Texas contractor might take SHA member to court

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald staff writer

ORLANDO - A Spanishsurnamed contractor who was called a "wetback" by a Sanford Housing Authority commisstoner said yesterday he would go to court, if necessary, to hold the board member responsible for his actions.

Robert Perez, director of R&P Management in McAllen, Tex., addressed the Florida State Commission on Hispanic Affairs yesterday during the group's monthly meeting in Orlando. He said he had received no apology from SHA Commissioner J. Wain Cummings, who made the comment Aug. 3, or from the city of Sanford.

Cummings apologized for the remark during an Aug. 7 meeting.

"I will pursue this thing as far as I have to," Perez said.

"There comes a time when the laughter has to stop," Perez said. "Publicly I ask that Mr. Cummings be removed."

"I feel sorry for the tenants of the housing authority for having a member on the board who doesn't have their concerns at heart," Perez said. "I am sorry for the city of Sanford and I am sorry for the Sanford Housing Authority.

The state commission agreed to petition the city commission for Cummings' removal, and discussed involving Governor Bob Martinez' office in the matter.

Max Borges, commission chairperson, said, "I was not so much offended by the word 'wetback,' but I was offended by...Mr. Cummings saying he was more sorry that he did not have the First Amendment right to say what he feels."

Cummings was reported to have said after his apology the commotion surrounding his remark infringed uporchis First Amendment freedoms of speech.

No 'growing pains' in Lake Mary

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY - As a result of what one planner has called "urban sprawl," Lake Mary has seen tremendous growth in the past year and will continue to see this growth Into the 21st century.

Lake Mary's projected growth rate is now at 8 percent per year, according to associate planner Mark Reggentin. What pleases most Lake Mary officials about this growth is the high price tag that accompanies

For the month of July alone, 61 single-family residential and miscellaneous construction building permits were issued at an estimated value of $2.1 million, along with 20 commercial building permits with an estimated value of $376,972. The price tag for these 81 building permits: $9,225.50.

And the buildings aren't cheap. The Timacuan subdivision, located off Rinehart Road on the north side of town, features a par-72 golf course and a clubhouse which will open in two weeks. A swimming pool and tennis courts will be added later. Developer Hubert Earley said homes range from $250,000 to $400,000.

Earley said his homes are being sold to "brand new people moving into the area" and many of the buyers are employees of the American Automobile Association (AAA) moving from Virginia who will work in the new national headquarters building located in the Heathrow International Business Center just outside city limits. Other buyers include AT&T employees and sales representatives.

Believe it or not, every home on the golf course (more than 100 homes) has a swimming pool," Earley said.

Most of the residential growth is on the east side of town, including the subdivisions of Misty Oaks. Country Club Oaks, Springhurst Park and Crystal Ridge, Woodfield Estates is on the city's south side off County Road 427 and the Hills of

GAINESVILLE - The pilot of the 727 Eastern Airlines jet that wandered around the Gainesville Regional Airport Wednesday, damaging buildings and a fence, blamed the

The Flight Service station, which gives weather advisories and wind directions, is not supposed to give directions, and pilots know that, said FAA spokesman Robert Myers said.

Nuclear plant to close for third time this year

CRYSTAL RIVER - A faulty backup water pump at Florida Power Corp.'s Crystal River nuclear plant will force officials to shut it down for the third time this year, plant officials say.

The interruption might last about two weeks. Florida Power spokesman Mark Jacobs said. But he added that officials did not know exactly how long the shutdown would last because they had not yet examined the inside of the pump.

Plant inspectors discovered irregularities in the operation of the pump during a routine safety check, Jacobs said. The pump is not used in normal plant operations, he said.

The pump, designed to bring cool safety equipment during emergency operations, has a capacity of 14,400 gailons per minute. Jacobs said it was not maintaining proper pressure levels during the test.

Plant officials ordered a halt in generation of electricity at the nuclear unit until repairs are complete, he said.

Jacobs said plant officials would stop producing electricity at the plant Friday night or early Saturday.

The nuclear plant, one of five generating units at the Crystal River complex, was shut down for repairs eartler this year for 3 16 months. On June 29, less than two weeks after returning to service, the plant was stopped again until July 6 for further

Candidates trade barbs in ethnically divisive race

MIAMI - Voters once represented by congressman Claude Pepper, D-Fia., will choose Tuesday between a Cuban-American legislator and a Jewish lawyer in a bitterly contested race in which each candidate claims the other is exploiting the city's ethnic tensions.

Republican state Sen. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen and Democrat Gerald Richman each said in separate interviews that the other sought to win by appealing to the mistrust dividing the district's large Cuban American population from other groups.

Both candidates also claimed their support transcended those ethnic divisions, despite poll results to the contrary, and predicted that crossover voters would play a significant role in Tuesday's outcome.

Ros-Lehtinen's Cuban heritage has provided much of the focus for the special election, and triggered its nastiest controversy. If elected, Ros-Lehtinen would become the first Cuban-born member of Congress.

The conservative Ros-Lehtinen, a seven-year veteran of the state Legislature, refused to debate Richman after the Jewish lawyer and former president of the Florida Bar repeatedly described the district as an "American" seat.

"We believe that is sending an underlying message to the voters saying that, 'Hey guys, watch out, they (Hispanics) are going to take another one of our seats. Let's say no to them," said Ros-Lehtinen. "Unfortunately, it is a message that is sometimes effective."

It's off to Congress for Lake

Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY - While the rest of his classmates reported for school at Lake Mary High School last Tuesday, 16 year old Eric Adler was still sleeping late.

Adler was catching up on his rest before leaving on Sept. 3 for Washington, D.C. where he will spend a year as a congressional page sponsored by Rep. Bill McCollum.

"I don't know if I'll be working for Mr. McCollum," Adler said. "I'm not even sure what job I will start off with."

Pages have three job options which are rotated to all the pages throughout the year. They can work on the floor as a messenger between representatives while Congress is in session. Another option is to answer the telephone in the representative's office. And finally, the page can be a courier for representatives going around Washington to different locales.

"My preference is to work the floor," Adler said. "But I will get a chance to do that eventually even if I can't do it first."

Adler is interested in a career in government, perhaps as a foreign service representative. He said, however, that he does not want to pursue a career in politics.

Adler said he was introduced history teacher.

The application Horner gave him was complex and involved a background check of references. a resume of jobs and extra curricular actvities, a transcript to prove that his grade point average was 3.0 or better and an cassy stating why the applicant would want to be a page.

"I just wrote that I though this experience would help me learn about government and since that's what I plan as a career, I felt the experience would be beneficial." Adler said.

Camille McDougald, who to the idea of becoming a page taught 10th grade history to by Desta Horner, a Lake Mary Adler, wasvery impressed with his unyeilding quest to gain knowledge and to do things in the community.

"He has a phenomenal drive for knowledge,"McDougald said. "And what better place to learn then in Washington?"

McDougald said that Adler's list of community service activities was impressive and she believes that he truely wants to serve people.

A panel of judges, including a Seminole County educator and two members of Rep. Mc-Collum's staff looked over his credentials and those of the other area applicants and narrowed the list to two finalists.

Coincidentally, the other student chosen for the next round of interviews was also a Lake Mary High School student. Tracy Parton sat next to him in Horner's history class.

"We felt Eric had a fine academic record and good leadership ability," John Ariale, McCollum's district representative in his Winter Park office, said. A committee of congressional representatives in Washington. D.C. chose Adler to be one of the 66 pages chosen nationwide to spend a year in the capitol.

"We are very proud to have a representative from the fifth district of Florida in those 66," Ariale said.

While in Washington, Adler will begin his day at 6:45 a.m. with four 45 minute classes at the Pages' School. The school is accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Adler will be studying physics, world literature, pre calculustrigonometry and advanced placement government. "I wanted to take a German class, but I won't be able to," Adler said disappointedly.

The rest of the day, until at least 5 p.m., is spent working as a page.

"It's hard work," Ariale said. "People think all they do is run messages. They work long hours and study hard."

Adler and the other pages are paid $900 a month, though $300 automatically deducted to pay for housing and five dinners a week at the page's residence.

"I probably won't have much money left when it's all over,' Adler said.

In what little spare time, the pages have they are taken on escorted excursions to Washington, D.C. area museums and historical landmarks. One trip will take the young people on an architectural tour of the

"I guesa it'll be pretty interesting." Adler said.

The eleventh grader is looking forward to his experiences in Washington and the unique educational opportunities it will afford him.

"I might even learn that I don't want to go into government service," he laughed.

Lawmaker's travel business comes under investigation

TALLAHASSEE - Federal and state authorities are investigating the travel business of a state legislator, based on charges from former employees that they worked without federal income tax or social security withholdings.

Rep. Corrine Brown, D-Jacksonville, confirmed Friday that her businesses in Jacksonville and Tallahassee are under investigation by state and federal authorities. But she said she has no full-time employees except herself and was not required to make payroll deductions or pay unemployment taxes.

One of the ex-employees of Springfield Travel Agency II in Tallahasace said he was unable to get unemployment benefits from the Department of Labor and Employment Security because Brown did not pay any unemployment compensation taxes for employees of her travel agencies.

"Nobody ever had anything taken out of their pay," said Ed Curry, who remains unemployed since Brown fired him last month. He said the department had no account or records of Springfield Travel on

Former office manager Meliasa Posey and travel agent Karen Muskovac sald Brown told employees she was not withholding taxes for them and they shouldn't worry

Brown said the workers were "outside, independent contractors" who were employed only part time. The three former employees said they all worked at least 40 hours a week for the Tallahance office.

Jerry Lackey, manager of the Employer Tax Examination Group for the IRS in Orlando, said businesses are required to withold taxes for part-time employees. He said anyone who "has control over a person's work" by providing a location to perform a job, equipment to work with and hours of scheduled work, is an employer.

City Planner Matt West said there is a good reason the city is now experiencing low-density residential growth. "We didn't have sewer availability. Now the character of the area has been established," he said.

Only Timacuan and The Forest, an adult community off Lake Mary Boulevard, is currently served by a sewer system. The rest of the city has septic tanks which insure low density development. Only four units to the acre are allowed with septic tanks while sewer systems allow for higher density development. West said.

Most officials say the city is ready to meet the demands of the coming years. A year-long moratorium placed on building development in the spring of 1985 gave the city the chance to upgrade ordinances and review laws to bring them up to state standards.

Lake Mary will be the first city in the county to start curbside recycling. Beginning Oct. 1, glass, plastic, newspaper and aluminum will be picked up at the curb.

This is the second stage of what CCIB Commander Lt. Donald Eslinger said is "a great cooperative effort involving vir-

The Altamonte Springs police bomb technician, Sgt. Jack Martin, reportedly iden-tified materials found in Kent's house as materials used in making explosive devices or fireworks.

There were also seven men nabbed Thursday night by Cas-

There was a force of about 80 law enforcement officers participating in the sweep here.

in the first Operation Rock Pile here, lawmen only worked one night and made 95 arrests. Of those, 91 persons were accused of trying to buy crack cocaine. Battlefield lasers: Near yet far away and poses so many problems that a GI may never fire a futuristic "death ray."

WASHINGTON - The military is testing hattlefield laser weapons, but a leading defense scientist said a tactical weapon is many years

blasting away left and right is years and years away, 12 H ever, "said Lee Buchanan, director of the delense sciences office of the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

Buchanan said in an interview this week overcome major hurdles facing a battlefield laser gun, and more research and testing may determine that such a device is simply not viable.

"What may make sense in the end is just more ammunition" for Gis, he said. "That's the easy way out. My gut tells me that's not the right answer, but I can't defend any other at the moment. We just don't have enough experience."

The more powerful the searing light beam. the larger, heavier, expensive and complicated the laser. Therein lies part of the problem. Buchanan said.

What we have been unable to do is to build (tactical) lasers big enough, powerful enough to burn holes in victims at long range. That's been a problem for 30 years since lasers were invented," he said.

The Army's Roadrunner program to build a device called the Close Combat Laser Assault Weapon or C-CLAW to blind enemy soldiers was canceled in 1964 because the weapon was so big it had to be carted around on a flatbed truck and its performance was "touchy," Ruchanan said

A tactical laser weapon to maim or kill enemy soldiers is not feasible today, he said. "The name of the game in the Army is maneuver, they've got to move around. That means big, lumbering, fragile instruments — and lasers are all of those — become less attractive."

So defense scientists are developing lowpower "speed of light" laser weapons that might cripple the sensor "eye" or targeting device in high-speed enemy missiles and

"What we are trying to do is determine whether lower-powered lasers, that is, lasers that have power that is too small to burn holes in something, have a utility in the battlefield in denying the threat (enemy) his ability to do his

"In the case of an incoming rocket that is guided by an infrared seeker, you hope to blind that seeker or that electro-optic guidance such that the rocket can't hit its target. If you can do that, you buy yourself time," he said.

The Army is experimenting with several such devices to blind enemy optical equipment, including the smaller Daser that soldiers ment, including the smaller Daser that soldiers can carry and the larger Stingray to be mounted on Bradley armored vehicles.

He said the "change in emphasis is that such a weapon would be a more adjunct franching than a primary lone. The tool that makes of the limit of weapon means that it's smaller, lighter, more dependable, cheaper (and) may now be in the boundaries of tactical warfare."

"An adjunct losse measurement make a let of "An adjunct laser weapon may make a lot of sense. The first instance of lasers on the

But Buchanan said lesers are so fragile and require such an accurate pointing system to aim the concentrated beam of light to its target and hold it there that they may never fit into normal battlefield conditions.

"I am very worried about the pointing problem." he said. "I can see a major innovation required and I don't see any, major inventions near-term that are going to solve

Then there are the more traditional problems for high-tech systems.

"The Army's problem is mud. If you can't make a weapon that operates in mud, then," he said, trailing off. "The Navy's problem is sait water. Those crucial elements define limits for successful weapons systems."
In addition, Buchanan said, the question that arises is whether buying an adjunct weapon is the most prudent way to spend shrinking defense dollars.

"Maybe you need to develop a better gun ... a better missile. There's always that trade," he

Lasers are currently used in the battlefield as sensors or range finders, to locate distances and locations of targets, but he said he knows of no country currently deploying laser weapons to knock out someone eise's sensors.

Navy pilots have reported they have been temporarily blinded by light from Soviet warships, but Buchanan said it is believed these were range-finding lasers and not laser

"There's a lot of concern because they are certainly, potentially harmful," Buchanan said of lasers. "We do certainly want to develop at ... means to protect against them in case the other guy decides it is to his advantage to introduce certain weapons.

"We are trying to develop eye protective measures, sensor protective measures, at the same time that we're trying to take a good look at whether the introduction of the weapon makes sense at all. The Soviets are conducting research "at least as much if not more than we are" in all kinds of lasers, including on anti-sensor devices, he said.

LANDOVER, Md. — A Guardian Angele recruit found fatally shot in what was first characterized as an execution-style slaying by angry drug dealers actually died of a self-inflicted wound, police said.

Dorian Brown, 19, was drinking and playing Russian roulette with two other members of the crime-fighting organization when he placed the handgun to his temple and pulled the trigger, Prince George's County police spokesman Robert Phillips and Pricing.

The two other members left the fatally wounded Brown and fled the scene, later . telling police they ran because they were "frightened and afraid," Phillips said.

The death was first characterised as an execution-etyle slaying by drug dealers angered over the group's neighborhood patrols. Guardian Angels leader Curtis Sitwa held a news conference Tuesday at the group's Landover headquarters to name two area men he believed were suspects in

At the time, Sliws also criticised county blice for not having made any arrests in

But while police were investigating the case, the two Guardian Angels, ages 14 and 21, who were with Brown when he died, were questioned and the circumstances surrounding the shooting began to unfold.

The handgun used by Brown was brought to the headquarters by the 14-year-old youth who told police it belonged to his father, Phillips said.

The Guardian Angele was started in the New York City subways as a volunteer citisena's patrol in 1979. Sliwa developed a three-month training course that teaches members to defend themselves without weapons and make citizens' arrest.

Jury to weigh evidence in Heimslev case

The U.S. District Court jury in Manhattan met about 9 a.m. and chose Alvin Taylor, a postal worker, as foreman. Then they were to begin deliberations in the dramatic trial, which has captured national attention since it began eight weeks ago.

Judge John Walker said the jurors will deliberate until 5:30 p.m. daily but will be allowed to sit as late as 6 p.m. or 7 p.m.

Walker said some jurors expressed an interest in attending church services Sunday morning, so a late start was anticipated.

The 69-year-old Helmsley, wife of billionaire real estate magnate Harry Helmsley, was charged in a 47-count indictment with billing some $4 million worth of renovations at the couple's Greenwich, Conn., mansion and other personal expenditures as business expenses in order to Firefighters said the blase broke out late Friday night in a stairwell of the 32-room hotel, which was occupied mainly by immigrant workers from North Africa.

Authorities said four people jumped from hotel windows to their death on the sidewalk below. Three others died of burns, authorities said.

Two Palestinians killed, one tied to pole

JERUSALEM — The body of a Palestinian suspected of collaborating with the Israeli government was found Saturday tied to a utility pole, and another Palestinian was killed during clashes with soldiers in the West Bank, Palestinian sources said.

Masked men abducted Asem Taiem, 28, from his home Thursday, and Palestinian sources said his body, found at midday tied to a pole at the entrance to the West Bank town of Kalkilya, showed signs of severe beatings.

Masked Palestinians normally enforce the directives of the underground leadership of the 20-month-old uprising. A recent leaflet by the leadership, however, cautioned Palestinians against killing suspected collaborators unless the slaying is approved by the leadership and the Arab is first given "a chance to repent."

Pope marks beginning of World War II

VATICAN CITY — Humankind has a "duty before God" to remember the inhumanity and devastation of World War II, Pope John Paul II said in an apostolic letter released Saturday to mark the 50th anniversary of the war.

Nazi Germany's investor of Poland on Sept. 1, 1939, set off what the pope's 20-page apostolic letter described as "one of the most destructive and inhuman tragedies of our history.

"Pifty years later, it is our duty before God to remember

"Fifty years later, it is our duty before God to remember these tragic events in order to honor the dead and to share in the sorrow of all those whom this outbreak of cruelty wounded in body and soul," the Polish pontiff wrote in the major document, which was accompanied by a related message to the bishops of Poland.

Charles, Diana to visit Hong Kong

LONDON — The prince and princess of Wales will go ahead with an official visit to Hong Kong, Buckingham Palace announced Saturday, despite Britain's loss of popularity for refusing to give 3,2 million of the crown colony's residents the right to live and work in Britain.

A palace spokesman said the royal couple would travel to Indonesia instead of Beijing en route to Hong Kong because the original schedule including China was considered "inconceivable" following the crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

The increased aid, drawn from unused funds authorized for foreign activities this year, was announced Friday just two days after a smaller piedge of U.S. security assistance that was part of a 86 million package voted by Congress.

Presenting the new plan at Bush's sesside vacation retreat. White House press secretary Mariin Pitzwater said the president also authorised expanded police and military aid for Colombia for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 but gave no

In authorizing the emergency assistance. Bush declared, "We intend to work closely with the Colombian government to bring to justice those responsible for the scourge of drug trafficking.

"The recent wave of assessinations and threats by the drug cartel against all Colombians who cooperate with President (Virgilio) Barco's anti-drug crackdown makes it clear that it is time for the United States and other countries of the world to stand with President Barco during his courageous challenge to these insidious forces that threaten the very fabric of Colombian society."

As Bush has vacationed in Maine, Barco's country has been in a virtual state of siege this week, with the government crackdown met by a "declaration of war" from the drug lords, who bombed radio stations and set fire to homes of politicians opposing them.

The State Department also issued an urgent warning in Washington Friday for all Americans to stay away from the city of Medellin, the center of Colombia's illegal drug industry.

Fitzwater said some U.S. personnel would accompany the equipment being sent beginning next week, but in light of a desire to avoid involving U.S. troops directly in the violence he said the number of "advisers" would be small and would be expected only to teach Colombians how to operate equipment.

bians how to operate equipment.
"It is not anticipated that they'd be in a combat role," he told reporters.

The military equipment will begin being shipped next week from U.S. military installations; the first $20 million of the total $65 million was earmarked for eight Huey transport helicopters, small arms, radios, jeeps and ambulances. Another $36.4 million would include 12 additional Hueys, one Blackhawk chopper, fuel trucks and assault boats, he said, and the remaining $8.6 million is planned for additional aircraft still unidentified.

Fitzwater acknowledged the package would deplete the unused fiscal 1989 fund for foreign aid and officials said it was the largest amount ever drawn from the fund. The $5 million previously approved directly for Colombia by Congress was said to be available in April, but it was only this week that the administration presented some specific spending channels.

About $2 million was offered by the Justice Department Wednesday for training and technical aid to improve protection for Colombian judges and other officials.

"He told us that this morning," Sen. Dole, R-Kansas, told reporters after the meeting when asked about Walesa's remark Friday to ABC TV that "if we fail, we can blame the world, even the United States."

As Walesa met with the U.S. delegation, striking railway workers in western Lods province announced they had suspended their 15-hour walkout, which had paralyzed transport in the area through midnight Friday.

Voyager discovers new rings around Neptune

PASADENA, Calif. - Voyager 2 discovered at least one and possibly three new rings of ley debris around Neptune, giving the planet up to five such cosmic strands, along with tumbling boulders of ice - moonlets - imbedded in one ring are, scientists said Saturday.

The nuclear-powered Voyager 2, departing the solar system after flying past Neptune and its' moon Triton Friday, also discovered a tenuous nitrogen atmosphere extending nearly 500 miles above the extinct ice volcanoes of the bizarre moon Triton.

And other instruments aboard Voyager 2 detected relatively weak van Allen-type radiation belts around the planet, a magnetic field tilted 30 degrees away from the pole of Neptune's rotation axis and possible signs of aurora like the "northern lights" visible in Earth's atmosphere.

data returned by the intrepid probe.

"It has really been remarkable how well all of these things have worked. You name it, and it all seems to have worked," said project scientist Edward Stone, prompting a round of applause at the close of a news conference.

Scientists are ecstatic over the sheer volume of Voyager's discovery of new rings around Neptune prompted widespread interest, although exactly how many rings the planet actually has was subject to interpretation.

"How many rings can you count in this picture?" asked University of Arizona astronomer Bradford Smith, pointing to a fuzzy photograph taken just after Voyager 2's flyby of Neptune

Thursday that showed several bands of diffuse

Voyager 2 discovered two rings of debris around Neptune as it approached the planet and in the picture released Saturday, a new ring was clearly visible, pushing the total to three, along with a complex swath of debris near a previously known ring that could represent two new strands — or an extension of the ring already known.

Smith said Neptune could have three rings or five, depending on the actual structure of complex, broad middle ring. He believes five rings are present, but he stressed others might disagree and that the issue is unresolved.

Earth-based evidence had indicated any rings that might exist around Neptune were incomplete arcs. Pictures from Voyager 2, however, show the rings probably extend all the way around the planet, although at least one features sections that are distinctly lumpy, resembling the partial ring ares hypothesized before the flyby.

"What we have found is imbedded in that narrow ring are some bodies," Smith said. "The largest and brightest one cannot be any larger than, say, 10 or 20 kilometers (10 or 12 miles wide). They are imbedded right in the thing.

He said Voyager 2 was able to detect signs of six or eight moonlets "In one of the brighter segments of the outermost ring, in other words, in that region we were calling a ring are" before the flyby.

Smith said he would be "surprised" if the moonlets did not play some role in the "clumping" seen in the outermost ring.

NASA plans space armada

PASADENA. Calif. - The spacecraft that will carry American space exploration into the 21st century are:

• Magellan: Launched May 4 from the shuttle Atlantis, this spacecraft will map at least 90 percent of the surface of Venus.

• Galileo: Scheduled for launch Oct. 12, 1989, from Atlantis. Galileo will spend at least 20 months in orbit around Jupiter and drop a probe into its atmosphere.

Cassini: NASA currently is trying to secure funding to build this probe to orbit Saturn and drop a probe into the atmosphere of its moon, Titan. Comet Rendezvous and Flyby (CRAF): built with Cassini-type hardware, CRAF would rendezvous with a comet and fire a penetrator into its crust.

 Ulysses: A joint project between NASA and the European Space Agency, Ulysses will be launched in 1990 from a shuttle into an orbit around the poles of the sun.

Mars Observer: an economy-class Mars orbiter scheduled for launch in 1992.

Voyager seeks edge of the solar system

United Press International

PASADENA. Calif. - Sailing the solar wind, NASA's Voyager 2 probe will spend the final years of its robotic life searching for the edge of the solar system as it cruises away from the planets and into the lonely space between the stars. The 1-ton nuclear-powered spacecraft streaked past Neptune Thursday and its bizarre moon Triton Friday, completing a once-in-a-lifetime "grand tour" of the outer solar system that has revolutionized humanity's knowledge about Earth's home in the cosmos.

The Neptune encounter will formally end Oct. 2, but Voyager 2's work will be far from over.

Its job, and that of three other American spacecraft, is to search for the very edge of the solar system, the boundary where the invisible bubble of energy surrounding the sun plows into the tenuous "atmosphere" of particles that exist in interstellar space.

The search is the centerpiece of the "Voyager Interstellar Mission," or VIM.

The sun is moving through space at about 60,000 mph, in orbit around the center of the Milky Way galaxy. Its magnetic field dominates the local space environment, along with the solar wind, a supersonic stream of negatively charged electrons and positively charged protons blasted away from the sun.

The result is an invisible bubble of energy with the sun embedded at its center. As the sun moves through space, the bubble is deformed into a teardrop shape, compressed in the direction of motion with a "tall" extending behind in its wake.

Ahead of the "heliosphere" is a "bowshock," a tenuous disturbance analagous to the wave in front of the bow of a ship as it moves through the water.

The boundary of the heliosphere and the interstellar medium is believed to be 75 to 100 times the distance from the Earth to the sun. Voyager 2 currently is about 47 of these "astronomical units" from the

Stanley Shawhan, director of NASA's space physics division, said Voyagers 1 and 2, along with the Pioneer 10 and 11 spacecraft, are equipped with instruments that will detect the crossing of the "heliopause," the boundary between the solar wind and the sun's magnetic field and the interstellar medi-

Dibble spells relief for Reds

CINCINNATI - Rob Dibble set a strikeout record for Cincinnati relief pitchers and Ron-Oester went 4 for 4 Saturday to lead the Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Pittaburgh Pirates.

Dibble struck out five in two innings of relief of starter Ron Robinson, 3-1, to give him 120 in 80 1-3 innings. Robinson held the record of 117 strikeouts by a reliever set in 1986.

County assists trainers

One of the responsibilities of Lake Mary High School athletic trainer Roger Mosure (in white shirt) is to assist in the prevention of injuries. One way to accomplish that is to lead the varsity football team in stretching exercises.

Added teaching unit frees trainers to help students

By TONY Desorate Herald Sports Editor

There's a dark side to athletic competition, the unspoken threat of physical injury on every play. Stories of athletes injured permanently or fatally aren't that common, but they're a reminder of the danger involved.

And as younger athletes continue to get bigger, stronger, faster and capable of inflicting more damage on themselves and others, the need grows for competent men and women to offer treatment when disaster strikes.

That's why the step by the Seminole County School Board a couple weeks ago was so important. In the 1989-90 budget, the school board included aix half-time teaching units for the the county high schools to help create more time for athletic trainers to meet the needs of the students.

'The school board allowed each school to have an extra half-time teaching unit," said Lake Mary High School athletic trainer Roger Mosure. "It provides the funds to help reduce the athletic trainer's teaching load because of the extra responsibilities the trainer has after school as well as during the school

"It's a time factor. By hiring another teacher to cover some of the classes that the trainer might otherwise have to teach, the trainer has more time to do his job."

For example, Mosure teaches weight training in the Lake Mary physical education department. Other trainers around the county teach classes in anatomy, physiology or the care and prevention of athletic injuries.

This step by the school board bolaters an already strong athletic training program in the county. It underscores the importance of having certified athletic trainers at all the schools because, like a school nurse, a trainer is on call the whole school day.

"We're responsible for a large number of students, for their health and well being," said Mosure, who has been an athletic trainer in college and on the professional level before coming to Lake Mary. "There's all the preventative work we do to keep the kids healthy and, when there is an injury, help with the rehabilitation and do the necessary follow-up that needs to be

Racing a tradition for Kinleys

By DEAN SMITH Herald correspondent

There seems to be a lot of father-son combinations in automobile racing these days: the Andrettis, the Unsers, the Pettys and the Allisons, just to name a few. Then there's the Kinleys of Os-

William "Wild Bill" Kinley is a former Florida State Street Stock points champion and has been a mainstay at the New Smyrna Speedway for the last 15 years. Now his 20-year old son Marc is following in his father's footsteps and hopes to continue the tradition.

Bill, who has been "racing forever" according to his son, started racing as a 16-year old in Pennsylvania before moving to Forest City 20 years ago. "He didn't start racing when we first moved to Florida," said Marc. "But he used to go watch. Finally, the old itch came back and he had to get back into a race car."

Mare, who has been racing for five years now, got his start before he was old enough to obtain his driver's license.

"Dad was fighting for the points championship and had to work one Saturday night," explained Marc. "He needed someone to drive the car to get some points. I really wasn't old enough but I just kind of slid into the car and went out and □See Kinleys, Page 4B

Martin leads way in Trumbell's win

United Press International

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. - Tom Galla said he had no doubts his Trumbuil, Conn., team would end a five-year dominance by Far East teams in the Little League World Series.

"I knew we were a team of destiny," Galla said. "It's a miracle we were here to begin with. We had to win this game."

His players responded, as Ken Martin homered and drove in three runs and Chris Drury pitched a five-hitter to lead Trumbull to the title with a 5-2 victory over Kaohslung. Taiwan.

The last U.S. victory came when a team from Marietta, Ga., won the title in 1983.

"You saw it on the field," Galla said. "They don't know how to lose. They didn't care who they were playing today. The kids were more confident and they were a little more aggressive today with their bats than they had been in previous games. We made a few things happen today that we weren't able to do the last couple of days."

Trumbull had stranded 20 runners in their two World Series games, when they defeated Davenport, Iowa, on Tuesday and San Pedro, Calif., on Thursday.

Drury, using an effective fastball and changeup, struck out two and walked four to pick up his second victory in the week-long series. Chien-Chih Lee took the loss.

There's no place like home for softball winners

By DEAN SMITH Herald correspondent

It was home team night at Chase Park Friday as all three home teams (Creative Invasion, the Wrecking Crew, and Ken Kern's Transmissions) won their games in Sanford Men's Class "C" Slowpitch Softball action.

In the first game of the evening an expected showdown between the co-leaders The Barn and Creative Invasion, who had identical 6-1 records, turned into a romp by invasion. Invasion, now 7-1, scored six runs in the bottom of the first inning to take a 6-1 lead. After Ron Lasage led off the inning for Invasion with a single, Bryan Hartman found the gap in left-center field and came all the way around to score two runs with an inside-the-park home run. That was just the beginning as Creative smacked four more hits and also got help from a Barn error to score four more runs.

Invasion scored two runs in each of the second and third innings to take a 10-1 lead after three innings of play. A three run sixth by The Barn made the score more respectable at the end.

In addition to Hartman, who also collected a single. Kirk Allen also had a two run inside-the-park home run. Allen later got his []See softball, Page 3B

Here's an interesting football question... Can you name the only school that's won the national championship in major-college football — but doesn't play majorcollege football any more?... The only school that's done that is the University of Chicago.... Chicago University of Chicago . . . Chicago won the national championship in major-coilege football in the early 1800s and was once a power in the Big Ten Conference, but they gave up football entirely in 1939 and now play small-coilege football.

Here's an addity ... Faciball is often called the "pigskin" sport, and the faciball itself is called the "pigskin". But faciballs aren't made from pigskin arymore ... Meet faciballs today are made from contide.

Some players are so well known by their nicknames that few fans can come up with the players' real first names... For instance, what are the real first names of Babe Ruth, Yogi Berra. Dizzy Dean, Goose Gossage and Bo Jackson?... Here are the answers: George Ruth, Lawrence Berra, Jay Dean, Richard Gossage and Vincent Jackson.

Rypien impresses Gibbs in Redskins win over Miami

WASHINGTON — After menting black Rypton as the Washington Redskins' starting quarterback for the regular means, Coach Joe Gibbs anxiously awated a strong presences performance by the young passer.

Rypton, erratic in his last two presences appearances against the Pittsburgh Steelers and Minnesota Vikings, gave Othis what he wanted against the Manni Dolphins Friday night.

"He had not had real good nights for two weeks. I think I know what we have there (with Rypien's 'ability), but, at the same time, 'you kind of like to see it show up sometimes,' Gibbs said of Rypien's nearly flawless performance in a 35-21 victory over blinni. "It was a good game for him. It helps a quarterback, particularly a young gay, with confidence."

Rypien, facing another typically weak Dolphins defense, looked plenty confident, completing 15 of 16 passes for 117 yards and a 8-yard touchdown to Earnest Byner. Rypien directed three touchdown drives while seeing action in the first half. His only major mistake was when he floated a pass intended for Art Monk into double coverage, resulting in an interception by Paul Lankford at the Dolphins'

St-yerd-line.
The fine performance was in contrast to his S of 14 passing performance in Monday night's 34-13 has to the Vikings.

Lost art of wade fishing an effective way to catch bass

In the fast-moving world of base fishing, wade fishing is becoming a lost art. In certain situations, however, wade fish-ing can be an extremely effective method for catching base.

Waiting affords a quiet, low-profile approach and the angier doesn't have to worry about boat control. He can station himself precisely and make accurate presentations to bass in hard-to-reach areas. Wade fish-ing is very relaxing as the angier becomes one with the elements, alowly making his way through fishy angle.

shy spots. Certain stretches of the St. Certain stretches of the St. Jonh's River, especially the Puzzie Lake area, are custom-made for wade fishing. When the water is in the banks, the average water depth is probably around 4 feet with only a few spots over the 10-foot mark. Due to the mild currents, most of the bottom is hard sand and makes for comfortable footing.

Bias in Puzzie Lake tend to concentrate in deep bends and

My personal record is 23 base the same spot. On that day, the base were schooling. By wading, I was able to maintain a low profile and not spook the feeding fish.

Are you ready for a change of pace? Best the heat by joining the fish in their own element. Wade fishing will offer you a new way to relax while catching a stringer of bass in the process.

A Rapala or any type of swimming-type lure will swim more naturally if it is attatched to your fishing line with a loop instead of a cinched-down knot.

Williams sidelined for 10 weeks

WASHINGTON — A surgeon chipped away tiny pieces of bone from a vertebra in Doug Williams' lower back to correct a herniated disk Friday in an operation that will leave the Washington Redskins quarterback sid-lined up to 10 weeks, the club announced.

The 90-minute operation on Williams, 34, was performed at Sibley Memorial Hospital by Dr. Bruce Ammerman, the hospital's chief neurosurgeon. Williams was listed in good condition after the surgery, but may remain in the hospital

"There were no complications associated with the surgery." according to a statement released by the club.

Williams, the team's incumbent starting quarterback is not expected back until late October at the earliest. Mark Rypien, who started six games last season, already has been named as the team's starting quarterback for the regular season opener Sept. 11 against the New York Giants. Williams, a nine-year NFL veteran who was named Most Valuable Player of Super Bowl XXII, first felt the injury during an offseason workout on a treadmill in his home in Zachary, La. The injury was thought to be a nerve root irritation until the quarterback underwent a new series of tests Wednesday that revealed the herniated disk. Williams missed all of the club's training camp in Cartiele.

Williams' operation, called a lumber laminectomy, involved chipping away thetiny bone compring away theratry bone arches from a vertebra to relieve compression of the spinal cord.

The injury is not considered career threatening and walking normally can begin in three to five days after such surgery.

The Redskins are expected to place Williams on an integer

Williams' career has been marred by a series of injuries. Friday's surgery was his second operation in less than a year: Williams underwent an emergency appendenterny last September. Williams, a strong-armed passer who joined the Redskins in 1908, helped make the Red-skins the NPC's most productive passing offence in 1908 and combined with Rypien to pro-duce a league-best 33 touchdown passes. He has passed for 16,503 yards during his NFL career and played two years in the USFL.

I like stock care because I feel safer in them. I don't want my head attacking out above the care like sticking out above the cars like indy car drivers do."

working with the students creates almost as much paperwork for the trainers, documenting the injury, treatment and rehabilitation. Add that to the work involved in teaching a full class schedule and you start to understand the significance of having another teacher to share the load.

"The demand is so great, most of the schools in the county have a second part-time trainer to help out," said Mosure, who is aided by Brenda Weish as well as a group of student assistants.

Monare added that there are madely desired who wiseness the factor and light chool vapility dream. But when foctors aren't available and an jury occurs, the trainers are the athletic equivalent of paramedics, assisting the in-jured player as much as they can within the scope of the skills.

explained Mosure. "At Lake ary, we have a group of team doctors who go to varsity events. But that's why athletic trainers are so important. Because the doctors can't be at every event, we're the doctors' eyes when something does happen."

That's a responsibility that is not taken lightly. In Seminole County, all the athletic trainers must be certified by the Nation Athletic Trainers Association, an organisation endorsed by the American Medical Association.

"There are prerequisite courses in anatomy, physiology, chemistry," and Mosure. "You have to go through an 1,800-hour teternship and pass a national competency exast."

After going through that rigorous an educational process and having to spend far more nights than they would like working late at athletic events, the county's athletic trainers are county's athletic trainers are

Martin Marietta to build tanks or space shuttle

ORLANDO - Martin Marietta Corporation says it has been awarded a $1.8 billion contract by NASA to produce 60 additional external tanks for the space shuttle.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., ordered the tanks for delivery in the 1990s.

The award is the second portion of a procurement for the tanks. The first portion, worth $500 million, was awarded to Martin Marfetta in June 1988.

The tanks will be produced by Martin Marietta Manned Space Systems company at NASA's Michoud Assembly Facility near New Orleans.

The first tank under the new contract is expected to be completed in late 1991 and the 60th in mid-1997. Under previous awards, 59 tanks were contracted to support Shuttle operations, and 52 were produced to date.

The external tank carries the shuttle's liquid hydrogen fuel and liquid oxygen oxidizer and supplies them to the orbiter during lift-off and ascent.

The largest and heaviest shuttle element when loaded, the tank is the only major non-reusable element of the Shuttle

Test shows passive smoke effect

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - Cotinine, a byproduct of nicotine that can be measured in children, will help scientists learn more about how passive smoking affects children's health, researchers said.

Research conducted at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine shows the amount of cigarette smoke in homes with children corresponds to the amount of cotinine in their urine. Dr. Frederick W. Henderson said.

"The goal of our study was to find out whether cotinine measurements are good quantitative indicators of the amount of passive smoking a child is doing." said Henderson, the principle investigator in the research.

Children who are regularly exposed to adults' tobacco smoke have significantly higher rates than other youngsters of chest illnesses like bronchitis and pneumonia and of symptoms like wheezing.

Those who breathe tobacco amoke also have slightly lower average levels of lung function, slower rates of lung function growth and more middle ear infections, the research shows.

Aspirin affects blood pressure

BOSTON - Aspirtn, already believed to reduce the chances men will have heart attacks, may also protect women at risk for high blood pressure during pregnancy from developing the condition, researchers reported.

An laraeli study involving 65 pregnant women at high risk for developing high blood pressure found taking an aspirin every day in the final months of pregnancy appeared to cut that risk.

We conclude that low daily doses of aspirin taken during the third trimester of pregnancy significantly reduced the incidence of pregnancy-induced hypertension ... in women at high risk," Tel Aviv University researchers reported. The laraeli report and an accompanying study from Italy indicate aspirin lowers the risk for high blood pressure during egnancy by reducing levels of a substance that constricts arteries and helps blood clot.

High blood pressure is a fairly common problem among pregnant women, occurring in about seven of every 100 first pregnancies. The condition can cause a variety of problems for the woman and the fetus, including the possibility the baby may be born prematurely or stillborn or the mother may have a TALLAHASSEE - Florida health officials have issued an alert for a rare encephalitiscausing virus for Leon, Gadaden and Wakulla counties in north Florida. The 11-year-old boy was the first person in Mississippi to die from the rare eastern equine encephalitia, a mosquito-borne brain inflammation, state health officials said Wednesday.

Fitness center programs varied

SANFORD — Private fitness centers have sprung up throughout the United States over the past 10 years, a sign that Americans are becoming more health- and fitness-oriented.

All fitness centers are not alike, although they may all have the latest chrome-plated and padded exercise machines. Four fitness centers in the Sanford-Lake Mary area all have their own styles of operation and anyone interested in joining can find one that fits his or her personal preference.

The Energy Source Pitness Center has been located in the Country Club Plaza shopping center at the corner of Airport Boulevard and 25th Street for five years.

Joe Scarpa, who is filling in for vacation-ing manager Denice Helmick, says the club has about 4,500 members, most from the Sanford-Lake Mary area, but also from Geneva, Osteen, Deltona and as far north as DeLand. The membership is about evenly split between men and women, he says.

The center has regular aerobics classes taught by certified instructors, or members are free to work independently on the machines or free weights. Scarpa says the center has 10 staff members, some of whom are always available to assist those who

Business remains steady year around, Scarpo said, except during the months of December, January and February when it picks up. "People want more indoor activity during the colder months," he says.

The center is open from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays, and has reduced hours during weekends. Scarpo says there is almost always a group of people who come to work out at 5 or 6 a.m., and another that comes in at night, besides those who use the center during normal business hours.

The newest fitness center in the area is for Gold's Gym opened in The Oaks shopping center on Lake Mary Boulevard about six months ago. Rick Friend, assistant manager, says the company has franchised outlets throughout the United States and offers programs ranging from weight loss to body building.

The gym sells memberships and a program is tailored to each member depending on what he or she wants to accomplish. Friend says about 90 percent of the present members are in muscle toning and body shaping programs. So far about 45 percent of the manufacturers of the members are women and 55 percent men, but Priend says more women are expected to join as the club becomes

The center does not sell memberships and has no organised classes. Patrons are free to come in and work out on the seven available exercise machines at any time. A personal trainer is available to work individually with patrons if they wish. The majority of patrons are women who want to lose weight.

Besides normal exercise equipment the center has Easy Tone exercise beds, which move different parts of the body mechanically. New drug appears

United Press International

BOSTON - A new anticlotting drug appears more effective than aspirin for protect-ing people at high risk of suffering strokes, especially women. researchers reported.

In the largest study of its kind. the drug ticlopidine hydrochloride significantly reduced the chances of crippling and sometimes deadly attacks from striking.

Strokes result most commonly from clots cutting off blood to the brain and previous studies have shown aspirin can reduce the risk of these clots forming.

Ticlopidine hydrocloride, which is made by Syntex Research of Palo Alto, Calif., also reduces the chances blood will clot, although it works somewhat differently.

"I'm excited. I never expected It to turn it out this good," said Dr. William Hass, a professor of neurology at the New York University School of Medicine, who led the study. "We have a new drug to add to aspirin in the reenal of treatment which can be used to prevent strokes."

About 500,000 Americans suffer strokes each year, 147,000 die and as many as 40,000 have had warning signs.

The study involved 5,069 patients throughout North America who experienced warning signs, such as minor strokes. They took ticlopidine or aspirin every day without knowing which one they were taking.

After three years, 13 percent of those taking aspirin had suffered a fatal or non-fatal stroke compared to only 10 percent of those taking ticlopidine - a 21 percent lower risk among those taking ticlopidine; the researchers reported.

When the risk was broken down by sex, ticlopidine was found to reduce the stroke risk for women 27 percent more than aspirin, the researchers said. Previous studies questioned the stroke-preventing value of aspirin for women.

The findings indicate the drug may offer an effective alternative for those who cannot take aspirin for some reason and for women who are especially concerned about their stroke risk, Hose said

But Dr. Louis Caplan, chief of neurology at Tufts University School of Medicine and the New England Medical Center in Boston, said more research is needed to identify the best candidates for the drug.

The group is a workshop of serious poets who wish to share their works and improve their skills. Some meetings are devoted to the poets choice, but most meetings are devoted to assigned experiments in various styles and patterns of verse.

Flag given to new U.S. citizens

VFW: Post 5408 and the Ladies Auxiliary restrated an American flag Aug 4. to David and farts Alamina of Winter Springs, who became U.S. citizens at the end of June.

David, from Balice in Central America, is the City of Winter Springs. He and his wife, from Mexico, have three sons, all natural-born

Later that morning, the Winter Springs VFW post held a flag presentation, where a large flag that had flown over the Capitol in Washington. D.C., was raised and dedicated. The flag was a gift from Rep. Bill McCullum, donated to Post Commander Kenny Killian's nephew.

The former Ensign Pearl Robson of 1943 (left) today remains happy to share her plane, nursing and Navy skills.

She's retired, not tired

LONGWOOD - Between the four corners of the United States, Pearl Robson offered her care to strangers, tickled the ivories with lively jazz and even danced the hula.

A retired Navy nurse, Robson still does all but Robson, 79, was born in Sanford to James N. Robson, Sanford's first doctor, and Pearl Breedin Robson, mother of 10 children.

Her father's dedication to medicine caused him to frequently set up camp with those he treated until they recovered and offer beds in the Robenn's already-crowded house to sight neighbors. All that was a significant part of Robenn's young life. But, she said. "I never even thought about being a nurse."

A graduate of Seminole High School and Munson School of Music, Robson shared her musical talents with local civic clubs while in school. Members of Rotary. Lions, Kiwania and women's clubs would pick her up at school, giving her $1 and a dinner to make the piano sing at their meetings.

With her brother Jimmie, Robson played at The Millane Theater in downtown Sanford, [The theater later became The Ritz, which is being renovated by an Orlando firm.) The two entertained the crowd with a marimba, xylophone, piano and drums.

Robson taught piano for a year, but gave it up.

This feature is one of several that will be published from time to time about local individuals who were once in the public

"I realized it was not for me," she said. "I didn't care for all that ding-donging after little girls who didn't care if they learned or not."

toning. Although she stallers from a strained back after a recent all-night engagement at the piano, Robson altruga off the pain at a chance to play again. At the piano, Robson's fingers nimbly bang out "Anchors Away" and a stream of jazz tunes.

She left Sanford for medical training at Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia. She then underwent more specialized training in obstetrics and gynecology at Cornell Medical Center in New York.

At Cornell, Robson was a rebel of sorts. Caring for her patients meant making them feel good; so, while her supervising nurses were away, she played the piano and made fudge for her patients. Although the aroma of sweets gave her antics away, she said the doctors liked her fudge too much to complain.

"It was fun, as serious as nursing was," she said. "I was a serious nurse. If one of my patients died, I felt like I couldn't go back to work for weeks...Of course, I had to."

Robson was the smallest in her Navai training class at 5 feet, 2 inches, and only 90 pounds. Yet she went on to reach the highest rank of any woman serving in the Navy at that time. As lieutenant commander, Robson served in World War II and the Korean War.

After the wars, Robson received a telegram that Cornell immediately needed a supervisor of obstetrics. "I hadn't been around a female in five years," she said, but she agreed to fill the position until the medical center could find a permanent replacement. She gave Cornell another year's service as supervisor.

Robson went wherever she was needed. She served private nursing duty in Orlando and Miami during the winter months when an influx of northerners filled hospital wards. After Easter. she would take off on summer travel junkets. which usually led her to more work.

"Wherever I went, I always packed my uniform in my trunk," she said. "I never knew what was going to come up."

Robson's nursing skills were discovered while she toured the Hawaiian islands, so she went to work as a private nurse there for several months. During her service there she learned to dance to "Lovely Hula Hands."

Tending Musk Oxen was a great vacation

By CYNTHIA AUSTRI Herald columnist

LONGWOOD - "We did it! And we lived!" exclaimed Larry and Phyllis Miller, two Longwood residents who spent the month of June in Alaska working on a Musk Ox farm.

A fairly docile animal, the Musk Ox has been around since prehistoric times, the Millers said. The Musk Ox farm in Alaska where the Millers volunteered is the only one of its kind in the world that is working to save the animal from extinction, they

The idea of working on the farm all started after the Millers spent last summer touring Alaska in their motor home. At that time, they visited the Musk Ox farm, which is a popular tourist stop in Alaska. Last year, more than 30,000 tourists got a chance to see the shaggy creatures.

Frogs lovely outside, poison inside

Remember looking for frogs and tadpoles in ponds and streams near your home, or looking for toads after a rainstorm? Maybe you still do. But you're sure to come across a wonderfully exotic variety in the Reptile House at the Central Florida Zoological Park. There, on exhibit, are five tiny but beautifully colored Dendrobates aurati better known as Green and Black Poison Arrow Frogs.

Poison arrow frogs are found throughout tropical Central and northern South America. Green and Black Poison Arrow Frogs are common in Panama and northwestern Colombia.

They are terrestrial and diurnal creatures, meaning they live on the ground, rarely venture into trees and are active during the day.

Green and Black Poison Arrow Frogs do not need a constant water source to live like other amphibians do. They live in the leaf litter on the floor of tropical forests, getting the moisture they need from the daily rains and humidity.

Poison arrow frogs are small. most being less than 2 inches long. Their favorite food is small anta. Smail crickets, termites, other small insects and spiders comprise the rest of their diet.

Green and Black Polson Arrow Frogs can secrete a toxic poison through glands in their skin. Though unaggressive by disposition, they may secrete the poison when handled roughly or attacked. This poison is distasteful at best and may prove fatal if introduced into the bloodstream.

These frogs get their name from their use by natives who

To obtain the poison, the natives collect the frogs, impale them on atteks and roast them over open fires. This causes the secretion to be produced. The Indiana collect this fluid in containers, mix in some herbs. and allow the mixture to ferment to increase its potency. Then they coat the tips of their arrows with this poison concection before they go hunting. These frogs are also noted for their bright, beautiful coloration. Their skin is glossy black with bands or spots of bright colors. The specimens on exhibit at the Central Florida Zoo are black with bright fluorescent green markings.

The bright colors, called warning coloration, actually advertise that the frog is potentially dangerous. When a predator, such as a snake or bird, attempts to cat one of these frogs, it will most assuredly have an unpleasant experience. If it survives, the predator will associate the bright colors with the experience and, hopefully, will think twice before trying to eat a poison arrow frog again.

Korgans glow in golden anniversary celebration ant than Florence Korgan when she playfully fed her husband a piece of cake Sunday, Aug. 20, as several cameras flashed to record the momentous event. And Edward A. Korgan portrayed schoolboy bashfulness at his wife's loving gesture-in front of all those people, no less.

The occasion was a lovely buffet-reception, held at the Sanford Woman's Club, to honor the Korgans on their golden wedding anniversary. About 135 guests didn't seem to mind the raging rainstorms that enchanting afternoon as they gathered to help Edward and Florence celebrate in style.

Florence greeted the guests, wearing an attractive peach-colored, short-sleeved, satin peau street-length dress, fash-ioned with a dropped lace torso. A satin rosett accented the dropped waistline, and she wore a corrage of peach and white carnations tied with gold ribbons. Edward wore a boutonniere in the lapel of his business suit. A handsome couple.

Forming the receiving line with the guests of honor were ir three sons and their wives. who were also the celebration hosts: Edward A. Korgan Jr., Longwood: Richard and Thelma Korgan, Tulsa, Okla.; and Michael and Janet Korgan.

Piano music, played by Gay Alice Duncan of Orlando, drifted throughout the beautifully deco-rated auditorium where guests were seated at individual tables. The tables featured mementos including unique gold-sprayed miniature market baskets. trimmed with lace and ribbon and filled with assorted pastelcolored butter mints; scrolls, rolled diploma-style, imprinted with a message in gold, and secured with a gold-colored wedding band; and delicate lace packets of fragrant potpourri.

Guests helped themselves to a bountiful buffet after which Edward and Florence cut the tiered anniversary cake topped with golden numerals "50."

The serving tables were overlaid with white Army-Navy cloths, enhanced with peach satin bows at the corners. White papier-mache wedding bells. trimmed with golden ribbons, hung at vantage points Effectainment during the afternoon featured the four-part harmony quartet "Debut." a part of the chorus of the Sound of Sunshine Chapter of Sweet Adelines. It was his "cute little hat" that attracted Florence-a green braided hat with a feather. Florence said "it was love at first sight" but they waited two years to get married. They were married in Waverly on Aug. 21, 1939.

In addition to their three sons, the Korgans also have three grandchildren and three greatgrandchildren.

When the family first arrived in Sanford, Edward worked for the A&P store that was located next door to Sankarik's Glass & Paint Co., Inc., on Magnolia Avenue in downtown Sanford. The store was eventually moved to U.S. Highway 17-92, where it remained in operation for several years. After the store closed, Edward traveled Central Florida.

Florence's summation of a happy and successful 50 years together is: "We're best friends. We're lovers and we're married. but we're best friends."

Miss Florida in Sanford

More than just a touch of glamor changed the pace of the regular Monday meeting of the Sanford Rotary Club this week. The appearance of Miss Florida 1989, Sandra Joanne Frick of Hialeah, gave the fellows a lot to talk about.

In the absence of Benny Arnold, president, Dr. James Quinn presided over the meeting and program arranged by Warren Day.

Miss Florida reviewed the events leading to her capturing the Florida title and told the Rotarians that Florida is long overdue in winning the Miss American honors. Since the inception of the pageant, there has never been a Miss America from Florida, she said according to Quinn.

Articulate in speech and presence, Sandra, 23, will perform the same number in the Miss American Pageant in Atlantic City, from Sept. 10-16, that won

She showed the Rotarians a videotape of the spirited ballet, "Yankee Doodle Dandy," that she will perform en pointe in Atlantic City. The video showed Sendra in a fall, which may have been an influence in her winning the Florida pageant. She recovered the boo-boo beautifully and carried on with the ultimate in grace and poles.

Quinn described the dance as an upscale version of Michael Jackson's famous "Moon Walk."

Although Sandra is optimistic that she will make an excellent showing in the Miss America competition, she is already a winner, having won several scholarships in various pageants

Miss Florida 1989 and her sister, Nancy, operate "Head Over Heels," a dance and aerobics studio in Hialeah. She also attends college, where she is studying theater and business. The 5-foot, 6-inch, green-eyed blonde weighs 112 pounds and enjoys dancing, aerobics and water skiing.

Quarters to surround park

Draw a big red circle around Sept. 23 on your calendar. That's the day of fun and festivity when a gala Saturday in the Park will be held at the Children's Playground of Park on Park, between Eighth and Ninth streets.

The name of the game is to raise money for the construction of the playground. The main event will be to wrap one-quarter of a mile of quarters around the park. According to Martha Yancey, the public is being asked to pledge the coins at $3 a foot and $9 a yard. She said the event hopes to net about $4,000. A day of fun is promised.

Entertainment will be featured from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Hamburgers and hot dogs will be served all day, and Wes Rinker for rides. Also booths will be available to sign up volunteers for the park construction and serving of food to the workers.

About 30 guests turned out for the event and enjoyed luncheon as well as the delicious birthday cake donated by the restaurant. The Rev. Edwin Weber served as the master of ceremonies.

Theodore was born in Frankfurt, Germany, and moved to New York when he was 16 years old. He spent most of his ife as a machinist and later owned and operated his own business in Mismi.

He and the former Margaret Heinbuch, who were married Jan. 15, 1977, have made their home in Sanford for 12 years. He is a member of the Congregational Christian Church, is a 50-year member of the Masons and is also a member of the International Order of Odd Fellows.

Who needs a campground? The Wilson Place home of Eric and Carol Larson was temporarily converted into a campground when they entertained several of Eric Jr.'s young friends on his seventh birthday.

The guests camped out in their tents for the night following a nature walk through the woods and a water balloon game. Pizza and birthday cake were served after which the guests roasted marshmallows on the glowing campfire.

The boys retired to their tents fairly early, but were bright-eyed and bushy-tailed at 6 a.m. and ready for a hearty breakfast prepared by Eric and Carol.

The Millers had given a donation to the farm while they were touring. Once they had returned home, they received a newsletter from the farm. Reading that volunteers were needed at the farm, the Millers decided to devote the month of June to help save the Musk Ox.

"It was somewhat what we expected. Sometimes it was more like you were working with wild animals," Larry said.

The Miller went to the farm with the impression that the Musk Oxen were tame. Other picture of the animals as wild beasts. They beasts. They actually were a little of both at times, the Millers said.

One part of the couple's job was to herd the animals into barns. There, the oxen were weighed, had their hooves clipped, and got used to being handled.

The herding was a lot scarier than the Millers expected. Three or four volunteers would go to one end of the pasture and begin herding the Musk Oxen toward the barn.

like we builfighters," Larry said. "We would wave our coats."

One of the bulls, the one with the worst reputation and which weighed 1.000 pounds, charged Larry. The volunteers had been told not to run in such instances. So Larry just stood there as a 1,000-pound bull charged him. The bull stopped about a foot in front of him, he said.

Another job the Millers had was called "calf watch." During the first two weeks of their stay. 15 calves were born. The Millers were on watch during the night hours. If they saw a cow going into labor, they were to report it to the farm manager. If the pregnant cow was acting unusual, they were to wake up the farm manager immediately so he could help the cow.

Each evening for the first two weeks, the Millers would haul their sleeping bags, an alarm cicck and binoculars into their jeep and drive into the middle of the pasture on a knoll where they could view the animals.

During the summer, Alaska has constant daylight, which occasionally dims into a brief dusk. This made it easy for the Millers to watch over the preg-

The couple made their rounds every two to three hours, using their alarm clock to wake them.

"The setting was beautiful: rolling green pastures surrounded by snow-capped mountains," Phyllis said. "It was gorgeous at night to see the sunset behind the mountain from the knoll. It was nothing like we have here."

One night while on calf watch. the Miller were rudely awakened by their jeep rocking.

"The moment I woke up, I thought it was a horrible earth-quake," Phyllis said. "We had heard so much about the terrible earthquake Alaska had had tin the 1960s)."

When they looked outside, a female Musk Ox was scratching her body on the jeep. She weighed from 500 to 600 pounds and would walk around the entire jeep acratching. "It looked like she was having a love affair with the jeep," Larry said. "She did it several other

died as well. After the calves were born, the Millers helped to catch the babies for shots.

Four people would corral one calf, while someone held a big board for protection in case the mother would charge them. The person who actually caught the baby and gave it its shot had to be covered in plastic bags so the calf wouldn't smell like a human. If the calf did have human scent on it, the mother would abandon it.

"That (the birth) was the yearlings each morning with highlight of the trip for me," gallon jugs of water, medicine gallon jugs of water, medicine and a little corn syrup.

Another task for the Millers was to comb the Musk Ox. The underfur that is combed out is used by underprivileged Eakimo women to knit hats, scarves, SACTICLE and other articles clothing. It is soft, similar to angora, and expensive to purchase in a final product. This year there was a greater demand for the fur than was available.

'The experience (of combing the Musk Ox) was more difficult than we envisioned," Phyllis said. "After the first time, we wondered why we were there."

The animals were put in small stalls where they kicked and stomped during their combings. The first time, Phyllis' legs were black and blue, though she was The Millers also fed the wearing thick boots. But even

I hated to leave." Larry said. "I guess it was the whole thing-the setting, the contentment, the tranquility. It's kind of like going back in time."

The Millers plan a return visit in March during the Iditarod Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome.

Phyllis wants to return to see the Musk Ox that was named after her. Each of the 100 animals are given a number, and the farm manager gives them informal names. One that wasn't yet named received the name of Phyllis.

"The farm manager told me ahe (the Musk Ox) had a rotten personality, but I didn't care. I wanted a Musk Ox named after me." Phyllia said.

"I want to see the Musk Ox in winter," Larry said. "They thrive in 30 to 40 degrees below. Something about Alaska beckons you back."

One of the arguments for opening with a strong two-bid with minimum required strength is that you will not be passed out below game. The South hand is a good example. South would hate to be passed out at one heart. In our experience, that doesn't happen when the bidder has a strong playing hand with a seven-card suit. I would open one heart with the South cards because I would want the bidding to flow in a natural manner. South did open with two clubs, but East was an aggressive player who was willing to trade on favorable vulnerability to get in the way of the North-South slam bidding. North responded with three diamonds, and East bid his clubs. South bid four hearts, and North tried Blackwood for aces. East now bid five spades, just in rase the opponents were going to sud-denly bid seven hearts. South bid six hearts, not really knowing what it showed, and North interpreted the bid as showing two aces and a solid heart suit. So North bid seven no-trump. which East was happy to double! If there is a moral to this deal, it is that every partnership should have firm understandings as to their ace-asking methods when the opponents interfere with their bidding. A further lesson is that it is better to open the bidding with one heart with the South cards. The bidding will not die, and South will be well-placed to show his strength later. In particular, when East does bid clubs. South will at some time be able to cue-bid his club void.

The graduate of Forest Lake Academy is a sophomore majoring in pre-physical therapy. During her year in Ponape, Antolin will teach fifth grade.

Attuning young ears to Spanish

GENEVA - Nannette GENEVA — Nannette Dominguez is something of a pioneer. She teaches Spanish to kindergarten through fifth grade students at Geneva Elementary School, and her program may be the only one of its kind in Seminole County.

"I think this may even be the only program like this in this part of the state." Dominguez said, adding that foreign language programs in elementary schools are fully developed in the south Florida area.

Domingues said.
The $13,247 state grant is matched with an equal amount from the district. Most of the money is used to pay Domin-quez's salary and benefits, but $1,200 is available for supplies.

Dominguez said her predecessor purchased a video teaching supplement called "Saludos!" from a south Florida company. "Saludos!" has been used successfully in the Dade County schools for several years.

The videos include cartoons and skits that teach words and phrases as well as concepts to the children. "Part of (the video program's) success is that it's fun." Dominquessaid.

Dominguez does not try to teach her students the intricacies of Spanish, but rather hopes only to make them conversant in the language.

For example, the kindergarteners learn their colors and nursery rhymes. "I will teach them azul (blue), for example," she said, "and then they will draw something of what they think of when they think of azul.

scope of her teaching to language. She tries to incorporate as much about the culture, the people and the geography of Spanish-speaking countries as she can in her curriculum.

Even traditional dances are a part of the learning process. "We tried to do the meringe last year," she said jokingly, "but the kids couldn't find their

Bart Glamatti: Tough guy and champion of justice

It was a night not unlike any other night at the Bingo parior.

An elderly gentleman with a distinctly visible lack of teeth methodically extracted ping-pong balls from the clear plastic dispenser in front of him. He shouted the numbers as loudly as he could, occasionally clearing his throat with a loud rasping noise, a condition obviously created by one too many cigarettes. Still though, the tin of tobacco in his shirt pocket was visible through the somewhat faded white material.

Four ceiling fans rotated lazily overhead, their low-watt whire often the only noise in the room

About 30 people. many of them middle-aged and elderly, peered over the tops of their eyeglasses or squinted as if in some degree of pain, at the colored cards on the tables in front of them. A few of them sipped lemonade from paper cups and an occasional hand plunged into the 'complimentary' chip bowls that dotted the white paper tablecloths.

In one corner of the room an elderly gentleman set in a straw-backed chair with a card precariously balanced on his left knee. The chair leaned back against a sheetrock wall that was desperately in need of a coat of paint and the old man would anore for a few seconds and then snap his eyes open as if someone had auddenly, quite unexpectedly, slapped him on the back. He would look around the room to see if anyone had noticed him sleeping, then drift back into his own world again.

He didn't hear most of the numbers, but what the hell, the games gave him an excuse to get out of the house on Saturdays.

"N-27" the numbers-caller yelled ... and then the acrenity was broken.

The double doors in the back of the room came crashing down and bounded off the worn carpet. Having kicked in the doors, the men walked across the strewn wood splinters and flashed automatic weapons toward every corner of the room.

"Don't anybody move," one of them yelled. the black and green camoflouge paint on his face twisting into an ugly ancer. There were about a dozen of them, each heavily armed and painted with military pigment grease. None of them wore shirts, they were attired simply in fatigue pants and black boots, spit-shined to an cerie glimmer. Some of them wore headbands. some had leather arm bands wrapped around their biceps. All of them had gun belts slung across their shoulders Rambo-style.

There was an understandable moment of terror as elderly ladies screamed and bingo cards went flying. The numbers-caller stood on the small raised stage at the front of the room. still holding a ping-pong ball between the thumb and forefinger of his right hand, his lower jaw dropped open in disbelief.

There was virtually no movement in the room for a few seconds, then one of the ladies fainted and two men rushed to try and prevent her from falling to the floor.

It was at that moment that the intruders panicked. The sound of automatic weapons fire shattered the early evening air, drowning out what had been a soothing melody of cricket and frog chatter from beyond the open windows.

Shards of glass and fragments of wood and metal richochetted off the walls as bullet after bullet ripped into the room's tables, windows and occupants.

After 30 seconds or so of deafening noise, the room once again grew stient.

The leader of the group, a man known only as 'Giamatti the Gamblebuster,' ordered his band of invaders to cease the onslaught. Giamatti's troops gathered side by side in the back of the room as he, his weapon still smoking from hundreds of rounds he himself had fired. slowly shuffled through the carnage, his beer belly still glowing red from where he had braced the butt of his weapon while firing.

He looked at two old ladies lying side by side on the floor, one of them still clutching the wooden cane that had helped her make the short walk from her humble house just down the street. She uttered a faint moan that was quickly eradicated when Giamatti fired two more 'just in case' shots into her already shredded body.

"Fools," he yelled. "Did they really think they could get away with this? Openly gambling in public. Little did they know we had compiled months worth of surveillance to finally crack their little illegal operation.' He turned and looked at his troops at the rear of the building. They were kneeling and sitting on the floor, casually glancing about as if the horrible acts they had just committed were of no significant consequence. A couple of them had dragged in a cooler of beer and began passing the canned refreshments out to their comrades.

"Hey, toss me one of those," the Gamblebuster yelled.

He caught the frosted can with one of his big gnarly hands, laid his rifle on the floor and popped the can open. He took a big gulp and threw his head back as if in deflance of whatever laws or morals might condenin his actions. He swallowed hard, laughed loudly and then gulped again, this time overflowing the cavern above his frazzled beard. The overflow fizzed in the dirty whiskers and dripped from his face. He was indeed enjoying his victory.

He finished his drink and sauntered back to □See Viewpoint, Page 4D

The world at war

It's been 50 years since Hitler marched on Poland

Sept. 1, 1838 — 50 years ago on Friday — Adolf Hitler hurled his troops and Luftwaffe planes against Poland and plunged mankind into World War II. On that fateful day, Joseph W. Grigg was a staff correspondent in the Berlin bureau of United Press International. The following excerpts are from reminiscences that Grigg, now retired, wrote in later years about the events he witnessed.

CEPH W. ORIGO Retired UPI correspondent

LONDON - At 5:45 on the morning of Friday, Sept. 1, 1939 -50 years ago Friday - the "Hellschreiber" printer of the official Nazi German news agency D.N.B. began grinding out a communique.

Proclamation to the German Armed Forces ..." It began.

Over the streets of Berlin, a gray, rainy dawn was breaking. The few early workers hurrying along the broad, empty expanse of Unter den Linden saw the street lamps go out.

They would not be lit again for six blood-soaked years. In the great mausoleum-like Reich Chancellery he himself had built, Nazi Fuehrer Adolf Hitler signed the proclamation and went to sleep in his small cell-like bedroom. "The Polish state has refused the peaceful settlement of our relations as neighbors, for which I have striven, and instead has appealed to arms," the proclamation read. "There remains no other means of

EDITOR'S NOTE: At dawn on ending this madness but from now on to meet force with force."

There were few cheers, but many long faces in Berlin. It was almost as if Berliners sensed what was in store for them - total destruction of their city and the most overwhelming defeat ever suffered by a major nation.

For weeks Europe had hurtled toward the brink of war as Hitler pushed a "hate" campaign against Poland to a hysterical climax.

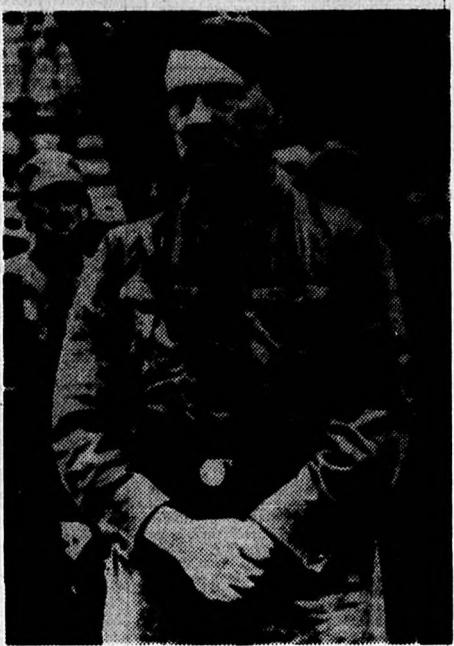

Berlin railroad stations were jammed with Wehrmacht reservists reporting to their units. Fleets of Heinkel and Dornier bombers roared over the city to impress the population. Anti-aircraft guns were mounted on the rooftops. Food. clothes, shoes and soap were rationed. Telephone lines with London and Paris were cut.

Britain and France were pledged to come to Poland's aid if she were attacked. But Hitler was convinced they would not fight. He expected another Western climbdown like the Munich agreement over Czechoslovakia a year earlier.

At 5:45 a.m Friday Sept. 1 Hitler struck. He flung I million troops and two entire bomber fleets without warning against Poland.

As I raced by taxi to the United Press office on Unter den Linden ... I saw early workers glumly reading the newspapers proclaiming in screaming red headlines, "From now it's force against force."

Japan began an undeclared war with China in 1931, and it now viewed Adolf Hitler's move into Poland as a boon.

By 1939, Japan had held the northeastern Chinese province of Manchuria for eight years and was two years into its battle for China

The Japanese had taken Beijing. Shanghal, Nanking and Canton but were facing determined opposition from the combined forces of the Chinese Communists, led by Mao Tse-tung, and the Chinese Nationalists, led by Chiang Kai-shek.

Japan's strategy was to have Hitler tie up the British, French and Dutch in Europe while the Japanese pushed beyond China into the traditionally European spheres of influence in Asia.

In 1940 Japan formed the Axis alliance with Germany and Italy.

The Japanese were so willing to embrace Hitler and his Nazi war machine in 1939 that they began spreading anti-semitic propaganda in Tokyo despite the near total absence of Japanese Jews.

"To show their oneness with Nazi Germany, they (the Japanese) even agreed to blame the machinations of the Jews for turning the rest of the world against them," said Leonard Mosley in his book "Hirohito, Emperor of Japan.'

Japan wanted desperately to join the Western nations as a world power, but to do so it needed colonies of its own with material and human resources

The Japanese couched their aggression in terms of freeing Asia from the yoke of the white man.

They hoped Asian nations would line up behind their plan, formally known as the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere, but it soon became apparent their interest was to replace white exploitation with Japanese exploitation. □See Join, Page 4D

Curbing the lobbyists

Before Congress adjourned for its summer cess, the Senate approved a measure to ughen disclosure laws for lobbyists and ban toughen disclosure laws for lobbyists and ban the use of federal funds to pay for lobbying activities. The provisions, part of an amendment tacked to a Department of Interior appropriations bill by West Virginia Sen. Robert Byrd, represents the first major change in federal lobbying laws in more than 40 years. If the amendment survives a Senate-House conference committee, it would, at the very least, help keep track of influence-pedding in Washington and, at best, reduce the number of high-priced. tax-supported peddlers.

The Byrd amendment requires anyone sliciting grants, contracts, loans or other federal resources to report the name of private lobbyists they have retained, the amount such lobbyists are paid, and for what services they have been retained.

Common Cause, which strongly supports the amendment, points out that federal lobbying laws, enacted in 1946, are riddled with loopholes. For example, there's no requirement to disclose lobbying contacts with executive branch officials. That means the millions of dollars in consulting fees paid to influential Republicans to lobby HUD are not reportable. Even worse, those fees could be paid with federal funds.

The American League of Lobbyists agrees that lobbying laws need review, but says the Byrd amendment should be set aside pending a more "comprehensive evaluation" by Congress. But when more comprehensive reforms were proposed a decade ago, the league was instrumental in killing them. With public disgust over the unfolding HUD ecandal and a heightened concern about ethics generally, there is no better time than the present to push for reform.

There is a concern that small social-service agencies, cities and counties competing for federal grants will be hurt by the Byrd proposal. But the amendment only bars them from using federal funds to hire private lobbyists; it does not preclude them from lobbying on their own. In most cases, one would hope, civic organizations working for the public good should be able to get members of Congress from their own area to represent their interests.

Lobbying is a growth industry because all, from the biggest corporations to the smallest local housing authority, believe they need their own private fixer to get anything out of Wahsington. As the HUD scandal proves so well, too often that is true. The Byrd amendment won't eliminate the fixers but it will shed more light on their activities and cut the public subsidies they receive.

Reading about insufferable bears

WASHINGTON - I hate the Berenstain

If you don't know what I am talking about consider yourself lucky. If you do, you too have suffered through volume upon volume of the life of the insufferable Bear family (generally labeled Father, Mother, Brother and Sister), the eponymic creations of Jan and Stan Berenstain.

I know I speak for thousands, perhaps millions of other parents who share my hostility to these lumbering cuddles but who cannot say no to a child who begs for just one more dose. The Berenstains make the begging easy: The back cover of some volumes are thoughfully filled with full-color covers of the others, plus the cheerful admonition "Collect them all!"

It is not just the smugness and complacency of the stories that is so irritating. That is a common affliction of children's literature. The raging offense of the Berenstains is the post-feminist Papa Bear, the Alan Alda of grizzlies, a wimp so passive and fumbling he makes Dagwood Bumstend look like Baiman. Consider, the well-known "Berenstain Bears Forget Their Manners," wherein Mother, fed up with rudeness, sets down a new set of family rules of conduct. Each commandment is accompanied by a penalty ("wash dishes, empty garbage, beat two rugs") for those family members who dare transgress. Papa glumly acquiesces to the new maternally mandated regime. But he proves incorrigible. Long after even the kida have reformed, he continues his sloven, cravenly ways, spending much of this time mopping up around the house to pay off his doltishness.

Mother Bear too is a creation. Every adult will recognize her as the final flowering of the grade-school prissy, the one with perfect posture and impeccable handwriting. The one the teachers loved. The one who disdained your baloney sandwich and pulled fruit salad out of her lunch box, minding her cholesterol in 1958. The one you always dreamt of drowning. Well, she grew up to marry Father Bear Berenstain of Bear County. And now you have to visit her every night.

The reason is, of course, that kids love them. My boy, 4, cannot get enough of these bears. Every night at bedtime I offer him a list of stories that I might read him. I bid: "What will it be tonight, Daniel? Acsop's Fables, Ulysses and the Trojan Horse, or the adventures of Ferdinand Magellan?"

"How about 'The Berensistain Bears and the Sitter," he replies. Bears it is.

The bedtime reading ritual has made me something of a connoisseur of children's books. First, there are the books that are mere subsidiaries of larger conglomerates. Sessime Street, Charlie Brown, the Berenstains and the even more infernal Care Bears fit this category of book, which is, in truth, just part of a much larger university of movies, videos, audio cassettes, and little cuddly things that you are encouraged to buy. These books are to be burned early. Should even one survive, you are booked, a corporate dependent for life. These conglomerates, by the way, put in question my most basic political principles, since I cannot deny that socialism, whatever its faults, does not permit such things.

Then, there are the award winners. Do not come near these books. The pictures are illegible, the stories unintelligible. These books are exactly what you would expect a committee of artsy adults would think is good for children. These books are easily spotted by their minimalist art and their baroque story lines, pint-size versions of the nomadic anti-plot you find in a New Yorker short story. Kids take to this stuff as to spinach.

Best, in this as in everything, are the classics, fairy tales of the Little Red Riding Hood, Jack and the Beanstalk variety. Bruno Bettelheim, among others, has quite eloquently elucidated how these parables - by not flinching from the great existential i ors of life: death, betrayal, abandonment - en. the moral imagination of kids in a way that their insipid modern variants never do.

The raging of the

I have a confession to make, however. Much as I love the stories and much as I think Bettelheim right, I have trouble reading them to minors. Too gory. In some, it seems, every other character is either eating or being eaten, a cannibal's feast. I know, I know: bu loosing elemental fears that every child shares (among which being eaten ranks high), and by finally permitting fear to be conquered by good, these stories give a child the experience of triumph and transcendence.

Pay attention to Bush's lips

WASHINGTON - The $160 billion thrift bailout has been approved by George Bush, the same guy who said, "Read my lips, no new taxes." You may still be trying to read his lips, but the savings and loan industry doesn't have to. It has his signature on the bottom of the law.

What happened here? One day Ronald Reagan and his minions were telling you that things could only get better if he de. regulated the thrift industry and let it reach its full money-making potential. Today each American man, woman and child is looking at a $1,000 personal bill to pay the price of the free market run amok. We'll borrow from an old caveat: There ain't no such thing as a free market, and the only check in the mail is the one you'll be writing to the IRS.

Eight years ago, no one would have imagined that the fi-nancial scandal of the century would begin at the corner threw your life savings into wildly speculative deals. savings and loan — that friendly place that handed out toasters and home mortgages. Behind those familiar doors grew a bizarre industry that threw your life savings into wildly speculative deals. And then, one by one, as the deals fell through, the thrifts closed their doors until Reagan left the White House and Bush was left to apologize and clean up the mess.

Edwin Gray was the chief regulator of the savings and loan industry for most of the Reagan administration. He was a Reagan loyalist who followed his president into the deregulatory quagmire. But unlike Reagan. Gray was amart enough to realize when he was up to his knees in quicksand. He couldn't get the Reagan administration to take the crisis seriously. He tried to crack the whip, propose regulations and refinance the depositor insurance fund. But he found himself increasingly alienated from the administration. And now the entire country is up to its neck.

In an interview with our associate Michael Binstein. Gray recounted how it felt to be treading the crisis. "My one goal was to pass a FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.) recapitalization bill. It was so damn critical," Gray said. "We knew that Jim Wright (former Democratic Texas representative and Speaker of the House) had life and death power over this legislation. He was, in a sense, strong-arming me."

Gray needed more regulators and more Gray needed more regulators and more expertise to police the money brokers who were shifting the money around to whatever savings and loan was offering the best interest. "The razzle-dazzle guys in the money brokering business sought to portray me as old-fashioned, out of step with the times," Gray recalled. "But these fellows knew what they were about. They were making big money off brokered funds transactions and taking no risk, none whatsoever. The only risk was to the FSLIC. The money The only risk was to the FSLIC. Cummings should not serve city

On Monday, Aug. 14, the Banford City Commission agreed to send a letter of reprinted to J. Wate Cummings. Mr. Commings and the City Atterney, Witten Collect, speke as to how any more serious action would violte Mr. Cummings right to "Precion Of Speech."

As an attorney, Colbert is aware that the Constitution deals with criminal and civil penalties enforced by the government. No one is saking that Cummings be imprisoned or fined for his statements. Therefore, the issue is a red herring meant to draw reporters and the public at large away from the real issue.

The issue of concern to black people and other minorities is that the government, federal or local, must be free from highery. Since taxpayers and citizens are from all racial and ethnic backgrounds, the government must give the appearance of being representative of all its citizens. When a public official makes facial sture he is broadcasting that he caree not about the people who pay his salary. This is especially abhorrent in this case where the individual deals with minorities deily as a part of his job.

uns case where the individual deals with minorities daily as a part of his job.

I. as one black person, and the other black people to whom I have spoken, share a concern that Mr. Commings acts according to his personal prejudices. To that end he has violated the trust of his true employers, "The People" of Sanford, and as with any employer, he shold be dismissed for his violation.

Mr. Colbert and the City Commission see no misconduct by Mr. Cummings. If Mr. Cummings wishes to make racial sturs, let him get a job th the private sector with a company that is insensitive to the color makeup of its customers. However, he should not represent the city in dealings with misorities.

Judge Leasand Wood was elected September 1989 to fill a Judgeship on the Circuit Court of Brevard and Seminol Counties. Judge Wood has been an advocate for youth and requested assignment to the Juvenile Division. His fellow judges granted this request.

Judge Wood's tenure in the Juvienile Division will continue until 1991. The Judge hears all juvenile, probate, guardianship and mental health cases.

The judge is firmly convinced of the need for intervention strategies to turn the escalating tide of juvenile arrest. During 1968-89, 2,000 separate juvenile cases came before the bar. This number included both delirensence and dependency cases. In came before the bar. This number included both delinquency and dependency cases. Judge Wood contends that the county has failed to provide adequate recreational facilities and programs for the poor. A great deal of their time is often spent engaging in activities that ultimately bring them in contact with the juvenile justice system.

Judge Woods argument in favor of better recreational activities for children can be traced to his prior involvement with the Youth Athletic Program in Seminole County. The Baseball League had over 1,600 members. These leagues positively

Neither the county government nor the school system have addressed the crying need for after-school and weekend structured team building activities for poor youth. Several years ago the middle schools curtailed their sports programs, citing lack of money as the culprit. This was done in spite of the fact that the middle school years are salient determinants of individual relationships with the wider society.

Deemphasizing athletics during these critical developmental years was the prelude to some of the current problems. The highly competetive nature of high school athletics deprive many students from engaging in these character building activities. Conse-quently, many children of the poor are not provided structured, continuing team-building and citisenship-building activities at home, at school, or in their respective communities.

Ex-Mayor Frank Rizzo speaks his mind

PHILADELPHIA - There was a time when Frank Rizzo didn't very much like being on the radio. It was during the never to be forgotten 1970s (the postscript to the 1960s). Rizzo was the hard-line mayor of the town then, and he was fixed in a flerce battle with the electric and

The battle concerned differing social and political philosophies. His honor was a former cop bound to the robust traditions of law, order and patriotism. The media generally trumpeted the intellectual necessity for progressive change. And the two sides thus locked in combat for the hearts and minds of this community.

As it turned out, the mayor more or less won. The liberal 1970s have become something of a historical embarracement. and Frank Rizzo's conservative views predominate throughout Philadelphia and the nation. He's no longer the top executive here, he did lose that, but he's had the last laugh by becoming stradio star.

owned by the Columbia Broadcasting System. The program is called "Frank Talk." and it's aired five days a week, during the 3 to 6 p.m. drive time. The station says the program is very popular: Rizzo says it is the number one late afternoon show in the city.

Rizzo also says the success is not surprising. He is no Larry King, he has a clumsy microphone delivery, and he says "nuttin" for nothing. But he doesn't think his listeners care: "They tune me in for one reason. They want to hear about the old values. They used to hear it when I was mayor. Now they hear it on WCAU."

Indeed, Risso hasn't changed a bit. When he was mayor, he advocated police control and public discipline, and he has no regrets. When he was mayor, he applauded welfare reform and the death penalty, and he's still at it today. He says some people call his program "Tough Talk," and he adds that they are right.

For example, a man called the other day regarding the Supreme Court decision that legalizes the burning of the Stars and Stripes. Risso said it is complete insanity. He said the

Soon after that, a listener called to ask about affirmative action. Rizzo was equally blunt. He said he did not believe the nation should favor anyone. black or white. He also said the nation should not be afraid to criticise minorities when they do wrong, because, race aside, a crook in this country is a crook.

That comment provoked several subsequent calls regarding criminal activity. It is a staple on the Risso show. He condemned the handcuffing of police; he also commiserated with a caller whose daughter had been raped: and he talked shop with a one-time patrolman who was forced to retire when he was shot by a thug:

"Did they get him?" Risso asked the injured cop.

"Yeah, they got two of them." "What kind of time did they get?"

"Thirty years." "Good."

So it goes. Frank Rizzo says that he given his listeners "what they west," and they in turn give mm appreciative homage gram callers address Rizzo as Mayor," many of them seem in awe of the celebrated host, and the majority ask slow-pitch questions that he can knock way over the fence.

Inevitably, some of the callers feel Risso should still be mayor. They say the burn in office now (Wilson Goode) is a light-weight. Risso served as a Democratic chief from 1971 to 1979. He changed parties last year to make a city hall comeback as a Republican, but lost in a close and bitterly contested election.

Yet, who knows? He may try again. Risso is 68, but he remains civically vigorous and physically formidable. What's more, he remains his biggest booster. He says he has no political ambition at this time. though he adds. "I am still viable, and there are some jobs in this city that I could win hands down.'

Enough of that. Risso claims he is, for now, concentrating on a radio career: "I'm not doing this for politics. I'm doing it because it keeps me alert, and it keeps me young." To Device the second thinking process on the subject, and it's on a collision course with the law. We've had a few fender benders already: For one, there's the case of the wealthy couple who died, leaving behind several frozen embryos. The embryos were created artificially with the husband's sperm and the wife's eggs, in a process called "in vitro fertilization. The couple had intended to have the embryos implanted in the mother's womb. hoping they would produce at least one child. But when the potential parents died. the question was, "What should become of these embryonic potential heirs to the fortune?" And now we have Junior and Mary Sue Davis, of Maryville, Tenn. The Davises tried to have children using in vitro fertilization. Originally, nine of Mary Sue's eggs were fertilized by Junior's sperm, and two were unsuccessfully implanted in Mary Sue's womb. Then, Junior sued for divorce. Now the Davises are fighting in court to see who gets custody of the embryos. Mary Sue says she should, because the sperm was donated when Junior was willing, and her part of the process was painful. She doesn't want to go through it again, and says it may be her best shot at having a child. If Mary Sue wins, she will have the embryos implanted in her womb. And, if she is able to give birth, she promises she won't ask Junior for any support.

In vitro fertilization is a pregnant issue

Junior says he should get custody. because he has withdrawn his consent to co-parent with Mary Sue, and he doesn't think he should have to father a child against his will. If he wins, he plans to keep the frozen embryos in cold storage indefi-

I can't help but empathize with both Junior and Mary Sue. Mary Sue wants a child, and her chances are slim. At least she has better odds with the existing embryos than if she has to start all over again.

On the other hand, Mary Sue's "no strings" promise must sound pretty hollow to Junior. What responsible man could father a child and then have nothing more to do with it, knowing the uncertainty and pain that child would experience. There is no such thing as a "no strings" baby. And besides, why would he want to father a baby with a woman he didn't love?

Empathy aside, the Davis trial took on the aideshow aspects of many divorce trials. Mary Sue's eggs had been fertilized for less than two days when they were frozen; that makes each of them an entity of between four and eight cells. Yet a French geneticist testifying in Mary Sue's behalf told the judge that leaving the embryos in cold storage amounted to "putting tiny human beings in concentration camps ... deprived of liberty, deprived even of time..."

Judge W. Dale Young's decision could be critical to infertile couples. If he rules in favor of Junior Davis, and declares the embryos joint property, his decision will probably cause couples attempting in vitro fertilization to provide for the possibility of marital breakup or death.

But if Young decides in favor of Mary Sue Davis, that life begins at conception and that the embryos must be considered as potential children whose best interests must be served, he may be fueling those who would like to see the in vitro fertilization process outlawed. They argue that since life begins once an egg is fertilized, and since not many of the fertilized eggs are ever successfully brought to term, most of them are created only to die. Therefore, they believe the process is wrong. Regardless of its outcome, the Davis case forces each of us to examine our own belief regarding the right of parents to artificially begin or terminate a pregnancy. My own conclusion is that I can't make that decision for anyone else, and I hope the right of parents to make it remains protected.

Her marriage to Italian actor Vittorio Gassman is over; she returns to America to pursue a serious stage career in her effort to shed the blond bombshell image created by Hollywood. She succeeds, winning raves for her Broadway performance in "A Hatful of Rain" but her remeable life in "A Hatful of Rain," but her romentic life is again turned topsy-turvy by another Italian actor, Anthony Franciosa

We also see Winters the political activist, campaigning for John F. Kennedy: Winters the Academy Award winner, for "The Diary of Anne Frank" and "A Patch of Blue;" and of course, Winters the raconteur, brimming with stories about her famous friends.

This book will dispel the image of Winters only as an outspoken guest on "The Tonight Show." She is outspoken - make no mistake about that - but she is also witty, talented and irreverent when it really counts.
