Golden Spoon

MAITLAND — A restaurant in Seminole County is included in this year's listing of the top 20 for the Golden Spoon Award. Jordan's Grove, in Maitland, was the only one named from the entire Central Florida area.

The Golden Spoon awards for culinary excellence are listed in the August issue of Florida Trend Magazine, which has been conducting the restaurant study for the past 20 years.

Restaurant Editor Robert Tolf notes, "a rekindling of the American love affair with beef, and the solidification of the state as the home of the Mango Mafia, chefs who are merging Florida resources with Caribbean, Central America and Pan-Asian influences to create a wildly eclectic style."

Beyond the top 20, the Tolf also named the top 300 restaurants in the state. In Seminole County, they included La Scala and Maison & Jardin, Altamonte Springs, and Enso's in Longwood.

Lights on, right out

Sheriff Don Kellinger and other members of the sheriff's office will participate in "National Night Out" Tuesday from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Residents of neighborhoods here and across the country will lock their doors, turn on outside lights and spend the evening outside with deputies and their neighbors.

Block parties are planned in Hidden Estates, Remington Oaks, Deer Run, English Estates, Willow Run and Granada South, according to Ed McDonough.

The purpose of "National Night Out" is to heighten crime awareness and send a message to criminals that neighborhoods are fighting back against crime.

911 full strength again

The Sheriff's Office Communications Center reports all ten of the 911 telephone lines are operational again. Five of the lines were out of service late Saturday and all day Sunday.

Lightning struck a buried telephone cable Saturday night near 25th Street in Sanford causing a breakage in phone service in the area. Southern Bell repair crews worked through the night to restore full service, sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said.

There were no problems reported by the Communications Center over the weekend because of the 911 service disruption.

Tails required at doggy debut

BRUNSWICK, Maine — White tie was optional. Tails were required.

The event: A canine cotillion in honor of Xanadu, an 18-year-old dachshund debutante.

At least one guest, a short-haired German pointer named Spencer, appeared in white tie, much to the chagrin of his escort.

"It's my wife's idea," owner John Sarna said. "That's my No. 1 hunting dog. His favorite outfit is a lot of mud and dirt. I hope my friends don't see him like this."

Shock jock blasted for comments on Sanford murders

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A comment by a radio "shock jock" about a recent triple murders-suicide here and subsequent unflattering statements about this city have shocked some residents and have civic club members buzzing.

On July 25, WTKS-FM 104.1 shock jock Ed Tyll devoted his 4 1/2 hour talk show to the topic of depression, the ills of today's society and whether the community somehow failed the Sanford woman who shot her three children then committed suicide.

Dorothy Board killed herself after shooting her 4, 6, and 9 year old children, on July 22. Relatives said the woman had been treated for depression and had threatened and attempted suicide on earlier occasions.

Tyll devoted an entire show to a discussion of depression and the impact of the suicide of grunge rocker Kurt Cobain in Seattle a few weeks ago. He revisited the topic this week after the Sanford incident.

Sanford resident Charlene Valerino expressed disbelief at Tyll's comments and said she was "...truly horrified at some of your observations of Sanford and the Dorothy Board tragedy."

"To say on the air that Dorothy Board did her children a favor by killing them so that they wouldn't have to grow up in Sanford is a total outrage to the residents of Sanford, their children and to Dorothy Board," Valerino wrote in a letter to the editor. "It is demeaning to us and reduced Mrs. Board's desperate act into a redneck caricature. What

Longwood to discuss 'adult' biz ordinance

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

LONGWOOD — City commissioners will continue reviewing a proposed adult entertainment ordinance tonight attempting to restrict and control such businesses as tightly as possible but falling short of banning them altogether.

The commissioners are trying to prepare the ordinance for first reading which was scheduled last month. At a July 18 review session, the commissioners agreed adult entertainment businesses would only be allowed in industrial zones of the city, not commercial zones as proposed.

In addition, the commissioners agreed to prohibit such businesses or advertising for them, on the corridors of State Road 434, Highway 17-19 and County Road 427 within the city limits. Since the proposed Longwood ordinance is patterned, in large part, after the

Airline layoffs

FORT LAUDERDALE — Massive layoffs have left multitudes of airline pilots out of work and desperate enough to pay anywhere from $5,000 to $50,000 for a chance to fly.

But more than 250 pilots and laid off flight attendants found that even paying cash isn't always enough to get a job, when they sent money to Fort Lauderdale-based Shuttle America.

The state attorney general asked a judge last week to shut the company down after it collected "training fees" of $5,000 from pilots and $2,000 from flight attendants to get jobs.

Shuttle America didn't provide training, didn't own any airplanes, and didn't have a license to fly, said the lawsuit seeking full refunds and a $10,000 fine for every violation of Florida's unfair and deceptive trade practices act.

The company collected $750,000 to $1 million, the attorney general's office said, showing the seriousness of the pilot glut.

"We have an oversupply of fully qualified pilots," Capt. Hal McNicol, president of Flight Crews International, a career counseling service, told The Tampa Tribune for a story Sunday. "These guys are desperate. They want to get back into flying."

"These guys go in there and the company says, 'You're just the guy we want. Give me $5,000 and I'll put you to work,'" McNicol said. "We tell all our pilots to check their plans to see if they know how to run an airline."

Murder investigation cost $1.8 million

GAINESVILLE — Probing the slayings of five college students that terrorized this university town in 1990 cost the Florida Department of Law Enforcement $1.8 million, records indicate.

One leader of the Gainesville student murders task force alone spent 3,880 hours on the case, earning a total of $94,982, according to FDLE records released last week.

That was J.O. Jackson, who retired from FDLE on Friday. His total included $28,000 in overtime — more than twice as much as any other task force member.

FDLE Special Agent Ed Dix spent the most hours — 7,456 — on the case, earning a total of $122,240. Of that, $14,854 was overtime pay.

Jackson, retiring after 28 years with FDLE, said he has had several offers from writers wanting to write books about the case, but he said he wouldn't do a book just on the student slayings.

If he writes one, he said, it will include his work on the case of serial killer Ted Bundy, on a drug case that led to the first statewide grand jury being empaneled in the 1970s, and on other high-profile cases.

Police would probe child abuse for HRS

LARGO — The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services would rely more on police in probing alleged child abuse in Pinellas and Pasco counties, under a draft plan awaiting public hearings.

Law enforcement officers and the district's Health and Rehabilitative Services Board would have to sign off on the plan before it would take effect. The board plans hearings in September.

"In cases of egregious abuse, we will ... take the child and do what we need to do," said Gail Vinson, HRS program specialist. "But there are a lot of families out there who have the potential to solve their own problems if they have a little help."

Rigid procedures have brought complaints that HRS investigators behave like police. A 1993 law directed the agency to rethink its methods, and the new plan is designed to help most families instead of being punitive, Vinson said.

Among the changes:

- If an abuse investigation were needed, an HRS investigator and a law enforcement officer would still be called, but the HRS worker would act more as a helper and adviser. Police would be more involved in gathering evidence and conducting interviews.
- In cases of alleged medical neglect, lack of supervision or inadequate food, HRS would offer to help, possibly referring the family to neighborhood organizations.

Nicole's former lover has Tampa roots

TAMPA — O.J. Simpson's estranged wife, Nicole, and her lover agreed to end an affair they had in 1992 so the Simpsons could try to reconcile, said the lover's parents.

Keith Zlomowitch, who told a grand jury he was intimidated by the former football great, has kept a low profile since Nicole Simpson was slain, said his parents, Frank and Lois.

It is believed to be the "Keith" about whom Simpson is heard screaming in a recording of Nicole Simpson's frantic 911 call for help Oct. 25. He served as a pallbearer at Nicole's funeral.

In grand jury transcripts, Zlomowitch testified, "I was for sure intimidated" when O.J. Simpson spied on him and Nicole as they had sex and when Simpson behaved threateningly at a restaurant.

Prayers and memorial march for martyred doctor, escort

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

PENSACOLA — On a day of marches and mourning, appeals for peace and healing joined prayers for a doctor and his escort shotgunned to death outside an abortion clinic.

"Never return evil for evil," said the Rev. John Beuhrens, president of the 2,000-member Unitarian Universalist Association of North America, at Sunday's interfaith service.

He told the crowd of 350 worshippers to keep their faith strong following Friday's double slaying, saying: "The only thing necessary for violence and evil to prevail is for good women and men to do nothing."

After the service, ministers led marchers through heavy rain to a memorial for slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. During the block-long procession, the soaked crowd sang "We Shall Overcome."

Prayers were said for Dr. John Britton, 69, and retired Air Force Lt. Col. James Barrett, 74, both shot through the head outside the Ladies Center.

Paul Hill, 40, a former minister who has called the assassination of doctors who perform abortions "justifiable homicide," is charged with two counts of murder and one count of attempted murder.

Britton had replaced Dr. David Gunn, murdered 17 months ago outside another Pensacola clinic. The city has also been the site of four bombings, a destructive raid and countless demonstrations at abortion clinics over the past 10 years.

"Not only our faith but our city has been tarnished," said the Rev. Herb Sadler of the Gulf Breeze United Methodist Church.

"Pensacola has been held up to the world as a place of hate and violence. We know the core of radical fundamentalists who produce these acts do not represent our city and they do not represent our faith," Sadler said.

Earlier Sunday, about 150 people attended a memorial service for Barrett at the Pensacola Unitarian Universalist Fellowship. His wife, June, 68, who was wounded Friday, lit a candle to begin the service.

Barrett's son and daughter were among those who rose from their chairs to praise Barrett's life. Churchgoers dabbed their teary eyes with handkerchiefs and tissues as five ceiling fans turned silently to ward off the Gulf Coast heat.

"We all know he died doing something he strongly believed in," Bruce Barrett said of his father. "He died with his boots on. He was a soldier in the war for human rights."

Dandy Barrett Witty spoke of her father's service to his country during World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and the

Volunteers accept risks of violence

By ROBERT DVORCHAK

PENSACOLA — They call themselves escorts, volunteers who act as human buffers to protect abortion patients from the shouts and screams of protesters opposed to abortion.

And now, following Friday's shotgun slayings of a doctor and his escort outside an abortion clinic, they know and accept that their duties put them at risk of deadly violence.

"When you open your eyes in the morning, you almost have to be willing to say it might be the day you die," said Debbie Myers, coordinator of 20 escorts volunteering their services in the Pensacola area.

"We've all had to look inside ourselves after what happened. Everyone knew what the realities were. We've always talked about it. Escorting is not for everyone," she said.

An escort's primary mission is to accompany abortion patients, many of whom are bewildered and frightened, through throngs of abortion protesters who gather outside clinics.

In trying to stop abortions, protesters use tactics like displaying pickled fetuses or bloody baby dolls, mimicking an infant's cry, shouting that women have died during abortions or telling patients that they are murderers and are condemning themselves to hell, according to abortion rights groups.

But escorts say they are there for support, not as bodyguards.

"We don't guard clinics. We are there to see that the women get safely inside," Myers said. "It used to be we were human shields. We act as a human buffer. We try to minimize the emotional pain."

Myers was the first escort assigned to greet Dr. John Britton, who began flying into Pensacola to perform abortions each Friday 17 months after Dr. David Gunn was slain

Trosch says killing doctors is 'mandatory'

MOBILE — An Alabama reverend and friend of a man accused of killing an abortion doctor and his escort in Pensacola, Fla., said murdering abortion doctors is "not only okay, it's mandatory."

When asked if he would kill someone who performed abortions, the Rev. David Trosch of Mobile said, "I won't say never. ... I would like to see it continue to happen. I'm open, if anyone knows a better way. But I can't find another."

Trosch, 58, recently drew the attention of the Secret Service when he predicted that pro-choice politicians like President Clinton would be "sought out and terminated as vermin."

He told the Birmingham Post-Herald in a story published today that his main concern is preaching that killing abortion doctors is justifiable homicide, not necessarily acting it out.

Trosch, who was kicked out of his Catholic parish in Magnolia Springs, said he's received death threats and that some of his family members think he's crazy.

"I don't fear for my life," he said. "I just hope it's a nice clean shot, so I'll go straight to heaven."

Trosch's friendship with Paul Hill blossomed during the trial in Pensacola of Michael Griffin, who was convicted of killing abortion Dr. David Gunn of Eufaula at a Pensacola clinic. On Sunday, Hill was being held on charges he murdered Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, and his escort James Herman Barrett,

74. The two were gunned down Friday as they drove into the parking lot at the Ladies Center clinic. Hill also was charged with one count of attempted murder for wounding Barrett's 68-year-old wife, June.

"I see no room for sympathy for them," Trosch told the newspaper. "Dr. Britton was a mass murderer, and Barrett was his accomplice."

Trosch's long history of soap-box rantings on abortion has drawn criticism from pro-lifers who claim his radical approach hurts their cause.

"He should be excommunicated," said Rev. Jim Pinto, minister of Christ Episcopal Church in Fairfield and a longtime anti-abortion activist.

"As clergymen, we've taken vows to follow in the ways of Christ. I can see Jesus dying in front of an abortion clinic, but I can't see him killing anybody."

Trosch first made headlines last August when the Mobile Register refused to sell him advertising space to print a cartoon depicting a man shooting an abortion doctor.

The newspaper did a story on the cartoon, and Hill was among those who read it. Hill wrote to Trosch to compliment him on his cartoon and say he agreed.

Trosch eventually would have dinner at Hill's Pensacola home from time to time. The friendship grew stronger during Griffin's trial, when the two often sat together in the courtroom.

POLICE BRIEFS

Aggravated battery

Arthur James "Ace" Thomas, 22, 1707 Bell St., Sanford, was arrested for aggravated battery and robbery on Friday afternoon by Sanford police. Police report Thomas, and another unidentified man, entered K-Mart, in Sanford, through the garden center and proceeded to the toy section where they allegedly attacked a customer, grabbing her purse and knocking her to the floor. When she would not let go of her purse, the woman said the men kicked her in the face. The unidentified suspect ran out of the store with the purse, through the garden center, followed by Thomas, who walked. An employee in the garden center recognized Thomas and identified him for police in a photo line-up. K-Mart security video also showed the two men entering and leaving the store.

Domestic violence

Elizabeth Miller, 27, 1750 Roseberry Lane, Sanford and Alfred Harkness, 38, same address, were arrested for battery (domestic violence) late Friday night by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies. Miller reported that she was trying to take her children to the store but Harkness did not want her to go. She said he picked her up and carried her back into the house, stood in front of the door and would not let her out. Miller allegedly hit Harkness with a brass planter. He allegedly grabbed the planter and threw it back at her, hitting her in the face.

Both parties were transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1000 bond each.

Asleep at the wheel

Albert Ronald Riley, 33, 107 14th Avenue, Longwood, was found asleep in his car by an Altamonte Springs police officer early Friday morning. The officer reported that Riley was in the left turn lane of eastbound State Road 436 at northbound State Road 434. According to the report, the engine of the car was running, in gear and Riley's foot was on the brake. The officer reported that he attempted to wake Riley for ten minutes.

Riley was arrested for driving under the influence, having an expired tag, attached tag not assigned to vehicle and no proof of insurance.

Crash leads to DUI arrest

Jack Lee Allen, 46, 311 Foxboro Court, Lake Mary, was arrested for driving under the influence late Friday night after a Lake Mary police officer responded to an automobile crash on Longwood-Lake Mary Road at Washington Avenue.

Flight attempted

Darryl Matthews, 34, 201 Monroe Avenue, Maitland, was observed by Sanford police early Friday morning, driving at a high rate of speed, with no lights, in an area off of 12th Street in Sanford. When police pursued, Matthews ran several stop signs before coming to a dead end at 13th Place. He then allegedly fled the vehicle on foot until he was apprehended at 16th Street and Mangouatine Avenue. He was arrested for fleeing attempting to elude, wreckless driving and driving without a driver's license.

Conflicting identification

Kimberly Dawn Taylor, 22, 676 Newburyport, Altamonte Springs, and Vickie Nicole Smith, 19, 677 Newburyport, Altamonte Springs, were arrested by Sanford police Friday afternoon at the driver's license office on East Airport Boulevard, Sanford, when Smith allegedly attempted to use Taylor's social security card to get an ID card. They were both charged with unauthorized possession.

Trespassing attempted

Booker T. Barriner, 31, 2591 Crawford Drive, Sanford, was arrested by Sanford police late Friday evening after he entered the Winn Dixie store at 1614 French Ave., Sanford. He had been arrested there before and issued a trespass warning. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Drug related arrest

William Bradshaw, 41, 142 Burns Avenue, Longwood, was arrested by Altamonte Springs police late Friday night during a "sting" operation at Marker and Merritt Streets. Bradshaw allegedly purchased $10 worth of "crack" cocaine from an undercover officer. He was charged with purchase of a controlled substance, transported to John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $5000 bond.

Traffic stops

The following persons were arrested after traffic stops:
 • Tammy C. Howard, 28, 101 N. Grant Street, Longwood, was observed Friday by a Longwood police officer who had previous knowledge that the defendant's driver's license had been suspended for failure to pay traffic fines. She was arrested for driving with a suspended driver's license, no proof of insurance and failure to possess a valid registration certificate. She was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.
 • Russell Tomlin, 49, 2191 Dixie Avenue, Sanford, was arrested Friday by a Seminole County Sheriff's deputy, after a traffic stop for an inoperative tail light, for altered vehicle license plate decal and tag attached not assigned to vehicle. The tag on his truck was on the wrong vehicle and the decal was expired. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1000 bond.

Warrant arrests

The following person wanted persons were taken into custody:
 • Deborah Ellen Landon, 27, 2766 Ridgewood, Apt. #102, Sanford, for failure to appear, altered tag.
 • Isaiah Nazareth Fields, 34, 59 Castle Brewer Court, Sanford, failure to appear, tag not assigned, no insurance.
 • Jeffery Lee Pleasant, 19, 2413 Summerlin Avenue, Sanford, violation of probation.
 • Leroy Manning, no known address, writ of bodily attachment. He was arrested on 8th Street in Sanford, while sleeping in his van. He told a Seminole County Sheriff's deputy he lives in his van.
 • Timothy L. Cotton, 22, 1010 7th Street, Casselberry, was arrested on an outstanding warrant of failure to appear for driving with a license suspended or revoked when Seminole County Communications advised Longwood police that the wanted subject had been found eating wild mushrooms, had suffered gastronomic and psychological disorders and had been taken to South Seminole Community Hospital. The subject was medically cleared and was about to be released when he was arrested.

The check is in the snail mail

As world speeds up, postal service slows down

EDITORS' NOTE: Almost everybody has a story about the check that was late or the package that never got there. Perhaps such lapses are inevitable when a postal system handles 171 billion pieces of mail annually. But the complaints grew louder this year, and the lure of alternatives to the old-fashioned letter grew stronger.

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — It is an everyday act of optimism: A letter drops into the darkness of the blue curbside box, the lid clanks shut behind it, and in the mind of the sender, wherever that letter is going, it's as good as there.

But is it really? Roughly one out of five letters doesn't arrive on time. A few never arrive. This year a record amount of mail was delayed, and a chorus of complaints rose up from the disillusioned.

"I don't have any faith at all in the mail," said Theresa Morris, a bookkeeper in Herndon, Va.

Sometimes a letter from Morris to her parents in Florida arrives in three days; sometimes it takes two weeks. A $10,000 stock certificate she sent by registered mail was lost.

Of course, complaints about the post office are as perennial as complaints about the weather. But the sun has no competition.

The U.S. Postal Service is losing customers such as Bonnie Matthews, a Baltimore illustrator who sends by fax machine the rough sketches she used to mail.

"I love writing letters and correspondence, I think it's more personal than the fax," she said. "But I can't rely on the mail."

As fax machines, computer e-mail and electronic money transfers become commonplace, even letters delivered on time seem hopelessly slow — "snail mail," they call it on the Internet.

The Postal Service is in a double bind: It's struggling to deliver today's torrent of mail, more than a half-billion pieces a day. And it's facing high-tech competitors that in the future may siphon off the mail that's cheapest to deliver.

The past year has been calamitous:

— Businesses and charities that mail millions of third-class solicitations began noticing poor delivery last fall. The Disabled American Veterans estimates it lost $1 million in donations when fund-raising letters were delayed.

"In November, the bottom dropped out," said Max Hart, the group's chief fund-raiser. "I've been here 25 years and I don't ever remember a delivery problem that severe."

— There was mail mayhem in Chicago. A ton of missing letters and packages was found stacked inside a letter carrier's closet. Caches of undelivered mail were found hidden in a postal truck, piled in the back of post offices and burning under a viaduct.

— After the Postal Service moved sorting of Bronx, N.Y., mail out of the Bronx, angry residents complained about vital mail received weeks late: medical test results, tax records, exam scores, invitations.

"It's upsetting when Social Security checks are late," said Frank Hordich, who has lived at the same Bronx address since 1945 and "never had mail trouble of this magnitude before."

— Congress took notice of Washington D.C.'s dismal delivery record. In May postal inspectors found "large volumes" of mail addressed to the government, with dates as old as February, in the city's main post office.

Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said some of the problems were caused by workers and managers who ignored standard procedures and neglected customers. That's being changed, he said.

"We have to get people to understand that we work for customers," said Runyon, a former auto executive hired in 1992 to revamp the Postal Service.

The Postal Service's own survey shows that nationwide delivery speed fell to a record low at the start of 1994. Only 79 percent of first-class letters sent within overnight delivery areas — usually a city and its suburbs — arrived on time.

With the spring thaw, local delivery improved to 82 percent on-time, still down two points from the year before, according to the quarterly survey conducted by Price Waterhouse since 1990.

Letters sent long distances, due to arrive within three days, were late almost a quarter of the time.

The Associated Press did an informal test of its own and got better results. On July 5, the AP mailed 100 letters between distant cities: 78 arrived on time. Another 100 letters were mailed within 10 local areas: 88 arrived on time. Still, some delivery was quite sluggish: What should have been an overnight trip within Miami took one letter six days. The other nine letters mailed in Miami were one day late.

But an Associated Press poll found most Americans give the Postal Service high marks overall, even when mail is a little late.

Forty-two percent of those surveyed predicted that a letter mailed within their local area would fall to arrive overnight. Yet 83 percent said the Postal Service was doing a "good" or "excellent" job.

The telephone poll of 1,005 adults was conducted May 20-24 by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. It has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Fourteen percent of the respondents said in the past month they had chosen some other delivery method, such as e-mail or Federal Express, because of dissatisfaction with first-class mail.

It's unlikely that Americans will abandon mail in the foreseeable future, however.

A grandchild's crayon picture, the pleasing heft of a seed catalogue, engraved wedding invitations — these will be hard to replace by computer. Many advertisers will still want to put something tangible into a potential buyer's hands.

And some people won't be able to afford alternatives to the mail.

They will still need a Postal Service that reaches every out-post of the country at a single rate that is within their grasp.

The question is how to keep stamps affordable if the Postal Service loses the types of mail most vulnerable to electronic competition — business-to-business mail, bill payments, some advertising. Those are also the easiest types of mail to handle.

Business-to-business first-class mail has decreased by 10 percent since 1988. So far, the decline has been more than offset by growth in mail sent between businesses and homes, mostly bills and junk mail.

Only 5 percent of the mail is personal correspondence.

The Postal Service, which hasn't received tax money since it was restructured in 1971, must earn enough to support its network of trucks and post offices and more than 700,000 workers.

Service fiascos or rising prices could chase away big business mailers who are already weighing alternatives to the Postal Service.

"If service suffers, they're dead," said Gene Del Polito, executive director of the Advertising Mail Marketing Association. "If rates go too high, they're dead."

On the price side, Runyon has won praise for staving off an expected rate increase for a year, and for his plans to modernize the rate structure. He has asked the Postal Rate Commission to approve increases of about 10 percent for early next year. A first-class stamp would cost 32 cents.

It's the service side where Runyon has come under attack. The trade groups and lawmakers and unions who watch the mail blame blunders by Runyon for the drop in delivery.

Perhaps the biggest error: the Postal Service paid some of its most experienced employees to leave.

Just two months into office, Runyon announced plans for early retirement incentives he hoped would weed out 30,000 managers, or as he put it, "people who don't touch the mail."

"It turned out to be a tremendous mistake," said Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., chairman of the House Post Office Committee.

The buyout plan was open to almost everybody. And it wasn't managers who jumped at the offer of six months' pay.

Seventy-one percent of the early retirees were hands-on workers: some 34,000 mail carriers, mail sorters, clerks. Many were not replaced and new workers who were hired need time and training to learn the job.

"In the meantime, service suffers," said William Burrus, executive vice president of the American Postal Workers Union.

The buyout also meant long hours for those who remained.

Even the boss has a boss

A rather humorous news report came out of New York City recently. It announced the winners of a contest to name the "Worst boss in the United States," and the "Best Boss." It was interesting to note that the woman selected this year as the worst boss, and the man who nominated his boss as the best, (not the winning boss) were each awarded with a two-week vacation in Hawaii.

Finding a workplace where there is no disgruntled employee is difficult. A boss cannot please every employee all the time. But one point is often forgotten.

Booses have booses as well.

The manager of a store has the corporate management to contend with. The corporate bosses have not only a president, but often a chief executive officer or chairman of the board.

Whether a small business or major corporation, even the owners have bosses. These come in the role of government agencies which control the business.

As an example, in the Waterfront Master Plan being studied at the present time in Sanford, let's assume a person wanted to create and operate a business jutting out over Lake Monroe on the lakefront area, north of U.S. Highway 17-92. Imagine the "bosses" who would have to be involved.

They would have to get a site plan approval, city building permit, approval from the St. Johns Water Management District, Department of Transportation, Sanford Historical Board, Coast Guard, and probably several others.

No, these wouldn't be bosses in a direct fashion, but when someone controls what can be done in a business and where it can be located or operated, we believe it's a boss situation.

But before you lambaste your boss, take a look at how many bosses your boss must answer to. It may give you a better perspective.

A black response to black bigotry

When I was young, and anti-Semitism was as common in Boston as Saturday night baked beans, there were Jewish leaders who advised the rest of us to say nothing: "If we publicly criticize the anti-Semites, we will cause more anti-Semitism." But silence encouraged the bigots, as I found out when I was punched in the face one night.

When some Jews prepared to picket the NAACP's June summit meeting -- with Louis Farrakhan the prized guest -- Carl Rowan accused them of overreacting, adding that such actions serve "to increase rather than diminish anti-Semitism in black America."

Rowan is hardly alone in advising Jews to be more restrained. Still, it is hard to be silent when among the publications available at some of the gathering places of The Nation of Islam are "Jews and Their Lies" and that perennial model of calumny, "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

So, when Minister Farrakhan says -- as he did at the summit -- "We don't get in your family business, you stay out of ours" -- silence is unnatural when part of his business is to make Jews appear to be eternally diabolic.

But Farrakhan -- and those at the NAACP summit who consider him worth legitimizing -- hardly speak for all blacks. Elaine Jones is Director-Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund (which is not part of the NAACP). The LDF is the most vigorous and skillful protector of civil rights in the country -- appearing often before the Supreme Court and lower courts. It has had considerable success in voting rights, employment discrimination, housing, and capital punishment cases.

Speaking in June before the Anti-Defamation League's 81st annual National Commission meeting, Elaine Jones cited Khalid Muhammad's work as the Johnny Appleseed of undiluted bigotry -- as well as Minister Farrakhan's sharing of those views. Elaine Jones said:

"Every one of us in the civil rights movement has a moral obligation to denounce anti-Semitism.... The cause for which Martin Luther King fought, and to which the Legal Defense Fund is committed, is the grand moral principle that every American -- no matter his or her race, country of origin, creed or gender -- should have equal rights under the law and enjoy an equal degree of respect, acceptance, and opportunity in our society.

"I could not credibly denounce racial discrimination against African Americans unless I was opposed with equal fervor to any other form of invidious discrimination."

She read to the Jewish group a letter she wrote about black anti-Semitism that was printed in the Amsterdam News, a black newspaper in New York: "In the face of injustice, silence bespeaks an insidious form of assent, a tacit sanction that combines vital support with a patina of easy self-denial. Over time, silence converts bystanders into accomplices."

The Amsterdam News is not silent in these matters, being an admirer of Minister Farrakhan.

Counterfeiting is now art of state

WASHINGTON -- The Clinton administration's plan to redesign American currency -- which Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen called a "pre-emptive strike" against counterfeiters -- may in fact be a measured response to an international menace that's already growing out of control.

Over the next several years, U.S. paper currency will undergo its first extensive redesign since 1929. In an effort to thwart counterfeiters, the greenback will be altered in several ways, beginning in 1996 with the $100 bill, most notably by moving the picture left and by adding a complex watermark.

Judging from a recent report by a House Republican task force on terrorism chaired by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., the currency redesign may be a response to a problem that is far larger than the administration will admit. According to the report, the most serious counterfeiting threat to the greenback is coming from abroad -- particularly Iran, Syria and Lebanon -- at a pace that is now in the billions of dollars per year. The report further alleges that the proceeds from these high-tech counterfeit dollars, also called "super dollars," are being used to finance the nuclear ambitions of Iran and its Middle East allies.

The U.S. Secret Service would not comment on the report, citing a policy against commenting on any ongoing investigations. A spokesman added, however, that the agency does not have any agents on the ground in the Middle East.

"Over the last few years... the spread of extremely high quality counterfeit money has continued to rise," the report begins. "Furthermore, there is every indication that the problem will continue to grow as distributors adopt numerous new methods and venues for smuggling this bogus cash," continues the report, which was released on the same day as the currency redesign was announced.

According to the report's author, there are currently three grades of counterfeit U.S. bills emanating from the Middle East, ranging in quality from mediocre to superior. The high-quality currency, it is alleged, is being manufactured using American-trained engravers and a printing press given by the U.S. government to Iran during the reign of the Shah.

The distribution of these counterfeit bills appears to have been greatly aided by the collapse of Communism in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. As organized criminal activity rises in these former Communist states, the lure of cheap American dollars has helped fuel a money-laundering boom in Europe and has elevated the amount of nuclear and high-technology smuggling from the former Communist countries to the radical states of the Middle East. Some other allegations outlined in the report:

- The Italian Mafia has, since 1993, become the primary middleman in the counterfeit trade. Iran, Syria and Lebanon "provide the Italian Mafia with counterfeit dollars and drugs at a reduced price as payment for nuclear goods," the report states. "The Italian Mafia sells the drugs and launders the money through its international connections, with the Russian Mafia playing an increasing role in these functions as well, and then diverts some of the profits to various financial centers, mainly Germany, as payment on behalf of their buyers."

- By one estimate, at the end of 1992, more than half the foreign currency in circulation in Central Asia was fake.

Community pride

The Fourth of July cartoon the Sanford Herald placed in its paper (Wednesday, June 29) was the work of artistic people. It is a shame for the whole county as well as the city, as Sanford is the county seat, and (its citizens) give enough money to be able to express their disgust to the officials of this selfish town. (They) take all they can for nothing.

Now I wrote an article last year that this was going to happen; also about the garbage and recycling material we pay for that goes to manufacturing rugs, patio furniture, etc. We pay for it to be picked up and sold for so much a pound, shipped out and it makes millions all from each of us and is a tax burden. Garbage we should pay for, but not recycling -- no way. All our officials voted in must be removed, both city and county, that's the only way to let them know we are taking our city and county back and get some pride back.

Wayne Doyle maybe would make a fine leader and we really need Steve Alford. Both are very fine men and leaders, so let's don't wait until the last minute to start getting our replacements ready for elections.

I don't live in Orlando either, but I admire the way their mayor looks and acts. She saw they had beautiful fireworks, activities in the park for the people. She always dresses like a lady at all times. Her hair is beautifully styled, her clothes are above reproach, long-sleeved dresses or jackets, no peasant skirts and short-sleeved blouses. A lady to be proud of.

Now it also is up to our veterans to take their place of blame -- why didn't someone take the lead to have a parade with school bands, close the street from City Hall up to the waterfront for music, chairs and such. How in the world did our veterans let that slip through? They hang out at the VA club and could have gotten it ready. So let's don't put the full blame on any one person, let's get our pride out of the dirt.

Now let's get started on the Thanksgiving dinner for the poor at the chamber of commerce this year. No, the mayor did not do that either last year. She had a luncheon you paid to eat at and one-third of the profit was supposed to go to mission. They are still waiting.

The volunteers in Seminole County are the very best in the world. Out in this hot weather to serve the sick, the needy, the elderly, and yes, serve meals to the ill who can't take care of themselves. They do a job everyday and they also have a place in our Fourth of July.

We don't need a bunch of stupid cars parading people if they want to be part of the parade then, by George, walk with the rest of us as one of us or stay home. Now that the mess is over, let's look ahead with pride and work together as a community and grow closer together as neighbors like the old days.

Outrage over talk show

This letter is in reply to Ed Tyll's radio show of Monday, July 25, 1994. I understand the concept to shock-jock, and his need to incite an audience to interact with him. It's basically entertainment, not enlightenment. Nonetheless, I was truly horrified at some of his observations of Sanford and the Dorothy Board tragedy.

I am not a Florida native, but have lived in Central Florida for almost 25 years and in Sanford for over eight years. We are educated people. My husband is an attorney and I have a degree in Criminal Justice (just like Ed Tyll). We, along with our neighbors, try to live normal decent lives, raise and educate our children just like people anywhere else in the United States, no better maybe, but no worse.

There is not much you can say about Sanford that I haven't heard before. Sanford does have its problems. It has been economically depressed for a long time and we have more than our share of transients and people looking for cheaper housing. The overwhelming majority of these people are not from here. They are from all over, but mostly from the north.

The people who do live here, who work and pay taxes, are people who are dedicated and determined to give of themselves to make Sanford into what it was and what it could be again. They are certainly more dedicated and determined than people who live in the so-called "good areas" of Central Florida.

The majority of people we know that live here, bought the beautiful old historic homes in an attempt to restore them to their original beauty. Some of these old homes had been turned into pay-by-the-week boarding houses.

These brave people have invested time, money and lives to bring Sanford back to its original quiet, gracious splendor.

You pointed out that we have no cultural opportunities that bigger cities have. We can all read and know how to find any cultural event we want to attend. Personally I feel we are all living in a cultural experience right here. Don't think that because the South and Sanford in particular, being more quiet and slower in pace, can be defined as illiterate and backward. I think I can speak for the people in Sanford when I say that our priorities are our families and our community. We have more community spirit than a lot of the preferred neighborhoods.

What happened to Dorothy Board was a terrible tragedy. How can you fault the community for not intervening beforehand and belittling their actions after the fact.

The pain is internal and depressed people tend to keep it and themselves from other people. What is the alternative, a hot line for people to call in and report any depressed person that they know, or doctor's reporting any person that they prescribe an anti-depressant for? Then what?

Do you remove the children from the home? This smacks of "Big Brother" and would certainly provide fodder for one of your shows. That may cause some people to go over the edge and may even replace our governor.

The point is, you never know how a person who has emotional problems is going to react, which isn't a Sanford problem and in no way, shape or form can I see community apathy as a Central Florida or Sanford problem. The classic textbook case which I think defends community apathy is the Kitty Genovese case which as you know was in New York.

Our ten year old daughter would rather have her feet cut off than listen to talk radio. Although I have it on, she ignores it, or she did until Monday. I do regret that she heard it as she knew Heather Albright and because of that relationship, she listened to your comments. She wanted to call you because as she put it, "Mom, he is so rude." I told her that she couldn't call because you would only hang up on her. I find it ironic that a ten-year-old child raised in Sanford has a better appreciation for manners and good taste than someone three times her age has.

In Sanford, as in the rest of the country, we are raising and educating our children the best we can. In addition to the 10 year old we have a 21 year old son who was in the gifted program all throughout his school years. He is now in the Navy and has received his orders to begin SEAL training.

Our 18 year old daughter had straight A's in her senior year of high school. Because she is such a special, talented person, she has been accepted into the Disney Culinary Program which is world renown for all their awards in culinary competition.

To say on the air that Dorothy Board did her children a favor by killing them so that they wouldn't have to grow up in Sanford is a total outrage to the residents of Sanford, their children, and to Dorothy Board. It is demeaning to us and reduced Mrs. Board's desperate act into a redneck caricature. What an unfeeling, callous and thoughtless thing to say.

We all live in a crazy world. How any person can read the morning paper and not be depressed is beyond me. The acts and behavior that you attribute to us living in Sanford, while some may exist, are not indigenous to us. I have lived in Europe and in the North, South, East and West of the United States. We have no monopoly on bigotry, ignorance, child abuse, incest or murder.

have our drug and alcohol program, Crossroads. We have our in-patient unit which is the hospital and we have a 24-hour screening and evaluation unit for people in crisis."

She noted the public may not be aware the new evaluation center.

"It would be nice for the community to know there are new buildings back there. For years, I think there was the stigma of just the hospital where people get locked up voluntarily and involuntarily. People kind of think that's the place the police bring you to or something like that. It's not just that. It's a hospital for anybody who needs help and who requires hospitalization but we also have counseling there. Lots of people go there to just talk and then leave, Davis said."

Adults released from state hospitals with no place to live, may live in the group home for up to a year. People in the community with mental health problems who are also having housing problems may live in the group home. The home, which can house 14 adults was built with $275,000 from the United Way last year.

The center also has a supported housing program which assists clients in getting housing, furnishings or benefits, such as

Medicaid or Social Security.

Davis said the center has a full time psychiatrist and another who works part time plus psychiatric nurses available by phone everyday and a 24-hour counselor. Crisis services for children are also available.

There are also 16 or 17 therapists who work with children in the county's schools who have been identified as needing counseling.

"We have a large program just for kids," Davis said. The center is funded by United Way, Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS) and some private (money).

"Some people can afford to pay on a sliding fee scale," she explained. "But no one gets turned away because of money. We serve everybody regardless of their ability to pay."

A counselor is also available to meet with parents at locations outside the center, if necessary, if they need assistance with troubled children or teens.

Along with individuals seeking help for themselves, referrals are made to the center from a wide variety of sources including schools, private hospitals, clergy, teachers, family members, friends, doctors, Central Florida Regional Hospital, probation department and police, Davis explained.

Out-patient counseling is also available at two other sites, 25th and Park Avenue and in Altamonte Springs, she added.

unfeeling, callous and thoughtless thing to say!"

"I know what 'shock jocks' are supposed to do," Valerino said, describing commentators who incite their audiences to interact with them. "But that crossed the line. That was horrible."

Valerino's young daughter attended school with the oldest child killed in the tragic event and was upset when she heard Tyll's comments on the radio.

Tyll initially denied making the statement but then discovered he had, after reviewing a tape of the program.

"I will tell you if somebody made that remark, the worst I would find it is in bad taste," Tyll said, before listening to the tape and discovering he made the comment himself.

The radio personality said the comment was an "exasperated aside" which was heard out of context "at the tail end of a long commentary on the state of the world today."

"What I was saying based on what apparently Mrs. Board had said several times that she was fearing for them continuing on in the world as it was. And I certainly made comment about that," Tyll said. "I can understand how a parent feels that way in the world we're in today, there's no question about that. But I thought that it was especially telling that after she had, and all of the news reports seem to bear this out, made threats of this nature in the past, that she should have been taken seriously."

"That is one of the criticisms of the community up there and the way this happened," he continued. "This lady was not a secret and she had some very serious problems. It was not secret she had thought out loud about taking the children with her should she elect to leave the planet. I really thought, as harsh as the judgement may be, that somebody could have done something. That she should have received some kind of urgent attention, if not only for her safety, for the safety of the children."

"The last thing I would want to do," Tyll said, "would be to cause any trauma to a child listening to the show after the tragic event." He added he is often a guest speaker at schools and loves children. He offered to personally visit the girl who was upset by his comment.

Tyll invited listeners to call in to tell him good things about Sanford last week but in his on-air banter noted a lack of cultural, career and educational opportunities here. Some callers lauded the quiet, easy going small town atmosphere with a growing downtown business community and historic preservation efforts. Others, however, noted crime, poverty and run-down neighborhoods.

Tyll engaged in a verbal joust with some callers, correcting one's pronunciation and portraying residents as illiterate and unskilled with the highest career goal attainable for local youth being convenience store managers. Several listeners classified Tyll's comments as "Sanford bashing."

Some members of the local Kiwanis Club chatted informally about the radio broadcast during their weekly luncheon.

The prime idea behind Monday's show, Tyll explained, "Shouldn't this event reflect on Sanford? I believe Sanford carries some of the burden for what she did...No community can escape that burden and that reflection when something this horrible happens in it."

A spokeswoman for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington D.C. said the FCC only gets involved in cases with indecent or obscene language. Tyll's comment does not violate FCC regulations. The public's main option to voice concern over objectionable topics or material is to contact the station manager or advertising sponsors of the program. FCC spokeswoman Rosemary Kimbel said.

WKTS-FM is licensed in Cocoa Beach. The renewal date for its 7-year license is February 1, 1996, according to FCC records.

Program director of WKTS-FM Jay Clark said the station has been owned by Asbury Park Press out of New Jersey for about one year. Tyll has been with the station since January. The general station manager is Mark Lass.

"I understand the sensitivity, and I guess for lack of a better word, the fear, that everybody has and the fact that everyone now is trying very hard to take care of the survivors and certainly the children of the area," Clark said. He noted psychologists are counseling children about the murders-suicide.

"The question we were asking, and I think it is a fair question," Clark said, "is where was all this help when she was crying out for it?"

Clark has lived in Sanford for a few months, is a member of the All Souls Catholic parish and attended the memorial Vigil Mass for the victims last week.

Orange County ordinance, the commissioners also agreed that fees charged adult businesses and distance set back requirements from residential, commercial and other adult businesses should be the same. In the proposed city ordinance, the fees and distances are about one-half of Orange County requirements, in some instances.

Although several commissioners and city residents have expressed a desire to ban any adult businesses in Longwood, city attorney Richard S. Taylor Jr. advised against an all-out ban, urging instead making the ordinance as restrictive as possible. A ban on the businesses would probably not withstand a court challenge, he advised.

During the regular commission meeting, commissioners are expected to OK another 180-day moratorium for the issuance of licenses or permits for the operation of adult entertainment businesses. The previous six-month moratorium expired in mid-July. Although three body scrub establishments are already operating in Longwood, the commissioners are attempting to keep other adult businesses out until the new regulations are in place.

The commissioners are also setting a tentative millage rate of $5.06 and will conduct public hearings on Sept. 12 and 26. The proposed millage rate is the same as this year's rate.

Commissioner Paul Lovstrand has requested the commissioners revisit the question of lighting along Hwy. 17-92. The commission earlier rejected a plan where state and federal money would be used to install lights along a portion of the roadway if the city would pay the electric bill and maintain the lights.

City administrator W. Shelton Smith said this morning Longwood's estimated portion of lighting within the city limits along the highway, 40.4 percent would be about $120 a month. The larger portion, 48 percent, is unincorporated county territory while 5.6 percent is in Casselberry and 6 percent in Winter Spring's jurisdiction.

To help ease traffic congestion on Rangeline Road, the commissioners are also requesting that the county and state department of transportation promote construction of an interchange on Interstate 4 between the BR 434 and Lake Mary Boulevard exits.

The city commissioners will also honor business person of the month, Kent Richter and present the Key to the City for John Blalaine for his civic involvement and work with historic preservation.

The work session begins in the city hall commission chambers at 6 p.m. and the regular meeting starts at 7 p.m.

Justine Faith Wilson, 28, of Sanford, at Fina, 1407 S. French Avenue.

Whitmire said one establishment, Park Avenue Mart, at 1201 S. Park Avenue, was checked twice by SIU agents, resulting in three arrests.

A clerk at the store, Won Chu, 36, of Winter Springs, was first charged during an undercover operation at 8:30 p.m. Agents reportedly returned to the same location at 8:54 p.m., at which time police said he was observed selling beer to James T. Murray, 19, 2411 Stevens Avenue, Sanford.

Murray was arrested as he exited the store, and charged with possession of alcohol by a person under 21, and Won Chu was given a second charge of selling alcohol to a minor.

Whitmire commented, "You would think that one charge for Won Chu would be enough, but that wasn't the case here."

Whitmire said those charged were not taken to jail.

"We didn't take them into custody at that point," Whitmire commented. "Rather than spend time driving them to the jail, what we do in these cases is issue them a summons with a court date."

"Sanford has never had a national winner so far," said Parks and Recreation Director Mike Kirby. "but we stand just as good a chance this year as everyone else, so we'll be keeping our fingers crossed."

Kirby will be traveling to Akron to watch the event.

Kirby said race week in Akron actually starts today, but activities will start Tuesday, when the racers and cars will be weighed to make certain car and driver do not exceed the limit. Then, each youngster will take a trial run down the 954 foot long Derby Downs hill.

Additional programs pertaining to the race will be held for the remainder of the week.

Throughout the entire week, the Derby champions will stay at Camp Christopher, called "Derbytown" during the race week. Events include sports, nature activities, and many others.

On Derby Day, official events begin with the Parade of Champions down Derby Downs track, followed by the official opening ceremonies, and the Celebrities Oil Can Trophy Race in oversized Derby Cars.

By the end of the 57th annual All-American Soap Box Derby on Saturday, new world champions of the Stock, Kit, and Masters Divisions will be determined.

The Masters champion will receive a $5,000 scholarship. The Stock and Kit car winners will each receive a $2,500 scholarship.

"Above everything else," Kirby added, "all three of our youngsters representing Sanford and Central Florida will have the experience of participating in the greatest competitive, international racing event available to youth today."

U.S. ready to invade Haiti

By LOUIS BRILLER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — The United States is ready to head an invasion of Haiti to restore the elected government there, U.S. officials said after the Security Council approved the use of "all necessary means" to force the country's military leaders out.

The U.S. military "is prepared to organize and lead" an invasion force, U.S. Ambassador Madeleine Albright said after Sunday's Security Council vote. "We seek — and anticipate — that others will join."

The message to the Haitian military, she said, was: "You can depart voluntarily and soon, or you can depart involuntarily and soon. The sun is setting on your ruthless ambition."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta called the vote "a very strong signal that the world community is united, that we want the military dictatorship to end."

But in an interview Sunday on CNN, Panetta declined to say how long the Clinton administration would give Haiti's military to step down before taking action.

"I think it is sufficient to say soon," he said. "And they'd better get that signal — soon."

The resolution authorizing the use of force passed by a vote of 12-0. China and Brazil abstained. The 15th member of the council, Rwanda, was absent.

The resolution, which gives no timetable for the possible invasion, authorized a multinational force under unified command "to use all necessary means to facilitate the departure from Haiti of the military leadership."

The resolution also calls for the deployment of a 6,000-member U.N. force following any invasion.

Haitian Ambassador Fritz Longchamp, who represents ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's government, welcomed the outcome.

"The Haitian community would like as much as possible to avoid military action, but there is no alternative to getting rid of the military," he said.

In Haiti itself, reaction was mixed. Antoine Joseph, a former president of the lower house of Parliament, predicted disaster.

"If Aristide is restored to office by a foreign intervention, he is finished," said Joseph, who opposed the 1991 coup but has nonetheless supported the military. "He will be a puppet with no moral authority in the eyes of the Haitian people."

But on the street, many favored an end to military rule by any means.

"I support a military intervention if it uproots the military system we've got now," said Jean-Claude, a bus driver who didn't want to give his full name for fear of reprisals. "Haiti doesn't need a military occupation, but ever since we won our independence, we've never been free."

The coup leader, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, attended a Methodist Church service shortly before the Security Council approved the resolution.

"After this service, I have enough strength to defend the country," he said.

Several Latin American states said they feared the resolution would set a precedent for U.S. intervention in the region.

"The crisis in Haiti is not a threat to peace," Ambassador Victor Flores Olea of Mexico told the Council. "From the standpoint of history, military intervention in our hemisphere has invariably been traumatic."

Uruguay's Ambassador, Ramiro Piriz-Ballon, said his country "will not support any military intervention. ... Peaceful solutions have not yet been exhausted."

Mexico and Uruguay are not members of the Security Council, but their representatives asked to speak prior to the vote.

Albright told NBC on Sunday that Latin American countries were concerned about "some trend in intervention that is absolutely not true."

Aristide sent a letter to the United Nations on Friday calling on the international community to "take prompt and decisive action under the authority of the United Nations" to restore democracy in Haiti.

Most council members, especially Latin American countries, said they would need specific clearance from Aristide before they could approve a possible U.S.-led invasion.

Aristide became the first democratically elected president of Haiti in December 1990, and moved swiftly to reduce the power of the army and the ruling class. Critics, however, accused him of ignoring parliament and the courts, and of encouraging mob reprisals against his opponents.

During nearly three years of military rule, up to 3,000 people have been killed in political violence tolerated by the army. Cedras' refusal to yield in the face of international sanctions has prompted economic collapse, leading to thousands more deaths from disease and malnutrition and the desperate flight by boat of thousands of Haitians.

U.S. forces finished four days of war exercises near Puerto Rico on Saturday and steamed toward Haiti to resume patrols off the coast of the Caribbean island.

Whitewater probe continues

WASHINGTON — Armed with an ethics report criticizing Treasury Department disclosures of Whitewater material, senators are focusing on the agency that started the probe involving President Clinton's land deal.

Current and former officials of the Resolution Trust Corp. are appearing before the Senate Banking Committee today, followed by Treasury general counsel Jean Hanson — who briefed White House officials about the investigation.

The Office of Government Ethics reported Sunday that no Treasury Department employees violated ethics rules but that Hanson disclosed too much confidential material to the White House. The former chief Treasury Department spokesman, Jack DeVore, went too far in confirming sensitive information to a reporter, the report said.

The RTC has been investigating civil wrongdoing in the Whitewater case and has sent nearly a dozen memos asking the Justice Department to consider criminal prosecution. A criminal investigation is now under way by special counsel Robert Fiske, whose initial report concluded there was no criminality in Treasury Department-White House contacts.

Marines join war against wildfires

ENTRAT, Wash. — The Marines joined the war against wildfires raging across the West today, camping in a smoke-filled valley near this central Washington town to help battle the biggest blaze.

The first of 1,100 Marines from California's Camp Pendleton arrived Sunday. They were welcome relief to 2,775 sleep-starved firefighters trying to choke off a 90,900-acre fire burning across pine-covered ridges and valleys in the eastern Cascade Range.

Busloads of Marines traveled up a winding road to a ranch donated as a campsite. They searched for clear spots among the cow patties and rattlesnakes and pitched a city of green, two-person tents as fire crept through the woods on either side of the broad meadow.

"It's a kind of eerie," said Sgt. Mark Grebets, puffing a cigarette. "It reminds me of the Gulf War, with all the smoke."

Critic: NAACP head should step down

ATLANTA — A frequent critic of Benjamin Chavis says the NAACP's executive director should step aside during an investigation of his settlement with a former employee who claims he sexually harassed her.

Joseph Madison, a member of the NAACP's board of directors, said Sunday that he wants know why Chavis agreed to pay Mary Stansel up to $332,400 of the organization's money without telling the 64-member board about it first.

"What was violated here was the opportunity for the board to have all the details," said Madison, a radio talk show host in Washington, D.C. "There are some members of the board who are calling for an immediate resignation. I'm willing to give (Chavis) far more courtesy than he was willing to give us."

Board members were furious when they learned last week about Ms. Stansel's lawsuit and the settlement. At least one said Chavis should resign. Chavis denies Ms. Stansel's allegations.

'The Mask' debuts in top spot

Official box office tallies were due out today.

The weekend's top 10 films were:

1. "The Mask," $23.5 million.
2. "Forrest Gump," $18.2 million.
3. "True Lies," $13.4 million.
4. "The Client," $12.5 million.

Doctors found negligent in AIDS fraud

LOS ANGELES — A hospital and two doctors who tested a home-made AIDS drug on five patients were ordered to pay $2.7 million in damages.

A jury ruled Friday that North Hollywood Medical Center and doctors Valentine Birde and Rajindra Sethi violated state medical codes and were guilty of negligence, fraud and conspiracy.

The jury awarded four patients $925,000 for injuries, pain and suffering. The fifth patient who sued did not suffer injury, the jury said. The hospital was ordered to pay $1.8 million in punitive damages to two patients.

Breast implant OK to try

By LAURAN HENNINGSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Government regulators are allowing 50 American women to try out an experimental breast implant filled with a natural fat from soybean oil — the first advance in implants since widespread problems with the devices were reported in 1991.

LipoMatrix Inc. said today that its new breast implant should be safer than the silicone-gel and saline implants that thousands of women blame for sickening them — and would be the first implant a mammogram could see through.

The Food and Drug Administration said animal studies show the implants are safe enough for limited testing in women.

"This is a very different implant," said LipoMatrix president, Dr. Terry Knapp. "It's a natural substance."

Breast implants have been one of the FDA's most wrenching controversies. It banned silicone-gel implants in 1991 for everyone except breast cancer survivors in clinical trials.

Thousands of women claim leaking gel made them ill, in some cases causes crippling autoimmune diseases like lupus. Scientists haven't proven the implants are dangerous.

FDA will decide whether cigarettes qualify as drugs

By PAUL REGER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal scientific advisers are taking up a question that could change smoking habits for years to come: Are cigarettes drug-delivery systems?

A Food and Drug Administration scientific advisory panel meets Tuesday to deliberate the nature of cigarettes and to vote for a recommendation that could lead to FDA regulation.

It is an important step in a systematic process started by FDA head Dr. David Kessler — and gaining speed and public support — that some hope will all but put a "No Smoking" sign over America one day.

"The findings of this advisory committee will be very important as the agency decides whether nicotine-containing cigarettes should be regulated," Kessler said in an interview.

Kessler took up a regulator's sword against the tobacco dragon in February when he suggested to Congress that laws creating the FDA could be interpreted to give the agency authority to control distribution, sale and promotion of cigarettes.

That interpretation would put cigarettes in the same class as thousands of pharmaceuticals, medical devices and foods regulated by the FDA.

Kessler said the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act specifically defines a drug as something "intended to affect the structure and function of the body." That could include nicotine, the most active of the hundreds of chemical compounds in cigarette smoke, he said.

Already the agency regulates the sale and promotion of two nicotine-delivery systems: chewing gum and nicotine patches. Today, an advisory committee was to consider whether it should recommend approval of a third nicotine source, a nasal spray. The gum, patches and spray are all designed to help smokers kick the habit.

On Tuesday, the same committee addresses the habit itself.

"The purpose of the committee meeting is to look at scientific data on the effects of nicotine on the body," said Kessler. "What are its addictive properties? At what doses is nicotine addictive? Is there a level below which it is not addictive?"

The agenda and witnesses for the committee were being withheld until Tuesday, but if the meeting follows the usual pattern of FDA scientific deliberations, committee members will hear hours of testimony from people with all shades of opinion. Experts eventually will have to vote yes or no on specific scientific questions.

Tobacco companies already have signaled where they stand.

In testimony before Congress, tobacco executives denied that cigarette smoking is addictive or even dangerous. And in an advertising campaign, the companies have attacked what they say is an organized effort aimed at outlawing cigarettes. Some ads assert that cigarette smoking is a civil rights issue and that the government is trying to "trample American freedoms."

Such arguments don't phase Kessler. "We recognize that there are large societal issues involved, but we are very much focused, as a scientific agency, on what the scientific data indicates. What are the effects?" he said.

Kessler said that even if cigarettes are found to be drugs, his agency would not seek to totally outlaw them.

Congressional baseball an oasis in partisan times

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In the grip of a steamy summer in the capital, Democrats and Republicans are bracing for a showdown that's all about clout, strategy and walloping the other side.

Since early July, lawmakers from each party have met separately three mornings each week to prepare. One day recently, the GOP session got so boisterous that one lawmaker twisted his knee, another damaged his rotor cuff and a third bruised his arm.

The climax comes Tuesday night, when — weather permitting — the two parties face off in the 33rd annual congressional baseball game. And in a season that's seeing health care and Whitewater inflame partisanship on Capitol Hill, the game is expected to provide a calming respite from those passions and replace them with an athletic intensity of its own.

"This game is really a grudge match," said Rep. Dan Schaefer, R-Colo., manager of the Republican team and an 11-year veteran of the congressional contest. "We play really hard, I've seen guys break their legs, twist their ankles and cut their fingers on someone's spikes."

The frequent injuries that occur during practices and in the game are largely a function of the physical condition of the mostly middle-aged, sedentary people who play.

"I've told my wife that it's getting tougher to bend down," said Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, who at 42 is one of the younger participants and who plays third base. "I've also noticed that my eyes aren't as good, especially on fly balls."

But that won't stop about 20 lawmakers from each party from playing in the charity event, which is sponsored by the Capitol Hill newspaper Roll Call and is played at a ball field in suburban Alexandria, Va.

All but Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., are members of the House. The series, which Republicans lead 21-10 with one tie, is taken seriously enough that House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., has promised lawmakers that the chamber will finish business Tuesday in time for the 7 p.m. game.

For most, the real allure is the camaraderie with their colleagues, away from the political pressure cooker of a Congress that's only three months from Election Day.

In fact, with the rest of this year likely to produce increasingly bitter legislative battles, Tuesday's game looms as an oasis of partisan coexistence, perhaps the final demonstration that members of the two parties can indeed work — or at least play — together.

"The more we do together in a social setting, the more we begin to understand each other," said Rep. Wayne Gilchrest, R-Md., an outfielder. "The baseball game is a real good way for us to have fun, relieve tensions and to see us all engaged together in the process of middle age."

"Nobody's out there talking about health care or the crime bill," said Rep. Blanche Lambert, D-Ark., one of three women on the rosters. "It's just wonderful to get out there with those guys."

One Republican who won't be playing is Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., who came to Congress in 1967 after a 17-year major league pitching career that included 234 wins, 2,855 strikeouts and two no-hitters.

"I can't throw the ball to home plate anymore," said Bunning, once one of the game's hardest throwers.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

O'Cubs, Suns split

JACKSONVILLE — Luis Quiñones and Tony Barron homered in a Jacksonville Suns 5-2 victory, while Ota Smith allowed only four hits in a 1-0 Orlando Cube win in the second game.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins drop sixth straight

MIAMI — Marquis Grissom went 4-for-5 with a homer and scored eluding a rundown Sunday as the first-place Montreal Expos beat the Florida Marlins 13-4 to complete a three-game sweep.

Sean Berry and Cliff Floyd also hit homers for the Expos, who have won 11 of 12 games and lead Atlanta by 3 1/2 games in the NL East.

Florida never led in any of the games in an 0-6 homestand, the worst in franchise history.

Grissom had a walk, two singles, a triple and a solo homer. He scored after becoming caught in a rundown off third base and forcing the Marlins to make six throws. The last one by third baseman Jerry Browne was wild, and Grissom trotted home as the crowd booed the Marlins.

AROUND THE NATION

Quartet join Baseball Hall

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Steve Carlton and Phil Rizzuto entered baseball's Hall of Fame in character — Carlton displaying little emotion and Rizzuto bringing down the house.

Also inducted were New York Mets broadcaster Bob Murphy, and the late Leo Durocher.

Carlton, who won 329 games and had 4,138 strike outs, second to Nolan Ryan, is the only four-time Cy Young Award winner.

The feisty Durocher, who managed the Dodgers, Giants, Cubs and Astros, won 2,008 games, seventh on the all-time list.

A New York Yankee mainstay, Rizzuto, a shortstop, played 13 seasons and has been a broadcaster for 36 years.

Murphy has been broadcasting baseball games for more than 40 years.

Lemieux to miss year?

PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux will meet with Pittsburgh Penguins owner Howard Baldwin this week and, likely, will tell him he isn't healthy enough to play this season, according to sources close to the team.

Lemieux, 28, who missed nearly three-quarters of the 1993-94 season following his second back operation, has missed at least 25 games over each of the last five seasons due to a bad back and Hodgkin's disease.

Shaq paces Dream Team II

OAKLAND, Calif. — Dream Team II looked a little ragged in the first half, but still beat the United States' Goodwill Games team 113-75.

Shaquille O'Neal led the NBA's top pros with 18 points and eight rebounds. UCLA's Tyus Edney led the Goodwill team with 13 points.

Goodyear outlasts Indy field

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Scott Goodyear, who inherited the lead with 20 laps remaining Sunday when series point leader Al Unser Jr. fell out of the top spot with a blown engine, gave Kenny Bernstein's Budweiser King Indy-car team its first victory in the Marlboro 500.

Only eight of the 28 starters were running at the end of the 250-lap race on Michigan International Speedway's two-mile, high-banked oval, and none were among the point leaders.

Arie Luyendyk wound up second, a lap off the pace, and Dominic Dobson was third. The others running were Tom Fubli, Mark Smith, Hiro Matsushita, Willy T. Ribbe and Marco Greco.

Among those who didn't survive, besides Unser, were top contenders Raul Boesel, Emerson Fittipaldi, Robby Gordon and Mario Andretti, all victims of broken engines.

Nigel Mansell led the first 26 laps before a broken throttle linkage left his accelerator wide open and forced him out of the race.

Michael Andretti was leading by more than 13 seconds when he crashed while weaving through slower traffic on lap 68.

Ferrari ends F1 drought

HOCKENHEIM, Germany — Gerhard Berger gave Ferrari its first Formula One victory in nearly four years, winning a German Grand Prix marred by a pit fire and starting-line crashes that knocked out 11 cars.

Berger's victory was the first for Ferrari since Sept. 30, 1990 at the Spanish Grand Prix, and was Ferrari's 104th, tying it with McLaren for the lead among Formula One constructors.

Road woes for stars West North Carolina ends Longwood run

From Staff Reports

GAINESVILLE — The Longwood All-Stars were within one run of advancing to the finals of the Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino Southeastern Regional Tournament at Westside Park in Gainesville Sunday evening, but a questionable call ended the local teams undefeated streak at eight games as West North Carolina (Asheville) edged Longwood 1-0 in eight innings.

Longwood got to the Winners' Bracket finals with a 9-3 victory over Nashville, Tennessee Saturday.

Longwood will now need to win three straight games to advance to the National Tournament next month. The first game comes today at 5:30 p.m. against Tanner, Alabama (which eliminated Tennessee 5-0 Sunday). The winner of that game will then play West North Carolina in the finals at 8 p.m. The if necessary game would be at 7 p.m. Tuesday evening.

In the win over Tennessee, Longwood scored six runs in the fifth inning to overcome a 2-1 deficit (on a pair of Tennessee home runs) and make a winner of Kevin Graves, who relieved starter Mike Pagozalski in the fourth. Kyle Bono worked a scoreless seventh.

Going 2-for-4 at the plate for Longwood were Kevin Melillo, Matt Maln and Chris Westervelt.

In the loss to North Carolina, Longwood's best chance to score came in the third inning as Graves tried to score from second on a line drive single to center by Westervelt. Graves appeared to be under the tag but was called out and Carolina came up with the winning run on a home run by Joe Gaetti, the son of Kansas City Royal Gary Gaetti.

Longwood was its own worst enemy, leaving 12 runners on base. Getting the six hits were Ricardo Montalvo (three), Jeffrey Halbert (two) and Westervelt (one).

Oviedo penalized for rainy weather

From Staff Reports

JASPER — Did you know that the Oviedo Little League Junior Division All-Stars could control the weather?

Less than 24 hours after clinching the Sectional Tournament in North Tampa, the Oviedo Juniors were forced to play a back-to-back doubleheader in the State Tournament in Jasper Sunday afternoon.

Oviedo left 15 runners on base Thursday night and missed a chance to win the Sectional undefeated, dropping a 4-3 decision to Temple Terrace.

But that loss just incensed the District 14 champs, as they went out and pounded Temple Terrace 20-2 in a game started Friday and finished Saturday because of a rain delay.

Ray Brozzo and Pat Sirmeyer combined on a four-hitter and Larry Cummings (4-for-4, four RBI), Ruben Melendez and Jorgie Hernandez (two hits and three

The Longwood team scored two runs in the second inning and added an insurance run in the fifth as the Bullets duo outduelled Carlos Colon, who also fired a five-hitter.

In other results Saturday, Boone edged Apopka 9-7 and Bates (Dr. Phillips) topped Boone 11-7, leaving Bates as the only undefeated team.

There were three games set for Sunday. The if necessary game would be played today at 1 p.m.

The White Sox pounded the ball for 11 hits to win their seventh game without a defeat.

In the other game Saturday, the Aviation Blade Services Marlins overcame a 3-0 first inning deficit to move into a tie for second place with a 12-4 triumph over the Cline's Painting/Good News Gang Royals.

The White Sox are the only squad in the league with a winning record as the Marlins and Royals are both 3-4 and the Red Sox are 1-6.

The regular season will conclude with games on Wednesday and Saturday, with the possibility

Yahoo. The perfect new all-purpose word of the 90's

To act like a yahoo.
Or is it to be a yahoo?
Or do something in a yahoo fashion?

If you're smart, you never stop learning. And the opportunities to learn something new will pop up at the oddest times.

For example, while on vacation, I was playing golf with my brother, Marc, and a friend of his when I learned a most useful word: Yahoo.

In the course of 18 holes, I heard it employed as a noun, verb, and adjective. Not to be confused with Yoohoo (the registered trademark of a chocolate drink), yee-ha (a cynical expression of enthusiasm) or Yeehaw (the junction of State Road 60 and the Florida Turnpike), yahoo has a unique meaning and carries specific applications.

Its use as a noun is straight forward enough, as in "You yahoo." As best as I could determine, it carries a suggestion of comical ineptness despite determined effort, a clown without comical intent.

SPORTS

As an adjective, it's somewhat clumsy: "That was a yahoo drive." Still, it serves to describe a less than desirable result from a concerted effort.

A perfect softball example would be taking a swing from your gluteus maximus, cueing the ball off the end of the bat, and having the ball drop at your feet. That's a yahoo hit.

But it's as a verb that yahoo is particularly useful. We have the word to describe an attempt that is spirited, aggressive, unsuccessful, or hysterical. Yahoo covers all those bases.

I was first introduced to the state of Yahoo when I hit one of my patented 100-degree banana slices off the 4th tee onto the 15th fairway.

"You really yahooped that one," Marc said, shaking his head.

"Yahooped?"

"Yahooped."

Later, I lined up a 15-foot putt that I thought broke to the left. The ball rimmed the cup and, propelled by the additional energy gained by the ride around the rim, went another five feet, found a hill, and rolled to the fringe of the green.

"Yahoo," said my brother gravely. I wasn't sure if he was describing the putt or the putter (me, not the club).

We got to the 18th hole, a par four along the street. To protect passers-by, a net 50 feet high and 200 feet long lined the right side of the course, some 30 feet from the edge of the fairway.

"There's no fear of hitting out of bounds right on this hole," said Marc.

Unless, of course, you yahoo your drive, which I did (it turns out that I could slice bread with any driver). Like an F-14 fighter, my drive climbed and barrel-rolled to the right, clearing the protective net easily and sailing out of sight.

I turned and faced Marc. "Yahoo?"

"Definite yahoo."

Well, my golf game still performs like a vacuum cleaner, but at least I added a word to my vocabulary. Yahoo.

Herbs: rich in history and flavor

Herbs have a rich history that is well documented and were used extensively until recently. History tells us that people used herbs to flavor foods, to repel insects, treat illness and for fragrance. Herbs are easy to grow and many are suited to our climate here in Central Florida.

Herbs are classified as either annual or perennial — annuals complete their life cycle in one year, while perennials persist from year to year. Annual herbs include basil, dill and cilantro (coriander). Parsley is considered a biennial in the northern regions but is usually grown as an annual in Florida. I have had parsley persist for three years in my garden. The most inexpensive way to propagate annual herbs is from seed.

Perennial herbs that do well in my herb garden include mint, rosemary, sage, thyme, fennel, ginger, chives, catnip, comfrey and oregano. Perennial herbs are usually propagated from cuttings or division but many can also be started from seed.

Site selection for the herb garden should be similar to that for vegetables. Although herbs do best in a sunny location with rich soil, some have special requirements. Herbs with wood stems like rosemary, sage and thyme require a sunny, well drained location, while succulent herbs like mint, comfrey and parsley do best in a moist spot. It is always important to incorporate plenty of organic matter such as compost or peat into the soil during bed preparation. The herb garden can be as small as a square foot or as large as a lawn and most herbs can easily be grown in containers. The only limiting factor is the space that you can spare them. Herbs with weak stems like oregano, thyme and prostrate rosemary can also be grown in hanging baskets. A few herbs can be grown indoors, but require a lot of light.

GARDENING

Containers with herbs can be placed on the porch, balcony or patio — close to the kitchen door for easy access would be best.

Herbs also make wonderful additions to flower gardens. Many have colorful foliage and beautiful and unusual flowers. Herbs can help create gardens that are soothing grey and white or bold and colorful. Sage comes with foliage that is either gray-green or purple-green, basil comes in either green or purple while fennel is either bronze or green. These colorful plants contrast nicely with other foliage and flowering plants in the garden. Many herbs like oregano and marjoram make good ground covers and chives are a nice alternative to liriope as a border plant.

Herbs that are grown for their seed should be harvested when the seed pods change from green to gray or brown in color. Spread the seed out in a cool, dry, airy room for three or four days. When they are completely dry, so they will not rot or mildew, store them in air tight containers, preferably glass, away from sunlight.

Herbs are best when used fresh but can be dried or frozen for storage. When using fresh herbs in recipes be careful with the amounts since fresh herbs are more potent than dried ones. Harvest the leaves just before bloom, the flavor containing oils will be at their peak at this time. To store the leaves spread them in a dry, airy room for a few days away from sunlight. Exposure to sunlight will cause the leaves to darken and lose their green color. Heat from the sun also causes loss of the volatile oils that give herbs their flavor. Herbs like chives, dill and basil can be cut fresh, washed, allowed to dry and frozen. Use frozen as you would use fresh herbs.

I have been growing herbs successfully in Central Florida for four years now and have had "good luck" with many unusual herbs like pineapple sage (red flowers), apple mint, and Mexican sage (fuzzy purple flowers). The Herb Society of Central Florida is a good source of information both for herbs that do well here, and where to buy them.

For more information about herb culture call us at 323-2500, ext. 5550 or 5558 or drop by the Cooperative Extension Office across from Fica World.

August is America's #1 month for birthdays

If you were born in the month of August, HAPPY BIRTHDAY! You are among approximately 21 million American who blow out the candles every August, the number one birthday month in the United States. Actually, one-quarter of the population celebrates a birthday during the three-month period of July, August and September.

No one celebrated birthdays before 4000 BC because there was no way to keep track of time. People could figure out how old they were after the calendar was invented, but only kings celebrated birthdays because no records were kept on the births of common people.

Even after the Greeks began to compile statistics for tax and military purposes, only heads of important families were allowed to celebrate their birthdays.

Birthdays are the most popular reason to celebrate, and the number one reason to send greeting cards, according to a large greeting card manufacturer. Close to two billion birthday cards will be given this year — more than six per person. Birthday cards became popular in England and the United States about 1850, shortly after the first Christmas card.

Norma Gillison, manager of Brooke's Hallmark, in Sanford, said "cards are such an everyday thing, you always think of someone you have to get a card for." Gillison said traditional birthday cards are the mainstay of the greeting card business, but younger people are going more for the special lines, some have ethnic origins.

Larry Stephens, owner of four greeting card stores, including Sue's Hallmark in Lake Mary, said he sees more people buying humorous cards, but sees "a greater demand for blank cards" for people who want a quick way to stay in touch, but don't want to write an entire letter.

Percent of birthdays by month

So if you were born this month, celebrate your birthday in the knowledge that you are in good company. And look forward to receiving a lot of birthday cards.

Man looks for message on answering machine

DEAR ABBY: I am 64 and my lady friend is 51. We have been going together for eight months, during which time neither one of us has dated anyone else.

Last month, I moved in with her. We agreed to live together for a year to find out if we were compatible. I gave her a pre-engagement ring to signify our commitment to each other, and she gladly accepted it. We share equally in the expenses of living together.

Now for the problem: She refuses to change the message on her answering machine.

ADVICE

which is: "Hi, this is Marilyn (not her real name). I can't come to the phone right now, but please leave your name and telephone number. I will get back to you as soon as possible."

Abby, there is no mention of me whatsoever. I told her this was belittling to me in case my friends or family call. She keeps saying she will change it, but so far she has made no effort to do so.

Your comments and advice, please.

MR. NOBODY IN NEVADA
DEAR MR. NOBODY: Your lady friend is obviously hesitant to indicate that you are a "couple" until she is sure you are.

Be patient, give her a little more time, and when you're ready to exchange the pre-engagement ring for a wedding ring, your lady friend will change the message on her answering machine.

In the meantime, get your own telephone number and answering machine.

DEAR ABBY: While the British have long recognized short pants with knee-high socks as proper tropical uniform for dress occasions, and the U.S. Postal Service and others now follow this sensible lead, is it not time for Brooks Brothers, Armani and Haaspel, etc., to promote a three-piece summer suit: lightweight jacket with matching Bermuda shorts and trousers?

Men could then consider temperature and comfort in choosing Bermudas with knee socks, or trousers and ankle socks, to wear with or without matching jacket.

What hotel or restaurant would not consider as appropriate men so attired for hot summer days?

J.F. O'DONNELL, WASHINGTON, D.C.
DEAR J.F.: It's all right with me — my husband's legs are better looking than mine — but not all men are that lucky. Then, too, hairy male legs could be a turnoff to others while dining. I'm for recommending that men keep their pants on.

excuse me, there was one other mention of the flag. It concerned the fact that a resident of San Rafael, Calif., was fined $50 for having flown a flag over his rented condominium. He received a note from the manager asking him, "Please be considerate of your neighbors and protect the value of your home by keeping your flag in the box!"

FLAC-WEAVER IN SAUNDERIDGE, GA.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you, thank you, for that beautiful "message" about our flag, which you published on the Fourth of July. Sadly, it was the only reference to the flag in the newspaper that day — oh,

What is treatment for oral cancer?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with oral cancer and have undergone surgery eight times on my tongue. What information can you share on squamous cell carcinoma?

DEAR READER: Squamous cell carcinoma is a type of malignancy arising from the cells of the skin and the lining of body cavities. Like any cancer, it will spread uncontrollably unless treated. Symptoms depend on the site of the tumor, as well as the extent of the metastases (spread) at the time of diagnosis.

For example, squamous cell carcinoma of the oral cavity is usually diagnosed earlier (because it can be seen and felt) than a similar tumor in the lung, which may not be recognized until it has grown large enough (or spread) to cause cough, blood-tinged sputum, weight loss, and a shadow on the chest X-ray.

The treatment for a malignancy depends largely on its size and location; surgery, radiation, chemotherapy, or a combination of these methods are usually employed, with varying results.

With respect to your specific case, I suggest that you discuss your condition and prognosis with your oral surgeon (or an oncologist), who is the person most familiar with your particular tumor.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently read an article about medicine's best kept secret. What can you tell me about chelation therapy?

DEAR READER: Chelation therapy is not medicine's best kept secret; in fact, it's not a secret at all. Chelation is standard treatment for heavy metal poisoning (such as lead or arsenic), but it does not cure arthritis, aging, heart disease, and the plethora of other ailments claimed by its proponents.

During the procedure, a compound (usually EDTA) is injected into a vein; it circulates and binds to the toxic metal, after which it is excreted. No valid scientific study has ever proved that this therapy retards arteriosclerosis or cures any disease.

No, it's not a secret. The best

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Bridge, like life, contains apparent paradoxes. For example, sometimes a bridge analyst will write that the declarer had four losers but won 10 tricks. Yet the comment isn't always as ludicrous as it seems.

Look at today's diagram. South, playing in four hearts, seems to have four losers: two spades, one heart and one diamond. How can he possibly collect 10 tricks?

Following North's takeout double, East's three-spade raise was pre-emptive, promising four trumps but limited high-card values. With enough for a normal jump raise, East would have bid a conventional two no-trump.

This is how the play went. West cashed two spade tricks before switching to a club. Declarer won with dummy's queen, cash the heart ace and continued with the A-K of diamonds. Then came A-K of clubs. South discarding a diamond on the king. Next South ruffed dummy's club two. With his preparations complete, South exited with a trump. West won with the king and had only spades remaining. On the ruff-and-discard, declarer jettisoned his last diamond while ruffing in the dummy; 10 tricks won.

At another table, though, West found a foil to this fiendish formula. Under dummy's heart ace at trick two, he dropped the king. (If South had six hearts, there were 10 top tricks: five hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.) Taking the card at face value, South confidently played a heart to his nine. However, West produced the jack and exited with another club. Now declarer couldn't avoid a

HOROSCOPES

By Bernice Bode Cool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 2, 1964

The year ahead represents an excellent cycle for you to expand on your more creative pursuits. It's very important, however, that you exert total effort rather than trying to get in one lucky shot.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Material or financial gains are probable today, provided you don't take outlandish risks. Be satisfied with sure things instead of bucking the odds. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your leadership qualities are evident today and others will follow the example you establish, but if you're aggressive instead of instructive, they may desert your ranks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If events are allowed to follow their natural courses, the results could prove beneficial. Impatience and impulsiveness are ingredients that self-destruct.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep things in proper perspective today and don't let desire for self-gain mar your image. Your good reputation is a valuable asset that should not be for sale.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others may be able to do for you today that which you cannot accomplish on your own. If a concerned volunteer wants to assist you, by all means let him/her do so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being unduly secretive today could work against you. In your discussions with trusted friends strive to be open and frank.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Projects you classify as important should be given priority today. Don't veer off on other endeavors until you satisfactorily conclude what you undertake.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Second efforts are extremely important today if you hope to achieve your goals. Fire your reserve rockets if any obstacles start to bog you down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you're not satisfied with the status quo, this is a good day to start making adjustments. Plan your changes so that you control events instead of letting them control you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You should do better than usual today in developments that require some type of team effort for a partnership arrangement. What you have to offer could make the difference.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) What you determine to do today you're likely to do quite well because you'll take pride in your accomplishments. Your example may even inspire co-workers who lack your standards.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to arrange your agenda today so that you can enjoy recreational breaks without neglecting your responsibilities. If you use your smarts, you can balance your schedule.
