Shoriff expects to return home

ORLANDO — Seminole County Sheriff John Polk, who suffered a mild heart attack May 25, is expected to return home to Sanford this weekend from Florida Hospital Orlando.

Polk, 56, was admitted to the hospital Monday when he arrived from London, England, where he had been hospitalized as a result of the attack. Polk was in London on business when he began suffering chest pains.

He underwent a heart catheterization Tuesday and "is doing good," said Chief Deputy Duane Harrell. "They told him to take it easy. I don't know when he'll be back to work. They want him to take a couple of weeks off," Harrell said. He added, Polk said, "I am running for sheriff." Polk has been sheriff 19 years and is up for re-election this year. He also said he has quit smoking cigarettes.

Traded little leaguer ends sit-in protest

WEST HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Little Leaguer Felicia Lewis, who staged a pitcher's mound sit-in to protest her promotion to another team, finally relented and decided to play on her new squad.

Felicia, 12, played on her new team Monday, more intent on trying to win the game and forget the national attention she drew two weeks ago when she occupied the pitcher's mound and refused to leave for 20 minutes.

'Buster' spared from barbecue

CROOKED RIVER RANCH, Ore. (UPI) — Buster the beafalo will not be killed and grilled at the annual Lion's Club Fourth of July barbecue, much to the delight of about 200 people who had protested the critter's addition to the menu.

Croked River Ranch spokesman Bob Ward said Tuesday that protesters who gathered 195 signatures to save Buster from the club's picnic hailed the news of his reprieve, saying "They were pleased and that the Lion's Club was acting very statesmanlike."

Picketers marched in front of the Lion's Club Sunday night with protest signs including one that said, "Shoot a Lion, not Buster."

City engaged in huge sewage disposal plan

By Wayne Mize
Herald Staff Writer
SANFORD — Generally, sewage is not something people like to talk about. However, Sanford is presently knee-deep in its plan to rebuild the city's sewage system and dispose of treated waste water.

Inconspicuous in name, the "201 Plan" is ominous.

Basically, the 201 Plan is a $39 million undertaking that will eventually rehabilitate the city's entire sewage system, involving 18 miles of pipe in a loop around the city, in an effort to dispose of the city's 5.5 million gallons per day (mgd) of waste water.

The cost to the city, minus federal grant funds, will be $10.6 million, not including land purchases.

"It has to be done," said Bill Simmons, city director of planning and engineering. "Nobody in city government is going to argue to do it or not to do it. We reached a point where we had to do something."

"It is a good plan, in that I'm excited about the idea that we have headed heavily into reuse (of waste water) rather than disposal."

There is controversy involving three parts of the plan two of which may or may not be approved by the Department of Environmental Regulation (DER). Sanford is dependent on these three parts if the plan is to succeed.

One, the city's recent signing of a $2.2 million, 25-year contract with Lake Mary for the disposal of reclaimed waste water on the Tamacuan Golf & Country Club. The city will also incur an additional cost of $250,000 for the installing of sewage pipe to connect with Lake Mary.

The contract met with lengthy debate at a recent city commission meeting before being approved by a 3-2 vote.

City Commissioner John A. Merer pleaded with commissioners to study the contract for an additional 30 days before making a decision.

A hasty decision is worse than a better one that is well thought out, he told the commission.

The contract has since been signed by both Lake Mary and Sanford. The lease agreement called for Sanford to make two installment payments of the $2.2 million, with half due upon the signing of the contract.

Storm cleanup

Although Tuesday afternoon's thunderstorm didn't bring as strong of winds as the previous day's, they were powerful enough to fell this large oak tree at the corner of Magnolia Avenue and 17th Street. Willie

$15 million OK'd for expressway

By J. Mark Barfield
Herald Staff Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Seminole County came out a big winner in road dollars late last night as the Legislature approved spending $15 million for the eastern leg of the Orlando Beltway, which traverses Seminole County.

"I'm especially pleased this morning," said Fred Streetman, chairman of the Seminole County Expressway Authority, this morning. "A lot of credit goes to our local representatives in getting this."

Streetman named Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs and Sens. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, and Dick Langley, R-Clermont, as the principal local muscles in getting the money for the Seminole expressway.

"Great news," said Gerald Britton, Seminole County

Expressway Authority executive director. "We're able to reap the fruits of our work."

Britton said $7.7 million will be used for design of the expressway between State Road 426 and U.S. Highway 90. The remaining $7.3 million will be used to begin right-of-way purchases, including $5 million for parcels wholly contained in the expressway right-of-way. Designs must be completed before other partial parcels can be purchased to road.

Britton was also pleased the Legislature passed the Florida Turnpike toll bonding authorization because the Seminole eastern beltway is among the projects eligible for funding from the bonds.

The expressway authority had sought $20.2 million to design. See ROAD, page 12A

Woman played with kids before fatal shootings

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The 30-year-old Oviedo woman charged with killing her parents Monday night, allegedly left a card game with her two children, shot her mother and father in their bedroom, then returned to calmly put the children to bed.

Stephanie Ann Gardner, who has a history of mental problems, remains jailed on suicide watch, charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of her parents, Daniel Dinda, 65, and Carolyn Louise Dinda, 56.

Gardner was arraigned in Seminole Circuit Court Tuesday afternoon, and Judge Alan Dickey ordered a psychiatric exam for her. She is scheduled to make a second appearance in court within three weeks.

She is currently taking two types of tranquilizers and an anti-depressant which had been ordered by doctors who treated her emotional problems before the shootings.

Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. George Hagood said, "As far as we know she had never been violent before. She was depressed. Her marriage had broken up and she had lost custody of her children. She has a history of mental problems. Investigators believe Gardner did take her prescribed medication Monday. Hagood added.

Gardner had shared the home at 2480 Mikler Road with her parents for six months and her children were visiting her at the time of the shootings.

Investigators haven't determined a motive in the murders, Hagood said the family "bickered, bickered, bickered all the time, but it wasn't over anything serious." Gardner and her mother had argued early Monday evening when Gardner came home late for dinner from her job as a dietitian at Lutheran Haven, State Road 126 Oviedo.

Discussion of charter fails to attract quorum

CASSELBERRY — With less than half their 16 members present, Seminole County Charter Advisory Committee members were forced to discuss voter initiatives and referenda without action Tuesday night.

"It's real important you have all your members present from now on," said Bill Neron, the committee's $200 per hour consultant at the close of the 90-minute meeting. "You only have until August. It's getting down to the wire."

Six members, three less than needed to vote, discussed how voter initiatives could be structured. Committee member Bob Webster was present before the meeting began but left when he saw there was no majority.

"I have better things to do with my time," Webster said.

It was the first time the committee failed to have a voting quorum.

The committee must present a proposed charter to county commissioners in early August in order for commissioners to place a charter on the November ballot for voter approval. The committee has been holding weekly meetings in an effort to complete its work.

In setting guidelines for voter referenda, Neron said there are no rules for selecting the number of registered voters required on a petition to have a voter referendum initiative or recall on the ballot. Most other county charters in the state require

Sanford citizens come to aid of woman who was robbed

SANFORD — At least three Sanford citizens heard cries of "Stop that man!" and gave chase after a robber that had stolen a purse from a woman at the downtown U.S. Post Office late Tuesday morning.

The thief got away with $100 in cash, but more than $1,300 in traveler's checks were recovered.

Helen Pate, 56, of 75 Hanson Parkway, was outside her car at the post office at 221 N. Palmetto Ave. and had stopped to pick up a letter she had dropped on the ground.

As Pate, who runs the Senior's Tour Service in Sanford, was picking up the letter, a man reached inside the vehicle, grabbed Pate's purse and fled on foot.

That's when Pate and passers-by gave chase, both on foot and by pickup truck. According to the police report, Karl Stairs and his wife, along with Norma Todd, all of Sanford, and Robert Barnes of Orlando took part in the chase that crossed yards, driveways and went down alleys before the suspect escaped into nearby woods.

Todd and Barnes gave chase on foot, while Stairs later gave chase in his pickup truck.

"I started running after him," said Pate. "Then I saw a young man down the street (Barnes) said 'Stop that man!' He (Barnes) took off his shoes and went after him, along with another woman (Todd) for which I am very thankful."

"The man dropped the purse at First Street and Sanford Avenue. He took the money ($100) but did not get the $1,350 in traveler's checks. Well, while everybody is picking up the traveler's checks, this pickup truck (driven by Karl Stairs) comes by and the driver says 'Get in!'"

"I don't know how I did it after running that far, but I got in and we took off after him again. We chased him through side streets and all over. He was really surprised because he thought he had gotten away with it. He started running through yards and headed toward some woods."

"We would have gotten him but we got stuck in some sand. We were so close to him. If we had gotten him I would have got out and sat on him."

Pate said the suspect described as in his late-20s, tall and of slender build and having a moustache, ran into a wooded area.

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Jogger runs into police officer, arrested as burglary suspect

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who was soaking wet from Tuesday afternoon rains when he approached a policeman in the lot behind Bally Health Club, State Road 436, Altamonte Springs, has been arrested by that officer, who reports he saw the man near a burglarized car.

The officer said when he checked the lot at about 6:35 p.m., he saw Paul Anthony Ewald, 20, of 3320 State Road 436, Apopka, crouched beside a car. He appeared to have the car's door partially open and held a screwdriver, the policeman said.

Ewald, who was wet from rain, approached the officer and asked him what time it was. He reportedly said he had jogged from Apopka to the club. The policeman told him he had seen him beside the car and prepared to search Ewald. Ewald allegedly took a screwdriver from inside his shorts and dropped it on the ground.

The owner of the car was found in the club and reported her purse had been stolen from the car.

Ewald has been charged with burglary to a vehicle, possession of burglary tools, petty theft, and loitering and prowling. He has been released on $1,000 bond to appear in court July 5.

A $23,000 front end loader tractor, a $5,000 loader, and a $500 box blade were stolen Monday or Tuesday from a construction site at 3030 State Road 436, Apopka. The equipment belongs to Hood Rental of Orlando, and was rented to Robert H. Smith, Inc., of Houston, Texas, sheriff's deputies report.

Sheriff's deputies have the name of a suspect who may have stolen a $700 television, a $330 video recorder, $900 worth of telephone equipment, a $270 radar detector, a $600 briefcase, and a $700 watch from a limousine. The items belong to William Beckwith, of Orlando. The car, which was burglarized at 167-C Springwood Circle, Longwood, Tuesday, belongs to Florida State Limousine Service, of Orlando.

Presidential race: Now the battle really begins

By JOSEPH MIANOWANY
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a few pitfalls along the way, Michael Dukakis eventually breezed to the Democratic presidential nomination. He should expect a much different — and significantly tougher — battle in his fall showdown with Vice President George Bush.

The Massachusetts governor, who clinched the nomination with landslide sweeps Tuesday in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico, used an extraordinarily steady and deliberate strategy during the past four months to separate himself from the rest of the Democratic pack.

Once considered only one of the "Seven Dwarfs," Dukakis matured quickly since the primary season began in February. Much of his success came from his unflappable demeanor, his strong fund-raising and the quiet efficiency of his campaign, which ran hard in almost all areas of the country.

But Dukakis also had some key breaks at critical times.

For example, his third-place finish in the opening Iowa caucus Feb. 8 was not viewed as a setback. Instead, most of the attention was on Bush's third place in that race, which threatened to end the vice president's campaign.

On the Democratic side, the focus that cold February day was on the showdown between Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois — two Midwesterners who finished first and second. Dukakis was not ruled out of the running at that stage because he had the good fortune that the next major contest, the Feb. 16 New Hampshire primary, was in his New England backyard where he was expected to dominate — and he did.

Later, the well-financed Dukakis could afford to play a game of attrition, wearing down other candidates with smaller campaign war chests until, one by one, they dropped from the race.

And although black civil rights leader Jesse Jackson gave Dukakis a brief scare with a March win in Michigan, as each white candidate withdrew from the fray, the bulk of their support went to Dukakis.

Eventually, it was only a matter of time before he gathered enough national convention delegates to clinch the nomination. In fact, despite all the talk about the Democrats' muddled 1988 race, Dukakis sewed up the nomination slightly faster than Walter Mondale did in 1984.

The head-to-head race against Bush, however, promises to be much different.

The first hurdle Dukakis must clear is how to handle the liberal Jackson, who is insisting that his cause be adequately represented — perhaps even by offering the vice presidential slot to the civil rights leader.

That has put Dukakis in a bind. If the governor gives too much to Jackson, he runs the risk of playing into the hands of Bush, who is anxious to paint him as a big-spending, tax-loving Northeastern liberal.

However, if Dukakis shortchanges Jackson, he risks alienating the black vote, which is critical for Democrats.

Also, up to now, Dukakis, by virtue of his relentless march toward the nomination, has dominated political news and has generally enjoyed favorable press. But, if past campaigns are a guide, that promises to change as the focus of the race shifts from Dukakis's relentless intra-party drive to his battle with the incumbent vice president.

In a head-to-head confrontation with Bush, Dukakis won't be able to use increased support from fallen candidates' backers to hide some of his own short comings on issues such as foreign policy.

There also is Bush himself. Although tagged as a "wimp," the vice president has a sharp campaign staff and, as his back-to-the-wall win in New Hampshire proved, is capable of being tough enough to do whatever is necessary to rescue his campaign.

If Dukakis is to win, it is widely agreed that he also must find a way to crack the Republican stronghold in the South and West — generally conservative areas where Bush will try especially hard to attack Dukakis's liberal credentials.

More lightning, rain expected

Today's weather could be entitled, "Thunderstorms — Day Three."

Sanford and most of Seminole County can expect a carbon copy of Monday and Tuesday's weather.

There will be a mixture of morning clouds and sunshine before the skies once again turn gray and/or black. Afternoon and evening thunderstorms will roll through the area once again today, accompanied by winds of 10 to 15 miles per hour from the southwest. As has been the case earlier this week, lightning and hail may be severe in isolated areas.

On Tuesday, Joel Hale of Geneva reported a lightning strike at his residence. Hale had just moved some horses from a wooded area at his home on Settler's Loop, just minutes before a lightning bolt struck a tree, causing a loud explosion that scattered debris in every direction.

"I paced it off and there were pieces of that tree 90 feet from where the lightning struck," Hale said.

Today's advice then — carry an umbrella and keep your horses in the barn.

Out west, snow advisories remained in effect this morning for higher elevations of the Shasta and Siskiyou mountains and for the Sierra Nevada range in northern California while thunderstorms lingered over southern Florida and central Iowa, the National Weather Service said.

Widely scattered showers continued in parts of northern California, the middle Atlantic coast region and the Southeast and early morning temperatures ranged from 33 degrees at Meacham, Ore. to 82 degrees at Minot, N.D.

On Tuesday, snow dusted

the mountains of northern California and rain drenched the Pacific Northwest, while warm weather dominated most of the rest of the nation, intensifying droughts in Atlanta and Chicago.

Temperatures climbed to the upper 90s in the upper Great Lakes and North Dakota and are expected to remain there the next few days as a stagnant weather pattern hangs over the northern Great Plains and the nation's mid-section, said National Weather Service forecaster Lyle Alexander.

Light rain and snow fell in northwestern Nevada, sending many Reno commuters into a spin from icy patches on roads in the Lake Tahoe Basin. No serious injuries were reported.

"It's obnoxious really," said Dianne Quinn of Heavenly Valley resort in South Lake Tahoe. "The snow just kind of flies in the air, on and off, and doesn't do anything. This in-between weather is ridiculous. We should either have summer or winter."

Snow showers were scattered in the Sierra Nevadas of California, where snow advisories were posted for the night, and the Cascade Range of Oregon and Washington, and thunderstorms rumbled through parts of northern California and western Oregon.

Five hikers reported missing in a snowstorm at the 7,200-foot level of the Sierra Nevada were found Tuesday in good condition, police said. The hikers, two of them wearing sneakers, were reported missing Monday afternoon.

Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.

Winter Park man charged in kidnapping

WINTER PARK — A rural Winter Park man arrested by Orange County sheriff's deputies at his Seminole County home early today has been transferred from the Seminole jail to Orange County, where he is being held without bond on a kidnapping charge.

Michael Deane Fernandez, 25, 2300 Howell Branch Road #328, is accused of kidnapping 3-year-old Kenneth Faulkner III from his father Kenneth Faulkner Jr., at a convenience store on State Road 50, Orange County, at about 4:40 p.m. Tuesday.

As Fernandez allegedly took the boy, he argued with the father and pushed him away, deputies reported. A female co-defendant was in a car at the scene and fled with the boy and Fernandez, deputies said.

An Orange County sheriff's spokesman said today the female involved is believed to be the child's grandmother, and he was apparently taken in some type of custody dispute. It is not known if Fernandez is related to the child, or was just allegedly acting on behalf of the grandmother.

The woman and the boy were not at Fernandez' house when he was arrested at about 12:15 a.m. They are still being sought.

Body count at mine site goes to 47

BORKEN, West Germany (UPI) — Searchers recovered another body from the Borken mine shaft Tuesday in a race to find all the victims of an underground explosion in time for a memorial ceremony Wednesday.

A spokesman for the lignite coal mine at Borken, 65 miles northeast of Frankfurt, said the discovery of the worker's body raised the death toll in the June 1 accident to 47.

Five rescue teams were searching the mine for four men who were still unaccounted for in the disaster. West Germany's worst mine accident in 26 years, the spokesman said.

A management official said there was little chance the four survived the explosion that shattered the mine, trapping 57 workers 285 feet underground.

"The chances any are still alive are about zero," the official said, calling it a miracle that six miners had been found alive in an air pocket Saturday, 65 hours after the explosion.

Poisonous carbon monoxide gas spread by the explosion had not reached the pocket, officials said.

Members of the rescue teams wearing gas masks had to climb to the surface every two hours to be relieved by other workers.

Authorities said they hoped the four remaining bodies would be recovered in time for a memorial ceremony scheduled Wednesday in Borken, a town of 14,500 people in the West German state of Hesse.

The mine's management and state prosecutor Stefan Waleher were investigating the cause of the coal dust explosion that led to the disaster.

Drug guidelines issued

MIAMI (UPI) — Federal authorities Tuesday urged boat owners and operators to have crew members vow not to use or introduce drugs on board and to make "zero tolerance" a condition of all contracts involving their vessels.

The Department of Transportation and Coast Guard issued the guidelines "to better explain to the public what the (zero tolerance) policy is and what they can do to keep their boats from being seized," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jim Simpson.

"The problem is that a lot of people are saying a lot of things about what our policy is, who don't really know what our policy is," he said.

The zero tolerance policy, announced in April, enforces existing law and calls for authorities to seize boats even if only small "personal use" quantities of illegal drugs are found on board. The policy was devised to reduce illegal drug use and trafficking.

But officials revised the policy last month amid the controversial seizures of multimillion-dollar vessels with tiny amounts of marijuana found on board.

The discovery of any amount of illegal drugs within the 12-mile limit of U.S. territorial waters can still lead to seizures. However, a boat will be seized outside the limit for trace amounts of drugs only if there is an intent to export or import illegal drugs.

In the government's statement, officials urged boat owners and operators to have crew members sign a statement vowing not to use or introduce illegal drugs on board and to make zero tolerance a condition of all contracts for boat leases, rentals and charters.

Simpson said the Coast Guard has seized about 40 boats since April. So far, none of them have been forfeited. Under the law, owners may appeal the seizure through administrative means.

'Zero tolerance'

- Post a zero tolerance notice on board. Inform those using the boat of the policy and establish a written company policy in support of zero tolerance.
- Include a zero tolerance statement in all advertising.
- Provide drug education for the crew.
- Report to the Coast Guard any possession or use of illegal drugs on board the vessel.
- Secure ship compartments restricted to public access.
- Assist drug agents searching the vessel.

Customs agents have seized about 1,800 boats, cars and trucks under the new policy. Less than 5 percent of the vehicles seized were boats. More than 90 percent of the total seizures have been forfeited, said customs spokesman Michael Sheehan.

About 1,000 people associated with the seizures have been arrested on drug charges, Sheehan said.

The owner of a 23-foot boat recently filed suit for the return of his craft seized last month near Bimini after a gram of marijuana was found on board. The boat remains in government custody while agents investigate.

The zero tolerance policy made headlines last month when the $2.5 million Ark Royal luxury vessel was seized after agents found one-tenth of an ounce of marijuana on board.

The Miami Business vessel carried former presidential candidate Gary Hart and model Donna Rice to Bimini, was released with no fines assessed. A marijuana cigarette and 7 grams of marijuana were on board.

Blondie, Dagwood celebrate 55th anniversary

NEW YORK (UPI) — He prefers long naps to mowing the lawn and her flair for shopping bankrupts the household budget, but Dagwood and Blondie Bonstead celebrated 55 years of marriage Tuesday by vowing they would do it all over again.

The well-loved, humbling Dagwood of the comic strip "Blondie" promised to love and honor his wife "before and after shopping sprees, through unbalanced checkbooks and rude morning wake-ups," as a comic strip preacher officiated.

At the ceremony sponsored by King Features, Blondie responded with a vow to stand by her man "before and after naps, through snack time and through baths," and they were pronounced "the world's most popular cartoon husband and wife."

The couple celebrated their anniversary with a yard-wide sandwich stuffed with ham, salami, pepperoni, lettuce and cheese and guaranteed to cause as much heartburn as Dagwood's famous midnight snacks.

The ceremony, staged with actors at the Licensing and Merchandising Conference and Exposition in Manhattan, met with far more approval than the original event when the gum-chewing blond flapper married the millionaire's son in 1933 to the disapproving murmurs of his family.

"What a pity!" said one wedding onlooker in the June 7, 1933 strip.

"They'll never be happy. Mark my word!" pronounced another.

But survive they did and they have become one of the world's most popular and successful comic strips.

"I'm not with eating, sleeping, raising children and making money," said cartoonist Dean Young, who began drawing the strip in 1973 after the death of his father, Chis Young, who created "Blondie" in 1930.

"When I touch on one of those items, I feel I can relate to anybody."

Blondie and Dagwood dated for three years beginning in 1930. Their popularity waned somewhat during the Depression, when audiences were less sympathetic to Dagwood, whose family was vastly wealthy, said Maureen Kelly, a King Features publicist.

Young decided the couple should marry and had Dagwood's family disinherit him after his wedding to the working class girl.

Blondie and Dagwood have raised two children, Alexander, originally known as Baby Dumping, and Cookie, and their dog, Datsy.

"Part of the charm is the love you see between Dagwood and Blondie," Young said in a telephone interview from his home in Clearwater Beach, Fla.

"I think seeing that kind of love is really kind of fun in these days and times. I think working the humor through the love for one another is a nice chemistry."

Survey: Pupils lack math skills

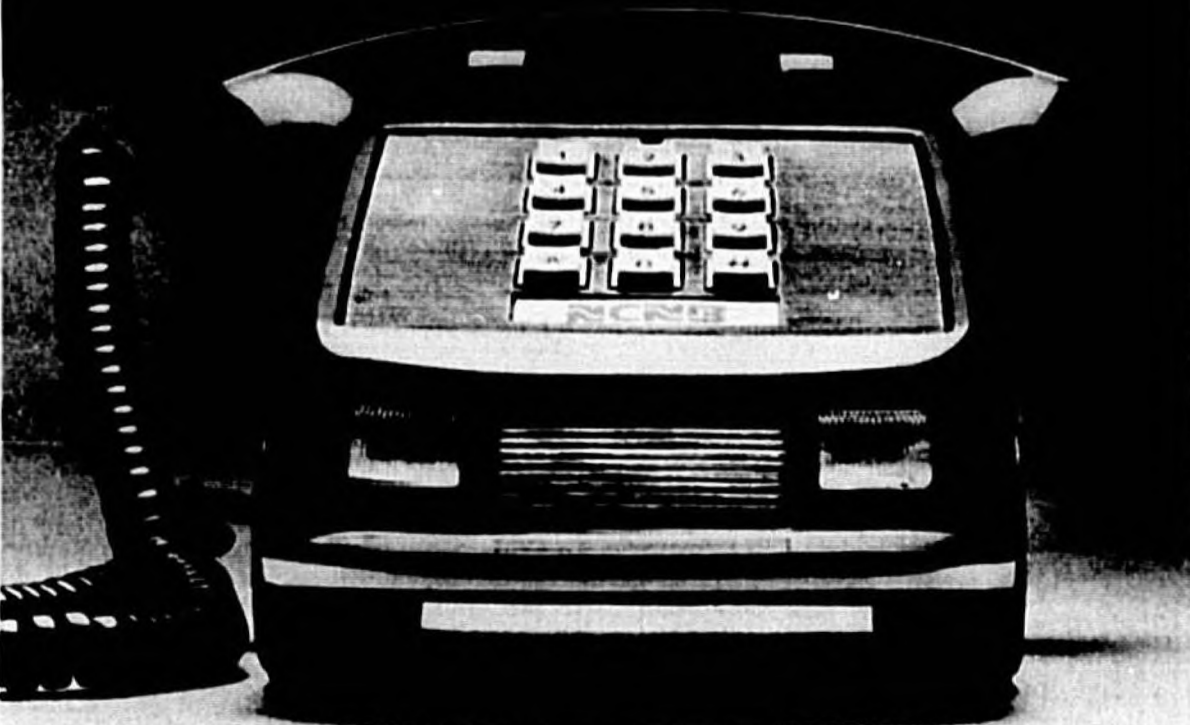

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Educators and public officials expressed concern at a national survey showing American students lack essential math skills needed to make them productive workers and contemporary citizens.

"Once again this highlights the urgent need for education reform and for curricular improvement at all grade levels," said Education Secretary William Bennett.

He said the report by the National Assessment of Educational Progress released Tuesday reaffirmed his negative assessment of student achievements since the 1983 report "A Nation at Risk."

U.S. can't remove Noriega by itself

Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has convincingly won the latest round in the Reagan administration's bid to oust him from power. But despite the Panamanian dictator's blarney, the contest is far from over.

Panama's economy has plunged into a deep recession because of American economic sanctions and its isolation with Gen. Noriega remains strong among most sectors of civilian society. Until the continued ouster of the Panama Defense Forces keeps him in power. Even to protest this asset, Gen. Noriega has had to reorganize the military command structure, limiting the authority of several senior officers.

Regionally, the United States Department of Commerce is removing Gen. Noriega's economic ties. American diplomats have been able to strengthen his political position at home by portraying the United States as meddling once again in the internal affairs of Latin America. At best, the American government is seen as a bumbling colossus made to look more foolish by Gen. Noriega's trilling.

It does indeed appear as though the Panamanian strongman never intended to relinquish power, even as the Reagan administration embarrassingly weakened its demands. The result has been an outcry damaging to the administration from the Senate, Vice President Bush, and others who reject any bargaining with an indicted drug trafficker.

At this juncture, the State Department's Panamanian policy is bankrupt. American diplomats have wisely begun a round of consultations with other governments in Latin America to search for fresh ideas and support for getting rid of Panama's military chieftain.

Amid the frustrations of the hour, administration officials such as Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams and liberal Democrats in Congress such as Sen. Christopher J. Dodd of Connecticut are blustering about the possibility of U.S. military intervention. This option is no more feasible today than it was when President Reagan ruled out military force several months ago — and Gen. Noriega knows this as well as do Mr. Abrams and Sen. Dodd.

Consequently, the United States can do little more at this moment than keep up the economic and diplomatic pressure on the regime and hunker down for a protracted struggle against Gen. Noriega's repressive rule. One of the prime drawbacks of the State Department's policy to date is that it promoted false expectations that Noriega was on the verge of surrendering. The dictator has certainly demonstrated that no American policy can succeed without considerable patience as well as skill on the part of the State Department, the Congress, and the American voters.

In the end, Panamanians themselves will have to be the ones who force Gen. Noriega to resign. American efforts to sustain opposition political groups and to support dissident leaders such as Eric Arturo Delvalle are likely to prove far more productive in the long run than van saber rattling. As Gen. Noriega has just shown, the time has long since passed when the United States could pick and chose the rulers of Central America.

Expect Democrats to retain Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Barring some totally unpredictable event, most political professionals agree that the Democrats should easily retain control of both the House and Senate this coming November.

Over the past decade the percentage of incumbents reelected to Congress — especially in the House — has continued to climb. In 1986 a record 98 percent of incumbents from both parties returned for another term.

There seems little on the political horizon indicating any change in the trend this fall. Given the current Democratic House majority — 254 to 175 with three vacancies — it is all but impossible for enough seats to change hands to swing control to the GOP. That is especially true this year because, as of now, 411 incumbents are running for reelection — the highest number since 1984.

Privately, insiders on both sides of the aisle believe that the best the GOP can hope for is even with a major victory by George Bush in the presidential race — would be to pick up a couple of House seats, certainly fewer than five. More likely, without that overwhelming Bush win the Democrats will add to their majority — perhaps three to six seats, possibly even 10.

Depending on whose figures you accept, there are about 15 House contests now considered too close to predict. Eight of those seats are seats now controlled by Republicans. In addition, about 45 additional races could — but probably won't — result in upsets. This number is almost evenly divided between Democratic- and Republican-controlled seats.

While the Democrats should have little trouble retaining control of the House, they will have a more difficult time in the Senate. However, despite a large number of contests that look close today, they should be able to keep or perhaps expand slightly the 54-46 majority they won in 1986 when they picked up eight seats.

This year there are 31 Senate seats up for grabs — 18 currently held by Democrats, 13 by Republicans. Insiders in both parties generally agree that 13 Democratic incumbents are certain to be reelected, and four Republicans seem certain to be returned for a new six-year term.

Clearly the numbers are working against the GOP regaining control of the Senate. The situation is made worse by the GOP's conceding the Virginia seat being vacated by Republican Paul Trible to former Democratic governor Chuck Robb. In other words, to pick up the five seats they would need to wrest control, Republicans would have to hold all 12 additional GOP seats being contested, while winning six of the eight Democratic seats over which no contests will occur in November.

Long odds to say the least, and especially long because two GOP incumbents — David Keating in Nebraska and Chip Hecht in Nevada — are currently trailing in the polls. Keating is trailing former Democratic Gov. Bob Kery and Hecht is being beaten by Nevada's sitting Democratic Gov. Richard Bryan.

The Democratic incumbent beloved of most troubled New Jersey's Frank Lautenberg, who is being challenged by former Boston League winner and U.S. Army general in Dawkins,

Indians fight new road

EURORA, Calif. (NEA) — Suspecting a centuries-old tradition, members of the Yurok tribe in California have taken to the farthest reaches of the Siskiyou Mountains in search of religious guidance, spiritual renewal and communion with the great creator.

At sacred sites deep inside the Six Rivers National Forest here in California's northwestern corner, generations of Indians have found the tranquility and solitude they seek for vision questing, purification ceremonies, meditation and other religious rites.

But the integrity and sanctity of that remote religious preserve is now threatened by the federal government's insistence that a logging road be carved through the wilderness, irrevocably altering the character of the land of towering Douglas firs and clear mountain streams.

The two-lane, 70-mile-long road would traverse the 956,000-acre national forest between the communities of Gasquet and Orleans. Indeed, all except six miles already have been built by the U.S. Forest Service.

The final section runs through the 16,500-acre Blue Creek Unit, the high country territory between the Ekmath and Smith Rivers that is sacred to members of the Yurok, Karok and Tolowatch tribes.

Throughout their 12-year legal battle to preserve their prayer grounds, the Indians seemed to have the law on their side, beginning with the clause in the First Amendment to the Constitution that says Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

But the U.S. Supreme court in a 5-3 decision recently overturned both lower court rulings — even though it acknowledged that the road could have devastating effects on traditional Indian religious practices.

The Supreme Court dissenters sharply noted that the majority position "sacrifices a religion at least as old as the nation itself, along with the spiritual well-being of its approximately 5,000 adherents so that the Forest Service can build a six-mile segment of road that two lower courts found had only the most marginal and speculative utility."

S&L regulator's reputation slips

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — M. Danny Wall promoted himself as Mr. Clean last July when he took over as chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the agency that regulates the savings and loan industry. Nearly a year later, Wall finds his reputation among some fellow regulators as near to bankrupt as the industry he oversees.

This harsh assessment is the verdict of Washington's bank and thrift examiners and the normally tight-lipped bank regulators who seldom break ranks with one of their own.

The problem is Wall's handling of a savings and loan owned by a man who is a generous contributor to political heavyweights. Current and past officials from the principal banking agencies told us that Wall has "crippled" the independence of his examination staff and "undercut every regulator in the country."

Lincoln Savings and Loan, based in Irvine, Calif. and owned by Charles H. Keating Jr. was slated by bank regulators for receivership or conservatorship in May 1987.

Glasnost and reality

WASHINGTON — As the time draws near for the important Soviet Communist Party conference this month, the free world will be speculating as to whether Gorbachev or the neo-Stalinists will gain the upper hand in the USSR.

Unquestionably, Gorbachev's policy of glasnost has raised the possibility of a restructuring of Soviet society. However, Americans need to view the Gorbachev promises in the light of Soviet reality. It would be a serious mistake to regard Gorbachev as a reformer in American terms. His policies are aimed at modernizing and strengthening the rule of the Communist Party Basic Soviet goals have not been abandoned.

The people of the captive nation of Lithuania can attest to this. The Lithuanians, one of the independent peoples forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940, remain under the repressive rule of Gorbachev's rule that is.

While Gorbachev has opened the door to a modicum of change, no progress has been made in the way of allowing significant protest against Soviet imperial rule in the former Baltic states. Lithuanians are not allowed to commemorate the deportation to Siberia of 400,000 Lithuanians in 1949.

The continuing ban on this commemoration was recently reported by the Lithuanian Information Center in the United States. An independent Lithuanian group organized the deportations in 1949, as the 40th anniversary of the end of the Second World War. In 1949 men, women and children, Lithuanians

Poland and Jews were shipped to the farthest reaches of the Soviet empire. As the group noted, they were condemned to the physical and spiritual extermination. In a proclamation, the group said that its members "should sign this document as they will be arrested."

Harassment of Lithuanians continues to this day under Gorbachev. The group reports that "even today, sanctions are applied to the families of those who were deported. It is noted that they are not permitted to receive their property, to visit their relatives, to study in their own country, to travel abroad, to make sure that their children are taken from the grave to take vengeance on the Lithuanians. The experience of the Lithuanians, also, is the experience of the Estonians and Latvians and other captive peoples locked inside the Soviet empire. Not a word has been said by Gorbachev about the plight of these captive peoples within the Soviet Union."

Given this reality, it is indeed no regard to the fact that a new emigration law, which allows away with strict practices, departed from Lenin and Stalin. Leninism and Stalinism stand for concentration camps on a global scale. Indeed, entire peoples within the Soviet Union live within what amounts to concentration camps. It's yet to be established if Gorbachev plans more than token reforms, and these may be applied only to the Russian population. The non-Russians in the Soviet empire may well continue to suffer as they have suffered for 40 years under Soviet rule.

Shaky fly may help find key

By Deltha Hicks
UPI Science Writer

PHOENIX — A fly that is as shaky as a drunkard may be the key to understanding how the brain works, according to scientists at the University of Arizona.

A team of scientists at the University of Arizona, led by Dr. Robert R. Reed, has discovered that the fly, Drosophila melanogaster, has a unique ability to maintain its balance while walking on a surface that is constantly vibrating. The fly's ability to do this is due to a unique set of neurons in its brain that are able to filter out the vibrations and maintain a steady course.

Bandits use ketchup as gimmick in string of airport robberies

MIAMI (UPI) — Thieves armed with ketchup are making airport travelers see red in a novel but messy crime gimmick that has spread from New York City to Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

Police said Monday there have been six ketchup cases at Miami Airport in the last 15 days and nine since March 25 at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood Airport.

Investigators said the gimmick goes like this: someone squirts the victim in the back with a ketchup packet from a fast food restaurant. A stranger points out the mess and offers a tissue to clean up. While the victim is using the tissue, another thief steals the victim's purse or luggage.

The New York police fraud squad calls it the "ketchup caper." Officers said thieves pulled it off often in New York City, including in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

"While you are saying your 'Hail Marys,' you get hit with ketchup and they are walking out the door with your handbag," detective James Tortora said.

South Florida police said the thieves have also worked upscale shopping centers.

Dade County officers said they arrested three ketchup thieves working the Sunny Isles-Bal Harbour area north of Miami Beach Sunday. One bragged he made $100,000 a year from ketchup crime.

Navy death hearings wind up

PENSACOLA (UPI) — Closing arguments were scheduled to begin today in a hearing to decide if six Navy men should be court-martialed in the death of a recruit pushed past his limit in rescue swimming school.

Nearly two dozen witnesses, many of them young recruits who were in the pool when the limp body was pulled from the water March 2, testified during the four-day hearing at Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Testimony has shown Lee Mirecki asked to drop the course a month before his death because he panicked in the water. He was diagnosed as possibly having a phobia of drowning, yet was placed back in another swim class and died.

Throughout the hearing, Mirecki's mother has been sitting in the front row not far from a large table where the six men blamed in her son's death are seated. She keeps a snapshot of her son in a writing tablet sitting on her lap.

Mirecki, 19, died in a pool at Pensacola Naval Air Station Rescue Swimmer School after a panic-induced heart attack caused him to drown.

Jurors reject steroid defense

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — In what attorneys described as the first case of its kind, jurors rejected a weight lifter's claims that anabolic steroids made him insane and convicted him Tuesday of the 1986 murder of a hitchhiker.

Jurors deliberated 6 1/2 hours before finding Horace "Ace" Williams, 23, a weight lifter who illegally took steroids to beef up his 235-pound frame, guilty of first-degree murder and burglary with a weapon in the fatal beating.

Circuit Judge Michael D. Miller will sentence Williams Friday. First-degree murder is punishable by death in Florida, but Miller said he would not consider it because the crime was Williams' first offense.

Williams mounted an insanity defense based on his use of steroids, and attorneys said the argument was the country's first such defense in a murder trial.

Defense attorney Richard Lubin said Williams showed no violent tendencies before taking steroids for 18 months. Defense experts testified Williams took 2,000 times the clinical dose, causing paranoid psychosis and an inflated self-image.

"Acts of random violence are something we now know are sometimes associated with steroid addiction," Lubin said.

But Prosecutor Charles Burton said steroid use is "a cheap excuse for a murder. What it boils down to is voluntary use of illegal drugs."

Burton said Williams knew what he was doing when he fatally kicked, punched and hit Michael Shane Patterson, 32, a drifter from Fountain Valley, Calif., who was hitchhiking from the Florida Keys to New Jersey.

"That doesn't give him a license to kill," Burton said during closing arguments. "Aggressiveness and short tempered does not insanity make."

Reports indicate rift in Iranian military

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An Iranian commander's televised admission that mistakes he made caused two successive battlefield defeats indicates a widening rift within the military, Tehran residents said Tuesday.

The residents said Iran needed a scapegoat after the defeats by Iraqi forces and that Revolutionary Guards Commander Mohsen Rezaei was the likeliest candidate.

Rezaei, considered one of the most powerful men in Iran, admitted mistakes in his military judgment on state-controlled Iranian television.

said the Tehran residents, reached by telephone.

They said Rezaei looked drawn and downcast as he confessed to mistakes made by the Revolutionary Guards — a privileged corps adhering to leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's brand of Islamic fundamentalism.

In lightning offensives in April and May, Iraqi troops recaptured from the Revolutionary Guards the Faw peninsula and Salamiyah, in southeast Iraq.

Rezaei's television appearance was reminiscent of previous televised confessions made by Iranian officials who had fallen out of favor with ruling clergy.

The commander's unprecedented admission of military failure in the 7 1/2-year war came five days after Khomeini appointed Parliament Speaker Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani commander of Iran's combined armed forces to reverse the successive battlefield setbacks in April and May.

Khomeini's decree gave Rafsanjani control over all branches of the armed forces, including the elite Revolutionary Guards, with a brief to mold them into a more efficient fighting force.

Recently elected radicals in the Iranian parliament have called for an investigation into the battlefield defeats and the punishment of those responsible.

Even Rafsanjani, parliament speaker for eight years, admitted previous flaws in the Iranian command structure.

A Baghdad-based Iranian opposition group said Khomeini's appointment of Rafsanjani was the religious leader's last card to play and that the era of Iranian land victories was over.

All systems go during mock shuttle liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — An imaginary space shuttle blasted off Tuesday after an "excellent" countdown simulation marking a dress rehearsal test of post-Challenger improvements in NASA's launch decision-making process.

The "super sim," the most extensive such exercise conducted since Challenger's destruction in January 1986, began with the start of a countdown at 6:30 a.m. and concluded about five hours later with an imaginary emergency shuttle landing at the Kennedy Space Center's 3-mile-long runway.

The goal of the exercise was to practice using new countdown procedures and to generally give launch teams a chance to get their feet wet before the real thing: Discovery's launch on the next shuttle flight in late August.

"All in all, it was an excellent exercise," said astronaut Robert Crippen, the shuttle program's deputy director of operations and chairman of NASA's mission management team, which now has final authority for clearing a shuttle for launch.

The presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster charged that NASA's decision to launch the doomed shuttle was "flawed." The mission management team addresses such concerns by improving communications and clearly defining the chain of command.

Discovery's launch is formally scheduled for around Aug. 22, but the final date depends on work to complete pre-launch processing. Over the past several weeks, the internal planning date has jumped from Aug. 29 to Sept. 1 and back again. As of Tuesday, it was Aug. 29, two days earlier than the previous assessment.

The super sim countdown began at 6:30 a.m. EDT with blastoff of the make-believe shuttle targeted for 9:50 a.m. But a series of deliberate problems and malfunctions throughout the countdown delayed launch until 10:45 a.m.

To test the flight control team in Houston, the mock shuttle suffered a main engine failure shortly after launch that required an emergency return to the Kennedy Space Center.

Adding to the sense of realism surrounding the test, NASA's closed-circuit satellite television system carried views of a previous shuttle countdown and launch that were synchronized with the flow of the mock countdown.

"We don't get to do a simulation like this very often," said Lee Briscoe, a flight director at the Johnson Space Center. "It was a good idea to get everybody together on the communications loop."

NASA's launch simulation came 42 minutes after the Soviet Union launched a real spaceship, Soyuz TM-5, that carried two cosmonauts and a Bulgarian researcher into orbit to link up with the already-manned Mir space station.

For NASA, Tuesday's simulation was a major milestone on the road to resuming American manned space flights.

Hundreds of NASA and contractor engineers participated in the test, as did three astronauts in a shuttle simulator in Houston who played the role of the flight crew.

But the exercise was primarily focused on the performance of the launch team at the Kennedy Space Center and its interaction with mission control personnel at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Under new launch rules designed to improve safety, the mission management team is responsible for making a launch recommendation to Crippen during a final 10-minute hold in the countdown at the T-minus nine-minute mark. Crippen has the ultimate responsibility for allowing a launch to proceed.

That system was tested in the super sim. At least 21 problems were reported during the countdown, at least three of which would have resulted in a launch postponement, officials said. For the purposes of the test, however, they were "cleared," which allowed the countdown to proceed.

On Wednesday, engineers plan to attach Discovery's external fuel tank to the spaceship's 14-story boosters in a major launch processing milestone.

Discovery itself is tentatively scheduled to be rolled from its hangar to the Vehicle Assembly Building next week, and if all goes well, the assembled shuttle will be rolled to its launch pad around the end of the month.

Soviet leader's reform plans run into snags

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is running into credibility problems as he tries to push through reforms of the Communist Party, the Pravda newspaper conceded Tuesday. Three weeks before the start of a crucial party conference, letters to the Communist Party daily said Gorbachev had run into a credibility gap because no one had believed his predecessor Leonid Brezhnev, who gave rosy progress reports while the country's growth stagnated.

"Gorbachev is not believed sometimes because of his talented predecessor," one letter said. "I understand that Mikhail Sergeevich (Gorbachev) is now having a difficult time."

The letter blamed the cynicism toward Brezhnev on the ideological boss at the time, Mikhail Suslov, who helped bring Brezhnev to power in 1961. Brezhnev died in office in November 1982.

"Under Suslov, the ideological work of the party was directed at exalting Leonid Brezhnev," one letter said. "The party needs radical restructuring."

As ideological "tsar," Suslov had Brezhnev's memoirs printed so copiously that Brezhnev was hailed as the world's most published author — a boast now mocked in the contemporary Soviet press.

Suslov died in January 1982 at age 79 in one of the first of the deaths of the aging old guard that eventually made way for the reformists under Gorbachev.

Soviet newspapers annually receive hundreds of thousands of letters, many dealing with social issues, corruption and complaints about local authorities. Pravda generally uses such letters as a mirror of debate being conducted within high Communist Party ranks.

In many cases such letters are written by senior party officials on demand and printed on the orders of the party itself to emphasize points. However, newspaper officials maintain that letters appearing in the national press are a true reflection of those opinions received by the newspapers.

The amazingly frank series of letters in Pravda Tuesday coincided with signs Gorbachev is having difficulty getting his reformist delegates elected to the Special 19th Party Conference slated to open June 28.

Soviet Union launches three-man space crew

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union launched a three-man international crew into orbit Tuesday on a 10-day mission that includes a rendezvous with the orbiting Mir space station, the key to a permanent Soviet manned presence in space.

With family, friends, dignitaries and scientists looking on, the aging Proton booster lifted the Soyuz TM-5 capsule and its two Soviet and Bulgarian crewmen into space from the Baikonur cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia.

Trailing a huge ball of orange flame, the rocket powered skyward through the steamy 95-degree desert haze without a hitch at 6:03 p.m. Moscow time (10:03 a.m. EDT) amid muted cheers and concerned looks of awe from the invited spectators.

Mission control at Star City near Moscow reported all systems were functioning normally in the flight's initial stages. The mission is to last 10 days.

The entire pre-launch preparations and the final launch sequence were screened live both in the Soviet Union and other East Bloc countries, a practice adopted in 1986. Previously manned launches were only shown hours after the fact. Failures were never revealed.

On board were commander Anatoly Solovyov, 40, and flight engineer Viktor Savinykh, 48, both Soviets, and Bulgarian researcher Alexander Alexandrov, 27. Solovyov and Alexandrov are space rookies on their first flights. Savinykh is a veteran of two previous missions.

Alexandrov is the second Bulgarian to go into orbit. Georgi Ivanov was the first in 1979 when he also flew with a Soviet crew.

According to the official Tass news agency, the launch was the 63rd manned Soviet flight since the late Yuri Gagarin made history as the first man in space with a 108-minute jaunt in 1961.

Alexandrov was the 13th foreign national to be taken into orbit by the Soviets since 1978.

The Soviet Union uses such joint flights as public relations and goodwill gestures toward allies and countries with whom it hopes to improve relations. They rarely have any great scientific value and diplomats said the current joint Soviet-Bulgarian mission was no different.

In fact, one of the first announcements made after the liftoff concerned the release of a postage stamp commemorating the flight.

Alexandrov said he was dedicating his flight to the 110th anniversary of Bulgaria's independence from the Ottoman empire and the 44th anniversary of the communist revolution in Bulgaria.

The three cosmonauts will link up with Mir space station Thursday. The Mir, launched in February 1986, is the key to the Soviets establishing a permanently manned presence in space.

In December the Soviets managed the first full crew exchange in space, a key step in keeping the Mir, which means Peace in the Russian language, permanently occupied. The present Mir crew of Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, launched Dec. 21, 1987, are expected to remain onboard a full year.

They relieved Yuri Romanenko, who holds the space endurance record of 326 days, and his fellow crewman Alexander Alexandrov (no relation to the Bulgarian of the same name on this current mission) thus ensuring a continued manned presence in space.

The mission launched Tuesday is the second time that a Soyuz spacecraft will take an extra day to "catch up" to the Mir for docking. Previously manned crafts were launched into higher initial orbits allowing them to dock with the Mir within hours.

The new orbital route that takes two days to attain docking position requires far less fuel and thus increases the Soyuz's scientific and cargo payload.

Dukakis sweeps four primaries, locks up Democratic nomination

United Press International

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, holding to a quiet, steady course from Iowa's snows to California's beaches, now has enough national convention delegates to take the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Dukakis, 54, swept 1988's last four primaries Tuesday — Montana, New Mexico, New Jersey and California — and those victories put him over the "magic number" of 2,081 votes necessary for nomination at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta July 18-21.

In Los Angeles, where he was savoring the capture of the nomination, Dukakis looked ahead to the autumn's general election campaign against Republican Vice President George Bush, telling an exultant gathering of supporters.

"Every day between now and November, the American people will want to hear how we intend to build a strong and vibrant future for our country. They aren't interested in slashing attacks. They want to judge our positive ideas for a change," he said.

"My friends, what a golden opportunity this is for us. What an opportunity for America to set our course for the next century," the governor said.

Survey: Teens face drug fears

NEW YORK (UPI) — A majority of high school juniors and seniors, particularly among minority students, believe drugs are the greatest danger facing the United States, a survey published today said.

The report said findings on drugs, suicide, sexual abuse, AIDS, alcohol abuse and other matters indicate contemporary teenagers feel their lives are far more complex than their parents.

Fifty-six percent of some 500 teenagers polled for the American Home Economics Association survey named drugs as the greatest threat to the nation. That figure was higher among blacks and Hispanics, at 72 percent.

Fifty-three percent of the students polled said they have seen friends' lives ruined by drugs.

Duarte gets terminal prognosis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors gave Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte a gloomy prognosis after the removal of two-thirds of his cancerous stomach, predicting the Central American leader has six months to live.

Duarte's two personal physicians called Tuesday's operation a success because cancer was not found in other nearby vital organs, saying the removal of the tumor would allow the president to continue functioning with much less pain.

The Central American leader will be able to return to El Salvador in about two to three weeks to resume his duties if his recuperation goes smoothly, his doctors said.

But Dr. Jose Luis Saca, one of Duarte's physicians, remained pessimistic about his patient's long-term prospects, saying, "Statistically we are speaking about six months."

Duarte's six children, his wife and a brother traveled to Walter Reed Army Medical Center for the operation, thanking Americans for their words of sympathy.

Arab summit gets under way; leaders support PLO uprisings

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Arab leaders, urged by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat to show Palestinians "they are not alone," began an extraordinary summit to bolster support for the 6-month-old uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories.

Algerian President Chadli Benjedid opened the special summit Tuesday at the fortified Aurassi Hotel, telling delegates that "Arabs are called upon to express their common will and declare their determination to translate words into deeds and political action."

Arab League Secretary General Khalil Kilbi said the first working session of the summit would begin today behind closed doors. No details were released, but Palestinian sources say they hope the delegates will express support for the Palestine Liberation Organization stand against a proposed U.S.-Middle East peace plan.

Nicaragua peace talks resume

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The government reported "substantial advances" in the first day of the latest round of peace talks with the U.S.-backed Contra rebels, but a guerrilla spokesman described the Sandinista assessment as exaggerated.

The two sides resumed negotiations Tuesday on seeking a permanent end to the country's 7-year-old civil war and are scheduled to meet through Thursday.

"We achieved substantial advances on several points, especially on our proposal for negotiating political reforms," said presidential spokesman Manuel Espinoza. "We are practically in agreement on this issue; there are no longer any fundamental differences."

But moments later, Contra spokesman Bosco Matamoros told reporters the government assessment "was a little exaggerated."

"We were able to broaden discussions on certain themes, especially that of democratization, but there were no agreements, no substantial advances," Matamoros said.

South Africa strike in third day

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A nationwide protest against labor reform and the banning of all activities by 17 anti-apartheid organizations entered its third day today, with both sides declaring a willingness to negotiate the issues.

Hundreds of thousands of militant blacks stayed away from their jobs on Tuesday, the second day of the three-day protest that sparked sporadic violence that killed at least eight people and injured 31 others.

The action was called by the Congress of South African Trade Unions and the National Congress of Trade Unions to protest the banning of 17 anti-apartheid organizations and the introduction of a new labor reform act in Parliament.

But neither labor federation specifically endorsed a work stoppage, which is illegal under the 2-year-old state of emergency that expires June 12.

Jay Naidoo, chairman of COSATU, called the boycott the "most significant protest in the history of our country." He said, "it expressed widespread resentment and anger."

In Washington, the State Department endorsed the protest, saying it had the overwhelming support of black South Africans.

Senate to vote on trade bill veto today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas predicted Tuesday the Senate will sustain President Reagan's veto of a sweeping trade reform bill as the White House made plans for a second, stripped-down version.

"We've got 30" votes, said Dole shortly before the debate began, indicating the Senate would be unable to muster the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto. There are 100 senators, and if all vote, it would take 67 votes to override the president, enacting the trade reform bill into law over his objections.

Reagan vetoed the sweeping trade bill on May 24, noting that while it contained several good provisions to crack down on foreign trade abuses and enhance American competitiveness abroad, it contained others that were simply "bad for America."

The president particularly objected to a labor-backed provision requiring companies to give their employees 60 days advance notice of plant closings and massive layoffs, arguing it was an unnecessary government intrusion into business matters.

The Democratic-controlled House, which has elevated the plant closing debate to a major campaign issue, immediately voted to override the veto 308-113 and sent it to the Senate.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia Tuesday called the president's position "a serious mistake" and said he would work hard to change some minds before the veto override comes to a vote Wednesday afternoon.

But at the White House, spokesman Martin Fitzwater indicated it was a foregone conclusion that the Senate would sustain the president's veto and said the administration would be consulting with the congressional leadership on a new bill after the Senate vote.

"It just seems the prospects are pretty good to come up with a bill that doesn't have (mandatory) plant closings in it," Fitzwater said.

Byrd would not comment on the chances of bringing up a second trade bill — stripped of the controversial plant closing provision.

"We have a good bill that the president vetoed," Byrd said. "It's not dead yet."

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who steered the massive trade bill through the Senate, warned Republicans not to vote against the override on the president's promise there would be a second trade bill.

Citing the administration's foot dragging on trade policy reform over the last four years, Bentsen said, "It gives me no hope that (the president) will work for a second trade bill this year and I see no alternative but to override the veto."

He warned that "with every day's delay... more world trade barriers are erected."

The over 1,000-page bill takes a broad approach to trade reform, stiffening penalties for foreign countries that violate U.S. rules, helping import-battered American companies to regain their place in world markets and creating comprehensive retraining programs for displaced workers. It would streamline export licensing procedures for American products, enhance marketing subsidies for U.S. farm products, improve protections for U.S. patents, copyrights and trademarks, and authorize the United States to participate in the new round of global trade talks in Geneva.

Florida tourism on the increase despite March swoon

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Tourism in Florida for the first three months of this year is up over the same period last year despite a slight drop in March, Secretary of Commerce Jeb Bush says.

Figures released Tuesday show slightly more than 10 million tourists came to the state between January and March 1988, up 5.9 percent from the first three months of 1987.

Bush said the increase came despite a 7 percent drop in visitors in March, when 3.97 million auto and air travelers came to state.

Bush said January and February were "exceptionally strong months" and, while he did not know whether tourism would be up or down this year, he was pleased that an increase had been recorded.

Bush also said sales tax collections in the tourism sector were 14.5 percent higher for the first three months of 1988 than for the corresponding period last year.

Tourism sales tax collections topped $342.7 million during the first quarter of 1988, Bush said.

Figures also show 5.5 million people visited the state by airplane in the first three months of 1988 and 4.5 million by private auto.

The figures come just as the Commerce Department kicks off its "We're Glad You're Here" campaign.

Ottey sprints to 11.0 in 100 meters

ST. DENIS, France (UPI) — Merlene Ottey sprinted to the third fastest time of the year in the women's 100 meters Tuesday night, overcoming a light wind to finish the event in 11 seconds.

Ottey, a long-legged Jamaican, won bronze medals in the 100 and 200 meters last summer at the World Championships in Rome.

In other highlights of the international track and field meet in the northern Paris suburb of St. Denis, Cuba's Roberto Hernandez breezed past his two opponents to win the men's 400 meters in a new record, 45.36 seconds, and Raymond Panier of France turned in the best time of the year in the men's 3,000-meter steeplechase, 8 minutes, 16.01 seconds.

Ottey ran an 11.08 in a recent meet in Spain, and said her impressive showing Tuesday was due to the advice of compatriot Bert Cameron, who finished second to Hernandez in the men's 400 meters, and to an American hurdler whose name she could not remember.

Americans dominate at Madrid meet

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — U.S. athletes dominated the Madrid Outdoor International Track meet Tuesday, with Larry Myricks sailing to an easy victory in the long jump and Danny Harris taking the men's 400 meters hurdles.

Americans took four of the 16 events with favorite Calvin Smith barely edging Desai Williams of Canada in the men's 100 meters and Andrew Valmon speeding to victory in the 400 meters.

Becker back at home on grass

LONDON (UPI) — Defending champion Boris Becker, returning to the grass roots he loves, Tuesday routed Charlton England, Australia, 6-1, 6-3 in the first round of the $385,000 Stella Artois tournament.

Top seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden posted a 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 victory over Australian qualifier Shane Barr, ranked 241st in the world, No. 3 Jimmy Connors, resting his injured right foot after a seven-week layoff, beat fellow American Mel Purcell 6-3, 6-4.

Pistons shackle Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons brought their bruising defense out West Tuesday night to shackle the fastbreak of the Los Angeles Lakers and register a relatively easy victory in Game 1 of the NBA final.

The Pistons, who have held their opponents to fewer than 100 points in eight of their last 10 playoff games, limited the defending champions to 39.8 percent shooting from the floor en route to a 105-93 upset.

"It's hard to imagine we could come out more intense than we did tonight," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "We rotated a lot and played a lot of different combinations. Anyone can learn to play 'D' if they are willing to work hard."

Isiah Thomas scored 15 of his 19 points in the first half. He hit a 3-pointer off a steal at the buzzer to spark the Pistons to a 57-40 halftime lead — Los Angeles' worst deficit at intermission this season — and Detroit was never really threatened again.

Fueled by their elimination of the Celtics in the Eastern Conference final four days earlier, the Pistons pinned only the second home playoff loss on the defending NBA champions in 11 games this year.

Adrian Dantley led Detroit with 34 points, including 12 on 6 of 7 shooting in the first half when the Pistons canned 61 percent of their attempts from the floor to only 34 percent for the Lakers.

Dantley wound up hitting 14 of 16 shots by taking advantage of a lack of double-teaming by the Lakers.

"They're going to try and double-team me Thursday (in Game 2); if they don't they are in trouble," Dantley said. "They are not as big as Boston so it was easier to get inside."

Detroit, which lost both games to Los Angeles during the regular season, now has won five of its last six on the road.

The Lakers, seeking to become the first team since the 1969 Celtics to repeat as NBA champions, suffered their first loss in their last 11 series openers, dating to Game 1 of the 1985 championship series. Los Angeles hosts Game 2, but the next three games of the best-of-seven series are scheduled for the Pontiac Silverdome.

"Thursday our backs are not against, but through the wall," Laker guard Byron Scott said. "We have to play basketball the way we can play it. We know we can win one in Detroit; two will be really difficult."

The Detroit bench outscored its counterparts 32-4. Vinnie Johnson led the way with 16 points on 7 of 11 shooting as the Pistons hit 57 percent of their shots.

Magic Johnson paced the Lakers with 28 points, including 8 in a 16-4 fourth-quarter run that made it close, and 10 assists. Scott added 25 points and James Worthy, who suffered a right hip pointer in a first-quarter spill but continued to play, had 19.

KORG takes lead, rain wins out

FIVE POINTS — KORG USA scored four runs in the bottom of the first inning and used some good defense to keep Florida Carbonics off the bases to take a 6-3 lead after four innings of play in the Pinto Playoffs before 121 fans at the Semole Pony Baseball Complex.

While KORG was in the lead, the rain eventually won out as the game was postponed after four complete innings. The game will resume today at 6 p.m. followed by the second game, Salvago's Boys vs. Advanced Brake, at 8.

Florida Carbonics could not come up with any runs in the top of the first with KORG coming up with two nice defensive plays to get out of the inning. KORG then became aggressive on the bases to take a quick lead.

PONY BASEBALL

Stuart Grimes led the inning of for KORG with a single, an error advanced him to third before he scored when Chaz Lytle reached on an error. Jason Bernosky then singled to place runners on first and third. Danny Pursell then reached on a fielders choice that scored Lytle and put Bernosky out at second. Michael Evans then ripped a double off the left field fence to place runners on second and third before Andy Marlette reached on a run scoring error. Patrick Helms then reached on a fielders choice to bring in Evans and give KORG a 4-0 advantage.

Florida Carbonics came right back, though, with Michael McChing opening the second inning with an infield single.

Clint Allen then blasted a towering home run to left center field to cut the lead to 4-2. Keith Sommer then reached on a single with Matt Johnson reaching on an error before KORG settled down and put the next three batters out.

KORG was held in the bottom of the second on some nice defensive plays by Florida Carbonics as Steven Harriell opened the inning with a line drive to second baseman Randy Jonda. Tommy Moore then reached on a single before Grimes hit into a double play to end the inning.

Jonda then narrowed the gap to 4-3 with a lead off homer in the top of the third that cleared the left field fence. Lytle then made a brilliant play at second for the first out followed by another line play on a line out. Keith Sommer then hit

Uebberoth will resign when term ends

NEW YORK (UPI) — Peter Uebberoth said Tuesday he will resign as baseball commissioner when his term expires at the end of 1989.

He said he announced the move at this time to allow for a smooth transition and for sufficient time to find a successor. Uebberoth is in his first term as commissioner and his five-year contract expires Dec. 31, 1989.

Uebberoth said he will help in the search for a new commissioner. He said the two will play active roles in negotiations over the next television and labor contracts as well as plans for major-league expansion.

"In this way, my successor will have plans and agreements for the 1990s with which he can live," Uebberoth said at a news conference. "I didn't think it would be fair to the owners and my successor to allow the institution to suffer from the situation in which I found it upon taking office in 1984."

On Uebberoth's first day in work out the details of the transition period between commissioners.

"My successor will benefit from a smooth transition during which we will work hand-in-hand to assure that the game is on solid footing," Uebberoth said. "The next commissioner need not be concerned about inheriting a TV contract and a labor contract. He will have helped negotiate those contracts."

Uebberoth has often been mentioned as a possible candidate for political office, but he made no mention of such plans at his news conference.

He joined baseball after running a travel business in California and serving as the local organizing head at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics. He was hired by the major-league owners and, for the most part, held their support.

"I did not want to participate in a popularity contest and I was a bit surprised that there were owners who wanted me back," he said. "Twenty-two major-league clubs either broke even or made a profit, and I believe I participated in helping that."

ASU rocks Gators

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Arizona State overcame the suspension of starting catcher Tim Spehr Tuesday with what Coach Jim Brock called the Sun Devils' best game of the College World Series.

Rusty Kilgo pitched a six-hitter and ASU pounded 14 hits, routing Florida 10-1 in an elimination game of the CWS.

ASU, 58-12, next plays Wichita State Wednesday at 7:10 p.m. (CDT). If the Shockers win, they move into Saturday's championship game. A Sun-Devil victory would force a second game between the schools Friday for a berth in the title contest.

"It has been a tremendously emotional two days for us," said Brock, who suspended Spehr, the West II Regional MVP, indefinitely Tuesday morning for "a common type of athletic team infraction and certainly nothing else."

Brock would not elaborate on the suspension, except to say it would be reviewed Wednesday and that Spehr could be back in action that evening.

"I really felt there were some things that we had to get ironed out. Evidently, we have done that," Brock said. "I feel much better about this ballclub now than I have at any other time since we've been in Omaha."

Kilgo, a junior left-hander, picked up his second victory of the series to move to 12-2 for the season. He struck out eight and walked two. He lost his shutout in the seventh when the Gators' Allen Rutledge clubbed a lead-off homer.

ASU scored three runs in the first inning off Jeff Gidcomb, 16-7, who allowed four runs on six hits over 2 2-3 innings. Dan Runsey delivered a two-run triple and Martin Peralta an RBI single. Gidcomb walked three batters in the inning.

Peralta finished 3 for 5, including a bases-empty home run with four RBI, and Runsey 4 for 5 with three RBI.

Stanford nips 'Canes, 2-1

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Doug Robbins scored from second base on a throwing error by second baseman Jose Trujillo with one out in the ninth inning Tuesday night, propelling defending champion Stanford to a 2-1 victory over Miami in an elimination game of the College World Series.

Stanford, 43-23, advances to play Cal State-Fullerton Thursday at 7:10 p.m. (CDT). Cal State-Fullerton handed Stanford a 5-3 loss Monday. Miami finishes 52-14-1.

If Cal State-Fullerton wins, the Titans advance to Saturday's championship game. A Stanford victory will force another game between the teams Friday with the winner Friday moving to the title contest.

Also Wednesday night, top-seeded Arizona State will face unbeaten Wichita State. The Sun Devils eliminated Florida 10-1 in Tuesday's first game.

Robbins opened the ninth with a ground-ball single off third baseman Mike Tosar. Ron Witmeyer sacrificed and Brad Johnson walked.

Vespe and Stan Spencer each had a three-hit shutout through five innings.

Finley outduels Hough

Angels top Rangers, 1-0

United Press International
Chuck Finley of the Angels Tuesday night was one pitch better than Charlie Hough of the Rangers.

Brian Downing watches one head toward the cheap seats. Downing's homer provided the winning margin for the Angels Tuesday against the Texas Rangers.

Finley, 47, pitched a five-inning over 8 2-3 innings and Brian Downing smacked a six-inning home run to lift the Angels to a 1-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.
Hough, 57, pitched his second straight complete game and fourth of the season for Texas. He yielded five hits and three walks and his nine strikeouts matched his season high.

Browne to ground out to third. Finley walked none. Downing delivered his ninth homer of the season, leading off the sixth by sending a 2-1 pitch in the left-field seats.

White Sox 10, Twins 8
At Kansas City, Mo., Ted Power pitched his second consecutive shutout and George Brett, Danny Tartabull and Kevin Seitzer homered. Power, 3-1, allowed nine hits. Curt Young, 4-3, yielded the first homer.

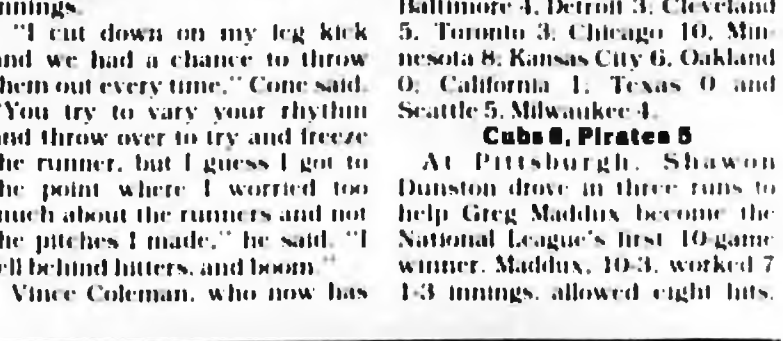

Cards race past Mets, 4-1

United Press International
The St. Louis Cardinals are running themselves back into the National League East race. Behind six stole bases and John Tudor's first victory since May 1, the Cardinals outpaced the New York Mets, 4-1.

Wille McGee, who had three hits and three RBI, doubled to give the Cardinals a 2-0 lead. "I haven't been doing the job in driving in runs lately, so it was satisfying," said McGee, who entered the game with only 17 RBI.

At San Diego, Ed Whitson scattered six hits over seven innings and stroked a two-run double to lead the Padres. Whitson, 5-5, earned the victory. The right-hander struck out one and walked two. Danny Jackson, 5-3, went four innings in his first start since straining his left hamstring May 27.

...Pintos

KORG USA's Patrick Helms does not find this pitch to his liking during Tuesday's Pinto Playoffs at the Seminole Pony Baseball Complex. The game was postponed by rain after four innings and will resume today at 6 p.m.

KORG USA came up with a pair of runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to take a three-run lead. After an out Helms reached on a single followed by a Steven Gilmer. Harriet then single to load the bases. Moore then singled to plate two runs with Harriet being tagged out trying for third. After a Grimes single Lytle lined out to end the inning with the game being called shortly after.

At Cleveland, Cory Snyder belted a two-run homer with none out in the ninth inning and Scott Bailes, 6-4, pitched a

At New York, Rickey Henderson capped a four-run second inning with an RBI single and made a game-saving catch in the eighth. Charles Hudson, 5-2, allowed three runs, all in the first inning. Cecilio Guante recorded six outs to gain his sixth save. Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 5-5, pitched his first complete game of the season.

At Kansas City, Mo., Ted Power pitched his second consecutive shutout and George Brett, Danny Tartabull and Kevin Seitzer homered. Power, 3-1, allowed nine hits. Curt Young, 4-3, yielded the first homer.

Starlings second at Rock-Co

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Editor

The Seminole Starlings, forced into the losers' bracket early, made a valiant run at the title but fell just two runs short this past weekend at the Rock-Co Tournament in Rockledge.

The Starlings, Seminole Softball Club's 10 under all-star team, lost their first game of the tourney, 9-3 to Osceola. The Starlings played good defense led by shortstop Carolyn Crager (eight assists) and first baseman Shyonna Tossie (six putouts, three assists) but the offense did not have one of its better games. Tiffany Poppe's two hits led the offense while Maggie Majewski and Crager each had one hit and one RBI.

Seminole put together a fine display of defense, pitching and hitting in its next game, a 10-2 triumph over host Rockledge. Jonnie Beland was the winning pitcher as she went seven innings with three strikeouts. The infield of Tossie at first, Stacy Ritter at second, Crager at shortstop and Corey Roberts at third played a superb game while catcher Sabrina Stein also had a nice game. Offensively, Beland, Tossie and

SEMINOLE SOFTBALL

Ritter each had two-run singles and Crager had a double in the first inning. In the fourth inning, Stein had a double that scored a run and Ritter also drove in a run with a base hit.

The Starlings let their bats do all the talking in game three as they pulverized West Orange, 19-7. Crager was 3 for 3 in the game with Ritter 3 for 4 with a pair of doubles. Joya Capo was 2 for 4 with a home run and three RBIs while Beth Jansen and Corey Roberts each added two hits and Jennifer Dean, Erin Huguley and Jamie Sharp each had one hit. Roberts, Crager, Tossie and Ritter led the defense in the infield while Cindy Trisdale had a good game in the outfield.

In game four, the Starlings upended West Orlando, 4-2. Beland pitched four innings and had three strikeouts while giving up only one run. The second inning was the highlight of the game for Beland as she caught a popup for the first out, then struck out the next two hitters. Jansen came on in relief in the fifth inning and held West Orlando to one run with the help of Ritter, Crager and Tossie on defense.

Seminole then went on to the finals to face unbeaten Osceola. The Starlings would have to win twice to take the championship. The Starlings came through with an 8-7 victory over Osceola in the first game of the finals. Roberts hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning to provide the winning margin for Seminole. Capo and Trisdale each had two RBIs in the game and Beland had one RBI.

In the championship game, the Starlings battled back from an early lead to tie the game in the bottom of the seventh but Osceola scored one in the eighth and held on for the win. In the seventh inning, Capo and Poppe each singled and scored and, with two outs, Huguley and Beland both scored to tie the game. Trisdale then hit a hard shot that the pitcher scooped up for the third out.

After finishing second in two consecutive tournaments (West Orlando Tournament and Rock-Co Tournament), the Starlings will shoot for first place this weekend at the Seminole Tournament at the Seminole Softball Club Complex.

SBA Magic takes title

The Sunshine Youth Basketball Association Magic came home with the 12 and under State AAU Championship this past weekend by winning two games at Brevard Community College in Cocoa.

In winning the state title, the SBA Magic qualified for the 12 and under AAU Nationals on July 29 at Seattle. The team is now in the process of raising the necessary funds for the trip to the national tournament and anyone interested in donating can contact coach Mar Blythe at 323-1785. Blythe said the team will need about $12,000 to cover expenses.

In the opening game of the state tourney last weekend, the Magic rolled to a 64-34 victory over Osceola. David Carwise was high scorer with 46 points while Scott Tesinsky and Ryan Lefkowitz scored 13 points each and Jason Gray added 11. Jimmy Newberry contributed nine points and Shawn Burke tossed in two.

In the championship game, Newberry hit two free throws with three seconds left to play to give the Magic a 13-11 victory over Jacksonville. Todd Braden led the scoring with 12 points while Newberry finished with eight. Tesinsky and Ian Sanders each had six points. Lefkowitz contributed five, Gray four and Carwise two.

Gray was also chosen Most Valuable Player of the tourney while Braden and Carwise were both all-tournament selections.

Terrorist group may be targeting Olympics

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japanese Red Army member, who was released from jail in 1977 as part of a deal to end a hijack, returned to Japan under police custody Wednesday amid speculation his terrorist group is targeting the Summer Olympics.

Police arrested Hiroshi Sensui, 51, Tuesday at a hospital where he had undergone cosmetic surgery in the Philippines. Police hope he will provide answers to increasing concerns that the Red Army plans to attack the Games in Seoul, South Korea.

Several members of the Japanese Red Army took refuge in North Korea after a hijacking in 1970 and are still there. North Korea wanted to co-host the Summer Olympics, but talks broke down and Pyongyang now says it will boycott the Games.

A Canadian newspaper reported last month that U.S. military and CIA had uncovered a North Korean plot to create six weeks of terror that would force cancellation of the Games.

3-point goals key to Pistons' win

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons used one of their most unlikely weapons to build an insurmountable lead Tuesday night against the Los Angeles Lakers in Game 1 of the NBA finals.

The Pistons connected on two 3-point baskets in the final three seconds of the first half to build a 17-point lead en route to a 105-93 victory.

Those two 3-pointers at the end of the first half turned their lead from 11 to 17, that was a big, big gap to overcome. Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said,

"The Pistons converted the second lowest 3-point shots in the league this season. Detroit hit just 58 of 202 (28.7 percent). That total was second only to the Washington Bullets, who hit 29 of 138 (21 percent)."

In fact, the Pistons scored their final 9 points of the half on 3-point plays. Isiah Thomas drove the lane and was fouled by Magic Johnson with 40 seconds remaining. His basket and free throw gave Detroit a 51-38 lead.

Byron Scott hit a jumper from the right side with 25 seconds left to bring Los Angeles within 51-40. But in the final 3 seconds Detroit put the game out of reach.

Bill Laimbeer took a pass from Thomas near the left corner and hit a 3-pointer to give Detroit a 54-40 lead.

Thomas then leaped and

grabbed Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's rebound pass near halfcourt. Thomas dribbled and hit the 3-pointer at the buzzer to put the Pistons ahead by 17.

"Bill's shot was one of our options, downcourt," Thomas said. "When he made it I knew there were only two or three seconds left and Kareem would look to make a long pass. I just stayed closed as I could to Byron and was lucky to be there when the ball was inbounded."

Los Angeles was able to cut the deficit to 7 points in the waning minutes, but had built itself too big a hole at intermission. The halftime deficit was the most the Lakers have trailed by in the playoffs this season.

"We got a little lucky at the end of the first half," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "That gave us a nice cushion, because we knew in the second half they were going to come out tough. In the two games (during the regular season) we lost they came out at us in the third period."

The Lakers outscored the Pistons a combined 79-45 in the third period during the regular season.

NBA NOTEBOOK

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Agent Bob Woolf was to meet Tuesday with Lakers General

Manager Jerry West in hopes of nearing an agreement on a new contract for Los Angeles guard Byron Scott.

Scott, who averaged 21.7 points a game for the finest season in his five-year career, has said he wants to stay with the defending champions.

The 27-year-old signed a one-year contract for $600,000 before last season and is eligible to become a free agent after this year, although the Lakers would retain the right of first refusal.

Woolf, who also represents Boston's Larry Bird and Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins among others, hopes Los Angeles will offer Scott a deal similar to the six-year, $8.75 million contract extension Clyde Drexler of Portland signed in February during the All-Star break.

...Pistons

However, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Los Angeles' 41-year-old center, had only 8 points on 4 of 13 shooting, and 2 rebounds. And the Lakers never got their vaunted fastbreak in gear.

The Pistons outscored the Lakers, 35-19 and shot 63 percent (15 of 24) from the floor in the second period in fashioning their 17-point halftime advantage.

Thomas, who contributed 12 assists, concluded what could have been Detroit's finest opening 24 minutes of the season by swiping Abdul-Jabbar's rebound pass and nailing a 3-pointer at the buzzer. The shot came just three seconds after another long-range basket from Bill Laimbeer and silenced the capacity crowd of 17,505 at the Forum.

"It's obvious their mental attitude was superior to ours," said Los Angeles assistant coach Bill Bertka. "Those two 3-point shots at halftime really gave them a lift. It could only have been an 11-point game at halftime."

The Lakers, averaging 108 points in the playoffs, shot just 34 percent from the field (15 of 44) in the first half. Meanwhile, the Detroit bench outscored its Los Angeles counterparts 18-0.

With the Lakers missing three shots and losing the ball out of bounds on their first four possessions, the Pistons scored the game's first 8 points. Detroit's lead was 14-4 before the Lakers reeled off an 11-2 burst.

Despite 36 percent shooting, the Lakers trailed by only 22-21 after one quarter. Johnson's layup kept Los Angeles within 28-27 with 8:49 to play in the second period, but that's when the Pistons took charge.

Legislature approves package

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Florida Legislature Tuesday approved a $30 million package they hope will lure the Chicago White Sox to St. Petersburg.

"Clearly, we think this is a wonderful, warm invitation for the Chicago White Sox to become the Florida White Sox," Rick Dodge, St. Petersburg assistant city manager said after the House approved the bill 71-44.

"This is one of a number of tasks that needs to be completed to make this dream a reality," Dodge said, adding without the bill "there could not be that business transaction" that brings the White Sox to Florida.

The measure cleared the Senate earlier in the day and headed for the desk of Gov. Bob Martinez, who has indicated he will sign the bill.

"Play ball!" shouted some House members when the passing vote flashed on the chamber's electronic tally board. Other members donned green and white "Florida White Sox" T-shirts and sang "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

The bill came to the House with amendments that guaranteed concessions contracts to minority businesses and allowed the homeless to seek shelter in the Florida Suncoast Dome, the prospective new home for the Sox, when there are no sporting events at the facility.

Stocks higher; market active

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 20.62 Tuesday, was up 9.08 to 2063.85 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 504-239 among the 1,118 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,710,000 shares.

Stock prices closed lower Tuesday in moderate trading after some modest profit taking at the open and a mid-afternoon wave of selling combined to derail the stock market's recent advance.

"There were some sell programs (at around 2 p.m.) and the buying interest that followed was just not enough to overcome the setback," said Michael Metz of Oppenheimer & Co. in New York.

Dollar drifts lower; gold eases in light trading day

By United Press International

The dollar drifted lower in light trading today on major world money markets. Gold eased.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar continued its slide against the Japanese yen, closing at 125.32 yen, off 0.45 from 125.77 yen on Tuesday.

Currency traders in Japan noted the dollar's weakening was in line with an overnight decline in New York.

Market players sold their dollar holdings to adjust their long positions, they said.

In Europe, the dollar began the day in Zurich at 1.4265 Swiss francs, down from Tuesday's close of 1.4285.

The dollar opened in Paris at 5.7865 French francs, down from 5.7925 and opened in Brussels at 35.98 Belgian francs, down from 36.00.

The dollar began the day in Amsterdam at 1.922 Dutch guilders, down from Tuesday's close of 1.9245, and opened in Milan at 1,272.50 lire, down from 1,272.90.

In London, the pound opened at $1.821 compared with $1.8105 on Tuesday.

The downward trend was reversed only in Frankfurt, where the dollar strengthened marginally, opening the day at 1.713 West German marks, up from 1.7118 on Tuesday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was mixed against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

Tourism profits up in San Fran

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tourists and conventioners spent a record $1.7 billion in San Francisco last year, officials said.

The city's hotels and motels hosted 2.8 million visitors in 1987, up 3 percent from the previous year, the Convention & Visitors Bureau said Tuesday.

The average tourist spent $129 a day and the typical conventioner spends $156, the bureau said. Another $70 a day per conventioner is spent by convention-related businesses.

Despite the big figures, convention attendance dropped from 1.1 million in 1986 to 991,000 last year despite a 15 percent boost in the number of conventions in the city, the bureau said.

"There are more meetings but we're getting smaller numbers of participants," said bureau executive director John Marks, blaming a lack of capacity at the Moscone Convention Center which, in 1984, was big enough to host the Democratic National Convention.

"We expect this trend to continue until the Moscone Center expansion project is completed," he said. About 275,000 square feet will be added to the center by 1992.

Lutheran Haven and he was very much surprised," to hear the allegations against Gardner. He said she had worked for the nursing/retirement center for about three months and "for the most part was friendly and outgoing."

She did express concerns over the loss of custody of her children, and the fact that she seldom saw them, Estok said. However, she never discussed problems with her parents, and was, for the most part, calm. "There were moments when she wasn't calm," he said.

By 9:30 p.m. Monday the Dinda house was quiet and the Dindas had dressed for bed and retired to their bedroom to watch television, Hagood said.

Before 10 p.m. Gardner, who was in the living room listening to a radio and playing Uno with her daughter, 9, and son, 6, calmly walked into the master bedroom and closed the door. Within minutes she returned to the living room and told her children the bangs (shots) they heard were fireworks, Hagood said. She talked with the children, who were visiting her from Virginia, and put them to bed.

She made a telephone call to her aunt, Ruth Colbert of Oviedo, and allegedly told her what she had done and asked her to come over.

Hagood said investigators do not know what occurred in the Dindas' home between the time Colbert arrived and the time she called the sheriff's department to report the shootings at about 11:15 p.m. Monday. Colbert was scheduled for questioning this morning.

When patrol deputy Mark Kilgore arrived at the home he met Gardner in the yard. She allegedly told him she had shot her parents and the murder weapon was in a closet inside the house. Kilgore put her in his car and entered the home to find the Dindas lying dead on the floor at the foot of the bed.

Autopsies performed in Sanford show they died almost immediately. Mrs. Dinda, a homemaker, suffered two gunshot wounds to the chest. Her husband, who worked for A. Duda and Sons, of Oviedo, for 39 years, was shot three times in the chest.

It is believed that Gardner may have bought the .38-caliber revolver, believed to be the murder weapon, within the last week. That has not been confirmed because so far the shop where the gun was purchased hasn't been located, investigator Billy Lee said.

Lee said Gardner was calm at the time of her arrest and asked for a lawyer, before talking to him.

Her children, who were scheduled to return to their father Richard Gardner's home in Virginia Tuesday, instead spent the day and night with Richard's brother Cecil in Orlando, investigators said.

Richard Gardner, who is a U.S. Marine, was scheduled to arrive in Seminole County last night, Hagood said. The Gardner, who have been married 12 years, are in the process of divorce. The father has custody of the children, who were on a brief visit with their mother when the shootings occurred, Hagood said.

Gardner was released from a mental health treatment facility about six months ago. She moved in with her parents then, and has been treated at a mental health facility in Kissimmee, since then, Hagood said. Before that, "She had been wandering around the country. She was depressed," he said.

The houses are far apart in the Dinda's rural neighborhood, so Hagood said, neighbors did not report hearing shots or arguments from the Dinda house.

Mrs. Dinda was a lifelong resident of Oviedo. Dinda was purchasing coordinator for the Duda farming enterprise. He was born in Ohio and moved to Oviedo from Orlando in 1952. They were parents of two sons and one other daughter besides Stephanie.

the road and purchase a portion of the right of way between SR 426 and U.S. 17-92.

The Senate, under the direction of Senate President Vogt, sought the full $20.2 million. The House, hoping to get dollars from the separate funding source of turnpike tolls, did not fund the expressway under general transportation appropriations.

The budget conference committee reached a last-minute compromise in selecting the $15 million figure, Grindle said. Earlier in the day, the figure had dropped as low as $7.7 million, the amount needed to design the road between SR 426 and US 17-92. An additional $12.2 million was needed to purchase right of way between SR 426 and State Road 434.

About 5 p.m., Grindle said the conference committee had whitened the spending down to $7.7 million, but when Vogt discovered the funding had been cut, he urged Senate committee members to boost it back to $15 million, the minimum expressway authority officials said they needed this year.

"Much of the credit goes to Vogt," said Grindle.

Grindle said he'll now turn his attention to lobbying Gov. Bob Martinez in assuring the funding remains in the budget he signs.

Other local funding provided by the Legislature included $150,000 for the Sanford Civic Center, Grindle said.

...Plan

If the city chooses to give Lake Mary more than the agreed 750,000 mgd, they will be charged an additional $2.98 per gallon, Sanford does have first right of refusal.

Two, the city's proposal to erect a waste-water spraying system on 2,200 acres of city-owned land near environmentally fragile Lake Jessup, which is upstream from Lake Monroe on the St. Johns River. The city projects that the site can handle 3.5-mgd.

The city purchased the land three years ago for $3.5 million. Citizens of nearby Geneva have previously voiced opposition to the spraying of waste water at the proposed Lake Jessup site.

The DER is presently testing for water quality feasibility. Their decision will make or break the proposal site and will not be forthcoming until after final design of the site is accomplished and is approved by the city commission.

If all goes well, the city commission could see the final site design by August, according to Simmons.

Eventually, the site use will have to go before the Seminole County Board of Adjustment for a conditional use variance for a utility function.

Any county opposition to the use could further delay implementation of the 201-Plan.

Three, the city's proposal to put an additional waste-water disposal system on the St. Johns River, downstream of Lake Monroe, near the Interstate 4 overpass. The city projects that 1-mgd will flow through the wet-weather site.

This proposal would necessitate the installing of pipe along State Highway 17-92 and would require obtaining permission to use state rights-of-way. The city would need permission from the Florida Department of Transportation, among other agencies, to accomplish the proposal.

Again, the DER decision will not come until after final design and will determine the fate of the site.

The 201 Plan got its name from Section 201 of the federal Clean Waters Act.

Sanford's 201 Plan has been in the planning stage for over five years, which includes an abandonment of a waste-water straying systems originally planned for Yankee Lake and the Sanford Regional Airport.

The immediate implementation of the 201-Plan was necessitated by the DER which has told Sanford it must stop dumping its waste water into Lake Monroe by September 1990.

The 201 Plan also includes a $3.4 improvement to its treatment plant to filter solids from the waste. The plant is located at 300 Poplar Avenue. Two 1.5 million gallon wastewater storage tanks will be added to the plant to help with the disposal of wastewater to Lake Mary, Lake Jessup and the I-4 site.

In addition, the 201 Plan identifies 23 locations in Sanford, including 21 city-owned parks as possible sites for the spraying of treated wastewater.

Also, the city has identified 22 non city-owned sites and neighborhoods as possible recipients for the spraying of treated wastewater, providing the land owners pay for the irrigation system hook-up. Five county schools are included among the non city-owned sites.

COOK OF THE WEEK

Her mother's kitchen skills prepared her

Appetites of 10 kids carry on with her nine grandchildren

By Jane Hale
Herald Correspondent

This week's Cook of the Week has been a busy lady, but now has slowed down quite a bit since her family has grown up and moved away from home.

Mrs. Anne Aiken was born in Chattanooga, Tenn., and moved to Sanford in 1925. "I count Sanford as my home because I have been here for such a long time," Mrs. Aiken said. She was one of five children born to loving parents.

"I had a very happy childhood. We had a big family, and we were always doing things together," Mrs. Aiken remembered fondly. "I had two brothers and two sisters, and there is only Roy Wright and I left."

Mrs. Aiken started school at Southside Elementary, formerly in Sanford, and went through Sanford Junior High School and graduated from Seminole High School, which is now the Sanford Middle School. "I remember having Zilla Welsh in the first grade, and when school ended that year I cried because I didn't want school to end," Mrs. Aiken said. All of the Aiken children had Miss Welsh when they started the first grade.

"My mother taught me how to cook at an early age," Mrs. Aiken said. "I used to stand and watch her cook and this is how I learned to cook," she continued to say. "My mother was the worst person in the world to get a recipe from—she just made things from memory, not from recipes, so when asked for a recipe she couldn't tell you." Mrs. Aiken continued to say.

Mrs. Aiken met her future husband, Dick, one Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church in Sanford. "He came to church to sing a solo one Sunday and I was in the choir," Mrs. Aiken said. "We were introduced that day and started going out together shortly after that day."

They were married on July 2, 1939, in the First Presbyterian Church where they were introduced. "It seems like only yesterday because they have been such wonderful years," she said.

The Aikens have 10 children. Several live in California, but the rest have settled throughout Florida. The children come home as often as they can. "We have a lot of birthdays in August and so we have just one big birthday party. This is usually when they come home," Mrs. Aiken said. Her nine grand-

About the cook

Who: Anne Aiken.
Born: Chattanooga, Tenn.
Raised: Sanford.
Family: Husband, Dick, 10 children, nine grandchildren.
Occupation: Housewife.
Hobby: Doing for her family.
Philosophy: "Take one day at a time."

children also like to come see her frequently, she said.

There are no typical hobbies in Mrs. Aiken's life, but "taking care of such a large family was really a hobby to me because it was a challenge. You never knew what was going to happen," she said. "I enjoy doing things for the church such as baking the bread we use for communion. I used to do a lot more for the church but now I am content just doing things for my family."

Mrs. Aiken's philosophy in life is to take one day at a time, because one never knows what tomorrow might bring. "I have a lot to be thankful for in my life and I wouldn't change anything," she said. "It has been a wonderful and blessed life. My family has kept me busy and I'm thankful for this."

"When my grandchildren come over, they always call first and ask me to bake my special brownies," Mrs. Aiken said. Listed below is the recipe for those special brownies, along with other family favorites.

Sizzle up some veal riblets on the grill

Chinatown Veal Riblets

If burgers, bratwursts and steaks constitute your grilling repertoire, it's time for a change. Be creative. Experiment with cuts of veal you've always saved for company or just never thought of cooking outdoors.

Almost any cut that can be roasted or broiled can be grilled. Smaller cuts, such as veal rib roast, cook more evenly when the indirect cooking method is used. Simply arrange the hot coals on either side of a drip pan and position the meat over the pan.

Veal riblets are a natural for the grill. The long narrow cuts, containing rib bones and a slight fat covering, are from the veal breast. Because veal is naturally lean, ribs will be moister and more tender if precooked indoors. A preliminary braising in orange juice and white wine gives Chinatown Veal Riblets a subtle citrus flavor.

The aromatic glaze of orange juice, soy sauce, honey and ginger is thickened slightly so it will cling to the riblets during grilling. For best flavor, turn the riblets several times during grilling and brush generously with the glaze. Although the smokiness will be missing, equally good results are achieved by broiling the riblets indoors.

The following recipe takes 15 minutes to prepare, and 1 hour and 15 minutes of cooking time.

CHINATOWN VEAL RIBLETS

- 2 1/2-3 pounds veal riblets
- 2 cups orange juice, divided
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 2 tablespoons light soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 garlic clove minced
- 2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon shredded orange peel
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
- Thinly sliced green onion, tops only
- Combine veal riblets, 1 1/2 cups of the orange juice and the wine in Dutch oven. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover tightly and simmer 45 minutes, turning riblets occasionally. Meanwhile, combine remaining juice, soy sauce, honey, garlic, ginger and orange peel in small saucepan. Dissolve cornstarch in 1 tablespoon cold water; add to saucepan, mixing well. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring constantly. Cook and stir 1 minute. Remove from heat; set aside. Remove riblets from liquid; cool 15 minutes. Place riblets on grid over medium coals; brush with glaze. Grill 12 to 14 minutes until evenly browned; turn frequently and brush with glaze. Or broil 4 inches from heat, about 12 minutes; turn frequently and brush with glaze. Transfer to platter; sprinkle with onion. Makes 4 servings; 213 calories per each 3-ounce, cooked, trimmed serving.

MICROWAVE MAGIC

Sweet Vidalia onions hit spot

The season for the sweet Vidalia onion is short, so if you are going to enjoy them, now is the time. Some people eat them without an accompanying seasoning or dish. Personally, I prefer them with tomatoes and a vinaigrette or cooked in almost any way. They are available in most chain stores at a reasonable price. If you are driving near Vidalia, Ga., chances are you can get a bag of these most delicious sweet onions.

Stuffed Onion

4 large Vidalia (or white) onions, sliced crosswise into 3 layers

- 2 cups Peppercorn Farm stuffing
- 1/2 cup beef bouillon
- 4 tablespoons margarine
- 1/2 teaspoon basil
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cut each onion into 3 pieces, like a triple-decker sandwich. In a small, glass custard cup, melt margarine on 100 percent power for 45 seconds. In mixing bowl blend broth, stuffing mix, margarine and all seasonings. Press some of the stuffing together and place between the onion layers. For each onion there will be three layers of onion and two layers of stuffing. Secure with toothpicks. Wrap each one in a piece of plastic wrap. Place in a round shallow baking dish and microwave on 100 percent power for 8-10 minutes. Allow to stand 5 minutes before serving.

A very simple way to prepare baked Vidalia onions: Peel and cut onion in half if very large. Top with a pat of butter and 1/4 teaspoon of instant bouillon granules. Cover container with plastic wrap. Microwave on 100 percent power 1 1/2-2 1/2 minutes per onion, depending on size.

Another way: Peel onion. Place pat of butter on top and drizzle with 1 teaspoon of honey. Follow directions above for microwaving.

For a sweet-and-sour relish you'll enjoy for the summer months ahead, try the following recipe for Onion-Pepper Relish.

- Onion-Pepper Relish
- 1 small sweet red pepper
- 1 small green pepper

- 2 sweet onions, chopped
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper

Wash, seed and dice the peppers. Stir all ingredients together in a deep bowl. In butter bowl works well. Cover with plastic wrap, vented, and microwave on 100 percent power for 5-6 minutes. Stir, reduce power to 70 percent power and M/W, covered, for 10 minutes longer. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes. Stir and store in the refrigerator.

Oh, how good and easy these are.

Dilled Onion Rings

- 1 large sweet onion
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon fresh dill weed
- 1/2 cup white vinegar
- 1/2 cup water

Separate onion into rings. Pack into pint jar. Combine remaining ingredients. Microwave on 100 percent power for 3-4 minutes. Stir to dissolve sugar. Pour over onion rings. Cover and store in the refrigerator at least 12 hours. Will keep several days.

Experts disagree on need of low-fat diets for teens

Should teenagers follow low-fat diets? The experts have not reached an agreement on whether low-fat/low cholesterol diets—similar to those recommended for adults—are best for growing adolescents.

Low-fat diets for teens have been recommended by some well-known health organizations to lower adolescents' future risk of heart disease. Among them are the American Heart Association and a recent National Institutes of Health consensus conference, which have both recommended a similar dietary intake of fat for adolescents and adults—around 30 percent of daily calories.

But in a 1986 issue of Pediatrics, the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) questioned whether this diet adequately supports the energy needs of children during the adolescent growth spurt. Dr. Lewis Barness, a well-known pediatrician and professor at University of South Florida, agrees.

"Low-fat diets may not fulfill the caloric needs of adolescents," Barness said. "An adolescent on a lowfat diet may need to consume much more food to meet his/her caloric needs than adolescents on higher fat diets. This increased intake is hard for adolescents to maintain on a daily basis."

Teenagers tend to skip meals, snack eat out and consume fast foods and unconventional diets more often than any other age group, reports a recent issue of Dairy Council Digest, published by National Dairy Council (NDIC). Although they may be well informed about good nutrition, teens may not adhere to healthy behaviors because they lack self-discipline or time.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, adolescents should consume a diet composed of 30 to 40 percent fat to satisfy their caloric needs. The group said no direct evidence exists to support that dietary recommendations of 30-35 percent fat for genetically normal adolescents will adequately fulfill their nutritional needs.

Another nutrient that decreases when some of these foods are avoided is calcium, a substance that teens are not consuming in the amounts recommended by the Food and Nutrition Board.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's 'affection' leaves wife black and blue

DEAR ABBY: "Tony" and I have been married for nine years. We are both in our early 50s, and it's the second marriage for both of us.

We get along great, but Tony is too affectionate. I'm affectionate, too, but when he shows affection, he gets so rough he leaves black and blue marks all over me.

He starts hugging and squeezing me as soon as he gets home from work, and doesn't let up until bedtime. He wants me near him all the time, so he can playfully pinch or punch me.

He weighs twice as much as me, and I can't defend myself. I have begged him to be more gentle, but he says he loves me so much he can't help himself. He says he was never this way with his first wife.

Abigail Van Buren

BLACK AND BLUE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR BLACK AND BLUE: A pinch is a pinch and a punch is still a punch, and both are physical abuse. Buy yourself some protective padding—the kind worn by football and hockey players (I'm serious). Greet Tony at the door in full uniform and don't remove it—even at bedtime—until he agrees to get some professional counseling and learns how to show his love less sadistically.

DEAR ABBY: When our son was diagnosed as being "in an acute stage of schizophrenia" and was admitted into the special-care unit of a psychiatric hospital, many friends and relatives asked me how he was doing, what they could do to help, etc. I thanked them for asking, gave them a brief but honest answer concerning his condition, and added, "You could send him a get-well card."

When our insurance coverage ended at the private hospital, he took those get-well cards to the state psychiatric hospital with him; when he was released from there, he carried that little bundle of cards home to keep near him.

He is functioning normally now, and he's never forgotten the thoughtfulness of those people who sent him cards when he was ill.

CLEVELAND COMMUNICATOR

DEAR COMMUNICATOR: You communicated a valuable message to pass along to my readers: Those who are hospitalized for any kind of illness desperately need to know that friends and relatives wish them well. It takes so little effort to send a card or a note, and the joy it can bring is incalculable.

DEAR ABBY: We live in New York, and my husband and I plan to move to Florida in July. We have a 90-pound German shepherd and a full-grown domestic cat.

How do we make a worry-free move for our family of four and the pets? I have already been told that pets do not travel well, but I would hate to have to find a new home for them and leave them behind for this reason.

We have considered buying a small station wagon, but I don't know how this will work out for our dog. Any ideas will be a great help.

T.R. IN N.Y.

DEAR T.R.: My pet consultant, Dr. J. Isaacs, informs me that there is a medication that will alleviate motion sickness and stress for traveling pets. Also, all pets crossing state lines must have an interstate health certificate to ensure that they are in good physical condition, have the proper vaccinations, etc. Take your pets to your vet for physical examinations, appropriate medications, shots, etc. Your vet can answer any and all questions, including the name of a competent vet when you get to Florida.

CASSELLBERRY — The Casselberry Elementary School Coin Club, under the direction of teacher Jon A. Diesbourg, will be holding bi-monthly Coin Club meetings throughout the summer months, beginning Thursday, June 23, 2:30 p.m. in the school's Media Center (1075 Crystal Bowl Circle).

The Coin Club has been formed by the youth, to introduce the hobby of coin collecting to the area's senior citizens. All supplies (magazines, coin books and magnifiers) are being furnished at no charge to youth or seniors.

This activity provides an opportunity for youth and seniors, working together, to learn about United States coins and their history. Many of the participating youth have been active members of the school's own coin club for the past three years and are very anxious to share their knowledge with seniors.

Meetings will be held the second and fourth Thursdays of the summer months. All those with an interest in taking part in the club for the summer and/or for the fall, please call the club co-sponsor (Casselberry Parks and Recreation Department, Sharon Ellis) at 695-6225 or 831-3551, ext. 260.

Key Lime Pie dreamy, creamy but calorie-low

Key Lime Pie recently has been designated the official Florida state pie. Native Floridians and tourists have been enjoying Key Lime Pie for many years, but with the trend toward healthful eating, we've created a light version of this traditionally rich dessert. Following is a recipe low in fat and calories that keeps the "rich and delicious" and has only 88 calories per serving—a dream dessert for all weight-watchers and cholesterol-watchers.

It's made with yogurt cheese, a newly discovered age-old cheese that is low in fat, cholesterol and calories, and high in calcium and protein. Yogurt cheese can be made easily by separating the whey from yogurt to yield a firm, soft, creamy cheese that's delicious on its own, or can be used as a replacement for several high-fat products.

To make the cheese, simply place yogurt into a draining device, such as a cheese-cloth-lined strainer, or, more conveniently, in a commercial drainer (such as the Really Creamy Yogurt Cheese Funnel), available in cookware stores. Allow to drain 2 to 24 hours, until cheese is the desired consistency. For making a Key Lime Pie, drain yogurt until it is of the consistency of cream cheese, which takes about 12 to 24 hours depending on the yogurt used.

Here's a recipe for a Key Lime Pie that has 88 calories, 2 grams fat, and 3 milligrams cholesterol per serving. (This is for a crustless pie, but it's rich enough that no one will miss the crust.) It is from a soon-to-be-released book, Not Just Cheese-cake! The Low-Fat, Low-Cholesterol, Low-Calorie Great Dessert Cookbook.

KEY LIME PIE

32-ounce carton vanilla-flavored lowfat yogurt

1/4 cup confectioners' sugar

1/4 cup key lime juice, or more to taste

Day before, drain the yogurt. Place yogurt cheese in a medium-size bowl. Add sugar and key lime juice, stirring gently with a fork or wire whisk until well blended. Pour into a pie pan (or graham cracker crust, if desired). Chill 24 hours before serving. Serves 8.

Arrange a cheese buffet for a delicious delight

A stunning all-American cheese buffet is an easy way to entertain—and guests love it because it can present familiar favorites and surprising new flavors all at once. Cheese assortments need only simple accompaniments such as wine, fruit, bread and crackers to make a satisfying repast for lunch or supper, a cocktail party or a dessert with European flair.

Purchase the cheese and accompaniments at your local supermarket or specialty shops, so there's no cooking or baking! Add intrigue to the buffet by offering a range of textures, shapes and flavors in the cheeses you select. Rounds, wedges, blocks, sticks and slices add eye appeal, while various textures from soft to firm, and flavors from mild to sharp, appeal to the palate.

While personal preferences can guide you in pairing fruits and cheeses, use these suggestions from the American Dairy Association as a starting point. Certain combinations really do have an affinity for one another. Serve cheese which are familiar to you, but be adventurous and include one or two new ones, too.

Cheddar—apples, grapes
Swiss—pineapple, pears
Brie—peaches, green grapes
Blue—plums, apples
Gouda—honeydew melon, pineapple

Muenster—cantaloupe, pears
Cream—strawberries, green grapes

Brie—pineapple, pears
Provolone—apples, pears
Edam—green grapes, pineapple

Colby—plums, apples

A good general guideline for selecting wines to serve with cheese is to pair the flavor intensity of the wine to that of the cheese. Serve subtly-flavored wines with mild cheeses and full-bodied wines with more robust cheeses. If your cheese buffet is to be dessert, offer port, cream sherry, Madeira or champagne with the cheese and fruit.

Select breads and crackers with an eye toward flavor combinations, too. Heartier breads and crackers can stand up to more robust cheeses while plain breads and crackers are best with milder cheeses.

As a general rule, allow about 4 to 6 ounces of cheese per person when serving as an appetizer or dessert.

Girdle will only cure symptoms

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm male, 44 and weigh 141 pounds. Several years ago I shrank several inches. There's no place for my stomach to go but out, so now I look very fat. I've thought of wearing a girdle. Would it hurt to push all those organs in three inches?

DEAR READER: The settling and shrinkage that most of us experience with age is due to two factors: loss of bone mass in the spine and loss of water (and elasticity) from supporting structures, such as the discs between the spinal bones. As the spinal column becomes foreshortened, the abdominal organs tend to pouch out through the abdominal muscles. In addition, the spine curves forward, producing stooped shoulders and a rounded back.

You can safely wear a girdle or elastic binder to help flatten your abdomen. Remember that with these devices, you will be forcing your abdominal organs into a smaller space; hence, you may experience discomfort, bloating, heartburn and constipation.

Rather than being satisfied merely with a cosmetic approach to your problem, why not ask your family doctor for advice about treating the cause of your difficulty? For example, attention to posture, exercises to strengthen your abdominal muscles and — perhaps — hormone and calcium treatment to prevent bone loss might improve your situation.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on OSTEOPOROSIS. Other readers who want a copy of this Health Letter should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A year ago I fell, and my left leg and back were injured. I've had traction therapy, but I still have pain and numbness in my leg and foot. I'm hurting, tired and discouraged. What's the best I can hope for?

DEAR READER: The best you can hope for is a cure at the very least, you deserve a diagnosis. Numbness and leg pain suggest nerve injury.

Perhaps your leg nerves were damaged in the fall. More probably, you hurt your back and this has caused impingement or pressure on the spinal nerves — a form of sciatica.

To begin with, you should be examined by a neurosurgeon who will diagnose the cause of your symptoms. Next, you can consider specific therapy, including a rehabilitation program or — possibly — surgery to repair a damaged disc. Finally, if specific treatment is not appropriate in your case, pain relief may be an important secondary goal. This might include massage, hypnosis, acupuncture, TENS (transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation) or biofeedback. A specialist can advise you. (C)1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

There's no drama in these out-picking hands where the defense has to do the right thing to keep declarer from making 11 tricks. But today's deal has at least one lesson worth remembering.

West led the seven of diamonds; ace was played from dummy, 10 from East and the five-spot from declarer. Now came a low club to the jack, and West won the ace. What next?

Despite the encouraging look of the 10 of diamonds, West should know that South would be unlikely to bid two no-trump with only small cards for stoppers in the unbid diamond suit. Since the 10 is likely to be a singleton and declarer is attacking clubs and the heart suit has no future, it becomes easy to play a spade, even though that is right into the teeth of the one-spade bidder's hand. Sure enough, the spade shift holds down the overtricks. Declarer has 11 tricks but can no longer take 11.

And the lesson? The fact that declarer did not play hearts at trick two is an almost certain indication that he holds the heart ace and has no work to do in that suit. That's a good general rule. When declarer does not play what seems to be his best suit, you'd better assume that he does not have any tricks to lose there.

OPEC will try to prop up oil prices

United Press International

Oil prices slipped on global markets Monday as traders' attention remained focused on the upcoming meeting in Vienna of oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Analysts said many participants were reluctant to commit themselves in advance of the OPEC meeting, which is set to start Saturday. It was originally planned for today, but was postponed to avoid conflicting with an extraordinary Arab League summit meeting in Algiers earlier in the week.

The 13 OPEC ministers will discuss ways to prop up oil prices, which are now in the range of $15 to $16 a barrel. While they have partially recovered from lows of around $13 a barrel in March, prices remain well below the cartel's official target of $18 a barrel.

In April, however, OPEC members led by Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states rejected a proposal made by a group of six non-OPEC producers under which each side would have reduced its oil exports by 5 percent.

The cuts would have amounted to about 183,000 barrels a day for the six non-OPEC producers — Mexico, China, Oman, Malaysia, Egypt and Angola — but would have chopped OPEC shipments by around 700,000 barrels a day.

In Jakarta, British Energy Minister Cecil Parkinson said Britain is ready to join with a majority of OPEC members and cut its crude oil output in a bid to restore stability to world oil prices.

"Although Britain is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries... it is also interested in stable oil prices," he said.

Parkinson, who arrived in Indonesia Sunday for a five-day official visit, said he told Indonesian Energy Minister Giandjar Kartasasmita that Britain would take its cue from the group of non-OPEC countries.

Peter Beutel, an analyst with Elders Futures Inc. in New York, attributed the selling Monday to "a feeling that OPEC is not going to accomplish anything at the next meeting."

"(OPEC members) have a lot of important decisions to discuss, but at the end of the day, they're probably going to have little common ground on which to reach an agreement," Beutel said.

Beutel said market participants feel Saudi Arabia is likely to continue to block any agreement with non-OPEC producers until the cartel is able to reach a consensus on the important issue of how to define production.

Agreement on what constitutes production is vital to enforcing quotas such as those 12 of the 13 OPEC nations agreed on at a meeting last December in an effort to bolster prices.

Jury gets suit against tobacco companies

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A landmark suit blaming cigarette companies for a woman's lung cancer death went to the jury Tuesday after five years of legal maneuvering and four months of trial.

The three men and three women jurors who will decide whether three companies are responsible for Rose Cipollone's death include one smoker, two former smokers who quit the habit and three people who never smoked.

The jurors began deliberations Tuesday afternoon after hearing 90 minutes of detailed instructions on the complex law governing the case. They went home for the night without reaching a verdict after deliberating for about three hours.

The tobacco industry has funded off about 300 product liability suits in the past 30 years, but only a handful have been decided by the jury.

Antonio Cipollone's suit seeking unspecified damages for his wife's 1984 death is being closely watched because the plaintiff's lawyer was armed with hundreds of previously unreleased internal company and trade group documents.

The documents cite the existence, among other things, of a "gentlemen's agreement" within the tobacco industry to avoid research that could confirm the suspected health effects of cigarette smoking.

Because the new evidence allowed smoking opponents to present an unusually well-documented case against the tobacco concerns, the verdict in the Cipollone case could have a major impact on scores of other smoker death suits now pending in state and federal courts.

Rose Cipollone's widower is suing the three tobacco companies that produced the cigarettes that his wife, a pack-a-day smoker, used for 40 years before her death at age 58.

The suit, filed by Antonio Cipollone and his wife in 1983, accuses Liggett Group Inc., Philip Morris Inc. and Lorillard Inc. of what his lawyer called an "evil-minded conspiracy" to hide the health risks of smoking from customers to preserve profits.

Liggett, makers of Rose Cipollone's Chesterfields and L&M filters, faces additional charges of failing to warn consumers and making false advertising claims about the safety of its products before the U.S. government required warnings on cigarette packages in 1986.

Mystery deaf mute indicates he's American

JUAREZ, Mexico (UPI) — A deaf mute boy found alone in Mexico pointed to an American flag Monday, grinned broadly and then pointed to himself, giving authorities a further indication he may be a U.S. citizen.

The mystery boy was found wandering the streets of Juarez last November. Scouts that doctors say are two or three years old and pictures the boy drew of a downed aircraft have only added to the puzzle.

Social workers at a Juarez child protection agency where he is being cared for said all indications are that the child comes from the United States.

FBI Agent Terry Kincaid said agents are poring over fingerprint and missing persons files but have no new clues to the boy's identity.

Olivia E. de Bermudez, director of the Juarez social agency in charge of the child's welfare, said the boy was found by the daughter of a wealthy Juarez businessman on Nov. 26, 1987, as he wandered around the streets close to the U.S.-Mexico border.

"We took him into the agency on Nov. 28," Bermudez said. "We first thought he was a Mexican boy and we publicized his case via television and newspapers throughout Mexico. We received no response."

Earlier published accounts indicated the child was found Nov. 7.

The wealthy De la Vega family took the child to New York in March for an examination by an ear clinic, she said. Doctors said the child could probably hear again if a donor would provide an ear drum. He makes sounds and can say a few one-syllable words.

Social worker Joel Bustamante said the only clue Mexican authorities had to the child's identity was an "eye witness" who told police the boy got off a bus originating from the south-central Mexican state of Zacatecas.

Inquiries as to the child's identity were made in Zacatecas, Bustamante said, but authorities said they could not identify the youth, who is believed to be seven or eight years old. Others said he could be up to 10 years old.

The child has brown hair, brown eyes, freckles and is light complexioned. Social workers said he could be a Mexican national, an American of Mexican heritage or an Anglo.

The boy is outgoing and friendly. He played with a UPI tape recorder, moving buttons and recording the sounds he makes with his voice.

The boy was shown a brochure with the flags of the United States and Mexico side by side. He pointed to the American flag, grinned, and then pointed to himself.

He has scars on his stomach and left knee. The scar on his abdomen appears to have been carefully sutured by a physician.

When asked about the stomach scar, through rudimentary sign language, the boy indicated a stabbing action, but it was not known whether the stab was criminally administered or the result of the plane crash.

Social workers said the boy's drawing of a downed aircraft and his indications through sign language that his father, mother and sister were killed in the crash while he walked away from it are among the only clues to his identity.

They said he also was more familiar with U.S. currency than Mexican coins, prefers hot dogs and hamburgers to Mexican food, draws pictures of American-style houses with slanting roofs and is a whiz at video games, which are not readily available to Mexican children. He also demonstrated an ability at "break" dancing, keeping time with the music through vibrations.

The boy was wearing a knitted bracelet with the name "Chuy" on it when found in November. "Chuy" is the Spanish nickname for the name, Jesus.

Social workers call him "Sabato" because he was found on a Saturday. "Sabado" in Spanish.

FBI agents said they are following a lead that the boy resembles Timothy Davidson of Decatur, Ill., who was abducted in 1985.
