Gas Bombs End Siege

Barricaded Man Unharmless; SWAT Member Hospitalized

Sanford Police ended a vigil today outside Adama Transfer and Storage Inc. on Holly Avenue where 61-year-old John Dohl had been holed-up just under 24 hours threatening to commit suicide over a billing problem with stored furniture.

SWAT team members infiltrated the building while Dohl was being distracted by other officers in a ruse to get him to sign some kind of agreement to end the siege peacefully "and give him a decent way out." Police theorized if Dohl had his hands occupied, other officers could rush him and resolve the problem. At about 10:20 a.m. today, police fired two percussion grenades, followed by teargas canisters, into the building, and officers inside managed to capture Dohl before he could do himself or anyone else harm. After the first grenade was fired into the building, Dohl moved to an office bathroom where he apparently had placed his shotgun, and the second grenade was fired followed by the teargas. That so disoriented Dohl, police said, that he couldn't find his way out.

Dohl was immediately taken to Florida Hospital—Altamonte where, police said, he would be examined and probably held under the "Baker Act," a means by which authorities can confine people with emotional or mental problems. SWAT team member Greg Futch, who was overcome by gas, was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford. His condition was unknown at presstime.

For nearly 24 hours, Dohl had kept police at bay with the single-shot shotgun, which at times he taped to his neck. He had told police repeatedly that, "if a doorknob turns, the gun goes off." Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said.

Dohl entered the company's office at about 10:45 a.m. Thursday and threatened to kill himself if he couldn't have his furniture and personal belongings, which are in storage there, released. Police said Dohl owes the company more than $10,000 in combined fees. A legal notice had been published that his furniture would be up for auction beginning Saturday. Police said it was that notice Dohl received some days ago that triggered the episode.

One mental health therapist, who has dealt with men in similar situations, said Dohl "seems to be a very desperate man, feeling he has nothing to live for."

Police cordoned off a four block area around the building and set up command headquarters at First and Commercial.

When they established telephone contact, Dohl spoke to his DeLand attorney Kirk Bauer extensively and said that he would not talk to police. He said he wanted an agreement that the furniture would be returned to his wife. He also told Bauer that he had instructed his wife to call his son in New York to ask for the money to get the furniture released. Bauer kept assuring Dohl

Co-Worker Killing May Bring Life Sentence

Jury Finds Man Guilty Of Second Degree Murder

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

A 12-member Seminole County Jury Thursday found a Winter Park man guilty of second degree murder in the May 15 shooting death of a co-worker in Altamonte Springs.

Sammy Lee Brown, 24, was tried on charges of first degree murder for allegedly shooting Lou Willie Banks to death during a fight over a bag of marijuana at Central Florida Underground, where both men worked.

Brown faced the death penalty if found guilty of first degree murder. He could now be sentenced to life imprisonment on the second degree murder conviction but will be eligible for parole hearings after serving four years. He will be sentenced by Judge Humes T. Lasher at a later date to be set by the judge.

During testimony on Wednesday, Brown admitted he killed Banks, but said he did it to protect himself.

Brown said Banks was coming at him with a pipe, so he shot the man, who was bigger than he was. No pipe was ever found on the scene.

Banks was shot three times with a .357 caliber revolver. He was hit in the head (the fatal wound), the side and across the thighs.

"You don't shoot a man three times to stop him, you shoot a man three times to kill him."

Assistant State Attorney Woody Igou told the jury.

Igou argued that Brown should be found guilty of the first degree charge, because his actions were pre-meditated. He said testimony proved Brown had plotted to kill Banks at least two days prior to the shooting.

Marvin Davis, Brown's defense attorney, had said there was a great deal of conflicting testimony in the case.

Davis contended Brown had no choice but to shoot Banks in order to save his own life, and that in no way was a pre-meditated action.

Brown was originally charged with second degree murder for the shooting, but when a grand jury heard the case they returned an indictment changing the charge to first degree.

The Brown case was Igou's first that carried a possible death sentence. He said having gone through the case should make it easier for him to handle things better the next time he's assigned such a case. "Next time I'll know exactly what to do," he said.

Brown had requested Monday to be excused from appearing in the courtroom during jury selection and his trial. Davis said Brown had a migraine headache that day, but after that he was in attendance for the whole trial.

Needs Of Migrants, Other Needy On Increase

Sharing Center Closes: Who Will Help?

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer
Part 2 part of 2-part series

What impact will the closing of Sanford Christian Sharing Center on Jan. 1 for an undetermined period of time have on the needy and other agencies in the community? This is the question put to some of the people who work with the needy and have benefitting from the sharing center's ministry.

At least one agency head thinks the effect will be minimal. Lt. Sam Flanigan, corps commander for the Seminole County Salvation Army in Sanford, said he expects only a slight increase in requests for services at his organization when the sharing center closes down.

"I don't think there'll be anything that we and the other groups can't handle," he said.

"The sharing center has been having financial difficulties for some time from having to move and the new arrangement. Most of the people that go there for help are already coming here. Most of the services they provide, we provide.

Flanigan said basically the one thing the sharing center provides that the other local agencies don't is formula for newborns. He said when he first met with representatives of Manna Haven, Rescue Church of God Outreach Center and the Sanford Christian Sharing Center last spring he discovered they were all providing pretty much the same things. Manna Haven was the only one serving hot meals and Rescue Outreach was the only agency providing emergency shelter.

It was this overlapping of services that caused the Rev. Richard Danielak, president of the sharing center board, to call for a comprehensive plan to better serve the needy without duplication of effort. Danielak and members of the sharing center board decided to close down temporarily until a committee of local ministers comes up with its recommendations and reorganization takes place and a new location is found. He sees the decision as a positive one.

Meanwhile it's business as usual for sharing center director Jean Holch, who is trying to provide for the migrants who have come to Sanford looking for work in the fields as well as the local residents in need.

Lois Jackson, head social worker for Seminole County Schools, said, "Having the Christian Sharing Center in Sanford has been very important to people in this area. It will make a lot of difference to the migrant

Autopsy Slated Today On Strangled Toddler

An autopsy will be conducted in Orange County today for the 11-month-old girl who died Thursday after her neck became tangled in a curtain cord.

Temica Davis was found dead inside the house of William Sands, 38, at 2312 High Street.

Sands, who is Temica's step-grandfather, and his wife Mary, her grandmother, were raising the girl, according to Capt. Roy Hughey, of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

Hughey said there were two other young children in the house at the time of the accident.

Sands told investigators he was out on the porch when the accident occurred.

Sands said he found Temica wrapped in a venetian blind cord in the dining room when he returned inside, according to Lt. George Hagood of the SCSD.

Hughey said the baby was lying on the floor next to a sliding glass door leading to the backyard of the home.

When paramedics arrived at the scene they immediately attempted to revive her, and

12 Day Prison Takeover Ends Joyously

Inmates Prepare Surrender; FBI To Retake Prison

By Rhonda Cook

ATLANTA (UPI) — Cuban prisoners who took over the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary 12 days ago joyously released their 89 hostages early today and prepared to surrender to authorities with the assurance that they would not be returned to Cuba.

FBI SWAT teams organized today to retake the fire-ravaged prison from the Cubans, who joined fellow refugees in Oakdale, La., in an uprising out of fear of being sent back to their homeland.

About 1,500 officers guarded the fortress-like prison and officials indicated they did not expect any resistance from the convicts when the FBI units entered the structure.

"The process of getting them out will take some time," said Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten.

Several hundred Cubans were believed to have kept their knives and homemade weapons when they released their hostages shortly after 1 a.m. EST and remained in the prison.

Officials said the inmates would be searched individually and moved out of the prison through a side yard. From there, they will be put into buses equipped with bars on the windows and taken to Dobbin Air Force Base in Marietta, 25 miles north of Atlanta, and flown to other federal prison facilities. The tense standoff came to an end after daylong negotiations between federal officials and Cuban inmate leaders Thursday, ending a takeover that began Nov. 23.

The Cubans took over the prison and the Federal Alien Detention Center in Oakdale, La., several days earlier, to protest a U.S.-Cuban agreement to deport "undesirable" refugees were guaranteed that they face no retaliation for the uprising, that all who qualify will be freed and that those who must be deported need not return to their native island.

The surrender of the remaining 1,105 followed the signing of the agreement, carried by live television, in a prison meeting room. At the center of that tableau was Cuban-born Auxiliary Bishop Agustin Roman of Miami, whose intercession also helped end a similar uprising in Oakdale on Sunday.

Roman, the first to sign the pact, was modest about his contribution, saying in Spanish through a translator, "I don't think my presence was necessary. I respect the negotiations. I came as a father. I came as a priest. I came as a pastor."

The translator, paraphrasing the Roman Catholic prelate, added, "It is a good agreement. He came to reassure them. It's a glorious night."

When the signing ended at 1:10 a.m. EST, applause broke out and the hostages began filing into the meeting room on their way to freedom. "Here they come!" called out one prison official. "They're coming out!"

The words broke the tension and touched off celebrations in and around the fire-ravaged, 85-year-old fortress, with some of the detainees dancing around an artificial Christmas tree entwined with colored lights.

One Cuban atop a prison roof grabbed a gull and sang love songs in Spanish to his wife across the street, and the woman shouted back that she was savoring every note. Relatives of the hostages released a small flurry of yellow balloons.

Federal officials said the rebellious inmates would be sent to other federal prisons throughout the country.

Prisoner Sues Police For Not Preventing His Crime

PENSACOLA (UPI) — A man serving a 15-year prison term for a 1984 murder says local law enforcement agencies were negligent and has filed a claim seeking unspecified damages.

The claim filed this week is the second concerning the Dec. 3, 1984 shooting death of Jerry Hudson. He was working as a security guard in the parking lot of Baptist Hospital in Pensacola when he was killed.

Hudson's wife, Wanda, filed a similar claim.

David William Dampier, 27, pleaded no contest to second-degree murder in Hudson's death. He is serving a 15-year sentence at Deward Correctional Institution.

In his administrative claim, Dampier said neither the shooting nor the prison sentence would have happened if law enforcement agencies in Okaloosa and Escambia counties had not been negligent.

State law requires an administrative claim before a lawsuit against a government agency.

Named in the claim are Escambia and Okaloosa County, both sheriff's departments and sheriffs, Pensacola and Fort Walton Beach, both cities' police departments, and state Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter.

According to the claim, Dampier stole a shotgun from a Fort Walton Beach residence the day of the shooting. A warrant for grand theft was issued by the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Department.

Later that day an employee of a mental health center in Pensacola told the Escambia County Sheriff's Department that Dampier — a patient there for several days before that time — had stolen the shotgun, the claim says.

Deputies were asked to pick up Dampier and take him to a hospital for treatment, but he was not picked up, the claim says. Hudson was shot several hours later.

The claim says Dampier suffered damage and losses due to his incarceration, which would not have occurred had law enforcement agencies adequately investigated.

"It's just ludicrous. In my opinion, for someone to perform a criminal act and then sue the law enforcement agency for failure to prevent the crime," said Okaloosa County attorney John Dowd.

How To Select An 'Ideal' Christmas Tree

Although artificial Christmas trees have gained considerable popularity in recent years, primarily because of their convenience and consistent appearance, many people still prefer a real tree. If you are a traditionalist and plan to visit a Christmas tree lot, you will find that tree prices, like everything else, have escalated. So, to be sure you get your money's worth, you should keep certain things in mind as you shop for an "ideal" tree.

It is important to choose a fresh Christmas tree and that is not easy in Florida where most trees are imported from another state. A fresh tree has good color and holds its needles well. Florida's warm weather causes many Christmas trees to wilt quickly and drop their needles. How well a tree will survive depends on the type of tree and when it was cut. Scotch pine and Douglas fir hold their needles well where Spruce tends to lose needles more quickly.

Buying a fresh tree is probably the most important factor in tree selection. There are a few

Celeste White
Urban Horticulturist
333-2500
Est. 175

reasons why a fresh tree is important. Obviously, a fresh tree will look better and last longer. Old, dried-out trees are unattractive and can be a fire hazard as well. Since most of us include electric lights in our tree decorations, it is easy to see why a dried-out tree is a potential danger.

There are several ways to determine a tree's freshness. First, you should bend the needles. If the tree is fresh, the needles will be supple and springy. If the tree is old, the needles will break off. The next suggestion could cause problems with the salesperson, but you can bounce the tree's stump on the ground to see how many needles fall. It is normal for even a fresh tree to shed a few needles but if the tree loses a shower of needles, select another one. Also feel the bottom of the stump. The sap of a freshly-cut tree will feel sticky whereas on an old stump, it will be hard and caked. Fresh trees also have more fragrance.

The tree you select should have good green color, be full and bushy with sturdy branches. The strength of the branches is more a matter of tree type than its age or condition. White pine and red cedar are well suited to our Florida climate, but unfortunately, they have fairly weak branches that won't hold your decorations very well. Firs, spruces, and scotch pines on the other hand, usually have firmer branches.

Since firs, spruces and scotch pines don't grow naturally in Florida, they have to import them from northern states and consequently cost more than either white pines or cedars. In addition to a lower price, Florida native-grown trees have another advantage. Sometimes you can purchase the tree balled and burlap, and they can be added to the landscape after the Christmas season is over. Northern trees just won't do well in Florida.

Once you find the tree you want, it is important to care for it properly so it will last through the holidays. If you buy your tree several days before you are going to set it up, store it outside. Cut the butt of the tree at a diagonal one inch above the original cut and place it in a container of water in a cool, shady place. When you are ready to bring it indoors, saw the butt again, this time squaring off the diagonal. Put the tree in a stand that contains water and keep the reservoir full. You should check the water level daily. Place the tree in the coolest part of the room away from the fireplace, radiator, airducts or TV sets which tend to dry out the needles.

For safety's sake, check all Christmas tree lights for loose connections or worn wires, and avoid over-loading lighting circuits. Never use candles or open flames on or near the tree. And never leave home with the tree lights on.

Sanford Alumni Committee of the Westside Neighborhood Strategy (WINS) Committee planning a charity ball for neighborhood

Group Forms To Help With WINS Renovation Project

Last April, the city, led by Mayor Bettye Smith, initiated the Westside Neighborhood Strategy (WINS) Committee. This effort was started to explore ways of renovating poor housing conditions on the westside of Sanford.

People helping people is what a group called the Sanford Alumni Committee is all about. This group is a subcommittee of the City of Sanford's WINS Project.

Felisa Robinson, chairman of the Sanford Alumni Committee, says that many people who were born and reared in Sanford have moved to other parts of the country to attend schools and find employment. This committee believes that although these people have left, they still are concerned with the conditions of the neighborhoods in which they left. Joining forces with people who were born in Sanford to help improve this community is what the alumni efforts are all about.

The committee is sponsoring a Christmas Charity Ball at the National Guard Armory on Dec. 26. They expect to raise over $4,000 to be donated toward the city's renovation efforts. Stephanie Thompson committee member, says that a former local group known as Society Band will provide the musical entertainment at the ball.

Many of the members of this group have other musical careers throughout the state and are coming back together to play as a benefit to the community. Beth Bridges, treasurer of the committee, says door prizes for the event have been received from many of the local businesses.

In January the committee will launch a major campaign targeted toward people who were born in Sanford and have left the area. The committee will also sponsor a Spring Fashion Show with local modeling group Pizazz donating its services.

Mrs. Robinson says that the group is in need of volunteers and tickets for the Christmas Charity Ball may be purchased by contacting the Sanford Alumni Committee or stopping by the WINS Project Office, Cherry Plaza (2 p.m. until 6 p.m.) Monday-Friday or call the office at 330-1747.

The Altamonte Springs Chapter of The Links Inc. will present its first biennial Miss Calendar Girl Pageant at the Seminole Community College, Fine Arts Building, on Dec. 12, at 7:30 p.m. As a part of the Miss Calendar Girl Pageant and to enhance the personal enrichment of each participant, 13 young women have been engaged in social, spiritual, cultural, and educational activities for the past eight months. The girls and their parents have worked hard to gather ads, patrons, and names for the calendar and souvenir journal, a two-year calendar, and the prestigious title of Miss Calendar Girl 1988-1989.

The calendars will be available for purchase the evening of the pageant. The Altamonte Springs Links thank you for your generous contributions. Because of your efforts this group will continue their charitable endeavors that coincide with the Links national theme of Enhancing the Legacy—Fulfilling the Dream.

Daughter Jilted At College Has Painful Lesson In Love

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Lisa," is a senior at a college 50 miles from here. She had been dating a "wonderful" boyfriend since her junior year. He lives in her college town where he owns a restaurant. We were happy to hear of this. They were talking of setting a wedding date after Lisa's graduation.

However, he never came home with Lisa for a weekend or holiday visit. He was always "tied up" at the restaurant, which seemed logical so we didn't question it. We had assumed that he was around Lisa's age.

Last week I found out this man is 12 years older than Lisa, has been married for nine years and has three children! The bearer of this news was his wife. She phoned me, yelling and cursing and using the dirtiest language I had ever heard. She claims our daughter knew he was married when she met him, but she went after him anyway.

My husband and I drove down to see Lisa. She was in tears, had lost weight and looked crushed. She told us she thought he was single when they first met, then he told her he was married but separated, and his "divorce" was in the works but his wife was giving him a hard time because of the children. Now it seems that he went back to his wife—she's forgiven him, and he told Lisa he can't see her anymore.

Lisa wants to leave college. She's heartbroken, and we are really worried about her. How can we help her, Abby?

LISA'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Urge her to get counseling at the student health center of her college. It will help to ease the bitterness and pain.

If she's not strong enough to stay at college, welcome her home with open arms and see that she gets counseling there. Just let her know you love her, and it's not the end of the world. She's hurting now, but eventually she'll realize she's lucky to be rid of him. This was a valuable tough painful learning experience—but not as costly as it might have been.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I have an identity crisis. I'm not sure whether I'm a widow or a divorcee.

My ex-husband passed away recently. After he and I were divorced, he married again, but I did not. I feel that I am a widow now, because were I to continue to call myself a divorcee, it would indicate to others that my ex-husband is still living, which he is not.

Since our marriage is now ended completely by his death, I consider myself a widow. This would also indicate that I have no living spouse or ex-spouse. What is correct?

M.M. IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR M.M.: You may call yourself whatever makes you feel comfortable, but bear in mind that your ex-husband (now deceased) left one widow (assuming she is still living), which is all one man is entitled to—at a time.

Technically, you are the divorced wife of a man who died. His death did not make a widow of you—it made a widow of the woman to whom he was married at the time of his death.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Want to cheer up some Marines and sailors now in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean? Write to B.Y.M. (Beautiful Young Men), Operation Dear Abby III, USS Missouri (BB 63), FPO San Francisco 96689-1120.

DEAR ABBY: I was married in June, 1985 in a Catholic ceremony. The marriage didn't last long; we split two months later. We were legally divorced and now I am seeking an annulment from the church. Once that goes through, can I truthfully say I was never married?

The courts say the marriage did exist. The church says it didn't and my analyst says, "Use your judgment and say whatever is appropriate to whomever you're with."

I would like to forget I ever met the bum. Would I be lying if I told everybody I had never been married?

NO LIAR IN KANSAS

DEAR NO LIAR: Yes. You were married briefly, and that's what you should say. The details concerning the annulment and divorce can come later. Divorce is nothing to be ashamed of. It occurs in the best of families. There's only one thing that is worse than making a mistake — and that's perpetuating it.

DEAR ABBY: You advised readers not to cancel their newspapers when they go on vacation because someone at the newspaper may tip off professional burglars as to when they're leaving town and coming back. You suggested that a trusted neighbor be asked to pick up the newspaper.

Well, I happen to be one of those trusted (and practical) neighbors who picks up the newspaper for a vacationing neighbor.

However, just to confuse the burglars, when my neighbor leaves town without canceling his paper, I cancel mine and read his!

DEAR DR. GOTT - In the last year, two very close uncles have died, one was in a plane accident, another tried suicide, my stepson broke his neck in a car accident. I was a witness in a murder trial. I was transferred 900 miles away from where my new wife lives, and my mother died. Now my wife tells me that she has herpes, but doesn't want me to use a condom. You'd think I'd have no reason to be afraid without dealing with my wife's squeamishness about condoms.

DEAR READER - I agree. After all you've been through, you shouldn't have to worry about whether or not to use a condom. Your wife's genital herpes is contagious only during the times the little blisters break out and are active. Herespesis virus doesn't worry about contracting herpes unless she has active lesions. Herpes is treatable using the drug acyclovir. This is available by prescription in both topical (cream) and oral forms. Perhaps your wife would consider asking her doctor for therapy. Your other option is to avoid sexual relations when her herpes is active.

Declarer will win the day if he has both the opening club lead and ace of hearts. He can win the club in his hand, cash the ace and king of spades, and then lead dummy's diamond 10 for a finesse. When that wins, he may then play away from the ace from dummy before repeating the diamond finesse. If declarer does all of these things, he can throw West in with a trump play. Spades will be split, and he must further assume that West has three spades. Then he

Brakes Put On Viscount

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth's 28-year-old nephew, Viscount Linley, was banned Thursday from driving on Britain's highways for the next five months, his second suspension for speeding in his 1980 Lotus Elan.

The speed limit on British highways is 70 mph. He was slapped with a five-month ban to run concurrently with the remainder of a six-month suspended ban previously handed down against him.

He also was fined $540 and ordered to pay $17 in court costs. He made no comment about the penalty, but his lawyer, Michael Sullivan, said Linley "regretted the offense and wished to apologize."

The Truth Behind That Ho!, Ho!, Ho!

Sometimes Santa's Snack Becomes A Gourmet Feast

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer
Photos By Tommy Vincent

Did you ever wonder how Santa got so fat and jolly? His secret is out. In the days before he makes his rounds, as he makes countless appearances in parades, at churches and at shopping centers, Santa is invited to breakfast with youngsters through out the nation.

Any chance to practice his Ho, Ho, Ho makes Santa jolly. He is cheered by meeting so many of his little fans and is so skilled at meeting this challenge that he can even manage to be at two breakfasts at the exact same time.

Granted it takes its toll on his waistline, but Santa's life is one of magic and mystery, so he doesn't have to worry about cholesterol or high blood pressure induced by satiating his hearty appetite with the likes of pancakes and scrambled eggs.

Without a second thought, Santa can stuff his face as readily as he stuffs the thousands upon thousands of stockings he fills on Christmas Eve. And Santa needs more energy than most. After all he not only works year round, supervising his elves in the production of gifts and treats for good little boys and girls, his life becomes a whirlwind of personal appearance tours right before his grand finale, his sled flight around the globe.

In meeting his deadline, slipping up and down chimneys and in and out of secret passages into children's homes on Christmas Eve, Santa just doesn't have time to stop for a meal. He can't begin his mission until nightfall, and has to be home at the North Pole by dawn.

Granted Santa does snack on milk and cookies, donated by dotting children along the way, but to make sure he has enough energy, fueled by solid food, Santa, counts on his breakfasts with youngsters to help him make it through the big night.

...Truth

Saturday, Dec. 12, in Sanford, Santa will prove his endurance and demonstrate his split personality by breakfasting with two different sets of children at the same time. Those breakfasts should ensure that Santa will be in top form for his appearance at 10 a.m. that same morning in the Sanford Jaycees' Christmas Parade on First Street, downtown.

Fortunately for Santa both his Sanford breakfasts are scheduled downtown.

The earliest one, which begins at 7 a.m., should be easy for Santa to find. After all this will be the seventh year that he has feasted on pancakes, sausage, juice and coffee with youngsters and their parents at the First Presbyterian Church Pre-School, on the corner of Oak Avenue and Fourth Street.

Traditionally about 200 to 250 youngsters and about 200 parents, meet and breakfast with Santa at the Presbyterian Church and have their photos taken with him at the church fellowship hall. Tickets for all are $2 in advance or $2.50 at the door.

"They love it. The children are all thrilled when Santa walks in the door," said school assistant director Maria Richardo. She added she doesn't worry about Santa being overfed at the breakfast. "He can handle it."

But the challenge this year for Santa in Sanford, will be to appear at two breakfasts at the same time. The church breakfast doesn't end until 9:30 a.m., but at 8 a.m. Santa is scheduled to dine with a group of youngsters at the Sanford Civic Center.

This will be Santa's first visit shared by dancers from Sanford's School of Dance Arts, under the direction of Miriam Rye Wright and Valerie Rye Weld. The dancers will entertain Santa and Santa's expected 300 guests, with a 20 minute "Nutcracker Fantasy," narrated by Weld.

The children and their parents who each pay $6.50 in advance (call 323-1900) to attend this breakfast, will dine on scrambled eggs, bacon, fruit, juice and coffee prepared by chef Mark Quinn of Le Cordon Bleu of Winter Park. The French chef will also present his specialty, French pastries.

There will be presents for the youngsters and photo opportunities with Santa. Photos will be available for $2. Door prizes and gifts for children and merchants discount certificates for parents have been donated by Sanford shopkeepers. The prize among the door prizes is a $200 wooden train from Wayward Electric.

In addition to Santa, special guests at the dancer's breakfast will be the Nutcracker Prince, the Sugar Plum Fairy, 20 top dancing toy soldiers, bobbleheads searching for a Christmas tree, along with a mother and daughter dance team of 20.

Wright and Weld said that in presenting the dancers' Santa breakfast they wanted to create special memories for children in a hometown setting. The most exciting moment, they said, will be when Santa arrives to hear their Christmas wishes.

Children who can't breakfast with Santa can still reach him by telephone at the Hillhaven Ho Ho Hotline, 322-9970, from Dec. 7 through Christmas Eve, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Hillhaven Healthcare Center had been designated by Sanford Mayor Betty Smith as an official outpost of the North Pole and Hillhaven residents are lined up as Santa's telephone helpers.

So it looks like a jolly Christmas is planned for Seminole County youngsters.

High Tech Television Ratings, Courtesy Of Nielsen

By Guy MacMillin

I have this friend — a successful businessman, political activist, sharp guy. He often calls in the evening.

"Just suppose hypothetically that I wanted to tape 'Donahue' tomorrow," he says. "How exactly would I set the timer on my VCR?"

"Well," I say, "hypothetically, you'd push the red 'timer on/off' button, and then you'd advance the jog wheel to Monday and push 'next'...." And so on.

"Gotcha," he says, and hangs up.

I thought about that fellow when A.C. Nielsen announced it was going to use "people meters" to take TV ratings this year.

Nielsen used to put little boxes on the TV sets of its "Nielsen families." The boxes automatically kept track of what shows were on. At the same time, TV diaries were passed out to other families, to gather information about who was watching what.

But some folks keep the TV set on all day, for company, whether they're watching or not. And with 50-channel cable converters, a lot of people couldn't fill in the diaries because they didn't know what channels they were watching. The ratings were suspect.

Enter the people meter, a remote-control device that replaces boxes and diaries. Now, when someone in a Nielsen family turns on TV, he or she also turns on the meter. The channel registers automatically. When people leave the room, they push buttons; when people come into the room, they push other buttons.

The only trouble is that, if my friend and his wife were ever chosen as a Nielsen family, I'd probably have to move in with them to keep the technology straight.

Nielsen says almost half the families it has approached to take people meters have declined. Too much trouble.

Some network officials and advertisers are afraid that those who have agreed to take the things are high-tech junkies like me — people who thrill to the pulse of a solenoid under the index finger, who flush at the sight of an LED readout, who tremble involuntarily at the smell of a plastic face plate.

Will we high-tech freaks end up ruling the airwaves?

Maybe not. After all, some low-tech people do accept the gadgets and, if those people wander away from, say, "Highway to Heaven," without pushing the right button, Nielsen will put them down as having watched the whole show. Michael Landon could be pulling down big bucks while most of his audience is in the kitchen making popovers.

People meters have been in use since September, and the results are inconclusive so far.

"Monday Night Football" ratings are up. That may be because football fans are young and receptive to people meters. Or it may be because a lot of football fans collapse in front of the tube in a beer-sodded fog, leaving buttons unpushed until Ted Koppel wakes them up.

"CBS Evening News" ratings have also improved. But Dan Rather was No. 1 for years when there were no people meters.

Meanwhile, the most high-tech show ever — "Max Headroom" — did so poorly it was canceled after three weeks.

TV executives admit that no viewer-operated ratings device will ever be perfect. So Nielsen has been working on a passive system, a sonar detector that would pick up signals from each family member.

The ratings would be absolutely accurate. But even high-tech nuts might hesitate before putting that in the living room.

Soviets Document Small-Town America

By Cynthia Flash

MOUNT VERNON, Wash. (UPI) — Alexander Andreev primped the Soviet flag to make sure the golden sickle and hammer would show when his young daughter and an American grade-school student walked toward the video camera.

Slowly, Andreev's daughter, 10-year-old Maria "Masha" Andreeva, and a newly found classmate at Jefferson Elementary School in Mount Vernon marched toward the cameraman while a roomfull of school children watched.

The scene is one of many being shot for a joint American-Soviet documentary series comparing life in the two superpowers.

In their 12-part series, Andreev and American producer Stanley Odle, hope to answer basic questions asked by ordinary people in both countries.

"Soviet women are interested in the way Americans dress, what they prefer. Do they all wear jeans," Andreev said through interpreter Victor Averonkov. "Another (person) asks how bricks are made in the United States."

The Russian film crew will be in the United States during the December superpower summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Odle said he hopes the two leaders will have as much success working together as he and Andreev have had.

"It's the same thing we're working on with the project. It's working together, coming to agreements, beginning to understand each other, having a bit of faith and finding out that the impossible isn't," Odle said.

Odle thought of the project while touring the Soviet Union during the Chernobyl nuclear plant disaster. He became involved with groups trying to establish communication on a grassroots level and on his third trip to Russia in April, Odle signed a Protocol with the Soviet Soyuzfilm group.

Before coming to Mount Vernon, Odle and Andreev filmed scenes in Armenia. The film crew also plans to film the extreme north of the Soviet Union next spring and Silicon Valley in Northern California this winter.

Odle estimates each half-hour segment costs about $160,000. The producers hope to air the first hour of their series in both countries by January, but first must find American sponsors.

The two producers said they are striving to overcome their misconceptions of each other's country.

"You tend to shoot what you expect," said Odle, a tall graying man whose ancestors were from Armenia. "You have a concept, a script and you still take out your misconceptions and perpetuate them."

Andreev echoed: "I personally considered Americans to be different from Soviet people. I didn't know how they differed, but I knew it."

The two have had to overcome cultural differences, like when Odle ignored the Soviet's deadline and the Soviets became upset when they realized they may not receive a pay bonus for finishing the project on time.

On Screen And Off

What Dee Stone Has Had To Take

By Frank Banellie

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - In her 39 years, Dee Wallace Stone has been through a lot - on and off the screen.

I never had a feud with Steven Spielberg. It was only business.

In 1981's "The Howling," Stone played an attractive news anchorwoman who turned into a werewolf while reading the evening news. The actress' character in "Cujo" (1983) was attacked by a rabid St. Bernard.

how this lady got three kids through college. She bartended for my dance and violin lessons."

As the mom in "E.T." (1982), her most famous role, Stone was a divorcee whose husband had left her for a younger woman. In last season's TV movie "An Enemy Among Us," her son was ostracized by their community after contracting AIDS.

Actually, Stone, a native of Kansas City, Kan., put herself through college and graduate school, where she earned a master's degree. After teaching English to high-school freshmen and sophomores in her home town, Stone moved to New York, where she acted in commercials.

Off-screen life for Dee Wallace Stone has been as tough as any of her acting roles. Her alcoholic father committed suicide when she was a high school senior after years of disrupting his family.

In 1976, she moved to Los Angeles to find work - instead, she put on 30 pounds. "I didn't know anybody out here," Stone says. "It was a real traumatic experience for me, so I ate - really stuffed my mouth. I'm a dancer, so it looked OK on me, but I just felt like a big piece of mud."

Stone's two most recent TV projects allow her to draw on her own ability to deal with hardship. In one of them, she gets to fight back, as she has learned to do in real life.

She has since slimmed down from size 10 to size 4. Stone's first film role was a small but memorable part in "10" (1979), as the woman Dudley Moore picks up at a bar.

In ABC's upcoming "Stranger on My Land," Stone plays a Utah rancher whose land is seized by the government. She loves the movie because in it she doesn't play a victim. When her character discovers that the government has unlawfully expropriated her land, she straps on a gun, jumps on her horse and chases after the feds.

It was her supporting role as a prostitute on a "Lou Grant" episode that caught the eye of Steven Spielberg. Based on that performance, the director-producer unexpectedly cast her as the mother in "E.T."

On pay cable's Disney Channel, Stone has a gentler role. In "The Christmas Visitor," which runs throughout December, she plays a poor Australian farm wife in the 1890s whose young son thinks he has seen Santa Claus.

"E.T.," the most commercially successful film of all time, should have turned Stone into a major star. But she argued with Spielberg over billing. He didn't want any opening credits, including Stone's. She was amenable if the studio promised her a national publicity tour. The studio declined. Stone insisted on her opening credit, and finally got it.

Stan & Ollie Still Hardy

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - This year marks the 60th anniversary of the first "official" film venture of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, who made their debut as a team in "Putting Pants on Philip."

Released Dec. 3, 1927, the short subject was the first movie in a long career for the memorable comedy duo, who went on to appear in some 105 two-reelers and feature films over three decades.

Stone based the role on her own mother, who kept the family together despite her husband's abusive alcoholism and the desperate poverty it caused.

Today, Stone is the celebrity spokesperson for the National Association of Children of Alcoholics.

What she didn't get, however, was a successful post-"E.T." film career.

After two failed marriages, she settled down seven years ago with Christopher Stone, who plays Dr. Bill Horton on "Days of Our Lives."

Stone says her disagreement with Spielberg has been wildly exaggerated. She doesn't believe it has hurt her career one bit.

"When Dad was sober, it was like 'Father Knows Best,'" the actress recalls. "When he was drinking, he never beat my mother, although I saw him throw her around a couple of times. It was mostly verbal abuse."

"This has been so blown out of proportion," claims Stone. "I never had a feud with Mr. Spielberg. It was only business. There was nothing personal in it."

Curiously, Laurel and Hardy appeared in 13 films together before being discovered as a team. During the years before their deaths, both men lamented the way their films had been cut and edited for television release.

Of her career, she says: "All I can tell you is that this is the first three weeks off I've had in two years."

Was That Really Jean's Voice In The Duet

Dear Dick: In "All in the Family," with Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, I say they both are singing the title song, "These Were the Days." A friend says that Jean isn't singing, but has someone singing for her. I have a steak dinner on this if I'm right. — C.V., Taylor, Texas.

Dear C.V.: Try the flet mignon. Yes, Jean's was the glorious voice on that song.

Dear Dick: Do you know the name of Hopalong Cassidy's horse? I have asked dozens of people and none can remember. — M.B., Ventura, Calif.

Dear M.B.: Fortunately, I don't stall around. Hopalong rode a horse named Topper.

Dear Dick: My brother and I have a $10 bet on this: I say Bob Barker is over 85 years old. My brother says he is not even 60. Who wins? — M.L., Houston.

Dear M.L.: All bets are off. Barker was born on Dec. 12, 1923. So, you lose. He's 64 this year. So, your brother also loses — he is more than 60.

Dear Dick: Did Sam Elliott play a doctor named Doug on "Mission: Impossible"? Nobody will believe me. — R.M., Houston.

Dear R.M.: You should be believed. During the 1970-71 season, "Mission: Impossible" added two characters — Lesley Ann Warren as Dana and Sam Elliott as Doug. You are right.

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick: Just a short note for R.R.F. of Lufkin, Texas. The book he asked you about is "Lord Grissly," by Frederick Manfred. The film, based on that book, was "Man in the Wilderness" with Richard Harris. — M.A.S., Whitehall, Mich.

Dear M.A.S.: Lots of readers wrote with that information, concerning a movie R.R.F. inquired about. He had said it starred Robert Redford, but apparently he remembered it incorrectly. Thanks to all for that info.

Dear Dick: It seems to me that there were three Ober sisters — Eva, Zsa Zsa and another one. If I am right, what was the third sister's name? — M.R., Fort Norris, N.J.

Dear M.R.: Yes, there are three of the little darlings. The third sister is Magda.

Dear Dick: For some time, I have been searching for a title to a movie I saw some years back. It starred Richard Widmark and Cesar Romero and was set on a cattle baron's estate in Texas or Mexico. I seem to feel the title may have been "The Family Curse," and it concerned a curse that all the women in the family had. — W.D., Coos Bay, Oregon.

Dear W.D.: Right picture, but your title isn't close. It was "A Talent For Loving," and it came out in 1960.

Dear Dick: This has come up for discussion several times in our office and we decided that perhaps you could help us out. Do you remember a movie starring Robert Redford — I think it was a B-grade movie — where he played a robber who hypnotized a bank guard and robbed a bank of a very beautiful diamond? — J. P and S, Sugarland, Texas.

Dear J. P and S: That was a very good caper film called "The Hot Rock." It was made in 1972 and starred Redford, George Segal, Ron Leibman and Zero Mostel. Now get back to work.

Moyers Reports On God, Politics

By Joan Mazzur
UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Moyers has a three-part series coming up on God and politics that may have Americans praying for their country.

Moyers has intriguing credentials for this story — he grew up in Marshall, Texas and graduated from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary before turning from religion to politics — going to work for Lyndon Johnson and eventually becoming his press secretary.

"This is a major story of our time which has not been reported on television," he said after a screening of the first in the series, "Moyers: God and Politics." Although his series focuses on Protestants, he said the Roman Catholic church is split by the same differences.

He said the story had been covered in newspapers, but "mainly it has been fought out in the denominational and religious periodicals — and by the way, more people read religious periodicals in this country than any other collective group of publications."

The series begins with "The Kingdom Divided" to air on PBS Wed., Dec. 9 at 9 p.m. This particular kingdom is Central America, fought over in Honduras by the religious right and in Nicaragua by the clerical left.

The second report, "The Battle for the Bible," chronicles the 10-year "holy war" among Southern Baptists, the largest Protestant denomination in the United States, to air Dec. 16 at 9 p.m. (check local listings).

What began as an effort to protect the Bible from the analysis of modern scholarship has escalated into a political crusade among fundamentalists to capture control of the denomination.

"The stakes of this 'holy war' are not only theological," Moyers said. "They are also political. The fundamentalist party wants to make one view of the Bible — their view — the test of religious and political truth."

"For Baptists that's radical. For America, it's political dynamic, because how Baptists read the Bible affects their votes at the ballot box — and influences such issues as school prayer, abortion and foreign policy. So the story is not just about Baptists. It's about the continuing battle over religious liberty in this country."

The final report in the series, "On Earth As It Is In Heaven," to air Dec. 23, sounds like the most sensational. It deals with Christian Reconstruction, a growing Christian movement to create a world where the Bible is the basis for all government, laws and economic systems.

The most radical aspect of Christian Reconstruction, the Moyers report says, is for all people and nations to become Christian. There's a hostility toward democracy, characterized in some of the literature as a compromise.

They advocate a reduced or restructured civilian government, a greater church role in social services, the elimination of paper money and the use of gold and silver coins instead, abolishing the prison system and introducing biblical forms of indentured servitude and restitution, the formation of church courts and the use of the death penalty for "crimes" that include adultery, abortion, homosexuality and incorrigible behavior.

The second and third reports are not yet ready for viewing, but "The Kingdom Divided" presents a fascinating — and Methodist — war going on in Central America.

"How can two people read the same Bible, pay tribute to the same tradition, pray to the same God and come out on opposite sides of the issue?" Moyers asks as he presents what's happening in Honduras and Nicaragua.

But that is the fact as one group preaches fundamentalism and the other practices liberation theology.

"The radical view of Christianity in Nicaragua says the poor must not wait for justice, that the Kingdom of God can be achieved in this world, not just the next," Moyers said.

He said the Protestant evangelical movement is surging elsewhere in Central America.

"In Honduras," he said, "the poor are attracted to the new evangelical churches that promise a reward in heaven for the sufferings of this world — a view which poses no challenge to the status quo."

Methodist missionaries on both sides of the ideology gap make it plain that theirs is a political as well as a religious age. Bill Murray, the son of atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, turned to Christianity.
