Area, National Unemployment Rates Are Dropping

From Staff and Wire Reports

The number of unemployed filing with Job Service of Florida in Seminole County during the month of November was down 15 percent from the previous month, according to Robert Monroe, Job Service economist in Orlando, while, the national employment picture showed a slight improvement in the last month in 1987 to bring unemployment to the lowest level since the late 1970s.

Monroe said the jobless rate in Seminole for November (the last month for which figures are available) was 4.3 percent. Of the local labor force of 153,318 there were 146,741 employed and 6,577 out of work.

Nationwide, job increases in the service, manufacturing and construction industries pushed national unemployment down 0.1 percent to 5.8 percent in December, the Labor Department said today.

Civilian employment rose by 325,000 jobs to 103.6 million last month, as measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' survey of establishments.

All figures were adjusted for seasonal variations.

The number of unemployed persons in December was 7 million, down from the levels of this past summer. The improvement, the department said, reflects a decline in the number of unemployed persons who lost their last job.

The number of workers who want to work but do not look for jobs because they believe they cannot get one declined to 900,000 in the fourth quarter of 1987. That is down 200,000 from a year ago and represents the lowest level since the final quarter of 1979. Women and blacks made up most of the discouraged workers.

There was little or no change last month in the jobless rates for adult men at 4.9 percent, adult women at 5.2 percent, teenagers at 16.1 percent, whites at 4.9 percent or blacks at 12.2 percent.

The unemployment rate for Hispanics fell to 8.1 percent from 9 percent, the department said.

Increases in jobs in business services totalled 35,000 and health services added 30,000 jobs to lead the 145,000 job boost in service industry jobs in December.

Wholesale trade added 20,000 jobs but retail trade employment was flat.

Employment in finance, insurance and real estate was unchanged in December.

Jobs in manufacturing continued to expand in December with 40,000 workers added to payrolls. In the past year, 400,000 factory jobs have been added, most of them in the past six months, as the nation's export industries took advantage of the fall in the value of the dollar, making U.S. goods cheaper abroad.

In December, job growth in machinery and electrical equipment accounted for half of manufacturing's increase.

Lottery: Minors Safe, Retailers Take Risk

Cost Of Tickets May Be Deductible

By Brad Church

Purchasers of Florida Lottery tickets, which go on sale Tuesday, shouldn't throw away the tickets, even if they don't have the right combination of figures to win the purchaser some money—the used tickets may authorize the buyers to a deduction on their federal income tax returns.

The Internal Revenue Service says the amount of money spent on purchasing lottery tickets is deductible on income tax returns—but only up to the amount the individual won through the lottery, or other gambling.

Although the state Lottery Department doesn't officially like to term the lottery gambling, that's what the Internal Revenue Service considers it, and wins and losses fall under the IRS rules on gambling wins and losses.

The IRS allows gambling loss deductions from income subject to tax, up to the amount won by gambling. The price of lottery tickets is considered by the IRS as a loss, so the amount spent over a period of a year is deductible.

Where Lottery Revenue Will Go

Minors Can Win But Can't Play ... What?

When Florida Lottery begins on Jan. 12, retailers participating in the game around the state will be held accountable for ensuring tickets aren't sold to anyone under 18 years old, even though it won't be illegal for minors to redeem tickets given to them.

Ed George, director of public information for the Florida Department of the Lottery, said that selling lottery tickets to minors will be considered a first degree misdemeanor and the law will be enforced throughout the state.

"You must be 18 to buy a ticket," George said. He added that everybody must comply with that aspect of game rules.

Even though it's illegal for a minor to buy tickets, George said there's nothing stopping anyone from purchasing them and then giving them to someone under age as a present.

"If Uncle Fred wins $5,000 and he wants to give it to his nephew Tommy as a present for college, he could definitely do that," he said.

Buying a lottery ticket and then giving it to a minor is a lot different than doing the same

Lottery Sales Probed

Some Tickets Already Sold

By Staff and Wire Reports

One Sanford retailer is among 12 lottery ticket outlets in Florida that allegedly have become lottery "sooners" by selling tickets before the official start date, according to reports lottery officials received Thursday.

But Zealene Hatcher, clerk for the 7-Eleven at 2700 W. 25th St., said Friday that lottery security checked the store's tickets Thursday afternoon and found no missing tickets.

Lottery spokeswoman Marnie Law said 10 Miami outlets and one Tampa outlet also were being investigated for selling instant winner cards before the Tuesday start date.

The marketing manager for the Sanford 7-Eleven, Jim Kelleher, also reportedly conducted his own search of the 20,000 tickets and found no broken cellophane packages or missing tickets.

Hatcher said the 7-Eleven's manager has had an information session to educate the store's employees on how and when to sell lottery tickets. She said she did not know the origin of the report that the store was selling tickets prematurely.

At 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, anxious bettors can begin purchasing cards. Until then, ticket agents who give dollar-eyed Floridians a head start can propagate their status as agents, officials said.

"There should be no misunderstanding that tickets should not be sold before Jan. 12," Law said, noting that the start date was well publicized on lottery posters and the contract. She said it was the responsibility of retailers to educate employees handling sales about the P's and Q's of selling.

Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Thursday that the reports of premature sales would be investigated on a case-by-case basis.

Paul had warned retailers that they could face sanctions if they

Sanford Woman Will Protest Treatment By Georgia Police

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford woman said she plans to file a written complaint with the mayor of a small Georgia community protesting treatment she received from several of the town's police officers when they stopped her for a traffic violation Tuesday.

Patricia Mergo, 25, said she was detained by police officers who treated her in a "snappy and cocky" manner, in Glennville Ga., for close to 40 minutes after she was stopped for a traffic violation for which she wasn't given a citation.

However, a Glennville city official said he was already looking into the matter, after he was informed of the incident by the Sanford Herald.

Mergo was born and raised in Sanford, but is now living in Tampa, where she's a senior at the University of South Florida Medical School. Her parents, Nicholas and Margaret Mergo, live at 124 Larkwood Drive, Sanford.

Mergo said she left Tampa at about 5 p.m. Tuesday for a Wednesday interview at the Augusta Medical College, in Augusta Ga. Mergo was applying for a residency position with the college's radiology department.

She driving her father's 1982 Lancia Zagato on the trip. The car, which was made in Italy, had a Florida license tag issued in Volusia County, according to Mergo.

While driving on U.S. Route 301 at approximately 11:15 p.m. Mergo said she decided to stop at a convenience store in Glennville, so she could phone her parents in Sanford. "It was their anniversary and I wanted to phone them then because I knew it would be too late by the time I got to my motel in Augusta," she said.

While she was talking to her mother on the phone Mergo said she saw a police car parked a block and a half down the street from her.

After finishing the call Mergo said she resumed her journey, but noticed the police car had pulled out behind her as she left the store.

"I just had a feeling they (the police officers) were following me, just waiting for me to do something wrong," she said.

"I also saw another police car traveling in front of me," Mergo said.

Shortly after she made a lane change the police car's blue lights came on signaling her to pull over, she said.

When she got out of her car to ask what was the matter, Mergo said she was told she was being stopped for changing lanes without using a turn indicator.

Mergo said she was stopped by the two officers in the car at approximately 11:30 p.m. "They kept me for at least 40 minutes from that point," she said.

Mergo said the two officers in the patrol car were joined by another officer from the car that

Terry Chosen As Interim Longwood Administrator

By Jane Canselberry
Herald Staff Writer

In a five-hour worksession Thursday night Longwood City Commissioners agreed that City Clerk Don Terry, who was temporarily assigned the duties of city administrator in an emergency ordinance after the resignation of Ron Waller Monday night, should serve as interim city administrator until a permanent replacement is appointed.

The emergency ordinance is only good for 61 days so a formal ordinance will be drawn up to allow Terry to be the acting city administrator for up to 120 days — the length of time the charter gives the city commission to find a replacement.

The city commission originally proposed hiring an outside consultant to act as interim city administrator, with Jeff Eichberger suggested as a prime candidate. However, because Eichberger is Commissioner Lynette Dennis' brother-in-law, this might be considered nepotism and the attorney advised against it. Eichberger was Dennis' campaign treasurer when she ran for office in 1986 and his wife managed the campaign for new Commissioner Richard Bullington.

Terry told the commission Thursday night that he had given the suggestion of hiring an outside consultant considerable thought and believes he can perform the duties of acting city administrator more efficiently than someone unfamiliar with Longwood, the members of the commission and the staff.

He recommended that the commission act quickly by allowing him to advertise for a replacement with the deadline for applications to be three weeks after the Florida League of Cities Municipal Record is distributed. He also asked approval for a committee of three consisting of former Sanford City Manager Pete Knowles, Phil Penland of Alachua County and one other area city manager if they agree to serve.

Terry also asked the commission to determine how many candidates they wish to interview.

Terry told the commissioners he is scheduled to interview the candidate recommended by the committee reviewing applications for the position of finance director today. Former Finance Director Barry Weeks resigned under fire in September and since then Mary Triplett, the city's occupational and business license clerk, has served as acting finance director.

Terry said he wants to select a new finance director quickly because he considers it an "urgent need."

Terry also said he will moved forward to hire a personnel director as quickly as possible. He said there are a large number of applications for the new position, which has been open since it was funded Oct. 1.

It was also the consensus of the commission to accept City Parks and Recreation Director Bill Goebel's suggestion that Longwood's share of a $7,953 block grant given Seminole County to benefit low income families be used to assist youths from low-income families in attending the city's Summer Fun Program. The county schools will identify the needy children.

The grant money can be used in the areas of housing, trans-

IN BRIEF

Court Tilts Search, Seizure Rules in Favor of State

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Florida Supreme Court has begun to tilt search and seizure rules in favor of police and prosecutors and away from criminal defendants.

The court ruled Thursday that a 1982 constitutional amendment requires Florida's standard on permissible search and seizures to follow federal case law, which has tended the last few years to favor law enforcement.

As part of its decision, it upheld a search warrant obtained after a Sarasota County air freight office discovered cocaine in a parcel and notified police. Authorities got the warrant, then arranged for Emory Air Freight to deliver the parcel.

Once the coke was delivered, police rushed in and arrested the couple who accepted it, Vickie and Bruce Bernie.

State To Appeal Canker Ruling

BARTOW (UPI) — A circuit court ruling that the state acted arbitrarily in destroying all the citrus plants at a nursery after a strain of citrus canker was discovered there will be appealed by the state.

Polk Circuit Judge J. Tim Strickland ruled in favor of Frostproof nurseryman Richard Polk Thursday, but delayed setting monetary damages to give the state time to exhaust its appeals, which Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Connor said will be done.

Polk sued the state to recover damages for the more than half-million plants he watched be destroyed. His attorney has estimated the loss at about $4 million.

Legislator Suspended From Practicing Law

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — House Speaker Pro Tempore James Burke says the Supreme Court's order temporarily banning him from practicing law in Florida will not damage his effectiveness as a legislator.

Burke, D-Miami, was suspended from practicing law Thursday for three months, following disciplinary action against him by the Florida Bar. As speaker pro tempore, Burke is the second-ranking member of the House and Florida's highest-ranking black legislator since Reconstruction.

"For 90 days it means I don't have to practice law so I can do a better job up here," Burke said.

Burke was suspended for violating several regulations guiding lawyers' behavior. He confessed to charges filed by a Bar hearing officer that he had failed to maintain complete records of funds he was holding for a client and that he failed to promptly turn those funds over to his client.

Burke also violated a Bar rule requiring him to maintain trust accounts of clients' money and prohibiting use of client funds for his own needs.

"What I did was, I put it (his clients' money) in the wrong account," Burke said. "I should have put it in a trust account, but I was running up here (to attend session in Tallahassee) so I just put it in People (his clients) kept calling, and I really wasn't responding to the call."

The hearing officer wrote that Burke had been guilty of "extremely shabby accounting procedures," but the officer found no intention to commit fraud.

Burke said he had been practicing alone at the time and was trying to balance his legal practice with his legislative duties. He has since joined a firm and hired an accountant to prevent any similar mistakes.

Court records showed a Miami court gave Burke a check for $8,380.60 for his clients, Ivette and Janet Alvarez, on Oct. 4, 1983. Burke cashed the check, but did not deposit in the trust account he maintains for client cash.

Burke then told the Alvarez's they had to wait 90 days after the court order was issued to receive their money. He later told them he was trying to clear up a 3 percent discrepancy in the award, further postponing award of the cash.

After two requests from the Alvarez's, Burke sent them a check for $6,567.35 on March 28, 1984. When they tried to cash the check two weeks later, they were told Burke did not have sufficient funds in his account. When they made a second attempt to deposit the check, it bounced.

Burke said he had sufficient funds to cover the check, and blamed bank error for the mishap. He was in Tallahassee for the Legislature when the check bounced, and did not meet with the Alvarez's until the session ended in June.

At that time, Burke learned the Alvarez's had filed a grievance with the Bar. On Aug. 7, 1984, the day of the grievance hearing.

Turlington Excluded From Lottery Kickoff

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Former Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington staked his reputation and personal money on the drive to legalize the Florida lottery, but he won't be participating in next week's kickoff ceremonies.

Turlington, 68, now retired from the state and a part-time consultant for American College Testing, said Thursday he was not invited by lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul to participate in the elaborate statewide ceremonies planned for Tuesday's commencement of the games.

Ed George, a Department of Lottery spokesman, says Turlington was invited. Shortly after UPI spoke with George, Turlington received a phone call from lottery officials telling him his invitation was "in the mail."

In any event, Turlington won't be participating in the "lottery launch celebrations," as Paul calls them. He won't even be in Florida. He will be attending an education conference in Iowa City, Iowa.

"No, I didn't have any invitation or notice," Turlington said.

"Ralph Turlington was invited to the opening ceremony. He got a special invitation."

George says. "I'm not sure if they were r.s.v.p.s. so I couldn't tell you whether he accepted or not."

Turlington announced in February 1985 he would not seek re-election to the Cabinet in the 1986 elections, but would lead a drive to propose an amendment creating a Florida lottery to generate additional money for public schools, colleges and universities.

He was denounced by the editorial boards of most major Florida newspapers. One daily demanded that he resign.

Cash for the signature drive was initially slow in coming in. Frank Mirabella, Turlington's chief aide in the Department of Education who resigned to run the lottery signature drive, says Turlington loaned the campaign $21,000 out of his own pocket at one point. The money was repaid several weeks later.

The Department of State certified in July 1986 Turlington had secured the necessary signatures to get his proposal on the ballot. The amendment was challenged in court and successfully defended by Mirabella and Turlington. It was adopted overwhelmingly by Florida voters during the November 1986 elections.

Ambushed By BB Shooter

A Sanford woman was shot with a BB gun Monday evening while she was jogging, according to Sanford police and rescue reports.

Lazona Bellamy, 27, of 512 Cypress Av., was shot in the buttocks. Rescue workers said the first layer of skin was broken.

Bellamy told police that she had been jogging in the area of Fifth Street and Cypress Avenue shortly after 7 p.m. She said she heard a shot, then felt pain, and realized she had been hit. At that time she also saw an older model Ford LTD turn the corner into Cypress Avenue, she said. Police have no suspects.

Immunization Lagging in U.S.

It was noted recently the progress UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, has made to enhance child survival and protect children from preventable disease by immunization. UNICEF's immunization push of the 1980s has now reached 50 percent of the developing world's children.

At the same time, U.S. leadership in the vaccination effort at home is floundering. According to information compiled by the Children's Defense Fund, the immunization rates of American children are stagnating overall and even declining for some crucial age groups.

That little scar on the upper arm of most Americans, product of a smallpox vaccination at age 6, is a symbol of this nation's commitment to preventing debilitating disease and saving children's lives. Now, we're letting down our guard. The report from the Children's Defense Fund notes that:

- Levels of immunization for preschool-age children generally worsened or showed no improvement between 1980 and 1985. For example, the proportion of children 1 to 4 years old receiving no doses of polio vaccine rose by 40 percent for children of all races and 80 percent for non-white children.

- During the period 1980-1985, the nation experienced a significant increase in the number of reported cases of measles, mumps and pertussis (commonly known as whooping cough).

- The more than 6,000 cases of measles reported in the United States in 1986 represented a dramatic rise since 1983. There were more cases in 1986 than in any year since 1980.

- In 1986, after 15 years of almost continuous decline, there was a nationwide increase in the reported number of cases of mumps. The number of reported cases for the first half of 1987 is more than four times the number reported for a comparable period in 1986.

- Surveillance of immunization status has been virtually eliminated. In 1985, the U.S. Immunization Survey was discontinued. The federal government has not collected any nationwide statistics for 1986 or 1987.

Obviously, government efforts to combat childhood diseases cost money, but they save money as well—not to mention lives. Experts estimate, for example, that every dollar spent on vaccination saves society $10.

Congress would be prudent to fully fund several childhood immunization programs already on the books. Congress also should enact legislation that would continue Medicaid coverage for the poorest 5-year-olds, permit immediate coverage of children younger than 5 living below the federal poverty level and raise the level of coverage for impoverished pregnant women and infants. Congress should restore our immunization surveillance system since other national health surveys don't provide adequate information regarding immunization status.

Congress, with encouragement from the Reagan administration, must act if we are to meet many of the surgeon general's 1990 Immunization Objectives for the nation, including goals for reductions in the incidence of measles, mumps, pertussis and tetanus. Without congressional action, we also risk falling short of the goal of having 90 percent of all children complete a basic series of immunizations by age 2.

There's no reason to fall short. It would be a cruel irony if the richest country on the planet, with the most advanced medical system, imperiled its own children through indifference and unconcern. We must be an example to the world of progress rather than retreat.

BERRY'S WORLD

CHUCK STONE

A Bush-Kean Ticket Could Be A Winner

A Republican friend of mine (I'm very ecumenical — some of my best friends are Republicans) was stunned a few days ago when I suggested that George Herbert Walker Bush might make a good president.

Whoa! My heresy doesn't portend any abandonment of liberal principles. Rather, a new year is always a good time to re-examine the logic of one's orthodoxy.

On paper, Bush is the strongest candidate in both parties. None of the others can match his diversity of public service and depth of experience. His eight years of vice presidential loyalty to president and party would seem to be a logical valedictory for promotion, although former occupants deride the office's importance. According to a fellow Texan and former vice president, John Nance Garner, the office "isn't worth a pitcher of warm spit."

Except when the office infrequently elevates its occupant to the presidency.

And that's Bush's most formidable obstacle — the odds of history. Of 40 presidencies, only 12 have been filled by vice presidents who succeeded the presidents they served.

To overcome those odds, Bush must do four things:

1. Hold on to a demographic hodgepodge of Midwestern middle-of-the-roads, Western conservatives, Southern whites, Northeastern yuppies, disenchanted Democrats, enchanted right-wingers and moral majoritarians that Ronald Reagan put together by sheer dint of personal magnetism, perfected by his years on the Hollywood screen.

2. Prove he is his own man without denying he was Reagan's man for eight years.

3. Try to continue being the decent person he is without being labeled a wimp by the high priests of Toryism — Richard Viguerie and George Will.

4. Remain faithful to the conservative catchment, but signal the need for a new direction.

When Bush announced his candidacy, he called for a new direction, "a new harmony ... among the races in our country." By implication, he seemed to be saying that there has been an old discord among the races during the Reagan administration.

Before a nearly all-white audience in Houston,

Bush deplored "the sadness of racial tension in America," which "should have ended completely by now ... We must finally leave the tired old baggage of bigotry behind us."

Now, that's strong egalitarian medicine for the heartland of conservatism, and goes beyond what any of the other candidates have said. And few would have faulted Bush if he had avoided specific mention of race in his promised era of "the new harmony."

Should Bush be nominated, who would be his logical running mate?

The answer depends on whether his party's conservative wing first accepts him as their heir apparent.

If that happens, he will have the flexibility to balance the ticket — ideologically and geographically. New Jersey Gov. Tom Kean would complement Texan Bush nicely.

As a liberal Republican governor of a Northeastern state, Kean accomplished the near-impossible feat of garnering 60 percent of the black vote. By factoring the black vote into his constituency, he is laying a new groundwork for the Republican Party's future.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thanks in large part to an ad-hoc group that approved the idea, your U.S. senator may be working a five-day week this year.

When he's in town, that is.

In the past, the Senate generally has followed the Tuesday-Wednesday-Thursday-Thursday regimen worked out by the House. Under informal rules of the notorious Tuesday-Thursday Club, meaningful votes were taken only during the middle of the week.

This meant a congressman could safely visit the home district for a long weekend without missing anything important.

But this year, according to Sen. Daniel Evans, R-Wash., a member of the special-purpose group, the Senate will be geared to a Monday-through-Friday routine.

After Congress returns Jan. 25 from its Christmas recess, naturally.

It will be interesting to see how the new schedule fits in with the rest of the year.

Under a calendar adopted earlier for the second session of the 100th Congress, the Senate will not meet for a week in February due to Washington's birthday celebration.

The balance of the year, I regret to report, will be equally exhausting. Hardly a month goes by without some celebration, leading up to the August recess when the Senate will take the rest of the summer off.

Final adjournment, also known as "sine die," which may be the only Latin words many senators are familiar with, is penciled in for Oct. 8.

Fortunately, however, Labor Day happens before that, so senators will have six days to rest up before facing the rigors of another prolonged period crammed with Latin.

This schedule, I hardly need remind you, is highly tentative. The first session of the 100th Congress ran well into Christmas week before the die-hard assembly was recessed until Jan. 25.

I don't need to tell you what the boss would say if you took off until Jan. 25 to recuperate from Christmas. You know the boss as well as I do.

However, the boss's reaction, carefully couched in Latin phrases, might be the same as if you, a valued employee, took off almost a week to recover from the Labor Day festivities.

It probably is good that senators will not be overworked this year. Some of them are getting on in years, and need all the time off they can get.

Public Servants Scarce

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a presidential election coming up in November, the candidates may or may not be thinking ahead to the time when, if victorious, they must select hundreds of qualified persons to run the government.

Inevitably, there will be the payoffs to the campaign faithful who helped win the White House. They will divide the federal pie for the top jobs, and there will be a massive housecleaning whether the new president is Republican or Democrat.

If the winning candidate is a Republican there is a chance that some of the political appointees serving President Reagan may remain. But there is no assurance that the newcomers, or even holdovers, have learned the lessons of the past.

Public service can be the crown of a career. Instead, some men and women, who backed the winning candidate, have shown that they believe it is a place where they can feather their own nests, learn a bit from the inside and then go on to command high salaries outside government.

Reagan has not discouraged this view and has always stressed that he does not expect his appointees to stay in government more than two years, and certainly understood when they decided to quit for more lucrative jobs, capitalizing on their service in the White House, the Cabinet or key agencies.

A public-private careers study sponsored by the John F. Kennedy School of Government has found there is a "quiet crisis of public service."

The manifestations, it said, include "declining interest on the part of young people in government careers; a socially accepted emphasis on private gain, ambition and success; a dispirited, undernourished, and aging civil service; and indifference toward the problems of public service by the leaders of American society."

"While some of these problems may be cyclical and, in a sense, self-correcting, others are not," according to the study.

Former White House counsel Fred Fielding and Lloyd Cutler were co-chairmen of a task force on ethics in government issues that included aspects of public service.

Fielding, ironically, apparently approved the qualifications of many of the Reagan administration appointees who had to be ousted from government jobs under a cloud.

Most of the appointees were picked because they had supported Reagan politically, and for that they wound up heading agencies on the environment, energy, health and human services and other critical fields affecting all Americans. That they lacked qualifications for the roles they were playing is an understatement.

The panel studying the problem of public service suggested that funds be provided newly elected presidents in the transitional period for personnel planning.

It said 80 percent of presidential appointees receive no orientation of any kind at the time their appointments begin. It recommended speedy FBI checks on incoming officials, and offered suggestions on simplifying the financial disclosure statements government officials are required to file annually.

In addition, civil penalties and administrative remedies were recommended for abuses and violations of ethics laws on grounds that there has been too much reliance on criminal standards and penalties.

Artificial Blood Vessels

By Delphia Richs
UPI Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Chemists are attempting to modify the surface of certain plastics with the hope of developing advanced "bionic" materials that ultimately can be used as implantable blood vessels.

Experiments under way at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico join a growing repertoire of potential uses of plastic to replace malfunctioning physiological systems.

Recent developments include plastic hearts, ventricles, an artificial knee and portions of inner ear implants that electronically zap sound impulses to the ear's cochlea, the small coiled bone of the inner ear, which then transmits them to the auditory nerve and on to the brain.

The new work with artificial blood vessels could have applications for heart bypass surgery patients if scientists can figure out how to make plastics adaptable to the complex human circulatory system.

"The benefit of having artificial blood vessels immediately available in emergencies is obvious," said Los Alamos chemist Diane Wroblewski, but she also acknowledges that "small, synthetic vessels that do not close or cause the blood to clot" are still several years down the road.

Wroblewski and her team face the same formidable challenges that have plagued manufacturers of artificial hearts, when blood comes in contact with any artificial surface it tends to clot, a critical condition that can block circulatory pathways. Guarding against the obstructions is important because clots can lead to heart attacks and strokes.

Recent studies at the University of Pittsburgh showed that a test group of Jarvik-7 artificial heart recipients fared poorly because of infections and severe clotting associated with the mechanical pump. The human body does not reject an artificial material as it would a transplanted human organ, but instead develops clots at the point of connection between the body and the artificial material. The clots then enter the circulatory system.

Wroblewski hopes to sidestep the clotting problem by altering the surfaces of plastics in ways that would reduce chances of blood adversely reacting with the artificial material.

Los Alamos scientists are experimenting with a process called chemical infusion to modify the surface of plastics, while not changing the material's basic properties.

Land Appraisers Need Regulating

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — There is increasing evidence that the unregulated real estate appraisal industry is a major contributor to bank failures and a growing threat to the U.S. financial system.

Before a person can become a barber, a plumber or an electrician, most states require some test of competency. It goes without saying that other professionals such as doctors and engineers must be licensed.

Yet in most states, an appraiser can hang out a shingle with no questions asked.

Billions of dollars in real estate loans and investments are made every year, and the appraisal plays a key role. From the $100 million commercial real estate deal to the $100,000 home mortgage to the sale of millions of dollars of mortgage-backed securities, at some point, a real estate appraiser decides how much each deal is worth. The appraisal determines the value of the property that will be collateral for the loan.

Lenders and investors expect the appraiser to give them the right value. If the borrower defaults on the loan, the lender expects that the property will be worth enough to cover the outstanding debt.

Through stupidity or deliberate fraud, an appraiser can overvalue a piece of real estate. For example, a person taking out a second mortgage on a home qualifies for a much bigger loan if the appraiser inflates the home's value. The stakes are bigger in multimillion-dollar real estate deals. In both cases, the lender is left holding three pounds of flour in a five-pound sack.

As vital as appraisals are — most lenders will not lend without one — anyone can perform them in more than 40 states without having to show any competency or obtain any certification.

The performance of the appraisal industry has come under intense scrutiny by the House Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee. The first skeletons were discovered in an investigation into bank and savings and loan failures and the role of insider misconduct in those collapses.

A dramatic number of faulty and fraudulent appraisals were found in the real estate loan portfolios of nearly every failed and failing institution.

The faulty appraisals "were used to fool bank examiners," according to Doug Barnard, D-Ga., chairman of the subcommittee. "They were used to make a dangerous or even fraudulent real estate loan appear secure by having in the loan file an appraisal which assigns an unrealistically high market value to the property collateralizing the loan," he said.

Late last year, the subcommittee prepared a major report. That report, reviewed by our associate Michael Binstein, concluded that "faulty and fraudulent real estate appraisals have become an increasingly serious national problem whose effects are widespread, pervasive and costly. Abusive appraisals have contributed to the insolvency of hundreds of the nation's financial institutions and have helped cause billions of dollars in losses to mortgage lenders, private mortgage insurers, investors in mortgage-backed securities and to those that administer the Federal Deposit Insurance funds."

Barnard has introduced legislation that would create a new Federal Interagency Appraisal Council to write uniform appraisal standards and appraiser certification requirements.

No. 12 Nevada-Las Vegas shot 38 percent from the field and hit only 2 of 10 3-point attempts Thursday night against Cal-Santa Barbara - and that was before they went cold.
The Runnin' Rebels deteriorated to 30 percent shooting and hit only 1 of 7 from 3-point range in the second half, and lost their 21-game Pacific Coast Athletic Association winning streak with a 62-60 defeat to the Gauchos.

Basketball

Gauchos' man-to-man defense denied UNLV from getting a shot in the last 21 seconds until Jarvis Basnight's off-balance outside shot at the buzzer fell short.
"We ran the wrong play," Tarkanian said. "We had something set up for Jarvis Basnight. We just ran the wrong play."
Basnight finished with 16 points.

Basketball

Melvin Newbern added 18.
At Ames, Iowa, Jeff Grayer scored 35 points and Lafater Rhodes added 29 to power Iowa State, 12-2, who have not scored a 3-point goal in a victory this season. Joel Berry scored 26 points for Grambling, 2-10.
In a Sun Belt Conference game, at Tampa, Fla., Bernard Royster hit a layup with two seconds remaining to cap a 9-point comeback in the final minute and lift Old Dominion to a 78-77 triumph over South Florida.

Olajuwon Outduels Sampson

United Press International
Akeem Olajuwon, facing former teammate Ralph Sampson for the first time, showed who was the more valuable of the Twin Towers.
Olajuwon scored 30 points and grabbed 20 rebounds Thursday night to guide the Houston Rockets to a 120-113 triumph over the Golden State Warriors. Sampson, who was traded to the Warriors Dec. 12, scored 14 points and grabbed 14 rebounds.
The trade of Sampson broke up the vaunted Rockets frontline of the 7-foot-4 Sampson and 7-foot Olajuwon. Sampson, who wanted to play center instead of forward as he did with the Rockets, was completely shut down in the second half against his old team, taking only four shots.
"I did not see the ball in the fourth period," Sampson said. "That is something we have to correct. I might have to start exerting myself and calling for the ball in the fourth period."

Effective Treatment Of Adrenal Disease

DEAR DR. GOTT - My doctor has told me I have adrenoleukodystrophy. The prognosis is pretty grim, but I'd like more information about the disease.

DEAR READER - The leukodystrophies are a group of uncommon diseases characterized by the loss or malfunction of myelin, the insulating material that covers nerves. The adrenal form is associated with failure of the adrenal glands, vital organs that produce hormones needed by the body.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I went to a new doctor, who said that my blood pressure was too high. I told him that maybe having to wait 45 minutes past my appointment time might have contributed to the problem.

DEAR READER - Either this is a new twist in the game of medical avarice or your doctor has an extremely dry sense of humor. I think that doctors who seriously behave this way are letting their wallets get in the way of good sense and common courtesy.

DEAR DR. GOTT - My granddaughter, 14, is 6 feet 2. Could her rapid growth be detrimental to her health?

DEAR READER - Your granddaughter's rapid growth is not likely to be detrimental to her health. Unquestionably, she is tall for her age. I believe that she, like other teenagers, should have periodic examinations by a pediatrician or family doctor to evaluate her growth rate and general state of health.

DEAR DR. GOTT - Fifty years ago I had some form of hepatitis. I've refrained from giving blood or signing an organ-donor card. Am I being overly cautious?

DEAR READER - I think that you are probably being overly cautious. In a situation like this, you should seek advice from

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Good declarers share one important bit of knowledge about playing slam contracts. They know that it's right to postpone the "moment of truth."

One easy way to make the slam is to find the king of diamonds in the West hand. If it is onside, you can win the ace of spades, finesse to dummy's queen of diamonds and pitch your spade loser on the diamond ace.

dummy with a trump to lead the diamond 10, intending a ruffing finesse against the jack. What if East plays low on the diamond queen? Then you shed a spade. Although West may take the king, he cannot cash a spade against you, and later you can take another diamond finesse against the hoped-for jack in the East hand.

That's how Careful Charlie approached the problem. However, when West won the king of diamonds and played a second spade, Charlie saw an extra chance. He ruffed the spade, picked up the defenders' trumps, and then, before leading from dummy's diamond 10-9 to take a ruffing finesse against the jack, he cashed K-A of clubs. When the club queen dropped doubleton, Charlie no longer needed to take a second diamond play.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bode Osof YOUR BIRTHDAY JANUARY 9, 1988

In the year ahead, you will discover new ways to liberate yourself from situations that tied you down in the past. Your possibilities for success will be greatly enhanced when you start moving more freely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be too hasty about committing yourself today, or you may agree to do something you haven't thought through and later regret your impulsiveness. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, you might hear some information that could cause you to question the sincerity of a pal of long standing. The source won't be reliable. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't yield too readily today to the judgment of another regarding an issue of mutual concern. Your assessment could be more accurate. ARIES (March 21-April 19) People with whom you'll be involved in an endeavor today might not place as high a value on it as you do. Be watchful so that it isn't handled improperly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your judgment in most circumstances will be quite good today. The exception could be in ventures that have strong elements of chance. Avoid risks. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's better not to make any promises at all today than to promise your mate one thing and then disappoint him or her by delivering something entirely different.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today, yet you might not follow them. There's a possibility you'll use a watered down and less effective version.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A business matter in which you are involved may not be locked up as securely as you think. If you start getting careless, it could be costly. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Personal interests may not be advanced as rapidly as you'd like today, due to restrictions foisted on you by people with whom you'll associate. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone you've treated with great consideration in the past may not show you the same consideration today when he or she is given the opportunity to reciprocate. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's best not to let intermediaries do things for you today that you are capable of doing for yourself. Their results could displease you. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be a trifle too impatient for your own good today. Don't attempt to achieve an important objective before all of your forces are properly marshalled.

It's A Way Of Life A Sport Reserved For Youth

Skateboarders are "good skates," despite the negative image that sometimes rubs off on the majority thanks to a few bad kids.

Marshall "Fonzie" Diamantara and Donnie Hibbard, two 16-year-olds who say skateboarding is their life, said it's good, clean fun and worth the risk of broken bones, bruises and cuts.

These Sanford youths have been skateboarding for about three years and both have skateways set up at their homes, with concrete runs and ramps. Although skateboarding takes up most of their spare time, these Seminole High School juniors said that it doesn't always keep them at home.

"It gets boring to stay in the same place all the time. We like to move around," Hibbard said. So they skate at various locations for a change of scenery and to join in with other skaters. They also compete with other skaters in official meets.

But mainly, the challenge is in mastering the board, learning to perform tricks, while keeping the body intact. Balance is a key. "You start out easy, rolling down the driveway and jumping off at the end. Gradually you get better if you keep it up," Hibbard said.

"There's the whole attitude of skating. It gets you to the point of living to skate. It's my whole life. It's adventurous. It's thrilling and intriguing. It's outstanding. It's kind of like surfing, but when you fall it's on concrete, not water," Diamantara said.

And he has fallen again and again in developing his style. Injuries are part of the game, and Hibbard said the thrill of riding the board is worth the pain. He has "lots of scabs," and has spilled a lot of his own blood on concrete, but is philosophical. "You're going to get hurt in almost anything you do."

"People think we're crazy doing what we do," Diamantara said. "You have to know how to fall."

But in practicing his fall he has broken his wrist in two places, had stitches in his hand, had his breath knocked out of him for two minutes and suffered amnesia for 20 minutes after suffering a concussion. That's in addition to the scar tissue that marks multiple injuries to his knees and elbows.

"The fun outweighs the injuries. I broke my wrist and the next day I was back on my board. It's like an addiction, like cigarettes. But most skaters are against smoking, drugs and drinking, except for a few bad ones.

"It doesn't hurt. The excitement outweighs everything. Even after a fight with parents it gets rid of anger and aggression. It's like Tylenol with wheels," Diamantara said.

Skateboarders can outfit themselves with knee and elbow pads as well as a helmet. But, generally Diamantara and Hibbard shun this safety gear, which they said is handy if you're trying to master a new trick.

There are two types of skateboarding, street and ramp.

"Street is the most fun. You make up your own tricks," Diamantara said. When ramp skating, skaters follow a series of established routines — with spins and turns, and with some moves made with a handgrip on the board.

Diamantara said skating is 95 percent of his life, with the remaining time devoted to a girlfriend. Hibbard said skating is 99 percent of his time, with the remainder devoted to dealing with his parents.

"The only thing that will ruin it for you is rain, unless you're sick. And then you might lie in your bed with your feet on an old deck (the board base of a skate board)," Diamantara said.

As skateboarders, the pair said they have to face flack from police and other officials and non-skaters, who only see the negative side of this sport, which is primarily the game of boys. Despite their youth, Diamantara and Hibbard said they don't believe their interest will fade with age, even though their abilities may decrease. "I'll always like it even if I can't do it," Diamantara said. "It's neat to watch."

There is an attitude that skateboarders adopt, and it's set in part by the "hard core, new wave," music that blares in accompaniment the roar of the boards. Shorts and high-top sneakers are generally the costume of skaters, who may add a cap, but who often are shirtless.

The hot colors of the boards are often repeated by skaters in drawings and writings on the ramps they ride on. This can lead to conflict if the artistic skaters deface public property and that helps lead to the negative image of skateboarders, Diamantara said.

"Skateboarding is not a crime. I haven't seen it in the penal codes, but it probably will be by 1992. Big Brother will say, 'you have two seconds to dismount from your skateboard,'" Diamantara said.

One of his favorite groups to listen to while skating is the "Dead Kennedy's, which he said has politicized him and confirmed his belief that the important thing is for "people to get along and for there to be world peace.

"The whole attitude is everybody should just be nice to each other, skaters or not. Get to know the person. Bring peace to the world. This nuclear bomb crap has got to go," he said, and then rolled off on a little wooden, wheel-borne board valued at about $160.

Film And Television Golden Globe Nominees Named

By Russell Kishi

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — "Broadcast News," "The Last Emperor" and "Moonstruck" topped all other films with five nominations each from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for its 45th annual Golden Globe Awards.

Among the television programs honored Tuesday were NBC's series "L.A. Law," with six nominations, followed by ABC's "Moonlighting" and NBC's "Golden Girls" both earning four nominations.

NBC led the networks with 27 nominations, while CBS had 17 and ABC trailed with 15. Fox Broadcasting Co. and the Showtime Cable Network each netted one, but the Public Broadcasting Service received none.

In the movie category, "Cry Freedom," "Dirty Dancing," and "Fatal Attraction" each received four nominations, while three each went to "Nuts" and "Baby Boom."

"Broadcast News" was nominated for best movie musical or comedy; best performance by an actress in a movie musical or comedy, Holly Hunter; best performance by an actor, William Hurt; best screenplay and best director, James L. Brooks.

"The Last Emperor" was nominated for best drama; best performance by an actor in a movie drama, John Lone; best director, Bernardo Bertolucci; best screenplay, Mark Peploe and Bertolucci; and best original score.

"Moonstruck" was nominated for best movie musical or comedy; best performance by an actress in a movie musical or comedy, Cher; best performance by an actress in a supporting role in a movie, Olympia Dukakis; best performance by an actor in a movie musical or comedy, Nicolas Cage; and best screenplay, John Patrick Shanley.

Other nominees in the best movie musical or comedy category were "Baby Boom," "Dirty Dancing" and "Hope and Glory."

Best movie drama nominees were "Cry Freedom," "Fatal Attraction," "Empire of the Sun," "La Bamba" and "Nuts."

In addition to Lone, actors

Bernardo Bertolucci

nominated for best performance in a movie drama were Michael Douglas for his performance in "Wall Street," Jack Nicholson in "Ironweed," Nick Nolte in "Weeds" and Denzel Washington for "Cry Freedom."

Nominated for best performance by an actress in a movie drama were Glenn Close for "Fatal Attraction," Faye Dunaway for "Barfly," Sally Kirkland for "Anna," and Rachel Levin for "Gaby — A True Story."

The awards ceremony, to be held Jan. 23 at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, will be televised live in Los Angeles, Atlanta and Las Vegas over a syndicated network and tape-delayed for the rest of the country.

The Golden Globes often reflect the voting for the Academy Awards, which will announce its 60th annual nominations Feb. 17, with presentation set for April 11.

"L.A. Law" was nominated for best television series drama and earned nominations for Susan Dey and Jill Eikenberry for best performance by an actress in a television series drama.

Harry Hamlin and Michael Tucker of "L.A. Law" were both nominated for best performance by an actor in a television series drama while Alan Rachins was nominated for best performance by an actor in a supporting role in a series, mini-series or motion picture made for TV.

Other best dramatic television series nominations went to CBS's "Beauty and the Beast," CBS's "Murder, She Wrote," NBC's "St. Elsewhere," ABC's

"thirtysomething," and NBC's "A Year in the Life."

In addition to Brooks and Bertolucci, best movie director nominations went to Richard Attenborough for "Cry Freedom," John Boorman for "Hope and Glory" and Adrian Lyne for "Fatal Attraction."

Best foreign film nominations went to France and Germany's "Au Revoir Les Enfants," the Italian-Soviet production "Dark Eyes," France's "Jean de Florette," Sweden's "My Life as a Dog," and the Soviet Union's "Repentance."

Norma Aleandro was tapped as a possible best supporting actress in a movie for "Gaby — A True Story," along with Anne Archer for "Fatal Attraction," Anne Ramsey for "Throw Momma from the Train" and Vanessa Redgrave for "Prick Up Your Ears."

The list for best supporting actor in a movie included Sean Connery for "The Untouchables," Richard Dreyfuss for "Nuts," Lee Erney for "Full Metal Jacket," Morgan Freeman for "Street Smart," and Rob Lowe for "Square Dance."

Was That 'Law' Star The 'Ties' Star?

Dear Dick: My girl friend and I have a bet. She tells me that Michele Greene (Abby on "L.A. Law") also plays Ellen, Alex' old girl friend on "Family Ties." I disagree. What's the truth? — Unsigned, Houston.

Dear Unsigned: Good disagreeing. Tracey Pollan played Ellen — she and Michael J. Fox are romantically involved off-screen as well as on. Michele Greene was on "Bay City Blues" before "L.A. Law."

Dear Dick: On "General Hospital," one of the prisoner's names is Sharp. He reminds me of an actor from years ago named John Kerr, although this guy is heavier. If it's not John Kerr, could you tell me what he is doing now? — Mrs. R.J., Frankville, Wis.

Dear Mrs. R.J.: According to the "General Hospital" people, they've never had a character named Sharp, but whoever you have in mind, it wasn't John Kerr. That fine actor left show business and studied law. He is now an attorney practicing in San Francisco.

Dear Dick: Some five years ago, there was a TV movie with Hal Holbrook and, if I remember correctly, Katharine Ross. He played a rich man with a heart problem. She was his unfaithful wife who, together with her lover, developed a plan to do him in. What was the name of this wonderful suspense film, and will it be on again? — Mrs. C.K., Mesa, Ariz.

Dear Mrs. C.K.: That was "Murder By Natural Causes," with Holbrook, Miss Ross and Richard Anderson and Barry Bostwick. It was first shown in 1979 and could pop up on a late show sometime. It is also available on cassette.

Dear Dick: I'm a big Monkees fan! Their show had a woman, Mrs. Quagmire, played by Patrice Wymore. When I saw that name, I freaked out since I have the same first name. Can you tell me anything about her? — P.E.P., Sharpsville, Pa.

Dear P.E.P.: Patrice Wymore, now 62, was in many films in the '50s — "Tea For Two" and "She's Back On Broadway," among others. She was a nightclub singer and dancer. Wymore is most famous for being Errol Flynn's third and last wife. She inherited his Jamaica estate and lives there. Incidentally, there has been another famous Patrice — the lovely opera star Patrice Munsel.

Dear Dick: Where is Jim Nabors, and what is he doing now? — M.A.W., Baginaw, Mich.

Dear M.A.W.: He does some singing from time to time, but primarily he leads the good life. He lives in Hawaii, owns large macadamia nut plantations, and is very well fixed. I visited him on my last trip to Hawaii. He is one star who took care of his money, when he made it, and knows how to live well.

Dear Dick: We've been trying to remember the name that Pat Harrington had on "One Day At a Time." — J.V., Jefferson City, Tenn.

Dear J.V.: Pat Harrington played a character named Dwayne Schneider.

Dear Dick: Some time ago, you had a question about the origin of the nickname, "The Big Apple," for New York. I have also read a theory that it was derived from some New Yorker who thought New York was the Garden of Eden, and therefore called it The Big Apple. Just thought you should know. — L.P., Boston, Mass.

Dear L.P.: Thanks, but I'll stick with what my research dug up, that it is a musician's term for the most important gig, but I have also read an article by Alex Constantino in The New York Hotel Magazine that has several other possible explanations for the term: (1) years ago, "apple" was a term for any big city, and New York was the biggest city, hence "The Big Apple"; (2) there was a very popular dance called "The Big Apple" and the name for the city comes from that; (3) it's a corrupt translation of the Spanish term, "manzana principal," which refers to a city block and was used to designate a downtown area (the literal translation would be "main apple").

Dear Dick: Did Lionel or Ethel Barrymore have any children? — H.E., Racine, Wis.

Dear H.E.: Yes, both of them did. Lionel named his daughter Ethel Barrymore II. Ethel, married to Russell Colt, had three children — Samuel, Ethel and John Drew Colt, known as Jackie.

Iran-Contra Scandal Top TV Story Of '87

NEW YORK (UPI) — The three television networks gave more than twice as much evening news time to the Iran-Contra arms scandal than to any other story in 1987, a computer-based report said Tuesday.

The story of presidential politics was in second place, followed by the Supreme Court nominations, the summit and other arms talks, and AIDS.

The statistics were compiled by DWJ Associates, a public relations firm specializing in video news releases, which for the last three years has kept a computerized database of every evening news story and its running time.

The Iran-Contra story, which also was the 1986 winner, ran up a three network total of 1,643 minutes — 593 minutes on ABC, 562 minutes on CBS and 488 minutes on NBC.

The second biggest evening news story, politics, took up a total of 623 minutes, with 209 minutes each on both CBS and ABC and 205 minutes on NBC.

Gary Hart received three times more of that network time than any of the other candidates — a three-network total of 132 minutes, compared to 43 minutes for Sen. Joe Biden's aborted campaign and 32 minutes for Pat Robertson.

The Supreme Court follies — the nominations of Robert Berk, Douglas Ginsburg and Anthony Kennedy — ranked third with 561 minutes, and the arms talk and Washington summit was fourth with 442 minutes.

AIDS was the fifth most reported evening news story, taking up 387 minutes of network time.

The three networks were in agreement on the top five stories of the year, but varied somewhat in the second half of the top 10. In sixth to tenth place, by three-network totals, were terrorism, deficits, the Persian Gulf War, South Africa and the stock market.

By Joan Hanner
UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Harry Morgan currently is appearing in his 11th television series.

That may be some kind of record for sheer tenacity in a business that uses and discards actors like they were used Kleenex.

"I can't believe it myself," Morgan said in an interview just before his syndicated sitcom, an updated version of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman stage classic, "You Can't Take It With You," finished shooting for the season.

His first series was "December Bride," if you don't count his hosting duties on 1952's "Draw to Win."

"December Bride" ran from 1954 to 1961 and starred Spring Byington as the world's most lovable mother-in-law. He was so well-liked on that show as neighbor, Pete Porter, who couldn't stand his own ma-in-law, that he was spun off into his own series, "Pete and Gladys," which ran from 1960-62.

"That was a lot of fun," Morgan said of "Bride." "Those really were pioneering days. We did it with three cameras and an audience, and a limited set — a kitchen-dining room and once in a while we would swing the set to the bedroom.

"Spring was absolutely perfect in the role. She was a theosophist, you know. You would start talking to her and in about five minutes you didn't know what the hell she was talking about. It was type casting and she was really a lovely woman.

"She was hitting pretty close to 70 then and the way we would shoot, with the lighting very flat, was not flattering at all — and she still looked maybe 40 in some shots. She was just beautiful and I have some very fond memories of that show."

His favorite, which will surprise no one, is "M-A-S-H," in which Morgan played Col. Sherman Potter from 1975 until the series went off the air in 1983.

Comparing his role of Grandpa Vanderhof in "You Can't Take It With You" to Col. Potter, he said he plays both men as comparatively youthful. Certainly he played Potter much younger than his own age — he will be 73 this year.

"Col. Potter was not supposed to be as old as I actually was or he'd have been out of the army," Morgan said. "There is a great similarity between the two men, but Potter had more freedom because he was dealing mainly with a bunch of men — except occasionally with Hotlips and some of the nurses. Grandpa is a lot softer character than Potter."

The reason the characters are so much alike is that, as Morgan said, "they are coming off my own personality."

"I don't care what you play," Morgan added, "you can't get too far away from that. You'd like to, but it's not possible."

"I think I've disguised it more than an awful lot of people or I wouldn't have done so many series over the last 30 odd years."

For Morgan, there is life after series television. There are his wife and 11 grandchildren — eight grandkids of his own and three of his wife's — and the possibility of his doing another "Dragnet" movie since, as he said, "the first one grossed about $60 million." For those who don't remember or watch re-runs, Morgan played Jack Webb's sidekick in the TV series from 1967-1970.

There also are the commercials he and other "M-A-S-H" veterans do for IBM, and one really ambitious project he is considering.

"I'd like to do a one-man show based on H.L. Mencken," he said, referring to the Baltimore newspaperman, columnist and world class cynic.

"Mencken has his drawbacks — during World War I he was pro-German and very anti-Semitic — most people don't know that and we wouldn't go into that. There were enough other things he had opinions about. But I don't know if I can do it physically, or if I can memorize all that."

It's not easy to find interesting people who haven't already been pre-empted, as have Harry Truman, who Morgan himself once played in the mini-series "Backstairs at the White House," and Teddy Roosevelt, Mark Twain, Will Rogers, and Clarence Darrow, played by Henry Fonda.

"Fonda was a good friend of mine," Morgan reminisced. "The second show I ever did that I got paid for was with Fonda — 'The Virginian' in Westport, Conn. That was 1937 — more than 50 years ago."

"It seems like yesterday. Well, anyway, last week."

Tommy told his partner, Maxine, that he's giving Donna legitimate modeling work now, but that he's sure Donna will soon be posing for sleazy photos. Stephanie was amused that Ridge, Caroline, Thorne and Brooke were all trapped in the Forrester ski cabin during a snow storm. Ridge gave Margo a passionate kiss after telling her he canceled his Switzerland ski trip plans because she wouldn't go with him.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Melissa admitted to Jack (Billy) that she loves him, but she insisted that she didn't try to poison Kayla. Diana and Roman made love. Jo was happy for Adrienne, who suspects that she might be pregnant. After escaping from Roman, Diana flapped out to overhear Serena and Victor talking about the fact that Serena really is a crook. Eve rebuffed Frankie and Jennifer's plans to go skating together and then "convinced" Frankie, who thought Jennifer stood him up. Ethan admitted to Collage that he had his Kentucky home to avoid being the groom in a shotgun wedding. Justin presided over the ground-breaking ceremony for a new clinic, but secretly felt guilty that he was responsible for burning down the old clinic. Gabrielle kept mum when Eve said that she's upset that she'll never have a real mother. Kimberly dreads the day that Shane will want Eve to live with them again. Bill and Janie reconnected.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

"The Snowman" turned out to be former mental patient Grant Putnam, who is out to get revenge against Robert, Alan, Edward and Quentin who were stunned when Cheryl followed Autumn's instructions and gave each of them a share of Autumn's inheritance from Herbert. Duke kept it a secret from Anna that Jerome's men are putting pressure on him to kill Carruthers. Filomena unwittingly thwarted Grant's attempt to kidnap Robin. A jealous Monica poured a bottle of champagne on Alan when he introduced her to Cheryl, who had turned Alan's failed attempt to make money on the stock market into a profit-making venture. Scotty successfully recovered himself when Terry caught him with a letter that Jake had sent Bobbi. Simone's father was livid that she accepted Tom's marriage proposal, but Audrey and Steve approved of the impending nuptials. Robert received another note from "The Snowman."
