How does your garden grow?

Planting seeds to grow on

By SHARI BRODIE
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Justin Roberts has his head in the stars, but his feet are firmly planted in the rich soil of family tradition. Justin is a gardener, as is his father and his father before that. Not so amazing you might think until you factor in that Justin is only 13 years old.

Not the usual hobby for a boy his age, but something Justin has been doing "for as long as I can remember."

Gardening, as Linda Roberts puts it, "is that much more time that families can spend together." Justin was exposed at an early age because his father had learned at an early age. But Justin's real awareness and real test came a couple years ago when Jim Roberts had to go into the hospital, just after he and his son had planted the fall garden. It then became Justin's responsibility to tend the 40-foot by 50-foot garden. "I didn't think," Jim Roberts said to his son, "you had picked it up but you had," referring to all of the lessons he had taught him about working the soil.

"It's a life skill that a lot of people have lost," said Roberts. People think that gardening has to involve an expensive tiller and lots of confusing chemicals and soil enhancers, when all they need is "a shovel, a hoe, a rake and a little piece of dirt." All members of the Roberts family contribute to the work that goes into the family garden.

Justin has learned the life skill.

County officials suspended with pay

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County land acquisition coordinator Joyce Suber and her assistant may lose their jobs following a month-long investigation into possible improprieties on the job.

According to county records, Suber and her assistant Mitchell Burke are accused of misuse of county time, of abuse of county policy, of dishonesty and of other violations. In addition, Suber is accused of insubordination for trying to influence the investigation into the matter.

The pair has been suspended with pay, but will be fired if they do not respond to the allegations in writing before Oct. 15. A final decision on their job status will be made by their supervisor, Jerry McCollum, at that time.

The problems for Suber began when an investigation concluded that the coordinator and her assistant had spent county time and resources to work on James Lester's unsuccessful campaign for the office of Gulf County property appraiser.

Lester is Suber's son.

In a letter to Suber, McCollum summarized the accusations against her and Burke.

"Your management of employees under your direct supervision has been improper, and, in some cases, a flagrant abuse of county and office policies has been evident," the letter stated.

Suber and Burke allegedly pressured county contractors and employees to contribute a total of $2,490 to her son's campaign fund. They also allegedly voted, and arranged for other county

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Family's tree kills woman

DELAND — A tree planted after a hurricane 65 years ago fell after another storm, killing a woman.
The young water oak planted by the Grooms family grew into a great tree that shaded their home. Family members, their children and grandchildren frequently gathered under it.
But Volusia County forester Mark Brown said laurel and water oak trees are sometimes prone to damage after heavy rains. The trees have a life expectancy of 70 to 90 years, but they're susceptible to canker and heart rot.
On Wednesday, its limbs soaked by heavy rains, the trunk of the Grooms' tree snapped, crushing Mary Jane Zimmermann Grooms, 73. She and a friend, Aline Baker, were enjoying the first sunny afternoon in several days.
Haker, 75, was taken to a hospital for treatment and was expected to be released Wednesday night.

Man pleads no contest in starvation

DELAND — A 33-year-old Fort Orange man pleaded no contest to having a role in the starvation death of his girlfriend's daughter.
Wednesday's plea by Lawrence Doyle Kuzmovich to third-degree murder charges was part of a plea bargain. Kuzmovich also agreed to testify in the trial of Kathryn Joan Allen.
Her daughter, Annie Marshall, starved to death in the couple's mobile home in March 1985, police said. When she died, the 14-year-old girl, who had cerebral palsy, weighed 29 pounds.

Kuzmovich has been free on $10,000 bond since June 1986. He faces probation to a maximum of 15 years for the conviction of third-degree murder and will be sentenced at the conclusion of Allen's trial.

Allen, 30, who is being held without bond, has a pre-trial hearing set for Nov. 5. Police say she and Kuzmovich starved the girl for four months before she died and failed to provide her with medical care.

Kuzmovich told police he was concerned about a urine smell and "embarrassed" about the odor from the bedroom where the girl was kept by her mother, but he did not check on her while she was alive.

Deadbeat dad arrested

BOSTON — A former Massachusetts resident, listed among the state's top-10 child-support delinquents, has been arrested in Fort Myers, Fla., Massachusetts Revenue Commissioner Mitchell Adams said.

Bernard Scarafone owes $50,710 in child support for his 16-year-old son and 12-year-old daughter in Melrose, Adams said.

Scarafone, 42, formerly of Groveland, was arraigned Wednesday in the 20th Judicial Circuit Court in Fort Myers, Fla., where he was arrested the previous night.
He is being held in lieu of $55,000 cash bail pending his return to the Bay State next week, Adams said.

Napkin diverts jet

JACKSONVILLE — A Detroit-bound American Airlines jet was diverted to Jacksonville after a napkin found aboard raised suspicions of a possible bomb threat.

"There was a napkin with the word bomb on it ... that's what started it," an airline source said today, declining to release further details except that no arrests were made.

Flight 688, a Boeing 737 with 67 passengers and a crew of at least six, took off from Miami at 7:10 p.m. EDT, said airline spokesman Al Becker. It landed 40 minutes later.

Airline and law enforcement sources said nothing dangerous was found aboard the jet, which was parked at a remote area of Jacksonville International Airport, emptied of passengers and searched by airport police and bomb-sniffing dogs.

The passengers got under way again about 1:15 a.m. today, said Jacksonville Port Authority spokesman Neal Gansel. They were aboard another aircraft because the original crew had reached the limit of their allowed time on duty, according to the airline source.

Mom sues over nursing HIV baby

FORT LAUDERDALE — A new mother who was mistakenly given the infant of an HIV-positive woman to breast-feed fled suit, claiming she had been placed at risk of contracting the virus that causes AIDS.

The lawsuit filed Wednesday against Broward General Medical Center and the nurse involved also says the April incident kept the woman, identified only as Jane Doe, from breast-feeding her own baby girl, denying the child the antibodies and nutrients in breast milk. The suit asserts that babies have the right to mother's milk, the perfect baby food.

"They had a duty to protect her baby's source of breast milk, and they did not do it," said the mother's lawyer, Kenneth Sobel of Fort Lauderdale.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Local and long distance phone companies do battle over rates

By BILL BRONSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Long-distance carrier AT&T says it just wants the same chance to go after local telephone business that local companies soon will get to lure away its long-distance customers.

But BellSouth-Florida says AT&T is asking terms that would let it win back all the local customers it lost with the breakup of AT&T's Bell system monopoly in the 1980s.

The nation's largest long-distance carrier and Florida's largest local telephone company locked horns Wednesday in arbitration hearings to try to settle key differences before they compete for local customers.

After three days of hearings for the telecommunications titans, the state Public Service Commission is due to rule on disputed issues by Dec. 4.

AT&T said it simply wants to speed the day when customers pick local telephone companies the way they now choose long-distance providers — and when it can offer local, long-distance and cellular telephone, on-line and entertainment services.

"The best thing you can do to protect the consumer is to promote competition," AT&T witness Joe Crease told the PSC.

AT&T and BellSouth are engaged in similar arbitration proceedings in North Carolina, Georgia and Texas.

And the Florida PSC opens arbitration hearings next week between AT&T and the state's second-largest local phone company, GTE-Florida.

The incentive for AT&T to settle the disputes is to get a crack at the lucrative local-service market. But local companies like BellSouth and GTE-Florida also have reasons to negotiate.

When they can show they've opened their local-service markets to competition, the federal Telecommunications Act lets them venture into the long-distance business and challenge AT&T and MCI on their own turf.

To start local-service competition, long-distance companies — lacking their own lines into customers' homes — must work through the local companies.

That raises touchy issues such as how much BellSouth can charge for access to its local network.

License for learning

Grooms Academy is another of the beneficiaries of the special education license plate fees. Money raised by the additional $15 fees on the License for Learning plates is distributed to the schools in the county where it is sold. Recently Grooms was presented with a $250 check from the fund. Grooms' Teacher of the Year Cathleen Hatcher (left) and Larry Robinson, the school's Non-Instructional Employee of the Year (right), accepted the check from Tim Puthoff, a member of the Foundation for Seminole County Public Schools. The money will be used for some of the school's many student incentive programs.

Keanu Reeves visits the Jacksonville courthouse

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Keanu Reeves, star of the thriller "Speed," spent a day in the Duval County Courthouse watching prosecutors to prepare for an upcoming film.

Reeves will appear in a Warner Bros. film called "Devil's Advocate," said Nora Rojas of the Florida Entertainment Commission. No one was quite sure why Reeves picked Jacksonville to study for his role.

Dressed in a dark suit and tame tie, Reeves, 32, attended an armed robbery trial Wednesday.

"There was a noted and substantial increase in the female audience," said Circuit Judge Brad Stetson, "specifically, employees of the courthouse who don't normally grace my court with their presence."

Reeves autographed a yellow sticky note for a delighted bailiff and accepted a hug from a courthouse worker.

But when WJKS-TV reporter Chris Horne asked for an interview, Reeves said no. As Horne walked away, Reeves made a decidedly un-cordial gesture at the reporter's back.

Most of "Devil's Advocate" is being filmed in New York, but location scouts are visiting North Florida, checking out churches, Rojas said. Filming will take four or five days.

A Warner Bros. spokesman wouldn't discuss the movie's plot.

Ministers don't want gay church in their parade

By The Associated Press

KEY WEST — Saying the Bible doesn't condone homosexuality, a fundamentalist pastor's group that organizes the annual Christmas parade wants to exclude a gay church.

But city commissioners are proposing to grant a parade permit only if the Lower Keys Ministerial Association agrees not to discriminate against any group. The issue may come to a vote next week.

"It's a community parade and we feel that everyone in the community should be afforded an opportunity to participate," Commissioner Jimmy Weekley said Wednesday. "The message of Christmas is one of unity."

But the pastor's group, which has about 15 members from a half-dozen churches across the lower Florida Keys, hopes to convince commissioners to abandon the no-exclusion condition.

The ministerial association isn't homophobic, but doesn't believe homosexuality should be practiced by Christians, said Redwine, pastor of the Big Coppitt First Baptist Church in Big Coppitt Key.

The group banned the gay Metropolitan Community Church from last year's parade, causing an uproar in Key West's large homosexual community.

Some 200 people held a prayer vigil and about 400 others dressed as angels and shepherds and marched past the vigil. Some bystanders held protest placards and gay groups accused the pastors of un-Christian behavior.

The parade proceeded peacefully down the famed Duval Street. It is held before Christmas every year.

After commissioners discussed the no-exclusion condition last week, the ministerial council argued that its religious freedom are being trampled.

Historical society celebrates Sanford's birthday

By SHARON S. STEINBERG
Herald Columnist

At its recent meeting, the Sanford Historical Society celebrated Sanford's 184th birthday with a birthday cake and a very informative presentation by Alicia Clarke, museum curator, on some of the early founders of the city. She gave interesting facts and anecdotes about General Henry Sanford, Dr. Seth French, Confederate General Joseph Finnegan, W.J. Hill, Henry DeForest, Judge Joseph Tucker, Sidney and Josh Chase.

Miss Clarke related that General Sanford, who came to the area for his health, bought the land from General Finnegan in 1870 that later became the city of Sanford on September 26, 1877. General Sanford spent a few months a year in Sanford as he had many other interests in other parts of the world. While here he lived in a small lodge or at his hotel, the Sanford House.

One story that has been passed down through the years is that Dr. French cut a path from his hometown (on what is now Sanford Middle School property) with a sword to Lake Monroe and that path became French Avenue. Dr. French owned the Wilton Hotel, later named the Montezuma, and was the founder of the town of Orange City.

Another story related was that W.J. Hill who founded the first hardware and lumber business in Central Florida lived in a piano crate his first few years in Sanford.

The Chase brothers who came from Philadelphia were part owners of Bel Air Groves with General Sanford. After Sanford's death, his son-in-law sold the rest of Bel Air to the Chases. These brothers founded Chase and Company in 1884 which first sold fire insurance and then branched out into agriculture and building materials.

During the business meeting, presided over by Grace Marie Stinchipher, it was announced that the society had bought a Polaroid camera, and a cart for the museum. The purchase of 20 additional burgundy stacking chairs was approved.

The first purchases from the Andrew Carraway bequest were announced. Eight tape message boxes for use in explaining exhibits were displayed and a picture rail is on order.

Because of several errors in the numbering of the pages in the society's 1987 calendar, it is being reprinted. These should be available for purchase in a few days at the Sanford Museum. If you bought a calendar in September, you may exchange it for a corrected one.

A nominating committee consisting of Dr. Vann Parker, chairman; Doris Gormly and Elizabeth Gallant was appointed. Officers for 1987 will be elected at the November 21 meeting. Also at that meeting will be a program on the basics of genealogical research.

Insurance cutbacks

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — After years of steep claims for natural disasters, one of the nation's leading insurers is curbing sales of new homeowner policies in East Coast and Gulf state coastal areas. The New York Times reported.

Nationwide Insurance Co. plans to announce Thursday that it will curtail the number of policies sold from Maine to Texas, and virtually halt sales in Florida, the Times said, quoting company executives in its Thursday editions.

"Prudence requires us to diligently manage our exposure to catastrophic losses," said Richard D. Crabtree, president and chief operating officer of Columbus, Ohio-based Nationwide.

Officials at Nationwide could not be reached by The Associated Press for comment late Wednesday.

Crabtree said Nationwide, the fifth largest insurer of homes in the United States, had been limiting sales quietly in coastal areas for some time.

Nationwide spokesman John Miller told the Times the insurer has 2.6 million policies, an increase of 800,000 since 1980.

Firefighters battle fire at NBC quarters; 11 reported injured

By SARAH CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — A fire at the 70-story GE building that houses NBC's headquarters created heavy smoke early today, forcing employees to evacuate and injuring at least 11 people.

More than 300 firefighters battled the blaze, which was believed to have started in a 10th-floor electrical closet at the TV studios of local affiliate WNBC. It was still not under control three hours later.

The fire knocked out some early morning programming for the New York area, but the "Today" show, which broadcasts from a glass-enclosed studio across the street, began on schedule at 7 a.m.

Eleven people were treated for smoke inhalation at the scene, including two firefighters, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said. There were no serious injuries.

The blaze was contained between the fifth and 10th floor but was difficult to fight because it was running through the building's electrical systems, said Donald Burns, the fire department's chief of operations.

Fire Commissioner Thomas Van Eszen couldn't predict when it would be brought under control. Beth Comstock, a network spokeswoman, said 2,000 NBC employees work in the building but only a few dozen were on the job when the fire broke out.

The landmark art deco building at Rockefeller Center houses the studios for "Saturday Night Live" and "NBC Nightly News," among other shows. Tourists know it for its studio tours, a shop where NBC-related souvenirs are sold and, in winter, the Christmas tree and skating rink right outside its door.

"We are trying to isolate this so we don't have to shut down the whole building," Burns said. "As soon as we cut the power to problem areas, we'll be under control."

Nobody was believed trapped in the building, he said. "Everything's been searched, everyone is accounted for."

Fred Syvertsen, a maintenance worker, said he got a complaint about smoke from workers on the seventh floor shortly before 4 a.m.

"We went down to the fifth and saw smoke coming out of the vents big time," Syvertsen said. "That's when we decided to get out."

Some employees who were evacuated said they didn't hear any fire alarms. Burns said the complaint would be investigated.

The GE Building also houses the famous Rainbow Room restaurant.

According to information supplied by the county regarding this matter, "A combination of unincorporated road fund and some general fund revenues are presently financing the county's stormwater management program.

"About a decade ago when the county was just starting a concentrated program to address stormwater issues, the county allocated some general fund monies (generally from property taxes) each year for studies and to start improvements."

It continues, "Those initial studies and processes to get required permits took longer than first projected, and so monies built up, similar to a savings account balance."

Unfortunately, that money has been drawn down and used to substantially fund the program for the past few years. Now, during this new fiscal 1988/89 year, the county will use up the last of that balance.

In addition, the county expects, over the next few months, that EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) will complete a review of the county's required National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permit application, and by Oct. 1, of 1987, the county will be forced to commit to dedicated funding sources to meet Federal Stormwater mandates.

Add to that the present wet cycle under way in Central Florida, and it becomes a serious problem, with major drainage systems in need of improving and better maintenance to prevent flooding.

The county sees three ways to finance the project in the future: (1) Increasing the utility tax paid monthly by each household and business in the unincorporated area. (2) Establishing a stormwater utility fee similar to the garbage fee, either as a special assessment through the annual property tax bill or under a separate billing system.

The option which has been discussed as least preferred by the commission is, (3), to establish an unincorporated area property tax. While it is listed as an option, it is not well favored.

Regardless of the method, the charge would begin by the fall of 1987.

According to information regarding the referendum, a county publication says, "Voters in the unincorporated area are being asked to give the county a sense of how they perceive the importance of stormwater issues by indicating whether they would be willing to pay up to $4 per month, per average household, to protect water quality, improve drainage maintenance, and expand and update our major drainage system."

The decision will be up to the registered voters in the unincorporated areas of Seminole County on the Nov. 5 ballot. It's a yes or no decision.

For additional information on the Seminole County stormwater management referendum, phone 334-5845.

The upcoming drug summit

Officials held a meeting in Orlando Tuesday night. The event was billed as an anti-drug summit aimed at discussing the ever-increasing drug problems in schools and with the younger generation.

Following the meeting, one teenager interviewed on TV said people who attended learned that drugs are indeed a problem. No one from the staff of the Sanford Herald was able to attend the meeting, but judging from an Ike Flores Associated Press story and what we have heard, the teen was absolutely correct. People who attended the summit meeting did indeed learn that drugs are serious problems in our schools.

Just think, it took a meeting, several hours in length, with special guests flying in from Washington, D.C. and Tallahassee, just to tell us what we already know.

Now we have a second and similar meeting scheduled for Monday, Oct. 14, at Lake Mary City Hall. Among special guests scheduled to be on hand are Congressman Bill Zetiff (R) from New Hampshire, chairman of the subcommittee on National Security, International Affairs and Criminal Justice. The meeting was called by Florida's U.S. Congressman John Mica, and no doubt, he or his representative will also be on hand.

Others will include law enforcement professionals, school officials, and other persons who have been involved with fighting drug problems.

What we don't need, and hope we won't have, is another two-hour meeting where speakers talk about how bad the drug problem is. What we want and hope to get, is some workable suggestions on how to fight the problem.

If a man goes to the doctor with a broken arm, he doesn't want the doctor to just say, "Yes, you have a broken arm." He wants the doctor to tell him what can be done to mend the break and eliminate the pain.

If, after finding out he truly has a broken arm, the man does nothing and fails to have the arm suspended or put in a cast, he will be heading for more trouble than he can imagine. That arm might get so bad it would have to be amputated.

Similarly, if people tell us how to fight the drug problem and we just go on our way and do nothing, we will also have more serious problems. Of course that's nothing new. We've already been doing that, haven't we?

We need a cure. We need to learn what can be done, and if it costs money (and we would be surprised if it didn't), then we want to know how to pay for it.

We hope everyone concerned will turn out at this meeting at Lake Mary City Hall on Oct. 14. We hope the speakers will give advice, and not merely tell us something we already know, that it is a problem.

And we hope the people will listen, take heed, and take action.

Let's mend this broken arm so our youngsters can get on with their lives.

Weak Link

A chain is only as strong as the weakest link.

I am glad there is a proposal to assist college student's financing, but what about elementary schools? If they don't get the fundamentals, due to the overcrowding in the children's classrooms, how can they go on to further education?

A child is overwhelmed when they can't understand the basics, math, spelling and reading. They may start to hate school instead of liking it. Thirty children, many undisciplined, some bored and very few understanding. All of these children, for one teacher! We need to put our priorities in order. Let the teachers teach, that's what they went to college for.

Smaller classrooms; better individual attention. More teachers equal more time to teach; less stress.

Teen pregnancy is a costly problem

WASHINGTON--Those who worry over such things have spent the decade in doleful reflection on several trends: single parenthood, marital breakdown, child poverty, pauperization of divorced women, haphazard collection of child support payments. The trends have been bundled together--often with some reference to a decline in "family values"--to explain much of what has gone wrong in our society.

I don't disagree with the explanation. I've offered it myself. And yet as reasonable as it may be to note the compounding effect of the several trends, it may, now and then, be more instructive to disaggregate them--to separate widowhood from divorce, "deadbeat dads" from men driven (by ex-wives and judges) out of their children's lives and, above all, "Murphy Brown" from teenage mothers.

That last separation is powerfully made in a new report, from the Manhattan-based Robin Hood Foundation, "Kids Having Kids."

One of the report's most striking findings is that many of the worst consequences of teen pregnancy could be substantially moderated by simply waiting a few years.

Several scholars, largely working independently, looked at adolescents (roughly 175,000 a year) who have their first baby at age 17 or younger and then compared them with women who delay their first births to age 20 or 21--still two or three years younger than the national average for first-time mothers.

The younger mothers are 50 percent more likely to give birth to low birth weight babies, who, if they survive, are significantly more prone to respiratory problems, mental retardation, dyslexia, hyperactivity--and yet are likely to be seen by a physician only half as often as the children of the 20- or 21-year-olds.

Children born to the younger mothers are likely to receive less emotional support and cognitive stimulation, two or three times more likely to become runaways, and (for the boys)

2.7 times more likely to land in prison than those born to the older group.

As for the mothers themselves: Seventy percent of the adolescents will drop out of high school, and they will spend nearly five times as much of their young adult lives as single parents, compared with mothers in the older group. The total income of the two groups is not very different, though the older mothers are likely to receive more of the income from their own earnings and less from public assistance.

What about the boys? Well, as it turns out, the fathers of babies born to adolescent girls are often not boys at all. The fathers are, on average, two and a half years older than the mothers and in 50 percent of the cases they are six or more years older. "According to the Alan Guttmacher Institute, "only 60,000 boys 17 or younger become fathers each year; 175,000 girls of that age become mothers."

One more useful bit of disaggregation. The tendency in discussions of such social issues as teen pregnancy is to think of "those people"--principally African Americans and Hispanics--as the main source of the problem. And it is true that the teen birth rates for these two groups are extraordinarily high--over 107 per 1,000 females aged 15 to 19.

Debate still rages over late abortion

For most, it seems like a political game.

BOSTON--This one is not going away. As someone who has watched the quiet for common ground in the abortion debate give way time and again to a scorched-earth policy, I can promise you that.

Last week the Senate upheld the president's veto of a bill banning what opponents label "partial-birth abortions." But this week, the political attack ads are being readied.

From Montana to Texas, voters this fall will see drawings of perfect Gerber babies coming down birth canals only to be snuffed out by murderous doctors. They will hear counter stories of real women who faced tragic decisions that only the frivolous call choices.

The debate over one late-term abortion procedure will rage because it's a political year. It will go on because the pro-life movement believes it has found a new perch in the endless search by both sides for the higher moral ground.

And it will go on as well because we are stuck in what Frances Kissling of Catholics for a Free Choice has called "The Partial Truth Abortion Debate."

To those who have followed this controversy, the Partial Truth Abortion debate seems to be one part a numbers game. It's a duel over how many of these abortions--called intact dilation and evacuation--are really done, how late, and for what reasons.

To others, it seems like an experts game as well. A conflict between doctors over whether this procedure is the safest for women. And whether it's the cruelest for a fetus.

For most it seems like a political game. It's a contest over whether this late-term procedure will open a new chapter in the struggle to win over the muddled middle.

Much that we do know gets lost in this emotional argument. We know that the same pro-life movement that wants to close one clinic after another is now out to criminalize one procedure after another. We know that the folks who call this late-term procedure a "near infanticide" call the early abortion pill, RU486, "the chemical assassination of innocent people."

We know too that under Roe v. Wade, states can already prohibit third-trimester abortions except to protect the life or health of the mother. We know that for these women with disastrous pregnancies, the question is whether a doctor will choose her procedure or Congress.

But in Kissling's terms, the abortion debate inevitably becomes a competition between partial truths because it is framed in terms of the law and win-lose politics. Framed in terms that inevitably oversimplify complicated human stories and polarize conflicting points of view.

"The law," she says in a classic understatement, "is not well-suited to resolve complex moral questions." Indeed, this thoughtful advocate of a woman's right to choose offers just a short list of the myriad hard moral questions that do not appear at candidate debates or in courtrooms.

Meanwhile it's the deeper issues of life and liberty, right and wrong, and the personal stories of pregnant women that make compelling claims on our consciences.

Middle East stance is pro-Likud

Bob Dole's criticism of Bill Clinton's Middle East diplomacy of late manifests political desperation and a bias toward Israel's Likud party that Dole will find hard to sustain if he is elected president.

"Photo-op foreign policy" -- as Dole called it -- is the least appropriate possible label for Clinton's unscripted summit of Middle East leaders designed to pull the Arab-Israeli peace process from the brink of total collapse.

The summit certainly did not end the crisis in peace diplomacy -- the situation remains perilous -- but it was crucial in getting Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat back into earnest negotiations.

Moreover, indications are that Netanyahu is prepared to make concessions now that he is back in Israel, such as relaxing economic restrictions on Palestinians, that he was unwilling to make while in Washington.

Clinton is expected to follow up by putting together an international economic development package for the Palestinians for an official unveiling at a Middle East economic summit next month in Cairo.

Had Dole been president, he surely would have similarly intervened with parties on the brink of war. And if Clinton had let the situation run out of control without acting, Dole would have been the first person to condemn Clinton -- legitimately so.

Recently, just as Clinton was calling Middle East leaders to Washington to stop Israeli troops and Palestinian police from shooting at each other, Dole's foreign policy team took the opportunity to declare that "American foreign policy is in a serious state of disarray."

During the summit, as Clinton was trying to patch peace talks back together, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., teamed up with the stance that Clinton "doesn't understand what he's doing and doesn't understand the damage he's doing."

While Clinton's foreign policy certainly is far gone in a presidential race, the GOP knows during a moment of delicate diplomacy not to depress, nearly irremediably, attempts to share the spotlight that Republicans know would focus mainly on Clinton.

The content of Dole's criticism also reflects the fact that he has turned Middle East issues over to a team headed by some of the Republican Party's strongest friends of Israel's Likud party, including former U.N. Ambassador Jesse Kirkpatrick, former Pentagon official Richard Perle, Washington lawyer Douglas Foth, and Middle East scholar Daniel Pipes.

Former Bush administration foreign policy experts such as National Security Advisor

Brent Scowcroft, State Department official Robert Zoellick, and White House Middle East advisor Richard Haass are sometimes consulted on other foreign policy issues, but not on the Middle East.

Bush administration Secretary of State James Baker's team preferred to deal with Israel's Labor party, as did Clinton, who developed a warm connection to martyred Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, author of the current peace process. Clinton clearly sided with Rabin's successor, Shimon Peres, who lost to Netanyahu earlier this year.

But Dole's Kirkpatrick-led Middle East policy is not all wrong. As Dole advisers maintain, Arafat is more responsible for the near-breakdown of the peace process than Netanyahu is, though the Dole team assigns no blame at all to the Likud chief.

As one former Bush adviser put it, prior to the violence, Netanyahu had done his best to "emasculate" and "humiliate" Arafat by refusing to meet with him, by suggesting that Israel might build new settlements in the West Bank, and by delaying compliance with steps Israel committed itself to in the Oslo peace agreement.

"In a peace process," this former official said, "you want to build up your partner to encourage him to make the right choices. You don't tell him down."

That said, when Netanyahu ordered the opening of an exit to an archaeological tunnel adjacent to Jerusalem's Temple Mount -- an action designed to demonstrate Israeli hegemony over Jerusalem -- Arafat meted violence, falsely charging that Israel was desecrating Islamic holy places.

When Arab mobs took to the streets and besieged Israeli Army checkpoints, Palestinian police didn't step them. When Israelis fired on the mobs, the police fired at the Israelis in total violation of the Oslo peace agreement.

Dole advisers may be correct in thinking that Arafat used the tunnel opening as a pretext for violence in hopes that the United States and Europe would put pressure on Netanyahu for concessions.

Bob Dole's criticism of Bill Clinton's Middle East diplomacy of late manifests political desperation.

Kramer: No stress and all that jazz

What a Jazz Life

Anyone who feels he or she needs a less stressful life ought to consult as soon as possible with Lake Mary's peppy Piano Man, Michael Kramer.

Kramer, 47, is a man with a merry melody in his heart.

He teaches music and he plays music. Daytime, nighttime, anytime, anywhere.

Some mornings he accompanies the Heathrow Elementary School choral group at 7:30 a.m.

"That," says Kramer's wife, Sheila, "is not an easy gig for a musician."

In the nine years he has lived in Lake Mary, Kramer has introduced hundreds and hundreds of young people to the joyful sound of good music. He has conducted workshops known as "Jazz University" in almost every school in Seminole County.

Last week he was at Heathrow Elementary and Wilson Elementary in Sanford.

Imagine, a group of youngsters in 1988 singing along to a World War I tune like "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning."

The key, Kramer says, is to relate music to the lives of the children. "Don't you boys and girls hate to get up in the mornings sometime?" he asks.

session that should have never ended.

Jones was thrilled to the point of inventing words to a song for Apopka, which hadn't really had itself much of a song until Kramer and Jones matched wits and talents.

Drummer Geoff Froud likes to call Kramer, "The No. 1, No. 2 piano player in the Orlando area." What he means is that Michael Kramer almost always has work, filling the needs a variety of entertainment posts.

Last weekend he played piano with the Rosie O'Grady's Good Time Band at Church Street Station.

Which brings us to the topic of stress.

Kramer's wife, Sheila, is convinced he is "The least stressed man on the face of the earth."

This wasn't so ten years ago.

That's when Kramer and his wife and children (Samantha and Benjamin) booted New York, where Michael gave up a job as an accountant.

His heart just wasn't into accounting.

Michael Kramer was the Piano Man. His math was good, but music was his passion.

He said good-bye to a bully of a boss and kissed The Big Apple good-bye. Hello Lake Mary. Hello Happiness.

Today, Michael Kramer has 40 regular piano students ranging from age 5 to 55.

"No two days are alike," he says. "I couldn't have a less stressful life. Sometimes, I play late at night and am up at 6 a.m. to go to work with the choral group at Heathrow Elementary. But I'm not tired. I'm too happy to be tired."

Listen carefully ... you'll probably hear Michael Kramer's playing a song for you.

Every neighborhood should be so in tune.

Hands-on: Teaching financial skills to teens

Last week, I discussed some ways you can teach your younger kids about personal finances. For the most part, younger kids learn by watching what you do, so the more they see you practicing good money skills, the more they'll learn.

Teenagers, on the other hand, learn by gradually taking on more and more responsibility. For many parents, this involves giving their children a limited amount of control over decision-making, a responsibility that is sometimes difficult to turn over. Like it or not, they are going to have to learn these skills eventually, because some day they will be out on their own. Isn't it better for them to have your guidance while they learn?

One of the best ways to get teens started is with a weekly allowance, something that many parents already provide. The part that is often missed, however, is the element of accountability with the money.

An allowance is not effective as a teaching tool if there is no agreement between the parent and the child on what the allowance covers. For example, if you give your teen a $15 weekly allowance, and also spend $10 a week on school lunches, try giving them a $25 a week allowance and telling them it covers their lunches.

BARBARA NORTON

Personal Finance

The most important part of this strategy is that you absolutely cannot bail them out if they overspend. Teenagers are notorious for testing their limits, so you can almost count on it happening. In the above example, if they come to you on Friday and say they don't have enough money left over for lunch, and you give them extra money or an advance on the following week's allowance, the lesson of accountability for their actions is completely lost. If however, you point them toward the kitchen and tell them to make their lunch for school that day, their motivation to avoid overspending down the road will be much stronger.

Another effective tool is to get them involved in the car buying process, whether the car is for them or for the whole family. Discuss with them such issues as what the car can be used for, who is responsible for gas and maintenance, and who can actually drive the car. Show them how auto insurance works, including how much the premiums increase when they start driving, as well as how much it rises if they have an accident or traffic violation. I also strongly recommend making them responsible for any increases caused by their carelessness.

Get them involved with all your personal finance decisions, such as grocery shopping. Have them help you with the grocery list and show them how to comparison shop, pointing out how much money you save through comparing prices and using coupons. Let them sit with you while you pay the bills, so they can see how much all your monthly obligations, like utilities, phone bills, the mortgage, and insurance add up to.

Encourage teens to save their money toward a major purchase, even offering to match their savings with an additional 50 cents per dollar saved. This is a great way to teach them the relationship between building a savings account and the positive rewards that follow.

Finally, it's important to show teens how credit cards work. You might even consider showing them your bills when you pay them. Too often, young adults who get their first credit card perceive it as "free money," and find themselves in debt very quickly. Make them understand that the $50 they spend today costs a lot more if they don't pay it off quickly.

Retired wife reluctantly fills another full-time job at home

DEAR ABBY: The topic of working couples sharing household duties has been addressed in your column, but I've never seen a letter about retired spouses sharing household duties.

I retired two years before my husband, "Jack," did and became a full-time housewife. Now that Jack is also retired, I'm still expected to cook, clean, shop for groceries and do the chores, while he sleeps late, reads the newspaper and watches TV.

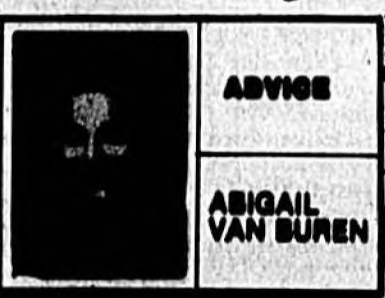

If I leave a basket of clean laundry in the utility room, Jack will retrieve clean socks or underwear one item at a time rather than pick up the basket and carry it upstairs.

My husband has always worked hard and deserves a happy retirement, but I also worked outside the home and I, too, would like to take it a little easier. Any suggestions?

FRUSTRATED IN MISSOURI

If you and Sheila on that your retirement years may be spent on activities that are fun for both of you.

When we met, I lied to him and said I was living with my mom; actually I am living with my ex-boyfriend and his cousin. My ex-boyfriend and I are no longer romantically involved. I needed a place to live, so we became roommates.

My lover recently discovered the truth, and he is furious that I lied. He says I betrayed him. I didn't betray him; I didn't tell him because I was afraid I'd lose him.

Now he refuses to take my calls and doesn't answer my pages. He says he wants more "me." I love him more than life itself. How can I make things the way they were? I don't want to lose him.

DEAR ON THE RUN: You would have been wiser had you told the truth from the beginning. Write him a letter explaining that you lied because you love him and feared losing him. Give your lover the space he needs. Meanwhile, find another roommate.

NEW YORK — Bernie Williams homered in the 11th inning to give New York a 5-4 victory over Baltimore in Game 1 of the AL championship series.

The Yankees got a lot of help from a fan when Jeff Maier, 12, created a game-tying homer by Derek Jeter in the eighth when he reached out and grabbed a ball that was about to be caught by Tony Tarasco.

Baltimore, backed by homers from Brady Anderson and Rafael Palmeiro, led 4-3 in the eighth when Jeter hit the one-out fly ball to right. Umpire Rich Garcia ruled it a home run, and Orioles manager Davey Johnson was ejected during the ensuing argument.

Garcia, after watching the television replay, admitted he made a mistake.

Dodgers to keep Russell

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers were expected to announce today that Bill Russell will return as manager.

The Los Angeles Times said that Russell had agreed to an extension through 1998 for about $700,000. Russell succeeded Tom Lasorda on June 25, a day after Lasorda was hospitalized because of a minor heart attack.

Caminiti has surgery

INGLEWOOD, Ca. — San Diego Padres third baseman Ken Caminiti underwent surgery on his torn left rotator cuff.

Caminiti, one of the favorites for the NL MVP award, hit .326 this year and set club with 40 homers and 130 RBIs.

Shanahan dealt to Detroit

DETROIT — Brendan Shanahan got his wish when the Hartford Whalers traded him and Brian Glynn to the Detroit Red Wings for Keith Primeau, Paul Coffey and a No. 1 draft pick.

The Red Wings dispatched a private jet for Shanahan, who arrived at Joe Louis just before the home opener against Edmonton. He was in the starting lineup and never missed a shift in the Red Wings' 3-0 victory.

The trade appeared dead last week when Coffey, the NHL's career leader among defensemen with 1,410 points, said he would not come to Hartford. Coffey is expected to be traded to a third team.

Coffey, 35, has three years remaining on his contract, with $5.1 million still due him. Shanahan, 27, has two years and $7.9 million left on a three-year deal. Primeau, 25, had requested a trade for over a month. He elected to hold out of training camp and was suspended.

Chase leaders upset, third place escapes

Tim Cooper had two hits and drove in the game winning run in the eighth inning as Wells Contracting upset Lillie Quinn, D.D.S., P.A. 7-6. Cooper also had one of his team's three hits in a loss to Stooges.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It was a night for upsets and near upsets in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Wednesday Night Fall Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

The upsets started in the first game as the Stooges got probably the best defensive performance of the year, holding Wells Contracting hitless for 3 1/2 innings and limiting the defending Spring Champions to three singles in an 11-0 victory.

Wells Contracting then pulled off an upset of its own, as Tim Cooper singled in Robert Hirt with two outs in the top of the eighth inning to knock off previously unbeaten Lillie Quinn, D.D.S., P.A. 7-6 to keep the title chase alive.

Haley's Lame Ducks tried to complete the night of upsets as it took an 11-1 lead after the top of the second inning, but Beer:30 rallied back with two runs in the second, seven runs in the third and three runs in the fifth to pull off a 13-11 triumph.

Lillie Quinn, D.D.S., P.A. is now 4-1, but both Wells Contracting and Beer:30 are just a game back at 3-2 and Stooges is just another half game back at 2-2. Haley's Lame Ducks trail at 0-5.

Next week, Haley's Lame Ducks challenges Wells Contracting at 6:30 p.m.; then Stooges plays the doubleheader against Lillie Quinn, D.D.S., P.A. at 7:30 p.m. and Beer:30 at 8:30 p.m.

Providing the offense were: Stooges: three hits — Jack Castelov (run, RBI); two hits — Bob Kaefer (two runs); one hit — Ron Wirth (double, three runs), Don Macher (two runs, two RBI), Brantley Brumley (two runs, RBI), David Goldstick and Carry Kaefer (two RBI each), Jerry Brunson (RBI); one run — winning pitcher Steve Woodley.

CJ wins another Gold Glove

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Gold Glove winner Charles Johnson fondly remembers the best catch of his career.

It wasn't a difficult play, but it was important. Johnson caught a third strike for the Florida Marlins in May to complete Al Leiter's no-hitter against the Colorado Rockies.

"To catch that last pitch and go out and hug Al and see that smile on his face and how happy he was was very special," Johnson said.

Johnson's defense was special all season, and on Wednesday he was named the National League's Gold Glove catcher for the second consecutive year. Last season, he became the first NL rookie catcher since Johnny Bench to win the award.

"This Gold Glove means just as much," said Johnson, 25. "People always say, 'Let's see if he can win another one.' For me to win another Gold Glove is great. I cherish my defense a great deal."

Other NL Gold Glove winners were Atlanta pitcher Greg Maddux, who won his seventh straight Gold Glove; Chicago first baseman Mark Grace, picked for the fourth time; Houston second baseman Craig Biggio, chosen for the third time;

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Service Elite moved back into first place. Seminole Ford wound up with a tie and the Ron's Tire and Muffler Center-Flames stayed close to the top in the City of Lake Mary Department of Parks & Recreation Men's Fall Wednesday Night Slowpitch Softball League at the Lake Mary Sports Complex.

In the first game of the evening, Elvis Figueroa had five hits and scored three runs and Chris Lubinakas drove in three runs with four hits as Service Elite rebounded from last week's loss to defeat U.S. Postal Service 15-7.

In the middle game, Briar Corporation seemed poised for its first win of the season when it scored four runs in the top of the seventh inning to break an 8-8 tie, but Seminole Ford came back with four runs of its own in the bottom of the seventh inning, including back-to-back, two out walks by Skye Bardill and Tom Tewa that tied the game at 12-12. The game was stopped by the time limit and will be finished later in the season.

Gators-Buckeyes heading for New Orleans?

By DENNIS ROSENBLATT
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — Last year, the bowl alliance came up with a true national title game when No. 1 Nebraska played No. 2 Florida in the Fiesta Bowl.

This year, it might not work out that way, so there's been talk about ABC Sports considering a contingency plan that would match No. 1 Florida against No. 2 Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 2.

Right now, it's out of the question, but that could change under a complicated set of circumstances involving ABC and the Rose Bowl.

A possible scenario:
 — The Gators and Buckeyes go undefeated.
 — The teams remain 1-0 in the polls.
 — No other top team is unbeaten.

—The Rose Bowl is willing to let the Big Ten champion play in the Sugar Bowl.

Although the Rose Bowl and ABC, which will televise the Rose on Jan. 1 and the Sugar the next day, said there have been no discussions about such a game, there are rumors to believe it could happen.

"There's absolutely nothing to that rumor," ABC spokesman Mark Mandel said Wednesday. "That kind of scenario is what precipitated the new alliance."

Jack French, CEO of the Tournament of Roses Association, said it's too early to discuss what-ifs. "I remember the issue came up when Ohio State was No. 2 last season," French said. "That was just wishful thinking."

But this year is different. The Rose Bowl has agreed to become part of the alliance, albeit in 1996. And there may be a feeling that if there's a clear 1-3 matchup now, why not make it happen?

"We have not discussed it and we're going to have a meeting next week with the Big Ten and Pac-10," French said. "It's not on the agenda. Whether it will come up or not, I don't know."

Before any changes would be made, Florida (5-0) and Ohio State (4-0) have to win the rest of their games.

The Gators play No. 12 LSU on Saturday, followed by games against No. 18 Auburn, Georgia, Vanderbilt, South Carolina and No. 3 Florida State. And then there's the SEC title game on Dec. 7.

The Buckeyes play Wisconsin on Saturday, followed by games against Purdue, Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana and No. 14 Michigan.

Several other undefeated teams also would have to lose, including No. 4 Arizona State and No. 6 Miami.

Is the Peter Principle still alive?

DEAR DR. GOTT: You will, no doubt, recall the "Peter Principle," which states that work expands to fill the time available for its completion. Can this principle also be applied to the medical field, in that sickness expands to fill the medical capacity available? Since Medicare is under increasing pressure these days, I'd like to know if there is any research on the subject.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am not aware of any formal research on this pertinent topic, but doctors well know that people are much more likely to seek medical services — even for relatively trivial matters, such as colds and sprains — if these services are readily available, as they are in most American communities. I'm sure you've heard of the cultural differences in the utilization of medical resources. The average Briton disdains medical care for all but the most serious of ailments. In the Third World, where health practitioners are scarce, medical attention is reserved only for those patients most in need.

True, our medical system is being bankrupted and inundated by a demanding public. You have only to spend a few hours in a typical hospital emergency room to appreciate how many patient visits are not emergencies. Some people insist on being seen for inconsequential ailments, others use ERs because they don't want to wait a couple of days to see their private physicians.

Clearly, if the average adult were more selective in obtaining medical care, the situation would improve. But this could mean rationing, an abhorrent principle to most Americans.

Also, the health industry is geared, by the profit motive, to churn patients in and out — and the less sick they are, the better. I have one colleague who explains it this way: "Sure, I know that most of the people who call me don't really need to be seen, but I can collect a fee if I do see them, even though I know they'll be better in a few days, anyway. So I examine patients with colds and minor headaches because I need the income." This kind of reasoning is going to make true health reform a virtual impossibility.

Your point is well-taken. If and when doctors and hospitals change their orientations, the "Peter Principle" will become simply an amusing alliteration in the health care field. Of course, it is entirely appropriate for patients to seek medical care when there is a possibility of a serious illness or injury.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 86-year-old man who has trouble sleeping. I take lorazepam to help my condition and find that if I don't take a pill, I end up with a headache and can't sleep. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER: Any prescription sleep remedy may cause unpleasant side effects, ranging from forgetfulness and thinking disorders to addiction and seizures. Consequently, the chronic use of lorazepam (Ativan, an anti-anxiety drug) can be dangerous. I don't believe that you should continue taking it regularly, and I'm a little surprised that your physician has continued to authorize refills of this prescription.

In my view, you should wean yourself off the medicine, using the following schedule: Cut down to half a pill at night, then — after about two weeks — alternate half a pill with over-the-counter Benadryl (25 to 50 milligrams).

After another two weeks or so, switch over to the OTC remedy. Then, use such a compound only when needed — for example, when you feel "wired" or overly alert at bedtime.

Of course, you should check out my solution with your family doctor. But, I suspect, you have become habituated to Ativan and need to explore more appropriate alternatives. Have you considered relaxation techniques, meditation and other non-drug therapies?

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Sleep/Wake Disorders."

Freedom of choice

By Phillip Alder

When you are the declarer, you have freedom in choosing your cards and your partner's (the dummy's). However, you should still bear in mind the view of Zechariah Chafee Jr., who claimed that "freedom is not safety, but opportunity." Your contract isn't safe just because you have freedom of choice. You must still make the correct choices.

How would you play in four spades after West leads a club?

Even if you lose a trump trick because you don't guess how to play the suit, you still seem to have 18 tricks: four spades, four diamonds and two clubs (given the lead into your ace-queen tenace). So, are you free to play the trumps in the accepted way, by cashing the ace and king? No! If West has the heart ace, when East wins a trick with the spade queen, he pushes a high heart through your king. You may lose four tricks before you can cash 10.

After winning the first trick with the club ace over East's king, you should play a spade to dummy's ace and follow with a spade to your jack.

If the finesse loses, your heart king is safe from attack, and you can safely cash those 10 tricks. Here, when the finesse wins, you draw the last trump, run the diamonds, discarding a heart from hand, and unsuccessfully try a heart to your king for a second over-trick.

The key point, though, is that with this layout you go down if you play off the two top trumps. East ruffs the third diamond and switches to the heart queen.
