Burke: Blacks Can Be Optimistic Today

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

Rep. James C. Burke, speaker pro tempore of the Florida House of Representatives, said Sunday night that on the 20th anniversary of the death of Martin Luther King, blacks can be optimistic about the future.

He was speaking at the commemorative banquet at the Sanford Civic Center at the final event of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebration held this weekend in Sanford.

The city of Sanford had endorsed the celebration activities and Mayor Bettye Smith signed a proclamation urging all Sanford citizens to participate in the activities.

Burke was elected to the State House of Representatives in 1982—the only black attorney elected to that body at the time. In Nov. 1986, he was elected Speaker Pro Tempore of the House, the first legislator to serve in that office after only four years experience in state government.

Burke said that one reason he is optimistic is that, "time was when the mayor of a city would say 'This should take place—but not here in Sanford, Florida.'"

He also told the crowd of approximately 300 that "We can resent what happens, or we can invent what happens."

He noted that the population of Florida is growing so rapidly that by the year 2000, the number of people moving into the state would be the equivalent of two-thirds of the state of Georgia moving in. "And we're going to have to bring the jobs," he said. "We need two more miles of highway everyday. We need two more teachers every day. We need two new classrooms everyday."

He reminded the crowd of the old Negro spiritual "I Ain't No Ways Tired" in which two lines state "No one told me it would be easy. I don't believe He brought me this far to leave me."

He told the group that looking at 1988 many black young people are "playing at adult activities." He said over 50 percent of the black babies born now in the state are born out of wedlock, and that by age 29 only 50 percent of young black mothers have completed high school.

A total of about 36,000 unwed mothers live in the Florida, he said. "If your young people a value system matters," he said. "Tell your young man he's not a man just because he can make a baby. He's not a man unless he can give that baby a name, and can take care of it."

He said young girls need to know that good figures do not make a woman, but that brains are also important.

Young people need to stop settling for C's in school, also, he continued, and each person, in their job, needs to do their best. For example if a man is a street sweeper, he should sweep as Michelangelo painted, or as Beethoven composed music, Burke explained.

Lyons Receives MLK Brotherhood Award

"Torch Of Freedom Must Still Be Carried"

Both blacks and whites can keep the ashes of ignorance and fear, or, like Dr. Martin Luther King, carry the torch of love and freedom, said the recipient of the Dr. Martin Luther King Brotherhood Award Sunday.

Dr. Henry Lyons, president of the General Baptist State Convention, was presented the award at events commemorating the late civil rights leader Sunday in Sanford.

Mixing religious and political comments in his address, Lyons said to fully establish the political rights of all citizens, the religious faith the nation was founded on must be kept by all citizens.

"Today we stand between two worlds, one is dead, the other is about to be born. What will it be, a dismal abortion or will we carry on the torch of freedom? We must press on until we can say, as Martin Luther King, Free at last, Free at last, Thank God Almighty, I'm free at last," Lyons said.

Lyons noted two kinds of liberties, religious and civil, adding both liberties have always been tested. In America's colonial years, religious freedom had been tested when Roger Williams was banished to Rhode Island from Massachusetts. Lyons said that the black man in America is now testing the civil liberties. Referring to the words of the Declaration of Independence, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal," Lyons said the black man "has made America put up or shut up."

"God bless America," he said. "Here we have a God and we have a document (the Constitution). In South Africa today they may have a God. But they don't have a document."

Speaking of Martin Luther King Jr.'s nonviolent movement, Lyons also pointed out that while the NAACP encouraged blacks to keep the law and change it, King exhorted people to break unjust laws and change them. He noted that King also qualified his philosophy by reminding people that "When you break the law, be prepared to abide by the consequences of your civil disobedience."

Lyons said that King "exorcised the demon of fear out of blacks until we ain't afraid of nothin' anymore." He explained that as he looks at young people he wonders if that lack of fear has gone too far. He said he sees a lack of respect for teachers, for the law, and for parents, in

Longwood Commission May Appoint New Finance Director

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Longwood City Commissioners will be asked tonight to approve the appointment of Robert Lockridge, Winter Park investment consultant, as city finance director at a starting annual salary of $33,000.

If approved, Lockridge will begin work on Jan. 25.

The commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. at city hall, 175 W. Warren Ave.

Acting City Administrator Don Terry hired Lockridge on the recommendation of a three-member screening committee consisting of Henry Tamm, Sanford finance director, Harry Martin, Winter Springs finance director, and Barbara Rennard, CPA, with Kane And Associates, auditor for Longwood.

They reviewed 40 applications including one submitted by Mary Triplett, who has been acting finance director since September when former finance director Barry Weeks resigned under fire. Lockridge was the only one interviewed personally by Terry.

Prior to opening his own office in July, 1985, Lockridge was employed by the city of Gainesville, initially as city auditor and as of 1982 as deputy city manager for management and financial services. Before that he was assistant city auditor for Dallas, Texas, and chief research assistant for the Fulton County, Ga., Research and Evaluation Division of the Department of Finance.

Also coming before the commission will be a proposed settlement of a suit filed against the city in June, 1987, by Risa Kay, owner of Fairmont

Plaza over sewage capacity for the shopping center.

In a memo to the commission, City Attorney Michael Kramer stated Gary Massey, attorney for Kay, and Kerry Evander, co-counsel for the city, have indicated that a settlement is possible at this time.

Evander, who is with the law firm of Renman, Harrell, Silberhorn & Graham in Melbourne, said that Risa Kay would agree to dismiss her lawsuit against the city in consideration for the city's agreement to provide 5,800 gpd (gallons per day) of sewer capacity for Fairmont Plaza at $4.50 per gallon and pay her $14,500 as credit for her construction of an oversized lift station required by the city to handle other developments.

The former commission twice rejected a compromise proposed by then City Attorney Ann Colby and City Administrator Ron Waller that the city allow Fairmont Plaza to have the needed capacity for $4.50 per gallon and insisted on her paying $8 a gallon. That is the price called for in a contract, which Kay says she was forced to sign by then city manager David Chacey on May 14, 1985.

The price the city could legally charge at that time was $2 a gallon, the price at which Kay was originally promised capacity by the city. Colby also recommended that the city reimburse Kay for 60 percent of the veritable cost of the oversized lift station she was required to build and dedicate to the city once it was in operation.

Massey was asking in the suit for the May 14, 1985 contract to be declared null and void, that the city refund the $5,000 paid, and allow Kay to

Contras: Ortega Must Negotiate

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Contra rebels say they will hold direct talks with the Nicaraguan government only if President Daniel Ortega participates, and an opposition leader said he doubts the lifting of a state of emergency will have much effect.

Aristedez Sanchez, a member of the Contra directorate, said Sunday Ortega would have to prove he is sincere about achieving peace in Nicaragua by leading the Sandinista delegation to cease-fire talks.

At the end of a summit of five Central American presidents Saturday, Ortega broke what appeared to be an impasse by lifting the 6-year-old state of emergency, announcing an amnesty for thousands of political prisoners and agreeing to begin direct talks with the U.S.-backed Contras.

"The only way the Sandinistas can show their political will to fulfill the compromises Ortega agreed to in San Jose is if Ortega personally sits down to talk with the Nicaraguan resistance and the civic opposition," Sanchez said.

Sanchez charged Ortega's concessions were merely "cosmetic," reflecting comments by sources close to the Nicaraguan

Dousing The Flames

A Volusia County firefighter works on putting out the smoldering remains of a fire that destroyed 20 storage units at Mini Storage of Deltona Saturday morning. The cause of the blaze, which began at 4:07 a.m. and took personnel from three fire stations to contain, is still undetermined. Authorities say no one was seriously hurt as a result of the fire. The business is located near the intersection of Enterprise and Highbanks Roads, just outside Deltona. Traffic was blocked in the area Saturday morning causing backups at Highbanks Road and the intersection of Deltona Boulevard and Enterprise Road. Firefighters worked for more than 90 minutes to extinguish the flames at the weekend blaze.

Love Really Is Strange

Rhinoceros, Elephant Have African Romance

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Juliet the rhinoceros and Jack the elephant have found love in the African bush.

"The affair has lasted for over three months and there is no doubt that Jack is still interested only in Juliet," game ranger Raymond Sheller told the Sunday Star.

He said rangers at the Pilansberg National Park about 100 miles northwest of Johannesburg have monitored the romance for months and taken film footage of the courtship.

Jack, a 12-year-old elephant, was brought to Pilansberg five years ago and showed an immediate affinity for the small herd of rare white rhinos.

His affection blossomed into love when Juliet, born in the park about 18 months ago, began to mature.

"He hangs around her the whole time," said Sheller. "You could say he is cradle-snatching. She is, after all, very young."

Sheller and colleague John Peel say that Juliet is not averse to Jack's daily advances.

Large Electronics Package Stolen From Parked Porsche

An Altamonte Springs man was arrested Saturday in connection with a burglary to a car left in the parking lot of a hotel on Jan. 3. Thomas Luke Bianco, 19, of 265 Spring Lake Hills Drive, has been charged with burglary and grand theft for allegedly breaking into a 1985 Porsche Carrera left at the Park Suite Hotel at 225 E. State Road 436. The crime reportedly occurred at approximately 2 a.m. The roof of the car was slashed in order to gain entry into the car, according to police reports. Approximately $4,300 in electronic equipment was taken from the vehicle. Altamonte Springs police arrested Bianco on a tip given to them from an undisclosed source. Bianco was apprehended at the entrance to the Pacesetter Apartments on Wymore Road. He was later transported to the Seminole County jail where his bond was set at $1,000.

Child-Beating Charges Lodged

A Casselberry woman was arrested on Friday and charged with aggravated battery for the beating of a 7-year-old child, who had to be hospitalized for his wounds. The child was admitted to Winter Park Memorial Hospital with numerous abrasions about the buttocks and abdomen area he received from what authorities called excessive corporal punishment. He also sustained other abrasions to his chin and neck and a broken femur bone in his left thigh. A report filed by the Seminole County Sheriff's Department said the force allegedly used in beating the child was excessive. Barbara Ann Lockwood, 31, of 321 Redwing Way, was arrested at about 9 p.m. and charged with the beating, which investigators say occurred on Dec. 30 at approximately 7:50 a.m. Lockwood told police during the investigation the child received the broken leg after he fell running down the hallway. Bond for Lockwood was set at $5,000.

No Light Leads To Drug Bust

After Lake Mary police arrested a Sanford man Saturday for failure to pay several traffic fines, they found marijuana in his car. Jay Richard Hauck, 22, of 105 E. Copleman Circle, has been charged with possession of less than 20 grams of cannabis and possession of drug paraphernalia. He was also charged with driving with a suspended license. Hauck, who was driving on County Club Road, was stopped by a patrol officer who noticed one of his headlights wasn't working. After arresting Hauck for the traffic charges, the officer found marijuana and rolling papers as he searched Hauck's vehicle. Hauck was transported to the Seminole County jail. His bond was set at $500.

Woman Arrested In Home Raid

A Sanford woman was arrested on drug charges after her home was raided by agents of the City/County Investigative Bureau Friday afternoon. Meredith Kathie Poole, 35, of 6295 has been charged with possession of less than 20 grams of cannabis. The agents searched Poole's home they found cocaine, marijuana and drug paraphernalia. TaxWatch Said Cozy With Martinez

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida TaxWatch, a non-profit, independent government watchdog group, is under criticism for getting too cozy with Gov. Bob Martinez. Members of the group's Board of Trustees and Democratic legislators have denounced TaxWatch for certifying that $201 million in state government savings claimed by Martinez was legitimate. The Orlando Sentinel reported Sunday. House Majority Leader Ron Silver, D-North Miami Beach, has written a letter to TaxWatch trustees refuting the Martinez claims and objecting that TaxWatch director Dominic Calabro endorsed them. Some TaxWatch officials have expressed concern. Including Mark Hollis, president of Public SuperMarkets and one of the founders of the organization. The controversy has been heightened by widespread speculation that Calabro will be Martinez' new budget director. Calabro confirmed that "it's been mentioned" by Martinez aides, but insisted he would not take the job if it is offered. The flap began Jan. 5 when Calabro joined Martinez at the governor's news conference on the tax savings. Calabro not only insisted the $201 million in claimed savings was legitimate, but predicted Martinez might eventually weed out "$1 billion, maybe even $2 billion" in waste. A couple of hours later, House Appropriations Chairman Sam Bell, D-Ormond Beach, and other legislators held their own news conference to refute the claims. Bell noted that most of the $201 million in savings resulted from a program to speed up prison construction schedules developed by Martinez' predecessor, Bob Graham, in the final weeks of the Graham administration. The legislators also objected because Martinez was counting budget vetoes, noting that every governor has vetoed appropriations and in some years a lot more than Martinez had vetoed. Bell denounced the Martinez claims as "smoke and mirrors." A few days later, Silver sent an angry letter to all 37 TaxWatch trustees. "The credibility of TaxWatch has been placed in question," Silver wrote. "It is my sincere hope that TaxWatch does not become an arm of the governor's office and that TaxWatch will adhere to the purposes as outlined in its charter."

Judges Sentence DUI Defendants

The following persons have pleaded or been found guilty of driving under the influence or having an unlawful blood alcohol level. The first-time offenders have had their driver license suspended for 6 months, been ordered to pay a fine and court costs usually totalling $367.50 and complete 50 hours of community service. When a guilty or no contest plea is entered or if the defendant is found guilty of an alcohol-related charge, other charges are usually either not prosecuted or dismissed. Most of the first-time offenders are allowed to apply for business-only driving permits. In cases where the sentences differs, the actual sentence is reported: —Ronnie Melvin Johnston, 38, of 1120 Reams Street, Longwood, was arrested on Sept. 9, after he was stopped by Sanford police officer in connection with a suspicious person report. —Robert Anthony Lee, 29, no address given, was arrested in Oviedo on Sept. 16, for reckless driving on State Roads 434 and 419. —Donnie Lee Whitley, 32, of 951 Bryant Court, Longwood, was arrested in Winter Springs on Sept. 29, after his vehicle was seen repeatedly crossing the center line as he was driving on Tuskawilla Road. —Gerald Wayne Burger, 44, of 4323 Mellonville Ave., Sanford, was found guilty of DUI by a trial. Burger was arrested on Sept. 27 for failing to maintain a single lane on State Road 600 in Sanford. Burger's driver's license was suspended for one year.

Paramutual Industry: Lottery Grip To Wane

HALLANDALE (UPI) — The paramutual industry is hoping that the novelty of the lottery will wear off quickly and bring gamblers back to Florida's tracks and jai-alai frontons. Since the lottery opened Tuesday, Gulfstream Park in Hallandale has suffered a 10 percent decrease in attendance and a 5 to 6 percent decrease in money wagered, President Douglas Donn said. "Right now it's a novelty," said Craig Fell, director of marketing and public relations at the Hollywood Greyhound Track. "If there is a detrimental effect on the paramutual industry right now, it will bounce back once the lottery novelty wears off." He is counting on bettors becoming disenchanted with the lottery after a few weeks. "There will be the hard-core paramutual player who goes to the grocery store and buys a carton of cigarettes and spends the change on lottery tickets," Fell said. "Then at the end of the week he says, 'Oh my God, I've spent $700 on the lottery.'" Track spokesmen declared the lottery a "fast starter," the equivalent of a greyhound or a thoroughbred that breaks early but fades by the final turn. Attendance was substantially lower than average at Dania Jai-Alai and Palm Beach Jai-Alai. However, the lottery ticket sales windows at both centers were busy, especially Tuesday night when the centers enjoyed combined sales of more than 11,000 lottery tickets. Thursday night, attendance was 40 percent below average at Palm Beach Jai-Alai, although a spokesman blamed lousy weather and a $100,284 Pick-Six jackpot Friday for keeping the crowds away. "We know the lottery is going to affect us," said Stephen Ross, director of public relations and advertising at Palm Beach Jai-Alai. "It hasn't affected us as much as we thought, though."

Seminole Basks As Out-Of-Staters Wail

By Fred H. Cooper, Herald Staff Writer
Remember the song "Streets of Laredo?" Well, the notoriety enjoyed by that fair Texas city in taking the highest high crown yesterday (80 degrees) will probably be duplicated today in Seminole County. Isn't that good news? Our temperature here yesterday hit in the low 70s and will stay up around 80 for the next couple of days. However, the promise of a decent rain yesterday didn't materialize - dribble, yes, but rain drops falling on our heads? No. Today rain is likely but if it doesn't happen we're probably out of luck until the end of the week. By the way, Craig, Colorado has the lowest temperature during the past 24-hours - 10 degrees below zero. Now that's cold. "It's said that blood doesn't thin out after being in Florida from the north a few years, but something happens. The first winter down folks will do anything in shirtsleeves or bathing suits, even when the temperatures are in the 50s. Then, after a couple of years, 50 is cold and 40s are very cold. We'll have 50s at night this week but doubtful if it'll get any lower. You've probably noticed that the winds are from the east which bring us the nice Gulf stream warmth. You've noticed Snoopy sitting atop his Sopwith Camel doghouse, muller dashing askew in the breeze, fighting aerial battles with the Red Baron. Well, the inventor of the Sopwith Camel is celebrating his birthday today - 100 years old. Don't know whether Snoopy is going to the party or not. The doghouse flying machine is so airworthy that Snoopy wins his dogfights in all types of weather and he owes it all to Lord Thomas Sopwith. While we bask in the balmy weather, fellow citizens in out-of-state places are not faring so well. A winter rainstorm brought landslides, floods and power blackouts to Southern California today, and the pounding surf swept away a restaurant, damaged beachfront homes and forced the helicopter rescue of 50 guests from an endangered hotel. The storm, which sprang to life in less than 24 hours, dumped up to 3 inches of rain on Southern California by Sunday night and started spreading heavy snow from the Sierra Nevada to the southern Rockies. The National Weather Service said the system would not move east until later today. A plane crashed into a fog-shrouded mountain, killing four members of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department. Lightning strikes knocked out power to at least 20,000 homes and businesses, mostly in the San Gabriel Valley and in the South Bay near Los Angeles. The combination of strong winds, pounding surf and high tide along the Southern California coast triggered floods that forced many beachfront residents to flee and swamped a tent city for the homeless. Surf battered through a window at the Blue Moon Saloon, slightly injuring seven people, and a police officer and harbor patrol officer were swept into the water by a powerful wave, Cameron said. Five police cars were damaged by the waves and a 60-foot sports fishing boat, the City of Redondo, was smashed by the surf, Cameron said. NASA Program Falling Behind

Two new flaws in NASA's space shuttle have forced an indefinite delay in the scheduled resumption of launches. Instead of a June blastoff date, the next shuttle probably will not go into orbit before 1989, marking a flight lapse of at least three years caused by the explosion of the Challenger.

In the meantime, Soviet Cosmonaut Yuri V. Romanenko has set a new record for human endurance in space, spending 326 days aboard the space station Mir. The Russians' unsurpassed experience in the weightless environment of orbit will be invaluable to their expected attempt to land cosmonauts on Mars before the end of the century. This ambitious mission will require a journey of at least two years.

Moscow has unveiled plans for three separate unmanned reconnaissance flights to Mars during the next decade in preparation for a manned mission. A Soviet probe that crashed on the surface of the red planet during the 1970s already has left the hammer-and-sickle insignia there.

The contrasts between the U.S.S.R.'s robust agenda and America's grounded manned program have never been more stark than they are today.

In the 1970s the United States made a disastrous decision to abandon most of the rockets that had given this country its pre-eminent position on the space frontier. Rather than maintain a stable of boosters, the emerging American shuttle program was relied upon to supply virtually all of the lift needed for both civilian and military space ventures.

The Soviet Union, on the other hand, retained the ability to put objects and men into space atop an array of unsophisticated but reliable launchers. As a consequence of this and the Challenger disaster, Moscow boasted 91 space launches in 1986, compared with only six by the United States.

This lift capability provides the Soviet Union a much greater degree of flexibility in undertaking future advances; the U.S. program, however, is severely restrained by the capabilities of the shuttle alone—assuming that it returns to service sometime next year.

The latest problems with the shuttle's newly designed O-rings and guidance nozzles underscore the critical need for alternative boosters. A prerequisite to reviving the U.S. space program is the production of expendable rockets such as those that were common more than a decade ago.

This country's scientific and technical expertise still exceeds that of the Soviets. All that is missing is a renewed American commitment to get the job done.

Funny Money

The artist Boggs (his name, he says, is James Stephen Boggs but he goes by just Boggs) makes money. Literally. He draws dollars, pounds, francs that look a great deal like the real thing and barter them for goods and services around the world.

Would you accept this drawing of a $20 bill in exchange for a cab ride? he asks. As art, he asks the clerk at a hotel where he's run up a tab, how much is this drawing of a $100 bill worth to you? Apparently, one just like it is listed for $3,000 at the Galerie Demenga in Basel, Switzerland, which handles Boggs' work.

Boggs, now in Los Angeles for an exhibition of his money, told the Los Angeles Times that he's drawn $35,000 in the last three years, with which he has been able, in London, New York and Paris, to pay for everything from rent to shares in a municipal fund. But the California market for funny money apparently still needs some priming.

Boggs' Swiss agent has offered to buy back at double its face value any bill that Boggs passes off here, but the artist seems to be having considerable trouble nonetheless at L.A. gift shops, restaurants and airline ticket counters, where potential patrons may not know much about money, but they know what they like.

A New Astrological Poll For Candidates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Forget what the political polls, surveys, etc., are saying. Which large numbers of voters apparently were planning to do anyway.

According to astrological projections published in the February issue of Penthouse magazine, the next Republican presidential nominee will be Vice President George Bush and the Democratic winner — May I have the envelope, please? — is none other than Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois.

So voters in Iowa, New Hampshire and elsewhere presumably can ignore the aspirations of Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, for one, on the GOP side and Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson, to mention two of the Democrats.

The publication itself, while remaining politically neutral, I'm sure, is more likely to feature photos of one of Hart's girl friends.

"As Earth is controlled only by wood," the article says, "Bush will be the Republican nominee."

And maybe he will, but fortunately you don't have to have a wooden head in order to vote for him.

Before you go tramping through the forest looking for a tree composed exclusively of Simon wood, be advised that dragons also are important to both parties.

"Not foreign policy, not the deficit, dragons," Penthouse assures us.

By its computation of the Chinese horoscope, a dragon's, er, running mates are rats and monkeys.

Simon, the magazine points out, was born in 1928, "the year of the dragon," whereas Bush was born four years earlier during "the year of the rat."

Does this mean Bush, after holding the office nearly eight years, may end up running for vice president again?

All I can tell you is that Emily Prager, who a Penthouse spokesman identifies as "the sole political columnist well versed in Chinese astrology," doesn't think so.

And, according to the spokesman, she "accurately predicted the outcome of the presidential election" in 1984.

"She said that Ronald Reagan (a Pig) would win, but also that Jesse Jackson (a Snake), then unknown, would cause him trouble and that Gary Hart, (a Rat), then totally obscure, would emerge in the primaries," he averred.

You, too, can be "well versed" in Chinese astrology. Things you need know include what other animals, or creatures, are listed in the Chinese horoscope.

I wouldn't dare to suggest what it takes to be regarded as a "political columnist," but obviously it helps to know the birthdays of all the candidates, including the "seven dwarfs" running as Democrats.

You don't even have to know that President Reagan is a pig under the Chinese horoscope. After all, 1984 isn't apt to occur again. For which we can all be thankful.

Resume' Or Record Important?

By Arnold Bevilacqua
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In their spatting over who would make the better president, Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole have raised an interesting but not new question about job training for the Oval Office.

In declaring that he has "a record, not a resume'," Dole was rebutting Bush's frequent claim that his exceptionally broad and unusually varied experience in government and politics makes him uniquely qualified to be president.

Dole has served in the House and Senate for 36 years, and his views, in the form of hundreds of bills introduced and thousands of votes cast, is on the public record. He has repeatedly staked his job on that record and his only election loss was as Gerald Ford's vice presidential running mate in 1976.

Bush served four years in the House in the 1960s and then lost two races for a Texas Senate seat. After that he served in several important appointive jobs, including CIA director and ambassador to the United Nations and to China, before he was elected vice president with Ronald Reagan in 1980 and 1984. In all but his congressional service, Bush has created or carried out policies for which other officials have been ultimately responsible.

Dole's comment actually was a double entendre: first, that Dole has had to stand or fall on his own decisions during his long public career while Bush was a hired hand during most of his; and second, that Dole has proven his ability to win elections while Bush has at best an only mediocre record as a campaigner.

Whether Dole's zinger will hit the mark is a matter for the Republicans who will select the GOP nominee to decide, but it has to be noted that history does not always support the premise that the presidency requires a specific kind of prior experience.

Dole's theory that a veteran legislator makes good presidents can be supported, but many, including Thomas Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson, Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower, Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan never drew a congressional paycheck.

The point here is that we have had presidents whose careers have followed the paths traveled by both Bush and Dole and there is no clear evidence that either exclusively leads to success in the White House.

Iranian Children Are Sent To Front

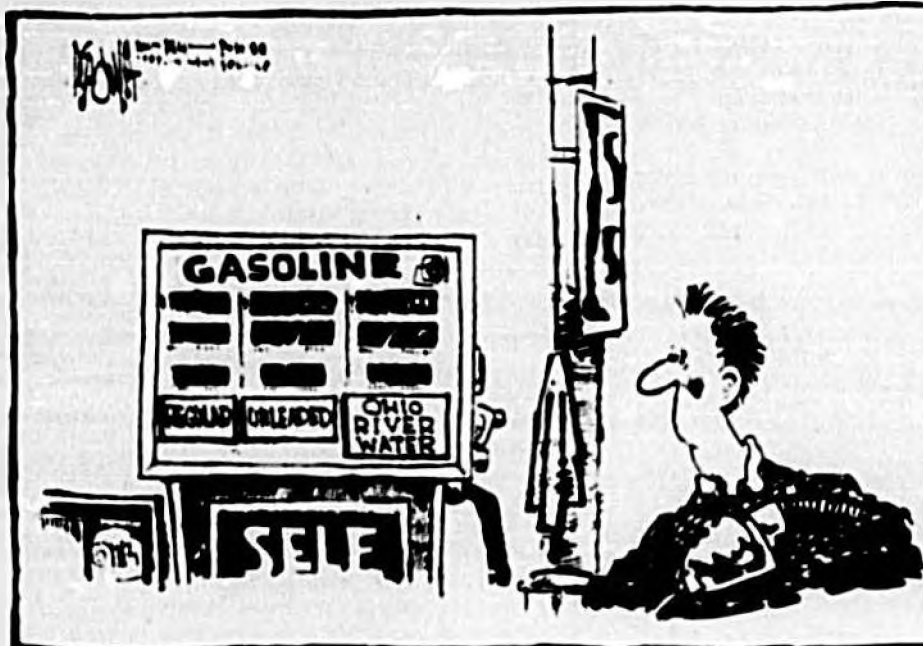

By Jack Anderson
And
Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — What would you call a man who sends children to war when they aren't big enough to carry their own rifles, who imposes quotas on high schools to produce soldiers, who uses those children as mine sweepers and shields for the real soldiers?

Call him Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

No one, not even our sources at the Central Intelligence Agency, knows exactly how many teens and pre-teens Khomeini has pulled out of school to go to the front. But our sources concede the number is in the tens of thousands, possibly hundreds of thousands.

Our sources also agree that the boy soldiers get little training and they are used as a shield for Khomeini's fanatical Revolutionary Guards Corps fighting at the front, or as mine sweepers whose lives are expendable. Girl soldiers work behind the lines. Children are Khomeini's cannon fodder.

VIEWPOINT

INF Debate Begins

By Elliot Brenner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A week from now three Senate committees will gather in separate hearings to begin dissecting the INF treaty, a pact to eliminate an entire class of medium-range nuclear missiles and one expected to win Senate endorsement.

In a process that will take months — it could be late March or early April before it hits the Senate floor for debate that could run a month or even longer — the Foreign Relations Committee, the Armed Services panel and the Intelligence Committee will pour over the 150 pages of an agreement specifying in detail how missiles bearing about 2,000 warheads will be destroyed.

The warheads themselves are not included in the treaty to destroy the missiles, which have ranges from 300 to 3,400 miles.

Senate leaders have indicated they expect treaty support is strong enough to approve it — technically a president ratifies a treaty after the advice and consent of the Senate — but there are concerns conservative opponents may craft crippling or "killer" amendments that could endanger the pact or force unacceptable renegotiations with Moscow.

It will take a two-thirds vote to approve the resolution of ratification that will be before the Senate, but just a simple majority to pass any understanding, reservation or amendment. Understandings are binding only on the United States and can serve as policy statements, while reservations can sometimes affect both sides but do not require the renegotiations that an amendment would entail.

Assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California is confident treaty backers can get 51 votes to deal with proposals on non-relevant topics, such as Afghanistan or refugees.

But an aide said the success in dealing with language on verification or the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty that affects the "Star Wars" program "depends on how good a job we can do on alternatives... that let senators express concern without voting for a killer amendment."

Cranston has estimated there could be up to 23 conservatives dissatisfied with the treaty and willing to vote against it. Conservative Jesse Helms, R-N.C., skilled at crafting language to cripple a bill that is too politically dangerous to vote against, has not tipped his hand on what he has in mind.

But Helms last week sent President Reagan a letter laying out 13 sharply worded questions about the treaty, questioning apparent problems with the data and photographs Moscow provided with the treaty and the State Department's handling of the issue.

While the Armed Services panel examines the military aspects of the pact and its implications for NATO and the imbalance in conventional forces, the Intelligence Committee will study verification issues.

And the Foreign Relations Committee, breaking with a tradition of using the cavernous and ornate Caucus Room for its work, will use a new auditorium-like room in the Hart Office Building.

Although the committee is headed by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., one session will be run by Joseph Biden, D-DeL., the next senior member of the full committee and chairman of its European Subcommittee. Biden was designated by Pell to consult with European leaders in advance of the hearings.

Biden said last week he is considering additions to the ratification resolution to reassure NATO nations about the pact and to lay out U.S. goals for later talks.

'El Nino' Helped Finches

By Colla Hooper
UPI Science Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The exceptionally strong "El Nino" weather phenomenon in 1982 to 1983 that devastated human and marine life was a boon for terrestrial plants and birds on the Galapagos Islands, ecologists say.

Extreme climatic disturbances in the central Pacific Ocean caused by El Nino events may actually be a key to the success of some long-lived birds like two species of Darwin's finches, the same birds that were a prime ingredient in Charles Darwin's development of the theory of evolution a century ago, the scientists reported.

The Pacific Ocean current known as El Nino sends hot equatorial waters sweeping up the North American coast, disrupting weather around the globe.

Meteorologists believe the change in the current is caused by falling trade winds that ordinarily are strong enough to push the hot equatorial waters of the Pacific Ocean westward.

"El Nino" first named by South American fishermen, usually appears about Christmas time but was no gift in 1983 when it caused record floods that killed 2,000 people in Ecuador, and droughts that parched Australia, the Philippines, Indonesia, Mexico, southern Africa and southern India, killing hundreds more.

The 1983 El Nino — the worst on record — came especially early, showing signs of starting in May of 1982. Its effects were felt in the United States in the winter of 1982 and spring of 1983, when foul weather did at least $265 million damage, killed 14 people, forced evacuation of 15,000 people and damaged or destroyed more than 8,000 homes in California.

But the destructive weather actually aided other life, including the finches of the Galapagos, Pacific islands on the equator that belong to Ecuador.

Ecologists H. Lisle Gibbs and Peter R. Grant wrote recently in the journal Ecology that their long-term study of the ground finches on one small island of the Galapagos allowed them to gauge the startling effect of the heavy rains that came with the 1982-1983 El Nino.

The event brought total rainfall on Isla Daphne Major to levels that were 10 times higher than those recorded in any other wet season on the island.

"Most plant species responded by dramatically increasing seed production," with some plants cranking out 10 times as many seeds.

At times, Khomeini's officials have boasted about this barbaric practice. The commander of the Guard Corps, Mohsen Rezaei, has spoken publicly about the children's role in advancing ahead of his soldiers to draw fire, explode mines and try to break through the lines. He has even referred to them as Iran's "disposable soldiers."

One top Iranian military official estimated last May that 64,000 Iranian schoolchildren had been sent to the fronts in 1986. Iranian Minister of Education Kazem Akrami had earlier put the number at more than 120,000 students and teachers.

The head of the "War Affairs Staff" in the Education Ministry announced a year ago that "more than 95 percent of the seventh-grade students of the country are enrolled for military training this year." Those are the 12 and 13-year-olds. As a sidelight, he boasted that Iranian vocational schools were busy with their "production project" — schools turning out mortar parts and containers for mortar shells.

In a private meeting with Education Ministry officials, Speaker of the Parliament Hashem Rafsanjani, ordered them to provide more students for the fronts. He praised the ministry for becoming the main source of troops for the war.

Iranian President Ali Khamenei has boasted of the regime's recruitment of children for glorious martyrdom at the fronts. He bragged that "the youngsters cry and beg to be sent to the front lines."

As a sop to worried parents, the regime has promised the children will spend only 45 days at the front and will attend "educational complexes" when they weren't fighting. This assumes that uninterrupted schooling is the only concern of these parents.

The 45-day term is ignored and the education complexes are a joke. The classes are often empty because the children are at the front. More than once, a child who died before the course began has been issued a passing grade.

At the outset of the 1987 school year, Akrami tried to whip teachers and students into a recruitment frenzy. According to one source who took notes on that speech, Akrami said that "since schools are considered a bunker like those at the fronts," the kids should begin the new year with the slogan "War! War!" He wrapped up his speech with a request for child volunteers.

In case volunteers don't beg and cry to join up, the ministry has ordered all high schools to pick 10 students and 10 teachers per school term to fill the quota at the front.

School is grinding into the dark ages in Iran. A parliamentary law passed by the Khomeini regime has canceled all village classes with less than 25 pupils. Entrance to a university is granted only if the applicant is a war veteran. Teachers are rounded up so often in conscription sweeps that the future of education in Iran may depend on teachers wily enough to avoid the draft.

Snyder felt the immediate effects of his Saturday afternoon ouster when CBS executives banished him from Brent Musburger's Sunday "NFL Today" show that preceded the Washington Redskins' 17-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings...

After the meeting, Snyder released a letter of apology he was going to send to civil rights organizations, players' associations and individual players.

The impetus behind the changes for CBS and their popular prognosticator for the last 12 years came during an interview with a television reporter at a Washington restaurant on Friday.

Snyder's swift departure from CBS occurred one day before his one-year contract, reportedly worth $750,000, was to expire.

Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson held a personal meeting in Washington with Snyder Sunday afternoon.

CBS Sports spokesman Doug Richardson said Sunday they needed to remove the reference to Snyder but could not edit it out without ruining the flow of the accompanying song.

Stocks Open Higher

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which rose 39.96 Friday, was up 4.14 to 1980.21 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 473-318 among the 1,182 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 5,290,000 shares.

Analysts believe trading should remain relatively quiet throughout the day because of the federal holiday marking the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr.

Friday's favorable report on the U.S. merchandise trade deficit in November pushed prices sharply higher. The Dow rose 39.96 to close the week at 1956.07. For the week, the index gained 44.76 points.

The trade deficit in November narrowed to $13.2 billion, down 25 percent from the record $17.6 billion in October, and below estimates of $15.5 billion.

"We're talking about children, the family—that's what can save us all," he said. "You have to show a value system to your children. They do look at what we do."

Christmas giving is one way parents can show their children a value system, Burke explained. He said that Christmas is about a homeless couple, a pregnant woman in labor, from a gossiping town, who didn't get help from the government, who met an innkeeper so concerned about his budget that he wouldn't let them stay in his inn.

Burke pointed out that the wise men gave gifts to the homeless couple, and that the less fortunate, the homeless, those in jail, etc. should also be remembered at Christmas.

He said that by virtue of the fact he is in the House, and elected to his position, is proof that King's dream is coming true in the state of Florida.

"However, Dr. King's philosophy tells us we can do better," he added.

Coupled with a value system, Burke said that young people need to be taught that "There is a Power. Tell them about the Power—an everlasting, omnipotent Father of whom we should not be ashamed."

Mayor Betty Smith told everyone, "We did it again. I'm so proud of us. I'm so proud of what is happening in Sanford. We've practiced, rehearsed, and worked together. We've also prayed together."

The mayor said she looks forward to many more years of more successful Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebrations.

Citizenship awards were presented to Mother Blanche Bell Weaver, founder of Rescue Mission Church of God, who also operates a new 20-bed shelter for the homeless; and to Dr. J.C. Ringling, a retired dentist who has lived in Sanford for over 40 years.

Brotherhood awards were presented to Rev. G. Richard Danielak, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Sanford, and D.C. McCoy, a lifelong Sanford resident who has been active in civic and religious affairs.

Special Brotherhood awards were also presented to Dr. Lurline Sweeting, chairman of the MLK Celebration committee and to Sandra Petty, co-chairman.

Dr. Sweeting also presented Burke with a Brotherhood award.

negotiating team that the proposals were aimed as much as the U.S. Congress, which will vote on crucial package of aid to the Contras Feb. 3, as with complying with the regional peace plan.

Erick Ramirez, leader of the opposition Christian Democratic Party, said he doubted lifting the state of emergency would have much effect.

Dr. Lurline Sweeting credits Lyons continued. He also said, "We need to buy, sell and trade with each other, love each other, and love our children and teach them responsibility."

When he talked about today's children Lyons said, "If we lose them we have no tomorrow. We've got to run, burn out, anyway we can, drugs out of our community. We cannot be satisfied to ride by in our air-conditioned Cadillacs as though it's not happening."

Music provided throughout the service by the Celebration Choir, directed by Mary Whitehurst, a retired Orange County music teacher, helped to foster an atmosphere of celebration and unity among those attending the service.

Whitehurst began forming the now 60-member choir to perform at last year's MLK celebration. However, she said the choir members themselves wanted to stay together. They have rehearsed and continued to perform throughout the past year.

She said the choir plans on staying together, and that new members are always welcome. "I love directing. And most of all, working with people," she concluded.

Participants in the service included representatives of various Christian faiths, the Jewish faith and the Bah'ais.

Two Factors Which May Cause Strokes

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT: My father, a quadriplegic, had intestinal surgery, after which he lay flat for 48 hours. Then he was put into his wheelchair and immediately had a massive stroke. Is there any connection?

DEAR READER: Probably not. Strokes come from two sources: blood clots or hemorrhages.

As people age and develop arteriosclerosis, tiny blood clots tend to form on, and adhere to, the roughened — and often narrowed — arterial linings. Although most of these clots are lysed (dissolved) by natural compounds present in the circulation, sometimes they break away from the arterial lining and, like debris in a rushing brook, are carried along in the bloodstream. They cause no difficulty until they become wedged in a small artery or in the narrowed segment of a larger blood vessel. At this point, they cause blockage which interrupts bloodflow and prevents oxygen from reaching part of a certain organ. If the blood clot blocks circulation to heart muscle, heart attack follows; if blockage occurs in blood vessels feeding the brain, stroke ensues.

Sometimes, in special circumstances, clots form within the heart chambers themselves and can be carried either to the brain or to the arms or legs. This is called embolism. Most strokes appear to be caused by clots that break away from the lining of the carotid arteries, two large vessels that carry blood from the heart up through the neck to the brain. In my opinion, your father's massive stroke is not likely to have been the result of his being moved from bed to wheelchair. Nonetheless, such an event is within the realm of possibility.

Hemorrhagic strokes occur primarily in people with hypertension. This disease puts enormous strain on the arterial system because the outward pressure exerted on the arteries is much higher than normal. With time, small arteries in the brain burst from the excessive pressure, flooding nearby brain tissue.

The dual nature of strokes was recently brought home to me. A patient was in danger of having a stroke because of diseased carotid arteries. He had had several transient ischemic attacks (temporary strokes) and tests showed that his right carotid artery was dangerously narrowed. After careful deliberation, he elected to have the narrowed portion removed, a procedure called endarterectomy. Two days after surgery, he had a hemorrhagic stroke. You see, the narrowed blood vessel was, in a sense, protecting his brain. Once the narrowing was corrected, the pressure in his brain's blood vessels returned to normal, resulting in rupture of a small artery. His unfortunate event was a rare and unpredictable complication of surgery.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Last October the United States won the Venice Cup world women's team championship for the first time since 1978, defeating France in a close match. Although the match was held in Jamaica, the title is called the Venice Cup because that was the original venue when the trophy was first awarded to the winner of a challenge match between the U.S. women's team and the top women's team of the European Bridge League.

In last October's match, Kathie Wei and her partner, Judi Radin, became World Grand Masters. Today's six-club contract was a little high, but Kathie was equal to the task of bringing in the slam.

Kathie played dummy's 10 on the opening spade lead and won

East's jack with her ace. Next came a low club to the 10 in dummy. (This guards against a singleton king with West.) When that held, she returned to her hand with the nine of spades to play the queen of clubs. West played low and East showed out.

Faced with a certain trump loser, Kathie now had to find a way to eliminate her red-suit loser. So she played a club to dummy's ace, cashed the K-Q of spades, on which she threw a heart and a diamond, and then played A-K of hearts. That properly set the stage. A trump was played to West's king, but that left West with nothing but diamonds to play. When he led a diamond, dummy's queen won and that was a hard-earned 12 tricks to Kathie Wei.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osol
JANUARY 19, 1988

In the year ahead, continued hard work will bring to fruition a longtime project in which you have been involved. When the rewards start coming in, you'll be happy you didn't toss in the towel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Frivolous activities or a shopping spree are not in order today. The aspects indicate you could waste your resources in either instance. Major changes are ahead for Capricorns in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today, Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you like could be a bit of a pain in the neck today. If you don't make an issue over this person's behavior, he/she will be back to normal tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You are not apt to work too well with others today. Where possible, try to do that which needs doing free from onlookers and outside influences.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take extra pains to be exacting in your financial dealings today. If you get careless and make a mistake, it could produce an unsavory ripple effect.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone who has never been supportive of you careerwise is not about to change today. Keep this in mind if this person gets involved in your negotiations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tasks that require immediate attention should not be delegated to others today. If you want them done, and done right, it's best you do them yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) Joint ventures could be a trifle tricky today, and they must be handled with wisdom and skill. Don't involve yourself with anyone who cannot be fully relied on.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A misunderstanding between you and your mate should be resolved as promptly as possible today. If it's allowed to drag on, it will worsen with time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your powers of observation will be very keen today. Unfortunately, they might be focused on another's frailties rather than on this person's virtues.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't take gambles on things today where you know going in the odds are stacked against you. This is especially important if you're going to back up your play with cash.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends will lessen your productivity today if you let them monopolize your time. Later, you'll have to skid around corners trying to catch up on neglected work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're a rather optimistic person, but today, you might negatively prejudice situations. You might write things off that you could have accomplished had you tried.
