Man, children home safe

LONGWOOD — An Apopka man and two children were found safe shortly after midnight this morning after they were reported missing from a Wekiva River cruise at about 9:30 p.m. last night. Robert Caraway, 30, his seven-year-old daughter, Casey Caraway, and a 13-year-old neighbor, Edwin Lichtenberger, left the Wekiva Marina at about 3:30 p.m., said sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough.

When the trio failed to return that evening, Edwin's father reported them missing and range deputy Jay Summers began a search of the river for them. They were found on the bank about two miles north of the marina in a section known as "Buffalo Run." McDonough said they were cold and wet from the rains but otherwise safe. Caraway said their boat had engine trouble, leaving the boaters stranded.

The most recent kidnapping was reported in a

SANFORD — Residential construction in the unincorporated areas of the county continued to increase last month.

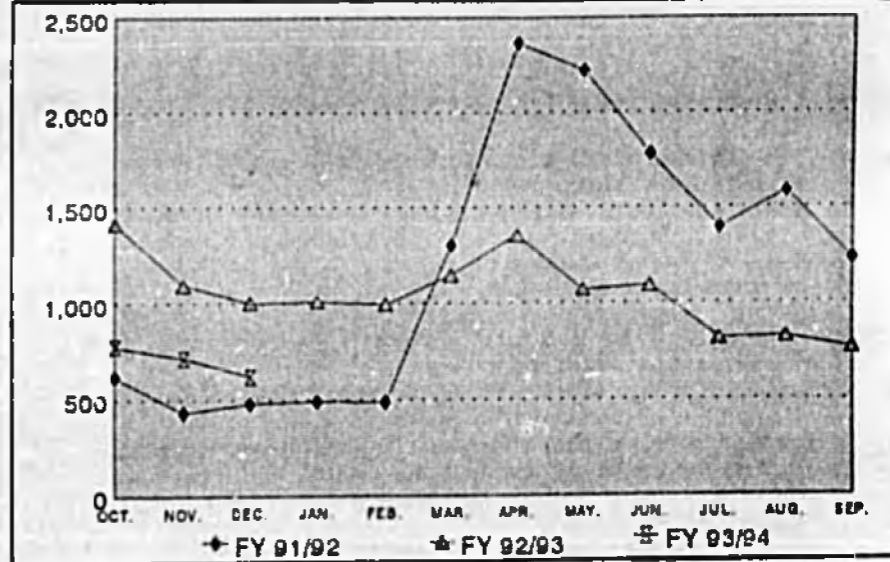

The Seminole County Building Division issued 109 permits for new homes in December, a 59 percent increase above the 68 permits issued in December 1992. Between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, 1993, the county issued 287 new home permits. For the same period in 1992, the county permitted 209 homes, 27 percent less.

County building staff release a monthly report of permit and inspection activity.

The county issued nine commercial permits in December, a 33 percent increase above the six issued in December 1992. For the three months beginning Oct. 1, 1993, commercial permits are up 43 percent with 23 new starts.

Commercial alterations, a sign of new or expanding business, is up, too. A total of 23 permits in the category were issued last month, compared to 11 in December 1992. For the first quarter of the fiscal year, commercial alteration permit activity increased 54 percent over the same period a year before.

Overall permit activity dropped between December 1992 and 1993.

Law regulates use of docks, boathouses

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The city of lakes wants to be certain the lakes as well as the people who live around them are protected. A new dock and boathouse ordinance is being considered for adoption.

The new ordinances will be coming up for consideration this Thursday night at the regular commission meeting. The measure has been refined and changed in keeping with discussions and questions brought up at previous commission meetings.

The proposed ordinance would revise the city's present regulations dealing with boat docks, and replace it with a new ordinance 679 which governs boathouses as well as docks. It was originally presented to the commission at the Jan. 6 meeting, but was tabled following an extensive discussion, pending further clarification and fine-tuning.

Since that time, the city attorney has changed the wording to remove all references to "vessels" and replaced it with "watercraft."

Holiday keeps Cubans on luxury ship

TAMPA — Six Cubans who were rescued by luxury cruise ship spent two extra days being pampered after immigration officials refused to open for business on the holiday weekend.

The Regent Rainbow found the men about 140 miles south of Cuba on Wednesday. They were put up in fancy cabins, served meals and treated at the ship's hospital.

When the cruise ship returned to Tampa on Sunday, crew members thought their responsibility to the Cubans had ended. Not so.

"When a ship brings someone to the United States, they have to take responsibility for them," Jim Minton, spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Monday. "They will have to present them during business hours."

Tampa's INS office was closed Monday in observance of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. The Cubans were expected to be processed today. Minton said the cruise line was responsible for the Cubans' expenses until then.

"Unfortunately, at times, you have to go through some red tape, but the priority is saving human beings," said Ann Burguières, spokeswoman for Regency Cruises Inc.

The Regent Rainbow and its 860 passengers had been sailing from Cozumel, Mexico, to Montego Bay, Jamaica when they found the men in a 15-foot boat. The ship's captain later tried to hand them to government officials in Jamaica and the Cayman Islands. They were turned away.

Passenger Dereck Williamson of New Jersey said he watched as the men were rescued Wednesday.

"They were waving and shouting and the ship got closer and closer," Williamson said. "They looked pretty scroungy and ragged. They at least had a taste of the good life."

Girl gets stuck in car window, suffocates

TARPON SPRINGS — A 5-year-old girl suffocated after she apparently stuck her head in the half-open window of a car and got stuck, police said.

Sofia Papastavrou was playing outside her family's home Monday when she stuck her head into a passenger car. Pinellas County officials say the girl's head became wedged, preventing her from getting free or calling for help.

Sofia's 7-year-old brother, George, found her and lifted her from the car.

"He found her hanging by the window," said Sofia's father, Theodore Papastavrou. "He took her very slowly and let her down on the ground."

The girl's parents rushed her to Helen Ellis Memorial Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival of traumatic asphyxiation, Pinellas County sheriff's Sgt. Greg Tita said.

Man attacked after placing classified ad

INDIAN HARBOUR — A 93-year-old man was strangled to unconsciousness by someone who responded to the man's classified advertisement to sell a sapphire ring, police said.

A man called the victim seeking information about the ring, but he was told it had been sold, said Indian Harbour Police Detective Chris Hurst. The elderly man then told him there was other jewelry, and he gave directions to his home, Hurst said.

"You don't know who's going to answer the ad, so never invite a stranger to your home because they can be convincing over the phone and then get to your house and surprise you," Hurst said.

After he arrived at the victim's home, the two men talked for about 30 minutes, police said. The man then wrapped something around the elderly man's throat and choked him until he passed out, Hurst said.

The victim, whose name was not released, was treated Sunday night at Holmes Regional Medical Center in Melbourne and released Monday.

There were no arrests early today.

Girls arrested for painting racist graffiti

FORT LAUDERDALE — Two girls were accused of spray painting messages of racial hatred on church property on the day the nation honored a man who died fighting prejudice, police said.

The girls, ages 11 and 15, were arrested Monday — the federal holiday celebrating the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. They are charged with painting racist slogans at the Trinity Lutheran Church Central School.

The bright orange phrases were painted on a concrete tunnel and on other playground equipment. They include the phrase "KKK Rules" and an anti-Haitian message. Other graffiti was painted on a school wall next to the church.

James Brooks, 18, also was arrested. The three were charged with vandalism of a house of worship, said police spokeswoman Sonya Friedman. The girls' names were not released because they're juveniles. All three are white.

The graffiti was discovered on Sunday morning as people arrived for church services. Police were led to the suspects by tips from neighborhood residents, Friedman said.

Police say the girls will be charged under Florida's hate crimes law.

School suit

Education groups say lawmakers skimp on school systems

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A coalition of education groups has decided to sue the Legislature and the Cabinet on behalf of Florida parents and the state's 2 million public school pupils.

"We don't rellish going to court, but children have a fundamental right to an education and it has not been funded properly," said John Gaines, executive officer of the Florida Association of District School Superintendents.

Gaines' group and the Florida School Boards' Association head the coalition planning to file suit this month charging that too little money is stretched too far for teachers, classroom supplies and facilities. That sets up a battle with legislative foes who say more money alone won't make schools better.

"Suing for more money to increase bureaucracy is a laugh," said Rep. Carlos Valdes, R-Miami Springs. "The bottom line is the public schools we have don't teach our kids to read or write."

Like other "adequacy" suits across the country, the success of the move depends on proving school funding is inadequate to meet education goals the state has imposed.

A court victory could force lawmakers to choose between raising more money through taxes, or allocating more for schools at the expense of other programs.

Forty-four of the state's 67 school boards have pledged to help pay for the first year of the lawsuit. Backers say it will argue, among other things, that:

- Blueprint 2000, outlining goals the state wants schools to meet by the year 2000, will cost billions of dollars the state hasn't provided.

- About 100,000 new students enroll in Florida public schools each year, meaning more teachers and classrooms are needed. Many are immigrants who must be provided state-mandated English language training.

- The state pays only about 65 percent of the costs of transporting students who live two miles or more from schools, forcing districts to pay the rest.

Coalition seeks to preserve ecosystems

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Environmental leaders and concerned residents in four counties are working with developers to help protect rivers, swamps, forests and wildlife in a booming area.

The Four Corners Coalition is not opposed to development, but it seeks to preserve large ecosystems at the point where Orange, Osceola, Lake and Polk counties come together.

The Four Corners is "an obscure area of each county," said Alan Malatesta, a Davenport resident and member of the coalition. "But when you look at the big picture, there's a lot at stake."

There are 17 large housing or commercial projects either completed or under way. Walt Disney World is a few miles down the road, fueling the explosive growth that has been taking place for a quarter century.

The largest project in the works is Disney's $2.5 billion community called Celebration, in Osceola County. Groundbreaking on one phase is expected this year, but construction will go on for decades.

Besides the natural resources such as Green Swamp and high-quality wetlands that flow into the Kissimmee River, the area teems with wildlife that is endangered by development.

The Disney Wilderness Preserve, an 8,500-acre refuge, is home to 12 protected species.

Hopefully, we're making county commissioners aware of our interests and where preservation is needed. — Alan Malatesta

"There are a lot of plans for the area," said Greg Golewski, director of project review for the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council. "The growth we've seen runs along U.S. 192 and moves westward."

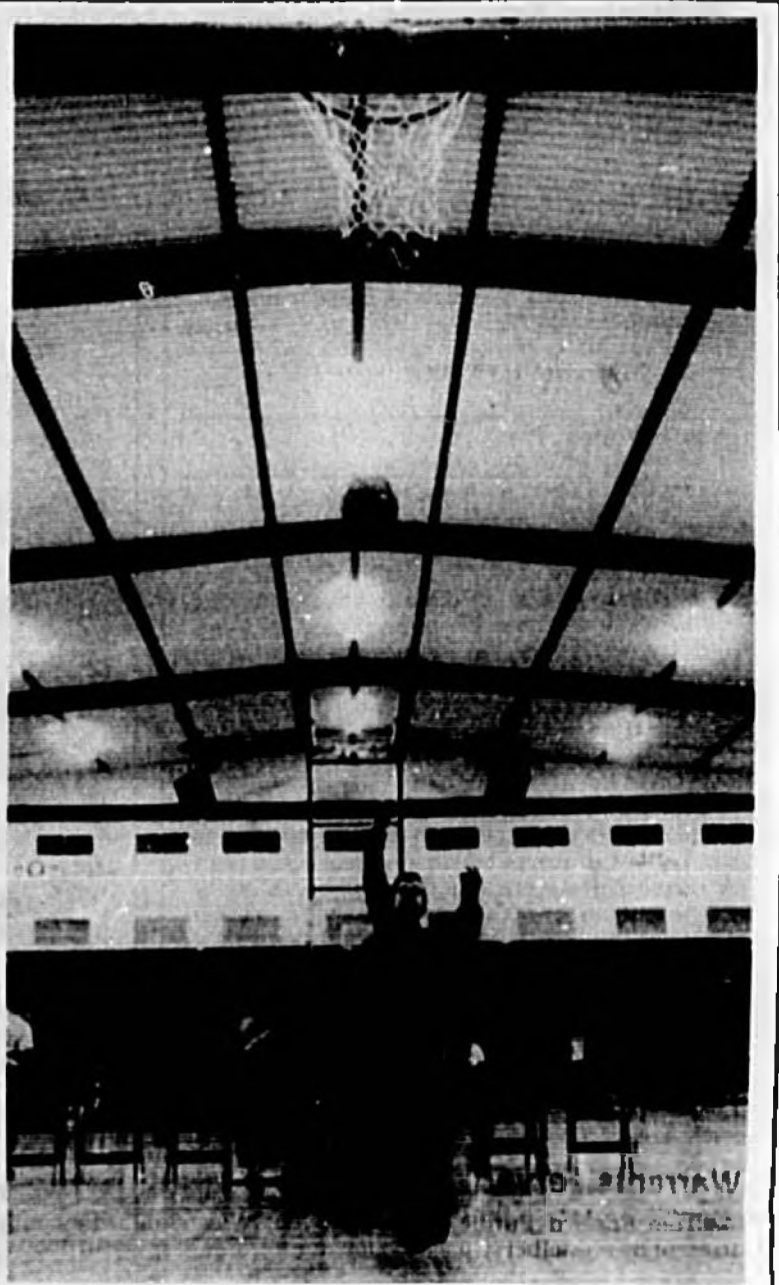

"Hopefully, we're making county commissioners aware of our interests and where preservation is needed," said Malatesta.

Among the developers the loose-knit coalition is working with is Horizon West Inc., a group of landowners in western Orange County recently formed to plan subdivisions and commercial development in 130 square miles surrounding Disney.

Disney, which is a member of Horizon West, is receptive to the Four Corners Coalition, said Tom Lewis, vice president of Disney Development Co.

"They want to be a part of the planning process, and they will be a part of it," Lewis said.

The coalition is sketching out a nature corridor that could be used by animals to move through the neighborhoods and shopping centers to the large natural systems.

Computer program to aid law enforcement

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is getting a boost in its crime-fighting efforts with a computer program that allows investigators to compare shell-casing markings and connect seemingly unrelated shootings.

Hailed as perhaps one of the most important forensic developments in the past two decades, the computer program dubbed "DRUGFIRE" is the next wave of crime-fighting technology and it is coming to Florida.

Photographic images of shell casings are entered into the computer, and when a casing is recovered from a crime scene its image is compared to those in the data base. Investigators are given a series of possible matches and then page through the images on the computer screen for closer comparison.

The $350,000 system is slated to connect the seven crime labs operated by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) and three county-run crime labs in South Florida.

Officials say, in theory, the computer program would allow investigators in any part of the state to connect their case to a crime they didn't even know occurred.

The system was created in 1992 and has been used only in the Baltimore-Washington area and in southern California.

Florida's plan would be the first statewide implementation of the program and could be operating by the end of the year, said Rod Caswell, director of FDLE's crime labs.

Caswell said the computer would be used in any crime involving a semiautomatic weapon, whether it be a drive-by shooting, a roaming serial killer or robbers traversing the state.

Police said he and two other men were believed to have been involved in an incident in the 1000 block of Hickory Ave. earlier in the day, when four men reportedly entered a residence. The arrest report said three of the men then beat the fourth man, and took $3,500 from him before fleeing in a vehicle. Cops: Teen girl coldblooded killer

By The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — A 13-year-old girl accused of shooting a cab driver in the back of the head to avoid a $6 fare was described by police as "coldblooded" and apparently without remorse.

The girl, who was taken into custody Sunday, was being held at the Juvenile Detention Center. West Palm Beach police are asking that she be prosecuted as an adult on a charge of first-degree murder.

"I've been here 22 years and I've never come across anyone with the attitude she has," Detective Allen Robertshaw said Monday. "The last time I saw something like this was in Vietnam. She just didn't care she had taken a life."

The cab driver, Yves Quettant, 39, had picked up the girl and two of her friends, a 15-year-old and 17-year-old from Boynton Beach, at the Palm Beach Mall on Saturday night. He drove them to one of the girl's homes. The two older girls got out of the car and the 13-year-old stayed in the back seat.

The girl allegedly pulled from her waistband a .25 caliber semiautomatic pistol belonging to one of the other girls and shot Quettant. The car rolled down the street and crashed into a parked pickup truck before she fled, police said.

Quettant, who had recently returned from caring for his sick father in Haiti, died early Sunday at St. Mary's Hospital. He left behind his wife, who is seven months pregnant, a 16-year-old daughter and an 11-year-old stepdaughter.

"This girl, she didn't kill just a man, but two families. He is the only family here who can make any money for his father in Haiti," his wife, Suzette Maurice, said through an interpreter.

During questioning Monday, police say the girl was dry-eyed and unfeeling.

"No tears. Just cold. We're talking about coldblooded, premeditated murder committed by a 13-year-old girl who shows no remorse," said police Sgt. John English. "It's frightening."

The girl, a sixth-grader at Roosevelt Middle School, told police the shooting was an accident. But one of the Boynton girls told detectives the 13-year-old suggested at some point at the mall "shooting a cab driver."

The two other girls were cooperative and have not been arrested in the case, police said.

The accused girl's mother said Monday her daughter has never been in trouble before. She added her daughter did not mention anything about the shooting and the girl's attitude had surprised her.

"She acted like a 40-year-old, like nothing happened," the mother said. "There was nothing, not one tear. She didn't care at all."

Final report on Iran-Contra issued today

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Accusations by the Iran-Contra prosecutor of high-level wrongdoing are drawing lengthy rebuttals from former President Reagan and others in the affair.

The prosecutor's final report alleges that Reagan "set the stage" for the arms and money scandal's illegal activities — and the criticism is prompting a 122-page response from the former president's lawyers, said Theodore Olson, head of Reagan's legal team.

The report of Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh — sealed in the files of a federal appeals court since August — is to be released to the public today.

According to sources who have read portions of the report, Walsh also concludes that:

— Contrary to his public pronouncements, then-Vice President George Bush was fully aware of the Iran initiative, a series of secret White House-approved arms shipments to Iran in 1985 and 1986 in an attempt to free U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

— Former Attorney General Edwin Meese assembled a "false account" of one of the arms-for-hostages deals with Iran.

— Comments Reagan made urging support for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels were regarded by White House aide Oliver North as "an invitation to break the law." North operated a clandestine network to supply guns to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua. The weapons were funneled to the Contras during a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military assistance to the rebels. Separately, North diverted some of the money from the secret Iran arms sales to support the Contras.

The sources who described the report spoke on condition of anonymity and were among several dozen people shown portions of the document over the past 5½ months by a special three-judge panel of judges.

Olson maintains Reagan's conduct in the scandal "was above reproach." Bush's lawyers maintain their client never misled the public about his role in the affair. Meese called Walsh's conclusions "outrageous," and the former attorney general says he plans to "confront Walsh's false statements head-on."

Reagan, Meese and North filed secret court papers last month seeking to block the report's release, but the special panel of three appellate court judges that has been holding the report ordered its release. Reagan and Meese decided last week they won't seek Supreme Court review — and said they looked forward to attacking what they regard as Walsh's unfair conclusions.

Walsh obtained convictions against 11 people in the affair, which was the largest scandal of the Reagan administration. But his two biggest court victories were lost on appeal — the cases against former national security adviser John Poindexter and North, who now is seeking a seat in the U.S. Senate from Virginia.

Walsh's biggest setback came on Christmas Eve 1992, when Bush scuttled Walsh's case by pardoning former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on charges of lying to Congress and to Walsh's investigators. Bush also pardoned five other Iran-Contra figures.

Walsh accused Weinberger of concealing his handwritten notes, which detailed key White House meetings with the president and the Cabinet in the Iran-Contra scandal. The notes suggest that Meese and other Cabinet members protected Reagan by saying the president had not known about one of the arms-for-hostages deals — a possibly illegal shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran in November 1985.

Weinberger repeatedly told investigators he did not keep notes, but prosecutors found thousands of pages of jottings by Weinberger in 1992 in a private collection of Weinberger's papers at the Library of Congress.

Investigators follow the money in Kerrigan attack

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Investigators are looking into whether money given Tonya Harding by U.S. figure skating's governing body and other backers was used to pay for the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

NBC reported that authorities have bank records that could tie Harding's former husband, Jeff Gillooly, to the three men in custody in the alleged plot. NBC said the records may confirm bodyguard Shawn Eckardt's claim that Gillooly paid for the attack that nearly knocked Harding's rival out of the Olympics.

NBC and The Oregonian newspaper said investigators suspect Gillooly used money, donated by Harding's supporters to finance her skating, to pay for the hit.

The money, the reports said, may have come from the U.S. Figure Skating Association and other benefactors, including George Steinbrenner, the New York Yankees owner and a U.S. Olympic Committee vice president.

Harding and Gillooly, who divorced last year but have reconciled, maintain their innocence.

In Detroit, Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair told the Detroit Free Press he did not have "one scrap or shred of evidence that Tonya Harding was in any way involved."

Both Kerrigan and Harding are expected to compete at the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, next month, although officials have suggested Harding should withdraw.

Harding will meet with Multnomah County prosecutors, but they wouldn't say when.

Arctic winds still blowing

By The Associated Press

Arctic air with wind chills up to 65 below zero swept across the central and eastern United States today in the wake of a blizzard that dumped up to 2½ feet of snow and paralyzed much of the Ohio Valley.

Kentucky and Ohio were especially hard hit by snow and ice Monday that shut down highways, closed businesses and knocked out power. National Guardsmen were called out in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia to clear roads and help people dig out.

"I can't get used to this really cold stuff. I have on a pair of long underwear, two sweaters, a heavy coat — and I still feel cold. It goes right through you," said Jim Johnson, a parking lot attendant in Toledo, Ohio.

Today's numbing blast was the latest in a series of brutal fronts from Canada that have tormented the East in the past week.

Making parents responsible for their kids

Members of the juvenile justice reform committee have red-lined and fine-tuned recommendations to be presented to the Florida Legislature in session beginning Feb. 7.

Fist-waving citizens tired of, and shocked by, the recent proliferation of bad kids gone worse are now being heard.

The measures proposed probably won't be very popular with most parents of recalcitrant youth. These parents will be held just as responsible as their children.

Good. We know some of the kids gone bad would be that way no matter how caring, concerned and loving their parents are.

But too often children in trouble with the system come from dysfunctional homes, often headed by only a mother mired in poverty with several other children for whom to care.

Or by irresponsible parents who have delegated the television set and video games as babysitters, or who are so busy with their own problems, the problems of their children pale and fade from sight.

Sen. Gary Siegel, (R-Altamonte Springs) is chairman of the committee and one of the strong voices whose battle cries brought the war on crime alive. Some of the proposals include mandatory parenting classes if a child is truant from school and as a condition of receiving government assistance such as food stamps and Aid to Dependent Children. We agree.

Parents could also be charged with child neglect if children under age 16 are caught roaming the streets late at night. We disagree.

Legal fees assessed in truancy cases would become the responsibility of the parents. We question this. What provisions are made for parents unable to pay?

The names of juvenile offenders would no longer be protected, but eligible for publication in media crime reports. We agree.

And parents would be charged from $1 up to $15 per day for any child who has been placed in secure detention or on home detention. We agree.

We say it's a shame the government must invade family life, mandating responsible parenthood and accountability where there has been none.

But too many bad kids for too long have gotten away with murder. And too many parents devoid of responsibility have let them.

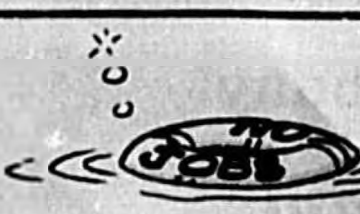

Perhaps when parents once again forge a strong family unit, instilling values and respect in the kids they are raising, there will be no need for reform of the juvenile justice system. We hope that day will come. Because as focused as government appears to be on the problem, it is a pale substitute for caring moms and dads firmly guiding their kids around the treacheries of misspent youth.

Civil rights policy fuels chaos

"There is one unmistakable lesson in American history: A community that allows a large number of young men to grow up in broken families, dominated by women, never acquiring any stable relationship to male authority, never acquiring any set of rational expectations about the future -- that community asks for and gets chaos. Crime, violence, unrest, disorder... are very near to inevitable."

This thesis is pretty much accepted wisdom in 1994. But when it was put forward in 1965, in a monograph entitled "The Negro Family: The Case for National Action," it was almost unanimously denounced by the civil rights establishment. Its author, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, was accused of "blaming the victim."

How ironic, then, to see Jesse Jackson, a member of the very civil rights establishment that rejected the Moynihan thesis back in the 1960s, come around to this way of thinking nearly three decades later. But, sure enough, Jackson recently gathered together assorted black leaders to undertake what he calls a "social values redemptive revolution."

In a recent published interview, Jackson made a rather remarkable declaration.

"I am rather convinced," he said, "that the premier civil rights issue of this day is young violence in general and black-on-black violence in particular. More young black people kill each other annually than the sum total of lynchings in our history."

In years past, the civil rights leadership would ascribe this black pathology to vestigial racism. They would mau-mau the government or the corporate sector or the white community. But Jackson and others now realize that the black community must take primary responsibility for solving such problems in its midst as youth violence.

"It's clear now," says Jackson, "we must look inward in order to go onward."

The most needful group of black Americans are young black men. They are the logical target of the revolution Jackson talks about. Arguably, among all the subpopulations in America, none is further removed from the social mainstream. None is more alienated from the norms and values of broader society.

The failure of the black community, of American society as a whole, to deal squarely with the special problems of young black men has given rise to a rash of disturbing trends.

More than one in four black males between the ages of 16 and 24 is jobless, twice the rate of white males. Nearly one in four black men between ages 20 and 29 is either in prison, on parole or on probation.

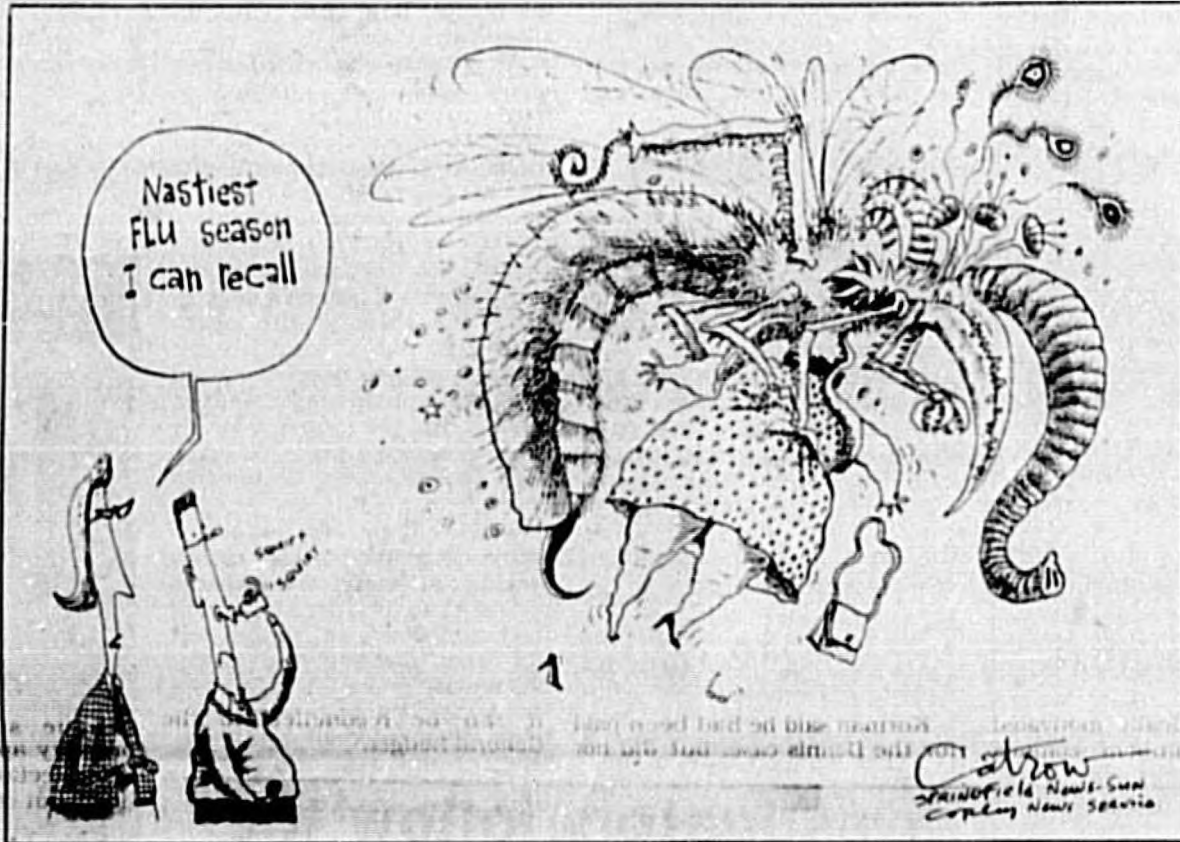

The murder rate for black males age 15 to 24 has nearly doubled over the past decade, making murder the leading cause of death for this group. In fact, according to The New England Journal of Medicine, young black men living in poor inner-city communities are less likely to reach age 40 than young men living in Bangladesh.

The reason so many young black men are nihilistic, why so many bend toward self-destruction, is because they have been marginalized by American society.

Not until we see an increasing -- rather than decreasing -- number of two-parent families among the ranks of the black poor, and a greater number of young black men growing up with fathers presiding over their families, can we hope to see an end to the hopelessness, the chaos and the black-on-black carnage.

In a recent published interview, Jackson made a rather remarkable declaration.

DONNA BRITT

One day soon, we'll have The Talk

WASHINGTON — Impossibly, he became 12 — a full dozen years old — on Saturday. One day soon, we'll have The Talk.

Not about sex. Hamani and I have been discussing that for years. The real subject that my son's incipient teens demands is one that I'd rather avoid — like dental appointments or the too-tight skirts in my closet. But there it is.

As the mother of a black son, I haven't the luxury of just getting depressed about what Mani's adolescence suggests about my own age, or about losing him to friends, a woman or a career. I can't just talk about drugs, condoms, or the necessity of keeping his family close, and God closer.

There are other things I must stress. I think back to when Mani was 4, when I called a Montessori school near our new home in suburban Washington about enrolling him.

The woman who answered was polite in that you're-lucky-I'm-talking-to-you way. But I forged on, finally asking about the school's ethnic makeup. After two years in a terrific Afrocentric preschool, I explained, my son's exposure to a greater mix of kids seemed important. She paused, realizing that I'm black.

"Is your son — nice?" she asked. "We've had problems with a couple of our black boys..."

I stammered something about Hamani's sweetness before it hit me. Surely at a school with an over 60 percent white student population, there had been problems with more than a couple of white 4-year-olds — challenging kids come in every shade. But were white parents asked about their son's niceness?

It was paralyzing, facing the first, concrete proof of the prejudice my wonderful child would encounter.

It was nothing compared to what he may deal with in a few years.

Hamani will be a black teen-aged male. As such, his politeness, numerous "Citizen of the Month" awards from his school, honor-roll grades, perfect diction and extensive knowledge of all things cinematic won't matter a damn.

Before he can even get his mouth open, some people will judge him. And he could become a target.

Of merchants who suspect young brothers, however neatly dressed, of shoplifting.

Of police, whom statistics have shown, detain, harass, assault, arrest and "justifiably" kill black males — some culpable, many of them not — far more often than whites. If you doubt this, ask any black man.

It's even possible — no one who knows Mani can see it, but there it is — that my son could decide to become such a youth. Either way, there's a clear bottom line:

Black boys are dying, everywhere and every day, in America.

Up to this point — and not entirely to my credit — I've kept my terror over the carnage in check. It's been 15 years since my older brother was shot dead by police, years in which the resulting hole where my stomach should have been has felled. I never want to feel that yawning open, that empty, again. But I'm beginning to think, really think, of what it will mean to let Mani out of my sight.

I mean, someone could take him away.

He doesn't know how often I watch him and his little brother curled in sleep. How I sigh, dumbly marveling: Look at how much space he takes up!

I remember my squeal from when he took his first, ducklike steps on a long-ago Valentine's Day. And how two years ago, a stranger who'd sat next to him on his first solo plane trip called me at work to say, "Your son was so smart and so self-possessed — I thought you should know."

Awash in love, bedazzled by it, I think: If people could just know you, they could never hurt you.

But women's children are hurt every day. I don't like feeling this. I don't like knowing that soon, my son and I will talk, more pointedly than ever about all of this death. Afterward, I'll ask my husband, a black man who understands too well, to repeat the rules that every kid — but especially a black one — should know:

Never be cocky or make any fast moves with a cop. Never fight if it is possible to walk away. Know that your manhood is defined not by what's in your pants or on your back, but by the responsibility and self-respect in your heart. Watch where you are, and who you're with.

Remember anybody can have a gun.

As the years pass, I will say these things over and over. And every so often, I'll remind him — and everyone else who'll listen — of what the world sometimes suggests that he forget: of what I repeat as I stare at him sleeping:

"You are so precious. You deserve to live. To live."

The real subject that my son's incipient teens demands is one that I'd rather avoid.

SARAH OVERSTREET

For some, revenge is bittersweet

I can always tell when the holidays are over. It's time to buy a bigger pair of blue jeans. Through the years, I've acquired a wardrobe of jeans in enough sizes to outfit the Osmond family.

But having invested a queenly sum in my latest pair of jeans, I am reluctant to bury it in the denim graveyard at the back of my closet. So I put on the Playtex gloves I use to wash the dishes and I get a better grip on that hellishly small, slick zipper pull. I take the two folds of my stomach and pinch them in onto each other, sucking in my breath and standing on my toes as I pull. I run on tiptoes to the bedroom and lie on the bed, keeping a steady pressure on the zipper pull lest I lose my torque. Awwwwwright. Lift-off! They're up and I'm even standing!

Successfully poured in or not, I know what this means: Time to go on the yearly New Year's Resolution Diet. I will make myself monstrously miserable for two months and finally pay off my debt to the Egg Nog and Fudge Gods.

But if national pulse-feeler Faith Popcorn is right, I may be among a dwindling minority choosing the road to Thinner Thighs in Just 30 Days. She and other trend-watchers say the national obsession for self-denial and habit-changing for the sake of health and perfection is over. In a mighty backlash against years of bran-muffin-eating that didn't pay off, we're treating our hips to chips and our lungs to Auld Lucky Strike. We are entering the "Pleasure Revenge" zone.

Pollsters say this collective succumbing to the lure of a soft couch and a big bag of Ruffles, over the Buns of Steel tapes, has been beckoning for the last couple of years. Recent surveys found that Americans have begun to re-reach for the higher-fat snacks and have reported a weight gain of a few pounds vs. the weight loss they boasted of in polls past. A few more percentage points of us are smoking as opposed to those polled in 1991. Five percent fewer respondents said they were "doing everything they could to eat a healthy diet," according to The New York Times.

If this is so, how ironic that this rebellion is surfacing smack in the middle of the great health-care debate, when one proposal is to tax health-robbing practices such as smoking and eating fatty foods. And wouldn't it fly in the face of another reported trend — the "New Frugality," which asserts that the '80s yuppies are now rediscovering the concept of thrift? Folks trading in their BMWs and Volkswagens for Hyundais, and subscribing to newsletters such as "The Tightwad Gazette," are going to start spending the money they save on cigarettes? How can we make our own clothes and tend the garden if we're lying on the couch eating store-bought chips? Well, coupons perhaps.

If we are entering the age of "pleasure revenge," one theory holds that we've begun to blame genetics for everything undesirable, as opposed to the time when we believed all things can change as long as we have enough motivational tapes and Jane Fonda videos. "We are moving into an era of biological psychiatry that acknowledges that certain things are genetic and inalterable," psychology educator and author Martin E.P. Seligman told The New York Times. Seligman wrote the book "What You Can Change and What You Can't Change." Color him a realist.

Me? Color me passion pink with neon trim. The couch sounds comfy and I could happily eat my weight in Ruffles if I let myself. But I haven't come down from all those tapes I listened to in the '80s. I still believe I can be Jane Fonda if I just hop around the living room enough.

It's time to buy a bigger pair of blue jeans.

Electric companies feud over legislative proposal

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Critics call it a land grab and say the legislation is ill-advised. Proponents say it will bring better planning and lower costs.

Either way, the proposal to freeze the areas presently served by the state's power companies has sharply divided the industry.

On one side are nearly 20 rural electric cooperatives and the state's two major power companies, Florida Power & Light and Florida Power Corp. Opposing the bill scheduled to come up during the next legislative session are about 30 city-owned electric companies.

"There are staunchly different opinions... widely divergent opinions," said spokesman Ron Spinka of the Florida Electric Coordinating Group.

FECG is a Tampa-based trade organization representing virtually all of the state's utilities. It has not taken a stand on the issue.

"It's probably the worst piece of legislation we've seen in a long time," said Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood.

The Orlando Utilities Commission would be directly affected this year, when its 20-year agreement dividing territory with Florida Power Corp. expires. OUC officials had hoped to negotiate for more turf. But the proposed law would quash that possibility.

"It's simply a land grab to divide up Florida," said Tom Tart, OUC attorney and lobbyist.

But Florida Power Corp. spokesman Bill Warren said knowing for certain which customers it will have in the future would save the utility money by giving it extra time to finance and design multimillion-dollar plants.

The proposal also would eliminate the chance of competing utilities building expensive lines and substations to serve an area both claim, said Dale Thomas of Florida Power & Light.

"Malarkey," said OUC General Manager Troy Todd.

The real purpose of the law, Todd said, is to reduce the competition that many believe could occur if the federal government loosens restrictions on the power industry.

Hostages

day, they took two New Tribes missionaries as hostages.

In Sanford, Mission spokesman Mel Wyma said Stephen Welch of North Platte, Neb., and Timothy Van Dyke of Towanda, Pa., were taken hostage in the jungle-covered plains east of Bogota.

About 15 guerrillas reportedly walked into a school for children of missionaries near Villavicencio, 50 miles east of Bogota, ransacked the school and took the two men. Wyma said.

Local police reports said the guerrillas took the Americans to protest the presence of some 250 American soldiers who are building a military base in the region, training Colombian troops and doing humanitarian work around the country.

"The guerrillas said they were taking our people to make a statement to the Colombian government, but how they will be used to make a statement and what that statement is, I don't know," Wyma said.

Van Dyke is the acting principal of the school; Welch is a groundskeeper.

Police said the rebels were members of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, a group loosely linked to the National Liberation Army, known as ELN for its Spanish initials.

Three other New Tribes Mission people were kidnapped in Panama on January 31, 1993. They were identified as Richard L. Tenenhoff of St. Petersburg, C. David Mankins of Susanville, California, and Mark V. Rich who lists Sanford as his home. Rich was born of missionary parents, in Peru.

Early last week, it was announced that a shortwave radio message had been monitored in Panama in December, believed to have been from the three men. The mission said the men were heard urging their families to keep the faith.

A spokesman at the Sanford headquarters, Dave Zelenak had commented, "It gave us confirmation that they were still alive."

In December's kidnapping from a Panamanian Indian village, the men believed to be responsible were reportedly anti-government guerrillas from Columbia. They demanded $5 million in ransom.

New Tribes Mission headquarters, 1000 E. First Street in Sanford, said they will release further details on these latest kidnappings as soon as more information is available.

In another incident in Columbia, Finance Minister Rudolf Hommes was driving in his armored car when a bomb placed at the base of a downtown Bogota streetlight went off Monday. Hommes was unhurt, but a bodyguard was wounded.

The bomb shattered windows for 100 yards, flung a light pole across a street and damaged a bus. Leftist rebels claimed responsibility.

The bombing was further indication that the death of drug lord Pablo Escobar did not mean an end to political violence in Colombia. Escobar, who was slain by security forces Dec. 2, had waged a war of bombings and assassinations that killed hundreds of people.

The National Liberation Army told RCN radio that it attacked Hommes because of unemployment in Colombia.

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

Longwood

carefully noting some states, such as California, lost regular businesses when adult entertainment moved in.

Residents Peter Travers and Bob West both expressed concern over adult businesses moving into Longwood. Longwood's family image helped both men decide to buy homes in the city, West said. "If we became an Orange Blossom Trail, I'd be selling my house."

Some residents voiced concern that property values would decline if adult businesses begin moving into the city.

Roxanne Polsen lives in Longwood but teaches school in Orange County. She urged the commissioners to consider the children when drafting the ordinance. On field trips, the children see billboards advertising adult establishments on OBT and they question what the signs are. "I don't want that in Longwood," she added.

No one spoke in opposition to the moratorium, although a representative of one of three body scrub salons already open in the city had the meeting recorded.

In other business during the four hour meeting, the commissioners agreed to draft an ordinance reimbursing Lynette Dennis for her attorney fees from last summer. Commissioner Steve Miller has brought up the subject several times since the charges against the Code Enforcement Board member were dismissed. The ordinance will have to be approved by the majority of the commissioners after two readings and a public hearing before Dennis is reimbursed.

Dennis spent about $500 defending herself against charges she violated the CEI rules in discussing the case against AAA Tree Service and its owner Henry Hardy before the case was closed. In July, the commission dropped its charges against Dennis after it was shown the portion of the case she discussed was closed. Dennis hired Gerry Korman to represent her. Korman is now acting Longwood City Administrator.

Miller said the charges against Dennis were unfounded from the start but were brought "by three vindictive commissioners on this commission."

Miller and Mayor Paul Lovestrund voted against filing charges but former commissioners Harvey Smeritson, Rex Anderson and Fred Pearl voted to file the charges. Miller said the issue was politically motivated. All three incumbent commissioners lost their bid for reelection.

Dennis was appointed to the board by Lovestrund and was attending her first meeting when the Hardy case was discussed. Dennis is a friend of Hardy's which raised questions about her participation in the discussions of the case.

Two other members of the code enforcement board and the code enforcement officer resigned after the tree service case.

Criminal and civil cases against Hardy have been completed with restoration of the site off county road 427 part of both settlements. Residents around nearby Lake Griffin claimed runoff from the tree service property was polluting the lake.

Commissioner Iris Benson warned that reimbursing Dennis' attorney's fees would set a dangerous precedent for the city. She advised if Dennis wanted to recover the fees or other damages, she could do so by filing a civil suit.

Lovestrund agreed it might set a precedent. "Maybe people will not be afraid to serve on a city board," he said. Since the dismissal of the case, the mayor has also proposed that the legal fees be reimbursed.

Korman said he had been paid for the Dennis case, but did not recall the fee.

Benson quipped, "I thought it was pro bono."

When attorneys take on cases without compensation, they are said to be representing the party "pro bono publico" or "pro bono" (for the public good).

In other business, the commission:

• Approved the Seminole County Humane Society animal cruelty investigators for work in Longwood.

• Okayed three resolutions assessing property owners for paving portions of South Oak Street, Reider Avenue and Second Place.

• Amended the Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Plan for a church on Dogtrack Road and a property on Longwood Hills Road.

• Established an Equity Study Committee for reviewing occupational licensing fees. The committee members will be appointed at the Feb. 7 meeting.

• Accepted the annual audit report. Auditors recommended the city actively pursue getting businesses on the sewer system. A detailed accounting of revenue and expenditures from the police confiscation fund should be made in a semiannual report so it can be reconciled to the General Ledger.

High court set to hear arguments on illegal drug tax

By LEMI WANDKI
Associated Press Writer

HELENA, Mont. — Win or lose in the U.S. Supreme Court, Richard Kurth figures it's pretty much the same to him. The government, he says, has already taken everything he has.

The court will hear arguments Wednesday on whether Montana may collect $181,000 in taxes on illegal drugs from Kurth and his family, who were convicted of growing marijuana in a futile attempt to save their farm and ranch.

At issue is whether Montana's tax, similar to those in 29 other states, amounts to double punishment for the same crime in violation of the Constitution's ban on double jeopardy.

At the center of the case is the 63-year-old Kurth, whose experiment with marijuana as a cash crop cost him 15 months in prison and the loss of his 4,500-acre ranch in bankruptcy.

Now on parole and living modestly in Post Falls, Idaho, with his wife, Judith, who also served time in prison, Kurth does odd jobs for property management companies.

"They certainly can't get anything from us, because we don't have anything. The government has seen to that," Kurth said. "They know that they've taken absolutely everything away from us."

Ready Maids Is A Dream Come True

"Well, Doc, now that you've got me here I might as well tell you all about these crazy dreams I've been having. They all start the same. I'm standing in the middle of my filthy house with a mop in one hand and a vacuum in the other not knowing where to begin. Just when I feel like all hope is lost for my house ever to be clean again, the most amazing thing happens. All these professional cleaning people show up with plenty of energy and lots of supplies and clean my home from the floors to the ceilings and don't miss an inch in between. When they are all done, they leave my home sparkling clean and tell me that I'll receive $15 off since I am a new customer. What do you think Doc, am I crazy?"

"No dear, I believe you have had a series of premonitions. You have been dreaming about what it would be like to have a professional, reliable, competent, and dependable cleaning service with the sincerity of doing a good job to care for your home. You simply don't have the time for all the hassle and aggravation that comes with cleaning your home so your mind has conjured up this solution. And that $15 off - well, it could only mean one thing - you believe that a good solution is an economical solution. My prescription is for you to call the one place that can fulfill your dreams - Ready Maids.

Ready Maids is a locally owned company that will perform general household cleaning tasks as well as assisting you with a variety of special projects. A Ready Maids general cleaning includes a thorough vacuum, dust, clean and scrub the bathroom areas and kitchen, wash and occasionally wax floors, sweep patio and balcony areas, and perform other general tasks as well as adding those extra special finishing touches such as cleaning ceiling fans and window sills, changing linens and towels and making beds. Ready Maids maids are very careful with personal objects and will easily pass a white glove inspection. They will take the time to clean the way you would if you had the time. Who else but the dedicated Ready Maids staff scrubs floors on their hands and knees these days?

If you need help with special projects, call on the cleaning pros at Ready Maids. They can assist you with a variety of special projects including fireplace, oven, and refrigerator cleaning. Some of Ready Maids Inc. most popular projects include:

Closet Cleaning
Ready Maids will clean or vacuum your closet floor as well as damp wipe horizontal clothes poles, tie and shoe racks. It also includes replacing or relining shelf paper and washing walls and woodwork. The job wouldn't be complete without dusting the closet interior, light bulbs and fixtures.

Chandelier and Light Fixture Cleaning
Ready Maids will go over your chandelier lightly with a clean cloth and dry wipe electrical cords and lamp chains. All glass pieces will be dried and primed glass will be sprayed with chandelier cleaner. The fixture globe, bowl, or chandelier, light bulbs, and fixture base will be cleaned to a shine.

Refrigerator Cleaning
Ready Maids Inc. will vacuum refrigerator coils and underneath unit as well as wipe the outside of refrigerated items. They will clean and shine all shelves and crispers, freezer portion, and exterior of refrigerator.

Stove and Oven Cleaning
This project includes buffing all chrome, scrubbing and polishing the stove and oven exterior, and scouring oven racks and broiler pan. As always, removing and cleaning stove knobs and stove burner drip pans is included.

Kitchen Cabinet Cleaning
The first things Ready Maids will do is to remove shelf and drawer contents and shelf paper if it is to be replaced. They will then damp wipe the shelf or drawer and clean heavily soiled areas and removable plastic trays. To complete the project, shelf paper will be re-laid, shelf and drawer contents will be replaced, and cabinet exteriors will be cleaned and polished.

Tile Floor Cleaning

Wall Cleaning
Ready Maids will remove and dust all hanging objects and completely dust the wall. The wall will be carefully washed and the objects will be rehung in their proper positions when the wall is dry.

Woodwork and Panel Cleaning
Ready Maids will begin by removing and dusting all hanging objects. They will then remove cobwebs and dust ledges, baseboards, and tops of all door frames. A wood polish or special product will be applied to areas being cleaned and then shined with a cloth or duster. To finish, all hanging objects will be replaced.

Day after earthquake: No water, freeways in shambles

By DARA TOM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Thousands of people reeling from the earthquake and its aftershocks camped out in yards, cars and shelters today, struggling to get by with no power, no water and — in some cases — no place to live.

At least 30 people died in Monday's quake, which measured 6.6 on the Richter scale and was centered in the sprawling, densely populated San Fernando Valley suburbs 20 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

Giant chunks of the region's vital freeways lay smashed on the ground, foretelling months or even years of traffic snarls in a city that runs on its cars.

Melissa Edwards said her usual half-hour freeway commute into the valley became a three-hour ordeal Monday.

"It's unbelievable, the things I've gone through," she said by telephone on the road. "Unbelievable detours because of fires, roads just completely torn up. ... People are driving crazy, cutting people off."

The state emergency agency sent about 300 search-and-rescue teams to find people — dead or alive — in the rubble. The teams were equipped with high-tech listening devices and cameras that can be lowered into crevices.

Crews today searched a Northridge apartment house that yielded 15 bodies on Monday. The two top floors of the three-story, wood-and-stucco building smashed the ground floor flat.

Hundreds of aftershocks rolled through after the quake hit at 4:31 a.m., including one measuring 5.7. The lingering threat kept many people from returning to their homes overnight.

At least 500,000 homes remained without power and at least 200,000 had no water. Phone lines worked on and off. Without power, many gas stations were closed and cash machines didn't work.

Officials said most power should be restored today. But water remained a bigger question because of damage to key pipelines and aqueducts. Residents in some areas were warned to boil water in case of contamination.

"All I really want right now is water. I'll worry about the rest later," said Abbie Grubin, standing 10-deep in a line at a Northridge grocery store.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew was in effect, officers patrolled to prevent looting and National Guardsmen were ordered to assemble at their armories today in case of trouble. In Hollywood, six people were arrested and charged with looting.

Schools were closed, and Police Chief Willie Williams asked businesses to shut down to reduce traffic.

Shelters opened throughout the region to house the homeless and the fearful. Many people bedded down in their cars and in parks. Emergency officials had no immediate estimate of the damage or of how many people were left homeless.

Collapsed building yields death, heroics

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — John and Josephine Winans owe their lives to one random beam. Alan and Buffy Jo Fitch saved their neighbors by turning a fire hose into a lifeline.

At the Northridge Meadows Apartments, in the blue-collar neighborhood at the epicenter of the Southern California earthquake, tragedy gave rise to both terror and heroism Monday.

When the earth rolled, the top two stories of the 164-unit wood-and-stucco complex sank into the ground floor, crushing it. At least 15 people were killed.

Rescue workers using dogs worked into the night, creeping about the ruins of more than 40 apartments, but the busiest person on the scene was the coroner.

The Winans made it. "There was a beam that saved us," Mrs. Winans said. "It made a little cubbyhole just big enough for our bodies."

"It was a miracle," her husband said. "We're laying in that bed, then it sounded like hell opening up. It was rolling and rocking. We were flying everywhere. Then it stopped and I saw light and neighbors pulled us out about four minutes later."

Safe on the street, he realized he was naked. Neighbors gave him shoes and pants and a sweatshirt.

The Fitches woke to the sounds of the wrenched building groaning and trapped neighbors crying. "What was really hard was when you could hear someone screaming and you couldn't help them," Mrs. Fitch said.

She and her husband, who climbs mountains as a hobby, made their way to the third floor, where they tied fire hoses around the waists of some 15 residents and lowered them to the courtyard.

On the first floor, Fitch found a woman trapped under what had been her bedroom wall. "She was completely helpless," Fitch said. "One of her legs wasn't working."

With her husband pushing from one side and Fitch on the other side pulling her arms, they managed to drag the woman from the rubble.

Apartment manager Pat Mckinski sat in a lawn chair clutching her Pekinese, Nicky, and trying not to cry. "Everyone was outside screaming," Mckinski said. "The babies were screaming, you couldn't see anything."

Erik Pearson, a resident of the complex and an emergency medical technician, said he had pronounced five people dead.

Pearson walked about clutching a fire extinguisher. Finally, someone eased it out of his hands. He said he couldn't understand why the building collapsed when an identical one next door was still standing.

A contingent of the Urban Search and Rescue Team, a national strike team supported by the federal government, pulled in with enough supplies to last them through 72 hours of exploration.

Stocked with their own water, food and sleeping quarters, the team unpacked large air bags to lift rubble and spark-free radios to avert gas fires.

"There's always hope there are people in there," said Gregory Gonzalez, hurrying off to work.

Firefighters searched the building three times before dusk, using dogs trained to detect any humans — alive or dead — and super-sensitive listening devices.

Swinging axes into walls and floors, crews knocked out holes and dropped in the devices, listening hard. "They heard only silence."

The freeways alone could cost hundreds of millions to rebuild. And Gov. Pete Wilson said it could take a year to repair some vital roads.

"You don't want to rush and risk it falling again," he said. Bill Iwan, chairman of the state Seismic Safety Commission, said the damage was disturbingly similar to that caused by a 1971 quake, despite new earthquake standards and the reinforcement of highway bridges. The 1971 quake in the Sylmar area was centered 8 miles away from Monday's quake and killed 65 people.

"The serious question that we have to ask now is if we learned those lessons from the past," Iwan said.

President Clinton declared Southern California a disaster area, opening the way for federal relief, and sent Federal Emergency Management Agency chief James Lee Witt to California.

Study: 50 U.S. POWs were taken from Korea to USSR

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several dozen American servicemen were taken to the Soviet Union from Korean War battlefields in a Kremlin intelligence operation to learn secrets about America's modern warplanes, a new study concludes.

The assertion, in a report prepared by Rand Corp. for the Defense Department, parallels a claim the U.S. government made to Moscow last September that it had developed strong but not conclusive evidence of such transfers.

The Russian government denies the charge but is working with U.S. government investigators who are searching for more evidence among documents or potential witnesses.

The Rand study discounts the possibility that the Soviets took more than about 50 Americans. The U.S. government claim was of several hundred transfers, although officials since have backtracked by lowering their estimate and saying their September claim overstated the certainty of their knowledge.

Charles Freeman Jr., the assistant secretary of defense for regional security affairs, stated in a Nov. 4, 1993, letter that "perhaps a dozen may have been transferred" and noted the Russian government has not admitted to any transfers.

About 8,100 American servicemen officially are listed as unaccounted for from the Korean War, but Rand estimates that the true number for which there is no direct evidence of death is 2,195. Rand, based in Santa Monica, Calif., is a research company that frequently works under Pentagon contracts.

The Rand study says there is little doubt that the Soviets took Americans during the 1950-53 war in which Moscow's forces in North Korea and China secretly fought air battles against U.S. and allied planes and interrogated American prisoners. The main uncertainty is how many were taken, the study said.

"There is no doubt, and there is ample direct eyewitness testimony to support the conclusion that Soviet intelligence organs exploited U.S. servicemen in Korea, in China and on the USSR territory," the study concluded.

"The motivations were to collect intelligence on U.S. strategy and tactics and information on the organization of U.S. military units, and to recruit agents," it said.

The report's author, Paul Cole, said Monday he believes one of the estimated 50 Americans taken to the Soviet Union and not returned may have been Air Force Capt. Ara Mooradian, of Fresno, Calif., the bombardier in a B-29 bomber shot down over Korea on Oct. 23, 1951. Cole said he tried unsuccessfully to locate surviving relatives of Mooradian to alert them to his findings.

Cole, in an interview, said he cannot prove Mooradian was taken by the Soviets. But he cited circumstantial evidence, including a Soviet citizen who claimed to have seen Mooradian at Zimka, a Gulag labor camp, in late 1952 or early 1953.

The Rand study said the Soviets' main interest in American servicemen was to learn about U.S. aircraft, particularly the F-86 jet fighter and the B-29 strategic bomber, and their technical systems such as radar-directed gun sights and bombsights.

"There is no doubt that Soviet intelligence services were on the ground prepared to interrogate and recruit POWs from the very beginning of the Korean War," the study said.

Experimental drug aids clogged heart arteries

By PAUL RABURN
AP Science Editor

CLEARWATER, Fla. — An experimental drug boosted the growth of new coronary arteries by 50 percent in animals, and could provide a new way to treat clogged arteries that cause heart attacks, a researcher reports.

Human trials of the drug could begin in a year or two, and it might one day become a safer and cheaper alternative to bypass surgery or angioplasty, in which a balloon is used to open clogged blood vessels.

Dr. Stephen Epstein of the National Institutes of Health, who directed the research, said the drug has the potential to reduce the severity of heart attacks or perhaps prevent them in some people. The findings were described at the American Heart Association's annual science writers' meeting on Monday.

In 1991, 407,000 bypass operations and 303,000 balloon angioplasties were done in the United States. Bypass surgery costs about $30,000 and angioplasty costs about half that, doctors said.

"If you could develop a method to do this biologically (with a drug), it would offer great benefit and cost saving," said Dr. James Moller, the heart association's president. The drug treatment, if it's perfected, also would probably be safer than surgery or angioplasty, he said.

The drug, one of a collection of naturally occurring substances called growth factors, speeds the development of what's known as collateral arteries.

When one of the principal arteries supplying the heart becomes clogged with fatty deposits, smaller arteries naturally expand and grow to replace some of the lost blood flow.

Epstein's drug, a genetically engineered version of fibroblast growth factor, boosted that collateral blood flow in dogs' hearts by 50 percent after as little as seven days of treatment with injections directly into heart arteries.

"We are very excited about the potential clinical ramifications of these data," he said. He added that he is planning to meet with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration within the next two months to begin planning for human trials. They could begin in a year or two.

There is a risk that the growth factor could cause problems by promoting the growth of other tissue in the body, or speeding the growth of cancer tumors. But experiments with dogs suggest, so far, that if such side effects occur, they aren't common, he said.

If enough collateral arteries form after administration of the drug, it may no longer be necessary in some patients to bypass the clogged artery or open it with a balloon, Epstein said.

Epstein began studying this approach eight years ago, when there was little evidence to suggest that it might work.

"It's very high-risk research," he said.

Violence: Social Security offices

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of times a year, people conducting business in Social Security's field offices assault and abuse employees, fight with others waiting in line, attempt suicide or threaten to bomb the agency, according to federal records.

The documents, obtained by The Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act, chronicle a year's worth of violence and other extreme behavior in Social Security's network of 1,300 field offices.

The records summarize some 2,500 reports of threats, assaults, vandalism, concealed and confiscated weapons, shootings and disorderly conduct in the field offices.

They show that there were at least 45 bomb threats against Social Security in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, 1993. In addition, a bomb exploded in the mailbox of the Yuba City, Calif., office.

There have been at least two recent killings in Social Security parking lots, including the shooting of a security guard outside a Los Angeles office.

Employees and guards have also been shoved, punched, scratched, stalked, spat upon and threatened with knives, scissors, AIDS-infected blood and a snake, according to the records and union officials. One worker was held hostage in Hemet, Calif.

In the field offices, there are reports of people who urinate, defecate, disrobe, brandish weapons and scream obscenities or racial slurs. Others have come into the local offices concealing knives, loaded guns, clubs, razors, a chain and an ax.

Officials of the union that represents Social Security workers, the American Federation of Government Employees, say violence in the field is a growing problem.

The Social Security Administration, however, only began logging all incident reports from the field in 1991 and says it is too early to document any trends.

"I believe it would be a major overstatement to classify SSA field offices as 'dangerous,'" said Phil Gambino, a spokesman for Social Security at its headquarters in Baltimore.

"Most often, the incidents that are reported by field offices involve disruptive clients who, quite frankly, are experiencing very difficult times in their own lives — mourning the loss of a loved one or coping with a devastating disability or illness," Gambino said.

Dawn Castillo, an epidemiologist with the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, a part of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, says research on violence in the workplace is in its infancy.

The CDC, however, says social service agencies are not considered at high risk for homicide in the workplace. Union officials say employees are concerned about worker safety.

"They're worried about the physical assaults, they're worried about TB exposure ... they're worried about weapons, bomb threats," says Carol Fehner, an AFGE representative and Social Security employee in Oceanside, Calif.

Fehner and other AFGE officials say the situation in the field offices reflects a violent society, a mushrooming caseload of mentally ill recipients and growing frustration with an agency that is understaffed and overwhelmed with disability claims.

The backlog of claims is so great that sick and injured people must wait months or longer for their cases to be decided. People have died waiting for benefits; others have attempted suicide or risked eviction.

Brenda Joyner, an AFGE representative who works in the Watts office in Los Angeles, says homeless and addicted people expecting to get benefits become angry because of the stringent rules and long waits.

"Because they're getting denied they want to come in and hurt people," Joyner said. "It's scary, really scary."

Drug addicts and alcoholics and people with AIDS and the HIV virus account for some of the fastest-growing segments of the population served by Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program run by Social Security. And 54 percent of the 4.4 million disabled people on the SSI rolls are either mentally retarded or mentally ill.

Social Security pumps $1 billion a day into the economy and sends a monthly check to one out of every four households.

According to Gambino, the agency's field offices serve more than 25 million walk-in customers a year. He said Americans can be confident the offices are safe.

County boys go unnoticed by pollsters

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — The voters in the Florida Sports Writers Association (FSWA) boys' high school basketball state poll once again ignored Seminole County as none of the six public schools even received a vote.

Several Central Florida teams did get mentioned, however, led by undefeated (14-0) Class 5A-District 4 power Daytona Beach-Mainland moved up to the No. 3 position in the 5A poll, behind No. 1 Miami Northwestern and defending state champion Miami Senior.

Also ranked were Wymore Tech, No. 5 in Class 1A, Father Lopez, No. 9 in 1A, and Deltona-Trinity Christian, No. 6 in Class B.

Getting votes are Orlando-Oak Ridge (Class 5A), Bishop Moore and Jones (both in Class 3A), Orlando-Lake Highland (Class 1A), and Orangewood Christian (Class B).

Courier pulls out opening win in Australian Open

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Just when tennis was being dismissed by critics and some of its own players as a bore, Dade City's Jim Courier and Bryan Shelton provided a taste of how compelling the sport can be.

Lunging and leaping, grunting and growling, the two Americans gave an intriguing display of power tennis as Shelton provided the perfect counterpunch to Courier's strong serve and forehand.

The Sanford-born Courier, seeking to win a third straight Australian Open title, rallied to avoid a first-round ouster Monday. He repeatedly battled from behind, and had to capture five of the final six games to win the 4 hour, 42-minute match.

Courier's 4-6, 6-1, 6-7 (4-7), 6-2, 6-4 victory wasn't always pretty tennis, but it was exciting.

The crowd gasped as Courier and Shelton traded shots, then gestured to themselves with their rackets — sort of shadowboxing in the sun.

SANFORD — It's hard to move up when you're undefeated.

The top six positions in Class 5A of the Florida Sports Writers Association (FSWA) state high school girls' basketball poll remained unchanged from last week.

Luke Howell won both of its games last week to improve to 22-1 on the season, the most wins in the state, either the boys or girls, and stayed at No. 6 with 61 points.

The Silver Hawks trail No. 1 Miami Norland (16-0), which received all 12 first place votes, Ft. Walton Beach (20-0), Ft. Lauderdale Dillard (17-0), Sarasota Riverview (19-0) and Miami Central (18-2).

Other Central Florida area squads getting recognition this week include St. Cloud (No. 1 in Class 4A), Orlando-Lake Highland Prep (No. 6 in Class 1A), Winter Park-Master's Academy (No. 9 in Class B) and Orangewood Christian (receiving votes in Class B).

RSVP needs a new home

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

New Home needed for 500 people. That's the way the sign or ad would read if Gloria Black, new director for RSVP had her say. She began as the director in mid-December. RSVP began as an organization for retired seniors over the age of 65. It is now expanded to the 55-and-over age category. The name is now Retired and Senior Volunteer Program instead of the previous name, Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

This group has benefited the community in so many ways, not only in the financial savings by non-profit businesses but the time and talent given by the volunteers. In fact, the organization contributed over 1200 hours last year.

The present home of RSVP is at Seminole Community College Campus. The expansion and the need for more space has forced the college to request that the RSVP occupants begin looking for new headquarters. They are presently housed in a 1400 square-foot office. "We're really in jeopardy," said Black.

"They've (SCC) been so kind to us. I can't say enough about that." Seminole Community College was the original sponsor of RSVP which is the oldest program in central Florida. The college has donated the office space to the organization, rent and utility free for many years.

The funding for RSVP is through the federal government.

Gloria Black, new RSVP director

United Way and the county. Black's biggest fear is that the county may already have plans to decrease some financial support to them. "It's hitting us in the middle of the grant year," she said. "Even though SCC has given no deadline for us to be out, I was hoping some kind soul would read about us or hear about this and donate extra office space just like the college has." Black commented that the phone system comes with them and only two full-time and three part-time employees are active in the office.

The RSVP organization not only helps with its time, talent and service of working at non-profit businesses, but performs other duties. A craft and sewing group gets together to make lap robes for individuals in nursing homes. They also make flannel gowns for premature babies in the hospital. The group acts as score keepers and registration attendants for some Kiwanis activities. Other volunteers are utilized for food distribution with Meals on Wheels, assisting in the area hospitals, working with the American Red Cross and providing gifts for children at Christmas time. This past Christmas, over 40,000 gifts were given to 700 children from kindergarten age and those enrolled in the Head Start program.

The money given to the program is used in many ways. Monthly recognition is given to volunteers. "A huge yearly recognition event takes place," said Black. "This year plans are to have it at the dog track. We'll have entertainment and a luncheon." The recognition parties are way of giving a big pat on the back and a huge thank you to the volunteers that unselfishly give so much to the community. Some of the funding is also given to volunteers for their mileage and insurance is paid to them for the trip to and from the location they are working.

Providing an outlet for the retired and seniors in the community helps nearly everyone. This devoted organization's director, Gloria Black, has many new programs that she would like to implement to enhance the scope of their work. Without an office to work out of, many non-profit businesses may suffer the realities of paying new employees. If RSVP experiences loss, then the community will feel the consequences of this loss. One of the ways to show recognition for their tireless hours of contribution may be gift of space. As Black would say, "Any givers?"

Tribute says childless couples are sad

DEAR READERS: An anonymous reader sent me this piece (which I've slightly edited) I think you will appreciate. I hope the author will identify himself (or herself) and claim the credit — or blame, depending on the way you interpret it.

THE CHILDLESS COUPLE
There is nothing sadder than a childless couple. It breaks my heart to see them relaxing around swimming pools in Florida, sitting all suntanned and miserable on the decks of their boats — trotting off to Europe like lonesome fools. It's an empty life. Nothing but money to spend, more time to enjoy, and a whole lot less to worry about.

The poor childless couple are so wrapped in themselves, you have to feel sorry for them. They don't fight over the child's discipline, don't blame each other for the child's most obnoxious characteristics, and they miss all the fun of doing without for the child's sake. They just go along, doing what they want, buying what they want, and liking each other. It's a pretty pathetic picture.

Everyone should have children. No one should be allowed to escape the wonderful experience that accompanies each stage in the development of the young — the happy memories of sleepless nights, coughing spells, tantrums, diaper rash, debts, "dipso" baby sitters, saturated mattresses, emergencies and never-ending crises.

The real fulfillment comes as the child grows like a little acorn into a real nut. The wonder of watching your overweight ballerina make a fool of herself in a leotard. The warm smile of a small lad with the sun glittering on 500 bucks worth of braces ruined on peanut brittle.

How dismal is the peaceful home without the constant childish problems that make for a well-rounded life and an early breakdown: the tender, thoughtful discussions when the report card reveals the progeny to be one step below a moron; the end-of-the-day reunions with all the joyful happenings recited like well-placed blows to the temple.

Children are worth it all. Every moment of anxiety, every sacrifice, every complete collapse pays off as a fine, sturdy adolescence is reached. The feeling of reward the first time you took the boy hunting — he didn't mean to shoot you; the lad was excited. Remember how he cried? How sorry he was? And how much better you felt after the blood transfusion? These are the times a man with a growing son treasures — memories that are captured forever in the heart and the limp.

Think back to the night of romantic adventure when your budding daughter eloped with the village idiot. What childless couple ever shared in the stark realism of that drama? Aren't you a better man for having lived richly, fully, acquiring that tic in your left eye? Could a woman without children ouch the strength and heroism of your wife as she tried to fling herself out of the bedroom window?

The childless couple live in a vacuum. They fill their lonely days with golf, vacation trips, dinner dates, civic affairs, tranquility, leisure and entertainment. There is a terrifying emptiness without children, but the childless couple are too comfortable to know it.

You just have to look at them to see what the years have done: He looks boyish, unlined and reared; she's slim, well-groomed and youthful. It isn't natural. If they had had kids, they'd look like the rest of us — worn out, wrinkled and exhausted.

DEAR ABBY: I am involved in a situation and am curious as to what the proper etiquette is. I was in a bridal party, and three weeks prior to the wedding, the bride decided not to go through with it. This was after the bridesmaids' gowns and matching shoes had been purchased and two showers given. One of the showers was paid for by the bridesmaids, plus the shower gifts.

The bride claims she is going to keep the shower gifts because they are not "wedding gifts" and it would be too expensive to return all of them. She also claims that technically, all the bridesmaids' gowns should be paid in full by us since they were ours (some of us just put the deposit down). I feel that she is completely wrong and that it is her responsibility to return all the shower gifts, as there is no wedding; she should also reimburse us for any expenses incurred.

There are no extenuating circumstances here — just a classic case of "cold feet." What is the correct thing to do? I think the ex-bride has gall plus!

IN NEW JERSEY
DEAR STUCK: According to "The Amy Vanderbilt Complete Book of Etiquette, A Guide to Contemporary Living" (1978): "If the wedding is called off, the bride should return each gift received at the shower or showers unless it was a very 'trivial item.'" And from "The New Emily Post's Etiquette" (1975): "Insofar as possible, bridal shower presents should be returned if the marriage is called off. Monogrammed articles, or anything that has been used, cannot be given back, but every effort should be made to return the gifts that are unused."

Chicago attorney David Schaffer told me that the bridesmaids' dresses are not legally considered "gifts" (like shower and wedding gifts), because the bridesmaids may keep their dresses. Therefore, the bride is not obligated to pay for them. However, the bride should return all engagement, shower and wedding gifts.

DEAR ABBY: I am an optometrist. When I'm at a party, or some other social event, someone will invariably ask, "How much is an eye examination?" This does not set well with me. I never hear anybody asking a lawyer or physician, "How much is an office visit?"

Please tell me how to respond without being rude, yet letting them know that it is an inappropriate question under the circumstances.

BEING RED
DEAR SEEING: I have heard from other doctors and from lawyers complaining about the same kind of problem.

The solution is a polite, "Kindly telephone my office — I'm listed in the telephone directory. The receptionist in charge of appointments can answer your question."

Celiac disease has many manifestations

DEAR DR. GOTT: About 12 years ago I was diagnosed with celiac disease. My symptoms were severe weight loss, diarrhea, and a hemoglobin of about 8. Since then, by avoiding gluten, I've gained weight. I've read recently that celiac are predisposed to lymphoma. If this is so, does cheating on my diet make me even more susceptible to lymphoma?

DEAR READER: Celiac disease, which is hereditary, has a variety of manifestations: diarrhea, anemia (low hemoglobin) and stunted growth in children, weight loss, bone pain, diarrhea, and anemia in adults. The cause is an intolerance to gluten, a cereal protein found primarily in wheat and rye. Once the diagnosis is established by intestinal biopsy, patients must avoid any foods containing gluten.

Unfortunately, lymphoma (lymph node cancer) is a common complication of celiac disease. At this time, experts are not sure whether treatment (scrupulous adherence to a gluten-free diet) will diminish the risk of lymphoma. Thus, your diet may help reduce symptoms, allowing you to avoid deficiency states (and anemia), but it will probably not protect you against lymphoma. For this reason, patients with celiac disease must be closely monitored by gastroenterologists.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I love international coffees, yet I am concerned about ingredients such as partially hydrogenated coconut oil, sodium caseinate and various other components. Will they harm my health?

DEAR READER: The additives in food sold in the United States are not harmful, in particular, they are present in inconsequential amounts. Therefore, you can safely continue to enjoy "international" coffees in moderation.

Remember, however, that tropical oils (such as coconut) may raise the serum cholesterol.

Therefore, if you have to watch your cholesterol level, you might consider avoiding food containing these substances.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Eating Right for a Healthy Heart." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Logan Pearsall Smith said, "It is the wretchedness of being rich that you have to live with people." Talk about never being satisfied! But in bridge we like to be rich to have many honor cards. However, occasionally we are overburdened with them. Getting rid of an unwanted honor at the right moment can be crucial to success.

Three no-trump would have been an easy contract, but South's overall of three spades, rather than three no-trump, is understandable.

The play lasted only four tricks. West led the heart seven; five, ace, two. East returned a heart of course, and West, after ruffing, cashed his two top diamonds one down.

South should have seen this coming. Surely East has seven hearts for his vulnerable opening bid. If so, it cannot cost South to drop the heart king under East's ace. Although this gambit has appeared in print many times, it will still be difficult for East not to believe the king is a singleton — unless South makes a revealing hesitation. Not willing to give South a discard on dummy's heart jack, East will probably switch to a diamond at trick two. This allows the contract to make, because a moment later South's heart two disappears on a diamond winner in the dummy.

Are you thinking that West should lead a top diamond at trick one? That is certainly feasible. And there is a clever idea that works well on this deal. Assuming you normally lead the ace from A-K, if instead you lead the king from A-K and switch at trick two for three, that switch might be to a singleton but never to a doubleton.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Jan. 19, 1994

Improvements in your financial affairs are indicated for the year ahead. The road you travel might not be an easy one, but it will get you to your objectives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your independence could be of more importance to you than usual today. Don't get yourself involved with persons who may restrict it. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you might have an opportunity to do something to get even with someone who has wronged you in the past. If you yield to this inclination, you could be sorry.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Whether you will be prudent or extravagant today will be determined to a large degree by the company you keep. They can point out the luxury items, but they can't force you to buy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Objectives might be a bit more difficult than usual to achieve today and a bit more difficult than usual to hang onto what you attain. Take nothing for granted in either mode.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you might find yourself in a strange arrangement where what is good for you may not bode well for persons with whom you're involved. Do whatever you feel is right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It might be wise today not to stick with vendors or support systems that are subject to constant changes in your commercial arrangements. Look for firms that are consistent.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is not a good day to delegate the making of decisions to subordinates. They might think they have the same big picture as you do, but in all probability they won't.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're not apt to have too much luck today getting others to take care of things for you that you should be taking care of yourself. In fact, requesting favors could be resented.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to be successful today you must be consistent and methodical. In situations where you try to cut corners the results could be disappointing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to negotiate an agreement today, it might be necessary for both parties to make compromises and concessions. It won't work if only one is willing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If someone is performing a special type of service for you today and you are displeased with his/her efforts, as tactfully as possible let this person know how you feel. Don't pretend otherwise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Upon occasion your impulsiveness has impelled you to be extravagant and not get full value for the money you spend. This could be one of those testy times again today.
