awaited launch. The shuttle, the key to the nation's future in space, relies heavily on computers to determine where the ship should be going and to figure out what to command the engines and flight control surfaces to do to get there.

It is because the computer system is so important that four redundant computers are aboard the Columbia plus the backup of a different design and containing different instructions. In addition, a spare computer is stashed in a locker in the Columbia's lower deck. The computer system has been designed to fail operational, meaning if one of the brains fails in flight, the crew can proceed with a normal mission. A second, third and even fourth failure would be a fail safe condition as long as the backup was working properly.

The Columbia's five computers are manufactured by IBM and company spokesman Dan Udell said the problem could be either in the hardware or in the "software," the programs that give the machines their "intelligence."

The computer laboratory at the Johnson Space Center in Houston was testing the programming to see if it contained an error.

Crew fatigue was a major factor in the decision to scrub today's launch, but it also became apparent that engineers would be unable to fix the balky computer quickly.

After engineers in Houston reported "no joy" in a second attempt to remedy the problem, launch director George Page and Richard Smith, director of the Kennedy Space Center, made the decision to call it a day.

The Columbia is the world's first reusable spaceship. Its launch had been set back more than 212 years by a variety of technical problems. Today's problems, however, were of the kind not unexpected on a new spacecraft during the final hours of its first countdown to

It was apparent as the morning dragged on that the astronauts were getting tired of waiting.

"Just laying here, you know," replied Young, the veteran flight commander who was strapped on his back in his spacecraft seat, a position doctors have said the crew could hold for no more than

Young, 50-year-old veteran of four spaceflights, and space rookie Crippen, 43, crawled into the Columbia's cabin at 4:19 a.m., two and a half hours after they began their day at the spaceport's special crew quarters.

The countdown went relatively smoothly up to the final minutes. The shuttle's 15-story tall external fuel tank was filled quickly with more than 500,000 gallons of frigid liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen.

The shuttle, standing 184 feet tall on the oceanside launch pad, looked like a brilliant white monument before dawn in the glow of 50 xenon floodights.

The shuttle was developed on a shoestring budget and its problems were significant. But project officials were confident all the question marks had been erased by the time the countdown started late last Sunday.

The shuttle is the key to America's future in space. It will be a spacefaring cargo ship replacing conventional unmanned satellite launchers used for a few minutes and then dumped into the ocean or discarded in space.

"I'll catch a fox and put him in a box and then I'll let him go" goes the old children's song and that's precisely what Seminole County Animal Control Officer Debbie Burrow was called on to do this week. She proved clever enough to rescue a red fox perched on an old piling in the water along the Lake Monroe seawall. Capture was accomplished by slipping the loop of a snare over the animal's head then tightening it around the animal's body. The Fox was later released in a wooded area of the county.

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - Prime Minister Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski threatened to resign today unless the Polish parliament banned all strikes for two months and asked to renegotiate the labor pact that ended last summer's strikes.

Jaruzelski, in his first major address since his inaugural speech Feb. 12, said the economic situation was so bad it was impossible to fulfill totally the agreement signed with workers to end strikes last summer and called for a renegotiation of the pact.

The premier told the nation's lawmakers most of Solidarity's 10 million members want peace to strengthen "socialist Poland" but some groups in the independent union have "overgrown political ambitions."

"Restoration of peace becomes more and more difficult," he said in the nationally televised speech. Therefore, he said, "The government submits a bill on a suspendion of strikes for two months."

He called the ban a "patriotic duty" that would ease tensions. The government has the right to order a twomonth emergency suspension of strikes once a year under the new labor law, which has not yet been formally passed."

Developers, City: Half A Victory Each

The city of Casselberry and the Bonaire Development Co., embroiled in a legal dispute over construction of high-rise buildings in the city, came out of a court hearing Thursday having both won and lost.

Circuit Judge Robert McGregor ordered the city to show cause by April 30 why Bonaire's proposed Carmel-By-The-Lake high-rise condominium project shouldn't be approved. But at the same time, McGregor denied Bonaire's request for a . temporary injunction prohibiting hie city from passing any law or amendment to existing law which would restrict the company's planned use of the property.

The city council is considering an ordinance which would ban any construction over 35 feet in the city. As proposed, Carmel-By-The-Lake would contain several 10 and 11-story buildings on a 44-acre site on Lake Howell.

The controversy began on March 16 when the city council, by a 3-2 vote, rejected the Bonaire proposal. Bonaire then filed a lawsuit March 30 against the city and the three councilmen who voted against the project - Frank Schutte, Thomas Embree, and John Leighty - asking the court to order the city

In the most far-reaching family-planning effort in history, the country is using new incentives, punishments and contraceptives to hold back its exploding population.

This all-out drive is paying off. In 1970, 75,000 Chinese babies were born every day. In 1979, only 47,000 were born daily.

But the net population growth rate of just 1.17 percent is considered "unacceptable." China's goal is zero population growth by the year 2,000, when its population is expected to level off at 1.2 billion.

"Fewer people means better people" is the theme blazoned on posters all over China. This is a complete switch from my last visit in 1958, when the Chinese contended that "more people means more productivity." At that time, an economics professor had scoffed, "We're not worried about Malthus." (Thomas Malthus, an English political

If the mother gets pregnant again, the couple has two choices: a free abortion at a commune clinic or the loss of all of these

Speed Limit Bill Buried

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Washington's attempt to force states to comply with the national 55-mph speed limit by threatening withdrawal of federal highway funds apparently worked in Florida.

"We simply cannot afford to jeopardize programs that depend on this federal money," Tampa Sen. Pat Frank said shortly before the Senate Finance Committee buried proposals to raise the speed limit - a move that would cost Florida $342 million in federal transportation funds.

U.S. Nuclear Sub Rams Into Freighter

TOKYO (UPI) — A U.S. nuclear submarine collided with a Japanese freighter, sinking the cargo vessel and leaving two of its crewmen missing and 13 other sailors drifting in the East China sea for 18 hours before they were picked up by a Japanese destroyer, authorities said today.

A U. S. Embassy spokesman identified the submarine as the U.S.S. George Washington. Officials of Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said the submarine collided with the 2,350-ton Nissho Maru this morning in the East China sea, and 13 survivors from the freighter's crew were found drifting in a rubber dinghy 18 hours luter, 40 miles off the Japanese coast.

Two members of the freighter crew were missing, the Japanese officials said.

The George Washington was the West's first ship to be armed with ballistic missiles. It is 381 feet long and has a normal complement of 140 crewmen, including 12 officers and 128 enlisted men.

The submarine, which was carrying Polaris missiles, suffered no damage to its nuclear plant or weapons systems, a U.S Navy spokesman said.

The collision occurred about 10 a.m. (8 p.m. EST Thursday) in the East China Sea, about 94 miles west of Japan's southern main island of

The George Washington surfaced after the collision to offer assistance to the freighter, but "the vessel disappeared from sight due to poor visibility caused by fog and rain," a Navy statement said

The submarine then submerged and the Navy refused to say where it went. "We do not discuss submarine locations," the spokesman said. Commissioned in 1959, the 6,700-ton George Washington is the first of the strategic Polaris missile subs. It is nuclear powered and carries 16 missiles. Japanese officials quoted the freighter's survivors as saying they saw a "star insignia bordered with a white line" painted on the submarine, which they said surfaced after the collision, but then dived and disappeared. Military experts noted the area is one of the routes used by warships from the Soviet base at Vladivostok. The Soviet Union currently has 125 submarines, including 60 nuclear-powered ones, operating in the Far East, according to Western military figures.

The Nissho Maru, which left Kobe on Tuesday, was bound for Shanghai when the collision occurred. Officials said the 13 survivors were picked up by the Japanese destroyer Akigumo.

Reagan May Be Released From Hospital Saturday

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan will be released from the hospital Saturday morning to begin his White House convalescence from a bullet wound to the chest, it was learned today.

Doctors have cleared the president to return to the White House on what would be the 13th day of his hospital stay, administration sources said today.

Reagan had no visitors this morning aside from his three top aides and awoke early to join the rest of the nation in watching the launch countdown for the space shuttle Columbia. Doctors treating the 70-year-old Reagan for a bullet wound suffered during last week's assassination attempt said the president had a "very good and restful night's sleep" in the hospital and his temperature remained normal.

Reagan read the morning newspapers and briefing papers, took a stroll and had orange juice, granola and decaffeinated coffee for breakfast, aides said. He switched on the television to watch preparations for the spacecraft launching, which was stalled by a computer problem.

"The president has had another excellent day," Dr. Dennis O'Leary, spokesman for George Washington University Medical Center, said in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America." "He's doing extremely O'Leary said it "looks real close to sure" that Reagan will return to the White House this weekend, but he said doctors are "still not yet totally decided between Saturday and Sun-

"All thumbs up," O'Leary added, saying a final decision on when Reagan can leave the hospital would be made after chest X-rays were taken today.

Oil Imports Decline Proves Out Old Law

Oil imports by the United States dropped to 5.7 million barrels a day last month — the lowest figure since 1975. The amount of gasoline in storage in this country is at an all-time high. Refineries which were operationg at 81 percent of capacity a year ago are operating at 72 percent of capacity today.

We are seeing a classic demonstration of an old law of the marketplace: As the price of a commodity rises, consumption declines. The decline in demand for oil and gasoline is the direct result of price increases decreed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in the last decade.

In 1971 the posted price of oil from the Middle East was about $2.50 a barrel. Today it averages $35 a barrel, or 14 times the old figure, and the shock to the economies of oil-importing nations has been profound. We can regret that as a nation our response to the shock has taken so long — that we did not move more swiftly with the conservation efforts, stimulus to production and other measures now reflected in reduced imports and high fuel inventories.

What we have achieved so far, however, is significant. We see the refreshing news that OPEC ministers will meet in Geneva next month to discuss something other than a further increase in prices. Their meeting is more likely to result in a new strategy to keep prices from falling.

There is some comfort in that, but no cause for complacency. The $35-a-barrel price has grown 'soft" only because Saudi Arabia has been pumping oil at a relatively generous rate to make up for the interruption in the flow of oil from Iran and Iraq earlier in their now-dormant war. The Saudis can firm up prices by cutting back production.

This suggests the world is as much in bondage to the OPEC cartel as ever, but that is not entirely itrue. Not only are we making headway in reducing demand for petroleum, but more is coming onto the market from non-OPEC sources. Mexico increased its production last year by 32 percent. Oil from the north Sea was up 10 percent. There is a boom in drilling in the United States. All of this is threatening OPEC's ability to dictate how much oil will be available and what it will

What is a barrel of oil really worth? Economists quoted by the Congressional Budget Office in a recent report say the "competitive price" of petroleum today should lie between $15 and $20 a barrel. That price would serve to ration its consumption as a scarce commodity and stretch out supplies until alternate fuel sources are fully developed to replace it. A price in that range also would not have the wrenching economic consequences of oil bills at $35 a barrel, especially for developing countries.

If we accept $20 as the theoretical value of a barrel of oil, it underlies the magnitude of the "tax" which Arab governments dominating the OPEC Cartel are imposing on the world economy to amass huge capital surpluses and finance their grandiose development schemes and military ambitions.

Even with imports at 5.7 million barrels a day, Americans are paying $75 billion a year for foreign oil — much of it pure tribute to OPEC. Had we not managed to bring imports down from the 8.3 million barrels per day they reached in 1978, the bill would be $109 billion. That's some consolation, and reason to try harder to loosen OPEC's hold on the petroleum market.

BERRY'S WORLD

"No more kiss-and-tell lobbyists for the rest of

Of course, that has nothing to do with bullets and bombs, but it does go to show the kind of thing you can expect if you're still around after the mushroom cloud clears.

Anyway, back to my original topic of the feds being ready for the Big One. A couple of weeks ago, a public servant friend of mine received his instructions on what to do in case of enemy attack. Not seeing any harm in it, my friend showed them to me. And in the interests of an informed populace, I herewith pass them along. At first glance, the instructions seemed innocuous enough. The sheet read simply: "In case of war, follow directions."

"All employees with or without emergency assignments should follow this procedure: If you are prevented from going to your regular place of work because of an enemy attack, GO TO THE NEAREST POST OFFICE, ASK THE POST-MASTER FOR A FEDERAL EMPLOYEE RESERVE CARD, FILL IT OUT AND RETURN IT TO HIM. He will see that it is forwarded to the Civil Service Commission which will maintain the registration file for your area. We can then decide where and when you should report to

While no one believes it will ever happen, let us suppose that my friend (we'll call him Jac) has just crawled out from the rubble of an enemy attack. He recalls the proper procedure and, being a good bureaucrat, does what he was told. He dutifully begins looking for a post office.

After walking for four days and 200 miles, Jack finds one still standing. His face gaunt, his clothes tattered, he staggers to the counter, but just as he gets there, the clerk says, "Sorry, this window is closed," and slams it shut.

Jack stumbles to the next window and is told to get in line behind 20 other people. Two hours later, his turn comes and he croaks, "I want to register."

"I'm sorry," says the postal clerk. "This window is just for stamps. Registered mail is at the window on the end."

"No, no," Jack pleads. "All I want is a federal employee registration card." "We don't sell those here, sir. Now, do you want any stamps or not?" "Listen to me!" he yells, growing desperate. "I was instructed after enemy attack to find the nearest post office and fill out a card!"

Unperturbed, the clerk directs Jack to the parcel post window.

He shuffles over, and after waiting in line for three hours, is informed that the post office has run out of federal employee registration cards,

They suggest he try another post office. So, he does. Four hundred miles and a week later, he finds another post office intact. And lo and behold, they have registration cards. "Oh Fate, you lovely woman, they have registration cards!" After catching his breath, Jack staggers to the counter and beings filling out the card. But the pen quits. He looks at the postmaster.

"What do you expect? There's a war on, you "But I have to register," Jack says, "or the Civil Service Commission won't know where I am in case the government wants to start up again. Couldn't I borrow your pen?"

"What? And ruin the point? Listen, why don't you go over to the Smithtown post office. I hear the pens are still working over there."

Flustered and red in the face, Jack, card clutched tightly in his fist, walks 60 miles to the Smithtown post office where he finds a working pen, fills out his card, and mails it that very day.

Years later, he is still waiting for a reply. For in his haste, he had forgotten to write down his new nine-digit ZIP code.

Challenge To Union Injustice

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Daniel Boswell, a New Jersey electrician, probably didn't realize that joining a union required him to relinquish the First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and assembly guaranteed to other citizens.

In fact, those constitutional rights of Boswell and millions of other union members supposedly are protected by the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, a 1959 federal law popularly known as the Landrum-Griffin Act.

"Every member of any labor organization shall have the right to meet and assemble freely," says the statute, "and to express any views, arguments or opinions."

Court decisions in recent decades have held that the law applies to criticism of a union's policies, the conduct of its officers and the handling of its financial matters - even if the charges are libelous, malicious or false.

In addition, the law prohibits any union from seeking "to fine, suspend, expel or otherwise discipline any of its members for exercising any right to which he is entitled under the provisions of this act."

But Boswell, a member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers since 1964, discovered that those guarantees weren't worth much when he joined a group of union reformers in criticizing the leadership of his IBEW local.

After a long campaign in which he and other insurgents alleged inadequacies in the handling of union funds and representation in collective bargaining, Boswell was elected to his local's executive board in mid-1977.

But within the ensuing 20 months, Boswell was formally accused of making "false accusations," found guilty in a union disciplinary proceeding, removed from the executive board, fined $1,500 and prohibited from holding any union office for the following six years.

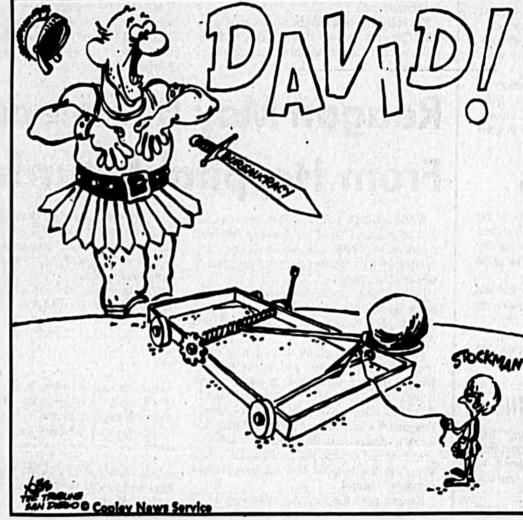

After a brief reinstatement, he was charged in early 1979 with provoking a work stoppage, fined $150, again removed from office.

Hundreds of other union insurgents are similarly punished every year, but few have the fortitude, patience, time or money to mount an effective challenge.

Boswell's case, however, attracted the attention of the Association for Union Democracy, a non-profit organization dedicated to defending the rights of union members, and a New York City law firm that volunteered its services.

A civil suit filed on Boswell's behalf in U.S. District Court in Newark, N.J., was resolved in March when IBEW officials signed an agreement mandating broad union-wide reforms believed to be unprecedented in

Because the IBEW is one of the country's 10 largest unions, the little-publicized yet farreaching precedent could serve as an inspiration to those frustrated by many other unions' illegal devices to abrogate workers' constitutional rights.

Democrats Bide Time

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Having been badly mauled in the last election, Democrats in Congress seem to be biding their time and avoiding a direct confrontation with the Republican forces, particularly with the Reagan White House.

Democratic leaders are clearly skeptical of President Reagan's plan to revive the nation's economy by drastic budget and tax cuts, but they are faced with the harsh reality of the election sweep that put Reagan in the White House, turned control of the Senate over to Republicans, and sharply reduced the Democratic majority in the House.

The voters expressed their will and the Democrats are not anxious to oppose that will, lest their ranks be further decimated in the next election. Their chief hope seems to be that the voters will have a change of heart or that the administration's proposed remedles will be proven wrong.

Speaker Thomas O'Neill promised Reagan a political honeymoon, free of criticism, for the first several months of his administration. And in his daily meeting with reporters, O'Neill regularly intones that the Democrats "are not going to be obstructionists."

In both the House and Senate the Democrats have gone to remarkable lengths to cooperate with Republicans in arranging timetables for the administration's proposals to get prompt and fair consideration.

And when the administration was slow in getting details of its economic plan to Congress, the Democrats complained indignantly that their cooperative spirit was being abused and the committees could not begin work on Reagan's plan.

The Democratic leadership's record of cooperation with the Reagan mandate is thus exemplarly, but in their hearts the Democrats remain firm nonbellevers. And they expect - or at least hope - that the public will soon see through the plan.

There is "widespread misunderstanding" about the administration's economic program and few people understand how drastically they will be affected if the program goes through, O'Neill said recently.

"I think the average person on the street has no concept of the severe changes" in store for them under the Reagan administration, he

In the past few weeks, O'Neill has often indicated he expects the public will eventually reach such an understanding and. presumably, protest.

In a recent television news report O'Neill thought he saw a glimmer of the turning tide, and promptly mentioned it the next day in his meeting with reporters.

But so far O'Neill and the other Democrats do not have evidence of a massive change in public sentiment. He concedes that Reagan is doing a better job of reaching the public than the Democrats.

The Democrats find comfort in the fact that some of Reagan's budget cuts are opposed by some of his fellow Republicans.

One of the first proposals to reach the full House will be a bill to delay a scheduled increase in dairy price supports, a program that has enjoyed GOP support in the past,

"Opposition seems to be coming from Republicans themselves," O'Neill noted with satisfaction recently.

And, as if anxious to hurry the moment of Republican discomfort, O'Neill said the bill would quickly be brought up for a vote by the

JEFFREY HART

A Rural Leftist Beehive

Populist conservatives often talk as if the Leftist beehive has twin headquarters in Manhattan and Washington, D.C.

Those are indeed interesting hives, containing all sorts of busy Leftist bees accomplishing different tasks, but little hives flourished even in white-steepled rural New Hampshire.

The New York Times recently published on its Op-Ed page a little piece by a Mary Ellen Donovan, datelined Plainfield, New Hampshire. Donovan was described as "a writer active in the women's and disarmanent movements."

The adjectives "women's" and "disarmament" arrest the alert eye, of which more in a moment.

The burden of the Donovan piece, which the Times found worthy of mass circulation, was that the town meeting of Plainfield had voted, 67-17, for a freeze on all nuclear arms.

She noted that Hanover, N.H., had voted 308 to 38 for the same thing, and that Last Thetford, Vt., "even went so far as to pass a resolution to inform Ronald Reagan and Co. that the United States should send neither aid nor military personnel to El Salvador."

So, there the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot - or at least the vote - heard, if not around the world, at least on the Op-Ed page of the Times. A few observations, if you please. Donovon makes every effort to link these events to the town meeting democracy of the Colonial era.

It "was in the town meeting that the ideas and ideals embodied in the Constitution were first tested out." Hogwash to that linkage. The sociology involved today is entirely different. The farmers of the Revolutionary era were a producing class. Vermont and New Hampshire small towns today are often heavily populated by dropouts from the 20th century — people who wear beards and funny clothes and live on "natural food." The resort industry is Vermont's biggest money-earner.

The people in these town meetings don't know anything about nuclear weapons about throw-weight, targeting accuracy, Soviet capabilities, the analysis of Soviet intentions, and so forth. They are a bunch of granola eaters voting against big, bad bombs.

Now it's also true that the towns named, Plainfield and East Thetford, lie in the geographical and cultural penumbra of Dartmouth College. Did East Thetford vote against aid to El Salvador? Of course it did. and of course it would. It also cast vote after vote in town meetings against the Vietnam War, one such meeting being featured on CBS

East Thetford, Vt., is not a town of sturdy yeomen. It's full of college professors and people who have turned barns into artists' studios.

The 18th-century farmers and yeomen who fought the British were sturdily independent.

Refugees Lose In Battle For N. Africa

WASHINGTON-On March 3, King Hassan II of Morocco announced to his countrymen that the five-year war for the Western Sahara had ended in victory. "The recovery of our Sahara has ended," he proclaimed.

Five days earlier and 500 miles away, Mohamed Abdel Aziz commander of the Algerian-backed Polisario rebel army, congratulated 2,000 of his guerrilla fighters on winning control of 90 percent of the disputed former Spanish colony. The exchange of rhetoric was typical of this little-known desert war. There had been no dramatic change in the situation during that five-day interval. In fact, the boasts of both the king and the rebel leader were as empty of substance as the desert winds that whin continually across the desolate Coloradosized territory.

I sent my associate Peter Grant to North Africa to take a first-hand look at the desert war. He spent a month there on both sides of the shifting "front lines," traversing more interviewing dozens of officials, soldiers and prisoners-of-war. Here is his first report: "At first glance, the Western Sahara--a dreary stretch of real estate encompassing craggy mountains, endless sand dunes and rocky planes that resemble the surface of the moon - hardly seems worth fighting over. What the war boils down to is prestige, phosphates and patriotism.

"Hassan laid his prestige - and possibly his throne - on the line when he declared the Western Sahara a part of historic Morocco in 1976. He also undoubtedly had his eye on the enormous phosphate deposits in the area, worth an estimated $6 billion. Most Western observers agree that the war has now become a matter of self-preservation for Hassan; they doubt that his regime would survive a withdrawal from the area. "For the native tribes that furnish the Polisario guerrillas' manpower, the conflict is a patriotic war for independence. Like the fanatics of the Palestine Liberation Organization their only alternative to fighting is a continued bleak existence in Algerian refugee camps, where they fled to escape Moroccan rule.

"I found that the Polisarios have organized the refugees - who include many nomads from drought-stricken areas of West Africa as well an an estimated 100,000 Sahraoui inhabitants of the Western Sahara - into a spartan communal society where the state controls all activities. Children are put in boarding schools at the age of 6 and begin military training at 10. The struggle against Morocco is the overriding theme of the refugees' existence.

"Though heavily outnumbered by the Moroccan troops, the Polisario guerrillas have an equalizer: their intimate knowledge of the terrain. They have been able to force Hassan's soldiers into defensive perimeters around the major population centers, while the guerrillas roam the countryside at will,

"I traveled in Polisario Land Rovers all the way from a refugee camp in Tindouf, Algeria, to the Atlantic Ocean, and from the Mauritanian border on the south to abandoned Moroccan bases in the northern Ouarkziz Mountains. The guerrillas showed no sign of concern that they might meet enemy forces. We traveled in broad daylight, lit campfires at night and only rarely squinted up to see if Moroccan planes were attacking out of the sun.

"In an entire week, not a single Moroccan patrol was sighted as we crisscrossed the Western Sahara. We saw only one high-flying observation plane, possibly one of the OV-10s recently purchased from the United States.

"But there were unmistakable signs that the war is a real one; the silent ruins of Moroccan Army outposts, littered with destroyed vehicles, discarded weapons and decaying corpees.

"So far, the Polisarios' military victories have not brought the refugees out of their dismal camps. After every sortie, the guerrillas must retreat to safety across the Algerian border."

Browning Of Junipers Expiainea

Questions are a sign of an intelligent mind. One of our many services offered at the Agricultural Center is answering questions pertaining to plants and gardening. Here are some questions recently asked. I hope the answers will help other county residents who may be experiencing the same problems. Q. My arborvitae is turning brown. I sprayed it with an insecticide, but it didn't seem to help. What causes this?

A. Browning of arborvitaes, as well as other Junipers, may be caused by one of the following problems:

(1) Dry weather and insufficient water - With the recent dry spell we've had, this is the most likely cause. Browning may occur gradually or suddenly, associated with dry hot weather. Dead roots and twigs usually have a dry, shriveled appearance. Corrective measures: Water thoroughly every week or ten days during dry weather.

(2) Spider mite damage — Gradual yellowing or browning. particularly during dry weather. Strike a twig or branch against a white sheet of paper and look for minute, red, spiderlike insects. They can be controlled by spraying with Kelthane.

(3) Twig blight (fungus disease) — Twigs throughout plant turn brown and die. Control: Remove and destroy diseased twigs and spray at 10-day intervals with either Benomyl. Copper or Zineb fungicides.

(4) Leafspot (fungus disease) — Usually it affects one side, but may hurt the entire plant. The foliage and-or twigs die. Sometimes the plant may lose foliage and then put out new I foliage. Control: Spray when disease is noted with one of the fungicides remommended for twig blight above.

(5) Root problems - Gradual browning of entire plant, usually starting from the bottom and moving upward. Many factors can cause root problems to develop and very little can be done to save the plant, except for trying to prevent them from getting started. Root disorders can be caused by nematodes, overwatering, poor drainage, mechanical injury to the plant or planting an extremely root-bound plant without loosening up the root ball.

Q. I read in a gardening book that many woody plants are attacked by a disease called mushroom root rot. Can you tell me how this can be prevented?

A. Mushroom root rot attacks a large number of our fruit trees, shade trees and woody ornamentals. This disease is caused by a fungus which is parasitic on roots of pines, oaks, etc. When pieces of these roots remain in the soil when the land is cleared, the fungus may attack cultivated shrubs and trees. Also, overwatering and-or poor drainage can contribute to the spread of mushroom root rot. It may require several years for it to injur the roots enough to be evident. Many times the mushroom will appear on the trunk base or crown roots before the top of the plant shows evidence of being unhealthy.

There is no way to prevent or control this disease in established plantings. When mushroom root rot is found, it is advisable to remove the infected plants with as much as their root system as possible. These plants should be disposed of to prevent the spread of the disease.

New woody ornamentals should not be planted in the same spot until the soil has been furnigated with Vapan or a similar material. The only means of prevention is to maintain good b. cultural practices conducive to plant growth.

Q. We are planning on building a home on a wooded lot. We would like to keep a number of trees as part of the landscape, but have heard that trees around new homes may die after a couple of years or so due to construction injury. Is it possible to avoid this and save the trees?

A. Yes. A building site may decline greatly in value if its trees are killed off due to construction injury. Most mechanical injuries to trees during construction work are preventable if suitable precautions are taken in time.

Simple fences and barriers erected to prevent damage to the the trunk and root system are often all that is necessary. All bu supervisors, foremen and workmen concerned should be informed of the serious tree damage that results from collisions by trucks, bulldozers and other equipment with trees and compaction of the root system by heavy equipment.

Unfortunately, external symptoms of root injury usually show up when it is too late to save the tree. So, take the extra time to protect your valuable trees during home construction.

Pair, Wed Twice, Questions Date To Mark Anniversary

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married May 10, 1956. We were divorced in 1970 and stayed divorced for a year and a half. Then we were married again in November 1972.

We have always celebrated our anniversary on May 10, but now we have a question. Should we celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary on May 10, 1981, and forget about the year and a half we weren't married? Or should we wait until all the time we spent as man and wife actually totals 25 years? This is a small town and a lot of people here know that we were apart for a year and a half. What do we say if somebody mentions it? We'd really like to have a nice 25th

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 15 and have a brother who is 11. We both have our own rooms, although we might as well have only one between us. My problem started last summer when my mother put a cot in my bedroom so my brother could sleep there. The reason was to save energy by running only one air-conditioner instead of two. I didn't put up much of a fuss, although I hated not having my privacy.

It's nearly a year later, and my brother

I've talked to my mother about it and get nowhere. She says she can't make him sleep in his own room if he says he has nightmares.

My brother thinks because he sleeps in my room, it's his, too, and he is in it during the daytime. Now I have absolutely no privacy. Don't you think I should have a room of my own? BROTHER TROUBLE

Davis Dashes Seminole To County Title

By SAM COOK Herald Sports Editor

Seminole's Brenda Davis burned to a meet record in the 440-yard dash to lead the Lady Tribe to an easy victory in the Seminole County Track Meet Thursday at Seminole.

Coach Emory Blake's frisky ladies coasted in with 116 points to Lyman's 77. Lake Howell (714), Lake Brantley (64), Trinity Prep (17) and Oviedo (101/2) followed.

The victory eased the sting somewhat of a narrow loss to Lyman in last week's Five Star championships.

"We should have won it last week," moaned Blake. "But the girls were home this week. They were ready."

And the readjest was Davis. She blazed the oval in 59 seconds to cut .5 off former Lake Howell and Lyman sprinter Kelly Thomas' old mark.

Davis also turned in an amazingly better 58.9 split in the mile relay won by Seminole in 4:05. She was preceded by Sharon Newell, Revenia Burch and Crystal Caldwell. The Tribe quartet was 10 seconds ahead of Lyman.

For her outstanding performance Davis was named the meet's most valuable runner.

"We had a lot of people who performed better than normal," was how Blake explained the 39-point victory margin. "Cathy Jones had her best throw of the уевг."

The Seminole junior was just 21/2 inches behind Lake Howell's Mary Colson who won the event in 38-feet-5. In the discus, Jones took third with a toss of 101

While Davis broke one record to take the running MVP, Lake Brantley's Lori Carroll leaped a record 5-feet-61/2 to erase the high jump mark by Lyman's Jane Albershardt.

The jump earned Carroll the field MVP. The talented sophomore also placed third in the long jump (16-feet-512), and fourth in the 880-yard run. (2:33.4).

The Lady Seminoles' Tony Hardy nipped Schowanda Williams of Lyman 28,2-26.3 in the 220-yard dash in one of the feature flashes of the day. Crystal Caldwell was third in 26.5.

Hardy also won the long jump in 17feet-8. Arlene Jones was second in 16-

Along with the 220, the 100-yard dash featured a photo finish as Seminole's flashy freshman Traci Brown outleaned Lyman's Elaina Howard at the tape.

Brown ran an 11.67, Howard was 11.69 and Revonda Caldwell was a very close third in 11.7. Sharon Jenkins gave Seminole three of four in 12.0.

Trinity Prep's Teresa Cleveland then grabbed the class A school's only first place by stepping the 110-yard low hurdles in 14.8 to easily beat Seminole's Revenia Burch by .9 of a second.

While Blake's girls were rejoicing their overwhelming triumph, boys' coach Hank Daviero was lamenting the lame and wounded.

Seminole dropped a three-point verdict to David Huggins' Lyman squad in the male competition of the county meet 90-

A pulled muscle suffered by Lenny Sutton of Seminole in the preliminaries of the dash events may have cost the Tribe a shot at the title.

"When Lenny came up lame that really hurt," said Daviero, who was counting on Sutton for at least four points.

"Dion Jackson hurt his leg too, I think that may have cost us four or five points too," said Daviero.

Jackson went 39-feet-71/2 in the triple jump for fourth place, but usually goes 41 feet or better.

Oviedo paced by Ray Williams 58-feet-5 heave in the shot put breaking his own meet record took a close third with 83 points. Lake Brantley was fourth (61), Lake Howell (60) and Trinity Prep (21) completed the field. While Sutton was sorely missed in the sprints where the Tribe could only place as high as fourth, he wasn't needed in the relays. The combination of Ralph Byrd, Jim Voltoline, Mike Wooten and Vince 1. Lyman 50.8 Edwards broke the mile relay mark by running a 3:25.7. Voltoline and Byrd also joined David Humphrey and Larry Eason to erase the mile medley relay in 3:40.19.

Eason also added the triple jump title to his laurels with a hop, skip and jump of 41-feet-1. Eason, Voltoline, Humphrey and Byrd took top honors in the 440-yard relay in 44.2.

Seminole's Steve Grace leaped 6-feet-2 to capture the high jump. Lake Howell's Chul Kim won the 120yard low hurdles in 14.9.

4:31.75. Lake Howell's Darryl Young, MVP.

who attended Seminole last year, set a record in the 440-yard dash with a 49.3 clocking.

The Greyhounds' Steve Aleksevitch went 11-feet-6 to win the pole vault, but it was two feet off his 13-feet-6 Five Star

Oviedo's Williams was named the field Lyman's Randy Beary won the mile in MVP, while Young earned the running

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP-Winfield Fine, But Murcer Slam Lifts Yankees

By United Press International

In his debut in New York Yankee pinstripes Thursday, Dave Winfield fared very nicely.

He picked up a pair of singles and two walks in five plate appearances to contribute to a 10-3 Yankee victory over the Texas Rangers.

But it was a familiar friend to Yankee fans, Bobby Murcer, who crashed a pinch-hit grand slam in the seventh inning that brought the largest openingday crowd - 55,123 - in Yankee Stadium history to its feet. Ironically, Murcer was almost cut by the team before the break of spring training.

Murcer has always been special to New York. He broke into the majors with the Yankees in 1965 and played with them for 10 years before being traded. He returned to the Yankees in

"I really don't know why they gave me such an ovation before I hit the home run." said Murcer. "Maybe it's because I'm an old friend. This is the only place to play. There are no other real fans around anywhere."

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) - Jack Nicklaus may be only a putter away from his 20th major golf championship.

But although he let a half dozen tour; Lon Hinkle, who was second at "makeable" birdie putts get away Thursday, when he shot a 2-under-par 70 to trail a quartet of first-round leaders by a stroke, Nicklaus is a formidable foe when playing well in a "major." And

It's The Latest Thing

Mud Racing Proves Men Will Be Boys

By CINDY MOOY
Herald Staff Writer

'Boys will be boys' as any mother knows who has laundered her young son's clothes after a day of outdoor play. And as the wife of any mud slinger knows, men will be boys sometimes, too.

A mud slinger by definition is a full-grown, adult man (who some would think should know better) who works hard to fine tune his truck into prime running condition, then drives it into a field of thick, black mud. For sport. On purpose.

As a sticker on the bumper of one mud slinger's truck said, "The only difference between a boy and a man is the price of his toys."

A version of this "good, clean sport," the Sorrento Mud Sling, is held on the first Sunday of each month on a dairy farm west of Sanford, east of Sorrento. The first meet washeld in January.

Frank Tedder of Astatula, Fla., is one of the man-boy mud slingers. He has spent $6,000 conditioning a 1959 Ford truck and "I've got $3,000 under the hood," which as he spoke was $3,000 worth of engine caked in thick, wet mud.

Tedder would spend the rest of the week washing the truck and cleaning the motor until the next Sunday when he will compete in Lakeland or Plant City of Bithlo or any other town around the state where a mud sling is held.

"You've got to wash it inside and out. You've got to pull out the radiator and clean it out. You've got to wash the brakes out," Tedder said. "It's a lot of work."

Mud racers have another bumper sticker slogan—
"Work eight days a week to run 300 feet."
Now the question —why?

"I can't afford stock car racing or drag racing, so this is the next best thing," Tedder said. "Mud racing is the latest, the most popular thing right now.

"Anybody can do it. You can take your street car in there if you have four-wheel drive."

Anybody includes women, who sometimes enter the competitions, proving at times women will be girls, too.

Tedder's wife, Sharon, has been driving in mud races along with her husband for a year. At the mud sling last

Pull came to push for this jeep and driver (left) when a little extra shove was needed because the engine wouldn't start after a tractor rescued it from the mud. Spectators (right) watch the mud sling proceedings at a safe and clean distance. One popular vantage point is the top of one's own truck.

...Mud Sling Latest Thing

Sunday, a day when the mud was a little too deep and no drivers were going very far, Sharon beat out her husband and quite a few of the male drivers getting farther through the mud.

The women compete against each other in their own category, the powderpuff division. The other divisions are divided by the type of vehicles used: two-wheel and four-wheel drive vehicles, 1200 and 1400 size tires, jeeps, an open class and a class for experimental vehicles.

Mud racers compete against time and distance—until they and their vehicle get stuck and have to be pulled out with an earthmover tractor. Each driver has only one shot at the mud in each category, though they may try to back up one time and move farther forward.

Drivers come from all over the state and from Georgia to compete for cash prizes and trophies. Drivers of two-wheel drive vehicles pay a $10 entry fee aiming for a $100 first prize and trophy. Second and third prizes are $75 and $25. All other classes pay a $25 entry fee for a trophy and $350 first prize, $150 second prize and $75 third prize.

"It's the skill of the driver," said Jack McDonald, that determines how far drivers make it through the muck. McDonald is a Lake County deputy and a mud slinger, but Sunday he had the job of measuring the distance driven by others.

"They (the better drivers) hit the mud better, they get a better start, they spin the steering wheel better, they can look at the mud for the best place to go," MoDonald said. "It can also be "blind luck," he had to add.

McDonald's brother, Bert, had the job of "volunteer" who has to slosh through the mud to attach a hook and line from the earthmover to the stuck vehicles so they can be pulled out.

"Now I know what Humphrey Bogart felt like in "The African Queen," Bert said upon emerging from waist-deep mud after several hours of hooking truck to tractor.

Mud slinging is a spectator sport as well. Although the day's races didn't begin until noon, "By 8:30 this morning, we had 25 cars lined up outside the gate waiting to get in," McDonald said. "We had two campers set up overnight."

McDonald said he too had his truck there early positioned along the fence that lines the mud trough and near the starting post, so his family would have a good wiew.

For many, the mud sling is a family affair. Spectators bring coolers and lunch baskets and sit on top of their trucks or in folding chairs and spend the day watching others drive into the mud.

"A lot of it is people saying, 'Oh, I can do better than that," said McDonald. About 700 people were at the April Sorrento Mud Sling.

The mud sling area is located on State Road 46A between State Roads 44 and 46 about half way between Sanford and Sorrento. Admission is $5 and free for children 12 and under.

Proceeds for the refreshment sales and truck wash go to the Sorrento Volupteer Fire-Department.

Mansion On 'Dynasty' Is Historic Landmark

house Carrington (John Forsythe) calls home in "Dynasty," is actually near San Mateo, some 30 miles south of San Francisco, and not in Denver where "Dynasty" is set. The mansion is almost a personality in itself, and plays a stage at a cost of a million principal role in the series dollars. that airs every Monday night on ABC.

well-Framed by manicured lawns and lush gardens, the imposing brick mansion sits on a gentle rise on the eastern slope of the Coast Range Mountains. The central portion of the 654acre estate, which contains the main residence and the Lurline B. Roth Gardens, is a registered state landmark and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Built in 1916-19 for Mr. and Mrs. William P. Bourn II, the mansion and its 16 acres of gardens were to become world-renowned for their design, and beauty especially after being purchased by Mr. and Mrs. William P. Roth in 1937.

The residence was designed by Willis Polk, an inventive California architect who was comfortable with a variety of styles and who frequently combined several in one building. Though basically modified Georgian in style, many of the doors are French, the exterior brick is laid in Flemish bond, the tile roof is Spanish and details of the trim are from the Stuart period.

Filoli, an outstanding and important example of country house architecture in the United States, is one of the few in California that remains intact in its original setting. The house covers 18,000 square feet with 36,000 square feet of interior floor

The spacious and finely proportioned major main floor rooms have 17-foot-high ceilings, with ballroom ceiling soaring to a height of 20 feet. It has 17 woodburning fireplaces. Several small buildings are adjacent to the main house.

Surrounding the house are the formal gardens laid out in a succession of separate areas, each with a distinct character and designed to take maximum advantage of the physical surroundings of vistas. Flowers bloom yearround in a burst of color and shape.

Filoli, which was recently featured in the motion

Filoli, the magnificent 48- picture, "Heaven Can Wait," Blake continues its show business afflilations in "Dynasty," both in actuality and via masterful duplication. In. addition to location shooting at the estate, much of Filoli has been recreated on a sprawling Hollywood sound

According to art director Jack Chilberg, the stunning reproduction of Filoli's main rooms, including library, drawing room, vestibule, main hall, staircase, living room and kitchen, constitutes one of the most expensive sets ever constructed for TV (and added to this are such other costly settings as the Carrington corporate offices, private jet and suburban Blaisdel home).

Painstakingly detailed, the rooms reproduced are similar except for being somewhat smaller. The library walls are covered with real American black walnut paneling and adorned with moldings made from casts of those in the actual Filoli library.

KAZARIAN BEATS THE PRICE!

"IF YOU'RE UNDER 25; If you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate minimum Auto or Truck Insurance coverage—you need to call me." Yes, according to Raiph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your Auto Insurance..."

RALPH KAZARIAN

Mr. Karazian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are fired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart-specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more-than-fair chance on their auto or truck insurance.

"I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in

Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?

"I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I broker business with 30-35 Auto, Truck, Motorcycle, Motor Club, Mobile Home & Motor Home Insurance companies that target their effort to my particular customers. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."

And Mr. Kazarian has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto and truck insurance business in Florida.

To prove his ambition and determination he's opened eleven offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area-in addition to his Orlando office which is located in the Bright-BLUE Building at the corner of Mills and Colonial (898-2454).

There are two additional Raiph Kazarian offices located in the Orlando-Sanford area: Altamonte Springs (834-2454) and Sanford (323-2454).

So...if you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay-stop by one of Raiph Kazarian's offices.

Sanford May Take Over Housing Rehabilitation Work

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

Many believe that state and federal agencies are tough, if not impossible, to deal with. But Sanford City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles has proved he is up to the task.

The agencies involved were the state Department of Environmental Regulation (DER), the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The resulting action was:

HERE'S LOOKIN'

AT, ER, FOR YA

-After many months of delay, DER has finally scheduled a specific time to take samples from 3,200 barrels of apparently toxic waste stored in a field in the city.

-The city will probably take over direct supervision of the housing rehabilitation project which got into trouble with HUD when the Sanford Housing Authority was handling it. Knowles said today a DER technician is scheduled to take the chemical samples at the two-acre waste chemical storage site off Jewett Lane and Airport Boulevard on April 21. The testing of the chemicals is a necessary part of the city and DER pursuing lawsuits against City Chemicals Co. Inc. of Orlando, operators of the site.

The city and DER have claimed that the chemicals are toxic and hazardous and should be moved from the site. To successfully get the circuit court to order the removal, a chemical analysis had to be done to prove the point.

Knowles, in a memo to the city commission, listed the dozens of telephone calls he has made to the EPA and DER and finally to Sen. John Vogt, D-Melbourne, and State Rep. Robert Hattaway D-Altamonte Springs before the date for taking samples was scheduled.

At the same time, City Attorney Bill Colbert has thrown up his hands in despair over DER's lack of action.

"It is a frustrating experience but I believe they (DER) are either ill-equipped or unwilling or a little of both to handle the job they are charged by law to do," Colbert said in a letter to Knowles. "I apparently do not have any clout with them. I suggest a renewed effort to get their attention via the governor's office, legislators etc."

Knowles, in a letter to Kenneth H. MacKay Jr., chairman of the state Hazardous Waste Policy Advisory Council, this past week outlined the city's problem with DER's failure to take action against City Chemical since Nov. 12, 1980 when the existence of the chemical storage site was reported by the city to the state agency.

"Florida is without a hazardous waste program and is not capable of enforcing existing state laws," Knowles told MacKay.

After all the correspondence and telephone calls, Knowles was notified late Friday that the DER will take the samples on

On the housing rehabilitation project, Knowles reported to HUD on Feb. 27 that the Sanford Housing Authority (SHA) was having management problems with the federally funded

Following a recommendation of HUD officials in Jacksonville and Atlanta, Knowles will tell Sanford City Commissioners at a 7 p.m. meeting Monday, that the city should consider removing the program from SHA.

Space Shuttle: A 'Go' Sunday?

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) -Astronauts John W. Young and Robert L. Crippen got in more landing practice Saturday while officials debated whether to clear them for a second launch attempt Sunday on the maiden test flight of the space shuttle Columbia.

The pilots, following the early-to-rise timetable of their 36-orbit mission, were in the air an hour after sunrise, rehearsing landing approaches in a twin-jet airplane rigged to fly like the shuttle.

They would return to the Kennedy Space Center's new three-mile-long runway in the event of an engine failure during the first four minutes of the shuttle's climb into space.

The Columbia is the first spaceship designed to return to Earth like an airplane for use again and again.

Engineers blamed Friday's launch scrub on a computer programming problem, but they were unsure whether the problem could be fixed, and retested, in time for a 6:50 a.m. EST blastoff Sunday. A decision was expected by early afternoon Saturday.

Arnold D. Aldrich, deputy manager of the shuttle program at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the trouble had been traced to the programming for the computers that are the heart of the Columbia's flight control system. It was sort of an electronic language

Aldrich said Friday night the problem was an "unexpected 'time skew'" - a foulup in the rhythm of signal exchanges between computers - that prevented the shuttle's four main computers from talking properly to the ship's fifth, vital backup computer.

After spending an uncomfortable six hours strapped in their cockpit, the astronauts relaxed for a while, then joined engineers in trying to trace the electronic gremlin responsible for their flight delay.

Their ground-launch crew drained more than 500,000 gallons of super-cold liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen from the ship's external fuel tank in preparation for a new launch attempt.

Aside from the balky computer system, conditions looked good for a launch at 6:50 a.m. EST Sunday. A preliminary forecast for that day is for the same nearly ideal conditions that prevailed Friday - sunny skies with a few clouds, and light winds.

Project officials made tentative plans late Friday to resume the countdown at 6 p.m. EST today at a point 101/2 hours before launch.

Sunday marks the 20th anniversary of the day Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin soared into orbit aboard Vostok 1, becoming the first man in space. Gagarin's flight on April 12, 1961, beat the initial Mercury mission of America's Alan B. Shepard by just 23 days.

Sanford Man In Critical Condition

Herald Staff Writer

A 23-year-old Sanford man remained in critical condition today at a Lake Wales hospital following surgery on his near-severed leg and recovering from other injuries suffered in one of six separate crashes on U.S. 27 involving more than 20 vehicles.

The Sanford man, Robert Johnson, was driving his 18-wheeler tractor-trailer from Miami to Sanford early Friday when it collided with several other vehicles already at a stop following earlier collisions on the fog-shrouded highway just south of Heavy smoke from burning muck mixed with fog blotted out the vision of motorists on four-lane U.S. 27 early Friday. Twenty-one vehicles piled up in rapid order about 6 a.m. in six separate accidents, three on each side of the road, the Florida Highway

Sixteen people were injured. Seven including two babies, remained hospitalized Saturday. Nine others were treated for minor injuries and released. Johnson, the most seriously injured of the 16, was trapped with his wife Bonnie, 32, and their dog,

Tutor, in the rig for more than an hour after the Mrs. Johnson, who was also admitted to Lake Wales Hospital following the accident, was still listed in fair condition with minor injuries. "I'm just in a lot pain right now. My muscles hurt all over," Mrs. Johnson said Saturday. Mrs. Johnson admitted she remembers very little

"My husband was hurt, I knew. But while we were trapped and waiting for someone to pull us out, he kept making sure our dog, Tutor was okay. And he was. Tutor was just fine," Mrs. Johnson said.

The smoke that made the fog thicker apparently came from a 70-acre blaze which began as a permitted fire and became a smoldering muck fire. Local Civil Defense officials, concerned about the fire because of smoke crossing U.S. 27 and State Road 60, tried to extinguish it earlier this week using inmates from a correctional facility.

Mark Hebb, district forester for the Florida Division of Forestry said Friday the issuance of the permit was ill-advised and noted the forest ranger who approved it had been disciplined.

Christensen Tours Seminole County Jail For A First-Hand Evaluation

Seminole County Sheriff John Polk is asking the county commission for an increase in his budget for the new fiscal year of $930,043 over the present budget year. And County Commissioner Barbara Christensen wants to know why.

Mrs. Christensen praised Saunders for being "very efficient, very thorough and well qualified." She said she will be looking at all areas of the sheriff's department before she makes up her mind on whether to vote for the increase Polk is asking for. Polk has submitted a budget for the 1981-1982 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 of $6.15 million. His budget for the current year totaled $5.22 million. More than one-third of the $930,043 increase - $334,826 - is for operating the jail, off U.S. 17-92 in South Sanford. Budgeted for the correction facility's operation in the current fiscal year was $985,529. Requested for the new year is

To evaluate the proposed increase, Mrs. Christensen asked for a tour of the jail as the first step.

Saunders told her the jail is currently rated by the state for 212 beds. On a recent weekend 258 persons were housed at the facility, he said.

Saunders said a projection was made in January that the jail would process 568 prisoners during the month of March alone. In fact, he said, the jail processed 622 prisoners. The projection for December, 1982 is 672. But Saunders said this figure could be off by as much as 100-125 prisoners.

Saunders said the projections were based on past history at the jail with allowances for the growth in population, and crime statistics through the latter part of last year. He said obviously there is some other variable that he and the officer who made the projections were not aware of.

While there are now 53 persons employed at the jail including 31 corrections officers, one lieutenant, four sergeants and three corporals, the new budget calls for eight additional corrections officers, an additional bookkeeper-clerk and an additional cook

The new officers are needed, he said, to assist the men already on hand. He showed Mrs. Christensen that one officer is on duty at the central control area, visually scanning television cameras showing activities in the three-inmate pods, watching various lights showing which doors are open and the fire alarm system. At the same time, he is operating switches to open and close the security doors. Saunders said the workload is too much for the one officer who is constantly moving in the booth.

Almost one third - $92,951 - of the increase for the corrections facility operation is for food. In the current year's budget $965,529 was allocated for

Cost per prisoner meal at the beginning of the fiscal year, October, 1980, was about 70 cents. As prices accelerated, the cost per prisoner meal went to 82 cents. Cost per meal by October this year is anticipated to be 92 cents, Saunders said. Saunders said while the meals served prisoners are not elaborate, they do follow guidelines of the American Correctional Food Service for diets for those who do not do a lot of exercise, Saunders said.
