Possible ID on take cop

SANFORD — A Lady Lake woman reported to Fruitland Park police her ex-husban, attempted to stop her early Saturday morning with a "fake cop" method very similar to other reported sitings. It is the first time investigators have a possible identification of the fake cop which has stopped three woman and a man in Seminole, Lake and Sumter Counties since mid-February.

In each report, the suspect is driving a mid-to large-sized white sedan described as a Chevrolet or Ford. Lately, the man places revolving blue light on the dishboard to attempt to stop victims. Friday, a Mount Dora man stopped by the suspect on State Road 46 near the Lake-Seminole County line said the vehicle had a spotlight mounted on the side.

The Lady Lake woman said a large white Chevrolet pulled behind her at 2:10 a.m. and attempted to stop her, said a Fruitland Park police dispatcher. The woman said there was a spotlight mounted on the driver's side window post of the vehicle.

Investigator Gregg Sicca of the Seminole County Sheriffs Office said he would follow up on the lead this morning.

Curriculum changes discussed

SANFORD — Among the Items to be discussed at Tuesday afternoon's school board meeting is the restructuring of the curriculum at several high schools that will allow those schools to offer courses of study that better meet the needs of the students at those schools.

In keeping with the move toward more school-based management, the principals and school advisory committees have made some changes in the course offerings that will allow schools to offer classes that are more relevant to future employment needs of the students.

"We want the schools to be able to select courses that meet the needs of the students," said Dr. Marion Dailey, executive director for instructional support services for the district.

New "programs of emphasis." If they are given the final nod of approval by the board on Tuesday will be put into place at Lake Brantley and Oviedo High schools and will be discussed for Lake Howell and the yet-to-be-built Winter Springs high schools.

If the board approves the curriculum changes, Lake Brantley High School will offer a Program in Financial Studies starting in the 1994-25 school year. They will also be asked to approve Oviedo High School's Travel and Tourism Program to start at the same time.

Lake Howell High School is discussing the possibility of having an Engineering Program, while there are hopes of starting an Environmental Program at Winter Springs when it opens

The school board will meet Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 in the board room, 1211 S. Mellonville Ave. in Sanford.

County involved in program that saves $$

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — By the year 2000, it is estimated that half of Florida's children will be abused, neglected, delinquent, poor, disabled or school dropouts. Seminole County is already working to fight the expectation from becoming a reality.

The shocking statistics were revealed in a study just completed by Florida State University Center for Prevention and Early Intervention.

In order to reduce that percentage, the university suggests a massive approach which calls for more family planning, prenatal care. Florida could save $2.5 billion over 14 years by providing preschool services to all at-risk children born in poor families in 1992.

The Seminole County school district is already involved in an active state-funded program. It is similar to what is being proposed by the university.

"We are involved in the Highscope model curriculum," said Seminole County Early Intervention director Brenda Griffin. "This was developed through the Perry Pre-school program in Ipsilanti, Michigan, and many districts are beginning to adopt what they established.

"Right now we are handling children who are four years of age," she said. "We presently have about 300 children at 14 school sites and one contracted site across the county. There is a breakout of 20 children for two adults plus See Savings, Page 5A

Facility to assist injured sea cows

CAPE CANAVERAL - A "halfway house" is being set up in the north Banana River to help orphaned or captive sea cows prepare for life in the wild.

Biologists will monitor the weight and behavior of the manatees in the facility's three 1 1-2 acre-enclosed areas as the mammals feed on the river's sea grass beds.

Once released, the sea cows will be fitted with radio transmitters and tracked, said Bob Turner, the manatee recovery coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Jacksonville.

"It's like a halfway house," he said. "A lot of these animals have no experience of being in the wild."

Releasing the sea cows will free more space and money at the state's five crowded rehabilitative centers, including Orlando's Sea World, it costs roughly $40,000 a year to care for an adult manatee, and as much as $120,000 to care for a baby, which needs 24-hour attention.

Teens charged in death of cow

MELBOURNE - Two teen-agers shot and killed a pregnant cow, then cut the animal for its meat and hide, deputies said.

K.C. Townsend, one of the cow's owners, found the teen-agers on their property in western Canaveral Groves. Nearby, deputies found a bucket of hide and 25 pounds of meet, said Brevard County sheriff's deputy Jim Adcock.

Wayne Allen Dotson, 18, was charged Sunday with two counts of armed trespassing and one count of theft of livestock. He was taken to the Brevard County Detention Center In

A 15-year-old also was charged, but deputies would not comment, saying his case was turned over to the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

MIA leads international air cargo

By CATHERINE WILSON AP Business Writer

MIAMI - Some people think the only kind of International air cargo coming into Miami is cocaine, but 40 airlines are working around the clock to dispel that myth.

Miami International Airport displaced New York's Kennedy as the nation's international cargo leader in 1993, led by American Airlines' full bellies and fed by economic resurgence in Latin America.

Miami topped the 1-million-ton mark for international cargo for the first time by a U.S. airport in 1993, bypassing Kennedy, the traditional leader, which finished the year at 963,605 tons.

Long-distance cargo flights are "almost like the fax machine," said James Heldenbrand, executive vice president of the all-cargo Florida West Airlines. "People are beginning to become accustomed to it, and they're accepting it rather than taking the extra week to ship" by ship.

Insurance regulators endorse $20 million fine for Met Life

With more than 10,000 of the 60,000 customers who may have been misled, Florida would get $2.2 million, Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher said Sunday.

The nation's insurance regulators agreed Sunday on a $20 million fine for Met Life, the largest life insurance company in the nation.

The National Association of Insurance Commissioners wants $12.5 million in cash paid to states where customers were deceived, Gallagher said. More than 40 states would be involved, he estimated.

Also Sunday, the results of a Florida investigation into Met Life's sales practices were released.

"Met tacitly condoned nationwide efforts of its aggressive sales force to sell whole life policies disguised as savings or retirement plans," Miami attorney Thomas Tew wrote in a report to Gallagher and Attorney General Bob Butterworth.

Gallagher and Butterworth appointed Tew to investigate Met Life's sales practices for personal insurance policies last fall after allegations surfaced the company's Tampa office deceived 18,000 nurses across the country by portraying whole-life insurance policies as a savings

"The shameful facts uncovered by the investigation are that the company executives and management chose not to correct this situation out of ignorance, incompetence or greed," Gallagher said in a news release issued by his office in Tallahassee.

Met Life, with headquarters in New York City, has $1.1 trillion of life insurance in force, more than any other company in North America.

TALLAHASSEE - State lawmakers starting the fifth week of the 1994 session will continue their work on juvenile justice reform, with key votes expected in Senate Appropriations and onthe House floor.

The House Health Care Committee will continue work on its version of Chiles' proposal this week but probably won't get to a vote, according to Putnam. The Senate Health Care Committee isn't expected to start debate for another week.

Other Senate committees this week will work on an Everglades cleanup proposal and a plan to transfer aging programs from the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services to the Department of Elderly Affairs. A House committee will take another vote on a proposal to give bonuses to welfare recipients who use birth control.

GAINESVILLE - Attorneys will attempt to show jurors Danny Harold Rolling is a calculating murderer or regretful murder, then later regret these abuse victim as the sentencing phase of his trial for stabbing to death five students gets underway.

Attorneys say he is mentally ill and remorseful of the 1990 killing spree. His mother says he is the victim of an unloving. abusive father.

But prosecutors will try to convince jurors Rolling is a coldblooded killer and rapist who deserves to dle in the electric chair. Jurora will begin today hearing testimony to support each claim. Prosecutors expect to put on about two weeks of testimony; the defense said it will need about a week. The jurors then will recommend to Circuit Judge Stan R. Morris whether Rolling should receive the death penalty or life in prison with no possibility of parole for 25 years on each of five counts of first-degree murder. Morris will make the ultimate decision. Rolling, a drifter originally from Shreveport, La., pleaded guilty Feb. 15 to the murders of five Gainesville college students in late August 1990. He also pleaded guilty to charges he sexually assaulted three of the victims and burglarized the three crime scenes. One victim was beheaded.

State Attorney Rod Smith said he will introduce testimony, including photographs of each murder scene, to convince jurors the 39-year-old Rolling deserves no less than the death penalty.

He must prove one of several possible aggravating factors, including that the murder, in the words of Florida sentencing law, 'was especially heinous, atroclous or cruel" or "was committed in a cold, calculated and premeditated manner."

Public Defender Rick Parker must try to prove mitigating factors to keep him from the electric chair. He says Rolling is mentally ill and suffered childhood abuse.

Parker said evidence of Rolling's mental tilness "will be helpful in understanding how the same person can rape and acts and feel compassion for the living loved ones surviving his violence."

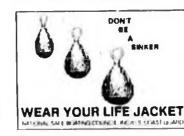

The evidence may include depositions from Rolling's mother, Claudia, of Shreveport. She has a terminal illness and is not expected to testify.

She said in a 1991 letter to a Florida judge that Rolling's father, James, a retired patrolman in Shreveport, kicked his son out of the house at age 15 because he wanted to wear blue Jeans to church.

"Danny was an abused child from the day he was born." she wrote. "My husband was Jealous of him. He never wanted me to hold him or show love to him. He was told from the time he could understand that he would be dead or in fall by the ti'me he was 15. His self-esteem was destroyed by his dad's constant belittling." The slaying of five students in three days came at the opening of the 1990 fall semester at the University of Florida. The bodies of Christina Powell, 17, and Sonja Larson, 18, were found Aug. 26 in their southwest Gainesville apartment. The next day, the decapitated body of Christa Hoyt, 18, was found in her duplex. The bodies of the first three victims were mutilated and two had been

On Aug. 28, Tracy Paules and Manny Taboada, both 23, became the fourth and fifth victims. The muscular Taboada was stabbed in his bed; Ms. Paules was sexually assaulted and then stabbed to death.

Arts becoming profitable in Seminole County

Seminole County is becoming more and more artistic. As a result, more people are visiting this area.

The St. Johns River Festival this past weekend was proof of the popularity of such events. Hundreds flocked to Fort Mellon Park to see the exhibits, and of most importance, make purchases.

Approximately a dozen of the arts and crafts exhibitors were residents of the county. Many others came from the surrounding areas of Orange and Volusia counties. At least five exhibitors were from out of state.

There is no doubt about it. The entire local area is becoming well known as a center for artistic activities. Both Longwood and Lake Mary/Heathrow have annual arts and crafts shows. Each are very well attended and growing larger each year. The Olde Lake Mary Days festival is coming up on May 7th. Maitland's Spring Festival art and craft show is scheduled for April 16 and 17.

The art connection also holds true with the rapid increase in the number of collectibles and antique shops being established in the area, especially in downtown Sanford. Oldtime items are viewed by many prospective buyers as works of art.

With major art festivals in the nearby cities of Mt. Dora and Winter Park, we shouldn't expect to have a monopoly on art collectors and artists. These two events have proven to be extremely popular and draw thousands of visitors each year.

As fon Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood however, possibly without even specifically promoting ships area as an art center, it is becoming just that. Ten years from now, let's not be known only as "where that Seminole Towne Center Mall is located." We don't have much time left, but if we start taking action now, we can really make a name for ourselves. As a result, our cities will continue to enjoy good economic futures.

An old proverb suggests, when something proves itself to be profitable, run with it.

Garbage game: Do nothing

In the game of garbage, county commissioners could score a home run by doing nothing at the present time. Why act in haste, then repent at leisure?

I believe that a mandatory garbage collection program for unincorporated residents would be a self-inflicted wound that our county does not need. Given time to reflect on the matter, I believe a majority of the county commission will come to this same reasonable conclusion. Total government control of any function should be the last resort to solve any problem. Free enterprise and market forces took care of our refuse collection for many years and can do so again. For an example of what government can do for you, go look at the Yankee Lake sewer plant. Mr. Rabun does not need to father another toothless and useless bureaucratic entity, does he?

Will the real Republicans on the county commission please stand up to be counted!

Nearly all criminologists agree that around the age of 40, violence has been burned out of most criminals with that kind of record. The proposed new federal law, therefore, will cost large sums to house these lifers who will become geriatric

Condemn racist rhetoric of all hues

Those who angrily insist that black Americans should repudiate the anti-Semitte, anti-white rantings of Black Muslim official Khalid Abdul Muhammad have it just right. Those black Americans who just as angrily reject the demand, saying they are under no compulsion to react just because whites say they should, are dead wrong. But that is only the first paragraph of a necessary conversation, not the final word.

Muhammad is one of several sublicutenants who take their cue from Louis Farrakhan, the leader of the Nation of Islam. Farrakhan's own rhetoric was more often inflammatory than not in bygone days, but in the recent past he has become slickly disingenuous. In the process of seeking inclusion in the broad-based black political coalition. Farrakhan has learned to play an adroit game of hide-and-seck with his old themes of white deviltry and Jewish evil.

Not so Muhammad, who is an unreconstructed rabble rouser. A national controversy crupted after he spewed out non-stop bile to a college audience in New Jersey. When black faculty members and administrators initially voiced their support of his actual words or remained silent, all hell broke loose. Soon, repudiation of Muhammad became a litmus test, as passionately demanded by some whites as it was passionately rejected by some

Their refusal is puzzling at first glance and unacceptable on second reflection. Only a small fraction of black Americans, like a small fraction of white Americans, actually incorporate anti-Semitism into their world view, and for singularly good reason. Jews, no strangers to discrimination in America themselves, have been in the forefront of the civil rights struggle for most of the 20th century. That they should be scapegoated by even a handful of black Americans is as fronte as it is spectacularly

The response of those unwilling to break publicly with Muhammad, and by inference with Farrakhan, goes something like this:

This is just another page in a familiar white script. As in the past, what you are really trying to do is to divide the black community and destroy its leaders. You could more usefully spend your time publicly disavowing the people within your own community who use racist code words and advocate racially divisive programs. In any case, Muhammad and Farrakhan are no more my personal responsibility than David Duke or Jesse Helms

The flut reply, of course, is that whites do indeed have an obligation to repudiate their own demagogues. The second is that this obligation has frequently not been met. Too many "good" white Southerners averted their eyes and shut their mouths in the face of virulent racism and systematic repression during the long years of segregation. It was only yesterday that many conservative Republicans delighted in the havoe wrought by the John Birch Society's indecent character assassination of so-called "traitors" on the liberal left of American politics - and even today Birchers remain welcome in the ranks of Republican respectability. Some of the "best people" continue to belong to clubs and organizations whose membership requirements are openly racist and anti-Semitte. It ought to be self-evident that each American has a dual responsibility based on a common heritage. The heritage is enshrined in the republic's founding documents and pervasive ideals. The responsibility is to speak up on their behalf to those close at hand, where it is hardest, as well as to those who live in that larger community we call the nation. It requires black Americans to resist the temptation to justify black demagoguery as tit-for-tal response to centuries of white oppression. It even more urgently requires white Americans to face the truth of the nation's history, which is that white racism has been our land's unexplated sin from the first African slave to the last cold rebuff of black aspirations.

But that is only the first paragraph of a necessary conversation, not the final word.

And then, if the races are to get beyond name-calling and mutual recrimination, it requires that we speak honestly to each other about our fears, our concerns and our disagreements. This is the conversation that was cut off in the 1980s and must be resumed If racial polarization -- today's cancerous fact of national life - is to be overcome.

If it isn't, the great experiment in multicultural democracy, which is the United States, will inevitably fall. Finger-pointing will continue to substitute for problem-solving, and the problems will fester and grow.

It is much easier to east stones than to develop trust. It is harder to build racial amity than it is to exploit racial enmity. It is simpler to advocate racial solidarity, that short step from racial supremacy, than it is to preach interracial respect. But this is a multiracial society. There is no way a workable democracy can endure here if racist rhetoric is condoned or tolerated.

the operation, he or his family might be barned. To buttress their case, they related North's story of his allegedly potsoned dog. Already, they claimed, terrorists targeting North had somehow potsoned one of his dogs, killing it. We omitted North's name in the June 29 column. Other media were also dissuaded by the White House from naming North on the grounds of his personal security. When the Iran-Contra scandal - and

North's name — finally exploded on the front pages, we learned from North's neighbors that this particular dog had actually died of

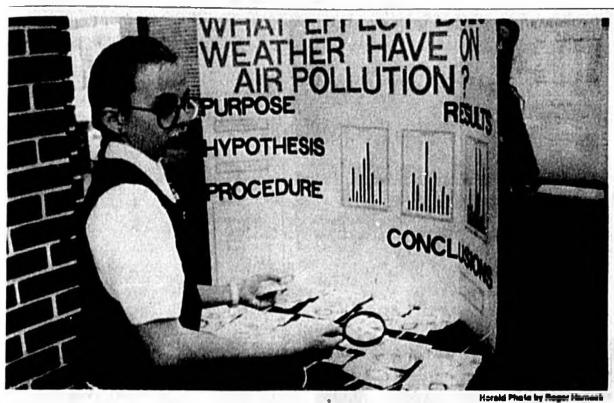

This story echoes reports by others. particularly the Reader's Digest, that North's penchant for shading the truth fits into a pattern of prevarication. As one former State Department official and North colleague put it: From day one at the White House, North had a way of taking "credit for things he didn't do and even things nobody did. He was capable of fabricating any story that was useful to him."

For example: On Sept. 6, 1986, North suggested to Elliot Abrams, then assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs. that Costa Rican President Oscar Arias should be asked to cooperate with the construction of an airstrip within his borders to aid the Contras.

Abrams agreed and told North to ask Lewis Tambs, then U.S. Ambassador to Costa Rica. to issue the warning. North did, and the message was delivered that day. Yet, that same day, North also sent a memo to then-National Security Adviser John Poindexter claiming to have called Arias himself. North has written in a self-adulatory manner that he knew that as a mere fleutenant colonel, he was "well beyond my character" in telephoning a head of state-but-added that it "seemed like the only thing we could do."

In North's consistent protestations of innocence of any wrongdoing, he says he had no idea that the Iran-Contra operation might be considered illegal by anyone. The claim is important because "criminal intent" can often mean the difference between guilt or innocence. North insists that until the Iran-Contra scandal became public in late November 1986 - when President Reagan fired him and former Attorney General Edwin Meese announced the start of a criminal probe — it never occurred to North that he might have broken the law

Yet numerous former colleagues of North's say he spoke at various times about stepping outside the law Robert Earl, an aide to North at the NSC, told congressional investigators that the day after Meese first questioned him about Iran-Contra, North said he had asked Meese whether their discussion "counted," noting he had not been read his rights.

support people, so it is a very close program."

We are working directly with the children who are at an economic level which would qualify them for the free lunch program." Griffin sald. "But the county, through the health department, is also working on a program for mother's at risk, called the Healthy Start Initiative."

Griffin said the aim of that program is to start with prospective mothers, and help them along to the point where they will have healthter children, and the children may end up to be less at risk in the future years. If we can help them right from the start, we can really be saving state money in the future."

The university study says programs and services are also needed to limit unintended pregnancies, low birth-weight infants, teen pregnancies, babies exposed to drugs and the AIDS virus, disabilities, violence and crime, the report warns.

University officials estimate, if the plans can be brought to fruition. It may save the state at least

"I have no doubt we will save that much money in the years ahead," Griffin commented. "The cost of trying to cope with something which is already a problem is far greater than trying to prevent it from becoming a problem."

In the study, called "Florida's Children: Their Future is in Our Hands," university researchers focused on 191,530 children who were born'in 1992 and should graduate high school in 2010.

The biggest chunk of the estimated savings comes from providing quality preschool services for all 3- and 4-year-olds who are likely to have trouble in school and life.

Florida could save $2.5 billion over 14 years by providing preschool services to all at-risk children born in poor families in 1992, according to the report. It figured the average preschool cost per child to be $5,949.

The state now serves some 32,000 children, just 41 percent of the children who should be in preschool programs.

Long-term research has shown at-risk children who go to preschool are less likely to need special education and more likely to graduate from high school than children who didn't go to preschool. Those with preschool also are less likely to become criminals or go on welfare.

The $7 billion also includes $2.1 billion savings over 14 years from providing family planning and prenatal care to all women with incomes below $21,175.

Another $1 billion could be saved if babtes and toddlers with special problems were provided the services they needed. Some $377 million would be saved if teen-age pregnancies were cut in half.

And If all these needs are addressed, Florida will save even more money than calculated individually because prevention efforts are interactive, the researchers said, pushing the total savings up to $7 billion.

The report, due out this week, also documented progress made in Florida in recent years. Gov. Lawton Chiles, who pushed through an increase in prenatal care three years ago, halled the results.

"Prevention works," he said, adding he hopes the report will make it easier to get programs funded in the future. 'This is no longer something that Chiles is the governor said Friday, "We're proving it."

By funding prenatal care and other prevention programs, the state already has saved both lives and dollars, Chiles said. According to the report, the last five years have seen the number of children in Head Start almost doubled and the number of children getting pre-kindergarten services nearly tripled. In the last five years, 463 fewer babies were

It'll take some money for stadium to make money

What do you do with a white elephant? Sadly, that's what Sanford Memorial Stadium is becoming, an oddity of dublous value. And the only reason I say dubtous is because that's the way it's being treated. A week ago, Sanford City Commissioner Whitey Eckstein urged that the city begin taking advantage of the opportunities presented by the stadium and begin promoting the facility.

The only other alternative is dump it.

We could wax philosophic about the nostalgic value of Sanford Memortal Stadium. Once the spring training home of the New York Giants, the stadium is where a young rookle named Willie Mays caught the eye of Glant manager Leo Durocher.

Sanford had a long and storted history as a member of the Florida State League. After that, the stadium was used by Seminole High School for football games and graduations.

Great. But what have you done for me lately? Clearly, the City of Sanford finds Itself in a difficult situation. It owns a piece of property that, along with the New Missions Tribe complex, the Central Florida Zoo, and Flea World, is a part of the city's identity, yet contributes little to the financial welfare of the city.

SPORTS

There are others who will take up the position of selling the property, and they'll have plenty of valid reasons for saying so. I come not to bury Sanford Memorial Stadium, but to praise it.

Since Wes Rinker's lease was cancelled last year, the primary tenant of the stadium and adjoining Zinker Field has been the Sanford Recreation Babe Ruth (ages 13 through 15) Baseball League. Chet Lemon's Baseball School and the Recreation Department's instructional program also have used the

It'd be nice but fiscally unreasonable to hope that would be enough for the City of Sanford to maintain Supporters of the stadium chafe at the thought of such a facilty going unused. Unfortunately, in its current state - without lights there's only so much activity that the stadium can host.

The City of Sanford and the Recreation Department are to be commended for the work that's already been done at the stadium, both cosmetic and structural. Almost always a nice place to play, it's becoming a more comfortable place to watch games.

That being said, the field will have to have lights if it's going to be a viable facility to draw tournaments. games, and leagues. The attractiveness of a stadium that can only be used for day games is, at best, limited.

If the City of Sanford wants Sanford Memorial Stadium to pull its own fiscal weight, then it may have to make the initial investment of lights for the playing field. Something else that should be considered is what the rammifica-tions would be on existing Sanford programs should the city opt to sell the stadium, specifically, where would the Babe Ruth program play its games? With the Fort Mellon softball field being converted into a second Little Major Baseball field, the city will have only Chase and Pinehurst parks remaining for adult softball leagues. Since baseball is not permitted at Pinchurst Park, that leaves Chase as the only facility where the Babe Ruth League could

I guess the Recreation Department could juggle the schedules and leagues to somehow get the most of two fields (assuming the softball players don't mind a pitching mound in the middle of the field), but there would be no room for growth. Eventually, building additional fields will be a necessity. This is not going to be an easy decision and I don't envy those who have to make it. I do believe, however, that with a solid financial commitment, the City of Sanford could have a facility on par with the Seminole Softball Complex and the Seminole County Sports Training

Azaleas announce spring

Colorful plants perform best in partial shade

Azaleas are once again blooming, announcing that spring is here. Most of the large azaleas started blooming in February near my house in downtown Sanford. Fortunately, many varieties will continue to bloom through early April. Azaleas come in a rainbow of colors: including white, pink, red, salmon, light purple and violet. The indica variety of purple Formosa seems to predominate in older landscapes. Since azaleas are in bloom now, this is a good time. to shop for new plants. If the plants are inbloom when purchased you can't be disap-- pointed by getting the wrong color.

Azaleas perform best if given partial shade; plants in full sun or dense shade usually don't grow or bloom as well. A well drained site amended with plenty of organic matter is best. When planting azaleas in sandy soil, prepare the entire area with compost or peat moss to increase soil's water holding ability. Adding organic amendments to the individual planting hole is no longer recommended.

The naturally acidic soil in our area is ideal for azaleas which grow best in soils with a pH range of 4.5 to 5.5. Unfortunately during construction, lime and mortar may get mixed into the soil and raise the pH level. High pH levels can cause yellowing of the newest leaves. These symptoms occur most commonly in plantings along a concrete foundation or next to concrete sidewalks and drives. Avoid planting in these locations or be prepared for yellow leaves each year or repeated additions of sulfur to lower the pH.

Azaleas are shallow rooted and have a fine network of roots near the soil surface. Because the roots are near the surface, azaleas need frequent irrigation. It is best to group azaleas together and irrigate separately from more drought tolerant plants. This will avoid overwatering other landscape plants which can survive longer between waterings. Azaleas from the nursery are usually grown in a peat mixture and the plants may be pot bound. The root ball can be loosened by slicing through the outer layer of roots and gently separating matted roots before planting. Water the plant well before planting to wet the roots - a dunk in a bucket of mild soapy water will soak a really dry root system. Add water to the hole during planting. This settles loose soil around the roots and avoids air pockets which cause roots to dry out. Apply a 2- to 3-inch layer of natural mulch to help retain moisture and reduce weeds. As with all plants, mulch should not be placed against the stem or trunk of the plant. Mulch placed near the stem can cause stem rot and eventual death of the plant. New plants will need a close watch to be sure the original root ball does not dry out. "Water the root ball" 2 to 3 times a week at first, then after the plants develop a more extensive root days. Established plants in the shade rarely need irrigation; watch for wilting of the

The care given now and during the summer will determine how well agaleas bloom next spring. Prune azaleas immediately after they stop blooming. New shoots will form just behind the pruning cut. resulting in a more compact plant. New flower buds form at the shoot tips over the summer. Therefore, do your trimming by late June to ensure that you do not remove flower buds. If you walt too long, you won't get as many flowers next spring.

Monitor plants weekly for disease und insect pests and hand pick or trim affected portions when practical. Before choosing a pesticide for control consult the Cooperative Extension Service for proper identification of the problem - spraying a fungicide to control lace bugs will be a waste of money and time and won't solve the problem. The misuse of pesticides also has the potential to contaminate the environment — use all pesticides wisely and always read the pesticide label beofre using the product!

Whether you buy your azaleas from a local garden center or grow your own from cuttings, azaleas are an unequaled symbol of spring in the south, though the display is brief, it's not easily matched by other

For more information about growing and earing for azaleas, call the Cooperative Extension Service at 323-2500 ext. 5558 or 5550 or drop by our office located at 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford for a free pamphlet and expert advice.

I now work with the Colorado Chapter of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, whose goal is the prevention and cure of breast cancer. I do this because of Tracy and for my other daughters, Terry and Tiana, and for you and me and all women.

I send my love to "Sharon" and am so thankful she is a survivor. I hope you can publish this letter. And, Abby, thank you for all your work. Please sign

Reviving spouse's interest in sex

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband straight. Thus, the best exercise has lost all interest in sex. As soon as our son was born. almost one year ago, he dismissed the matter as though it doesn't exist. I've been trying to deal with this, but so far have been unsuccessful. He won't even discuss the topic.

DEAR READER: Libido linterest in sex) depends on psychological factors, as well as hormone imbalances. For example, familiarity with a partner, resentments, frustration, depression, anxiety, stress and fatigue can cause a loss of libido. So can a deficiency of the male hormone testosterone, a situation that affects all men (in varying degrees) as they age.

The fact that your husband won't discuss the problem is distressing, because that means it's going to be more difficult to help you both. Nonetheless, the place to start is with your family doctor, who can refer you for appropriate therapy. For example, your husband may need an examination and blood tests to make sure he is in good health. Or he may need a referral to a urologist.

You both may require counseling to identify and deal with factors in your marriage that have affected your husband's libido. At the very least, you need counseling to learn ways to cope with what is a difficult situation.
DEAR DR. GOTT: At age 65,

I'm beginning to acquire a dowager's hump. Will some type of exercise forestall this condition?

DEAR READER: As people age, calcium leaves their bones at an accelerated rate, leading to osteoporosis and brittle bones. This causes striking changes in the spines of many elderly patients, especially women. The "dowager's hump" is a forward bending of the head, produced by a change in the configuration of the bones of the upper thoracic (chest) spine.

The condition is accentuated in people who don't stand up to prevent dowager's hump is to improve your posture by throwing your shoulders back and attempting to hold your head high.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

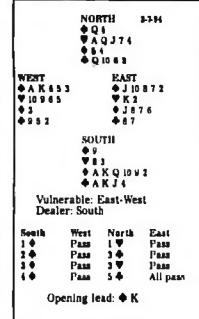

In "Camino Real," Tennessee Williams wrote, "When so many are lonely as seem to be lonely, it would be inexcusably selfish to be lonely alone.

In a bridge context, you are alone if you cannot reach your partner's hand, whether you are a defender or the declarer. We say that your communications are cut. And this is often fatal to your efforts to defeat or make the contract.

In today's auction, South's jump to four spades was a splinter bid, showing a singleton (or void) in sindes and slam interest.

West started with his two top spades. Without pausing for thought, South ruffed the second, drew trumps and played diamonds from the top. But when West discarded on the second round, declarer skidded to a halt. With no trumps left in his hand, he was isolated, alone. In desperation, South cashed the diamond queen before taking a heart finesse. However, East won with the king and returned a spade. West won the last trick with the heart 10: one down.

That would have been the right line in six clubs, but not in five. If only South had analyzed the play at trick one, he might have noticed his tenuous communications. After rufling the second spude, he should draw trumps ending in the dummy. Then a low diamond is led and, even if East discards. declarer finesses his nine (or 10). Whatever happens now, there are 11 guaranteed tricks. And with this distribution South brings home an overtrick. All of dummy's heart bsers disappear on South's diamond winners.
