The Youth And Minimum Wage

It is said that the House-passed bill, which would raise wage minimums to $2.65 an hour in January and to $3.05 by 1980, constitutes a serious defeat for organized labor and the administration. But if the same bill passes the Senate, it is the country, and particularly the unskilled young people, black and white, who might suffer some serious economic defects.

Economists pretty well are satisfied that unemployment for persons younger than 25 is related directly to minimum wage laws. A study sponsored this year by the American Enterprise Institute, for example, shows that a 25 per cent increase in the minimum wage lowers employment of unskilled youth by 10 to 15 per cent.

So, increasing the minimum wage could well be a bad idea to begin with, and yet this is the idea that labor and the administration started from. They asked the House to increase the minimum from $2.30 to $2.65. They also asked that the minimum wage be indexed thereafter to the average manufacturing wage levels, which automatically would raise the minimum to $2.89 in 1979, $3.15 in 1980, and $3.40 in 1981.

Fortunately, the House threw out the idea of indexing, and thus prevented a bad bill from becoming worse. Indexing the minimum wage would exacerbate the unemployment effects of each increase in the minimum. This is so because inflation now lowers the effective minimum wage, thus mitigating the effects of the minimum wage on those marginally employable, once again primarily the young.

To say though that the House prevented a bad bill from becoming worse is scant praise. And what the House prevented the Senate very well may do. Sens. Harrison Williams, Democrat of New Jersey, and Jacob Javits, Republican of New York, will attempt to set the minimum wage at $2.65, $2.90, $3.15, and $3.40 respectively over the next four years, without regard to the average manufacturing wage levels. If not indexing, this proposal amounts to the same, for the next four years

And, similarly, it would reinforce the unemployment effects of the rise in the legislated minimums. One AFL-CIO lobbyist described this switch in strategy as a way to "catch business with ts pants down." In fact, it is a way to catch labor. the administration, and various members of the U.S. Senate in flagrante delicto and at the expense of the nation's young.

The plight might have been eased had the House voted in favor of a subminimum wage for youth. Such a concession to economic reality, which sadly failed by only two votes, would allow employers to pay youth aged 18 and younger 85 per cent of the minimum wage for the first six months on the job. That probably would affect too few youth, and it is probably not a significant differential. But it is a move in the right direction.

Someone in the Senate successfully should make this move, for it is the only repair that might tempt us to look less harshly on this minimum wage legislation:

The impact that people have in my life doesn't seem to be connected to how long I know them. Some people who seem to pass briefly through my life have an impact that surely must last as long as I do. June Stermer was one of those people.

The three times we met totalled five, or maybe six hours. Once she was with me without assorted friends and associates around. That was when she told me she had cancer.

She didn't make a big deal of it. She stated it quietly, matter of factly, with acceptance but not with resignation. She didn't even miss a stitch on the knitting she was doing while we talked.

That knitting was important to her, She was already busy, in the spring, making Christmas presents for her family for this winter. She wanted to get all those things taken care of - because she was also planning a vacation for next year - a year the doctors had told her she could probably expect to have. She was going to Europe and fill her eyes with the sights her mind had already seen so often. But June Stermer was never one to kid herself. She wasn't planning that trip to pacify her

GOP Pitches The 'Dream' To Nation

Brock has launched a major campaign to reshape the Republican party at the most fundamental level - in terms of the constituency it seeks, the issues it addresses and the image it projects to the nation's voters.

There has been no dearth of talk in recent years about "opening the door" and "broadening the base" of the party to rid the GOP of its reputation as an elitist organization dedicated principally to serving dowagers, businessmen and their well-heeled friends.

But talk is cheap and virtually nothing has been done until now, despite the fact that every national survey of recent years has shown the fact that the Republican party enjoys the support of less than 20 per cent of the electorate. Tully Plesser, a highly regarded political consultant, acknowledged at a recent meeting of GOP state chairmen held here that "it is socially unacceptable in the minds of many people in the United States to be identified with the word Brock now is determined to change that

Two days later, in a major speech delivered here before the Republican National Committee. altimately the World Series, they can lay the blame on an injury jinx and the bizzare handling of a recognized talent. Everybody knows what happened to Gullett and the Catfish, but what's the true story on Holtzman? A winner with Oakland's world champions in 1972, 1973 and 1974.

Holtzman came to the Yankees June 15, 1976 as the center of a 10player trade with Baltimore. He was signed to a five-year contract at $150,000 a year and was pointed for stardom. "I was happy to come to the Yankees," Holtzman said, "It had a reputation of being a fine organization. That's why I asked for a long-term contract."

Holtzman had a moderate 14-11 record in 1976. The Yankees won the AL pennant, then lost four straight games to the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series. Despite his sparkling credentials, including two no-hit games while with the Chicago Cubs, the rangy left-hander watched all the games from the bullpen never tapped for service.

"I never needed him," said Manager Billy Martin.
"They know where I am," said Holtzman, proud but frustrated. He collected his big paycheck and silently suffered. "I am human like everybody else," he said.

Then came the winter of 1977. "I got a letter from Gabe Paul (Yankees ' president)," Holtzman said. "He told me to forget about the slight in the 1976 series.

He said for me to get ready in the spring. The club had plans for freeze. Going into the playoffs, he had pitched only 5 1-3 innings

With the general hunting season just around the corner, we all should be aware and alert to the dangers of poisonous snakes; but. conversley, we should also learn to recognize harmless species. There is absolutely no reason at all to kill or harm most snakes. There are five in our state that are poisonous; rattlesnake, cottonmouth, moccasin, coral and copperhead. We had an autopsy performed and without becoming gory, but rather to impress the damage a large snake can do, the results showed that she was totally destroyed internally. The snake was just shy of seven feet long and it's girth was nearly as large and good sized man's thigh.

Coral venom is neurotoxin; that is, it attacks the nervous system. This places the damage as I understand it primarily o the respiratory system. Corals do not have fangs like the pi vipers and must chew rather than penetrate with a strike. One roatologist told me that this can be misleading as the

This snake is also much more aggressive than are other snakes. There are times when a moccasin will vibrate its tail in loose leaves or debris as a warning or emit a powerful scent from its glands. It is difficult to identify from the green water snake unless one has a trained eye. Close inspection will show an eliptical eye and pits in front of the eye and to the front of its head which is triangular shaped. Best bet is to avoid a confrontation with either

THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE - John 14:6. An amazing claim comes from a human voice. I am the way, truth, life. He made other claims. I am the bread of life which came down from heaven. I am the door of the sheep. I am the good shepherd. I am the true vine. I am the Resurrection and the life! Is this man a megaiomaniac? Does he have deluisons of grandeur' Is he a mad man like Adi Amin of Uganda? At first glance it might appear so.

But Jesus was seeking no earthly glory, power or grandeur. Quite the contrary. He not only gives us all hope of earthly grandeur, comfort, luxury, and power, he gives us his very life as As we see this lone figure carrying a cross on the way to his own execution, His own death, we realize that He is THE WAY. The way of God's self-giving love. We also see him as THE TRUTH. In Him we see God. In Him we know the truth of God's love, the yearning of a Heavenly Father's heart to turn us from our chaotic rebellion and disobedience to a life of faith in Him and love for our fellowman. We see too, that He is the life - life lived in perfect relationship with God. This is the twe life of everyman. Life in complete harmony with God. This is life eternal. He who also said, "I am the light of the world follow him, "You are the Light of the world." You are a reflection of Him. You reflect the way, the truth and the life.

in your acts of self-giving love you are the way. In the truth you speak about God, you are the truth. As something of the creative power of God works in you to bring others to Christ, you are the Life.

WESTPORT, Conn. - The Contemporary Mission is not a garden variety religious enterprise. It holds no services, it welcomes few sinners, it does not travel byways of despair searching for the woebegone flock. What's more, the mission, and the six Catholic priests who run it, are not recognized

For all of it, however, Contemporary Mission has at last one faithful believer: the Internal Revenue Service. Though even its operators admit C.M. is little more than a secular-oriented mail order business (records, jewelry, etc.), the IRS says it's a charity and has granted it tax exemption status

Charity? Westport residents believe C.M's kind of charity begins at home. The mission is housed in a $300,000 private residence alongside Long Island

Sound. The place has a gate house, a boulevard-type driveway, and a $15,000 cruiser moored at its dock;

there are also three swanky cars about, one a

In all, observers believe C.M. and its priests are worth more than half a million dollars, not a cent of it taxable. Besides tax exemption, C.M. is given a federal discount on its mail order postage, the priests do not pay sales tax on purchased merchandise, and the operation is excluded from all

Not bad for a group whose religious motivation

has included the postal peddling of a "weight reduction" liquid. C.M. also sells pendants, health books, and rock music through the mails. Then too, the mission has a tax exempt subsidiary, "Tax

Research Center," same address, that hawks a citizen's guide to "guagenteed" tax reduction.

Clearly, C.M. has some competence in the latter promotion. But for its own tax matters, little competence is needed, I.R.S. code 501-C3.

generously allows tax exemption to any religious or charitable organization operating on a non-profit basis. There are perhaps 750,000 of these

Membership in the tax exempt club is not hard to come by. An I.R.S officer in Washington, Charles

Rumph, says that dozens of charity groups form

every week in the U.S., and are by law

"automatically tax exempt." Rumph says groups must file for some special privileges, but tax exemption itself does not require any application.

Given this easy access to tax exemption, Rumph concedes that frauds can be perpetrated. At least

Mail Order 'Mission' Untaxed some tax free institutions are profit-making

The Glory Train is coming to the ethnic music Italian

Meanwhile, C.M is not entirely in the clear. Acting on complaints from patrons, the Postal and dedication. Service is keeping an eye on the mission's mail order procedures. Last year, in fact, postal authorities won a court order barring C.M. from selling its "weight reduction" liquid; the post office says the stuff is absolutely worthless. Also, C.M. is receiving fire from financial in-Winter Park began her first Mary, located at Country Club terests. Two years ago a bank sued to collect a $10,000 note from the mission. This year an auto company sued for $7,000 in rental fees. Four private companies have placed liens on C.M.'s properties for delinquent bills. At one time a sheriff was needed to get C.M. money owed a liquor store.

And the mission is cutching it from the community, too. Since the Westport Fairpress published an expose article on C.M. in August, the tax collector says "everybody knows and everybody's mad as hell." Angriest of all, perhaps, are legitimate area priests and ministers who say C.M.'s brazen operation gives a black eye to honest charity. Yet if C.M's members are shamed by the controversy, they do not show it. A Westport consays John O'Reilly, the excommunicated leader of the mission, "rides around town in his Mercedes, chewing his cigar, like Mr. Big Fellow." As for mounting debts, merchants say C.M. priests stall them off with letters claiming harassment.

The C.M. fathers sometimes plead that their story has been distorted, that only one side of the mission's operation has been heard. But they refuse further comment. And they resolutely refuse interviews. The last reporter to visit the Contemporaty Mission was reminded he was on private property, then told to leave or be unpiously ejected.

same mistake. Nobody can be sure of that, but you have learned something from your mistake. You've gained understanding and insight, which will help you make the right decision the next time. We all know it's bad to make decisions under pressure, but that's usually when we have to make them. We don't think clearly, and our confusion can lead us into deception. We're never better at thinking up all the right reasons for the wrong action than when we're under pressure. Most of us are also pretty good at justifying our wrong decision. Sometimes we blame the other guy or change the facts to take the blame off ourselves. Another way is to give ourselves good motives for bad actions or to say we had no choice. But somehow, we make ourselves look good, even though inside we really know we're wrong. And that's why we feel guilty.

But guilty feelings don't go away by blaming others and justifying our conduct. Proverbs 28:13 says we will not prosper if we cover our sins. So what can we do? The rest of this verse says if we confess and forsake our sins, we shall have mercy. ... and I John 1:9 says Jesus is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. First comes the hard part - accepting the blame, recognizing the unlovely things inside ourselves and confessing our sins to another person and to God. But then comes the good part - a rush of gladness and joy, as if a great weight were being lifted. Which is exactly the case - sin weighs us down. When we confess our sins, we are obeying God, and He rewards obedience. He gives us a fresh start and a new beginning. He gives us His peace so that we can be at peace with ourselves, our neighbor, and God.

In Child Support Cases

New Law Helps Trace Spouses

"I am me...Because I own all of me, I can become intimately acquainted with me. By so doing I can love me and be friendly with me in all my parts. I can then make it possible for all of me to work in my best interests..." The words are part of a brief "Declaration of Self-Esteem" by Virginia Sahr which Peggy Whitehead gives to mothers seeking the assistance of the Seminole County State Attorney's office in finding spouses who have deserted the state rather than support their children. "I give them the statement while I fill out the forms Many of the mothers come in here feeling so bitter toward their husbands, who have deserted them. Reading the statement helps these women."

Ms. Whitehead runs the state attorney's child support URISA office. URISA stands for the Uniform Reciprocal Support Enforcement Act, a law passed by the legislatures of all 50 states pledging mutual cooperation in interstate child support cases. Her office has helped local prosecutors in all 50 states and five American territories attempting to locate missing parents who have deserted their spouses and who don't support their children. "We handle about 60 out-of-state cases each month, and we request assistance of out-of-state prosecutors on 40 to 60 interstate cases initiated here each month." Ms. Whitehead said. "I can handle 90 per cent of the work myself, and I ask for help from one of four assistant state attorneys when the case requires a court procedure or need legal advice." The four assistant state attorneys are Don Marbelstone

Mark Randall, Norman Levin and Randy Kramer. The heaviest workload for Ms. Whitehead's office comes at two times of the year - just before school starts. when mothers need extra money for their children's school clothing and school supplies; and just before Christmas, when the need for cash also becomes acute. The state attorney's office handles interstate child support cases. If the case involves a missing parent within the state reported by a parent also within the state,

"But once we locate them, we can identify them without too much problem, even though we're involved in a civil - not a criminal - action, which means there aren't as many agencies at our disposal as in criminal cases."

Dick added that deserting spouses will "hardly ever" change their Social Security number because "It's a criminal offense to apply for a social security number when you already have one. Your social security number is also your Internal Revenue Service tax identification number, so getting a new number would also be a criminal violation of IRS regulations." The criminal sanctions "that would be imposed (for
