Boaters paid $745 in fees

SANFORD — The city collected $745 from boaters using the marina boats ramps during the second weekend of the new marina ordinance at the Lake Monroe harbor marina.

The city now charges non-residents a $5 daily fee on weekends and holidays for using the boat ramps. City residents are not charged, but must obtain a decal from the Parks & Recreation Department at City Hall.

On Saturday, 75 boaters paid for the use of the ramps and 74 paid on Sunday, according to Jim Jernigan, director of the Parks & Recreation Department.

According to Jernigan, approximately 12 city residents used the facility during the weekend.

'Rambo' the pig still in custody

CALUMET CITY, Ill. (UPI) — Police figure Rambo the pig will be claimed by his owners, but if not he will be given a mate. In the meantime he's been living well on dog food since he was found wandering on a busy expressway.

"We hear there's a possibility they might get something going" with the girlfriend, a 707-pound sow named Tiffany Marie, said police Lt. James Oglesby.

"We're trying to determine the owner of Rambo before we get any more animals going here."

Tiffany Marie belongs to Barbara and Robert Urbanski, owners of the Pet Gallery in Calumet City who often exercise her on the city streets.

Rambo, who himself weighs in at about 700 pounds, was found wandering the Calumet Expressway on Friday morning and was captured by police using control ropes usually reserved for vicious dogs, then was taken to the city's animal pound.

For sale: cave bomb shelter

PARTHENON, Ark. (UPI) — Entertainer Michael Jackson and the prince of Liechtenstein didn't want it, and it doesn't look as if anyone else is eager to buy a $3.3 million bomb shelter in a mammoth limestone cave.

Five years ago John Hay, a rock 'n' roll light show creator and one of the founders of the Celestial Seasonings herbal teas, spent $146,000 on 240 acres in the Ozark Mountains of northwestern Arkansas that included Beckham Creek Cave.

Arson leaves family homeless

Rented house destroyed in early morning fire

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

GENEVA — A couple and their six children were left homeless as a result of arson destroying their rented home Saturday afternoon.

George Burkett, Seminole County deputy fire marshal, said the 5:20 p.m. fire was not started accidentally.

"All accidental reasons were ruled out," Burkett said. He declined to provide specific information on how the fire began.

The home was unoccupied, Burkett said. The family, Cruz and Irene Ibarra and their six children were at the Sanford home of Paula Morales, Irene Ibarra's mother, when the fire was reported by a passerby.

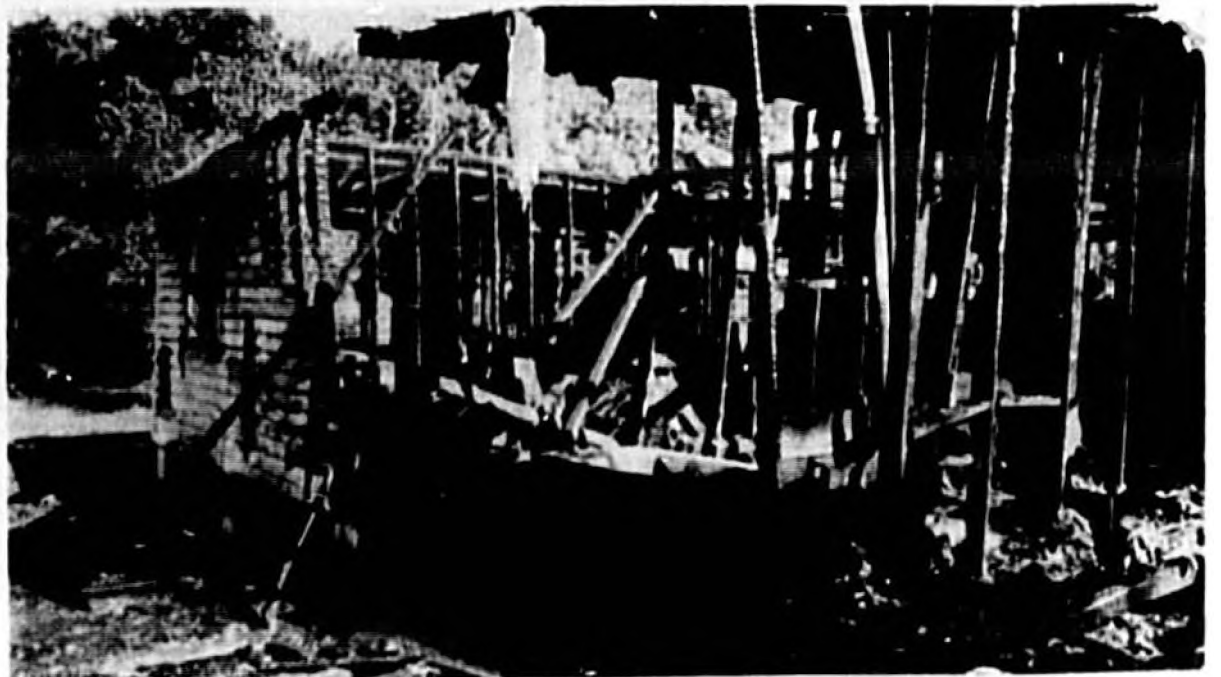

Burkett said.

Burkett said the fire caused $15,000 to $20,000 in damage to the unoccupied structure and contents. No contents were saved, Burkett said.

Sheriff's investigator Barry Brady said this morning he has no suspects and is just beginning his investigation. He said the Ibarra had caused no problems for the home's owner, Thelma Mungen of Deltona.

Mungen said the 42-year-old home was insured for $12,000, although she would estimate the value at $6,000 or $7,000. Mungen said she had no idea who would start the fire, although she commented she knew nothing about the family, including six children, ages 2 1/2

Heliport study slated

By WAYNE MIZE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A study to determine if a heliport system is needed in Central Florida will include Sanford, and may eventually connect it with surrounding municipalities and airports.

A committee has been formed by the Urban Area Metropolitan Planning Organization (UMPO) to select a consultant to complete a feasibility study.

The idea behind the study is to see if a system of heliports is needed throughout Central Florida, to connect such communities as Sanford and Heathrow with downtown Orlando and existing area airports, including Orlando International Airport.

According to Dave Groudhall, director of the transportation division for the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council in Winter Park, the heliport study was a spinoff of a previous aviation systems plan.

The aviation systems plan for this region was done by the Central Florida Aviation System Planning Process (CFASPP) committee with headquarters in Tallahassee. CFASPP holds many of its meetings in Orlando.

"They found that the helicopter is a segment of the market that has great growth potential," said Groudhall. "Orlando is concerned about the need to maintain connection with its downtown and other airports. This heliport would serve that function in the future."

The study will identify where service needs to be provided and how airports will be connected.

No canes for these Kanes

SANFORD — Over the years, the names John and Minnie Kane have become almost synonymous with senior citizen activities in the city. Their 15 year involvement with senior activities has been an accumulation of hard work and loving care.

If the definition of old is exhibiting the characteristics of age, then John, 78, and Minnie, 74, do not qualify.

In fact, Minnie said, "We're not old."

Her meaning is clear — that age has nothing to do with being old.

"We like helping old people," said John.

With that in mind, it is easier to understand why John and Minnie dedicate so much of their time to the elderly.

The couple, who will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next month, moved to Sanford 15 years ago from Chicago.

John, now retired, had a small business when the couple married. He owned a coal truck and a moving van. Even then, they were helping people.

"We're a couple and we have always enjoyed helping people," said Minnie. "We would have people knocking on our door asking for coal."

Minnie spent 29 years as a volunteer at the St. George Hospital in Chicago.

The couple's home was always opened to the neighborhood children. "We had children everywhere," said Minnie. "They all called me Aunt Minnie and their parents always knew where their children were."

"John worked hard all his life," Minnie said of her spouse. "I was one of 11 children. When I was five years old, my father taught us to pull weeds. We were never idle children."

The Kanes had no children of their own, but raised two foster children, a brother and sister, given up by their parents.

Since their arrival in Sanford the Kanes have been active in the Over 50 Club, the Senior Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, the Retired Senior Volunteer Program of Seminole County, the Golden Age Games and the Federation of Senior Citizens.

The pair is especially proud of their work with the Over 50 Club.

They were instrumental in organizing the Wednesday afternoon dances at the Civic Center, which began 13 years ago.

"We saw this dance before so we decided to have it here in Sanford," said John. "We had a lady get an orchestra up. There are seven volunteers who play. We don't pay them anything. They just like playing and many have been with us for 13 years."

John (78) and Minnie Kane (74).

This is the first year no dances were scheduled for July and August. "Too many people go back up north and it just was not worth the effort," said Minnie.

The Wednesday dances near Christmas bring as many as 300 seniors to the weekly affair, said Minnie. "We have a man 97 who dances and a woman 92," she said.

Libertarian candidate makes ballot

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — After standing in the parking lot of K-Mart on a hot Florida day, Randal Paul learned the facts of life in seeking signatures to have his father's name placed on the Florida ballot as the Libertarian candidate for president.

"It's unfair to have to do this," says Paul. "We're out here fighting for legitimacy and you have to stand on street corners and in parking lots. People tend to put you in the category with looks."

Paul says the effort to get his father, former U.S. Congressman Ron Paul of Texas, on the Florida ballot this November was successful. The organization worked feverishly for several months to amass a Friday's deadline with about 90,000 names.

The organization needed 50,000 names, one percent of the registered state voters, but sought the higher figure in case names are disqualified. State election officials will notify the state organization in about a week of the final results, he says.

Paul says Seminole County produced about 1,500 names for the effort and Orange County produced about 7,000 names. He says most of the signatures came from young voters willing to give his father a chance to seek the office of president.

"The regular 'Joe Worker' we found often has the attitude of 'give him a chance,'" Paul says. "The more conservatively dressed they are, the more they have usually made up their minds and don't sign. We find the younger voters are more open-minded than the older ones."

Ron Paul's plank will serve to both attract and repel voters.

Randal Paul says his father favors abolishing the Internal Revenue Service and collecting needed federal funds through a national sales tax or other "head taxes." The IRS intrudes too much into citizens' and businessmen's private liberties, he says.

With the 38 percent reduction in federal revenue resulting from the loss of income tax, Paul says military spending should be trimmed as much as 40 percent in favor of more efficient spending and encouraging allies to spend more in their own defense.

Social services spending should also be cut significantly in favor of local governments — cities and counties — taking more responsibility in the care of the needy, Paul says.

Another federal budget trimming measure advocated by Paul — ultimately leading to a balanced budget — would be to eliminate foreign aid, particularly to communist-oriented countries.

Another campaign plank sure to divide voters is to legalize

2 people die over weekend in accidents

DELAND — The Florida Highway Patrol investigated two fatalities in Seminole County this weekend, bringing the total automobile-related deaths in the county for the year at 22.

The first accident occurred at 6:30 a.m. Saturday at the intersection of State Road 436 and Casa Alma Way. William R. Stokes, 80, 2731 Tierra Circle Winter Park was killed when he pulled his 1986 Cadillac into the path of a 1984 Dodge pickup driven by Gary Combee, 37, of Apopka, a FHP spokesman said.

Stokes was eastbound on Casa Alma and pulled into the path of Combee, southbound on S.R. 436. Neither Combee nor two passengers

Dispute ends with shooting

SANFORD — A 19-year-old is listed in serious condition at an Orlando hospital after he was shot in the leg during a fight early Saturday.

Police said Dwayne Willis, 19, of 1403 Locust Ave., was shot in the lower right leg with a small semi-automatic handgun at 1:30 a.m. during a fight involving several people in a parking lot at Seminole High School.

According to the police report, only one shot was fired. Police are currently trying to locate a known suspect which they believe to be a juvenile.

Willis, who was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital by a friend, could not provide police with any additional details of the shooting. He was later taken to the Orlando Regional Medical Center.

Torture of calf results in arrests of two

SANFORD — A man and a juvenile were arrested on counts of animal cruelty and theft in connection with the death of a calf Saturday.

Talmadge Virgil Metts, 23, of 409 W. Crystal Drive, Sanford, was arrested along with the boy after four witnesses told Seminole County sheriff's deputies they had seen the pair with the calf. The break came in the case Sunday.

At about 10:45 p.m. Saturday the heifer calf, which was about six months old, was found "hogtied" in woods north of Lake Boulevard in Sanford. Bruce Cepuran, 41, of 395 N. Elder Road, Sanford, reported his find and Seminole County sheriff's deputies arrived at the scene. Deputy Thomas Johnson reported the calf, which was tied with nylon cord, was in critical condition and was killed by Seminole County Animal Control officials at the scene.

The witnesses who contacted sheriff's deputies Sunday reported that Metts and the boy stole the calf from a field between Oregon Avenue and Interstate 4, west of Sanford. Metts allegedly tried to cut the calf's throat, but his knife broke, a sheriff's report said. It is alleged that Metts beat the calf until it lost consciousness. The calf was abandoned in the field where it was later found.

The witnesses reportedly told sheriff's deputies they saw the calf in Metts' truck. Metts remains jailed. The boy was charged as a juvenile.

Engine test still 'go' for shuttle

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — NASA engineers are pressing on with plans to test fire the shuttle Discovery's main engines next week, amid work to devise a way to fix a gas leak that threatens a major delay for the first post-Challenger launch.

Managers with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration made the decision Sunday to proceed based on an analysis of the leak, which was discovered Friday in a rocket system used to steer the shuttle in space.

Discovery's three hydrogen-fueled main engines, which are not affected by the leak, will be fired July 28 at 7:30 a.m. EDT, three days after a practice countdown, in an unmanned, 20-second flight-readiness firing to test the overall shuttle system.

By going ahead with the test, engineers will have additional time to come up with a fix for the leak in Discovery's left-side orbital maneuvering system — OMS — pod, one of two mounted on either side of the ship's vertical tail fin, each of which houses 15 smaller rocket engines.

"They've got the leak stabilized," said NASA spokesman Charles Hollinshead. "The plan now is to proceed through (the test firing) and continue to assess our options."

But NASA's options for fixing the leak at the launch pad are severely limited.

The leak was found in a half-inch "Dynatube" fitting in a fuel vent line near the top of a tank deep inside the cramped OMS pod. The fitting is about 8 feet from the nearest access point and it cannot be readily reached without first removing the pod from the shuttle.

But the pod cannot be removed from the shuttle when it is in a vertical position.

Discovery had been scheduled to blast off in early September. If the orbiter has to be hauled back to the hangar for repairs, launch could be delayed anywhere from a month to two months. But NASA managers insisted Sunday they have not given up on figuring out a way to solve the problem.

"We've got a whole community of genius engineers out there who are going to put their heads together in a team effort" to come up with a fix, said one agency official who asked not to be named.

Asked if NASA could elect to launch Discovery as is, Hollinshead said simply: "I think they're looking at all their options."

In any case, the leak did not involve Discovery's main engines, and getting the test out of the way now, engineers said, will save several weeks of work later because pre-firing checks and preparations would not have to be repeated in the event of a roll back to the hangar.

Before deciding to proceed, engineers first had to determine if the leaky fuel line fitting could stand up to the ground-shaking main engine test firing without getting worse or breaking completely.

"It can't get worse," said an engineer. "Physically it's almost impossible for it to happen. They're convinced the leak is in the way the fitting was put together. It's not a weld or a structural crack or anything like that. The sealing surface of that fitting, it just doesn't have a good seat."

"It's hard-buffed up and sealed as tight as it can get and it's wired in place with a safety wire," the engineer said.

Members of regulating panel said tied to utility industry

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Three members of the state panel that picks the people who regulate Florida utilities have business ties or have received financial support from utility companies, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Public Service Commission Nominating Council members Sen. W.D. Childers, D-Pensacola, and Sen. Curt Kiser, R-Palm Harbor, have each received several thousand dollars in campaign donations from the utility industry, the Tampa Tribune reported.

Marianna businessman Howard Odom was once an officer in a company with Tallahassee lawyer Wilton Miller, who has lobbied for Florida Power & Light. Odom and Miller are longtime friends.

The nine-member council nominates five people each time there is a vacancy on the Public Service Commission, which oversees all Florida utilities. The governor chooses the new PSC member from those nominees.

Kiser, Childers and Odom all said they did not see any potential conflict of interest.

Council chairman Kiser and five other council members said that utility companies seldom if ever lobby the council. Any attempt made to influence the selection of a commissioner is usually aimed at the governor, Kiser said.

"Those guys really do not get involved (with the council)," he said. "I don't get phone calls. I don't get letters."

"They haven't done that unless they're doing it quietly behind the scenes."

Kiser has received $5,400 in donations for his re-election campaign from utility companies and their representatives. He said those contributions do not influence his decisions as a member of the council or the votes he makes as a legislator.

Childers has received about $9,000 from the utility industry for his re-election bid. He also benefited from a Gulf Power advertising campaign promoting "Good cents" homes, including Childers' Greentree development.

Odom said he had never been lobbied by utility company representatives or by his friend Miller.

Some members of the council have not filed the financial disclosure forms required by state law. The Commission on Ethics, which should have notified them they had to file, did not know the council existed until questioned by the Tribune last week.

The council was created in 1978. Council members do not receive any pay.

Player wins $11 million

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Lottery officials say an unidentified player has won the $11 million jackpot in the Florida Lotto game.

Officials also announced that the lottery set a new record with 11.8 million tickets sold last week.

Computer records show one player correctly picked all six winning numbers for the weekly drawing, but the winner had not come forward late Sunday. The winning numbers are 1, 2, 3, 13, 28 and 48.

Lottery computers were not immediately successful in determining where the winning ticket was sold.

Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said ticket sales have grown steadily each week.

"This was our best Lotto sales week since the game began," she said.

She estimated next week's jackpot would reach $5 million.

LOANS

Any bank can give you a loan. But can they give you sound loan advice? NCNB National Bank can.

Unlike some banks, we train our loan officers for weeks. Not days. And out of all the tough classes and late-night homework, they learn to do just one job, and do it well.

They also learn how to give you something money can't often buy: Sound, sensible advice.

© Equal Housing Lender Member FDIC

For example, your NCNB loan officer will tell you how our pre-approved loan can save you money on major purchases.

And how you may be able to borrow money, and still deduct the interest on your tax return.

Also, which payment schedule is smart. And which one is smarter.

Yet, there's something training can't help anyone master. And that's how to be easy to talk to.

We figure that's a natural ability. And one we always look for in a loan officer.

Crime statistics can be personal

When one thinks of violent crime Miami comes to mind. That is where such things happen, not in Seminole County. Yet it is startling to suddenly discover that murder, rape and other capital offenses do, in fact, occur in this county and the murder rate has increased over last year.

Sanford police investigated five murders in 1987 and all were solved. There have been two in 1988 with one solved and one unsolved. The open case is the murder of 11-year-old Cornelia Ammons. Her killer is still at large. Investigators are awaiting test results of blood taken from a rental car in Miami while continuing their investigation in Sanford. They are questioning possible suspects.

Lake Mary, Winter Springs and Altamonte Springs have had no reported murders this year, the second year in a row for Lake Mary. Altamonte has two unsolved murders pending from 1987.

The total of 20 murders in Seminole County in 1987 was a tragic total. However, with 14 in 1988 to date, the current year's total is almost certain to result in an annual increase. This is placing an added burden on law enforcement officers throughout the county. Citizens expect protection, and in the event of violent crime demand swift and sure justice.

Compounding the problem is the daily array of drug-related arrests. There are many in this county who buy and use illegal drugs. This results in sellers also. However onerous, it is nevertheless a matter of basic commerce: If there were no buyers, there would be no dealers. Drug dealing has become a multi-billion dollar business and with such huge profits violence becomes a companion to greed. If drug use in Seminole County is not abated, then citizens will need to condition themselves to continued increases in violent crime or provide ever-increasing funding for law enforcement budgets.

The police forces of the county have an excellent record in solving murders but they need assistance from the citizenry. This means providing information when appropriate and avoiding any degree of complicity, no matter how small.

Correction

An editorial published on July 10, 1988 referred to Dr. H.P. Kornick and stated that his license to practice veterinary medicine had been revoked. This was incorrect. His license has never been revoked and there are no complaints registered against it in the files of the Department of Professional Regulation or the Board of Veterinary Medicine. The Sanford Herald regrets the error.

ARNOLD SAWISLAK

Tales of Democratic conventions past

ATLANTA (UPI) — Reporters like national political conventions because even when there isn't much hard news to write about, they often run across more human interest stories and funny events than they have time to chronicle.

In 1956 in Chicago, Adlai Stevenson had the Democratic nomination sewed up, but he sent representatives around to talk to state delegations anyway. Also making a token run that year was Sen. A.B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky.

Chandler, seeking support, arrived at a caucus of the Minnesota delegation just as Eleanor Roosevelt was ending a visit on behalf of Stevenson. Chandler stopped the former first lady at the door and boomed, "Mrs. Roosevelt, I know you have your own candidate, but if he should falter, I hope you'll remember old Happy is in this."

Mrs. Roosevelt tapped Happy lightly on the shoulder and replied, "Oh, Albert, aren't you ever serious?"

In 1964, the effort to stop Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., centered on Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania. When it became clear Goldwater had the nomination won, Scranton went to the San Francisco Cow Palace to surrender.

As Scranton's limousine arrived at the rear of the convention hall, someone dropped a match in a pile of discarded film under a wooden ramp, and it flared up in a frightening flash fire.

A reporter sent outside to cover Scranton's arrival was in a phone booth about 50 feet from the ramp talking to an editor inside the Cow Palace news workroom. He quickly began dictating a story about the blaze.

The editor interrupted: "Just a minute, Mike. The television is showing one hell of a fire, but we can't make out where it is."

In 1972, protest was well-organized, and when the inhabitants of Flamingo Park, where demonstrators were camped, marched on the Democratic headquarters hotel, the Miami

"Oh, Albert, aren't you ever serious?"

Beach police also were prepared with a new tactic.

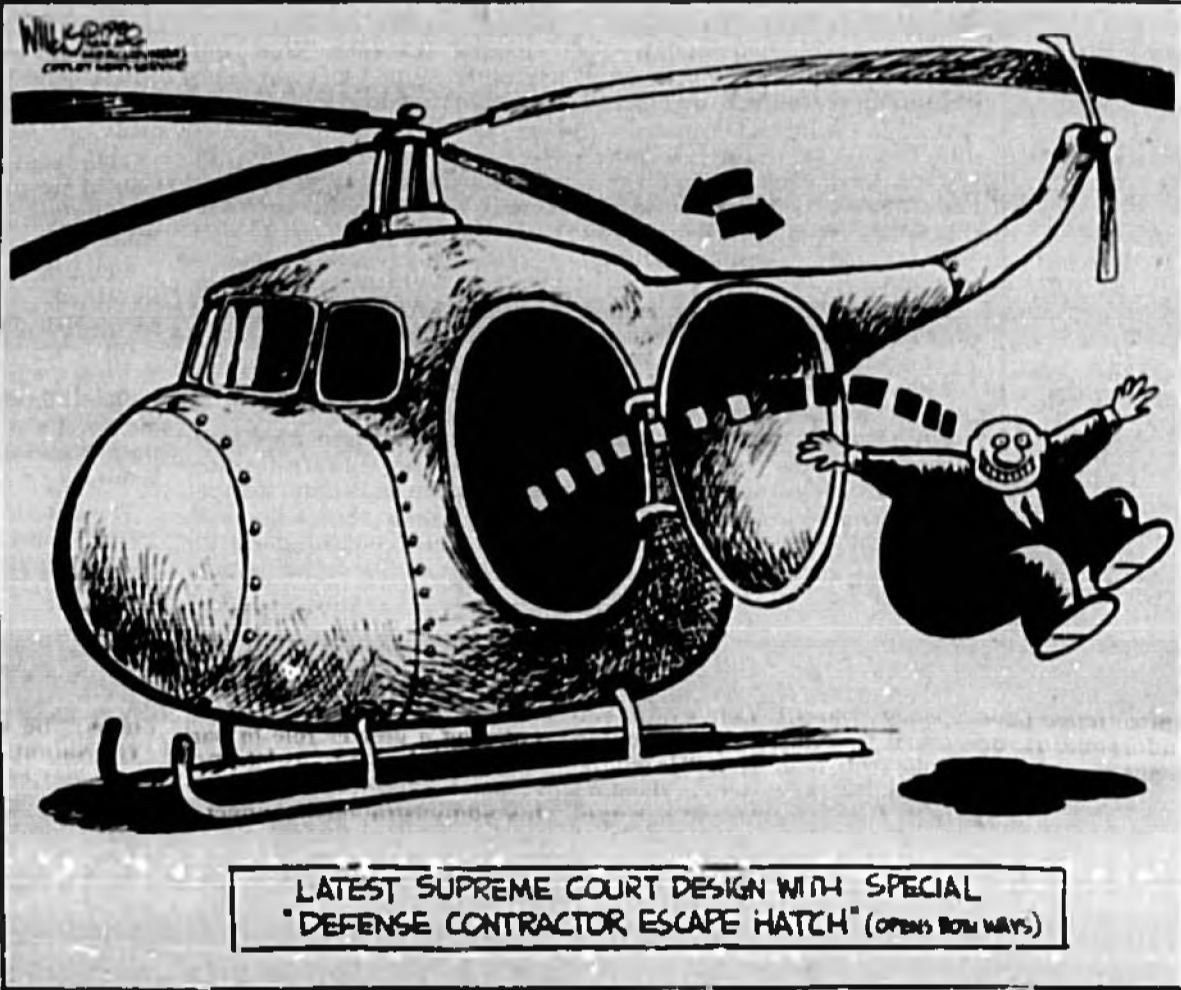

As the marchers approached the Fourtaineau Hotel, they were confronted by about 100 policemen wearing riot gear and carrying long clubs.

The officer in charge told the marchers through a bullhorn to stop. They kept on coming.

In the hotel driveway, Police Chief Arnold "Rocky" Pomerantz, stood in civilian clothes. As the march moved forward, Pomerantz fished a pipe out of his coat pocket and put it in his mouth.

The policemen marched forward five steps and stopped when Pomerantz took the pipe out of his mouth. The officer warned the crowd again, but it surged forward. The pipe came out again; the cops stepped off another five paces and stopped.

Just when a collision seemed sure, someone at the head of the march apparently noticed Pomerantz raising the pipe toward his mouth. The demonstrators milled around briefly and began retreating. Pomerantz fished a tobacco pouch out of his pocket, filled the pipe and with a contented smile on his face took a long, slow puff.

Carlucci to get Unisys pension

WASHINGTON — When Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci leaves federal office, he will have a going-away present waiting for him — a pension from one of the companies named in the current Justice Department probe of defense contract fraud.

Carlucci served on the board of directors of Unisys Corp. before he replaced Caspar Weinberger as defense secretary last November. The Pennsylvania-based company was the nation's 11th biggest defense contractor in fiscal year 1987 receiving almost $2.3 billion in contracts from the Pentagon.

Carlucci's insured pension plan from Unisys will give him $14,300 a year. Our associates, Jim Lynch and Scott Slick, reviewed Carlucci's financial records and they show the overlapping interests of defense contractors and top-level Pentagon officials.

In a Nov. 24, 1987 departmental memo, Carlucci disqualified himself from any matters involving Unisys. He also has bowed out of any dealings with Coopers and Lybrand, a Washington accounting firm listed as a defense contractor. Carlucci's wife is an employee of Coopers and Lybrand.

When Carlucci bows out on a procurement issue, the next in command is Robert Costello, the undersecretary of defense for acquisition. Costello is now getting a pension from General Motors, which also does business with the Pentagon. He told us he "takes appropriate action to distance" himself from procurement negotiations with his former employer.

Carlucci joined the Sperry Corp. board of directors in 1984. Sperry and Burroughs Corp. merged as Unisys in 1986, and Carlucci continued as a member of the Unisys board. Unisys spokesman, Peter Hynes, said it is not standard policy for Unisys or Burroughs to pay pensions to retired board members. But Carlucci's pension was arranged by Sperry.

Attorneys at Unisys and the Pentagon were leery about an appearance of conflict of interest when Carlucci became Secretary of Defense. Hynes said, "We decided we should get Unisys out of it." So, in March, Unisys bought an annuity from Travelers Insurance, and the insurance company will pay the pension when Carlucci leaves government.

To avoid writing any more checks to the secretary of defense, Unisys also gave him a lump-sum payment of $82,000 in deferred payments for his services on the Sperry and Unisys boards.

Hynes said that Unisys and Carlucci went "overboard" to avoid the appearance of impropriety. A Pentagon spokesman said Carlucci has not hidden his relationship with the firm.

Unisys has been linked to the Justice Department's probe of Melvin Paisley, the former assistant secretary of the Navy who became a private consultant when he left the Pentagon last year. Investigators are trying to determine whether Paisley and William Galvin, both consultants to Unisys, improperly helped the company get contracts for the Navy's multi-billion-dollar Aegis shipboard combat system.

Reps. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., and Roy Dyson, D-Md., also have come under scrutiny for their relationships with Unisys. According to some accounts of the investigation, Dyson and Chappell sponsored amendments that preserved Unisys contracts for warfare systems that the Navy no longer wanted.

Dukakis' choice is gamble

WASHINGTON—When Michael S. Dukakis chose Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as his running mate, he turned his back, not just on Jesse L. Jackson, but on two decades of Democratic Party thinking. He showed he understands that it is more important to collect electoral votes than to court or console individual constituencies. He stamped himself as a politician who is in the game to win and ready to take a risk.

The gamble won't pay off if Bentsen can't deliver Texas' 29 electoral votes, because the courtly, 67-year-old conservative is not going to fan fervent passions among wavering voters outside the Oil Patch. Lee Atwater, George Bush's hard-nosed campaign manager, had been saying for weeks that the more time and effort Dukakis invested in Texas, the better he liked it, because "no way" was Bush going to lose his adopted home state.

It's too soon to know if that boast is justified. But clearly Dukakis showed himself a coolheaded gambler when he passed up Sen. John Glenn of Ohio (who would have locked up that state's 23 electoral votes) and chose instead to go with Bentsen and a shot at cracking Republican dreams of a solid Sun Belt base.

More than that, he sent an unmistakable message to the activist constituencies of the Democratic Party that the days of litmus-test liberalism are finished. While Jackson was particularly miffed that Dukakis denied him even the face-saving consolation of being able to tell his supporters that he had been consulted, informed in advance and asked to give the ticket his blessing, there is plenty in Bentsen's record to tick off every one of the liberal caucuses in the party: his support for all the major pieces of Reaganomics; his support for school prayer, aid to the contras, MX missiles; also his opposition to federally funded abortions, gun control and labor-law reform.

Bentsen backed President Reagan's positions substantially more often than he did the AFL-CIO's. The New York Times was not wrong when it said, "In many respects, Lloyd Bentsen resembles George Bush more than he does Michael S. Dukakis."

Bentsen's old friend, John Connally, left the Democratic Party because he thought there was no room for Tory Texans like Bentsen and himself in its national leadership. And for 20 years, there hasn't been. From Ed Muskie in 1968, to Tom Eagleton and Sargent Shriver in 1972, to Fritz Mondale in 1976 and 1980, to Geraldine Ferraro in 1984, every Democratic vice-presidential nominee without exception has been a card-carrying liberal from outside the South.

Except for Mondale, they all were running with Northern liberals at the head of the ticket. When Jimmy Carter chose Mondale as his running mate, it seemed superficially to be a ticket-balancing move by the former Georgia governor. In fact, Carter was conceding the same point all the other nominees did: that in convention hall, the activist liberal constituencies had a veto power-through the threat of televised protest-over the person to fill the No. 2 job.

In a show of executive muscle, Dukakis has overridden that veto. This will make it much harder for Bush and Atwater to sell the Reagan Democrats the story that their party again has nominated a "McGovern liberal." Beyond that, Dukakis has moved boldly to remedy what I pointed to four years ago as a fundamental flaw in the (Democratic) Party's approach to politics—a preference for nationalizing its philosophy and procedures and an inclination to ignore the federalism that is built into the structure of American politics.

In a column written from the San Francisco convention, I pointed out that "The permanent building blocks of the party are no longer its state and local affiliates but its national ethnic and interest group caucuses. When Mondale and Ferraro needed to do some political stroking before their nomination, they did not visit the Texas or California delegations, though both those vital states needed attention. Instead, they went to the black and Hispanic caucuses and conferred with leaders of the labor and women's caucuses."

With his choice of Bentsen, Dukakis is telling the political world that he understands electoral-college arithmetic and that constituency politics is now relegated to second place.

Record setters steal show

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A unique dream links Florence Griffith Joyner-Kersey, sisters-in-law who set world records at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.
'They believe they can do the unbelievable,' said Bob Kersee, the coach of both women and husband to Joyner-Kersey.
Joyner-Kersey set a world heptathlon record with 7,215 points. She smashed the mark of 7,158 she established at the 1986 U.S. Olympic Festival in Houston.

chance to win an Olympic medal after a heartbreaking fall in the 1984 Games.
Griffith Joyner ate a pre-race meal of amino acids, vitamins and water and wore one-leggers, a unique racing outfit with one leg covered. She has been under a demanding training program from Kersee, who was amazed at Griffith Joyner's record run.
'I was stunned,' he said. 'I saw her turn into a sixth gear. Her form is dynamite. It doesn't surprise me. I knew she was ready to go for the world record.'

Politics plague boxing trials

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Ed Hopson failed to make the 1988 U.S. Olympic boxing team but learned a valuable lesson should he try again in 1992.
'I learned politics play a big part in amateur boxing,' featherweight Hopson said Sunday after losing his second straight decision to Kelsie Banks in the Olympic Box-Off.

Banks said. 'I didn't have any doubt that I would win, it was a matter of getting better.'
Bowe fought with more spirit than when he lost to Salters in the trials final.
WRIGHTLIFTING
BOCA RATON, (UPI) — Mario Martinez, a silver medalist in the 1984 Olympics, set a U.S. record in the snatch Saturday night in the U.S. Olympic Weightlifting Trials and earned one of 10 spots on the team that will compete in the Summer Games at Seoul, South Korea.

Hopson won the Olympic Trials last week at Concord, Calif. He had to win one of two decisions over 'most noteworthy challenger' Banks this weekend, and Hopson claims he won both Saturday and Sunday.
Hopson's theory is Banks was given the decisions because he is a veteran of over 200 amateur bouts, a two-time U.S. champion, a 1986 world champion and the only U.S. fighter to win a gold medal in the 1987 Pan Am Games.

4-1 decision loss to Michael Collins.
Eight trials winners qualified for the trip to Seoul by winning Saturday: 106-pound Michael Carbajal, 112-pound Arthur Johnson, 132-pound Romalis Ellis, 139-pound Todd Foster, 147-pound Kenneth Gould, 156-pound Roy Jones, 165-pound Anthony Hembrick and 201-pound Ray Mercer.

Also qualifying for the team, coached by Jim Schmitz, were Tony Urrutia, 75-kilogram division; John Bergman, heavyweight, Rich Schutt, 100 kg, Curt White, 82.5 kg, Derrick Cross, 82.5 kg, Arn Kritsky, 90 kg, Michael Jacques, 67.5 kg, Bret Brian, 90 kg, Jim Hyde, a 82.5 kg and Dave Langton at 90 kg.

Hopson is a 17-year-old high school junior from St. Louis who was practically unknown before he won the trials. He defeated Banks in the semifinals at Concord.
'I knew if the fight was close, Kelsie Banks was going to win,' Hopson said of his 3-2 decision loss. 'Kelsie Banks, that's the name. They didn't think I had enough experience.'

Super heavyweight Riddick Bowe, 178-pound Andrew Maynard and 119-pound Kennedy McKinney also earned spots on the Olympic team Sunday. Bowe repeated his Saturday 3-2 decision over Robert Salters. Maynard defeated Andrew Cole 4-1 for the second straight day and trials winner McKinney reversed a Saturday

Are letters written by "real" people?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Are the questions in your column from a real person or do you make them up?

DEAR READER: Every question in my column comes from a real person who has taken the time and trouble to write. In fact, I regularly promise to answer every appropriate question that is sent to me.

Some questions cannot be suitably answered in a column format. The query may be of general interest or unsuitable for publication in a family oriented newspaper. However, I make an effort to answer all readers' questions. In one form or another, I do not make up any questions.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a sober alcoholic and member of Alcoholics Anonymous. I was labeled hyperactive as a child. I took Ritalin, and it helped. I was given it again at age 14, but it just made my symptoms worse. Of course, being an adolescent alcoholic, I occasionally mixed it with booze. Now, at 34, I'm still hyperactive. Is there anything I can do for myself?

DEAR READER: I think that you need further medical evaluation by a neurologist. Hyperactivity (now called attention deficit disorder) in young people is somewhat different from the condition in adults, when the behavior may really be due to stress and anxiety. As you know, recovering alcoholics must be especially cautious about taking mind-altering substances, because addiction to one drug can often be displaced onto another. Therefore, I believe a qualified neurologist should be able to sort out the organic (physical) problem from the functional (emotional) ones in your case. Then you can examine the treatment options.

DEAR DR. GOTT: About 20 years ago I had a nervous breakdown. I've been taking Stelazine since then. Can you recommend another drug that would have fewer side effects?

DEAR READER: I can't recommend anything without knowing more about your illness. Stelazine is a major tranquilizer that is used for the treatment of severe mental disorders. It is very helpful in allowing certain patients to function in society at large. Like all powerful psychotropic drugs, Stelazine does have side effects, including drowsiness, weakness, blurred vision and a form of muscle/nerve malfunction that resembles Parkinson's disease. To my knowledge, most major tranquilizers have similar, associated side-effects.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
North-South had a nice scientific auction to reach a fair six-spade contract. Unfortunately declarer's play of the hand did not match his bidding science.

When responder showed two suits and then removed three no-trump to four spades, he was clearly inviting South to go to slam. South had enough sound values to accept, so he asked for aces and bid six. When dummy came down, declarer could see that the success of the contract rested simply on being able to bring in the spade suit with only one loser. It seemed that East would need to hold the jack of spades for the slam to succeed, so declarer won the opening lead with dummy's jack and led dummy's spade six. When East followed low, declarer inserted the 10, losing to West's jack. Later a spade to the queen forced out East's ace, and South could eventually pick up East's guarded nine. The contract was down only one, but proper play would have won the day.

The correct technique is for South to first lead toward the spade queen in dummy. This succeeds in today's deal because West holds the singleton jack, but it would also work if West held the singleton ace. When the jack appears, declarer can later get to dummy and play East for the nine of spades. That will bring in the trump suit with only one loser, and the slam will make.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osul
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 19, 1988

In the year ahead you might find yourself looking for ways to put your resources to work. There will be opportunities available, but each one must be screened very carefully.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People who depend upon you will be extremely disappointed and angry if you do not fulfill your commitments. Do not leave matters of this kind until the last moment. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A matter of consequence might not come off in a way that lives up to your expectations today. Treat the situation philosophically, not angrily.

VIROO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial or commercial ventures could be a bit tricky today. Do not take anything for granted. What appears to be a sure thing could misfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're likely to be more fortunate today doing things on your own than with a partner whose opinions aren't in harmony with yours. Avoid dead weight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although you will be ambitious and energetic today, your productivity could be affected if you try to do more than you can comfortably manage. Don't put yourself under pressure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) One of your close friends has a chip on the shoulder today, but the bark is worse than the bite. Don't take the comments to heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) To get others to do things for you today, you must ask in ways that aren't dictatorial or demanding. If you come on too strong, your pleas will be ignored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might be tempted to retort sharply today to a guy who thinks he is right about everything. He'll be wrong as usual, so just pass it off.

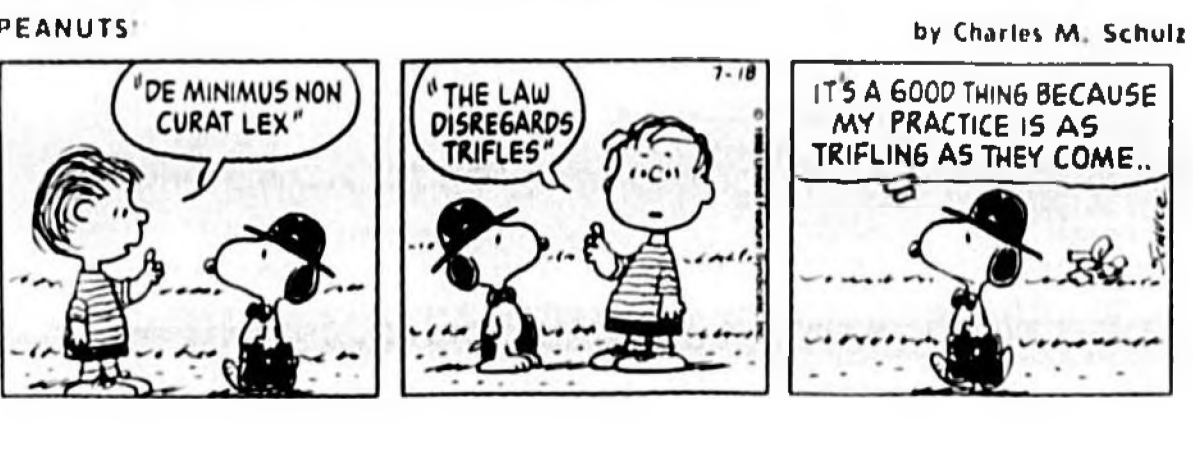

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, be careful that another does not make a commitment on your behalf without your authorization or knowledge. It will be a person with whom you are closely involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It could be self-deceiving today if you are too assertive in dealings with associates. Try to think of everyone as part of a team rather than opponents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let minor issues distract you from your primary target today. If they are given too much attention, they could obscure your objective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck could be a bit fickle and impatient today. If you're not prepared to act when she is ready, she might desert you and go elsewhere. Move quickly.
