack as clam chowder after a long day's drive.

Flavor with your own herbs and float a button of butter on top.

Blow-up hangers are ideal for drip-dry clothing. Hang on a tree or a shower head and, overnight, a shirt, underwear, socks are clean, dry and ready to wear.

Aluminum sheeting is a useful adjunct to camping. Arranged in a half-circle behind a camp lantern, it concentrates the light. It's easier than clay to pack around potatoes for baking. It can insulate a frying pan handle. It can be fashioned into a pot, a pan or a bucket.

It can substitute for vermiculite in a barbecue or be stretched between wires as a reflector oven.

Use paraffin or a squeeze tube of graphite to lubricate zippers on sleeping bags, tent windows, other camp fasteners.

Before you take a rented trailer on the highway, give yourself a driving lesson on a supermarket parking lot or on a school athletic field. Practice parking and get the feel of the rig as it moves, learn the best shifting speeds for your auto, the turning technique. On the road, remember to downshift going up and down hills.

Take advantage of supermarket specials to stock up on lightweight, nourishing, easily prepared foods that keep without a refrigerator — pancake mixes, quick oatmeal, dehydrated soups, instant mashed potatoes, casseroles. desserts, canned bacon, fruit drinks. Prices invariably are higher on the road.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Nails are common things. And there is a specific type of nail called common. But if you look over the large variety of nails available in stores, you're likely to think they are anything but common.

There are finishing and casing nails; spiral and concrete nails; roofing and upholstery nails; cut and square-shank nails; brads and tacks; and, literally, dozens of other types. And, of course, the common nail, which has a diamondshape point and a flat head and is the kind most persons use.

Nails come in standard lengths and are designated in so-called penny size. Generally, the longer nails are thicker than the shorter nails. Those used mostly by home handymen run anywhere from one inch in length (2 penny or 2d) to 4 inches (20 penny or 20d).

The strongest joint is obtained with a nail long enough to penetrate at least two-thirds of its length into the piece of wood holding the point. This isn't always practical, but it's the objective that should be sought. Clinching a nail, when appearance isn't objectionable, adds much to its withdrawal resistance. Clinching means bending the point of the nail over so that it's flush with the surface of the wood. Clinching of any kind adds strength, but maximum strength is obtained when the nail is hammered down across the grain.

"Blind" or "set" nailing involves driving the head of the nail below the surface of the wood with a punch-like tool called a nailset. For this purpose, a nail with a very small head — such as a casing nail or a brad — is used. When this kind of nailing is done in something like tongue-and-groove flooring, it's called "blind" nailing, since the nail is hidden when the tongue is fitted into the groove of the next piece. When it's done on a more usual surface, with the head of the nail concealed with wood putty or plastic wood, it's called "set" nailing.

In most softwoods, nails can be driven directly into the wood. But when using hardwoods, such as maple or oak, or the dense wood of such softwoods as southern pine and Douglas fir, splitting can be avoided by predrill pilot or lead holes for the nails. This is especially necessary when nails are driven near the edges and ends of wood.

The following table should be of help to you in buying nails by the penny designations:

2d — 1 inch
4d — 1½ inches
6d — 2 inches
8d — 2½ inches
10d — 3 inches

The Weeders Guide

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

For the last several years we have bought collections of caladium bulbs, planted them in pots and have given away most of them as welcome gifts. They are available in many variations of green and red, white and yellow, spotted and margined in contrasting colors.

Caladium are excellent for a partly shaded bed, border or pot. They need little care as house plants and do well in any rich soil. Start them indoors early in spring and transplant to the garden when danger of frost ends.

There are many species of caladium. Caladium bicolor is a native of Trinidad, Brazil and Guiana. It has firm leaves shaped like arrowheads, with red veins and scattered white spots in their green. They grow profusely in spring and summer and are dormant in winter, although some of ours, taken indoors before frost in fall, have bloomed for two years.

The soil should be rich in humus, peat moss, sphagnum moss or shredded fir bark. If drainage is a problem, add broken brick, charcoal, granite chips, perlite or coarse sand to the soil mixture.

The soil should be kept evenly moist but not constantly wet. Permit it to become slightly dry between waterings. It may need less water in winter when it is not growing as vigorously.

The best temperature is 60 to 65 degrees (F) at night and 80 to 85 during the day. The caladium will withstand low temperatures such as were registered in many homes during the fuel-short past winter. In summer, the plant will appreciate being placed outdoors for periods of fresh air.

For healthy growth, give caladium indirect or diffused sunlight. Don't let it stand in direct sunlight. An east window is fine.

And for propagation, divide the tubers in the spring.

Happy Gardening

Almost 125,000 persons will wind up in hospital emergency rooms in this country this year as a result of accidents associated with the home and garden equipment, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates.

Obtain Professional Advice When Combatting Termites

By GENE GARY
The Herald Services

Q. A short time ago we moved into a new house. The house is split-level, with the living and dining rooms and kitchen raised about 24 inches above grade. During my inspection of this raised portion of the house, at the opening to the crawl space, I could not help but wonder what a beautiful home for termites with all that exposed wood. My question is: Would it be advisable to have this underside sprayed for termites and other pests, before a complete extermination might be required in a few years? I mean a preventive spray if one exists. — A.M.G., Encinitas.

A. Experiments conducted by the Department of Agriculture have confirmed the effectiveness of controlling termite activity in buildings by means of chemical soil poisoning. This is a practical and economical method of preventing infestation. The principal soil poisons used for this purpose include aldrin, dieldrin and heptachlor in concentrations of one-half of one per cent, or chlordane in a one per cent concentration, all applied in a water emulsion. These chemicals, all chlorinated hydrocarbons, have proved effective for more than 15 years when properly applied in the recommended concentration. However — and this is an important point — use of these chemicals by other than licensed professional control operators is NOT recommended.

Q. Do shakes or wood shingle roof require periodic care, such as a dressing or seal? If so, what do you suggest? — K.D.C. A. Shakes or wood shingles will have a longer life if a preservative is use on the wood. A mixture of graphite and linseed oil can be used, or there are products under brand names for his purpose. Consult your building supply dealer for these products. Or they may be available at large paint stores.

Q. About four months ago we removeled our kitchen. The birch cabinets were made by a good carpenter. However, the upper ones have turned out to be an eyesore because they are now badly warped. What do you advise? — H.M.R.

A. Unseasoned wood may have been used. Either that or the top edges of the doors may have been left unfinished so that they have absorbed moisture, and, as you know, there is a lot of moisture in a kitchen. Remove the doors and lay them over blocks of wood or wooden horses, where they can remain undisturbed for several days. The concave side should be up. Then place heavy weights — large stones, books, pails of water or metal weights — on the high ends of the warp. The doors should straighten after a few days and should be allowed to go slightly the other way. Before rehanging the doors, finish all edges and surfaces to check moisture absorption. Use paint, shellac or varnish.

Q. We—my wife and I—are in an argument about how to paint paneled doors. Should the panels or the main part of the door be painted first? — R.S.D.

A. The panels

'Everything About Fleas....'

By FRANK J. JASA
County Agricultural Agent

Pet owners often complain about the difficulty in controlling fleas on their pets or around the home. Perhaps this article should be entitled "everything you have always wanted to know about fleas."

By Jumping from place to place and hitchhiking rides on people and animals, the flea has been able to circle the globe. Of the approximate 1100 species, 200 live in North America. Their homes are any warm-blooded animal, such as birds, foxes, rabbits, dogs, cats, mice, rats, bats, mink, muskrats, and shrews.

The largest flea ever found measured ¼ inch long. It undoubtedly worried its owner to distraction! To observe the usual flea, one needs a magnifying glass. The flat body with the little spines that point backward could then be seen. These enable the flea to progress forward through the fur, and become a prop to hold him against a hair shaft when escape is necessary. The flea has a thoustache of extra heavy spines, which is the only way the species can be identified. Some possess 1 or 2 sharp mandibles and 4 palps, which are used in conjunction with 2 tubes, 1 large to suck blood and 1 small to excrete saliva. When a flea bites, the pumping-sucking action puts slavia into the wound, which causes pain and prevents clotting of the blood. Their jerky walk, half hop, is attributed to the 6 legs found on the head section. Some fleas have been known to hop 12 inches up and 2 feet across. That's traveling for a parasite!

The skeleton is on the outside, forming an armor plate, and can only be crushed by fingernails. They can be squeezed to supposed annihilation, but their flat body escapes the soft fingertips, and off they hop when the enemy peeks. Because they are so difficult to kill and catch, their life span may be 2 years of indeterminable itching bites.

Fleas mate by scraping their hind legs, either together or on the abdomen. This creates a high squeek, very appealing to the mate. The female may lay up to 500 eggs in her lifetime. These hatch in a few days to a few months, depending on the surrounding conditions. The babies are born blind, legless and hungry. The miniature vacuum cleaners live on plant and animal debris for 2 weeks, until they spin their cocoon of sticky silk. The cocoon picks up dust, hiding it, and hatching anywhere from 20 days to several months. If the house has been vacant for a vacation, it is a good idea to send Fido or Kitty in first, to reclaim his family. Better he than you!

Insulation Will Muffle Running Water Sound

By GENE GARY
The Herald Services

Q: Plumbing pipes leading into our bathroom are between the bath and bedroom walls. The sound of running water is so loud it often prevents sound sleep. Is there some way insulation could be put between the walls, or would the application of an accoustical-type ceiling material on the bedroom side of the wall help? — P.C.R.

A. Any insulation would help deaden the noise. There are several sound-absorbing materials, including a plastic foam in 24- and 48-inch wide rolls, one-fourth inch thick, which might be placed around the pipes, if you can get into the wall without causing too much damage. Acoustical plaster may be applied to firm existing plaster. Some plastic sound-absorbing materials are sprayed to produce coatings as much as three-fourths of an inch thick. Another posibility would be to panel the bedroom wall next to the bathroom, attaching the paneling to furred strips, leaving a dead air space.

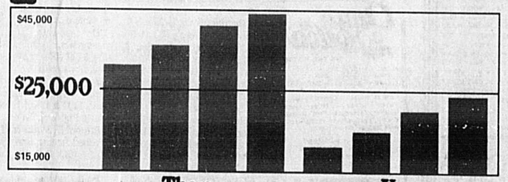
We broke the price barrier.



There are plenty of new houses available in the Orlando area. Only trouble is, most people can't afford to live in them. So, hundreds of young couples, new families, working people, and folks on fixed incomes have had to rent without the chance to build up equity in a home of their own. Till now. Because, today, just about anyone who can afford to rent can afford to buy at Indian Ridge.
These one, two and three bedroom individual garden homes are fully equipped, air conditioned with private fenced yards situated on lovely, safe cul-de-sac streets. And, unlike apartments, there are no common walls, no one upstairs, no one downstairs. There's even a clubhouse complex under construction with a 40 by 60 foot swimming pool and tennis courts.
But, you really won't know just how far your housing dollar can go until you inspect our four furnished models. Come out soon. With rising costs, we won't be able to hold these prices for long. Indian Ridge, the family condominium community that broke the price barrier.
Indian Ridge. At long last.
Directions: Take I-4 or US 17/92 to SR 434, then east 7/10ths of a mile, beyond Sheoah Golf Course to the Indian Ridge signs.

Vacationers Offered Silent Guide

By FRANK T. MARTIN
The Herald Services

Just about the time the summer vacation season is arriving for millions of Americans, the Interior Department's Geological Survey comes up with a topographic quadrangle map—a sort of "silent guide" for campers, hikers, fishermen, hunters and other outdoor buffs.

The Survey will distribute more than 10 million of its 40,000 "topo" maps before the year has ended.

For the vacationer who wants to stray away from the beaten path, the maps show the shape and elevations of regional terrains and mark out a wide range of natural and man-made features in detail so they will be recognizable.

If you aren't sure how to use a topo map, specialists at the Survey's National Cartographic Information Center, Reston, Va., have some map use tips for you:

With a little practice in reading contour lines on the map, the outdoorsman can determine the height of each hill, the depth of each valley and the approximate elevation and slope of the ground at any point.

For hunters who can pay a preseason visit to a game area, the maps are silent guides to help them find the way easily. For hunters who can't make the early inspection trip, the maps should be studied at home. They provide an inventory of an area's physical characteristics and information needed to schedule movements of individual hunters or groups of them.

Fishermen can use the topo maps to plan routes to a special lake or promising trout pool.

The center also can provide information on the availability of special maps showing water depths and fishing conditions for many lakes.

The maps show access roads, Jeep and pack trails, even old logging roads in some instances. Fire lanes and good travel routes in heavily wooded country are displayed, too. A green overprint distinguishes wooded areas, scrub, orchards and vineyards from cleared land. Woodlands providing cover for game and open lands that furnish grazing areas are easily identified.

Topo maps show streams, springs and ponds, the potential water sources for game. Swamps and marshes, the haunts of turkeys, beavers and muskrats, are identified with appropriate symbols.

Important to sportsmen, too, are the boundaries of public game preserves, wilderness and wildlife areas shown on topo maps. Dams, locks, falls and rapids, depending on their size, generally are easy to spot and locate.

Clearly mapped are trails, campsites, springs, scenic overlooks, historic landmarks and other features of interest to the sportsman or tourist.

Seminole County continues its fantastic growth rate making it one of the fastest in the United States. Each week, The Herald reports the total land transactions within the county. To be informed of our growth pattern be sure and read Lifestyles each Sunday.

The value of real property changing ownership during the week ending June 21 was $4,258,800 for a total activity in 1974 to date of $121,491,820. In the same 1973 week real estate conveyances were valued at $6,607,466 for a total from Jan. 1 through the week of $151,010,375.

Jim Backus Eulogizes Bandleader Jack Miles

By JAMES BACON
The Herald Services

HOLLYWOOD — Bandleader Jack Miles, 61, one of the early discoverers of Frank Sinatra, died recently of a heart attack.

The onetime Guy Lombardo sideman was buried at Westwood Memorial where Marilyn Monroe lies. His old friend Jim Backus, delivered the eulogy.

I remember Jack's band — and he was a terrific singer — from Al Quadhack's Granada Cafe in Chicago. It was the days when Al Capone was the guy to know in the Windy City.

Mrs. Miles, who called with the sad news, told the story of how Jack had spotted Frank singing in a Hoboken, N.J., saloon one night and hired him on the spot.

Frank came over to New York but Jack's band was not getting the breaks. After all, Jack gave him to Harry. We all know the rest of that story.

I tried to get in touch with Frank but he was still sleeping. No one disturbs Frank when he is sleeping.

Told you the other day about Sinatra's MacLaine sending out all those invitations to her pals for her opening at the MGM Grand hotel on July 12, including Sinatra's former wife Nancy. Brando and a few Kennedys.

In fact, there were 600 invitations in all. She could have saved one airmail stamp. She sent one to Kirk Kerkorian. Kirk owns the hotel.

Speaking of Sinatra as we were, comedian Pat Paulsen, who is appearing with Frank at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, is a big sports fan. He was there for a recent fight between Muhammad Ali and Joe Bugner.

"Frank was there for a while," says Pat. "It was really a big event. After all, Jack gave him to Harry. We've got to be a pretty important person to rate a ringside seat in the audience with Sinatra."

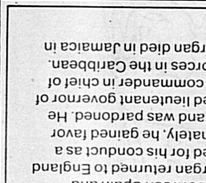
SIR HENRY MORGAN



Sir Henry Morgan was a British buccaneer, born about 1635 in Wales. It is believed that he was kidnapped as a young man and sold as a slave in Barbados. He went to sea and sailed as a buccaneer, becoming admiral of the pirate fleet. Under orders from the governor of Jamaica, Morgan and his fleet ravaged ports in the Caribbean and the Mediterranean Seas. After the peace treaty between Spain and England, Morgan returned to England to be punished for his conduct as a pirate. Fortunately, he gained favor with the king and was pardoned. He was appointed lieutenant governor of Jamaica and commander in chief of the English forces in the Caribbean. Sir Henry Morgan died in Jamaica in 1698.

COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD-

ITALY
Italy is a European country slightly larger than Nevada and includes the large islands of Sicily and Sardinia. Its northern border is shared with 4 countries: France, Switzerland, Austria and Yugoslavia. Italy is a long peninsula, surrounded on three sides by water. The largest city and capital is Rome, where Vatican City is located. Most Italians speak Italian and are Roman Catholics.

SWITZERLAND
The small country of Switzerland is completely surrounded by 4 European countries: France, West Germany, Austria and Italy. Switzerland is about the size of South Carolina with 3 times as many people. The capital is Bern but the largest city is Geneva. Most Swiss speak either German, French or Italian and are either Protestant or Roman Catholic.

A Child's View Of Tragedy

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Kim Darby told me this touching story about her ex-husband, Jim Stacy, and their five-year- old daughter, Heather.

After Stacy was so badly injured in that motorcycle accident Kim had to do a lot of explaining. Jim and Heather had been very close.

"Heather is more like Jim than like me," Kim says. "She isn't afraid of anything. She's a tomboy, very sure of herself. I was always the insecure sort.

"Jim would always do physical things with her — he'd take her swimming and skiing and do all kinds of activities with her. She loved that."

After he was hurt — he lost a left arm and leg in a motorcycle-car accident — Kim had to explain to her daughter that her father wouldn't be coming over and taking her to the beach or to the mountains.

"He won't be able to take you swimming or skiing any more, darling," Kim said to Heather.

"But," the little girl said, "he'll still be able to smile at me, won't he?"

Kim says Jim is doing nobly with the one arm and one leg he has left. This past Easter, he brought Heather an Easter bunny as a present, one of those plush stuffed toys. She handled it roughly and its nose fell off.

With his one hand, Jim sewed a button on to replace the bunny's nose.

During the disastrous Goldwyn Studio fire, some of the firemen looked around and were startled to see Steve McQueen manning a hose. They shouldn't have been startled — he's an accredited volunteer fireman and often helps out at major Los Angeles fires.

John Wayne is in the hospital again and his friends are worried. No word yet on whether this is just a checkup or if there is anything more serious involved.

He Married Fascinating Women (And Had Seven Brilliant Divorces)

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — "As soon as I heard Robert Redford was playing Gatsby, I knew they were in trouble, " Artie Shaw declared.

Bald, moustachioed and bespectacled, the former bandleader and superstar of the Big Band Era, was wearing a red and white striped jacket and talking a blue streak in a sunny corner of a Beverly Hills pub.

His theme of the moment was his frustration over Paramount's treatment of "The Great Gatsby" which, he said, had knocked him out of producing a Broadway show.

"I'm not criticizing Redford as an actor," Shaw enlarged, "but he was totally wrong for the part. Gatsby, you see, was a campy character.

"Redford should have played Nick. He would have been perfect.

"I'm suing David Merrick and Paramount.

"I was going to produce 'The Great Gatsby' as a Broadway musical, but, after what they've done to it, I've let the project drop. Who'd want to see it now?"

Shaw is a clarinetist, composer, bandleader, writer and sometimes actor, but his talents don't begin to stop there.

He's a gifted conversationalist, a versatile businessman and was Lana Turner's first husband. And as if that weren't enough, he's also been married to Ava Gardner, Kathleen Winsor, Margaret Allen, Elizabeth Kern, Doris Dowling and Evelyn Keyes, who currently retains his name if not his person.

"Evelyn and I like each other, but we can't stand living together," Shaw says, explaining their separation.

"I got the rights to 'The Great Gatsby' in 1967 or '68 from the Fitzgerald estate,' he continued, returning to his annoyance with Paramount and its new rendering of the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel.

"I used to know F. Scott Fitzgerald when he was living at the Garden of Allah and I was a kid in Hollywood, and I admired him enormously.

"So I got the rights to produce 'The Great Gatsby' as a Broadway musical with the stipulation that if the show ran for 21 performances all rights would merge. In other words, I'd have the rights for pictures, television and everything else except the literary treatment.

ARTIE SHAW

"Then I heard Merrick was going to produce the picture for Paramount.

"I tried to discuss the thing with him in hopes of reaching some sort of agreement, because you don't look for lawsuits.

"But there finally comes a time when you have to go for horsewhips or lawyers, so I'm suing.

"I'd spent $160,000 on preproduction and was ready to begin casting. Jimmy Caan was being considered for Gatsby, and he would have been a good one.

"A musical would have been more faithful to the original work than that picture is, because you can't translate poetic English into a graphic medium. But you can into music.

"A man can sing something he'd sound foolish saying if he simply talked."

Shaw was in Los Angeles to introduce a Count Basie concert for the benefit of Actors and Others for Animals, but normally he lives in the East.

"I lived in Spain for five years," he said, "and for the first three years it was bliss. The phone didn't ring once.

"Then the fourth year American corruption began to set in. Also I wasn't so sure then who I am as I am now. So the fifth year I came home.

"I think the biggest reason for the generation gap is that too many older people refuse to face up to the realities of life, so the young people can't accept them."

Shaw's Hollywood career was not only marked by marriages to sex symbols, but by a try at acting which he recalls with distaste.

"I made two pictures," he remembered, "and after the first at Metro I swore I'd never make another. That was 'Dancing Coed,' and in it I met Lana, but, before it was over, I swore I'd never again become a living prop.

"However, I was in a second picture, because some friends of mine were making it, and I decided to join them. That was 'Second Chorus' with Fred Astaire, and it wasn't too bad."

As of now, Shaw is enthusiastically involved in a project for educational Television, a four-part program on the swing era, its antecedents, its content and its effects.

"That era," he reflected, "was one of the few periods in which the artist was playing to the absolute limits of his ability, and the audience was screaming for more."

For a man whose conversation is generally uninhibited, Shaw's remarks about his wives are quite restrained.

"If you have a choice between marrying a dull woman and a fascinating one," he said, "you naturally marry the fascinating one, and I married the best I could get. And I imagine they did the same, because they had other chances.

"I don't mind questions about my marriages if they are sensible questions, but you'd be surprised how often a writer will say, 'Tell me about Lana.'

"Tell him about Lana! What does he want me to tell him about Lana? How can I respond to that?

"Yes, Ava and I are good friends. I'm friendly with some of my wives, and in some cases, we can't stand each other.

"However, all my marriages were mistakes.

"My divorces were brilliant."

RICHARD BURTON

Ill Burton Still A Romantic

By DICK KLEINER
The Herald Services

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Direct from a nurse, who should know, comes the report that Richard Burton is currently in a Santa Monica hospital, "drying out."

He has a guard posted at his door, to keep all visitors out. But he has ingratiated himself with the patients by sending some of the more seriously ill ladies bouquets of roses. He may be having problems but he hasn't lost the old romantic touch.

One of Hollywood's brightest nights ever was the lavish premiere of MGM's nostalgic look at the old musicals, "That's Entertainment." The guest list was a walking history.

Before I developed writer's cramp, I wrote down these names of people I spotted in the crowd: Ruth Buzzi, Keenan Wynn, Eva Gabor, Alexis Smith, George Hamilton, Jackie Cooper, Gloria Swanson, Merle Oberon, June Allyson, Elizabeth Taylor, Charlton Heston, George Burns, Richard Anderson, Terry Moore, Ann Rutherford, Rod McKuen, Jkloin Hyglmnpx. (That last one was when the old wrist began to go.)

At the dinner party after the screening, Sammy Davis and Liza Minnelli sort of hosted an impromptu thing, which had Debbie Reynolds singing, Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly and Adele Astaire and Ginger Rogers dancing, and Donald O'Connor doing a little of everything.

Poor Donald stayed on too long, but Debbie Reynolds, with her usual directness, got him off tactfully — she danced him off the stage.

I sat with the O'Brien girls — unrelated. Margaret has lost weight and looks great. Virginia was holding hands with her husband of five years, Harry White. When they got married, they each had four children.

Marcus Welby Will Show His New Image

By JOSEPH THESKEN
The Herald Services

HOLLYWOOD — It seems that a restlessness has invaded the life of Marcus Welby. Up to now, the kindly doctor has been content as a general practitioner, devoting all his energies to the care of his patients.

This is going to change next fall. Dr. Welby will be leaving his office two afternoons a week, not to play golf as some of his colleagues do, but to teach at a nearby hospital.

His plans were leaked to the press recently by a man who knows his every move. You might say the doctor wouldn't make a move without him.

David Victor, creator of "Marcus Welby, M.D.," and the show's executive producer, recently revealed details of the doctor's new image, appropriately enough, at a conference here of family physicians.

His title will be, according to Victor, director of the family practice training center at Lang Memorial Hospital. The locale will be somewhere in Southern California.

I suspect that Victor is trying to add a little zest in Welby's life, or possibly give a spurt in the ratings to the series, which will be in its sixth season.

But, if you would believe the producer, it's just a matter of changing the emphasis for the physician.

"Marcus Welby is going to spend two afternoons a week supervising the work of first —, second — and third-year residents," he told the real-life doctors.

"His involvement with these young people will give us a lot of the excitement and confrontation we could no longer do as well with Steve Kiley, who by now is a more mellow and experienced doctor.

"The young residents are idealistic, fiesty, in many respects anti-establishment, and wide open for the maturing process which often includes foolhardiness and making errors."

Sounds a little familiar. Remember when Ray Massey counseled young doctors in "Doctor Kildare" and Sam Jaffe was the sage of the staff in "Ben Casey?" Could be that Victor is taking a page from these oldies.

Victor said Dr. Welby will continue with his regular practice, and Dr. Kiley will remain as his assistant, both at the office and also the hospital.

Robert Young has the family doctor image. His Welby characterization has won wide approval from physicians and medical groups. But even a doctor must tire of the same routine.

In the 1974-75 season, "Marcus Welby" will be going against "Barnaby Jones," the Buddy Ebsen series which moves over from Sunday night, and NBC-TV's strong "Police Story."

It's enough to make the good doctor stir out of his office.

OUR MAN ON BROADWAY
Dick Maurice

While BARBARA STREISAND and hairdresser JON PETERS are said to be really "gone" on each other, he's still only separated from his actress wife LESIE ANN WARREN, and no steps have been taken toward divorce. Barbra is a gal who don't go along with the new life - together - without - marriage lifestyle. If she forces the issue, she could lose her lover. Meanwhile, perhaps he could do something about her hair, which somehow never looks neat.

Speaking of romance, the one between JOANNE CARSON and PHIL VANDERVOORT really is lasting. But Joanne will think a long time before plunging into a marriage and giving up all that alimony from Johnny.

MARLENE DIETRICH has been quite ill, and was hiding away in Houston's Methodist Hospital, a patient of famous heart specialist DR. MICHAEL DeBAKEY. The official story is that she was there for treatment of a leg injury. JOLIE GABOR, mother of ZSA ZSA, EVA and MAGDA, is another lady who's very ill. Let's hope they both get better quickly.

DICK POWELL JR., a deadringer for his dad is working as a clerk in a mens shop. Seems his stab at acting didn't even scratch anyone let alone make a lasting mark. He blames it all on his lack of height which didn't bother CAGNEY, ROONEY or little old ALAN LADD.

JOAN BLONDELL is one actress who says she'll leave "Women's Lib" up to the other ladies. "The man's still the boss to me, It's too hard to wipe out the habits of a lifetime and change what I've always believed."

CLORIS LEACHMAN, separated from her director husband GEORGE ENGLUND, says they don't plan an immediate divorce. They've parted several times before and both feel a long vacation may bring them back together.

MARY TYLER MOORE about her now-he-is-now-he-ain't husband, GRANT TINKER, from whom she was separated but now isn't: "We have a better relationship now than we ever had. We have separate positions, individual positions, and it's all better now," and if you can figure that out I give each of you an 8x10 enlargement of HENRY KISSINGER IN TIGHTS.

JASON ROBARDS, who had three facial operations in a year after an auto accident that almost cost him his life, has given up drinking and smoking due to doctor's orders (they slow down the healing process). Jason always speaks highly of LAUREN BACALL because she's the only one of his three exwives who has never asked for alimony.

Problems of a super-star: I was standing with GEORGE PEPPARD in a restaurant when a young girl rushed up to him, ponned him against the wall (where he was already standing) with her body, opened her mouth wide and kissed him. She either kissed him or inhaled his tonsils, I don't know which. I don't say Peppard retreated or anything but all I know is that a few minutes later she followed us to the next place and begged him to make love to her. In this case I do say that Peppard retreated. At least in front of me, he did. I found the whole thing very interesting.

I like ANN SOTHERN's comment about the current nostalgia craze: "I hate it because I don't like looking back," Ann is currently filming "Golden Needles," in which she'll wear her hair frizzed and curled just as she did in the "Maisie" film series, so popular back in the 40's.

It seems hard to believe but TUESDAY WELD tells me at the age of 12 she was definitely an "ugly duckling" and very unhappy. "I was overweight, had bad skin, and was a mess in general," says the pretty actress. "But I began watching what I ate and eventually everything straightened out for me. I want to tell any teen-agers with the same problems that with positive thinking and action, they can overcome the same problems."

DEAN MARTIN and his missus, CATHY, are doing it the easy way. They're adopting a baby...

JOANNE WOODWARD and PAUL NEWMAN have their summer all planned. For the first time in their 16-year marriage they're going to be alone, with the children in camp. Paul is going to race his car at tracks on the east coast and Joanne will go along to cheer him. She will also be associate director of Paul's next film, "Tin Lizzie Troop." She hopes eventually to leave acting.

With "X" rated films no longer doing big business (Probably the public finally decided if you've seen one nude body, you've seen them all), clean family flicks seem on the way back. Disney Productions will make seven pictures this year. The newest release from Disney films had its premiere at Radio City Music Hall. "Herbie Rides Again" is the greatest love (bug) story ever told! It stars HELEN HAYES, KEN BERRY and STEFANIE POWERS. It's a fun-filled laugh-a-minute film for the entire family.

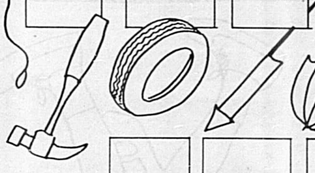
JOEY HEATERTON who's so gorgeous and so successful just dumped her press agent and her manager all in one shot.

FIVE-CENT PIECE: Movie buffs over the years have debated whether GEORGE RAFT used a nickel, quarter or half-dollar to flip a coin in 1932's "Scarface." The Answer: a nickel.

Disney Gives 'Robin Hood' Twist

There is no legendary character, except perhaps King Arthur, who has been subject to as much conjecture about his actual existence as Robin Hood.

Now the exploits of the rogue of Sherwood Forest get a whole different twist in story telling by Walt Disney Productions in its new animated cartoon, "Robin Hood," in which the characters are all animals. And heading the cast of voices are Peter Ustinov, Phil Harris, Brian Bedford, Terry-Thomas, Andy Devine, Pat Buttram and Roger Miller. It started at the Sanford Plaza Friday and will run one week.



Robin Hood, the great English hero of the common people, was first popularized in English medieval ballards. He was mentioned in the writings of the Scottish historian Fordun in the late 14th century, and about the same time, in the English poem, "The Vision of Piers Plowman."

Doubt surrounding his existence far outweighs any evidence that he lived. One source says that he was born about 1160 at Locksley Notts and was the outlawed Earl of Huntington, Robert Fitzooth, in disguise. The first collection of ballads about him was the "Lytel Geste of Robin Hood" by Wynkyn de Worde around 1490.

The character is written about in Drayton's "Polyolbion," and Sir Walter Scott introduced him in two of his novels, "Ivanhoe" and "The Talisman."

Robin Hood has been the inspiration of many novels and plays, an operetta (1890) by Reginald De Koven, and numerous movies, among them the silent classic starring Douglas Fairbanks Sr., and the Errol Flynn version. Disney produced a picture, "The Story of Robin Hood and His Merrie Men," in England starring Richard Todd, which was released in 1952. And Richard Greene played Robin Hood in a TV series in 1955, also made in England.

In color by Technicolor, "Robin Hood" was produced and directed by Wolfgang Reitherman. Additional vocal talents were contributed by George Lindsey, Ken Curtis, Monica Evans, Carole Shelley, Barbara Luddy and John Fiedler. The story is by Larry Clemmons, based on character and story conceptions by Ken Anderson. Story sequences are by Ken Anderson, Vance Gerry, Frank Thomas, Eric Cleworth, Julius Svendsen and Dave Michener. Buena Vista releases.

Only A Good Song Beats Cabbie Story

By DICK KLEINER
The Herald Services

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Theodore Bikel breezed through town on one of those 24-hour visits. But Hollywood is such a small town that just everybody knew it — he's one of the more popular men in show business — and pretty soon he had everybody knocking on his hotel door.

He held court, telling New York taxi cab stories. Like the one about the cabbie who picked him up and said he reminded him of someone.

"You know who?" he said.

"You remind me of Theodore Bikel, may he rest in peace."

Another time, he was picked up by a lady cabbie, a husky dame who asked him if he knew her kid brother, an actor named Herschel Bernardi. Bikel said sure he knew Herschel Bernardi. And the next time he met Bernardi, he said, "You know, the funniest thing happened. I was in a New York cab and —."

"Estelle," said Bernardi.

Bikel, these days, is doing mostly concerts and clubs. He's lucky. When acting parts are scarce, he just puts on his other hat and sings. he estimates that half his income comes from concerts. He says he's been doing a lot of that new-fangled gimmick, dinner theater. He thinks this is the coming thing in musical show business.

Coming up — a musical version of "David Copperfield." It has been written by Al Kasha and Joel Hirschhorn, the two men who won an Oscar for their song, "The Morning After," from "The Poseidon Adventure."

United Artists will shoot it in England, late this summer. Kasha and Hirschhorn tell me that no definite casting has been set yet but they say there is a "strong possibility" of two exciting bits of casting.

They say that Katharine Hepburn may play Aunt Betsy and that Peter Ustinov may be their Micawber.

Kasha and Hirschhorn played five of the songs from the score for me. (And Kasha should sing in public more, because he has a fine voice.) The songs were nice and melodic and were a perfect illustration of their musical philosophy.

There will only be 10 songs in the entire "David Copperfield" film. They feel that, in most musicals, there are too many songs.

DEAR FAITHFUL:

YOUR CHARTS ARE EXTREMELY COMPATIBLE. IT'S SELDOM THAT TWO HOROSCOPES BLEND PERFECTLY. THERE ARE AREAS WHERE YOU AND HE COULD CLASH. HOWEVER, YOU BOTH SHOW A WILLINGNESS TO ADJUST AND MAKE CONCESSIONS. ACCEPTING A PERSON'S GOOD POINTS IS EASY. IT'S ONLY WHEN WE'RE TOLERANT TOWARD THEIR FAULTS AS WELL THAT A UNION CAN FLOURISH.

BERNICE PREDICTS

EARLY IN THE WEEK OF JUNE 30-JULY 6 INDIVIDUALS ARE APT TO PROMISE FAR MORE THAN THEY'RE PREPARED TO DELIVER. COST OF FOREIGN GOODS WILL BE GREATLY INFLATED. NATIONALLY, INDUSTRIAL PROJECTIONS WILL BE SLANTED TO THE ROSE-COLORED RATHER THAN THE REALISTIC. AROUND MIDWEEK PEOPLE'S ATTITUDES CHANGE TO A "NO-NONSENSE" OUTLOOK. YOU'LL HAVE LESS ROOM TO MANEUVER IN YOUR ONE-TO-ONE DEALINGS. OTHERS ARE LIKELY TO BE AS UNCOMPROMISING AS YOURSELF. PERSONS WITH PAST-DUE OBLIGATIONS COME UNDER THE GUN THIS WEEK.

YOUR WEEK AHEAD

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Give family matters priority on Sunday. Clear judgment and well defined goals are a must this week or little will be achieved. Saturday is your best day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Handle all business and commercial dealings cautiously this week. Also, cut down on unnecessary travel. Conditions grow more to your liking as week closes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Frustrating; Partnership situations early in the week. Don't fall behind in your obligations or there'll be a reckoning. Saturday, new solutions for an old problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Monday and Tuesday will not see your most productive efforts where your work is concerned. Midweek, a poor time for legal agreements. Friends are very helpful on Saturday.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Speculative or risky ventures will prove expensive if you indulge this week. Pace yourself around midweek to avoid strain from overwork. A pleasant weekend socially.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Monday and Tuesday, inner doubts dilute your effectiveness. Wednesday till Friday you're likely to be wasteful, careless. You get back to your old self as week closes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Traveling will not be too nifty Monday, Tuesday. Family responsibilities are exceptionally demanding most of the week. A social contact guides you to something worthwhile Saturday.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Manage money, material possessions very carefully early in the week. Your ideas won't be too well received from midweek to early Friday. Weekend: An interesting visitor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) Monday and Tuesday, check impulsiveness or you'll get on the wrong track. Financial demands; heavy most of this week — no time to lend or borrow. Things improve by weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Early in the week someone behind the scenes will create a problem. Treat everyone you deal with this week extra-thoughtfully to avoid friction. Weekend is good for finances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 20) Monday, Tuesday, outside interests interfere with things you should be doing. Responsibilities strap you down from midweek on. Friday afternoon you break into the open.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions having an effect on your reputation and friendships will cause some headaches this week. Be as reliable as you can. A marked improvement begins Saturday.

MAGNETIC INDUCTION, THE GENERATION OF CURRENT IN A CONDUCTOR MOVING THROUGH A MAGNETIC FIELD, WAS DISCOVERED BY THE ENGLISH SCIENTIST, MICHAEL FARADAY, IN 1831.

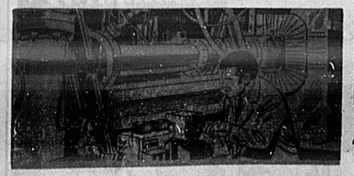
THIS MADE POSSIBLE TODAY'S HUGE DYNAMOS, USED TO GENERATE ELECTRICITY.

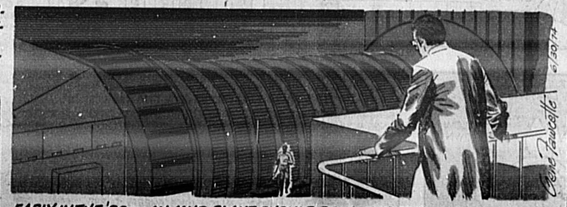
MHD...

THREE LETTERS WHICH STAND FOR THE JAWBREAKING "MAGNETOHYDRODYNAMICS," MAY ALSO SPELL THE BEGINNING OF A FANTASTIC POLLUTION-FREE, HIGHLY-EFFICIENT POWER SOURCE. BY BLASTING A SUPER-HEATED GAS OR PLASMA* (5000°F. OR 2760°C.) THROUGH A POWERFUL MAGNETIC FIELD, ELECTRICITY IS GENERATED. THE MHD SYSTEM IS ALMOST DOUBLE THE EFFICIENCY OF A STANDARD NUCLEAR POWER PLANT.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS!

THE AVCO EVERETT RESEARCH LAB IN MASSACHUSETTS, A LEADER IN THE FIELD, IS NOW WORKING ON AN EXPERIMENTAL 500 KILOWATT MHD GENERATOR TO OPERATE CONTINUOUSLY FOR AT LEAST 1000 HOURS.





EARLY IN THE '80s, AN MHD PLANT SHOULD BE IN OPERATION, PRODUCING ONE BILLION WATTS. COSTS WOULD BE ABOUT THE SAME AS A CONVENTIONAL SYSTEM, BUT SAVINGS IN FUEL WOULD AMOUNT TO BILLIONS OF DOLLARS!

SOMETIMES CALLED THE FOURTH STATE OF MATTER—AFTER SOLID, LIQUID AND GAS—PLASMA IS COMPOSED ONLY OF PARTS OF ATOMS.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — I had so much trouble zipping my boots till my father suggested rubbing a bar of soap along the zipper. This worked so well I tried it on my coat zipper, too. — L.C.O.

DEAR POLLY — After shampooing our carpet I go back over it with clear water and a fabric softener. This makes the carpet softer, cuts down on the static electricity and does not attract or hold soil. — DORIS.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, c/o this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Our family has done a lot of camping and like so many others we have used paper plates to ease the clean-up chores. The plates were often quite hard to manage, particularly for things like scrambled eggs and baked beans. We now use aluminum-foil pie plates and put a paper-plate liner inside of each. The tins stack neatly, require little space and are unbreakable. — LAVERNE.

DEAR POLLY — Before our son left for the Air Force, he put his cork bulletin board up on the wall of my sewing room directly over my sewing machine. I pin pattern guides on it so they are easy to refer to while sewing and I also keep extra pins there. Not only is this handy for my sewing things, but when I use it I am thankful for a thoughtful son rather than lonely by seeing it empty on his wall. — J.H.

DEAR POLLY — During the energy crisis I think we housewives should also form our car pools for shopping. Those who do not drive could chip in on the cost of the gas. — ETHELYN.

DEAR POLLY — When I do any hand-washing that has to line-dry on a hanger I slip a plastic cleaner's bag over a painted wire coat hanger and put the garment on this. There is no danger of rust. The plastic bag seems to cling to the material, so it dries faster and with fewer wrinkles. — DEBBIE S.

DEAR POLLY — When I sew belt loops on pants I make, I leave the center back loop a little longer to allow more "give" in the pants when the wearer bends over. — HERWANNAH.

DEAR POLLY — For 20 years I have used the following trick when making bread. I make the dough as thick as possible in a bowl and then pour it into a large clean garbage bag that has been thickly coated with flour. This way the dough can be kneaded to perfection without my hands ever getting sticky. I use this same bag for rolling out cookies, doughnuts and pie crusts. This same garbage bag can be used over and over and then thrown away or put to its original use. — ROBERTA.

Pineapple Motif

This luxurious cloth is crocheted in the pineapple motif and is sure to become an heirloom to be used on festive occasions. No. 2467 has complete crochet directions; stitch illustrations.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A grieving Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., his shirt-sleeves stained with his wife's blood, cried, "How much more can I take? How much more can I take?

"In some ways, it's worse than the assassination," said the stocky, gray-haired minister about the slaying Sunday of his wife Alberta, 69, as she played the organ in the Ebenezer Baptist Church.

He referred to the 1968 killing of his famed civil rights leader son, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., winner of the Nobel Peace prize. Less than 16 months later, King lost his younger and last son, A.D., who drowned in the swimming pool of his home.

King, 74, was not preaching at his Ebenezer church Sunday because he planned to leave early to catch a plane for a speaking engagement in Newark, N.J.

Hours after the shooting, as he sat in his home near a large portrait of Martin, King said, "I don't hate nobody. I'm everybody's brother."

Watching a television newscast which reported he was under sedation at a hospital, King declared, "Oh no, I'm not!"

"I think that typifies Daddy King," said the Rev. J. Randolph Taylor, a longtime friend of King's. "He's a very strong man."

In a recent interview, King said of his nine fatherless grandchildren, "I live for them, I'm the only man in their life."

"It's going to shorten my days, but I have got to see my grandchildren through," he said.

Four of his 10 grandchildren are the children of Martin, five are A.D.'s and one is the son of his only surviving child, Mrs. Isaac Farris.

The mood in the King household Sunday night was quiet, with at least 60 friends paying their respects.

Population Discussion Tuesday

The Second presentation of "The Fragile Nature of Central Florida," co-sponsored by Seminole Junior College and the Florida Citizen's Committee for the Humanities will be held Tuesday, at 7 p.m., in the Altamonte Springs Civic Center.

The second presentation in the series will examine "The effects of the Population Boom on Central Florida Eco-Systems."

The presentation will be chaired by Dr. David Dees, assistant professor of sociology at Florida Technological University.

Speakers will include Joel Kimsey of the United States Geological Survey who will examine the effects that growth is having on the Central Florida Water Supply; and Steven Provost, senior vice president with E.D.G. Engineering, Inc., Environmental Design Group, will speak on the compatibility of planned development within the unique ecological systems of Central Florida.

Roger Neiswander, Seminole County planning director, will examine the governmental planning process and comment on the effects that the county's 40 per cent growth rate is having on the ecological systems.

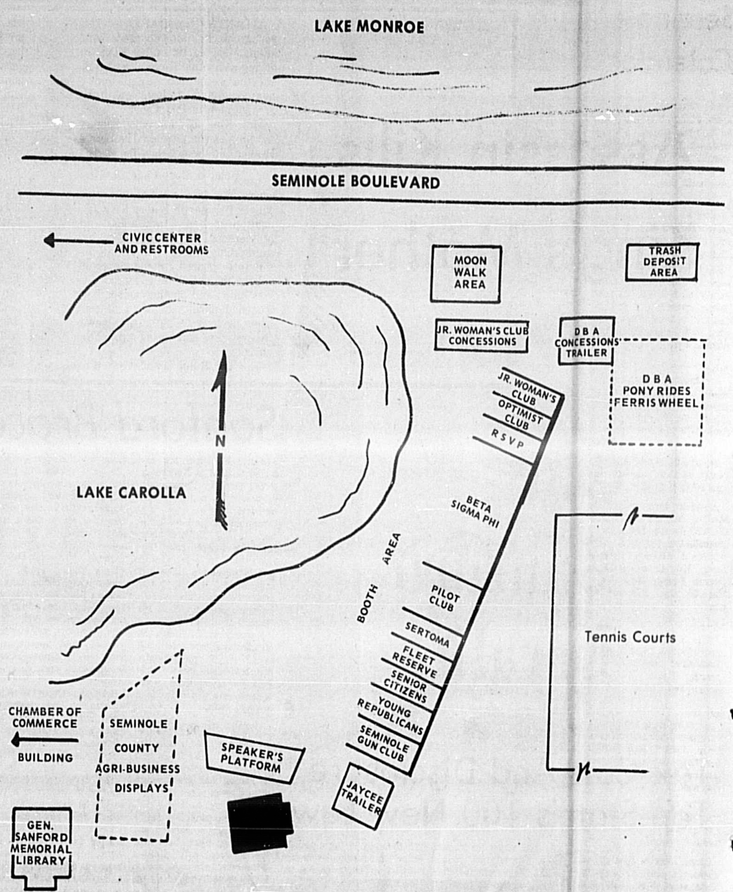
Legislative Answers

Questions about Florida legislation will be fielded Wednesday at coffee meetings sponsored by Rep Vince Fechtel, (R-Dist 35).

The meetings, open to the public and press, are scheduled for 7 to 9 a.m. at the Quality Inn at I-4 and SR 434, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Sanford Holiday Inn and from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Sanford Cavalier Motor Inn.

CofC Planning Bus Seminar

A panel discussion on bus transportation will be presented at the Altamonte-Casselberry Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting, Tuesday noon, at the Altamonte Springs Civic Center.



Sanford's July 4 celebration will have at least 16 service and civic organizations participating in the day-long event with booths providing food and entertainment. Festivities begin at 1 p.m. and conclude with the fireworks display scheduled for 9 p.m. (Related story on page 1.)

Congress Must Act On Budget

When Congress finally moves to implement the law it is now preparing to establish control over its own spending habits it will learn one hard fact of life. Over the years Congress has taken away from itself much of its own capability to control spending.

That, however, is not usually the picture that the national legislators try to project. As a result, the generally accepted stereotype is that the powers of the president have increased so much in this century that Congress doesn't have a chance to do much more than exercise general supervision over each appropriations bill and hope that everything balances at the end of the year.

Undeniably the president has acquired immense powers over national spending, particularly since the New Deal days of the 1930's opened the door to Pandora's box of social experimentation regardless of price. On the other hand, however, Congress has hardly done much to assert its authority or to streamline its antiquated fiscal procedures.

The measure in the House-Senate conference committee seeks to remedy this long-standing oversight. One aspect of the law would prevent the president from impounding any funds appropriated by Congress unless the legislative body gives its approval.

Another aspect of the proposed law would establish in Congress for the first time a professional budget staff comparable to the Office of Budget and Management in the executive branch. The congressional office and a new agenda for the budgetary process should give Congress a total picture of the budget at any time during its progress through the House and Senate an, hopefully, a chance to bring it into balance before it is approved.

The intention of Congress cannot be faulted. If Congress overhauls its backward procedures it will be better able to strike a balance with the executive branch during annual budgetary drills, particularly if the president and the majority of Congress are of different political parties.

However, everybody is familiar with the common fate of good intentions. Improved procedures alone won't necessarily achieve the results that Congress is seeking if individual members of the body do not have the will to bite the economy bullet.

The present situation has developed precisely because a majority of congressmen did not want to risk the disciplines and responsibilities of an efficient budgetmaking process, preferring the back door approach for the mountain of social programs that are mainly responsible for the annual federal red ink.

All of the good procedures in the world will not help unless the majority in Congress is of the mind that the budget must be in balance, whether it takes ruthless suppression of the appetite for spending or an equally ruthless increase in taxes.

Sloppy Food Labor Hurts Seller, Buyer

The Herald Services

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

While Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz wrings his hands in desperation, you and I continue to pay dearly for meat. At the same time cattlemen are in desperate straits because of skidding prices.

The problem, of course, is the widening spread between what consumers pay for meat and most other foods and what the farmer and cattlemen get.

The problem is not the middleman's profits. Whether these are too high or too low (depending on which side of the fence you sit), they account for only 4 per cent of the spread. Cutting these profits in half would reduce the prices we pay by less than 1 per cent.

The problem, rather, is that efficiency among wholesalers and retailers is so low. Though labor in this middleman industry is historically underpaid, labor costs account for half the spread between what the producer gets and what you are charged, which indicates a paucity of labor-saving techniques.

The men at the Agriculture Department know the cause full well. Their own figures show productivity in marketing has been increasing by a meager 2.6 per cent annually over the years from a very low base. It is now down to 2 per cent.

The agriculturists also know what should be done. Two examples will suffice:

Centralized meat cutting would reduce marketing costs substantially.

Standardized containers and pallets could increase efficiency greatly in the marketing of fruits and vegetables.

The inability of both industry and government to find effective ways for actually bringing marketing reforms into effect is particularly distressing. Economists in and out of the government had been counting on declining food prices (seasonally) and more restraint in full price increases, major factors in plans to wrestle inflation down to an annual rate of 8 per cent by early next year.

If food and fuel can't be be counted on for the slowdown, we may have little chance of dampening inflation below a 10 to 12 per cent a year.

For it is now all but certain that in the months ahead the prices of major basic industrial products — steel, nonferrous metals, paper, chemicals and the like — will move up forcefully under the pressure of shortages and higher production costs.

Declining markets overseas will increase industry's troubles, thus requiring a higher markup on goods distributed domestically. Labor costs will add to the price push, as workers attempt to catch up with inflation. High interest rates will hit producers where it hurts as they schedule new loans for expanding capacity. Productivity is expected to increase at a snail's pace, thus offering little help in the battle to hold costs down.

The higher prices in industries producing steel and other basics will be passed along on the finished products — automobiles, refrigerators and washing machines. So my economist friends may be prepared for further heavy inroads into your pocketbook.

The World Is Starving As Producers Scheme

By DON OAKLEY
The Herald Services

The world has to be just a little mad.

— American farmers, hoping to force a rise in the price of wheat, are withholding vast quantities of the winter wheat crop. Only about 20 per cent of the harvest has reached the market, where normally it would be 60 per cent at this time of year.

— Chicken producers, also in an effort to "improve" prices, are not storing their product but are destroying baby chicks by the thousands.

— Cattlemen, facing financial disaster because of depressed prices, are appealing to the government for aid. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, testifying before the House Agriculture Committee, warns that the United States will not "stand idly by and become the dumping ground for the world's surplus meat."

In the meantime:

—Millions of Africans living in the vast Sahel region below the Sahara face starvation in one of the worst droughts in history.

— The Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs is told that in the world's wealthiest nation, as much as one-third of the dog and cat food sold in city slums is eaten by people.

— The ordinary housewife, visiting the supermarket weekly or even daily, no longer knows what her food bill is going to be. Everything, with the possible exception of meat, keeps going up and up and up.

How can there be inflation for food consumers and deflation for food producers? Since when did the world have such an excess of grain that American farmers cannot get what they consider a fair price for it? Where did the world get such a surplus of meat that affluent America becomes a "dumping ground" for it? When did the much-warned-about specter of world famine vanish — if it did?

The fact is, of course, that people the world over are starving or are existing on substandard diets. The fact is that for millions, meat is an unobtainable luxury. The fact is that people starve, not just because they don't have food, but because they don't have the money to buy food.

The fact is, in short, that economics, not the absolute quantity of foodstuffs produced in the world, determines who eats what and how well they eat.

Until the world somehow puts its economic house in order and learns how to reconcile the laws of economics with the demands of human equity, it will continue to witness the unconscionable spectacle of widespread want existing side by side with plenty.

Beating A Dead Horseradish

The population explosion seems to have slowed down everywhere but in professional sports. There, the marriage of the athletic instinct and the profit motive has been producing squawking hordes of leagues and associations, which are definitely not meek but seem intent on inheriting the earth anyway.

Just recently we have been privileged to witness the birth of the World Football League, a new baseball league (that may have been premature), a new professional basketball league in Europe and a new tennis league.

They join all the previously established groups, that range from the elderly National League of baseball to the infantine World Hockey Association and the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society, a pro fishing circuit for which the fans have, contrary to all expectations, not yet fallen hook, line and sinker. Curt Gowdy preserve us.

But it's not hard to imagine the creation of even more leagues to help America answer that historic question, how many most valuable players can dance on the head of a trophy?

David Garyson, the arch-promoter who has already founded

11 football leagues and a mah jongg association, is even now forming the American Radish-eating Federation (ARF), which will have teams in 27 cities.

"Radish-eating isn't as yet one of your major sports," Garyson conceded, "but it has all the tools to become a big spectator draw and we've already signed some of the biggest names on the circuit: Cecil "Long Tooth" McGuffey, Harry "The Vegetarian" Grabowsky and Julia Child. We figure that by having special attractions like Napkin Day and Salt Day we should be able to pull in 15,000 people a game, easy."

Garyson says the ARF has already signed a contract with a television network to carry regular season competition, as well as the post-season eatoffs, with Pat Summerall doing the play- by-play.

"Of course we have to make it with our biggest franchises, like the New York Gourmets and the Los Angeles Hors d'Oeuvres," Garyson said. "But we've already sold 29 season tickets and once we get our promotion going, it'll be only a matter of time before kids are going around pestering their parents to buy them radish-eating equipment and team uniforms. Think of the spinoffs — ARF-endorsed radish seeds, ARF-endorsed fertilizers, ARF-endorsed hoes."

Garyson said the ARF is already planning expansion but that he isn't worried about diluting the talent of the league.

"Look, who's to say that Fargo, N.D., or Muscle Shoals, Ala., don't deserve big-league radish-eating?" he said indignantly.

What's OBSCENE ?

MERICAN MORALITY TODAY

By JOHN L. ROUSE
The Herald Services

The writer is editor of the Annapolis Capital.

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—(NEA)—The Supreme Court guidelines on obscenity hit Annapolis with all the force of a warm marshmallow.

After all, Annapolis is the spawning ground for young gentlemen and Naval officers and the Happy Hunting grounds for untold numbers of retired admirals. Short hair and the brace do not mix well with pornography, especially in this colonial city which has never quite got over the fact that George Washington actually spent more than a night here.

State legislators have been trying to put smut shops out of business (none of which are in Annapolis) by making the distribution of obscene material (the definition of which has never been agreed upon) a felony rather than the misdeamenor it now is.

The legislators have been making an unsuccessful attempt at abolishing the present system under which the state's attorney busts a dirty book shop, the owner goes to trial and pays a small fine, and reopens for business the next day.

Then of course the state of Maryland has a Board of Censors, which received national attention when the women who spend their days keeping their eyes at the ready for a bit too much flesh in the movies broke down into giggles on the Dick Cavett show a few years ago. The board is not a particularly strong body.

In Annapolis, it is a fact that the community standards are of the highest calibre. Even the mayor's name, John Agostol, has a certain moral ring to it. Of course, Playboy and Penthouse are available on the newsstands, but that's as far as it goes.

The Main Street movie theater offers R-rated films in an effort to tickle the supressed libido of the several thousand midshipmen who wander the city's streets when they're allowed beyond the Naval Academy's gates. But for anything spicier, Annapolitans have to travel to Baltimore's island of fleshy attractions, the infamous Block.

City residents were rubbed the wrong way by the opening of a massage parlor not far from the downtown colonial-style shopping district. However, most proper Annapolitans were comforted by a conviction that only out-of-towners and tourists ventured anywhere near the place.

Many residents of this beautiful city on the Chesapeake Bay are convinced that the only X-rated activity they have to endure is the annual three-month legislative session which fills the local bars and restaurants with Eastern Shore farmer-legislators hell bent on having a good time while they're away from their wives. After the session ends in April, the natives return to the bars and the city resumes its usual, staid pace of life, allowing for the occasional outburst of a tourist.

In Annapolis, the Supreme Court's obscenity guidelines weren't given nearly as much attention as the watermen's problems with the oyster beds in the bay.

Dems Mail Count Went To Nixon

(Copyright 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service apparently provided President Nixon with a confidential count of the volume of mail going into the headquarters of his Democratic opponent, Sen. George McGovern, during the last two months of the 1972 campaign.

With these figures, a direct mail expert could determine the response and even estimate the dollar figure McGovern was getting from his fund-raising drive.

The Democratic presidential candidate raised most of his campaign funds through mail solicitation. The contributions went through Washington's 20th Street post office.

We have now learned that the Postal Service on Sept. 5, 1972, began tabulating the volume of mail moving through the post office to McGovern's headquarters. This unusual mail count continued until Nov. 9, two days after the election.

The President appeared to be asking about this mail count on Sept. 15, 1972, according to the White House transcripts. He asked his counsel John Dean about "watching . . . McGovern contributors." Dean assured the President that "we've got a hawk's eye on that."

A moment later, the President mused: "I don't think he is getting a hell of a lot of small money. I don't think so. I don't believe this crap." Then he turned to his staff chief H. R. Haldeman. "Have you had this post office check yet?" Nixon inquired.

"That John was going to do," Haldeman replied. "I don't know."

The transcript doesn't show whether the President ever received this report on McGovern's mail. We have established only that a count was made.

The Postal Service also kept count of the mail going to President Nixon's campaign headquarters during the same two-month period. Our sources suggest, however, this may have been a camouflage. If only McGovern's mail had been counted, the sources pointed out, postal workers sympathetic to McGovern might have become suspicious and tipped off McGovern about the meddling with his mail.

A supervisor of the 20th Street station gave a lame explanation of the mail volume checks. He kept track of the campaign mail, he said, so he could plot future manpower needs. But the volume of mail generated by a presidential campaign, of course, wouldn't be duplicated for another four years.

The present 20th Street postmaster offered a conflicting but more plausible excuse. He said the volume figures were kept to protect the Postal Service from possible complaints. The White House did not respond to our requests for comment.

Meanwhile, Sen. McGovern is encountering echoes of 1972 in his fight for reelection to the Senate. The same false charges of cowardice that McGovern thought were laid to rest in 1972 have now been revived in his Senate campaign.

His opponent is a conservative former Air Force lieutenant colonel and Vietnam prisoner named Leo Thorsness. One of his first moves was to bring in an out-of-state consultant, Lyn Nofziger, who was a member of the White House dirty tricks team in 1972.

The veteran, able Nofziger was given $10,000 for example, to try to keep George Wallace off the California ballot in 1972. At least $1,200 of this money was distributed to American Nazi storm troopers, although Nofziger claims it was without his knowledge.

Earlier, Nofziger, as an aide to California's Gov. Ronald Regan, leaked information to the press about the homosexual activities of two liberal Reagan colleagues.

Now, scurrilous cards on McGovern's alleged cowardice of World War II are turning up in South Dakota. These quote from a discredited John Birch Society article which claims that McGovern, as a bomber pilot, refused to continue on a mission and his plane was flown back by a co-pilot. Actually, McGovern was a decorated war hero.

During the 1972 campaign, John Dean arranged for a contact to snoop into McGovern's service record to check out the cowardice story. But Dean was obliged to report to Haldeman in a confidential memo dated June 16, 1972:

"The party reviewing the file (advised) that there is nothing in McGovern's file which directly substantiates the allegation about his cowardice." On the contrary, Dean wrote, the records showed "the citations for McGovern's decorations, including his Distinguished Flying Cross, and reflects his various promotions during his military career."

There is no reason to believe that Leo Thorsness, a man of solid integrity, has had anything to do with distributing the cowardice cards. A spokesman said: "We don't want that kind of stuff around here."

Nofziger also denounced the distribution of the false charge as "crap." In Memphis, pamphleteer John W. Biggert, who printed the cards, said he had produced tens of thousands of cards in 1972. The South Dakota distribution, he said, was either from an old printing or were reproductions.

FLORIDA TODAY

Federal Disaster Aid

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State officials were to ask for federal disaster aid today, as subsiding waters gave residents of 13 Gulf Coast and Central Florida counties a chance to further assess damage caused by five days of torrential rains.

A spokesman for Gov. Reubin Askew said that the governor would sign applications for federal disaster aid today to provide relief to the affected areas.

The latest damage estimates rose to $24.7 million over the weekend, and Civil Defense officials said farm and crop destruction could not be gauged until waters completely subsided.

The National Weather Service in Lakeland said Sunday that water levels for the Hillsborough and Alafia Rivers were falling gradually from crests that rose to within two feet of flood levels.

Miss Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Miss Florida of 1974 says she opposes the women's liberation movement and she thinks that women are a lot better off than they realize.

Delta Leah Burke, 17, of Orlando, made the comments at a Sunday news conference after she was selected Saturday night from 36 contestants as the state's representative to the Miss America Pageant.

"Women's lib has some good points, but I'm against it," said Miss Burke, a freshman at Valencia Community College. "I think women have it a lot better than they realize. I wouldn't want to see it change."

Miss Burke was the winner of the swimsuit and talent competitions in the Miss Florida Pageant, taking the crown over first runner-up Nikki Haglund of North Miami and the other three finalists: Miss Tampa, Ginger Diane Burget; Miss Winter Haven, Deborah Lynn Adair; and Miss Jacksonville, Lisa Jones Clarson.

Increased Apprehension

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — In the wake of two slayings and increasing apprehension about threats from a group calling itself the Black Liberation Army, a civil rights spokesmen says he "is not surprised at these present happenings" and has criticized city officials.

"The city power structure has frequently been advised that racial tension in Jacksonville's Negro community cannot be lessened through use of favored black hangers-on...to impede progress for the masses of people," said Sam Jones, chairman of the state NAACP legal redress committee.

In a memorandum sent to leaders of the national organization, Jones said "There are about two dozen blacks out of Jacksonville's 150,000 Negroes who got favors from the political and economic bosses."

Meanwhile, police continue to investigate the two recent slayings.

Near the bodies of the two white teenagers, police have found notes claiming that the murders were the beginning of a racial revolution. Tape recordings mailed to the news media made the same threats.

Elderly Attacked

MIAMI (AP) — A band of bike-riding youths is preying on senior citizens here, snatching purses and terrorizing the elderly population, authorities say.

There were 13 strong-arm purse snatchings on senior citizens in the Sabal Palms section of town from June 1 to June 19, police say. Officers said seven of those attacks were made by juveniles riding bicycles.

Josephine Ianello, a grandmotherly woman who appears to be in her 60s but declines to tell her age, said she lost $18 when a teen-ager on a bike wrestled a purse from her hand.

"I felt sick for a long time" after the attack, she said. "Every time you talk to someone they say what a bad area this is," said Grace Tumpkins, a 26-year resident of the neighborhood. She said her next-door neighbor almost had a heart attack after a snatching incident.

This Teen Cares For Her Nation

By FANNETTE EDWARDS
Herald Correspondent

DELTONA—While frustrated adults bewail irresponsible, teenagers of today frequently overlook those untold numbers who take a serious interest in this country and our form of government.

Rose Marie Tufts of 2522 Cardena Ave., Deltona, is one such youngster.

Earlier this month Rose Marie along with thousands of other serious minded teenagers in their junior year of high school, attended "Girls State" sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. The following week, the young men of junior high school year age, attended what is known, as "Boys State" sponsored by the American Legion Posts in each state.

Rose Marie joined 263 girls from all parts of Florida, attended Florida Girls State at Florida State University, Tallahassee.

As each girl registered, she was given a slip of paper on which was written, her name, room number and room-mate; the party, city and county to which she was assigned and the name of her counsellor. In Rose's case, Mrs. Linda Testa was her counsellor; her roommate, Miss Janet Sullivan of Coral Gables.

The "mock" state, was divided into 12 cities of 22 girls, each, and six counties, all with Indian names. The counties were called, "Reservations"; the cities, "Tribes."

There were two parties: The Federalists and the Nationalists.

Rose Marie was assigned to the St. John Reservation of Seminole Girls State; the Immokalee Tribe and the Nationalist Party.

After the opening session, Rose Marie contacted her counselor, was welcomed and was told of the various offices to be filled before the "mock" state could begin to function. Each girl put on as big or as small a campaign as she chose. Rose ran for city commissioner and was elected. Next, unsucessfully she ran for lieutenant governor.

"I drew signs and made slogans," she said, such as: "Its Nationalist Time Again" "We've Only Just Begun To Make It Happen" . . . and . . . "The Nat Patrol" . . . and the like.

Tuesday, the girls were taken to the Capitol in buses and were guests of the State at the Joint Assembly in the House. They met Gov. Ruebin Askew and listened to his address.

For the next two days they continued to visit the Capitol, meeting and listening to members of the Florida Cabinet.

Friday morning after breakfast, the girls left by bus for their respective homes and cities.

Rose Marie hopes to study law when she enters Florida Tech University but says she is also interested in serving in the U.S. Air Force.

"My father was a career officer in the U.S. Army for 22 years, until his death in 1970," Rose Marie added. "I guess that is why I am partial to the service."

Biggest U.S. Service Stations Must Offer Lead Free-Gas

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

Beginning today, America's biggest service stations must offer lead-free gasoline to meet requirements of the government's clean air campaign. A nationwide survey finds most are ready, willing and able, but not too eager.

An Associated Press survey shows that though most dealers are ready for the conversion, some see problems.

Those that aren't so able—the high volume, two-pump stations found mostly in rural areas—say they'll suffer economic hardship because they are being forced to stop sales of premium gasoline.

The two-pump independents will get it coming and going: While the oil companies are paying for expensive pump conversions at their franchised units, independents must foot that bill themselves.

Environmental Protection Agency orders require that gasoline stations with annual sales of more than 200,000 gallons—about one-third of country's stations—offer the lead-free fuel starting July 1.

The deadline for stations with annual sales of more than 150,000 gallons but less than 200,000 is Oct. 1.

"The big problem," says one Denver dealer who has sold unleaded gasoline since 1970, "is trying to convert people over to it."

55 Mile Per Hour Speed Favored By Americans

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Nearly 75 per cent of the American public favors keeping the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit on the nation's highways, the latest Gallup Poll shows.

Seventy-two per cent of the 1,509 adults interviewed between May 31 and June 3 said they would like to keep the speed limit at 55 m.p.h., 24 per cent were against the idea and the remaining 4 per cent offered no opinion.

Those polled were asked, "Do you favor or oppose keeping the present 55-mile-per-hour speed limit on the highways of the nation?"

The speed limit was lowered to 55 m.p.h. by federal legislation earlier this year in an effort to conserve fuel.

The main reason given for wanting to keep the lower limit was the cut in highway fatalities.

Mexicans Find Way To Southern Jails

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Thousands of illegal Mexican aliens are bursting the South's cheap labor market at the seams, and officials say they are powerless to seal the borders.

In one day 12 were arrested in Baton Rouge working at a construction site; another 14 were picked up in Slocomb, Ala., harvesting tomatoes. Six were stopped in New Orleans doing cement work, and a dozen more were arrested near Shreveport at a dairy.

The tide of job hungry aliens flows into the South continuously. They come crowded in the back of trailers, or in furniture vans or wedged under car hoods.

These men, women, and in some cases, families come here for one reason — to make a buck. And employers eager to save a buck in labor costs often hire them at a $1.50 or less an hour.

"It's not unusual for some to get $3 or $4 a day," said Donald Cameron, chief of the Border Patrol's New Orleans sector.

Last month Cameron's men caught a record 750 aliens. Some were on their way north, but many stayed in the South to take jobs on farms, or factories or fishing boats.

The yearly total was over 5,000 but that is only the tip of the iceberg, for Cameron estimates that for every alien captured another four or five slip through undetected. And the odds are less than one in four that once they get past the border they'll ever be apprehended.

Cameron has received a battery of complaints from southern labor leaders that aliens willing to work for practically nothing are crowding out Americans.

To come is illegal, to hire is not, and although legislation is pending in Washington that would change this, employers are free to hire any alien who knocks on the factory door.

It's a different story, however, if they conspire with smugglers who charge aliens anywhere from $200 to $700 for a one-way ticket into the country.

And smuggling, Cameron said, has become a lucrative business in the South. Last year 103 smugglers were arrested in the New Orleans sector which includes Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and portions of Oklahoma. The number should be higher this year.

You Never Know Who You'll Meet In Your Beauty Salon

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The bouffant and the beard may be seen side by side in Connecticut beauty salons now that a federal judge has opened their doors to all sexes.

"It might be fun. You never know who you'll meet in a beauty salon," said Marjorie Stevenson of Windsor, as she settled into a chair at a downtown salon.

She was having her hair done one day after U.S. District Court Judge Jon O. Newman ruled unconstitutional the section of a state law prohibiting hairdressers from serving male customers. The law allows barbers to cut the hair of both sexes.

In his ruling, Judge Newman noted that hair fashion has changed since the hairdresser law was passed 50 years ago.

"There is now in vogue among some members of the male sex a 'unisex' fashion whereby males desire to have their hair styled and cut longer in some more detailed manner," he said.

But most women contacted in a spot survey voiced no apprehension about sharing their domain with men.

Latest In Swindling Banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mysterious money men are making the rounds of U.S. banks offering to deposit millions of dollars in Arab oil wealth at terms that seem too good to be true.

Federal banking officials are convinced it's the newest gimmick of would-be swindlers.

Bankers are wary. But some are sufficiently enticed by the prospect of attracting Middle East oil riches that they are negotiating with these self-styled money brokers.

So far, bankers haven't seen any deposits. Federal banking officials don't know of anyone who's been bilked. But enforcement officers are closely following one transaction in which an unnamed bank has issued a letter agreeing to accept such deposits and is awaiting the alleged Arab funds.

Banking officials fear the letter could be used to swindle another financial institution.

Another bank in Louisiana negotiated for three months with a man offering to deposit Arab money. Then he went to Switzerland to "check with his principals." The bank since has received postcards from Switzerland, but no money.

The approach has been strikingly similar at a number of banks across the country, says Justin T. Watson, deputy comptroller of the currency. His agency oversees national banks.

The money broker offers to deposit from $20 million to $50 million for up to 20 years and will accept below-market interest rates, Watson said.

The proposal is the opposite of known Arab banking policy, where money is deposited for only a few days or weeks at a time, at top interest rates in the current tight money market.

Watson and Robert Serino, head of the comptroller's enforcement division, believe the real aim of the suspected con men is to get a bank letter signed by the chief executive officer agreeing to accept a huge deposit. They said there was a rash of similar schemes about three years ago.

The letter, sometimes altered, then can be used as a reference to get a loan somewhere else or as an inducement to get another bank to pay a finder's fee in advance for promised big deposits that never materialize.

Serino said the word "acceptance" in the letter can be exploited by a con man because it has different banking meanings in different languages.

Charles W. McCoy, chairman of Louisiana National Bank in Baton Rouge, said his bank was approached by a man offering $20 million to be deposited for 20 years, willing to accept interest at more than two points below current money market rates. "He practically lived with us for three months."

Details of the proposed transaction kept changing, he said. "..... Finally everything was agreed on and then no money showed up."

Dear Abby

Sexy Chimps Worth Dollars

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You discouraged a reader who wanted to acquire a chimpanzee for a pet, saying: "When a chimp reaches sexual maturity, he becomes frustrated, ill-tempered and unpredictable."

As an anthropologist-father of three teen-agers, I would like to point out that you can sell a mature, healthy chimp to a zoo for twice what you paid for it as an infant — or take a comparable tax deduction. Thus you have all the rewards of living with an enthusiastic, outgoing, affectionate youngster until he becomes an adolescent, after which you have your investment back as well.

On the other hand, you enthusiastic, outgoing, affectionate human youngster also becomes "frustrated, ill-tempered and unpredictable" when he reaches sexual maturity. What then? Do you know of any zoo that will make a deal?

There is much to be said in favor of raising chimps. NEAL KORN: VAN NUYS, CAL.

DEAR SIR: That's what I need in my column — more "korn." Paging Malcolm S. Forbes: How about doing a story in Forbes on the tax advantages of raising chimps instead of kids? Or do you think the country has had enough tax-deductible monkey business?

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Love Chimps" that, it she really loves them, she will forget about acquiring one for a pet, and she'll leave them where they belong — in the wild.

Tell her that the baby chimp she thinks is so cute was pulled off its dead mother's breast. (To capture a wild baby chimpanzee, its mother must be killed!)

And please tell her that, if she really loves chimps, she will support her local zoo. Also, if she can afford to contribute a little something to a nonprofit, tax-exempt foundation, dedicated to study, preservation and propagation of the chimpanzee, to consider the Primate Foundation of Arizona, P. O. Box 86, Tempe, Ariz. Thank you, Abby. JO FRITZ: SECRETARY

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY; Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Morals Disturb Rabbi

CASE A-673: Rabbi Samuel, aged 42, is shocked.

"Dr. Crane," he began as we dined together, "the moral decay in America is worse than most people imagine.

"It isn't just the high incidence of venereal disease, shoplifting, drug addiction or promiscuity that has finally larmed me most.

"No; it is the data that Louis Harris found on his poll last winter when the U. S. Senate commissioned him to find our how much confidence the public placed in various organizations.

"Our U.S. Supreme Court rated only 33 per cent and even the United Fund scored but 35 per cent.

"So our churches must face up to the grim reality that the mainstream of society is by-passing moral tutors."

SPIRITUAL DECAY

Many of you readers will recall that Harris survey but I'll give you a brief memory test thereon.

Analyze the 5 entries at the left and then try to match them with the percentage of confidence that the public places therein.

The percentage figures are jumbled so the number opposite each organization does not apply to it.

(a Organized religion	(v) 44 pct.
(b) Organized labor	(w) 41 pct.
(c) U.S. Senate	(x) 36 pct.
(d) Local police	(y) 30 pct.
(e) TV news	(z) 20 pct.

Out of 22 organizations or institutions rated by the American public, only 2 scored above the 50 per cent level!

These were the medical profession (57 pct.) and garbage collection (52 pct.)!

Confidence in local government was only 28 per cent and but 24 per cent in law firms.

Local schools drew 39 per cent, which means that almost two-thirds of Americans have lost confidence in our public educational system!

Louis Harris made a very comprehensive poll nationwide, so his data should challenge the thinking of all our citizens.

Alas, our newspapers obtained a confidence rating of but 30 per cent which was far below the TV newscasts! Why!

Here are the correct confidence scores reposed in those 5 entries listed above:

(a) Organized religion	36 pct. (x)
(b) Organized labor	20 pct. (z)
(c) U.S. Senate	30 pct. (y)
(d) Local police	44 pct. (v)
(e) TV news	41 pct. (w)

Isn't it shocking to find that organized religion enjoys the confidence of only 36 per cent of Americans? Why?

Is it due to the fact many clergymen have changed their former evangelistic pulpits into political soap boxes for sociological issues?

And how do you figure that 41 per cent confidence in TV news vs. only 30 per cent for the printed word in the newspaper?

Could it be that the public is more easily persuaded by the human element, as indicated by the newscaster's authoritive voice, his gestures, emotional arousing tricks, plus the public's familiarity with the same newscaster's personalized influence.

But Rabbi Samuel is psychologically correct in his view that the churches need to revamp their emphasis and forego political pulpit propaganda!

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

TUESDAY, JULY 2, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Get information early that will help you make beneficial changes. Also consider what further vacations you can take this year and plan a more satisfactory set of circumstances under which to function.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use some new approach in discussing with a partner how to update systems to improve conditions. You want to get away from present tasks, but await a better day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your intuition more and handle chores more wisely for improved benefits. Help one important to your scheme of things.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If one who opposes you gets rambunctious, do not lose your temper. Tact is the keynote today. Handle association matters to please all.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Become more interested in your regular work and strive to have more cooperation from co-workers; be more kindly toward them. Take the treatments for more vim and vigor.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Look into new outlets that lift your spirits and brighten your future. Take steps to get into the right one quickly. Updating routines enlivens them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Even though you feel irritable, be gentle and patient. Try to be of more service to kin. Improve dwelling place by cleaning and modernizing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into the group meetings and other activities that will help you become more successful and popular. Evening is best spent at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Getting together with business experts will help you become more successful in your own endeavors. Improve budget. Socials favored in p.m.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can gain personal aims best by getting the aid of associates. Keep appointments with persons who can help you become more successful in your career.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your fine ideas should be discussed with higher-ups so that they can have big success with their backing. Avoid clutter in office or home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listen to what a friend has to say to improve your position in life. Streamline all of your activities. Make friends of new acquaintances you like.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have to use the direct approach now if you are to add to present prestige and goodwill. Improve credit rating.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have an active mind constantly busy at almost anything, with a desire to travel. Teach different languages for best results when the time comes for such. Import-export business is especially fine here as a profession. Also religion, world travel, writing. Give fine ethical training early. Do not force sports that are not liked.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU! Carroll Righter's Individual Forecast for your sign for July is now ready. For your copy send your birthdate and $1 to Carroll Righter Forecast, The Sanford Herald, Box 629, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

What Went Up Has Come Down.
Everyone who's been to a supermarket or read a paper within the past couple of months knows what happened to food costs.
At Famous Recipe we've felt the pinch too. And as our costs rose we were unfortunately forced to raise some of our prices.
But what goes up must come down and recently some of our food costs have decreased. We are, therefore, happy to announce that we've lowered the menu prices on many items. Our Honey-Dipped fried chicken which has always been an excellent food value is now even more so.

Solutions Sought On Ink Stains

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY- What can I use to remove ballpoint ink from rubber dolls? I have tried cleansing powders but with no luck.-LINDA.

DEAR GIRLS- This is only one of many current inquiries about removing such ink from various materials.-POLLY.

DEAR POLLY- The florist had put a spray on an Easter plant sent to me to make the leaves shine. This has dripped on my fireplace. I cannot remove the resulting oily spots from the stone hearth and have tried everything that seemed possible. Any help, anyone? — MRS. D.H.

DEAR POLLY- Mrs. M. wanted to know if anyone has the same shelving arrangements that is in her antique cupboard (notched inside corners for shelves to rest on moveable pieces fitting in the notches). I have an old desk, the upper part is a high book cabinet, with the same sort of arrangement. The moveable pieces in mine are metal pegs resembling old clock winders. — MRS. W.

DEAR GIRLS- Others also wrote that old cupboards and secretaries they owned had shelves installed that same way so it is not too unusual.-POLLY.

DEAR POLLY- When you do not have a sleeve board on hand and need to iron sleeves put a full roll of toilet tissue inside the sleeve and iron over it. This works like a charm for me.-MARGARET.

DEAR POLLY- My wife saved me about $10 by making a new leaf and grass catcher for my lawn mower. She bought all the material, vinyl or similiar fabric, burlap, nylon cord and metal eyelets at a fabric shop for less than $2. A proud husband.-WILLIAM.

DEAR POLLY — While eating in a restaurant a short time ago I was interested in watching what a grandmother and mother ordered for a wee boy (about 16 months old.) He was promptly served an order of toast and later an attractive serving of sliced bananas. He dandily ate both with his fingers and with no fuss and trouble. They gave him a glass of milk as well. — EVELYN

DEAR POLLY — Most women have trouble keeping dresses on hangers especially those with straps but I have a remedy. I cut a piece of foam the length of the hanger, make a hole in the center to slip over the hook and then sew the ends together to hold it in place on the hanger. No more finding dresses that have slipped to the closet floor. — CAROLYN

Jim: "How about a week where we use nothing but good, old-fashion, simple bidding and reasonably simply play?"

Oswald: "I assume you have some hands in mind."

Jim: "As a starter look at this one. North opens one diamond. South responds one heart and jumps to the heart game when North rebids one notrump to show a minimum hand of balanced distribution."

Oswald: "I assume that dummy's 10 of diamonds holds the first trick and it is up to him to go right after trumps. He may make a lot of tricks if a simple finesse works, but if he tries it this time the hand will collapse. West will take his king and lead a club. East will win the trick and lead a diamond for West to ruff. Then West will take another club and write down 50 points on the score."

Jim: "South's first round heart finesse would be an unnecessary luxury. He should play his ace of trumps first, then entered dummy with a high spade in order to lead a second trump. This would hold the defense to one trump and two clubs which would not be enough to do them any good."

RETIRING AFTER 21 YEARS

Mrs. Lois Housholder, instalment loan officer at the Sanford Atlantic National Bank, accepts a plaque from bank president Howard H. Hodges in recognition of her 21 years service. At a retirement banquet held in her honor recently, Mrs. Housholder received gifts from the bank and her co-workers including a color television set, personal desk and engraved silver bowl. Mrs. Housholder said she had no intention of retiring from community life and will retain a strong interest in the bank's future progress.

Supply And Demand?

Food prices: Everybody has a gripe.

From the livestock producer who's losing money; to the supermarket operator whose costs are up; to the consumer struggling to stretch the family budget.

The situation they face is full of confusion and contradiction:

—The farmer is getting less money for his cattle, but the consumer is paying almost as much for meat as he did last year.

—The livestock producers who raise the calves and fatten the cattle for market and the middlemen who slaughter the steer and sell the meat to you are faced with higher costs. Some are losing money. Even those doing better than last year say profits are lower than they were five years ago.

—The administration is encouraging people to buy meat and has promised to buy $100 million of beef and pork to help boost the farmer's income.

—Looking ahead, the government hopes large grain crops this year will cut the price of feed grains, making meat cheaper to produce. But even if this happens, nobody knows how much of that saving would be passed on to you at the retail meat counter. The question is whether inflation of other items can be controlled.

Normally, farm, wholesale and retail prices go up and down together. It isn't working that way with meat. Why not?

To understand what's happening to your meat budget now, you have to go back to early 1973.

A little more than a year ago, farmers were getting high prices for their cattle. Consumers, paying an average of $1.36 a pound for meat, got angry and organized a week-long meat boycott.

The government, meanwhile, put ceilings on what packers could charge supermarkets and what supermarkets could charge you for beef, lamb and pork. Farmers, however, were allowed to charge more money for their livestock. The bottom was allowed to go up, but the top and the middle stayed put.

The packers and retailers rebelled, refusing to pay more because they couldn't charge you more. Farmers held on to their animals, creating an oversupply on the farm. When controls came off last September, farmers sent all the cattle to market, there was a greater supply than demand and farmers got less money than they expected.

The backlog is still there. It got even bigger in December and February because of truckers strikes that kept meat from the market. Farmers are still getting less money than they did one year ago, but retail prices, until recently at least, were at or near 1973 levels.

Where is your meat dollar going? Here is a government breakdown in cents:

	Apr 72	Apr 73	Apr 74
Retailer	31.0	26.7	30.6
Packer	6.3	6.2	7.4
Farmer	62.7	67.1	62.0

Another set of government figures shows that the farmer got about 8 cents less for a pound of beef this May than he did in April, 1973. The retail price was down only one penny—from $1.36 a pound to $1.35. Why?

Industry sources, who don't like to talk for attribution about this sensitive subject, give this explanation:

Suppose you are a retailer who buys a product for $1 and resells it for $2. Of the dollar markup, 80 cents goes for costs of running your store; 20 cents is profit.

Now, suppose the amount you pay for the product goes down to 50 cents. At the same time, however, your other costs go up to 90 cents. That's $1.40. Add your 20 cents profit and you have a $1.60 selling price.

The wholesale price has dropped 50 cents, the retail price only 40 cents. That's what's happening to meat prices right now.

The American Meat Institute, which represents the packers, broke down what happens to the 7.4 cents the packer gets of your meat dollar:

Wages and salaries 3.7 cents
Rent, depreciation and interest 1.5 cents
Supplies and containers 1.0 cents
All other expenses 1.6 cents
Profit .3 cents

The institute said it could not provide comparable figures for 1973. But a spokesman said wages alone had risen 12 per cent in the past year—from an average of $7.41 an hour last year to $8.29 this year for salaries and fringe benefits.

Elias Paul, president of John Morrell Co., one of the largest packers, said that until this year the industry had been averaging a profit of between nine-tenths of a cent and 1.2 cents for every dollar of sales. This year, he said, earnings were less.

The National Association of Food Chains, representing retailers, said labor costs account for 65 per cent of the supermarket's share of the dollar. The rest goes to utilities, rent, depreciation, taxes, maintenance and repair, promotion and insurance.

Clarence Adamy, president of the association, offered a breakdown of the percentage of nonlabor cost increases from 1973 to 1974:

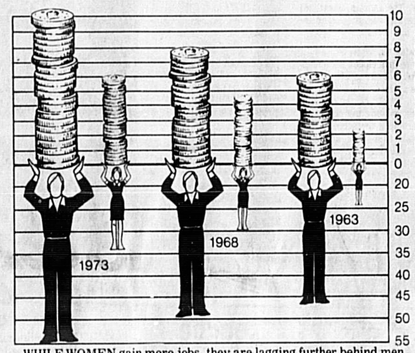
Hauling meat to store 17.9
Refrigeration cases 25.7
Meat coolers 10.5
Meat saws 15.7
Packaging 25.0
Utility rates 10.0 to 60.0

Industry profits are expected to rise 50 per cent this year, the association said. A spokesman said that in dollars and cents, this means the store will make three-fourths of a cent for every dollar in sales, instead of one-half cent. And a spokesman said that in 1968 and 1969, the retailer made about a penny for each dollar in sales.

In response to complaints by livestock producers—ranchers who raise the calves and feedlot operators who fatten them for market—the government has launched investigations of whether the spread between the price the farmer gets and the price the consumer pays is too large.

Everyone Loses Money In Food Industry

How About Me?



WHILE WOMEN gain more jobs, they are lagging further behind men in pay. For instance a professional job that pays $13,826 to a man would pay only $8,946 to a woman. Similarly, a male factory worker might make $8,880 while his female counterpart, doing the same work, would make on average $5,145.

"It is high time that ... lower farm prices show up more fully in lower retail store prices," said Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz on May 10. "While food prices at stores have leveled off some, margins are still higher than normal."

An Agriculture Department spokesman said late last month that the problem with meat prices stemmed from "chains and packers, especially chains. Chains don't like to lower prices because they're afraid they'll have to raise them in the future."

Supermarket spokesmen say this isn't true. They say they have lowered meat prices and claim the drop is more than the government says it is. "They don't give enough weight to specials," said A.D. Davis, chairman of the board of Winn-Dixie Stores, one of the nation's 10 largest chains in terms of sales.

Pantry Pride-Food Fair supermarkets, another of the top 10, pointed to prices for Philadelphia stores which it said were typical: Sirloin steak for $1.39 a pound, compared to $1.45 a year ago; rib roast for $1.19 compared to $1.29 a year ago; boneless chuck for $1.09 compared to $1.29 a year ago.

The consumer contributed to keeping meat prices high by eating more beef than ever before.

The government figures per capita consumption figures based on the carcass weight of an animal—after such things as the hide are removed, but before the byproducts are discarded.

Consumption of beef and veal rose steadily until last year. Here are the figures:

1971: 116 pounds
1972: 118 pounds
1973: 111 pounds

But this year, the figure is up again. The American National Cattlemen's Association, gave these per person figures for the first five months of this year, compared to 1972 and 1973:

1974: 47.37 pounds
1973: 45.16 pounds
1972: 47.10 pounds

If Americans keep eating at the same rate, per capita consumption for 1974 would be about 114 pounds. But Americans traditionally eat more beef in the summer months when barbecues whet the appetite for red meat.

Dead Child

MIAMI (AP) — Two-year-old Curtis Moultrie is dead of injuries suffered in what doctors say was a severe beating, and police have filed child abuse charges against a woman who says the child's mother gave him to her.

"The child was very badly beaten and was also being treated for the effects of a near-drowning," said Jackson Memorial Hospital pediatrics chief Dr. Irwin Redlener.

The youngster died Sunday after remaining in a coma since being admitted to the hospital Friday.

Nader Criticizes Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader's Health Research Group has accused a federal agency of "incomprehensible and abysmal stupidity" for not banning firecrackers before July Fourth.

The consumer organization told the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in a letter that it has "set the stage for another holiday filled with carnage and disaster, particularly for those too young to appreciate the real dangers associated with the devastating array of fireworks devices ..."

The commission decided, just hours before its June 18 firecracker ban and fireworks regulations were to take effect, that the industry had presented objections meriting a public hearing, which a Nader spokesman said meant that no rules could take effect until well after the July Fourth holiday.

Syrian Ambassador

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Career diplomat Sabah Kabbani has been appointed Syria's ambassador to the United States, a post that has been vacant since 1967.

Syria made the announcement Sunday.

The two countries restored diplomatic relations on June 16, during President Nixon's tour of the Middle East. They have not had such ties since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Syria broke relations in 1967 charging the United States sided with and actively backed Israel.

Israeli Debt Erased

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has written off $500 million in debts owed by Israel for U.S. military assistance in the wake of the Arab-Israeli war last October.

A White House spokesman said Sunday that Nixon signed in Moscow an authorization converting the credits to an outright grant. In April, the President had changed from loan to grant status another $1 billion in aid to Israel.

The move came at the request of Shimon Peres, the new Israeli defense minister, who just completed a three-day visit to Washington. Peres is also seeking another $7.5 billion in military assistance over the next five years, nearly all of it as grants.

Dancer To West

TORONTO (AP) — Another leading dancer of Leningrad's Kirov ballet, the fourth in 13 years, is reported to have defected to the West. Friends of 26 year-old Mikhail Barichnikov said he escaped from the touring Soviet ballet troupe "Stars of the Bolshoi" after it completed its Toronto engagement Saturday night and went into hiding with Christina Berlin, an American friend he met when he made his Western debut in London three years ago.

24 Die In New York Discotheque Fire

PORT CHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "In the beginning, there was no panic, but then the place filled up with smoke and everyone became disoriented," says a worker at a discotheque where 24 young persons died in an early morning fire.

"The place was packed because there were a lot of people home from college," added the worker, Joe Parsons Jr. of Stamford, Conn., in recounting the fatal fire early Sunday at Gulliver's Restaurant.

"Everybody started rushing toward the stairs," said Judy Grella, an 18-year-old from Bridgeport, Conn. "We couldn't see anything, we had to crawl up. I don't know how we got out of there alive."

Medical authorities said 11 women and 13 men died almost instantly of smoke inhalation and at least as many were injured.

Westchester County Executive Alfred DelBello ordered a full investigation into the fire in the roadhouse on the Connecticut-New York border in this town of 25,000 north of New York City.

Several investigators advanced the theory that the fire broke out in a store in the same building and was drawn into the discotheque by an air-conditioning system.

An attorney for the owners of the building estimated there were about 200 persons in the discotheque when the fire began.

Port Chester Fire Chief Vincent Rathgeb said he believed most of the victims suffocated swiftly. Frank R. Arbusto, chief of the Fire Prevention Bureau and head of the investigation, said other victims apparently were blinded while trying to seek exits from the split-level building.

Mayor Joseph F. Dzaluk said the most recent fire department investigation of the discotheque was conducted May 8, and no violations were reported.

The crowd was dancing to the music of the "Creation" rock group.

According to Mayor Dzaluk, "the band leader advised people on the dance floor that they had better leave when he noticed a little smoke. However, the crowd did not leave until the smoke got more intense and he began shouting for everyone to move out immediately."

Debbie Quick, 20, of Greenwich, Conn., said she started choking on the thick-acrid smoke as she followed the crowd towards stairs leading up from the sunken dance floor.

"There were people being knocked down ahead of me," she said. "Every time I took a step up somebody pushed me down. If somebody fell, they were trampled. A girl got knocked down next to me and a guy just stepped on her and walked on."

"All I could hear were screams. I kept pushing up. I got to the top of the stairs. The smoke was thicker. I tried to push left toward the door when I got knocked against the wall. Then I started to pass out but I remember somebody pushing me through the door. I fell into the parking lot and passed out."

She said the next thing she remembered was receiving oxygen in the parking lot.

Several survivors said the lights went out, but the lawyer for the owners of the building insisted there was no loss of electrical power.

While investigators sought to find out what started the fire, chief county Medical Examiner Dr. Henry Siegel continued the grim task of identifying the dead, warning that the job was "liable to take days."

Until Siegel closed his office Sunday night at Grasslands Hospital in Valhalla, N.Y., and sent anxious relatives home, they kept up a vigil amid a strong atmosphere of resignation.

"The gloom and despair are as heavy as the smoke at the fire," said one person.

"I've all but given up hope," said Thomas Burke, of Stamford. He said that while he was looking for his son, Thomas Jr., he drove past the restaurant and spotted the youth's parked car.

"He may not have been able to get in touch with us, but he would never leave his car," said Burke.

One woman, Sandra M. Wangen, of Greenwich, Conn., was placed on the death list on the basis of an identification by her husband. However, the identification of the charred body apparently was wrong, and an investigator said her name was removed from the list.

Dems Net $7 Million In Telethon

By The Associated Press

With musical and dramatic Americana, plus some old-fashioned pleading, the Democratic party amassed about $7 million in pledges during a 21-hour telethon. The estimated total would top last year's pledges by about $1.5 million.

The weekend extravaganza that ended Sunday was said to be one of the longest single shows in the history of network television.

Callers were still phoning in pledges as the telethon ended in the Western states at 11 p.m. EDT Sunday.

Party spokesmen said it would be two days before final figures were in, but they expected the total to top $7 million. Cost of the air time and other expenses were expected to be $2.5 million.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota was the master of ceremonies and was joined for most of the time by Democratic National committee chairman Robert Strauss.

California led all states with $709,654 as the party exceeded the results of its 1973 telethon, when $5.4 million in pledges was raised during an eight-hour program.

Viewers were told that two-thirds of the money would go to state party organizations. The remaining one-third will go to the Democratic National Committee, which still owes $2.5 million from the 1968 campaign.

Balloons popped from the ceiling of the CBS studio in Los Angeles as the telethon ended, and participants and audience members clapped, cheered and sang along with the theme song, "Answer, America."

News of the slaying of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. in Atlanta brought a brief note of sadness to the otherwise festive atmosphere. The telethon was stopped for a moment of silence.

There were dramatic monologues about patriotism and past Democratic presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Harry S. Truman.

Political satire was generally light but the Democrats poked some fun at the Watergate scandal.

Public Should Finance Political Races: Colson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential counsel Charles W. Colson says the Watergate scandals have created an atmosphere of "revenge and hatred" that focuses emphasis on punishment of the criminals rather than the need for political reform.

Preparing to enter federal prison next Monday for a sentence of at least one year for obstructing justice, Colson said the chief lesson from Watergate is the need for public financing of political campaigns.

"So many abuses have been revealed that if we continue to apply Band-Aids the patient's gonna die, the country's gonna hemmorhage for this," Colson said in an interview. "We've got to get rid of the system of private finance."

However, he said, the need for reform has been obscured.

"I just think there is a feeling in the country of a sort of revenge and hatred and a desire to punish, sort of, almost like in Salem, when, you know, if you picked a few people in the community and burned them that everybody else would be saved.

"I mean I think there's an awful lot of self-righteousness going on right now. An awful lot of people who have engaged in a lot of practices over the years and are now saying 'Look at those awful people who did this,'" Colson added.

"And if we turn aside" from reforms in favor of punishment, "then we're going to lose sight of really what this whole thing is all about," he said.

Colson was sentenced after pleading guilty to a charge stemming from a campaign which he said was repeatedly urged by President Nixon to smear Daniel Ellsberg. The one-time White House official confirmed he is willing to swear that he personally warned the President during the Watergate cover-up period about the possible involvement of two high officials, John N. Mitchell and Jeb S. Magruder.

Summit Talk Postponed

MINSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — President Nixon took time out today from his summit talks with Leonid I. Brezhnev for half a day of sightseeing.

American officials said the President and the Soviet Communist party chief had made no progress toward a comprehensive treaty limiting offensive nuclear weapons. However, one knowledgeable official said there was still a chance of a limited agreement restricting deployment of MIRV missiles—those with multiple independently targeted warheads.

After a weekend on the Black Sea coast, the President and Mrs. Nixon flew to Minsk, the capital of Byelorussia, for lunch and the afternoon.

Link Powers Prosser; Panthers Take Title

Mike Link, who was held hitless when his Jack Prosser Ford team dropped its first Little League championship playoff game to Railroaders this weekend, made up for it Saturday with a six-inning perfect game victory over Seminole Petroleum, 4-0, to put the Prosser team into a finals confrontation with Railroaders tonight at 6.

The Panthers, who got bombed, 45-29, to even the city Pee Wee League playoffs at one-game apiece, reversed their gears and came out with a 20-6 blasting of their own to take the city title.

Link, who was passed to first base every time he was up against Railroaders, and his team felt the results of it with a 5-1 playoff loss, came up with 14-strikeouts, no walks and no hits to toally blank Seminole Petroleum, eliminating them from the three-way championships.

Link, who had 16 home runs to his credit throughout the season, slammed another round tripper and both Danny Kinnard and Pat Leonard added singles off losing pitcher Todd Burkhead.

The Prosser Ford star hit a three-run homer against Seminole Petroleum in the playoff's first game, which paved the way to a 5-4 Prosser Ford win.

Prosser Ford took a 1-0 advantage in the bottom of the first inning, stretched it to three runs in the third and finished out their scoring with one more run in the bottom half of the fifth inning.

Should the Railroaders' plan of not pitching to the powerful Link — who can play any position on the field — work tonight, the city championships will be over with Railroaders wearing the crown.

However, if the Prosser Ford team comes up with a victory, the two surviving teams will both have one defeat, setting up a third meeting, probably Tuesday, Sanford Recreation Department officials say.

The Rebels, who jumped on the Panthers to even their series at 1-all in the Pee Wee Leagues, found out it's not necessarily the team with all the hits that wins.

The Panthers, who claimed the title by 11 runs, had only two hits, singles from Vernon Law and winning pitcher Wayne Story.

The Rebels, on the other hand, had a triple from Dick Fleischmann, a double from Paul Griffin, two singles from Brett Von Herbulis and other base raps from Mike and Bosey Knight.

The Panthers took off to a 9-1 lead after the first inning and continued to apply the pressure from there.

They scored an unanswered run in the top of the second and then outmatched the Rebs in the third frame, 5-4, and took the fourth inning as well, 4-1. The Rebels did manage to outscore the winners in the sixth inning, 3-1.

KC Comeback Clips A's

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Baseball managers are an optimistic breed but you could not blame Kansas City's Jack McKeon if he didn't see the bright side against Oakland.

"We're down 4-0 and only one hit against Catfish Hunter," said McKeon, considering the situation his Royals faced in the sixth inning of Sunday's game. Kansas City had won two of the first three games in the weekend series, so McKeon wasn't feeling too terrible. "You start thinking you'll settle for a tie in the series," he admitted.

But the Royals had other ideas. "You have to give our guys credit," McKeon continued. "There was some kind of atmosphere in the dugout."

It got even better when the Royals kayoed Hunter for five runs in the sixth and then came from behind twice more to defeat the American League West Division leaders 8-7.

Elsewhere in the league Sunday, Cleveland battered Boston 9-2, Baltimore shut out New York 3-0, Texas walloped California 9-2, Chicago split a doubleheader with Minnesota, winning 8-3 and then losing 6-3, and Milwaukee divided a pair with Detroit, winning 4-1 before losing 3-2.

The win put the Royals within 2½ games of the A's.

Rangers 9, Angels 2

Texas also moved within 2½ games of the A's by whacking California.

The Rangers, top hitting team in the majors, exploded for six runs in a wild fifth inning capped by Cesar Tovar's two-run single.

Indians 9, Red Sox 2

George Hendrick poked a three-run homer, helping Cleveland slug Boston and moving the Indians within 2½ games of first-place Boston after three victories in their four-game series with the Red Sox.

Brewers 4-2, Tigers 1-3

Jim Northrup drove in two runs with a first inning homer and then helped Detroit build another with a third inning single as the Tigers defeated Milwaukee 3-2 in the second game of a doubleheader. The Brewers had taken the opener 4-1 despite being held hitless for five innings by Woodie Fryman.

Orioles 3 Yankees 0

Mike Cuellar tossed a six-hitter and Baltimore shut out New York for the second straight game. The Orioles scored all their runs with the aid of an error and a balk.

Twins 3-6, White Sox 8-3

Jorge Orta ripped six hits including five straight in the first game as the Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with Minnesota, winning the opener 8-3 but dropping the second 6-3.

Orta's first-game hits gave him eight straight, including three in Saturday night's game. His streak ended in the first inning of the nightcap.

Wimbledon Women Advance As Expected

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King, Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong, the three top-seeded women, won third-round matches today as the rain-delayed Wimbledon championships entered their second week in gusty winds.

Miss Evert, the No. 2 seed, took less than 60 minutes to demolish Isabel Fernandez of Columbia 6-1, 6-1.

Top-seeded Mrs. King, seeking her sixth Wimbledon singles crown and her third sweep of the singles, doubles and mixed doubles, defeated Francoise Durr of France 6-1, 7-5, in gusty winds.

Miss Goolagong, the third seed, rallied to defeat another Australian, Kerry Harris 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

American women who advanced in this morning's early play were Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, who defeated Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-3, 6-4; Kris Kemmer of Los Angeles, who defeated Fiorella Bonicelli of Uruguay 6-4, 3-6, 86; Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., who defeated Ann Kiyomura of Sant Mateo, Calif. 6-4, 6-2, and Mona Schallau of Iowa City, Iowa, who defeated Chris O'Neill of Australia 6-2, 6-3.

Power-serving Dick Stockton became the first American to advance to the men's fourth round today.

Stockton, 23, from Dallas, should have played 19-year-old Buster Mottram of Britain for a place in the final 16. But Mottram, withdrew with a severe throat infection and Stockton was given a forfeit.

His easy passage came after a tough five-set victory over Gerald Battrick of Wales in the second round, a match that left him tired but optimistic.

Stockton joined Holland's Tom Okker and Manuel Orantes of Spain in the fourth round, which would have been finished by now if the weather had smiled on Wimbledon during the first five days. At one stage, the tournament was nearly 180 matches behind schedule because of rain stoppages.

A full day's play on Saturday restored some sense of order, but the All-England Championships went into their second week with all the seeds intact in both men's and women's singles—a postwar record that seems to owe more to the rain than the rankings.

Weathermen forecast clouds and showers for the resumption of play today but there were hopes the tournament would get back on course with 29 scheduled singles matches to complete the final 16 in each divisions.

Top-seeded John Newcombe of Australia, the betting favorite to regain the Wimbledon crown, took on Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia and Romania's Ilie Nastase, the No. 2 seed, played Ian Fletcher of Australia.

Bjorn Borg, the Swedish 18-year-old, met Ismael El Shafei of Egypt in another third-round match.

Eight American men and nine women were left in the championships.

U.S. men already in the fourth round include four seeds—Jimmy Connors, Stan Smith, Arthur Ashe and Tom Gorman.

Connors, No. 3, played Italy's Adriano Panatta. Smith, No. 4, met Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif. Ashe, No. 8, met Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and Gorman met Ralph Thung of Holland.

Unseeded Erik Van Dillen from Aptos, Calif., came up against Guillermo Vilas, a stylish Argentine who ousted America's Marty Riessen last week.

Hockey Team 'Remembers'

TORONTO (AP) — Team Canada '72 continues to carry the thrill of a one-game comeback in its historic meeting with the Soviet Union's national hockey team—and a parasite from Moscow's water supply.

The germ, known as Giardiasis, is a rare parasitic infection of the intestines and, if allowed to run rampant, can prove fatal. The junior Peterborough Petes encountered the infection during a tournament in the Soviet Union last winter.

The parasite's characteristics of prolonged diarrhea, abdominal cramps, severe weight loss, fatigue, nausea and flatulence sap the victim's strength.

Watson Finally Gets Golfing Win

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — It was a new situation for Tom Watson.

He didn't have to explain how victory had eluded him, a role he'd endured so many times before.

"Don't anybody ask me 'what happened?'," he happily cautioned the assembled press in the wake of his dramatic, come-from-behind victory in the Western Open Golf Tournament Sunday.

Watson, a 24-year-old redhead who had been so close so many times before, came from six strokes back with a last-round 69—the best score of the day—to nail down his first professional triumph by two strokes over J.C. Snead and struggling Tom Weiskopf.

Watson's total was 287, three strokes over par on the ultratough Butler National Golf Club course. It marked the third consecutive week on the pro tour that the winning score was in plus-par figures, the first time in recent history that had happened.

Snead had a 72 in gusty winds and third-round leader Weiskopf blew to an incredible 77, including 41 on the back nine and a bogey-double bogey finish.

"I have no excuses," said Weiskopf, who led Snead by five strokes and Watson by six when the day's play started. "I played very poorly.

"Playing as poorly as I did, I didn't deserve to win."

"It finally happened," exuded Watson, who resembles a Tom Sawyer who grew up. "I could have won four times this year. I led twice the year before.

"I never doubted I could win. I knew it was just a matter of time.

"But, man, this is a great feeling."

Only Watson, Weiskopf and Snead were in contention in the last round. U.S. Open Champion Hale Irwin came on to take fourth with a 72-293. Arnold Palmer had a 74-294 and tied for fifth with Gene Littler, Larry Nelson and Butch Baird. Nelson and Littler had 71s and Baird 75.

Watson collected $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000, pushing his winnings to $126,000 for the year, fourth on the money-winning list for the year.

Watson led through three rounds of the U.S. Open just two weeks ago—then shot a demoralizing 79 in the last round.

"But this," he said, "makes it worthwhile."

Former Fighter In Poor Condition

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (AP) — Former welterweight and middleweight champion Mickey Walker remained in poor condition today in Perth Amboy Hospital, fighting the effects of Parkinson's disease, anemia and arteriosclerosis, hospital officials said.

The 72-year-old Walker had been in the intensive care unit and received last rights on Friday. However, his condition improved and he was removed from intensive care at the start of the weekend.

New York police several weeks ago found Walker delirious and lying in a gutter in Brooklyn and took to him to Jewish Memorial Hospital there.

Smith Play Saves Cards From Mets

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Did he or didn't he? Only Reggie Smith knows for sure.

Chris Pelekoudas and Paul Pryor, the umpires who disagreed on the crucial play with two out in the ninth inning that prevented the New York Mets from nipping the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3, weren't certain.

"Man, there's no way that was a trap," said Smith, whose shoestring lunge for Cleon Jones' liner was finally ruled a legal catch. "The only way you can trap a ball is if the glove is up and down. I had it flat on the grass. No way that was a trap. No way it could've been. I had it."

And when Bake McBride tagged Tug McGraw for a two-run homer an inning later, the Cardinals had a 5-3 triumph and a sweep of Sunday's doubleheader. They took the opener 5-2.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates took a pair from the Philadelphia Phillies 11-8 and 3-2, the Los Angeles Dodgers shaded the San Francisco Giants 5-3, the Atlanta Braves downed the Cincinnati Reds 7-3, the Montreal Expos flattened the Chicago Cubs 10-2 and the San Diego Padres edged Houston 6-5 in 11 innings after the Astros took the opener 3-1.

BASEBALL

As the diving Smith rolled over and held his glove aloft with the ball nestled in it, Pelekoudas, the first base umpire, signaled a hit. But Pryor, umpiring at second, was signaling out. A taped replay showed Smith appeared to trap the ball.

Pirates 11-3, Phillies 8-2

Richie Zisk's two-run homer capped a three-run eighth inning in the nightcap for Pittsburgh after the Pirates held on to win the opener despite a seven-run Philadelphia rally in the ninth inning.

Dodgers 5, Giants 3

Bill Buckner hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning. It was his third of the season, all against the Giants, who have lost all three outings under new Manager Wes Westrum.

Braves 7, Reds 3

Carl Morton scattered six hits after a rocky first inning in which he gave up hits to the first three batters, all of whom scored. The Braves erupted for four runs in the fifth.

Expos 10, Cubs 2

Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer capped a four-run burst in the first inning and Ron Fairly slammed a three-run homer in the Expos' five-run eighth. Billy Williams and Jerry Morales homered off Steve Rogers for the Chicago runs.

Astros 3-5, Padres 1-6

Houston reliever Jerry Johnson walked Horace Clarke with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to force across the winning run in the nightcap.

In the opener, the Astros collected all their runs and all three hits in the sixth inning, capped by Lee May's homer.

American Track Squad Will Top Soviets: Coach

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The coach of the United States track team, which is without some of the nation's top talent, thinks the Americans will beat their Russian counterparts in this weekend's dual meet.

"The Russians are very impressive," said Jimmy Carnes, "but I think we will beat them with our wealth of material."

Carnes, University of Florida coach, will be up against a powerful Soviet squad in the meet Friday and Saturday at Duke University's Wallace Wade Stadium.

Russian Coach Igor Ter-Ovanesyan said the squad he brought to Durham represents 90 per cent of the best track and field talent in his nation.

Carnes can't make that claim.

Members of the Pacific Coast Club won't compete in the meet because of a dispute with the AAU. That knocks out world record holders Al Feuerbach (shot put) and Dwight Stones (high jump, plus champions Jim Bolding (intermediate hurdles) and John Powell (discus) and talented women's runner Francie Larrieu.

Stev Prefontaine and Paul Geis, both outstanding 5,000 meter runners, passed up the AAU meet; the year's top miler, Tony Waldrop of North Carolina, didn't compete because of an injury; and 10,000-meter winner Frank Shorter declined an invitation to face the Soviets.

"I think a great deal of all those people and I'm disappointed they're not here," Carnes said. "It would have made winning easier. But I don't have to use that as an excuse. We do have the best available talent and I really think we can beat them."

Carnes isn't worried about sprinter Steve Williams and 800-meter standout Rick Wohlhuter. Williams recently tied the 100-meter record at 9.9 seconds, to get a shot at Olympic double winner Valeriy Borzov. Wohlhuter, the world 880 record holder, wants to avenge a loss to Russia's Yevgeniy Arzhanov in last year's meet, which the Soviet men won, 121-112.

In addition, Carnes called North Carolina Central high hurdler Charles Foster "just fantastic." He also feels the U.S. is too strong in the other sprints—200, 400 meters—for the Soviets. But there are chances where the Americans have little chance of winning, he added.

"The keys are going to be in the 1,500 and 5,000 meters, high jump, pole vault and long jump," he said.

U.S. Women's Track Times Sparkling

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — American women have turned in a host of outstanding timings in the the National AAU Championships, and many said they were itching to get at the Russians in the dual meet this weekend in Durham, N.C.

Lean Debra Sapenter defied 105-degree temperatures and brisk breezes here to beat a fine field and equal the world record of 52.2 in the 440-yard dash.

Miss Sapenter's time equalled the world and American records set by Kathy Hammend on Aug. 12, 1972, at Urbana, Ill.

Joni Huntley of the Oregon Track Club soared over 6-feet in the high jump for the ninth time this year. It was less than an inch off her own American mark.

Her U.S. mark is 6-0¾, but Russia's Antonina Lazaryeva has done 6-2 this year already.

Another star of the future appeared in the 100, where slender Renaye Bowen of Lakewood International remained unbeaten this year.

She scored a narrow victory over Ghana's Alice Annum in the 100-yard dash in 10.4 seconds, equalling the fastest time in the nation this year.

Maren Seidler won the shot put with a throw of 54-3 for an AAU meet record but was off her American mark of 56-7.

Mary Decker of Garden Grove, Calif., won the half mile, coming from behind with a sizzling kick to pass Robin Campbell in the stretch to clock 2:05.2. Miss Campbell was timed in 2:05.9.

Miss Bowen's unbeaten string in the 220 came to an end when Miss Annum won in 23.1, with Miss Bowen finishing sixth.

Martha Watson won the long jump at 21-3½, a meet record by a half inch, with five-time Olympian Willye White second at 20-11½.

Patty Johnson defended her 110-meter high hurdles title with a 13.2 time for a meet record, bettering Sue 13.3 she had run in preliminaries.

Kathy Schmidt, the American record holder in the javelin, won her event with a throw of 203-2, the best mark in the world this year.

Sheldon Newman of Tampa sends the shot put a soaring 52-feet-9-inches in the Florida AAU Junior State Championships Saturday at Lyman High School as area coaches look on.

Rutherford Wins Schaefer

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — It was a good thing Johnny Rutherford won the Schaefer 500.

"We would have lodged a protest if we hadn't won," said Teddy Mayer, Rutherford's Team McLaren crew chief, of Sunday's $400,000 championship auto race. "We actually had to go 201 laps instead of 200 to win."

Mayer contended that the pace car erroneously picked up Rutherford as the leader during a caution period early in the race. United States Auto Club officials then waved the actual leaders past the pace car, and allowed them to make up a lap on Rutherford.

"We were cheated," Mayer said. "It really doesn't matter now, though. We'll go whatever distance they ask us as long as we win."

It took Rutherford, who notched his third straight championship victory this season, most of the race to dig himself out of the pack.

The Texan, who took home $246,000 for piloting the same McLaren to victory at Indianapolis a month ago, received $92,625 in winning an unprecedented second consecutive 500-mile championship event. He also captured the Milwaukee 150 three weeks ago.

Rutherford finished more than a lap ahead of former sprint car champ Jimmy Caruthers.

Gordon Johncock, who ran out of fuel on the course while leading, charged back to finish third, just ahead of teammate Steve Krisiloff.

Pole sitter Bobby Unser held the lead for 74 laps, but ran low on fuel near the end and had to slow down.

Mario Andretti, who started to run away from the field before a lengthy pit stop set him a lap behind, escaped injury when he spun and slammed into the first turn wall.

A.J. Foyt retired after only 21 laps, after the suspension in his Coyote let go. He had moved up from 29th to ninth before his troubles began.

In other motorcar action Sunday, Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla. and Al Holbert of Warrington, Pa., teamed to win the $46,750 GT challenge road race at Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course in Lexington, Ohio.

Peter Gethin of Britain won the Grand Prix of the Lottery Formula-5000 auto race at the Monza Autodrome in Monza, Italy.

Henri Pescarolo and Gerard Larousse of France won the 1,000-kilometer event at Zeltweg, Austria, to expand the lead of Matra-Simca in the world automobile manufacturers championship.

U.S. Track Teens Split Russian Meet

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — America's teen-agers got a dose of Olympic track fever over the weekend.

"By '76 I'll be ready," exclaimed Cheryl Butler, a Washington, D.C., high school student who soared 20 feet 8-¼ inches in the long jump for a record at the United States-Russian junior track and field meet.

It was billed as a preview of the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, Canada, and the United States teen-agers defeated the Russians. 197-181, in the two-day meet.

USA Coach Steve Bartold said if the members of his squad "are examples of today's youth, we have no problems in this country."

Although the Russian women won, 82-64, the American men piled up a 133-99 margin for the team victory.

"The American team, I believe, could have won even against an all-European team," said Asari Gerchikov, head of the Soviet delegation.

With his father watching, Ohio State freshman Tom Byers raced to a meet record 3:39.8 in the 1,500 meters, the equivalent of running the mile in about 3:57.

It was not an all-American meet, however.

"We set 10 new Soviet junior records," said Russian coach Oleg Konstantinov.

The A's: They're Feisty, But They Sure Can Win

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
The Herald Services

(First of Two Related Articles)

OAKLAND, Calif. — (NEA) — The Oakland Athletics, let's face it, are not a nice bunch of guys.

Individually, yes — for the most part. But collectively they snipe and snarl, rail and rip, pout and pop off. They even fight.

Almost always, among themselves.

From this miasma of turbulence has come, incredibly, two straight world championships. And fuming and fussing with each other as energetically as ever, they stand primed to make it three straight.

Only the other day, super star Reggie Jackson and Bill North, who plays next to him in the outfield, tumbled in a brawling heap in the visiting clubhouse in Detroit.

Baseball historically has had its feisty teams, such as the Gashouse Gang of St. Louis with Ducky Medwick ducking a barrage of rotten vegetables in the last game of the 1934 World Series after he had slugged the Tigers' third baseman.

But most truculent teams have taken it out of the other guys in field brawls. The masochistic A's practice self-violence like they've been shut in with the Marquis de Sade.

In 1972, Jackson and first baseman Mike Epstein, a couple of heavyweights, battled with fists after trading ethnic and professional slurs.

"I used to talk when it wasn't necessary," admits Jackson. "I regret the Epstein confrontation. But he told me I'd never be more than a .260 hitter and that I thought that I was a better player than I am. Can you believe that?"

In the '73 playoffs, Vida Blue blew a 5-1 lead. Rollie Fingers finally relieved with the score tied and promptly gave up a game-winning homer. "Hell," said Fingers after the game, looking straight at Blue, "what kind of pitcher can't hold a four-run lead?"

Into the breach stepped pitcher Blue Moon Odom, who said coldly to Fingers, "You gave up the winning run."

"There'll never be another club in the history of baseball like this one," says Blue, "full speaking cut. The word is outspokenness, if there is such a word (there is). Or honesty. We're honest with each other. Like when I was holding out in '72. The guys said to me, 'What right you got to ask for all that money? If we didn't do the hitting, you wouldn't win anything?' And they were right."

In 1973, on a plane flight, Odom and outfielder Angel Mangual got into a scrape. Odom, a music bug, was playing his cassette, and Mangual complained it was too loud, "Shut it off," he barked.

"Hell no," said Blue Moon. And they had to be separated.

The A's have an affinity for turbulent air trips. On a flight during the '72 Series, big Mike Epstein braced manager Dick Williams during a victory celebration, snorted a few expletives and was deleted from the club before the next spring. Even when they were the Kansas City A's, Alvin Dark, their current manager, was fired for ignoring a drinking hassle involving a pitcher and a stewardess, and the whole club threatened to mutiny.

"They're a more mature bunch now," says Dark. "They know what it is to finish last and they know what it is to win. They want to win."

Dark, who placidly quotes scripture to soothe the ruffles — Psalm 119:165: "Great peace have they which love thy law; and nothing shall offend them" — is himself the object of venom and ridicule by the A's.

"That man's horse manure," said Ken Holtzman, a 40-game winner the last two seasons because he didn't like the way he was being yanked from games. "Print it," he ordered an Oakland writer.

Relief pitcher Darold Knowles publicly accused Dark of managing scared and not handling the pitchers properly. Dark called him into his office for a 40-minute tongue lashing. Owner Charles O. Finley heard about Knowles' criticism and asked Dark, "You want me to trade him?"

"No," said Dark, "don't do that."

In May, when the A's were faltering, Finley admonished Dark "to get your rear in gear or it's your rear." Only he didn't say "rear" and the warning was barked behind a thin wall in Chicago, where all the players could hear it.

"Take 15 pounds off your — (not rear)," Finley also added bluntly, "and you'll think better."

Then he took his manager out to dinner later that night.

Brazil 'Cup' Hopes Down To 1 Chance

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

The 1974 World Cup is beginning to look like soccer's version of the tortoise and the hare, with defending champion Brazil in the improbable role of tortoise.

Decision day is Wednesday, when the new-style Brazilians, strong on defense but tentative on attack, take on Johann Cruyff's high-scoring Dutch teammates to decide leadership of the second round's Group A.

A victory will put Brazil into the July 7 World Cup final against either West Germany or Poland, leaders of Group B. A draw will be good enough to put The Netherlands through and kill Brazil's hopes of a fourth world title.

Brazil turned in its best performance of this World Cup in defeating old rival Argentina 2-1 Sunday.

Manager Mario Zagallo says he rates West Germany and The Netherlands as the best teams of the series so far. But he added a laconic warning: "We too are in the race."

As for the criticism that the Brazil of 1974 lacks the flair of its predecessors, Zagallo said, "If we had not played defensively, we'd probably be back home watching the others on television."

The Netherlands forged through to lead Group A on goals differential, beating East Germany 2-0. A crowd of 70,000 at Gelsenkirchen saw Cruyff somewhat subdued by close checking but he nonetheless provided enough impetus to spark The Netherlands to victory.

Group B shows a parallel situation, with West Germany ahead of Poland on goals differential. The West Germans defeated Sweden 4-2 in the most dramatic game seen in this World Cup.

Germany trailed at halftime 1-0.

But during a rain-soaked second half, the German attack swung into its lethal best.

For Poland, 2-1 winner over Yugoslavia and the only team unbeaten and untied in World Cup play, the key is getting three star players fit for Wednesday's decisive meeting with West Germany.

Tennis Players: Swaggering Snobs

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The question frequently asked around Wimbledon, this hallowed citadel of lawn tennis, is: Why do tennis players have to be such prunes? Why, really? On any appraisal chart of the genuineness and likeability of athletes of various sports—taken as a breed—the ladies and gentlemen who wield racquets for fun and fortune have to be low on the scale.

As a body, tennis players are arrogant snobs. They are crybabies. They possess mammoth egos. They are clannish and self-centered. They take from the game. They put little back in.

Those who have watched this syndrome develop down through the years, when players were so-called amateurs touring the globe at someone else's expense, felt this might have been the outgrowth of the stuffiness and backwardness of the sport's administrators.

No one questions that the stiff-necked fathers of the game kept it in tight-fitting corsets and stays for generations.

When the game finally went open, discarding its "Shamateur" hypocrisy, many felt there would be a change in the type of athlete to emerge. It hasn't happened.

Tennis players still swagger around in their white attire and fleecy sweaters with arms full of racquets. They glower at umpires, hit balls at linesmen, bark at frightened little ball boys and at times even exchange words with spectators.

They are spoiled rotten.

When their match is done, they shove themselves through logjams of admiring fans. They push old ladies aside and almost step on tykes with autograph pads in their haste to get to the dressing room.

Once there, they put themselves into an isolation booth. A press interview with any one of them is like setting up a presidential news conference.

Group press conferences are arranged by request. The length of questioning is limited to seven minutes. When the seven minutes are up, whether the reporter has his story or not, the session is abruptly ended.

Often a player sends word back: "I would prefer not to be interviewed today." The competitors' locker rooms and restaurants are off limits. That's where they go to hide.

This is in sharp contrast to other greats—Arnold Palmer, and Jack Nicklaus, two of the richest and most successful athletes of all time, will stand for hours after finishing a golf match signing autographs and chatting with friends. They are careful not to offend anybody.

They realize they are public figures, in a sport where exposure helps keep the cash registers ringing. It is no crime for a reporter to walk up to one of them—at almost any stage—and conduct a conversation.

Palmer and Nicklaus are aware. So are such football heroes as O.J. Simpson and Larry Csonka, baseball's home run king Hank Aaron and the class men of baseball, basketball and hockey.

Perhaps this is the reason football, golf, baseball, hockey and basketball continue to thrive as major spectator sports while tennis, although enjoying a world-wide boom in participant popularity, still is struggling as a gate attraction.

The personalities have not learned to relate to the press and public. They live in their own private, insulated world.

There are exceptions, of course. The Australians, as a group, are a terrific, easy-going, easily accessible mob. John Newcombe, the best tennis player in the world, sets the pattern. He is tremendous. Arthur Ashe is another—exceptionally open, articulate, warm. Young Bjorn Borg, for all his teeny-bopper distractions, is a pleasant, mature young man.

Other sports have their exceptions too, such as Wilt Chamberlain in basketball and Dick Allen in baseball, who can be difficult. But on any scale of athletes—as a group—graded on understanding and common courtesy, football players and golfers rate highest. Tennis players bring up the distant rear.

Borrower Wins

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Third-seeded Jo Ann Russell of Naples has won the West Penn Amateur tennis tournament women's title playing with a racket borrowed from a spectator.

Miss Russell, a student at Trinity University in Texas, broke a string on her racket after a 6-3 first set win over Patty Shoolman on Saturday. She managed to carry the second set to a tie-breaker while her own racket was being repaired. She won the tie-breaker 5-1 after repairs were completed.

"Today, nothing could go wrong," said Miss Russell, who now heads to Chattanooga, Tenn. on the Junior Wrightman Cup squad for the National Amateur Clay Courts on Tuesday.

Sharks Victor

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — In a World Football League pre-season scrimmage, the visiting Birmingham Americans handed the Jacksonville Sharks a 31-11 defeat before 4, 700 fans.

Quarterbacks George Mira and Denny Duron steered the win for Birmingham Saturday night, as the injury-riddled Sharks were unable to score until the third quarter.

Former Florida State kicker Grant Guthrie put the Sharks on the scoreboard with a field goal, and former University of Florida quarterback Kay Stephenson added the remaining Jacksonville points with a oneyard plunge for a touchdown and a pass to Dennis Huzhes.

Angels: Challenge

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — "It's a challenge," says Dick Williams of his recent appointment to manage the last place California Angels.

Williams, who guided the Oakland Athletics to two consecutive World Series victories, says he left his job in West Palm Beach as troubleshooter for multimillionaire John MacArthur because of "an awful good offer" from the Angels.

Williams quit as Oakland manager after the 1973 World Series. Oakland owner Charles Finley blocked him from managing the New York Yankees but relented on the Angels' deal.

Williams was here to keep a 2½-month-old commitment to attend a charity softball game. He said he would meet with Angels' officials and coaches today to familiarize himself with his new team.

Slow Return

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians Manager Ken Aspromonte says catcher-first baseman John Ellis will be put back into the lineup slowly, after missing several weeks with a broken bone in his left foot.

Ellis was reactivated Sunday. Pitcher Steve Kline was put on the 21-day disabled list to make room for the returning Ellis.

Fisk Better

BOSTON (AP) — Catcher Carlton Fisk of the Boston Red Sox was in good condition today, after surgery on his left knee that probably will sideline him for the rest of the season.

Reversing his earlier appraisal of the injury, Red Sox team physician Thomas Tierney said it is "possible, but highly unlikely" that Fisk could play again this season.

Tierney made the assessment of Fisk's condition several hours after a 90-minute operation Sunday at Hahnemann Hospital to repair torn ligaments and remove torn cartilage in Fisk's knee.

Fisk, 26, was the starting American League catcher in last year's All-Star game.

Williams 'Debuts' Against Oakland Athletics Tonight

ANAHEIM (AP) — Dick Williams is happy to be back in the saddle. But his ride that begins tonight promises to be a lot rougher than some he has been on in the past.

The man who managed the Oakland Athletics to back-to-back World Series victories in 1972 and 1973 assumes the job as manager of the limping California Angels, hoping to guide them from the cellar of the American League West.

Reggie Jackson, Sal Bando and many more of the Athletics he led during the championship years will be in the opposite dugout.

"It should be an exciting experience. I respect the club. I do know the club quite well," Williams said of the Athletics. "I hope that can be of some benefit.

"I expect to have an enjoyable evening."

Williams quit the Oakland job after the 1973 World Series and nearly began the 1974 season as manager of the New York Yankees.

But Oakland owner Charles O. Finley nixed the deal and Williams opened the season on the sidelines, as troubleshooter for Florida multimillionaire John MacArthur.

When the Angels fired manager Bobby Winkles last week, Finley relented and allowed Williams to take the California job.

"After exile for three months, it's good to get back in the swing," Williams said Sunday in West Hartford, Conn., where he coached in a charity softball game before departing for California.

Others attending the game, which helped raise money to send needy children to summer camp, were former New York Yankees' and Mets' manager Casey Stengel, New York Jets' quarterback Joe Namath and former Oakland second baseman Mike Andrews.

Williams said he didn't think the Angels were a second division ballclub but admitted a turnaround wouldn't come "overnight." He said the bullpen needs help.

Williams said he would be paid about $100,000 a year for three years.

"I'm going back into something I've been in for 27 years and the managing part six or seven years. So it's something I enjoy. It's a challenge."

California Girls Break Swim Marks

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Two 16-year-old California girls swam away with the high records at the Santa Clara International Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet—a world mark in the 400-meter freestyle and an American record in the 1,500-meter freestyle.

Karen Hazen of Sacramento posted the American record of 16 minutes, 49.415 seconds for the 1,500 in Sunday's windup of the three-day meet, which drew nearly 700 swimmers and divers from 14 nations.

She broke the mark of 16:54.14 set last year by Jo Harshbarger, 17, of Bellevue, Wash., who was second Sunday, 20 meters back.

The world mark of 4 minutes, 17.33 seconds in the 400 was set Friday by Heather Greenwood of Fresno in the first of 24 individual races at the eighth annual meet.

Miss Greenwood bettered the former world mark of 4:18.07 seconds set last year by the now retired Keena Rothhammer of Santa Clara.

In the other 22 individual races, nine meet records fell, and new marks were posted in four of six relay events. Last year, nine meet records, including one American record, were broken in the meet.

Secretariat Long Shot Pays Off

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Practice paid off for a 3-year-old colt named Glossary in the $136,400 Secretariat Stakes.

"He's never been on the grass before in an actual race, but he worked very good on the turf both as a 2-year-old and as a 3-year-old," trainer Lefty Nickerson said after watching his 38-1 shot come on in stretch to win the inaugural running of the Secretariat at Arlington Park on Saturday.

Glossary, earned $96,400 for owner Max Gluck and paid a winning mutuel of $80, after running a 1 1-16 miles on the grass in 1:42 4-5 for a 1¼length victory over favored Stonewalk, the Ohio Derby winner.

It was a big weekend for 3-year-olds. Agitate, $4.40, won the $111,300 Swaps Stakes Sunday at Hollywood Park, while Amber Herod, $21.50, won the $148,525 Queen's Plate at Woodbine and Destroyer, $6.60, won the $75,000-added Omaha Gold Cup at Ak-Sar-Ben Saturday.

Jockey Bill Shoemaker sent Agitate to the front early and kept him there to post his 6,666th career victory, most by any thoroughbred jockey, and also his 103rd victory in a $100,000 race.

Agitate, third in the Kentucky Derby, went the 1¼-mile in 1:59 3-5 and finished 1½ lengths in front of Stardust Mel with Master Music third.

The triumph was the sixth in 10 starts for Agitate, who was second once and third three times while winning $222,925 in his career.

Amber Herod gave owner Jack Stafford his second straight victory in the Queen's Plate, Canada's premier thoroughbred race and the oldest continuous stakes in North America.

State Brass Take 'Freebies' And Then Collect Per Diem

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert Shevin, state Treasurer Thomas O'Malley and Lt. Gov. Tom Adams accept free lodging or spend the night in friends' homes while claiming expense money paid by the state for food and lodging, two Florida newspapers say.

The Gainesville Sun and the Lakeland Ledger said the three, when on the road on state business, accept free hotel rooms but collect the $25-per-day expense money for lodging.

But Gov. Reubin Askew claims the allowance only when he has actually incurred an expense, the newspapers reported.

Adams, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, was quoted as saying that since January his campaign account has paid for all his travel expenses without regard to whether the trip was political or official.

But he said that in the past if he stayed at the home of a friend or accepted a free hotel room, his expenses were handled "however the law allows."

"We go a lot of places. We do whatever the law says," Adams told the newspapers.

Secretary of State Richard

TOM ADAMS

ROBERT SHEVIN

Stone, Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington and Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner do not accept free hotel rooms and do not claim expense money for free lodging, the newspapers said.

State Comptroller Fred O. Dickinson was unavailable for comment on how he handles his travel expenses, the newspapers said.

George Warner, deputy state auditor general, said that the Florida law on per diem expenses and free hotel rooms and lodging is subject to "each man's own philosophy," the newspapers reported.

"The law doesn't say you can't charge per diem even though you don't spend money on hotel rooms or meals," Warner said.

James Barrett, a spokesman for Shevin, said it is impossible to make money on per diem and traveling for the state actually costs an individual a great deal of money.

He said the $20 a day staff members receive and the $25-a-day Cabinet members get is not adequate for paying hotel bills and eating three meals a day, so Shevin and his staff claim per diem even when free rooms and meals are accepted.

LONGWOOD FLOODING

Last week's torrential rains filled to overflowing water retention ponds in new Highland Hills subdivision off E. E. Williamson Road to cover nearby streets and place this $35,000 plus home in danger. Engineers had said the ponds would flood only if a hurricane should strike.

The city also had severe flooding in the Land Avenue area where city crews worked most of the weekend pumping out water. The state drainage ditch which runs parallel to and south of SR 434 flooded nearby yards.

Johnson To Replace Salfi As Chief Judge

Seminole Circuit Court Judge Clarence L. Johnson will take over as chief judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit next week, according to out-going chief Judge Dominick Salfi.

Salfi officially resigned his one-year post Monday, but delayed turning over the duties until next week because Johnson is on vacation.

In a formal statement issued with his resignation, Salfi called the past year "a very important life experience," and cited what he termed "several advances made in the administration of justice . . ."

The former state's attorney cited the creation of a master calendar for the judiciary, a formal courtroom space allocation program, and provision of an extra courtroom for Seminole County as major achievements.

Casselberry To Vote On Utility Bonds

CASSELBERRY — Council set July 22 as the day it will take action on a proposed $2.25 million bond issue to expand the city's utility system.

If passed, the bond issue would generate revenue to construct a 1.2 million gallon treatment plant, Utilities Director John Lane said.

Council postponed the first reading of the bond proposal until July 15 because, according to acting city attorney Ned Julian, "the wording is a little rough."

By law council is required to advertise for 15 days that a public hearing will be held on a bond issue. The public hearing is set for July 22, the day council will take action on the proposal.

Since council did not have first reading as expected on Monday the proposal it opted to begin advertising prior to the first reading.

In other action council voted to install water and sewer lines on Crystal Bowl Circle before the road is paved. Council authorized up to $25,000 to come out of the stabilization fund to pay for the installation.

Longwood Nixes Drainage; Will Hire New Engineers

LONGWOOD — City Councilmen Monday night said drainage plans prepared by the firm of Glace and Radcliffe are unworkable and voted to retain another engineer to study the Land Avenue drainage problem.

The three councilmen present — Donald Schreiner, June Lormann and H. A. Scott — voted unanimously to authorize A. E. O'Neall and Associates to conduct a study and prepare a master drainage plan for the Land Avenue-Georgia Avenue — Lakeview Street area. Study and planning cost was estimated by O'Neall at $850.

Schreiner said drainage and alternate plans submitted by Bill Palm, vice president of Glace and Radcliffe, for the Land Avenue area would have required water to run uphill from a few inches to as much as three feet to reach an outfall.

City Atty. Joe Davis said retaining O'Neall for the specific project would not terminate the Glace and Radcliffe contract executed in 1971.

Glace and Radcliffe over the past few months have indicated the city owes the firm more than $100,000 in fees for engineering the proposed sewer system linking Longwood with Altamonte Springs for sewer treatment and other work. Voters in a straw ballot June 11 opposed by a margin of almost two to one the proposed system.

Askew Asks Federal Aid For Flooded Mid-Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Reubin Askew has asked President Nixon for at least $15 million in emergency relief for a 13-county area of the state inundated by heavy rains last week.

Appealing for the funds Monday, Askew said the request would be updated when additional reports are received on crop losses and on the needs of individuals damaged by the five-day storm.

The governor estimated total damages to private and public property at $24.7 million, cautioning that the total may be considerably higher when the after-effects of the storm are fully reported.

"The heavy rains have undermined roads, eroded beaches, washed out seawalls and caused serious damage to drainage and sewer systems," Askew said.

"It now appears that the damages will exceed those during the passage of Hurricane Agnes in 1972 and, since approximately the same areas are affected, will cause economic hardship particularly in municipal and county budgets which are nearing the end of their fiscal year," he said.

The storm dumped torrential rains amounting to as much as 23 inches in a 72-hour period on the 13 Central and South Florida counties between last Monday and Friday.

Creative Art Class Opens Wednesday

Seminole County's first Summer Program of the Creative Arts will begin Wednesday for children 3-14. The first creative experience in the workshop series sponsored by Junior Woman's Club of Sanford will be at 10:30 a.m. at the Central Florida Zoo. In case of rain the event will be in the Woman's Club at 309 Oak Ave.

There is a 50 cents admission fee to the zoo and participants are asked to bring a paper bag lunch for the picnic in Ft. Mellon Park following the field trip. Under the guidance of Mrs. Michael Durak, and Mrs. Joseph Cepuran, the youngsters will explore their imaginations creating and using their own paper bag puppets.

Parents are requested to attend with their children for a tour of the zoo. As an introduction to the narrative "Carnival of Animals", a story-telling hour will provide another creative expression.

Wednesday at 1 p.m., at the Sanford Woman's Club, children are invited to tryout for the play production of Alice in Wonderland to be presented later in the summer. Anyone desiring further information may contact Mrs. James McKee at 319 Forest Drive.

The second workshop on July 10, 10-11:30 a.m. will involve the boys and girls in pantomine at the Woman's Club.

On July 17, at 10 a.m. at the Woman's Club, the children will enact their favorite fairy tales using impromtu body movements.

"Ploggly", a Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus World Clown, will be a special guest July 24.

Floods Inundate Winter Springs

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

WINTER SPRINGS — Flooding in several parts of the city brought on by torrential rains during the past week, were reported at Monday night's Winter Spring Council meeting.

Councilman Irene Van Eepoel said during Thursday's downpour Gee Creek was running over the bridge at Hayes Road and the sand bags were half gone. The road was under water for 75 feet closing off the road to traffic, and the water was backing up in Western Land's Hacienda and Crooked Creek developments.

Unable to reach the police chief or Road and Bridge Commissioner Donald Browning, she said she authorized Western Land to divert the water with the assurance the firm would pay for the cost of road repair after the waters were gone.

Chastised by Mayor Troy Piland for her action, Mrs. Van Eepoel retorted, "I was more concerned about water in people's homes than city policy." Piland reminded the council that it is a legislative body and the mayor has authority. He advised all council members they are going "directly against the system in the city when they take it upon themselves to act."

Ronald Tumminia, of 444 Alderwood Ct. presented complaints of residents of The Terrace subdivision about flooding on many streets and cul-de-sacs.

Representing the developer, Florida Land Co., John Hall said, "We want to find out what is causing the problem" and reminded the residents that during the past 30 days there has been more than 23 inches of rain and 12 inches in the past week. "It could be caused by the high level of Gee Creek or a stoppage in the storm sewer pipe," he speculated.

Piland announced he has instructed the building inspector to issue no more building permits in The Terrace until the city engineer can inspect the drainage. The mayor said possible legal action is called for in order to get the matter corrected and added there is a possibility of the drainage system not meeting specifications. The Terrace also had flooding last year.

Flooding was also experienced during the past week in the Meadowlark and Hacienda sections of the city.

W. Springs Police Cars Inoperable

WINTER SPRINGS — "All police vehicles are dead or dying," Police and Health Commissioner John Booth told City Council Monday night as he revealed that patrolmen have been using their personal vehicles for the past week.

Booth proposed three new vehicles be purchased "as soon as humanly possible" and Council reacted to the bad news by authorizing the police chief to solicit bids for three new police cars without the usual 15-day advertising procedure.

Councilman Irene Van Eepoel made the motion to purchase with the stipulation that the total cost of the three cars be within the reimbursement expected from the federal government for the Cadet program. The sum of $13,637 is anticipated.

Centerfold Pose Costs Teacher Job

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Barbie Lewandowski, a blonde and shapely grade school teacher's aide, is fighting to save her job after posing nude for the centerfold of a men's magazine.

"As far as I am concerned she is through," said William Knapp, superintendent of the suburban Greendale school where Miss Lewandowski has corrected papers and done odd jobs for seventh and eighth grade teachers for the last two years.

But Miss Lewandowski, 25, who for $2,000 struck 18 nude poses of her 37-25-37 figure published in this month's Penthouse magazine, says she will go to court if necessary to keep her job.

"Dr. Knapp says I quit, but I didn't," she said Monday. "I went in to talk to him last week and said I might quit if I thought it would be impossible for me to do my job this fall, but we just left it up in the air."

Knapp, who said he has seen the photos but has no personal feeling about Miss Lewandowski's job, insists she quit.

"She resigned. That's it," he said.

"That's not true. He is very much against me because of this," countered Miss Lewandowski, who uses the name Barbie Lewis for her part-time modeling.

GUTULLA, Sandy Anthony — Sanford

AROUND THE CLOCK

By John A. Spolski

For many years the public has been told that the county jail should be located next to the courthouse (at a time when it was still undecided where this county's seat was).

Eventually the Supreme Court ruled it was Sanford and the talk of a courthouse for south Seminole ended.

Now we're watching with interest as the "talk" centers around putting the jail annex at the Sanford Airport. A move which I believe to be a waste of taxpayer's money.

In the meantime, the Sanford Police Dept. has had its new facility completed at Ninth Street and French Ave., more than a mile from its City Hall. So, there really isn't much substance to requiring the jail to be next to the administrative building, is there?

Here's a proposal to save Sanford's taxpayers a huge amount of money.

Why not, instead of encumbering yourselves for the next 20 to 30 years with the cost of a new City Hall, why not take over the same Building 310 at the airport which the Sheriff's Dept. is coveting?

The building has practically all those items you'd need for a city hall — plenty of parking; unlimited space for expansion; air conditioning; THE WORKS!

Incidentally, speaking of the Sheriff's Dept., can you guess — who was Sheriff Polk's opponent in the '72 campaign?

Would you care to "guess" who is going to be rehired by the Sheriff's Dept.?

I don't want to spoil your fun, but the answer to both queries, I'm told, is Fred Kelley.

Politics can make strange bedfellows, eh?
