Japanese Competition

The problems which Japan is presenting the world are not confined alone to the Chinese situation, the "open door" policy, and treaty rights. What is bothering American manufacturers more than anything else is the fact that Japan is underselling them in the world markets, is rapidly taking their trade away from them and leaving them with a surplus of goods on their hands.

Japan is able to do this because the people of that country have a very low standard of living. Aided by a mild climate, the Japanese are comfortable in cheap, poorly constructed houses. Their tastes are simple. They seem to have little desire for furniture, automobiles, or radios. Even their food is very simple and inexpensive.

This fact coupled with the highly organized system of mass production which the Japanese have developed to a fine degree, enables them to sell and still make a profit at much lower costs than is possible in other countries. Not more than fifteen or twenty industrial groups, controlled and managed by an even fewer number of families, own all the industries on the islands. The same family which buys cotton in the United States, also owns the boats which bring it to Japan, the banks which finance the purchase, the railroads which carry it to the mills, and the factories which turn it into cloth and goods for export purposes. One modest profit is all that is necessary for the entire operation.

But these things have always been true of Japan while it is only in the last year or two that Japan has presented so serious a menace to the export trade of other nations. The figures show that during the past year, Japan sold four times as much to Peru as the year before; they sold four times as much to Uruguay; twice as much to Brazil; and so forth. This represents a real loss in the foreign trade of the United States.

The principal reason for this sudden increase in the exports of Japan is to be found in the depreciation of its currency. Japan has been financing its extensive Manchurian operations and many of its other government expenditures with fiat money. In terms of the old American dollar the Japanese yen has depreciated eighty percent in the last year or two. In terms of the new American dollar which itself has been depreciated around forty percent, the Japanese yen is still depreciated forty percent.

While cheapening its money in order to finance its foreign conquests, both of territory and trade, Japan has not allowed wages at home to be raised. Thus at a double sacrifice to labor it is able to manufacture and sell cheaply. It not only pays its labor low wages but such wages as it does pay are paid with a depreciated currency. Strong political control and rigorous self-discipline enable the Japanese to do this.

The question is of course what is the United States going to do about it? Tariffs may keep Japanese goods out of the United States, but we cannot impose tariffs against the Japanese in other countries.

A Different Slant On Europe

Eugene Lyons, American correspondent in Russia for six years, brings back a picture of life in the Soviet Republic that contradicts the statements of American social planners who point to Russia as an example of successful planning, and contented regimentation. In the June Cosmopolitan, he says:

"I have seen Russia's new factories and power stations, new cities and vastly improved armies. On the other hand I saw the hundred and sixty-four million Soviet human beings in their overcrowded homes and foul barracks, millions of them in exile, other millions trudging sullenly in a direction they did not wish to go, all of them holding on desperately to food cards and passports. Then the ghosts of those whose lives had gone to fatten the slump statistics crowded in upon my mind and clamored for a place in the futile accounting."

Executions, Mr. Lyons says, are not referred to as such in Russia. He was once present in the chief prosecutor's office when there was some discussion about three men sentenced to death for speculating in bread.

"All three have been sentenced to death," the prosecutor started to say "death." Then he changed his words, "I mean, the highest measure of social defense."

Before returning to America, Mr. Lyons crossed Europe from end to end, finding at every frontier barriers of bayonets, tariffs, censorship and spy systems.

"War," he says, "is again being idealized—the horrors of the last war are being carefully concealed. Psychologically, at least, Europe is prepared for war."

"The danger of conflict between nation and nation is in the forefront of the picture. Behind that, tinging the whole view, is the danger of a war between class and class. It cuts athwart all boundaries."

Germany, he points out, has confined her Jews in a psychological ghetto whose walls of hatred and discrimination are more difficult to escape from than the stone barriers of the middle ages. Hitler wiped out the Socialist and Communist parties.

"Geneva," he says, "is a spick-and-span file where conferences are stuck away one after another—and forgotten. Unconsciously we talked in whispers, as people do in a conspiracy. . . . The League of Nations building is an ominously clean, quiet, somnolent place. . . . The League makes Geneva in the matters of opium and white slavery, but falling in its larger objectives."

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

The wedding of Miss Eleanor E. Wilson, the Secretary of the United Confederate Veterans' twenty-fourth annual reunion, was held at the White House yesterday afternoon. The wedding party was very small, consisting of the bride, the groom, the best man, the maid of honor, and the officiating minister. This was the first time in history that a United Confederate Veterans' reunion was held in Sanford. Miss Wilson is 24 years old and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Wilson. She is the youngest of four children. Her father is a member of the United Confederate Veterans and is a member of the Sanford Chapter. Her mother is a member of the United Confederate Veterans and is a member of the Sanford Chapter. The wedding was a very simple affair and was held in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The bride wore a white dress and the groom wore a dark suit. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor of the Sanford Baptist Church. The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding was a very happy occasion and was a fitting end to the reunion. The reunion was held at the Sanford Hotel and was attended by a large number of veterans and their families. The reunion was a very successful one and was a fitting tribute to the veterans of the Civil War. The reunion was held in Sanford, Florida, and was the first time in history that a United Confederate Veterans' reunion was held in Sanford. The reunion was a very happy occasion and was a fitting end to the reunion. The reunion was held at the Sanford Hotel and was attended by a large number of veterans and their families. The reunion was a very successful one and was a fitting tribute to the veterans of the Civil War.

IN THE BEST TRADITION

By WALTER LEFFMANN

Mr. Stimson's endorsement of the tariff bill has provoked Senator Hastings to say that "like most good Americans who have occupied the position of Secretary of State" he "has gotten a foreign viewpoint instead of one that is truly American." The Senator seems to have overlooked the fact that it is not only Mr. Hoover's Secretary of State who holds these views. If he will re-read the address delivered at Topoka on Jan. 30 by Mr. Hoover's Secretary of the Treasury he will find there the same views, Mr. Mills said.

A practically complete, self-contained and controlled national economy can doubtless be attained, but only at a frightful social cost, and by the forced migration of millions of people from their homes and an all-around lowering of the standard of living.

I prefer to turn my attention to the possibilities, among others, of recovering lost markets. . . . Granted that the difficulties are enormous, and that much time and patience will be required, this is even more true of the self-containment program. We will have to abandon the present policy of isolation and intense nationalism and to some extent modify recent tariff practices. This may sound strange coming from an orthodox Republican, but I have never understood that a sound system of protection . . . means the erection of impassable tariff barriers, the destruction of our commerce with the rest of the world, and the sacrifice of the inefficient farmer to save the inefficient manufacturer.

This is the identical position taken by Mr. Stimson. It is the position taken by Mr. Wallace, by Mr. Hull, and by Mr. Roosevelt. It may seem incredible to irreconcilable partisans, but it is nevertheless true: on the fundamental question of national policy, as to whether we are to conserve our economic existence and be forced into a regime of compulsory restriction or to expand it by developing foreign trade, the two men best qualified are in agreement with the leaders of the Democratic party. There could not be a more inspiring example of the triumph of disinterested opinion over partisan dogma.

It is not only the Republican leaders who have moved away from their previous position. When Mr. Hull was in the opposition he opposed a grant of power to the President which did not go so far as the bill he now sponsors. Mr. Roosevelt passed through a phase of intense economic nationalism last summer during the early days of the N. R. A. So it is not only Mr. Stimson and Mr. Mills who have departed from the policy which they were once identified with. There is a meeting of minds here because all these men have had the honesty to study the facts and the courage to modify their opinions. Let the outcome stand on the record as an example of intellectual integrity in a democracy.

It does not stand alone. During

Fast Blooming Orchid Development Found

ITHACA, May 7. — A flower note for girls. Soon your boy friends will be sending you orchids instead of roses, and they won't have to dig down in their jeans too deep on that account.

Professor Lewis Knudson has discovered a new and faster way to grow orchids. He has successfully grown the seedlings of the Cattleya, the commonest commercial orchid, and other varieties, in straight test tubes.

After four months' growth in the hermetically sealed tube, the orchids are transplanted into pots containing the usual orchid soil and other potting material. It ordinarily takes from four to six years to raise an orchid from seed to bloom.

The new system gives plants from three to four times larger than the old method, shortens the period of growth by three to four months, and will mean lower prices.

ARCADIA, BADLY BITTEN BY BOOM BUG, OWES MUCH

Agriculture Revival Held As Only Hope For City's Future

(Editor's Note: Another of a series of Florida communities, preserved by the Miami Herald and returned to Florida owners.)

CITY OF ARCADIA

MIAMI, May 7.—Once the county seat and trading post of a vast cattle range that furnished a good part of the beef consumed by soldiers in the Spanish American War, the city of Arcadia was badly bitten by the last boom and must now look to a material revival in agriculture as its chief hope for generating new taxpayers.

Booms are no novelty to Arcadia. It was incorporated in 1886 and grew with the cattle industry, which flourished greatly until well past the war with Spain. The World War brought a large army training base to Arcadia, and business looked up again. Even the 1925 real estate boom produced the national headquarters of the Tin Can Tourists Association for Arcadia, along with more substantial developments, which inspired the freeholders in that one year to issue $910,000 in bonds for general and street improvements.

But DeSoto county, of which Arcadia is a part, has been reduced to one-fifth its original size, by creation of new counties. Its back country has almost given up cattle as an unprofitable venture and has turned to citrus fruit, which proved only slightly more dependable. The army air base is now a memory and the Tin Can Tourists have located elsewhere. The city is left with a debt of $1,097,458 and tax delinquencies which have resisted the best efforts of the city to collect.

Property values in Arcadia have decreased from $7,000,000 in 1926 to $2,400,000 for the current assessment roll. Tax collections that held up above 70 percent this year until 1930, reached 45 percent last year and may not exceed 25 percent this year. In an effort to halt this taxing strike, the city itself began foreclosing, and has acquired $50,000 worth of real estate. But and to relate, the city itself must pay state and county taxes on the same property or see it continue worthless as a taxpaying asset. The city began to default on its bonds in 1930, despite an ambitious refunding program begun in 1927 and carried through 1930. The simple truth seems to be that Arcadia cannot carry $50,000 a year in interest and pay off bonds too. In three years, Arcadia has retired -200,000 in bonds accepted for taxes and liens, but that has made little appreciable difference even in the default, to say nothing of the bonds due in the near future. It is $390,000 in default on principal and interest, quite a dead weight for a city of 4,000 to carry.

The city council has consistently held down the millage and has tried to lure in enough cash to run the city by its liberal policy of accepting bonds for delinquent taxes. That has brought little encouragement, and continued delinquency has forced operating requirements down to a point where about half of them can be carried by the earnings of the water plant. Homestead exemption will remove more values from the roll, insofar as than one-third of present taxable operating taxation is concerned.

Arcadia is in one of those debt jams where all taxpaying is discouraged by the apparent futility of trying to catch up with the default. Property which can round land, nor expect much draw little income from the surfron tourists, is in poor position to shoulder a city debt like that of Arcadia, plus about $300,000 more in county and school district bonds. It is "bull-dogged" as completely as any steer that ever came out of a pen.

War Veteran, Family To Live At Lake Mary

Seminole County gained six new residents in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Schmidt and their four children, who arrived in Lake Mary late yesterday from New York state, to make their home. Mr. Schmidt is a disabled war veteran who decided that he and his family could live more cheaply in Florida than they could in

New York. They selected Lake Mary through the efforts of C. H. Ellis and Frank Evans who made arrangements for a residence before the arrival of the newcomers.

Mrs. C. H. Cogburn, Mrs. R. W. Ware, and Mrs. J. C. Bennett spent yesterday at the University of Florida where they attended the University's Mother's Day services.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Walker, Jr. of Jacksonville have moved to DeLand to make their future home. Mr. Walker has accepted a position with Hull, Landis and Whitehair.

Mrs. Lillian Vickery left Saturday morning for Anderson, S. C. where she was called by the death of her cousin, J. M. and Clyde Hutchinson. While away she will visit her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baker, of Hartwell, Ga.

The Misses Christine Stoudenmire, Louise Pardon, Freda Gans, Carolyn Cogburn, and Aldine Harrison will leave Friday for Gainesville to attend Spring house parties at the University of Florida. They will be the guests of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity.

Threat To Release Med-Flys In West Brings Man To Jail

SANTA ANA, Calif., May 7.—(AP)—A threat to release thousands of dreaded Mediterranean fruit flies to destroy citrus groves throughout Southern California led to the arrest of Walter Ernest MacCracken, 44, Orange county (Calif.) rancher.

MacCracken, placed in jail pending an investigation, denied any knowledge of a plot to release the insects, which destroyed thousands of dollars worth of fruit in Florida a few seasons ago.

He was arrested by department of justice agents after the California Fruit Growers Exchange received a threatening letter demanding $5,000 for surrender of the flies, which supposedly had been left in the writer's care a year ago for release in Orange county this month.

A search of MacCracken's ranch failed to show any trace of the insects. Authorities said the letters to the exchange had been written on the typewriter found in MacCracken's home.

MacCracken said he had lived in Florida and was familiar with methods of exterminating the flies.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the lesson Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 6.

The Golden Text was from Genesis 18:25, "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thou Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said, Remember, I pray thee, who ever perished being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off? Even as I have seen, they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same" (Job 4:1, 7, 8).

The Lesson Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Do you ask wisdom to be merciful and not to punish sin? Then 'ask wisely.' Without punishment, sin would multiply. A magistrate sometimes punishes the penalty, but this may be no moral benefit to the criminal, and at best it only saves the criminal from one form of punishment. The moral law, which has the right to acquit or condemn, always demands justification before mortals can 'ask wisdom.' Broken law brings penalty in order to compel this process" (pp. 10, 11).

Mrs. Byron Walker of Tampa, and Mrs. M. Y. Bishop of Avon Park, who spent a week here with Mrs. Frank R. McNeill, Oak Avenue, returned to their homes yesterday.

The roster of graduation exercises attending the 20th commencement of the Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee on May 26, includes the names of four Sanford girls who will be among the 215 candidates for degrees and certificates. They are the Misses Anna Lenora Brown, Phyllis Smith, Thelma Tew, and Nellie Williams, all of whom are to receive the A. B. degrees in the School of Education.

DOG SAVES FAMILY

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 7.—(AP) When fire swept the Fort Rodman home of Sgt. Richard Lavender before daybreak, a pet pedigreed Eskimo dog awakened Lavender by his benefit to the animal, and at last it only saved the criminal from one form of punishment.

The moral law, which has the right to acquit or condemn, always demands justification before mortals can 'ask wisdom.' Broken law brings penalty in order to compel this process" (pp. 10, 11).

furious barking. Collapsing in the kitchen from the effects of smoke, Lavender was aroused a stupor by the dog's bark and finally got outside. He got a ladder and rescued his wife and eight-year-old son from a second story window after Mrs. Lavender had suffered severe burns.

Big Gain Reported In Tax Returns Filed

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP)—Returns made to the federal government on 1932 income numbered 4,078,640, or more than half a million above the 1931 figures.

Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, made the announcement yesterday in summarizing individual tax returns by states, counties, cities and townships having a population of 1000 and over in the 1930 census. In 1931, individual returns filed were counted as 3,408,337. The number of individual tax returns filed for 1932 income, compared with those filed for 1931 income includes: Florida 1931, 27,685; 1932, 31,726.

"I know how Steel Protects You in a Warship or a Car"

A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH M. E. MERRITT, NAVY YARD, CHARLESTON, S. C.

"I bought a Plymouth for its Safety-Steel Body... Lucky for me that I did!" You've seen the steel armor on warships. It's Merritt's job to help make it. He knows how strong it is. Small wonder that when he wanted a car, he picked Plymouth for its Safety-Steel Body. But he never thought that this precaution would one day save his life! The drawing shows what happened. A foggy night. A sudden stop. Rammed by a truck from behind... catapulted into the air. Smashing down! Tumbling over and over! "The Safety-Steel Body was all that saved me!" he told us. Experiences like this aren't common, but they do happen. That's why our engineers gave Plymouth a Safety-Steel Body and Hydraulic Brakes... the safest brakes made. They made Plymouth more comfortable, with patented Floating Power engine mountings to keep all motor vibration away from the passengers... and Individual Wheel Springs to end all jouncing. Any Dodge, DeSoto or Chrysler dealer will gladly give you a Plymouth demonstration—any time.
