Woman rescued

SANFORD — A wall of a house had to be partially removed Sunday evening, in order to rescue a Sanford woman from her home at 1802 1/2 W. 13th Place. The woman's name was not revealed.

Sanford Fire Department Battalion Chief William Ellenburg said firemen were called when the woman reported smoke in her home. "It proved to be a burning mattress, which was causing smoke to fill the apartment," Ellenburg said. "She was having difficulty breathing and we decided to take her to the hospital."

Removing the woman from the building however, proved to be difficult because of her weight, which Ellenburg estimated at approximately 500 pounds.

"The stairway was too rotten to use, so we had to break open part of the wall and erect a ramp so we could remove her," he said.

By the time the woman was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital, she was reportedly feeling better, and was not admitted. She eventually was taken to the home of a relative.

The case has been turned over to HRS for additional investigation, because of the unsuitable living conditions found in the apartment.

"Right now we are looking into the cause of the fire," Ellenburg said, "and we have tentatively declared it as suspicious in origin."

Store owner robbed at gunpoint

SANFORD — The owner of a convenience store was robbed at gunpoint late Saturday. Cash and property valued at over $9,000 was reportedly taken.

According to police Commander Dennis Whitmire, Paresh N. Valdia, the owner of A&M Discount Beverage, 1419 Celery Ave., was exiting from the store with his son at approximately 9:27 p.m., when they were approached by two black males.

"Each of the two men were described as about six feet tall with slender builds, and wearing dark clothing and hoods," Whitmire said. "Each one of them reportedly had a small unknown type handgun."

"When they asked for the briefcase with the day's receipts," said Whitmire "Mr. Valdia reportedly refused, and they grabbed the case and fled east on Celery Avenue then south on Elliot Street."

A Nissan or Toyota type vehicle was reportedly seen leaving the scene a short time later.

"According to our reports," Whitmire continued, "the briefcase contained $8,900 in cash from the day's lottery receipts plus some personal papers, and a .357 Magnum handgun."

Whitmire said the gun, valued at $350, has been entered into the stolen property list.

Grand Romance back cruising St. Johns

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Persons regretting they didn't have an opportunity to cruise the St. Johns on the rivership Grand Romance, have another chance. The ship went back into service this past week.

"This is our peak season, said Romance Cruiselines President Nanci Yuronis, "and we just couldn't see leaving that large ship sitting at the dock."

gambling boat in Indiana fell through. "It just didn't work out," Yuronis said, "but that doesn't mean it's over. We have at least four other excellent offers to buy it, and we will be looking at those as well as possibly a new offer from the people who originally wanted it."

Had the ship sale been finalized, the Grand Romance would have left Sanford for a port in the Florida panhandle, where it would have been cut in half, and lengthened to double its present size. It was proposed to hold at least 900 gaming tables.

"We are looking at the numbers right now," she said. "We will be checking our cruise bookings, and if we have a smaller number, we will continue to use the white remodeled Romance. If the numbers continue like they have See Romance, Page 5A

COMA continues drive

Group wants funds to help improve park

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Concerned Organized Men in Action, (COMA) is continuing a drive to have a city park improved. A request for financial help is scheduled to come before the City Commission tonight.

The park is situated on Orange Avenue, at 7th Street. Located in a heavily populated residential area, the intent is to improve the park for use by younger children.

Bernard Mitchell, president of COMA, has reported that the group has raised $5,000 for the park improvements so far.

In a letter to City Manager Bill Simmons, Mitchell wrote, "As of this date we are approximately $13,000 short of our goal. Therefore, we ask that you please consider placing the cost of this project on the 1994 budget of the City of Sanford."

When the park refurbishing was first brought to the attention of the commission, there were indications that the city expected to spend possibly in excess of $17,000 for the work. Nothing however, has been formally approved.

In order to get the project moving at an earlier date, Mitchell is suggesting it be divided into two or three phases, with the first phase to be completed during the month of April.

Much of the money would be used for the purchase of equipment to be located at the park.

During a meeting between city staff members and COMA leaders earlier this month, several options were discussed. One would be to begin with a scaled down version of play activity, estimated at a cost of $5,201, which could later be enlarged.

Another option would be to install a bungalow with moving tunnels. The cost was listed as $4,576. Sanford Ground Maintenance Coordinator Howard Jeffries questioned if money might be saved should the city

Seafood company will pay settlement

TALLAHASSEE — A reduced settlement of $1.3 million will avoid forcing layoffs at a seafood company accused of defrauding the government, federal and company officials say.

"We're glad to get this chapter closed and move on," Gene Raffield, owner of Raffield Fisheries in Port St. Joe, said Sunday.

U.S. District Judge Lacey Collier ruled Sept. 23 the company owed $1.6 million, including penalties, for misusing a federal loan.

But Collier also wrote collecting that amount — triple the damages owed — could defeat the loan's purpose of helping the area's economy.

Raffield Fisheries is the Florida Panhandle city's second-largest employer with about 200 workers, and Collier said collection "undoubtedly would destroy a vital link in the lifeline of Gulf County."

The company borrowed $1.3 million from the Apalachee Regional Planning Council to rebuild after a fire destroyed his plant in 1985.

The U.S. Commerce Department provided $1 million, and the rest consisted of matching funds from Gulf County.

Group wants Saratoga to be museum

JACKSONVILLE — Backers say an effort to keep the USS Saratoga in Jacksonville as a museum may run out of steam without a formal group to take charge.

The Saratoga is scheduled to be decommissioned by the Navy on Aug. 20, ending a 38-year career with Mayport Naval Station as its home port.

"If we can get it downtown and get it in the (Jacksonville) shipyards or in a suitable site, there is no question it would be quite a tourist attraction," said Gib Dannehower, a Downtown Development Authority staff member.

But those involved say a formal organization must take shape and develop a museum plan quickly if the project is to have a chance of success.

"Within 45 days, if we don't know what direction we want to take, we're probably getting past the point of no return," said Charles Mares, vice president of the Jacksonville Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Project supporters will meet today with two consultants who have worked on other ship museums, and what they hear may determine if the project is worth pursuing, Mares said.

Museum supporters want to take possession of the ship before it leaves Mayport to be mothballed and eventually scrapped.

The Navy donates some ships to non-profit foundations, but officials have said they'd like to see a firm proposal for the Saratoga.

At least 10,000 people have signed petitions supporting the idea, but neither the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce nor city officials have decided whether to pursue the project.

Startup costs for some ship museums have reached millions of dollars, Dannehower said.

Deputies kill man who fatally shot others

TAMPA — Deputies killed a gunman after the man fatally shot his ex-girlfriend and her current boyfriend, officials and witnesses said.

The gunman shot his ex-girlfriend at least twice with a high-powered rifle late Sunday, deputies said.

Another man was fatally shot as he ran for help. He died at St. Joseph's Hospital early today.

Names had been released early today.

Hillsborough deputies Tim Lewis, Robert Williams and Louis Gorman were placed on administrative leave pending review of the shooting.

Sheriff's deputies arrived and confronted the shooter, ordering him to drop his weapon, a .30-30 pump-action rifle. The man refused, and, according to witnesses, deputies shot him about six times. He died at the scene.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Budget and tax cap, top topics

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Lawmakers, nearing the halfway mark in their eight-week session, will debate how much the state should spend and how to keep state spending from rising faster than Floridians' personal income.

Proposed $38 billion budgets for 1994-95 are slated for debate Thursday on both the House and Senate floors, after committee approval last week.

"I'm very pleased we have made this much of a good beginning," said Senate President Pat Thomas, D-Quincy.

"I think it's pretty good. It has no new taxes, no new fees, and it hits the right priorities," Senate Republican Leader Ander Crenshaw said of the Senate Appropriations Committee's proposal.

Crenshaw said the proposal should avoid a repeat of last year's standoffs between the Senate's 20 Democrats and 20 Republicans.

The deadlocks often featured then-Senate President Crenshaw opposing efforts by Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles to end tax exemptions or increase fees.

This time Thomas is Senate president, and Crenshaw said, "The governor's a lot different. Even Lawton Chiles has seen the light."

The budget proposals all stress crime fighting. They differ on how to pay for prisons.

Chiles proposed a 30-year bond borrowing arrangement to create space for 14,000 more inmates.

The House Appropriations Committee's version is similar, but it would cut interest costs by paying off the bonds in 15 years. The Senate panel's budget would pay cash rather than sell bonds — and add about 17,000 prison beds.

"We kind of shied away from bonding. That puts a heavier burden on future legislative bodies," Thomas said.

"I was prepared to use bonds if necessary, but I think there are adequate funds that we can pay cash. We're proving that we can live within our means," Crenshaw said. "It keeps prisoners in jail. I think that's the right priority."

Way Back When

Way back in the early part of this century so-called "Tom Thumb" weddings were very popular. Old timers will remember where the "name" Tom Thumb originated. He was at one time considered the smallest man in the world and for years appeared at the Hippodrome in New York City for the great exhibitor the "one and only" P.T. Barnum. This led to every kind of organization one could imagine producing "Tom Thumb" weddings with little children portraying the roles of grooms, brides, best men, maids and matrons of honor, ushers and whatever or whoever might be involved in such productions. The usual purpose was to raise funds for worthy causes but not always. Here is a picture of a "Tom Thumb" wedding held at the Southside Primary school March 13, 1931. In this photo (from left to right) are Buddy Angel, Virginia Chapman, Carolyn Rosier, Nancy Collum, Katherine Spencer, maid of honor Joyce Steele, groom Herbert Moreland, the bride, who unfortunately now is unknown, Charles Gormley, Katherine Wiggins, Valerie Wells. The next two participants are unknown, and on the end is Betty King. Behind this row of wedding party members is the minister, Walter Haynes. In front of the party is flower girl Ann Wiggins. Angel, brother of former Seminole County Superintendent of Public Instruction John Angel, is now deceased. Nancy Collum is now the wife of ex-Sanfordite, retired U.S. Army Colonel Walter Turner, residents of Tampa, and sister of Sue Collum, wife of E.C. Harper Jr. of Sanford. The Rosier lass played the role of a boy. Joyce Steele is now Joyce Sawyers of Sanford. Moreland, then known to his friends and classmates as "Fuzzy," became known as "Speed" when he later became a top-notch Navy fighter pilot and after that a well-known savings and loan executive before his untimely death. Also deceased is later businessman and grocer Charles Gormley. Ann Wiggins was Sanford's first lady for many years as the wife of Mayor Lee Moore. Haynes became a neurosurgeon and served for a number of years aboard the world-famed hospital ship "Hope."

Kerrigan at Disney: 'I was flawless'

By MIKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Nancy Kerrigan plunged into her lucrative future with Mickey Mouse at her side as thousands of fans turned out to cheer the Olympic silver medalist.

But after the blizzard of red, white and blue confetti and parade in the Magic Kingdom, Kerrigan took one more look back to criticize the judges of the figure skating competition, won by Oksana Baiul.

"I skated clean, and she had a few minor errors. ... They're supposed to take off points for that."

But Kerrigan said she was satisfied with her second-place finish behind the 16-year-old Ukrainian.

The 24-year-old figure skater from Stoneham, Mass., is under contract to the Walt Disney Co. and ABC to perform on television, make a Disney movie, participate in Disney's Easter and Christmas parades and do commercials.

Kerrigan said she skipped the Olympic closing ceremonies to come to the Magic Kingdom "just to have fun and relax. ... I got tired of the cold weather, and there was a lot of pressure. I wanted to go somewhere warm."

She and her family joined Mickey Mouse aboard an old-fashioned fire truck at Cinderella's Castle and paraded slowly down Main Street to the cheers of theme park visitors.

"She's my hero," said 7-year-old Wally Ormond.

Ned Glickner said he had planned to return home to Boston on Sunday, but when he heard Kerrigan was coming, he changed his plans.

"She's one of ours, you know," Glickner said. "She's quite a heroine there now, and I guess all over."

Researchers keep watch on old-growth forest

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — The secret preserve that contains some of the Southeast's last remaining old-growth forest is silent except for the occasional twittering of birds and the rustling of wind through gnarled pine boughs.

Known as the Wade Tract, the 200-acre forest is one of only a handful of sites in the Southeast that has remained virtually unchanged since at least the early 1500s when Spanish explorer Hernando DeSoto explored the region.

"Without this site and perhaps two or three others that begin to approach it in quality, we have no way to assess how far our managed lands have diverted" from their natural state, said Sharon Hermann, a plant biologist at the Tall Timbers Research Station, which manages the preserve. "This is the site that probably comes closest to approximating what DeSoto saw."

The Wade Tract has about 400 plant species, including wiregrass, small oaks and 350-year-old longleaf pine trees. It is a home for about 60 species of mammals, reptiles, amphibians and birds, including five colonies of endangered red-cockaded woodpeckers.

Scientists from Tall Timbers, a privately funded research group near Tallahassee, Fla., are learning about the plants and animals that lived in old-growth forests. They also are studying the effects of forest fires, an essential element of the ecology.

Knowledge gained at the preserve could be used to restore public and private lands to a more natural state and to create future land-management guidelines.

When Europeans began colonizing North America in the 1600s, there were an estimated 60 million to 70 million acres of longleaf pines in the coastal plain, an area stretching from the Carolinas to Texas.

But now, because of logging, farming and urbanization, only about 2,000 acres of old growth — only about three square miles — survive, said Todd Engstrom, a Tall Timbers ornithologist.

"It's one of the most endangered ecosystems in the Southeastern United States," Engstrom said. "This is one of the few places where it is still in a relatively natural state and we can study it."

Burglary charges filed

Sam Vendul Stafford, 38, who described himself as "homeless" was charged with burglary and grand theft by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Police said on Jan. 30 or 31, a jewelry store located on Park Avenue in Sanford was burglarized and about $500 worth of jewelry was taken.

The police report revealed that Stafford was the one who broke into the business. Police said Stafford admitted to the crime when questioned.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Kenneth Everett "Chipper" Mathews Jr., 25, 334 S. Country Club Rd., Lake Mary, was charged with burglary to a dwelling dealing in stolen property and two counts of grand theft by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said that on Feb. 2, he allegedly entered a home in the 1900 block of West 3rd Street in Sanford by prying a window open. Once inside he allegedly took property and cash valued at over $300.

Police said he allegedly used the money to buy drugs and he had pawned the property.

Police said that on Feb. 11, he had allegedly taken $1,500 in $50 bills from a bank envelope in his girlfriend's purse at her home in the 2500 block of Oak Avenue in Sanford.

He was arrested at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he had been returned on other unrelated charges.

He was held on $6,000 bond on the most recent charges.

Robert Donald Greenwald, 21, who gave his address only as Cutler Road, Longwood, was charged with burglary and theft by Altamonte Springs Police on Friday.

Police said he and a friend, identified as Sean Nigel Thompson, 19, had gained access to a neighbor's apartment through the attic between the two residences. They had allegedly cut a hole through the fire wall separating the two apartment attics.

Through the air conditioning vents, there was visual access to the neighbor's bathroom and bedroom, police said.

While the neighbor was out-of-town, police said, Greenwald and Thompson allegedly gained access to the neighbor's apartment through the attic and took a bra and several pairs of pants.

Greenwald was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $5,000 bond. Arrest information was not available on Thompson.

Battery, domestic violence charged

Katherine Michelle Brown, 23, and David Thomas Cranston, 25, both of 209 Pheasant Run Ct., Longwood, were charged with battery-domestic violence on Saturday by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Deputies reported the two had been drinking at a bar and had started fighting.

Upon returning to their residence, deputies said they started to physically assault one another.

According to the deputies report there were broken chairs in the living room and furniture had been thrown around.

Both were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500 bond each.

Disorderly conduct charged

Vincent James Nasca, 20, 500 Airport Blvd., Apt. 1214, Sanford, was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages by a juvenile and disorderly conduct by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Police said they had warned a group of minors who had been found drinking outside the apartments at 500 W. Airport Blvd. in Sanford.

Police said Nasca was found banging on the door at apartment 1214 and making a great deal of noise.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Marijuana possession

Adelmo Michael Tafuya, 25, 130 Bedford Ct., Sanford, was charged with possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia by Sanford Police on Friday.

Responding to anonymous tips of drug use at the residence, police asked Tafuya if they could search his residence, the report said. With his permission, police searched and found a bag of a substance that tested positive as marijuana.

Police said they also found assorted pieces of drug paraphernalia.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Trespassing arrests made

Richard Author Wagner, 34, 3202 S. Orlando Dr., Sanford, was charged with resisting arrest and trespassing by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said they had tried to stop Wagner to question him about a recent burglary. Instead of talking to the police he ran from them and hid under a utility trailer near a home.

Police said the resident of that home told them he did not have permission to be on the property.

Wagner was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Daryl Craig Tate, 35, 110 W. 13th St., Sanford, was charged with trespass after warning by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said he was causing a disturbance at a residence on William Clark Court in Sanford.

The resident of that address had already signed a trespass warning against Tate, he was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Man charged in slaying has long criminal history

By Associated Press

ODESSA, Texas — Former prosecutors say a former Odessa man accused in a fatal stabbing in Florida is proof some criminals can't be rehabilitated.

Arturo Urias Patino, convicted of five Odessa robberies, stands accused of fatally stabbing a man in Lee County, Fla.

After a massive cross-country chase, Patino was arrested in California and subsequently has been returned to Florida, where he awaits trial.

"He's one of those individuals which, no matter how much jail or penitentiary time there is, he never is going to rehabilitate," said Anthony Foster, a former Ector County assistant district attorney.

"He's as bad as ever came out of Odessa," said Dennis Cadra, another ex-prosecutor.

Allen James Meyer died in a pool of blood last month at a Florida children's party after he was stabbed in the neck. Meyer, 51, was killed after he and Patino, 30, allegedly had an argument.

Patino's story begins with a 1983 convenience store robbery in Odessa.

At a pretrial hearing after that robbery, David Slaughter, a clerk who was robbed at the store, positively identified Patino, but was killed before he could testify.

Patino's older brother, Daniel Patino, robbed the same store shortly after the pretrial hearing. Slaughter, armed and prepared for a robbery, had a shootout with Daniel Patino. Both died.

Patino was convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison. He received added prison time in four other robberies, but was paroled in December 1987.

Within a year Patino was back in jail, accused of killing police informant Joseph Lee Jimenez. Those charges eventually were dismissed, but in May 1990, he was sentenced to three years in prison and a $500,000 fine for another convenience store robbery.

Botched postal stings reported elsewhere

By Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A botched postal sting in Cleveland resembled operations in at least five other U.S. cities in the past 10 years, The Plain Dealer reported Sunday.

Almost 100 postal employees were unjustly accused in stings in Los Angeles, West Palm Beach, Minneapolis, Boston, Saginaw, Mich., and other cities, the newspaper said.

Cleveland postal inspectors admitted they wrongly charged 20 people in an undercover drug operation last year in what they called an isolated problem.

But the newspaper said that in several other probes where drugs were bought, paid informants allegedly hounded and threatened postal workers for months to agree to sell them drugs. Some of the informants had criminal records.

For example, 12 Los Angeles postal workers were accused in 1987 of drug offenses by an informant who turned in phony or low-quality drugs after alleged transactions that postal inspectors never witnessed. The Plain Dealer said.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee planned to hold a hearing on Monday on a 1986 sting that resulted in charges against 19 workers in West Palm Beach.

The workers were charged with drug trafficking based on the word of Robert Gilbert, who had a criminal record for burglary, forgery, breaking and entering, grand larceny and other crimes.

Four employees were acquitted and the prosecutor dropped the rest of the cases, but the post office refused to reinstate the workers. A series of arbitrators sided with the fired workers and placed them back on the roll.

Rep. William L. Clay, D-Mo., chairman of the House committee, said the Postal Inspection Service put felons in the post office to trap innocent workers because they "were more interested in arrest statistics than the well-being of postal workers."

The inspectors are under pressure to produce arrests, yet have as little as a week's worth of training in narcotics investigations, said John Gibbons, a former assistant U.S. attorney who represents a worker in the Cleveland case.

"The Postal Inspection Service has no business being in these types of cases," Gibbons said. "They're ripe for disaster. You're dealing with informants who are untrustworthy and have their own motivations."

The newspaper said the inspection service refused to respond to questions about its undercover drug investigations, including training and the amount of money spent on probes. The service is the law enforcement arm of the U.S. Postal Service and gets its money from postage.

John Brugger, a spokesman for the Washington headquarters of the Postal Inspection Service, said Sunday night that the faulty arrests over a 10-year period cited by the newspaper were small compared with the agency's 15,000 overall criminal arrests last year. "The thrust of our interest is not to make arrests, it's to keep the postal service drug-free. That's our objective," he said.

All inspection service arrests are reviewed by federal prosecutors and grand juries, he said. "It's not a process we control."

Frank Brennan, a Postal Service spokesman, said the enforcement helps the agency protect its employees and the integrity of the mail.

"We want to provide all of our employees with a safe working environment," he said. "We don't want any illegality in our workplace and our employees don't either."

The service changed its program after the Cleveland operation, the newspaper said.

Now, inspectors not involved with the case review all employee drug investigations. Among other things, they also look for possible entrapment and make sure evidence includes more than the word of an informant.

GAINESVILLE — Extensive media coverage and inflamed emotions in the community make it impossible to pick an impartial jury to recommend a sentence for convicted killer Danny Harold Rolling, his attorneys claim.

"The court was made aware of the familiarity with the case among all potential jurors as well as their knowledge of inflammatory and prejudicial opinions prevailing in the courtroom and the community in general regarding death as the appropriate punishment," Public Defender Rick Parker wrote in a motion filed Friday for a change of venue.

Rolling, a 39-year-old Shreveport, La., drifter and career criminal, pleaded guilty Feb. 15 to five counts of first-degree murder, three counts of sexual battery and three counts of armed burglary for the August 1990 attacks on college students.

A hearing on the motion was scheduled for today by Circuit Judge Stan R. Morris. State Attorney Rod Smith said he will oppose any effort to move the penalty phase of Rolling's trial out of Alachua County.

Morris must rule on the motion before the second round of jury selection begins. If the judge denies Parker's motion, attorneys will begin more intense questioning a pool of 117 potential jurors.

If the motion is denied, officials expect to finish jury selection this week and begin hearing testimony March 7.

The heck with Monday...

He might have preferred to slip quietly down the backstairs, leaving his 34-year judicial career without any fanfare but his friends and courthouse workers wanted to wish him luck, good health and a long, happy retirement.

Eighteenth Circuit Court Judge Robert B. McGregor retired Friday after serving 34 years as a judge. Beginning as a part-time municipal court judge in 1960, McGregor was the longest serving active judge in the State of Florida when he retired, according to Information State Senator Gary Siegel (R-Altamonte Springs) obtained from the Florida Supreme Court. Siegel spoke at the Seminole County Bar Association meeting honoring the judge Feb. 18. McGregor became a circuit court judge in 1973.

The Herald also adds its thanks for his many years of dedicated public service.

McGregor has presided in thousands of cases through the years, including last year's abortion protesters case at the Woman Aware Clinic in Melbourne. The Florida Supreme Court upheld McGregor's ruling but the case is in a federal appellate court now and is on the way to the U.S. Supreme Court this spring.

Through the years, McGregor has presided in high profile criminal cases as well as civil cases, which have established case law. His civil court docket numbered about 1,300 cases.

At a luncheon Thursday, McGregor's long-time legal assistant Doris Brady told the judge the clock that courthouse employees gave him was a "continuing effort to keep you on time...even in retirement." Bar Association members presented him with a log-splitter at their luncheon.

The 63-year-old judge is looking forward to retirement, working on his home in Geneva and on a North Carolina mountain cabin he and his wife, Mona, recently purchased. Perhaps some traveling is in the picture, too.

In the future, McGregor may apply for senior judge status and he will be eligible to work on an on-call basis. For now, he deserves to relax and enjoy retirement.

As one of his cards stated: "Retirement is a time to look back over your accomplishments and say...The heck with Monday. I'm sleeping in."

Moms and cigarettes

Kids of pregnant moms who smoked probably do not have lower IQ's. However, this finding by university researchers (probably financed by a federal grant) does provide some grist for the anti-smoking mill. Newspaper readers must learn to read with understanding in order to get at the truth of this matter.

The second paragraph about this epic study clearly states that "women who light up while pregnant could be dooming their babies to lower IQs (emphasis added by me). "Could" does not mean will. Buried deep in this article also find that researchers "stressed that follow-up studies were needed" on this subject because of the small narrowly defined population used in the research. You cannot find a hard fact in a car load of anti-smoking press releases, but they make good headlines.

Such articles also give you non-smokers out there a smug feeling when they raise taxes on cigarettes. Let your ox get gored one of these days and let us see who will do the protesting.

Gay rights

As a frequent visitor to the beautiful state of Florida I'm saddened and upset to see that a movement has begun to take away civil rights protections of Florida residents who happen to be gay.

Supporters of the measure whine that they're not acting negatively against anybody. They claim that anti-discrimination laws give gay people special protection, above all others.

That's baloney and they know it. Such laws merely recognize that gays all too often are singled out and treated unfairly because of who they are. Laws to prevent discrimination aren't adopted to give them any additional rights, but to ensure that they have the same rights that everyone else takes for granted — the right to rent an apartment, the right to find a job and to be in other ways treated as equals.

I realize that fundamentalists and others believe homosexuality is sinful, but do they really think it is right for a boss to fire an employee for this reason alone? We should all be concerned about giving employers the right to invade our private lives like this. Would a fundamentalist religious person think it is right if his boss fired him for attending the "wrong" church?

Say what you please, but all gay people really want is the right to live a free and equal life like the rest of us, without discrimination.

Health plan is universal rationing

Hillary Rodham Clinton, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee last September, said that if the Clinton health plan creates "the kind of health security we are talking about, then people will know they are not being denied treatment for any reason other than it is not appropriate -- will not enhance or save the quality of life."

Treatment can be denied if it does not "enhance" the patient's "quality of life"? Where in the Constitution does the government derive the power to legislate what, in many cases, may be the end of life for those who do not meet these criteria in a future mandated federal health system? And who decides? The family, the physician or the housekeeper?

Indeed, although the debate over the Clinton plan has largely been about managed care, global budgets, regional health alliances and compelled employer insurance payments for their workers, the much more fundamental issue is whether the plan will result in rationing health care at various stages of life.

The president, not exactly a paradigm of credibility, has insisted that there will be no rationing. Eliminating waste and inefficiency in the health care system will ensure universal access to health benefits. But, as reported on

National Public Radio, in a study published in the journal Health Affairs, co-author Danny Mendelson concludes that after eliminating the costs of unneeded bureaucracy, unneeded care and excess profits, the total waste is only 1.5 percent of America's health care bill.

Once inefficiency and waste are eliminated, there will be no more cost savings on that score. Therefore, says Mendelson, there will have to be rationing. "A few years down the line," he says, "you first start to see what we call silent rationing, where the patients don't even know that they're not receiving the beneficial care that they need. Further down the line, I think it would become very clear that we were denying patients some of the latest technology in order to save money."

In Legal Times, moreover, George Kraw, an attorney who specializes in health care issues, has pointed out: "Economic realities dictate that the trade-off for universal health care coverage is a system of lesser capabilities that substitutes explicit rationing for today's hodge-podge of cost controls. The allocation of limited health care resources is an issue that will not go away and needs to be addressed as part of the debate on health care reform."

Members of Congress might consider exploring further what "appropriate" care will actually mean under the Clinton plan -- or the Cooper or the single payer plans. In The New Republic, Elizabeth McCaughey asks the question that the House and Senate ought to be asking:

"How much rationing based on cost effectiveness will we have to endure? When a kidney transplant is needed, will the patient's age matter, as it does in Great Britain, where older patients are routinely denied high-tech treatment? Will patients with advanced AIDS be entitled to intensive care?"

Fundamentalists threatening Egyptian tourism

WASHINGTON — Southern Egypt and South Florida are thousands of miles apart, yet both areas are seeing their tourist trade languish at the hands of armed locals.

Since the Islamic fundamentalist uprising against Egypt's moderate government began several years ago, the body count has remained low (approximately 300 deaths), and the fighting has taken place mainly in the southern regions of the country around the city of Assut. But since October 1992, Egypt's fundamentalists have upped the ante by threatening foreign tourists, beginning with an attack on a bus full of British tourists that resulted in one death.

Only two more tourists have died at the hands of fundamentalists since then, but continued threats of violence has U.S. Embassy officials in Cairo worried that Egypt is becoming unsafe for the annual 150,000 American visitors and 12,000 real dents.

Embassy officials are taking seriously recent faxed communications from the chief terrorist group, al-Gamaa Islamiya, threatening to escalate violence against foreigners. The first fax, on Feb. 2, demanded that foreigners leave in the face of "ferocious operations" planned by the group. A second fax explained that foreigners had become equated with the government as a target because they were supporting it.

Despite efforts by President Hosni Mubarak to soothe the Egyptian public, Egypt's $3 billion per year tourist trade dropped by nearly one-third last year, a devastating blow to a country sorely in need of the hard currency visitors bring.

Mubarak has even mobilized Egypt's famous royal mummies to help prop up the government. The mummies have not been at the Cairo Museum since 1980, but the government recently announced that the mummies will be on display again beginning March 2 in an effort to bring tourists back. However, it could cause the museum to become a target of the extremists, though it has previously been the site of only one bomb attack against a tourist bus.

Meanwhile, Egyptian security forces have cracked down on radical fundamentalists, and claim to have them on the run. In recent months, police have been rounding up greater numbers of extremists and jailing them to appease the international community and quell the civil war. Seven fundamentalists were hanged last June after being convicted of terrorist attacks on tourists.

But the government is hedging its policy by allowing the fundamentalists to censor and harass secular intellectuals, a prime target of Islamic attacks. In an almost schizophrenic move, Mubarak is actively placating Islamic fundamentalists who want to bring down the veil over secular art and media. The most visible and striking result, our sources say, is a quantum leap in the number of bodyguards employed to protect writers, singers, belly-dancers and others from attacks by fundamentalists.

Targeting intellectuals began in deadly earnest in 1992, when fundamentalists gunned down secular writer Farag Foda, who was prominent for his anti-fundamentalist views. The assassination was defended in court by Sheikh Ahmad Ghazal, who testified that the government should put to death "apostates" like Foda.

Sheikh Ghazal is not an isolated, fire-breathing fundamentalist. He is a senior official at the 1,000-year old Al Azhar University.

Both areas are seeing their tourist trade languish at the hands of armed locals.

Misdirected political reform

What are we to make of those two great national crusades for political utopia, the term limits campaign and the drive for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget?

The obvious answer is that they represent popular revulsion against congressional fecklessness and arrogance. Most of the $4 trillion national debt was incurred during the long boom period between 1983 and 1991. The people finally understand the irresponsibility that fueled the deficit spending binge and its enduring consequences. The amendment seems to offer permanent protection against both.

As for term limits, they represent a misdirected response to the demand for political accountability. Public fury about a host of issues has been channeled into a "throw the rascals out" crusade that makes no distinctions between the just and the unjust.

But what else can be said about these two tidal waves of reactionary populism?

That they cross party and generational lines? Certainly. That rather than being reflections of conservative instincts, they are the polar opposite, doing serious damage to centuries-old American practices and precepts? Absolutely. That they have made strange bedfellows? Without a doubt.

The history of this country is painfully clear about yet another point. Whenever you see a political stampede, you can usually bet the farm that the thundering consensus is meaningless, dangerous or both. In the case of term limits and of the balanced budget requirement, "both" is the right window for your wager.

A group of constitutional law experts recently made the case against the budget amendment in a public letter. Reaganites such as Robert Bork joined Kennedyites such as Yale Law School Professor Burke Marshall in voicing their belief that the proposed amendment would be "a serious mistake," as well as unenforceable, inflexible and unfair.

Basically, the amendment forbids unbalanced budgets except by super-majorities in Congress or in time of war. The push for the amendment follows the failure of the five-year congressional experiment with Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, which promised fiscal responsibility and delivered bipartisan hypocrisy, and on one level might be viewed as the triumph of hope over experience. In truth, however, it is little more than shameless posturing by politicians who know their stance is as popular as it is pointless.

Like Gramm-Rudman, the amendment would be promptly ignored in a crunch. Also like Gramm-Rudman, its chief effect right up to the moment it was ignored would be to restrict the ability of the federal government to adapt itself to changed economic conditions short of a crisis. The amendment would have the distinctly unconservative effect of inviting the courts to decide matters of fiscal and economic policy and the illiberal effect of severely constricting the government's ability to extend the social safety net in times of economic distress.

Current officeholders are less fond of the term limits idea, which has swept the nation like a flu epidemic. The objective is to cleanse the system of career politicians by fiat. The hope is that government without such politicians would be more responsive to the popular will.

The most likely effect, however, would be to tilt the political playing field still further against democratic accountability. Big government would not go away simply because legislators could no longer serve for more than 10 or 12 years in a row. On the contrary, the permanent bureaucracies would grow even stronger in relation to ever changing legislatures and Congress.

So would those vast private interests that feature so centrally in the workings of government today. You can be sure that General Electric and the AFL-CIO would not term-limit their lobbyists or periodically close their Washington offices. The power and influence of the thousands of Gucel-shod lawyers so decried by Ross Perot would be enhanced. The countless other private and public interest organizations that populate every state capital as well as Washington would become even more influential with the perpetual novices of the legislative branch.

The irony in all this is that turnover of significant proportions is already the rule in both the House and Senate. It is likely that by the time the 1994 elections are over, a large majority of those serving in both houses will have been there for less than 10 years.

What will not have changed, however, is the role of big money in federal elections and the effect it has on the nature of representation in Washington. Millionaires make up over half of the present Senate. Congressional candidates who spend the most win something like four out of every five elections, and much of the money comes from special interests.

But what else can be said about these two tidal waves of reactionary populism?

Kerrigan passes on trolls to spend time with mouse

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Silver medalist Nancy Kerrigan passed on the Norwegian trolls Sunday to spend some time with America's favorite mouse.

The figure skater skipped the Olympic closing ceremonies to come to Disney World, where she was honored with a parade and a blizzard of red, white and blue confetti.

She and her family — mom, dad and two brothers — joined Mickey Mouse aboard an old-fashioned red fire truck and paraded slowly down Main Street to the cheers of thousands of theme park visitors who had waited 1½ hours for the procession.

Kerrigan, who wore jeans, a warmup jacket, tennis shoes and her silver Olympic medal, waved and smiled to the crowd.

The truck was followed by a car carrying Minnie Mouse, and they were followed by the Disney marching band. Working the crowd were Pluto, Eeyore and Chip 'n Dale.

"She's America's sweetheart, that's why I'm here," said Mary Sherman, of La Grange Park, Ill. "I could stand here all afternoon and be perfectly happy to watch her go by. As long as she beat Tonya (Harding) that's what I wanted."

Kerrigan finished behind Oksana Baiul of the Ukraine. Harding placed eighth.

Before the competition, Kerrigan signed a seven-part deal with the Disney Co. worth a reported $2 million that includes a TV movie, personal appearances, a television special and a book.

The deal was part of Disney's "What's Next" campaign that has brought many sports personalities to the Florida theme park since 1987. She is the first Olympian.

Kerrigan left Norway on Saturday, flying into New York and then Orlando.

"I got tired of the cold weather, and there was a lot of pressure. I wanted to go somewhere warm," Kerrigan said.

Also missing from the closing ceremonies, which showcased Trolls and sprites from Norway's folklore, was Harding.

Harding's plans were not made public, but Elaine Stann, her fan club president, said Harding would be returning to Portland, Ore., on Monday.

Disney officials said Kerrigan might squeeze in some TV work before returning home to Stoneham, Mass., mid week.

"I'm a little tired, but this is pretty exciting," she told reporters after the parade.

She refused to answer questions about Harding, but she said she was satisfied with her second-place finish, which she called "flawless."

"Oksana, although she's a great skater and real nice to watch... did have a couple of mistakes."

Asked about her celebrity status, particularly since she was clubbed above her right knee in an attack before the U.S. national championships, she said: "I would hope the only reason they would be talking about me is because of the performance I gave at the Olympics, 'cause it was great. I was happy with it and proud of myself. But, you know, other circumstances were out of my control."

The house was sealed off to prevent injury to neighborhood residents or police personnel until the SWAT team arrived.

"About 4:17 p.m., one of our officers heard what could have been a shot... could have been a door slamming. Just some kind of sharp noise coming from inside the house," Whitmire said. "We were not sure what it was. During the next couple of hours, we tried continuously to raise contact by yelling into the house, and calling on the telephone."

The SWAT team, which was in charge of the scene, entered the house about 7:40 p.m. and found Mr. Connell lying in a hallway just outside a bathroom with a single gunshot wound to the head, the commander said.

"He was still alive at that point and he was transported to ORMC," Whitmire said. Connell died during the night. The medical examiner will conduct tests to see if the fatal wound was self-inflicted.

An investigation is continuing. Whitmire said police do not know what sparked the argument. The couple lived together for about one year, according to police investigators.

Three children, who lived with the couple, were not in the house during the disturbance. Dajune is seven months pregnant, according to police.

"HRS is cracking down," said McDonough. "The fathers are going to be made to fulfill their obligations."

The fathers were to be held without bond at the jail until their first appearance in court, which was to have been at the jail courtroom at 3 p.m. before Judge Samuel Benson.

Debi Roberts, Benson's

judicial assistant, had little information about the cases, but said that the court appearances would be no earlier than 3 or 3:30 Monday afternoon.

According to Joan Duke of the child support enforcement division of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS), the department had singled out 28 "hard core" cases in Seminole County of fathers who had been in arrears on their child support payments for "more than a couple of years."

She could not explain the discrepancy between the two figures.

"I don't know how they've narrowed down that list," she said.

Officials from the sheriff's office declined comment on the shortened list.

According to HRS officials, fathers who were delinquent on their payment of child support were also being taken into custody in Brevard, Orange, Osceola and Volusia counties this morning.

For several months, the larger ship has been berthed at the secondary area along the Lake Monroe waterfront, west of the marina area. It was recently returned to the docking area at the Monroe Harbour Marina where many of the fixtures which had been removed in anticipation of the sale, were placed back on board.

It was originally announced that as soon as the large ship was officially sold and no longer in Sanford, the Romance Cruise Line company would begin working on plans for an even larger ship to be docked in Sanford. It would have taken longer than a year to develop working plans and have the larger ship built.

"That's all on hold right now," Yuranis said. "But it is our hope to get back to that once we have arranged some type of deal for the sale of the Grand Romance."

In the meantime, both ships will continue to operate from Sanford on regular as well as special cruise outings.

California GOP kicks teachers union out of state convention

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

BURLINGAME, Calif. — Angry at the California Teachers Association's big contributions to Democrats, Republicans kicked the CTA out of their state conventions until the union increases its support of GOP candidates.

Delegates to the California Republican Party's annual spring convention also adopted a resolution Sunday condemning "the anti-Republican and anti-education attitudes, policies and activities of the leadership of the CTA."

The party's action came as the CTA hosted one of the convention's 25 hospitality suites, where teachers served ice cream and handed out CTA brochures supporting additional funds for schools.

In addition to the resolution condemning CTA leaders, the convention adopted, by a 468-to-217 vote, a bylaws change prohibiting the CTA from having a hospitality suite or exhibit at any future state GOP convention "until 40 percent of their political contributions are made to Republicans."

"The CTA is not interested in the education of our children,"

The CTA is interested in a power grab. It is time Republicans tell it like it is," said Assemblyman Richard Mounjoy of Monrovia, one of the principal sponsors of the bylaws change.

But not everyone agreed with the anti-CTA moves.

"This party needs to be an outreach party. We are making a big mistake voting in this type of rule," replied delegate Norman Jenkins of Sacramento.

Other resolutions adopted reaffirmed the party's opposition to spending tax dollars on abortions and opposing "preferential treatment" for AIDS victims.

According to development plans, an existing basketball court would be replaced with sod, seven park benches, a handicap picnic table and grill would be added and some of the existing play equipment would either be removed or relocated.

Also planned is the complete enclosing of the park with a chain link fence, landscaping, and installing a mulch walkway inside the fence.

The matter has been scheduled on the agenda for the work session of the commission, scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. this afternoon in the City Manager's conference room of City Hall.

Nothing is presently listed on the Orange Avenue Park, on the regular meeting agenda. Depending on the consensus of the commission during the work session however, a decision could be made.

The regular commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

American warplanes destroy Bosnian Serb aircraft

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said that "every attempt was made" to avoid shooting down Bosnian Serb aircraft today, but when they failed to heed NATO warnings they were destroyed by American warplanes.

Speaking to reporters as he departed the White House for Chicago and Pittsburgh, Clinton said the shooting complied with the United Nations mandate "to eliminate the prospect the war could be carried into the air."

British Prime Minister John Major, who was meeting Clinton in Pittsburgh this evening, endorsed the action, saying the no-fly zone "was plainly infringed."

"There was no reason for these planes to be there. They were there with hostile intent," Major said in Washington. "They were given a warning. They declined that warning. They were shot down and frankly they could expect nothing else."

Clinton said helicopters have violated the NATO "no-fly" zone in the past, but there have been no fixed-wing violation by fighter planes since September.

"Those are much more serious because the capacity they have to engage in military conduct from the air," he said.

In Naples, Italy, NATO commander Adm. Jeremy Boorda, said, "We reacted exactly as we told them we would."

Boorda said there were reports of "very short" flights by fixed-wing aircraft in the no-fly zone last year, "but we didn't see them." He said the Serbian planes made a bombing maneuver, and U.N. forces had reported eight bombs were dropped, targeting a storage facility and a hospital.

The president said he was notified early this morning of the action over Bosnia, where two American F-16 fighter jets shot down four Bosnian Serb aircraft that violated the U.N. no-fly zone over Bosnia.

"We're attempting to get more facts now," he said.

Balanced budget measure gasping for survival

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The balanced budget amendment is gasping for survival in the Senate, the result of a requirement for a two-thirds majority, deft maneuvering by opponents and institutional forces that tug on lawmakers.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Larry Craig, R-Idaho, began with 55 backers of their proposal designed to eliminate deficits. Despite pulling in a few wavering Republicans last week, they remain by Craig's own estimate five or more votes shy of the threshold set by the framers of the Constitution.

And after declarations of opposition from three senators on Friday, the momentum is flowing the other way, with Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Appropriations Committee, leading the forces against.

"He is working it hard," Simon said of Mitchell, who works closely throughout the year with committee chairmen, several of whom remain officially uncommitted.

Simon added: "I have to say he's not working as hard as Byrd is. He (Byrd) is visiting members. One member told me he talked to him six or seven times."

The committee that Byrd chairs offers senators extraordinary influence over annual spending bills covering items as varied as defense, roads and bridges, national parks and water projects.

But these bills have been squeezed in recent years as Congress has worked to control deficits.

In announcing his opposition to the amendment on Friday, the panel's second senior Republican, Ted Stevens of Alaska, said further squeezing would be inevitable if the amendment passed.

"Of all the committees that would regard this (amendment) as treading on their territory, it would be Appropriations," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who does not hold a seat on the committee.

Lawmakers on the Appropriations Committee routinely salt spending bills with money for local projects. Byrd, as chairman, has sent more than $1 billion to West Virginia in five years — and can determine the fate of other senators' favorite projects, as well.

"Senator Byrd has a long memory. Whether or not you're on the Appropriations Committee, I think that would be of some concern," said Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, the only Republican who has not yet declared a firm position on the amendment.

"We're losing a disproportionately high percentage of Democrats on the Appropriations Committee," Simon conceded on Friday. "As well as among Republicans."

Two of the three declared Republican opponents to the amendment sit on the committee, as do 10 of 27 opposition Democrats. Two more committee Democrats, Tom Harkin of Iowa and James Sasser of Tennessee are uncommitted.

how to combat this pressure?

"The only thing we have ... is frankly the public opinion," Simon said in an interview. "It may not be very sophisticated in terms of economics, but they understand we are getting into very deep fiscal trouble" with chronic deficits.

Despite an effort to generate public support — the National Taxpayers Union distributed a nationwide survey Friday claiming two-thirds of Americans favor the plan — some Senate offices said the volume of mail and calls is not as heavy as on other issues.

Jeffords said while the majority of his constituent mail was in favor of the amendment, he also has heard from senior citizens and educators who are opposed.

Adding to this blend late last week was an alternative backed by Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., to soften the amendment by sheltering Social Security and permanent projects, and make it easier to run a deficit in times of recession.

Republicans instantly charged it was designed as "cover" for nervous Democrats, a charge Reid angrily denied on the Senate floor on Friday.

But that doesn't stop Mitchell and Byrd from making Reid's amendment available as an escape hatch for Democrats, including those seeking reelection this fall, who want to vote for some version of a balanced budget plan while making sure it doesn't pass.

With Republicans opposed to Reid's plan, there is no doubt it will fall short.

Tribe, Greyhounds exhibit strengths at relays

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Employing the same formula that won them the Class 3A state championship last year, the Seminole High School boys' track team opened its 1994 season with a second-place showing at the Eagle Relays Saturday.

The Seminoles trailed only Oak Ridge, 94-72. Lake Brantley (24) took seventh, Lyman (17) finished 11th ahead of Lake Howell (16), and Oviedo (11) came in 17th.

Pacing the Tribe's effort were triple jumper Andre Scott, strength event specialist Bernard Sparrow, and their relays.

Scott, an All-American and state champion in the triple jump last year, won the event Saturday with a leap of 50 feet, 5 inches (nearly 7 feet better than the second-place finisher).

Sparrow, state champ in the shot put and four-place finisher in the discus, won Saturday's shot put competition with a heave of 60 feet, 1 inch (winning by a margin of nearly 10 feet) and took second in the discus with a throw of 152 feet, 7 inches.

The Tribe scored first-place finishes in both the 4 x 200-meter and 4 x 100-meter relays; finished second in the two-mile and the freshman-sophomore 4 x 100-meter relays; and took third in both the freshman-sophomore and varsity 4 x 400-meter relays.

For Lake Brantley, Rogers was third in the pole vault (11 feet) and Lecorley placed third in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles (44.5 seconds). The Patriots also finished third in the distance medley relay (11 minutes, 48.9 seconds).

TRACK SHACK RELAYS

WINTER PARK — Lyman High School's girls parlayed their strength in the distance running events into a third-place team finish Saturday in the Track Shack Relays at Lake Howell High School's Richard L. Evans Field.

The Greyhounds, which scored 71 team points, finished behind Evans (133½) and Dr. Phillips (105½). Lake Mary (32) came in ninth ahead of Lake Howell (31). Oviedo (17) finished 12th while Lake Brantley (16) tied for 13th with Titusville.

Ktayah Bresnick led the Greyhounds by winning the 3,200-meter run with a meet-record time of 12 minutes, 19 seconds and anchoring Lyman's victorious 4 x 800-meter relay.

Rita Greenberg, Kelly Hudson, and Loretta Keith joined with Bresnick to win the 4 x 800 in 10 minutes, 20 seconds, also a new meet record.

Lyman also finished second in the mile medley relay (4 minutes, 41.7 seconds) and distance medley relay (13 minutes, 56.9 seconds).

For Lake Mary, Kelly Downs took second in the triple jump with a leap of 31 feet, 9 inches while Almee Bradley finished third in the long jump by clearing 15 feet, 3½ inches. The Rams also came in third in the sprint medley relay (1 minute, 56.1 seconds).

Lake Howell placed third in the 4 x 400-meter relay in four minutes, 25.5 seconds.

Beland helps SCC end skid

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — While there's no such thing as a bad time for a win, Saturday's win couldn't have come at a better time for the Seminole Community College baseball team.

Led by Lyman High School's Chad Beland and Okeechobee's Scott Storey, the Raiders ended a three-game losing streak with a 10-7 victory over local rival Valencia Community College in a Mid-Florida Conference confrontation at SCC's College Field.

Beland keyed SCC's 13-hit attack by singling home a run in the third inning and blasting a two-run home run to left field in the bottom of the fourth inning.

Staked to a 5-0 lead after three innings, Storey (3-2) cruised through eight innings, allowing a pair of unearned runs on five hits while striking out three and walking three before retiring with a SCC holding a 10-2 lead.

Early hole too deep for Orangewood

From Staff Reports

MERRITT ISLAND — The "hump" was just a little too high.

The Orangewood Christian Rams got close, but could never get ahead as West Palm Beach-Gold Coast Corporate eliminated the local squad, 58-49, in the semifinals of the Boys' Class B-Region 2 Basketball Tournament at Merritt Island High School Friday night.

Gold Coast Corporate (28-7) defeated Brevard Christian, which knocked out Pine Castle Christian 72-71 in overtime Friday, 76-40 in the regional championship game Saturday night to advance to the Class B state tournament in Tallahassee this week.

"We got to within one point and started trading baskets," said Orangewood Christian coach Dave Hogan. "We just couldn't manage to take the lead. Then, in the last two minutes, we had to foul and they hit their free throws."

Fantasy Auction promises to be a special event

We all have a catalog of diversions that we enjoy to one degree or another. And while it would be presumptuous for me to speak for everyone, I look forward to events where two or more of those diversions intersect.

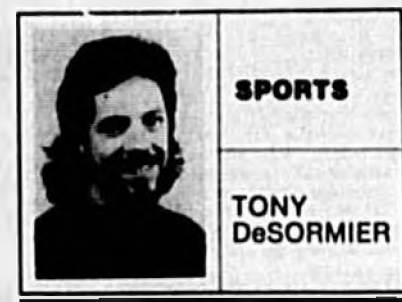

One of those rare activities is set for this Thursday night, when the Sunshine Network will televise the third annual Florida Sports Hall of Fame Fantasy Auction.

I'm not going to say that I like shopping (that would be a betrayal of my gender's stereotype), but I do enjoy hunting for hidden items of value, which is why I'd rather scrounge through a junk yard than go to an auto parts store.

Obviously, I enjoy sports and like to collect books about sports and the odd piece of game equipment.

This Thursday, I can scrounge for some of those articles via television. Or I could, if I were at home instead of behind this terminal.

Sponsored by Dairy Farmers, Inc., SUN (Channel 21) on TCI Cablevision in Seminole County, 36

SPORTS

on Cablevision, 7 on Heathrow Cable) will televise the event from 7 to 11 p.m. from the Florida Sports Hall of Fame with proceeds benefiting the non-profit Florida Sports Hall of Fame Foundation.

You can participate in the auction by calling toll-free 800-352-3263 (800-FLA-FAME).

Included in the nearly 150 items up for bid are vacations, sports memorabilia, and tickets to sporting events. A partial listing:

- a new two-door Toyota Celica.
- authentic game shoes worn by Michael Jordan.

- tickets to the 1995 Super Bowl in Miami.
 - basketball signed by Shaquille O'Neal.
 - autographed football and Heisman Trophy dinner program from FSU All-American Charlie Ward.
 - football autographed by Emmitt Smith and a Dallas Cowboy jacket.
 - pair of tickets to the Indianapolis 500.
 - pair of tickets and two laps around the track in the pace car at the Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.
 - tickets to the Florida-Georgia, FSU-Notre Dame, and Miami-FSU games.
 - World Series trip including two games, airfare, and hotel accommodations.
 - NCAA basketball tournament tickets.
 - trip for two to Puerto Rico.
- Not all of the items on the block are of the "big ticket" variety. Last year, I acquired an autographed copy of "Big Daddy" Don Garlitt's autobiography.

I'm not sure how many of you even knew that Florida had its own Sports Hall of Fame. It's a part of the state's largest welcome center and is located near the intersection of U.S. 90 and Interstate 75 in Lake City. Sanford is well represented in its membership by Red Barber and Tim Rains.

This Thursday affords you the opportunity to participate in and contribute to the activities of the Florida Sports Hall of Fame.

If you happen to be one of those individuals who take pride in the Hall of Fame and the individuals and accomplishments to which it pays tribute, this is an ideal way to support the Hall (last year's auction raised over $70,000).

And even if you couldn't care less about the Hall of Fame or its members, the auction provides a rare chance to bid on (and possibly acquire) unique, valuable, and/or highly coveted items.

Either way, it'll be a special event.

WALLACE USES NEW FORD TO RULE AT ROCKINGHAM

By MIKE HARRIS AP Motorsports Writer

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — "People may start referring to North Carolina Motor Speedway as 'Rustyham'." Not even switching from Pontiacs to Fords over the winter could keep Rusty Wallace from dominating for the third straight time on the 1.017-mile oval as he blasted to an easy victory in Sunday's Goodwrench 500.

"People kept asking me why we would make the switch after winning 10 races (in 1993), and I kept telling everybody, 'Man, we would probably win in a Jaguar.' It's the team, not the car."

On Sunday, his black and gold Thunderbird was the strongest car on the track most of the 492-lap race, leading eight times for 346 laps, including the final 60.

His final margin of 5.15 seconds over the runner-up, Daytona 500 winner Sterling Marlin, could have been more if Wallace had not eased up in the final few laps just as a precaution.

"Our car was just dynamite," Wallace said after his third straight victory at Rockingham and the fifth of his career at the track in North Carolina's sandhills.

"The crew did an absolutely perfect job on the car," Wallace said. "The chassis was great and the motors really flew — a lot of power. I don't think I've ever put my foot in that much power."

Wallace, who crashed in the season-opening race at Daytona — just as he did a year ago — said: "I know our car was a better car than I've ever had at Daytona. I wrecked, so let's forget about that. We won here and the car I'm taking to Richmond next week is the best car in the house, so I can't wait to race again."

Wallace's Penske Racing South team had to deal with lots of questions and criticism after deciding to make the break from General Motors to run Fords.

"A lot of people said we were making a mistake (switching to Ford). I made this move because I wanted to have a little better power plant and a little better aerodynamics. Pontiac is still a good car."

Dogwoods herald spring

Beautiful flowering plants have started to bloom

Many of the flowering dogwoods have started to bloom which is one of the more beautiful signs of approaching spring. Flowering dogwood (Cornus florida) is native to the eastern half of the United States including north Florida and northern regions of central Florida. We are the southern limit for this beautiful symbol of spring. The snowy white bracts (four white modified leaves surrounding the flower) add spring color to both native woodlands and our landscapes. Few red and pink forms of dogwood perform well in Florida.

Flower buds are initiated in the summer and fully developed by September. Flowering dogwoods flower during February or March depending on spring temperatures. Nursery grown trees may flower in 2-3 years while native dogwoods usually require 4-6 years to flower. Flowering dogwoods are colorful in both spring and fall. The leaves turn rusty red before falling and are accented by glistening red berries.

Dogwoods grow best in well drained, organic soils that are slightly acidic (pH between 5.0-6.0). These trees are sensitive to high soil temperatures. Planting dogwoods in exposed highway medians or right of ways is not recommended. These locations are usually hot and may stay dry for extended periods. Dogwoods do require relatively high light for maximum flowering.

Bare root or balled/burlapped trees should be transplanted during the dormant season. Container-grown trees can be transplanted anytime. The planting hole should be larger than the root ball and planted at the same depth it was grown. The tree should be watered thoroughly after transplanting to settle soil around the roots. Apply a 2-3 inch layer of organic mulch to conserve moisture and help control weeds. Keep the mulch away from the tree trunk. Irrigate newly planted trees twice a week for several months to get them well established.

GARDENING

Dogwoods are not tolerant of extended drought periods. This is especially true during the first year after planting. Water should be added every 7 to 10 days when rainfall is low. Water the soil to a depth of 12 to 18 inches. Deep watering encourages an extensive root system.

Little fertilization is needed the first year. Over fertilization can injure a young tree. Apply 1 to 1½ pounds of 16-4-8 annually to established trees with stem diameters greater than 1 inch. Distribute the fertilizer evenly on the surface under the tree canopy and water thoroughly.

Insects common on dogwood include dogwood borer, twig borer and club gall. Insecticides usually do not control borers inside the tree, but they can prevent further infestations. Twig borers cause wilted leaves on the ends of small branches. Trees are seldom killed by twig borers. Control twig borers by pruning infested twigs below the discolored stem area and destroying them.

Club galls form near the end of young shoots during late spring or early summer. Club galls can be controlled by pruning out galls before August and destroying them.

Common diseases of dogwood include spot anthracnose and crown gall. Spot anthracnose is caused by a fungus that attacks dogwood leaves, stems, flowers and buds. Spots are usually small (1/25 inch) with reddish or purplish borders. Severe infestations can prevent flower buds from opening, distort leaves and weaken trees. An extensive spray program beginning at bud break and continuing throughout the summer is necessary to prevent this disease. Crown gall is caused by bacteria in the soil. Abnormal growth occurs on the lower stem or roots and the top portion of the plant generally declines and appears weak. Avoid buying or planting dogwoods that have swellings near the crown or graft union. Dogwoods should not be replanted in areas where trees have been killed by crown gall for at least 2 or 3 years.

Root rots may also occur on dogwoods, but are generally caused by mechanical root injury or by cultural conditions such as over fertilization, over watering or lack of drainage.

Marginal leaf scorch can be a common occurrence during the summer months. Leaf scorch is caused by the loss of water from leaves at a faster rate than water is taken up by the roots. These symptoms can be caused by a lack of moisture, transplanting shock, fertilizer or salt injury to roots or root rot disease.

Sweet memories antidote for bitterness

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Depressed Daughter" was commendable. I could have used your help 14 years ago when I faced a similar situation.

I, too, loved my mother — to the point of leaving a teaching position in another city and returning to York, Pa., after my father died and Mother became ill. When I arrived, I found a woman I no longer knew. She had become bitter and angry. She criticized every member of our family, made derogatory remarks about my husband whom she had formerly adored, got into fights with the neighbors, and isolated herself from the world. I was at my wit's end.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

After many months of frustration and many prayers, I hit upon an idea. We had a serious talk, and I told her how much I had always admired her, and how proud I was that she and Dad managed to raise a family of 10, despite hard times.

I reminded her of the many challenges she met in her life — and how she triumphed over all of them. I also reviewed all the sacrifices she had made for her children. Then I suggested she write the story of her life, and tell others how she came to be the wonderful mother I once knew.

Abby, she immediately started making notes, and eventually, not only did she write her memoir — it was a masterpiece! The whole family was mightily impressed. We plan to have the manuscript copied so it can be passed on to future generations.

My dear mother, Goldie Portia, died almost 10 years ago, and I can honestly say that the years we spent together enriched my life and made me a better person.

Thank you for giving me a chance to possibly help someone else who is going through a depression. You may use my name.

GWENDOLYN I. COTE

DEAR GWENDOLYN: What a wonderful idea you had; not only did the project you suggested to your mother inspire her to focus on something positive, it provided a lasting legacy for your family.

DEAR ABBY: A letter you printed in your column a few years ago, regarding a physician whose life was saved by taking a PSA test for prostate cancer, saved another life. Mine.

Those few lines in your column advising all adult males to take this simple blood test, whether or not they have the symptoms was a lifesaver for me. That helpful message allowed me to find out in time to rid me of prostate cancer.

Abby, you should use that warning every year. You may use my name.

JERRY GROSS, LAJOLLA, CALIF.

DEAR JERRY GROSS: Thank you for writing and allowing me to use your name to warn others.

For Dingell, health care battle is a personal one

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — When it comes to health reform, John D. Dingell says he follows the philosophy of one of China's senior leaders, Deng Xiaoping. "He didn't care whether the cat was white or black. He just wanted to catch mice," says the Michigan Democrat who chairs the House Energy and Commerce Committee. "That's where I am."

Serving his 39th year in Congress, Dingell is trying to fulfill the mission his father began half a century ago when he introduced the first national health insurance bill.

President Clinton can count on no more powerful ally than this second generation New Dealer, a lawmaker both feared and admired for his legislative skills.

But in this fight Dingell faces an uphill struggle to deliver the votes even within his own 43-member committee.

The 27 Democrats are badly divided, with some backing the rival plan of committee member, Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., and others wanting a government-financed health system for all. Rep. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., is trying to enlist bipartisan support for a modest, no-cost package of insurance reforms.

He promises to push President Clinton's embattled health reform proposals as far as he can but emphasizes, "I'm a very practical fellow."

Dingell originally wanted his panel to be the first out of the gate on health reform, but he has been forced to delay the work because of the difficulty in lining up votes for such Clinton proposals as requiring employers to pay for health insurance, creating mandatory alliances and capping insurance premiums.

Instead, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on health will start work this Tuesday on a bill that its chairman, Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., says won't include Clinton's insurance-purchasing alliances.

Dingell may end up drafting a bill in his full committee rather than leaving most of the spadework to Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., and his health and environment subcommittee. Waxman engineered the major Medicaid expansions of recent years but counts few supporters of the Clinton plan on his subcommittee.

The 67-year-old Dingell makes no bones that the White House plan would not be his own first choice.

"My idea of the ideal bill is single payer, financed by a value added tax with vigorous cost-containment mechanisms and constraints and controls on medical malpractice," he said.

But the president's plan is "the best available mechanism for achieving (those) purposes," he says.

"What really is important is universal coverage, a decent package of health benefits (that is) not cancelable, not subject to whim and caprice of the marketplace and insurers ... a fair payment mechanism," he said.

The Clinton proposals "are not the Ten Commandments engraved by the fingers of God on stone. These are something quite different," Dingell added. "We're going to negotiate it," said the chairman. "I'm (not) here to insist on a Calvinist application of the president's bill. ... I'm here to work out something that makes sense."

How much of Clinton's 1,342-page bill will survive? "I could write the same bill with a lot less pages," said Dingell.

John Dingell Sr., a printer who survived a bout with tuberculosis, was elected to Congress in 1933 and became a major force on the Ways and Means Committee. He and Sens. Robert F. Wagner, D-N.Y., and James E. Murray, D-Mont., wrote the first national health insurance bill in 1943.

The senior Dingell died in 1955 and his 29-year-old son, a former House page with a law degree from Georgetown University, won a special election to succeed him.

On the first day of every new session of Congress since then, Dingell has reintroduced his father's health bill as H.R. 16, the same number as his district.

"I have seen fights on this under Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Carter and now Clinton," he said.

Officials can't find plutonium

By The Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — More than 500 pounds of weapons-grade plutonium made at the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant cannot be accounted for, though officials say the shortage may only exist on paper.

Plant reports show 243 kilograms of plutonium produced between 1955 and 1990 is unaccounted for. The Greenville News reported Sunday. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

But officials blame the discrepancy on differences in measurements, paperwork, waste and materials being stuck somewhere in the complex. They say none of the highly radioactive material has left the plant.

"You can only measure things to a certain degree of accuracy," said plant official Tom Williams.

"We have in place the physical security that assures us to a great degree that we are not physically losing stuff," spokesman Rick Ford said.

The environmental group Greenpeace called its alarming news nevertheless.

"Having 30 nuclear bombs' worth of material missing within the Savannah River Site shouldn't make anybody who lives in the local area very happy," spokesman William Arkin said.

Twelve to 22 pounds of plutonium could make a bomb as large as any in the U.S. arsenal, said Arkin, author of the book "Nuclear Battlefield."

The record-keeping problem cuts both ways. Ford said, pointing to the plant's apparent gain of about 770 pounds of uranium 235 since 1955, when the plant opened.

Ways to control asthma and cough

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from a chronic asthma/bronchitis cough. When severe, I use Ventolin and Vancril inhalers, along with theophyllin. However, at other times, when using Ansaid for my arthritis, I cough less. What is the connection and is there anything else I can do that will control both the cough and the asthma?

DEAR READER: I do not believe that there is a relation between your asthma (cough) and your arthritis medicine. Perhaps this is serendipity: When your asthma is under control, you may be able to exercise more, thereby needing the Ansaid. Some asthma is worsened by aspirin and similar anti-arthritis drugs, but I've never heard of these compounds improving the symptoms of asthma. You appear to be receiving appropriate therapy for your asthma, although inhalers are not your only option: Pills and liquid medicine also can be used.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicine." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 68-year-old male diagnosed with blastomycosis. I'm curious as to how I might have acquired this condition and wonder if there is any danger of passing it on to others.

DEAR READER: This is an infection caused by a type of yeast. In most instances, it is acquired through the lungs, causing cough and fever. Untreated, the infection may spread to the brain, reproductive tract and internal organs. Blastomycosis is much more common in people with immune deficiencies (such as AIDS) and certain cancers (such as Hodgkin's disease).

The infection is diagnosed by isolating the yeast from infected areas. For example, yeast meningitis (which causes headache and mental disturbances) is confirmed by finding the microorganism in the spinal fluid.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
William Blake wrote to his patron, William Hayley, "My friendship of has made my heart ache. Do be my enemy — for friendship's sake."

There are bridge deals like this, in which you enlist an enemy — an opponent — to help your cause. Of course, he isn't going to do it willingly, but with careful planning you may leave him with no option.

Playing in three no-trump, you receive the club-jack lead from West. After East puts up the king — in case his partner has led from a suit headed by the A-J-10 — how should you continue?

As always, start by counting those top tricks. There are eight: two hearts, four diamonds and two clubs. The hunt is on for number nine. There are two obvious chances. You could play a spade to the king, hoping East has the ace. Or you could guess who has the heart queen. It would be normal to assume East, because West seems to have extra length in clubs.) But experts hate to guess; they prefer sure things. And here you have a chance at a sure thing.

After winning with the club ace, play off three rounds of diamonds. Then lead a club to the queen. When East follows, exit with your last club.

While West cashes three winners in the suit, discard two spades from the dummy, and a spade and a diamond from your hand. (This is why you couldn't cash all four diamond tricks earlier. Your hand would be squeezed.) Then West must lead a major, furnishing your ninth trick.

When West realizes what you have done to him, don't expect his friendship to gush like the bluish Hippocrene.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 1, 1994

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is a day when you should be able to gratify several modest ambitious objectives you've been entertaining. If you get grandiose, however, you could be disappointed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something you recently organized might require a bit of patchwork repair at this time. If you make adjustments, things can be improved upon for the present.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today if you have the tenacity and patience, you should be able to finalize a situation that has been causing you both concern and aggravation. Don't begin unless you plan to finish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Impulsive decisions you make today could turn out to be counterproductive. Conversely, judgments you carefully evaluate should be right on target.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In a partnership arrangement today, don't try to do everything yourself. Have faith in your cohort and delegate some of the assignments to him/her.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Instead of being a talker, strive to be a listener today, especially when in the company of persons whose intelligence you respect. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Commercial arrangements could produce benefits today, provided your expectations do not exceed that to which you're entitled. Don't be greedy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial trends look interesting today. Stability is indicated in earning sources upon which you are dependent. However, you might not be able to crack anything new.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You should be assuming more responsibility in a situation that involves you, as well as others. No matter how hard you keep wishing someone will play your role, this is not likely to occur.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before taking on any new assignments today, finish things you've already begun. If you attempt to do both, neither may be done properly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It might be wise today not to get too closely involved with someone you recently met who has a habit of talking about others. You could be accused of being an accessory.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Objectives of a material nature can be gratified today, provided you don't go off on tangents. To succeed you must be focused on your goals.
