Identity still unknown

LONGWOOD — The identity of a woman's body found in a wooded area of Longwood Monday still has not been determined. Police expected to learn the results of an autopsy by late yesterday. This morning however, they reported it may not be completed for possibly two more days.

Police believe there is a possibility that the body may be that of Diana Lee Murphy, who has been missing from her Longwood home since March 21. The approximate age of the body is similar to that of Murphy, and some, but not all of the clothing reportedly matched the description of what the Murphy girl was wearing when last seen.

CDBG proposals reviewed

SANFORD — The Citizen Advisory Board for the county Community Development Block Grant program will review 30 proposals for $6.6 million in public aid projects tomorrow night.

Both the amount and number of requests represent a new record for the county. Buddy Balaglia, county community development officer, attributes a growing interest in seeking CDBG grants for social service projects.

Last week, members of the 14-member panel visited the sites of the proposed projects. Beginning at 7 p.m. tomorrow, they will take public testimony on each proposal and weigh the public benefits of each. The meeting will be held in the County Commission Chambers of the County Services Building on West First Street.

The CAB will decide on their final recommendations to spend about $1.7 million April 29. County commissioners will review the recommendations this summer and adopt their spending program in September.

Kmart delivers food to needy

SANFORD — The Sanford Kmart store, 3101 Orlando Drive, is distributing food baskets today. Ten local families will receive the special gifts in the Kmart annual give-away.

"We do this twice each year," said Betty Eastham of Kmart's personnel department. "Our Kmart people donate all of the food, and it's distributed to 10 families with little or no income."

"Generally, we give the baskets to the same people, which have been selected by area churches."

The same Kmart group also gives 20 food baskets each Thanksgiving.

Correction

In Julian Stenstrom's column, "Way Back When," published Sunday, April 4, the owner of the Sanford Electric Co., Ellsworth Harper Sr., was incorrectly identified.

Homeowners at risk Insurance coverage drops as rates rise

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Local insurance agents are not happy with the lack of action on the part of state legislators that would have made the climate in Florida more attractive to insurance companies.

Florida homeowners could pay higher insurance rates and have more trouble finding coverage because of lawmakers' inaction. Insurance Chairman John Cosgrove said...

The homeowners are the ones who are going to suffer the most from all this.

-Tony Russi, Sanford insurance agent

"It's true," said Tony Russi, an independent insurance agent in Sanford who represents several companies. "Companies are pulling out or limiting the policies they are writing, it's hurting everybody."

He did not choose to speculate how much insurance rates would increase as a result of the legislators' failure to act on the bill.

Russi said that though Hurricane Andrew missed this area and the "storm of the century" did little damage here last month, companies are more leery of doing any business in the state.

The damage in Florida due to those storms has

Cops nab 4 in drug bust

By J. MARK BARFIELD
and NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writers

SANFORD — Sanford Special Investigations Units agents arrested four Sanford-area residents in a raid on a Narcissus Avenue apartment early Tuesday morning.

"We have been working on this case for several weeks," said police Lt. Mike Rotundo. "We have had several reports of unusually heavy traffic around this particular location, and when there is something like that, it often means some type of illegal activity, usually drug deals, are being conducted."

As the raid was just made yesterday, police have not completed their investigation into the situation. "We're looking into the case now," Rotundo said. "Other than making the arrests, we haven't determined the extent of the drug connections at this time," he said.

Agents report finding frozen "crack" cocaine in the apartment freezer, a small amount of marijuana and several pipes.

Arrested were Ralph Orr, 61, and Ellen Lynn Weaver, 21, both of 2330 Narcissus Avenue, Apt. 5; Anthony John Preusse, 25, 1300 Park Ave.; and Casey Lee Stead, 21, 4365 Yamegraw, Lake Monroe.

Orr was held on charges of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute it, three counts of possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana and three counts of possession of drug paraphernalia. Weaver was held on charges of cocaine and marijuana possession. Preusse was held on charges of possession of cocaine and resisting arrest. Stead was held on charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

Agency sanctions equipment cops use for testing drunken drivers

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Altered equipment used to test drunken drivers but ruled inadmissible by Seminole County judges last week, has been proven accurate by The Florida Department of Law Enforcement in results released Tuesday.

The Intoxilyzer 5000 R, which measures blood alcohol levels using breath samples performs satisfactorily and within state guidelines for accuracy, according to the FDLE.

Jeff Long, administrator of the FDLE Implied Consent Program, said the test results were being sent to state attorney's DUI (driving under the influence) chiefs.

"We are giving them the data and letting them utilize it however they see fit," Long said.

Following a hearing last week, four Seminole County judges ruled tests done on the Intoxilyzer 5000 R could not be used as evidence in DUI cases because the machine had not been properly certified. Attorneys argued the addition of a thermal resistor (thermister) on the program board altered the instrument and affected its accuracy. The Intoxilyzer 5000 (without a thermister) had been certified for use by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS). Since then, the FDLE has been given the responsibility for certifying the breath-test instruments.

Over 150 DUI cases were affected when the blood alcohol readings from the Intoxilyzer 5000 R were thrown out, including the case of Circuit Court Judge

Youth director weeps at sentencing

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — A former youth choir director wept and apologized before being sentenced to 20 years in prison for molesting two teen-age boys.

"I'm very sorry this happened. I feel sorry for the young men this has happened to," Richard Trepinski told Circuit Judge Donald Pellicchia Monday. "I hope I get the proper help I need for this illness as I now know this is an illness."

But Pellicchia quickly disagreed. "The court recognizes you to be a homosexual pedophile. This is more than an illness ... this is a crime."

In addition to the prison term, Trepinski was ordered to serve 15 years probation. He agreed to the sentence last year after pleading no contest to the charges.

Jumping from car kills man

TAMPA — A 22-year-old man died after jumping out of a moving car during an argument with his girlfriend, police said. Frank Mercer suffered head injuries when he hit the steel grate of the Borein Street Bridge on Sunday and died later at Tampa General Hospital.

Police estimated the car was traveling at about 30 mph. The death was classified as accidental, said police spokesman Steve Cole.

Mercer was the son of Hillsborough School Board member Carol Kurdell.

Police officer arrested

TAMPA — A Tampa police officer was arrested and accused of drug and sex activities with minors.

Teresa "Teri" Singleton, 32, was arrested Tuesday by Hillsborough sheriff's deputies at police headquarters and jailed under $31,500 bond.

She was charged with three counts of delivery of controlled substance to a child under 18; three counts of contributing to delinquency of a minor and lewd and lascivious behavior with someone under 16.

The activities occurred over a two-year period, according to an arrest affidavit.

Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole said Singleton, a patrol officer in south and west Tampa, has been with the force for seven years. She was suspended without pay until an investigation is completed.

Greyhound track may close

PENSACOLA — Owners of the Pensacola Greyhound Track say they may be forced to close, putting 300 people out of work, because the Florida Legislature failed to restore a tax exemption.

The dog track, in operation for 46 years, is one of five in the state that grosses less than $100,000 a performance — a set of 15 races in Pensacola — to qualify for the exemption that expired last July.

Those smaller tracks did not have to pay the 7.6 percent state tax on every dollar bet for the first $50,000 in wagers per performance.

Loss of the exemption has cost the Pensacola track $1.2 million, general manager Craig Holtz said Monday.

He said the four Mobile, Ala., businessmen who own the track kept it open hoping the Legislature would pass a bill to restore the exemption, but lawmakers adjourned Sunday without taking final action. Holtz said he expects the owners to make a decision Thursday.

Press secretary dies of cancer

MIAMI — Rafael Oribe Cano, who served as press secretary for the late Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza, died of cancer in Miami. He was 66.

Cano, who died Monday, was spokesman for Somoza during his last term. He fielded questions from the world news media during the late 1970s when the Sandinistas were trying to overthrow the Somoza government.

"He had very good relations with the media," recalled his friend, Luis Pallala, a former president of the Nicaraguan Congress.

When the Sandinistas took over in 1979, Cano left the country for a new life in Miami. Cano had to start over in a new land at age 52.

Second murder in same neighborhood

PENSACOLA — A murder has been committed for the second time in as many months in Pensacola's well-kept, solidly middle class East Hill neighborhood.

Don Simmons, a 54-year-old florist, was found beaten to death in the den of his home Monday morning, said police Sgt. Jerry Potts.

In a house just across the tree-lined street, interior designer Arthur Mullen, 69, was shot to death Feb. 3.

Mullen's daughter, Michaelanne Hall, 40, was charged with his murder and is free on bail.

She was not a suspect in Simmons' slaying, and the two killings apparently are unrelated, Potts said.

HRS computer debacle

Congressman calls for federal probe of fiasco

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The growing fiasco over Florida's problem-plagued social services supercomputer has reached a new level with a congressman's request for an investigation into potential misuse of federal money.

U.S. Rep. Charles T. Canady, R-Fla., sent letters Tuesday to Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy and Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala, asking for a probe of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and its troubled $104 million FLORIDA system.

"The allegations concerning HRS are especially alarming because any mismanagement and abuse in this agency impacts Florida's neediest citizens," Canady said in a statement.

The Lakeland congressman, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, noted that HRS received nearly half its budget, $4.7 billion, in federal money this year.

"This agency is in need of reform and repair," Canady said. "We may be able to take this opportunity to accomplish that goal."

USDA handles the food stamps program and HRS runs Medicaid at the federal level.

HRS officials say there have been about $70 million in errors to the food stamp and Aid to Families with Dependent Children over what would have been expected in 1992 without the computer.

In addition, a Medicaid mistake left 235,000 ineligible people on welfare rolls, costing taxpayers $28 million. That error wound up giving the state a $173 million windfall because of savings once the cases were dropped.

Because of the errors, HRS officials estimate they could face a maximum of $144 million in federal fines, although the agency almost certainly could negotiate a much lower settlement.

Canady's letters came the same day an independent consultant reported that the system could actually save taxpayers $270 million by the end of the decade.

Release of the Price Waterhouse interim study coincided with a media tour of the system by Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay, the new head of the agency.

James Paul of Price Waterhouse, which was hired to examine the cost benefits of the supercomputer in 1991, said the high error rates should come down and more functions will be added, producing a net savings of $270 million by 1999.

Discovery

Body found in back yard

Colombian, a former Palm Beach County Fire-Rescue paramedic, was arrested Monday and remained held overnight Tuesday in the Palm Beach County Jail, charged with stabbing his 15-year-old daughter and burying her in the back yard.

She was reported missing Feb. 26, 1993, by her brother, Devon, who lived with her and her mother, Sandra Wood, in the living room complex above the sliding glass door and on the vertical blinds.

They made the report visit Friday — with the permission of the marriage-litigator — to look for clues, Lt. Steve Howell said.

Researchers: Sea lice are baby jellyfish

MIAMI — More than a decade after they re-appeared on the east coast of Florida, the mystery of the sea lice has been solved. Researchers say they are not lice at all, but baby jellyfish.

And those those red welts many beach-goers think are caused by sea lice are actually stings from baby jellyfish most likely trapped within a bathing suit.

In an article published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association, University of Miami researchers say they have discovered that the larvae of jellyfish can cause the welts many Florida ocean-lovers discover in late spring and early summer.

"A lot of people were worried because the eruptions can take several days to go away," said Dr. Robert S. Tomchik, a professor of Epidemiology with the University of Miami. "People were worried they had live organisms growing under their skin and fevers that lasted as long as week."

For years, physicians have been puzzled by the red welts that appear within 24 hours after exposure and are characterized by an intense itch. "There was controversy because physicians were treating it like it was real lice," Tomchik said, adding that the best treatment for stings appears to be antihistamines.

Children, people with allergies or auto-immune diseases could be at risk for severe reactions, researchers said.

The researchers took some of the so-called sea lice from the Atlantic Ocean and raised them to adulthood and discovered all developed into thimble jellyfish, a brownish creature that grows to between 5 and 30 millimeters.

"We were all sort of surprised that nobody had figured what the cause of this condition was," Tomchik said. "What surprised the marine biologist was how easy it was to solve the mystery."

Police form robbery task force

By CATHERINE WILSON
AP Business Writer

MIAMI — The German government issued a travel warning, U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno volunteered the help of federal prosecutors and police agencies formed a street robbery task force in response to deadly attacks on tourists.

Seven foreign visitors to Florida have been killed since October, including three Germans, the latest a Berlin schoolteacher robbed and killed in front of her mother and two young children.

"The police department is as upset as anyone about the death or the injury of a tourist because tourism economically is the lifeblood of the South Florida community," said police spokesman Raymond Lang. "When you have tourist robberies, it hurts each and every one of us."

Tourists who get lost leaving Miami International Airport in rental cars have been the most visible targets. Germans represented more than 400,000 of Florida's 41 million tourists last year.

The German foreign ministry "was not in general recommending against trips to Florida" but called for special caution in the corridor between the airport and Miami Beach.

The warning from the Bonn government follows an advisory issued Monday from the

When you have tourist robberies, it hurts each and every one of us.

-Raymond Long

British Foreign Office for travelers going overseas to take "common-sense precautions when carrying valuables and large amounts of money." The advice was given in response to reporters' questions in connection with the widely-publicized killing of Barbara Jensen Meller of Berlin.

No arrest has been made in the death of Meller, who was robbed, beaten and run over after she got lost leaving the airport in a rental car with her mother and two young children.

Miami television station WTVJ on Tuesday cited unnamed police sources saying the field of suspects had been narrowed to one man. A Miami police spokesman, however, denied the report. "We have no suspects," spokesman Armando Villorin said. "We are still investigating."

Fourteen local, state and federal law enforcement agencies Tuesday formed a street robbery task force that will put more officers in high-crime areas by next week. Reno called U.S. Attorney Roberto

Martinez in Miami, her hometown, "and told him if he needed anything from me to let me know." Martinez said prosecutors would apply tough federal carjacking and career criminal laws where possible. He noted, however, carjacking law guidelines currently apply if there is a weapon and an attempt to steal the vehicle.

Attacking the crimes from the business side, the American Automobile Association Clubs of Florida asked rental companies to strip all identifying license plates and insignia from their Florida vehicles.

Hertz, Avis and Alamo Rent A Car said they already are switching the plates on thousands of cars in Florida and are stripping company logos.

Alamo expects to switch license tags on 1,000 cars a day until teletale plates beginning with the letters Y and Z are gone from its Florida fleet.

Meller's slaying has sent a chill through the state's $31 billion-a-year tourist industry, which state Commerce Secretary Greg Farmer said had already been hurt by last year's Hurricane Andrew and a short-lived warning from the American Automobile Association to stay away from a section of Florida highway where several sniper attacks on motorists occurred last year.

"We've had everything but the kitchen sink thrown at the tourism industry here in Florida," Farmer said.

Both sides rest in King beating trial

By LINDA DEUTSON
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Both sides rested in the Rodney King beating trial after a dramatic prosecution finale turned one policeman's year-old videotaped testimony into an explosive denunciation of his three co-defendants.

"My perspective was ... too much force was used," Officer Theodore Briseno said on the tape, a condensed version of his testimony at the four officers' state court trial last year.

Testimony ended Tuesday in the 2-month-old federal trial. U.S. District Judge John G. Davies planned to discuss jury instructions with lawyers today and set closing arguments to begin Thursday.

"The case will be yours for decision Friday afternoon," he told the jury.

The officers are accused of violating King's civil rights in the beating, which was videotaped by a bystander and broadcast worldwide.

Last year's acquittals in state court on most charges of assault and excessive force triggered rioting in Los Angeles that killed more than 50 people and caused about $1 billion in damage.

The heavily edited videotape was shown to the jury Tuesday despite tumultuous legal maneuvering by defense attorneys trying to block it.

The defense later tried to recover lost ground by recalling as its last witness Sgt. Stacey Koon, the only defendant to testify. Koon restated key defense points: that there were no blows struck to King's head, that King's facial fractures were caused by a fall, and that officers saw King from a different perspective than the amateur cameraman who videotaped the beating.

But a prosecutor used Koon's return to elicit a fact edited out of Briseno's videotape — that Briseno considered another defendant, Officer Laurence Powell, "out of control" during the beating.

"Didn't you write in your book that defendant Briseno gave an incorrect motivation for trying to stop Powell?" asked Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Clymer.

Taxpayers real winners over courthouse

Seminole County taxpayers were the benefactors of county commissioners' decision last week to expand the Seminole Courthouse in downtown Sanford.

With such a costly proposal, $30 million according to one estimate, fiscal frugality is key. By expanding the present courthouse, county consultants say construction costs will be restrained and future courthouse operations will remain efficient. The downtown parking problem will have to be addressed with the expansion, but the pluses far outweigh the minuses.

It bears repeating the Seminole County expressway will soon offer southeastern county residents the same transportation convenience afforded other south-county residents with access to Interstate 4 or U.S. Highway 17-92. It is also important to remember Sanford is the county seat and historical capital of the county. And downtown Sanford is the county's administrative and judicial core.

Commissioner Bob Sturm should be commended for recognizing the excessive expense and inefficiency of building a second, separate courthouse south of downtown Sanford and showing the statesmanship to compromise.

County service centers in Casseberry and Longwood can be expanded or multiplied to provide the most-frequently demanded services at a much lower cost than another courthouse.

Later this month, commissioners will turn their attention to providing space for a growing county administrative staff. Commissioners Chairman and Pat Warren say it's time to move out of the current offices in the former Seminole Memorial Hospital and look to building a new County Services Building at the more centrally-located Five Points.

But commissioners Daryl McLain and Larry Furlong say other, potentially less-expensive, options should first be examined. They support the consultants' idea of continued use of the current County Services Building on First Street for county administrative functions and moving the tax collector and other offices to the expanded courthouse in a few years.

Only when judicial functions demand the full courthouse should a new administrative building be considered, say McLain and Furlong. We agree. The consultants have developed a nifty plan which reduces the cost of all this construction.

We also like McLain's suggestion to consider the former First Federal of Seminole Building or downtown historic structures for government offices before constructing a new government center at Five Points. His approach would maintain the government core concept for downtown Sanford.

Seminole County has emerged from a rural beginning to a suburban present and future. There may well be 500,000 people living here in our lifetimes, but those folks didn't choose to live here because of fancy spending for new government buildings. Office accommodation is a necessary expense of government, but Seminole County taxpayers — and voters — have consistently demanded low-cost alternatives to expensive plans.

We don't expect them to change now.

Should America spring China free?

BEIJING — Even five days here offers up a full menu of Chinese views. How Bill Clinton's America reacts now will be less newsworthy than what we do about Russia, but almost surely of greater long-term importance — for us, for China, and for the rest of humanity.

The official Chinese position on our principal problem is simple and adamant: "Human rights in China is an internal affair." Accordingly, say Chinese officials, America ought not, should not, and must not link it to matters of trade, or else there will be big trouble. But that, of course, is just what Americans do each spring when federal law and political practice dictate that the president and Congress must act to extend, deny, or put conditions on "Most Favored Nation" status for China.

Many influential voices from the international business community echo the official Chinese position. Thanks to more free market economics, they say, China is booming; let's all make money; a little authoritarianism will keep things stable. So, they say, back off America, cut out the goody-two-shoes human rights stuff, extend MFN, and with no conditions.

But many non-official Chinese in off-the-record venues are not buying the idea that America should back off. The fervor of the Tiananmen Square revolution may be receding. But these Chinese know that if America relaxes there will be no one around to push for the greater political space they want, but cannot ask for in this only partially relaxed police state.

And surprisingly, at very high Chinese levels, there seems to be some growing flexibility. There is talk about entering into discussions with Americans about a five-year plan to promote democracy — Chinese-style. This, it's said, could include a greater role for the People's Congress, and greater freedoms for the Chinese people, and the Chinese media.

In short, if Clinton hangs tough, there may be an opening for a serious quiet bargain on MFN soon. The stakes at play are enormous. Look at it

America ought not, should not, and must not link it to matters of trade, or else there will be big trouble.

this way. The world changes. The United States is not likely to remain the only superpower forever. The next nation to move into the big leagues will probably be China, and possibly soon.

If China is a free, stable, prosperous and democratic player in the world arena, we may hope for a new world order, tumultuous to be sure, but plausibly without apocalyptic threats among the major nations. But if China should remain what it is now — growing and booming, non-democratic and repressive — we can end up back in the swamp of a big power race not unlike the sort we just finished with the Soviet Union.

Three facts dominate the current Chinese situation: 1) China is by far the most populous country in the world; 2) its economy is growing at the fastest rate in the world; 3) it is the only important country that remains politically un-free.

The current population is about 1.2 billion people, more than America. Europe, Japan and the former Soviet Union put together.

The economic growth rate last year was an incredible 12 percent, and much higher in the booming southlands that are the leading edge of a modernizing China.

Shrink-ese fills custody trial

BOSTON — It is notable that the clearest maybe even the sanest words heard at the Woody and Mia custody trial so far were offered by Moses: "Everyone knows not to have an affair with your son's sister."

This searing, flat-out judgment did not come from the Moses. It came from 14-year-old Moses Farrow Allen. This phrase was not inscribed on a stone tablet. It was written in a letter to somebody he once called Dad.

Nevertheless, the boy's vision was as unclouded as his pain when he wrote: "You have done a horrible, unforgivable, nasty, ugly, stupid thing." It stands in stark contrast to the rest of this bizarre trial being conducted in a dreary New York courtroom, under the strictures of the law and in the language of Shrink-ese.

Indeed in that courtroom, it's possible to hear the way that once-arcaic vocabulary has infiltrated our everyday conversation just as English has infiltrated French. Under the linguistic rules of Shrink-ese, good and evil are now translated into "appropriate" and "inappropriate." Right and wrong have become "good and bad judgment."

The use of Shrink-ese in this "head case" is predictable. It may be the native tongue of the entire, extended and distorted Allen-Farrow clan — a tribe that comes with a battery of psychologists, psychiatrists, and therapists in tow. These children seem to have been assigned a shrink at birth or adoption the way other children are assigned a patron saint.

But this week, in the wrangling over custody the court was further treated to the testimony of son Mitchell's therapist speaking in this tongue. By the time it was over Dr. Susan Coates had offered a national lesson from the Tower of Psychobabble.

Was Woody evil, a lawyer asked? "I would say this was someone whose judgment is very impaired," she demurred.

Was he bad? One "could not generalize about a person without multiple, multiple bad acts."

Was Mia wrong in her rage? I felt that for her to see Mr. Allen as an all-bad person was an overreaction....

Was there a solution? "What is critical for the children is they find a way to have a mother and father and that each parent find a way to emotionally empower that tie."

Every time the psychologist was asked a question about the ethics of right and wrong, she seemed to, uh, shrink, the moral dimensions down to their clinical dimensions. She dropped any accent of criticism. Indeed, the closest she got to expressing an opinion about a man who slept with the daughter of his long-time mate and the sister of his children was to say, "I couldn't understand why he couldn't understand" what the impact would be.

Well, I hear you, Dr. Coates, as they say in Shrink-ese. I know where you are coming from. Though, maybe Woody couldn't understand because he spent so many years in therapy being understood.

I rarely mix with people who want to put good and evil stickers on every piece of human behavior. There are enough scalots in the world searching for biblical behavior that Spandex is a creation of the devil. It's important to understand a criminal as well as punish a crime. It is wise to distinguish between a bad act and a bad child. The word evil doesn't roll off my tongue either.

But there are times, and this is one of them, when I wonder whether our adoption of Shrink-ese as a second language, the move from religious phrases of judgment to secular words of acceptance, hasn't also produced a moral lobotomy. In the reluctance, the aversion — dare I say the phobia — to being judgmental, are we disabled from making any judgments at all?

In Woody Allen's lifetime and often with his running commentary, we have made an extraordinary transition. From moral absolutes to moral relativism. From exorcists to therapists. When in trouble — marital misery, infidelity, abuse — we are often sent or even sentenced to a shrink. Moral problems become medical ones and yesterday's sinners become today's patients.

And sometimes, just sometimes, people like Woody Allen, a fallen-away Jew, and Mia Farrow, a fallen-away Catholic, fall into something else. A therapeutic mode that erodes one set of moral bearings without replacing it. A world that emphasizes the need to understand each other but not necessarily to understand right and wrong.

Woody Allen slept with a mother and a daughter, threw a grenade into the family vortex, and now says that he should have custody of three children, bring them home to an apartment where their sister would be stepmother. And this is what passes for a confession of guilt about starting his relationship: "I think I did make a mistake. An error of judgment."

I'd rather give the last word to Moses.

Everyone knows not to have an affair with your son's sister.

Death penalty's flaws are evident

WASHINGTON — Since the reinstatement of the death penalty in 1976, 197 people have been executed in the United States. Walter McMillian came close to becoming number 198 — and there's evidence that the state of Alabama would have had the death of an innocent man on its conscience.

McMillian's story is required reading for a Supreme Court that wants to expedite the pace of executions, and reduce the delays caused by time-consuming appeals.

But one man's delays can be an innocent man's due process — as McMillian's experience in the rural community of Monroeville, Ala., illustrates. Led by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, Ohio, the Senate Judiciary Committee has launched a nationwide probe of capital punishment. "Nearly five years ago Walter McMillian was convicted of murdering a convenience store clerk," explains Metzenbaum. "He had no previous criminal record, except for one misdemeanor charge. His trial lasted only a day and a half. The jury recommended that he be given a life sentence, but the state judge that presided over the case — who was an elected official — overruled the jury and ordered McMillian to be sentenced to death."

Though his life was spared, McMillian languished on death row for six years before his release last month. Even before his conviction on charges of murder, McMillian was treated like a marked man. He was given a death row "prisoner's orientation," a death row prisoner's manual and subjected to all restrictions and treatment received by every death row prisoner in Alabama.

The story began with his arrest in June 1987, when the 45-year-old McMillian operated his own pulp-wood business in Alabama. He spent 14 months in custody awaiting trial after the state moved for postponements of his trial. Such delays between arrest and trial are not uncommon for poor defendants, nor are most tried within a year of their arrest.

Bryan A. Stevenson, executive director of a private, non-profit organization that provides legal assistance to death row prisoners, recently told Senate investigators that race played a large role in this apparent miscarriage of justice.

"While the crime took place in Monroe County, which has an African-American population of over 40 percent, venue was changed to Baldwin County, Ala., which has a black population of less than 15 percent. Only one African-American served on Mr. McMillian's jury after the State excluded other black potential jurors through peremptory strikes. The District Attorney also improperly told he jury that Mr. McMillian was rumored to have had an affair with a young white woman. The introduction of this evidence had no purpose or relation to this case other than inflaming racial prejudice."

Ronda Morrison was killed at a dry cleaning store located in the center of town on a Saturday morning in broad daylight. Ultimately, McMillian's legal team was able to establish his innocence by proving that his truck didn't match the description offered at trial, and that law enforcement officials concealed exculpatory evidence. One of the state's witnesses recanted his testimony, and acknowledged being pressured by law enforcement officers.

For Bryan Stevenson, the moral of the story is this:

"That it took four and a half years of litigation with thousands of hours of investigation ... shows us that there are disturbing problems which must be corrected within our criminal justice system."

Though his life was spared, McMillian languished on death row for six years before his release last month.

Two teens being held for Lyman bomb blast

SANFORD — Two youths being held in the Seminole County Juvenile Detention Center will be arraigned in about two weeks on charges stemming from a weekend explosion at Lyman

High School. The 17-year old teen, who has retained private counsel, appeared in juvenile court Monday. The 16-year old charged in the case appeared Tuesday.

Originally, the younger suspect was arrested and released by Longwood Police during the investigation of the explosion of a homemade pipe bomb in a high school restroom Friday night.

Both teens are being held at the JDC.

Judge Leonard V. Wood ordered the 16-year old be picked up again and held at the detention center. Over the weekend, the teen will be allowed to leave to perform with his musical group, according to assistant state attorney Ralph Eriksson.

The two teens face charges of making, possessing and discharging an explosive device.

The explosion did about $1,000 damage to a bathroom at Lyman High School. School band director Donald Schmaus was shaken by the explosion which occurred when he picked up a piece of twine on the floor of the restroom.

Insurance

deeply injured the insurance industry here, he said.

"The homeowners are the ones who are going to suffer the most from all this," he said. "We can't write new policies for the people who've lost coverage because companies have gone out of business or pulled out of Florida."

Cosgrove, D-Miami, whose home and district were damaged by Hurricane Andrew, referred to a several-hundred-page bill (SB 1044) assembled in the Senate as the legislative session neared a close this past week.

House Speaker Boileau "Bo" Johnson refused to take up the last-minute proposal.

"All of our constituents are going to be hurt... by increased costs for less coverage," Cosgrove, D-Miami, told lawmakers preparing to adjourn Sunday night.

Russel said that "a lot of people" are going to lose coverage because of the companies that have failed.

Brent Carl, who sells insurance for Allstate in Lake Mary, was instructed by the company not to comment on the legislative inaction.

Without action in one of the special sessions Gov. Lawton Chiles has promised on unfinished business such as workers' compensation reform, changes the industry and the Department of Insurance agreed on won't get made, industry spokesman Sam Miller said Monday.

The bill would have made changes concerning windstorm coverage, sinkhole claims, and a reinsurance fund to help carriers handle disaster claims. It also would have reversed a cut that took effect Monday in condominium coverage.

"This is a difficult time for the insurance industry in Florida," said a public affairs representative with State Farm Insurance in Jacksonville. "Everyone all over the state is going to be hurt by this."

Local State Farm agents said they could not comment on the bill.

Cosgrove said his House committee passed individual bills dealing with homeowners' insurance, condominium insurance and sinkholes, but the Senate added other issues that hadn't been heard by legislative committees.

Cosgrove blamed infighting between Gallagher and Senate President Ander Crenshaw, R-Jacksonville, who also may seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination, for stalling the legislation, and said Floridians could be hurt "because of some power play of some egomania."

Gallagher's office denied such a battle. "It's my understanding that the Senate president asked Gallagher to come down there to look over what was being included in the bill," spokeswoman Karen Chandler said.

Crenshaw said he didn't know of any issues in the bill that needed immediate passage. "It didn't have the input it should have had in the Commerce Committee."

Among other things, the bill that died would have:

- Reversed a move made in the December special session to expand the Florida Windstorm Underwriting Association statewide on April 10. The fund covers wind damage in 23 hurricane-prone counties where regular policies don't. Miller said expanding it from 45,000 policies to between 300,000 and 400,000 will overburden the pool's staff of fewer than 10.

- Extended a $100,000-per-unit limit on condominium coverage that was adopted by the December special session. Instead, the change expired Monday, and the limit reverted to $300,000 per condominium complex. Cosgrove said that is inadequate if spread among 100 or more units.

- Extended the July 1 expiration of a law that bars insurance companies from canceling coverage on homes near sinkholes, passed after instances of sinkhole damage last year in the Dunedin area. "Without it, companies can non-renew in the Dunedin area," Miller said.

- Established a state-run, hurricane-reinsurance program to help companies handle widespread disaster claims. It would replace private reinsurance that hasn't been available in Florida since Hurricane Andrew caused $15.5 billion in insured losses last August.

Linda Gloeckner of Orange County. As a result of the ruling, Gloeckner's blood alcohol test result cannot be used in her court case. She was arrested after a Jan. 29 traffic accident when her blood alcohol test showed she exceeded the .10 legal limit. Prosecutors are relying on eye-witness testimony, videos and roadside sobriety tests to win DUI convictions if the breath tests are inadmissible.

Although the study was done in September 1992, the data was just finalized and the report released.

Forty-two volunteers participated in the two-day study, ranging in age from 22 to 92 years old. Three subjects did not complete the study. There were 25 men and 14 women in the test. They were given measured amounts of whiskey, vodka, gin or rum with mixer as preferred by the subject and allowed 60-90 minutes to drink the beverages. Light snacks were also provided. Each subject was given a breath-test on two of the four Intoxilyzers used in the study. Blood samples were also drawn for comparison testing.

The FDLE report states the instruments all tested within state standards in effect when the study was conducted.

After the judges ruled against allowing breath-tests from the 5000 R machines, local police agencies began using certified machines for the test. The Seminole County judges ruling on the Intoxilyzer 5000 R cases is being appealed.

Howell commented, "People would have never been that open during a regular meeting. I wish we could take the entire commission meetings out to the people from time to time."

More meetings are being scheduled for other commission districts during months to come. Dates, times and locations will be announced.

Full service school popular

By VICKI DESOBRIER
Herald Staff Writer

GENEVA — People in Geneva are standing behind the full service school project underway at Geneva Elementary School. "The school has always been a focal point of this community," principal Gloria Orseck said. "This is a continuation of that tradition." The full service school concept brings many social and medical services not readily available to residents of a community to a school where they have more access to the programs. Seminole High School, Midway Elementary School and the Crook School of Choice, all in Sanford, are also full service schools. According to Dr. Robert Campbell, the district's full service school facilitator, the program is bringing much-needed services to poor, and often geographically isolated, residents of the county. Orseck said the services offered at Geneva Elementary, including health care and child care, are desperately needed by the Geneva community. "This brings these things to the people," she said. She said the Geneva Citizen's Association recently met at the "old grade school" (as Geneva Elementary is known to many of the local citizens) to discuss the additions and renovations to the school and to learn about the plans for many future community-wide projects at the school. The members of the group were very pleased with the plans. "The (school) district and county agencies are working together to provide some very important services for the Geneva community," she said. She said the day care facility, which has already been in place for nearly a year, has been a tremendous success. "We offer quality child care that is affordable to anyone," she said. The day care services are priced on a sliding scale based on income so that the poorest citizens can still afford care for their children while they look for or go to work. A medical clinic that will be staffed by county health department personnel and volunteer doctors and dentists is also being constructed at the elementary school. "The full service school is very popular in Geneva," Orseck said.

Sears catalog Closing of stores a blow to rural America

By FRANK FISHER
Associated Press Writer

PINCKNEYVILLE, Ill. — Bob Opp quietly locked the door of his small Sears catalog store for the last time and became another casualty of the giant retailer's struggle for survival. "The people in the large cities, they don't know what a catalog store is," Opp said Tuesday, closing the business he started with his wife 13 years ago. "They've got shopping malls. But the rural folks, we have nothing else." The Sears catalog store in nearby Sparta also closed Tuesday, amid rumors others would be shut down in the next few days. The closings resulted from Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s decision in January to terminate its century-old catalog to try to stanch mounting losses. Sears has said most of its 2,000 independently owned catalog stores, employing an estimated 10,000 to 15,000 people, would have to close by the end of the year. Up to 500 may remain open as retail outlets. The Chicago-based company declined comment on Tuesday's closings. But the reaction among some of the 3,300 residents in Pinckneyville was mild, despite growing economic hardship. Several businesses have closed in the past year, and the area's three largest employers — all coal mines — have been steadily laying off workers. Opp learned that the store was closing in January, just hours after he was laid off from a coal mine.

"I lost two jobs in nine hours and 10 minutes," he said. His store closed at noon. But had it stayed open longer, it probably would not have mattered. His stock sold out a week ago, and the few shelves sported only an odd assortment of broken merchandise slashed to half price. When times were good, said manager Betty Opp, as many as 150 people would stream into the store each day. But as she stared out at a quiet downtown street bathed in early spring sunshine Tuesday, not a car passed by. Jeremy Kelly, with his 4-year-old cousin in tow, was the store's last customer. He asked whether there were any videocassette recorders for sale, but a sales clerk could show him only a discounted, broken radio-tape player. Kelly said the store's closing meant Sears customers would have to drive an hour to the nearest department store. "I guess we're going to have to travel quite a bit," he said. As a Sears representative stood behind the counter shredding unused order forms, Doris Bush was close to tears as she took her last paycheck and became the store's only layoff. Bush, who moved to Pinckneyville two years ago, wondered where she would find work. Perry County recorded a 21.5 percent unemployment rate in February, the highest in the state. "You always thought you could trust Sears. It would always be there," she said. "If the higher-ups were more in touch with rural America, they wouldn't have done this."

Families of the victims of terror bombing seek sanctions, justice

By RONALD POWERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After years of cautious optimism and bitter disappointment, the families of victims killed in the 1988 terrorist bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 are again hopeful they may see justice done. The families met with top Clinton administration officials several times during the last few weeks, urging the United States to sponsor U.N. sanctions that would economically cripple oil-rich Libya for refusing to surrender the alleged attackers. Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher, in testimony before Congress last week, labeled Libya "an international outlaw" and said it was time for the United States to consider organizing a worldwide oil embargo against the North African country. A U.S. source at the United Nations, who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity, said the sanctions were being discussed by U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albright and White House officials. "We are trying for the strongest resolution that we can get," the source told The Associated Press. However, according to other U.N. sources, it appeared unlikely other members of the Security Council were ready to support an oil embargo now. The most likely outcome when the council votes later this week, one source said, is that current travel restrictions will remain in place with Libya put on notice that its time to cooperate is running out. The secretary-general of the Arab League, Ahmed Esmat Abdel Maguid, has been meeting with Security Council members in New York this week, telling them his organization is ready to assume diplomatic efforts to assure Libyan compliance with past resolutions. With much oil going to Europe from Libya and many European working in high-paying oil-field jobs there, observers believe it will be very difficult for the United States to persuade other nations on the 15-member Security Council to toughen the sanctions. Nine votes without a veto are needed to pass a resolution.

Secret files document dark side of dictatorship

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Martin Almada's is one of the most pitiable stories in the recently unearthed secret police records that Paraguayans call the "horror files." The former schoolteacher was arrested on Nov. 25, 1974. His "crime": he asked the government of then president Gen. Alfredo Stroessner to raise teachers' salaries, and he belonged to a dissident wing of the ruling Colorado Party. That made him an agitator and a potential threat. Almada, now 55, said he was tortured for 10 days, and every night phoned his wife and played tapes of his screams. Finally, they sent home his bloodied clothes and told her to collect his body. She had a heart attack and died. "No doctor would attend to her because they were afraid to," said Almada, who was released and fled to exile in France, where he worked for the United Nations and had operation after operation to heal his wounds, mostly to his eyes. Almada returned home following the February

1989 coup that toppled Stroessner. He filed a lawsuit demanding Stroessner's extradition from Brazil and trial on charges of torture and murder, but had little evidence. Until now. Last December, Almada was tipped off that records police insisted had disappeared after the coup were at a substation in suburban Lambaré. Three days before Christmas, he showed up with a judge, a congressman and a TV camera crew. "No one really thought we were going to find what we did. I certainly didn't," said congressman Francisco de Vargas. What they found was a room crammed with personal identity cards, thick files on political parties, photographs and police statements from perhaps several thousand people who were arrested throughout the 1954-89 Stroessner regime, and piles of books and cassettes. De Vargas phoned radio stations and called for volunteers. People hurried over by the dozen and passed the archives hand-by-hand to cars that took them to the main court house. "We knew we had to get it all before night because what we left wouldn't be there the next day," said de Vargas, a veteran human rights activist who later found his file, including an old photo of his face bloody from a beating. Such files rarely come into the hands of lawyers and judges in any country. In Paraguay, it is precisely those people — not post-Stroessner government officials — who are most active in prosecuting leading members of the former regime. The records are of the Department of Investigations, which cracked down on Stroessner's political opponents, real or imagined; and the Technical Office of the Interior Ministry, the regime's anti-communist section. They document what Paraguayans have long known: the Stroessner regime kidnapped, tortured and executed people it considered subversive. Judge Benitez Riera relied on the files during the trial of the former head of the Department of Investigations, Pastor Coronel, for his role in the death of an alleged subversive named Mario Schaerer Prono. "Coronel" always maintained he (Schaerer Prono) never entered the Department. The files prove he did, and he died in police custody" on April 6, 1976, the day after he was arrested.

Benitez Riera said. There was enough other evidence to convict Coronel last year. He was sentenced to 25 years in prison. Judge Augustin Fernandez also is cataloging the files. "The No. 1 value is to support the idea that there is no impunity, that people who commit crimes must be punished," he said. Fernandez is now prosecuting Coronel's replacement, Santiago Flores Torres, for lying about the Almada case. Flores Torres had claimed the secret police archives did not exist. Only a small part of the files have been examined so far. They deal mostly with Paraguayans, but there are international aspects. The files document cooperation in the 1960s and 1970s between the military regimes of Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay to kidnap alleged subversives in one or the other country, and send them home. That program was called "Operation Condor."

Some Paraguayans, Almada included, expect the files to show U.S. support for Stroessner's repressive apparatus.

Starving Srebrenica struggles to survive

By MARIJ HEZROVIC
The Associated Press

SREBRENICA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Facing starvation, the people of Srebrenica must struggle like animals to survive. Cut off from almost all aid for nearly a year, Srebrenica's hungry say they have long risked death for food. First, they walked into enemy fire or cornfields planted with mines. Now they scramble to the hills for meals dropped by U.S. planes, fighting for the precious packages. In a year of war, local authorities claim 2,000 people have been killed in fighting in the area, and about 500 have died of hunger. In the morass of mud and begging refugees that are Srebrenica's streets today, figures cannot be verified. New arrivals stream daily into a town already packed as tight as a box of matches. Thirty thousand refugees in a town normally housing 6,000 residents. Thousands more in outlying areas closer to Serb lines. They struggle in five to 10 at a time. Women carrying offspring. Elderly leaning on sticks.

Children caked in mud from feet to waist. Clothes worn and torn, hard shoes on bare feet, faces lined with pain. Nobody knows where to go. Some consider surrendering to the Serbs. Many eat once in two days. "I've been walking since yesterday and I spent the night in the forest," said a 60-year-old woman from Vlasenica. "Thousands of people are on the way here. My husband stayed to fight, my two sons were wounded. Where can I go now?" she asked, her face distorted by tears. People hope vaguely to be evacuated on U.N. convoys. But local authorities have halted evacuations lest they make the town more vulnerable to Serb capture. People seek any kind of shelter. A family of five beds down in a wrecked car. A family of 10 sleeps in a wrecked truck, others in destroyed buildings. More than 80 people sleep in a classroom in a schoolhouse turned refugee center. There is no sewage, no running water. In one room, a man named Hamid lies motionless on the floor. His hair and clothes covered with lice. He is suspected of having typhus. Spring will bring more infection. With garbage piled high in the streets, doctors fear epidemics of hepatitis, typhus, scabies. In hospitals, patients lie on the floor for lack of beds. Before a surgeon and some equipment arrived in August, five doctors who never operated before had to improvise surgery on a gynecological table, hacking infected limbs with saws. There were two surgical knives, sharpened after every operation. Lacking electricity, doctors operated only in daylight. A wood stove served for sterilization. Tablecloths became bandages. Water was distilled in a brandy barrel. Doctors said several patients bled to death for lack of transfusions. Wounds became infected easily. With no drugs to treat them, injured legs and arms had to be amputated. Patients were taken down as doctors sawed through limbs. Operations often lasted two hours and the screams reached the street, said Dr. Ilijas Pilav, who said he performed such surgery. In November, a U.N. relief convoy brought anesthetics. But there was no muscle relaxant. During stomach operations, doctors straggled to push intestines back inside the body. That convoy was one of only three to reach Srebrenica before March 8, when trucks arrived after Gen. Philippe Morillon, U.N. commander for Bosnia, talked aid past the Serbs. Already last summer, residents say, food was short. Civilians would follow Bosnian soldiers attacking Serb villages, entering just behind them to scavenge food. Some would die trying. Locals recalled the village of Osovo, where civilians invaded ahead of the army. Chaos resulted, with civilian deaths doubling those of soldiers, local authorities said. When crops ripened in autumn, hundreds of people ventured into dangerous no man's land on the fertile left bank of the Drina River border with Serbia. Easy targets in the open, dozens died. Mahmut Becirovic, a refugee who scavenged for grain, said fields were mined and scores lost limbs. Others recalled people walking like zombies over corpses. By December, cold and hunger combined to kill. A local official said that in Grabovicka Rijeka, on the Drina about 12 miles from Srebrenica, more than 80 people died in three nights. People ate hay and even the refuse of corn, which swelled the intestines and cause death. In December, one woman and two children were found dead with swollen stomachs, doctors in Srebrenica said. As a last resort, people milled the flowers of hazelnut trees for bread. Then, that ran out.

Weight Loss And Inflation Are Factors In Tire Wear

Have you taken a good look at your tires lately? Since they're the only thing between your car and the pavement, maybe it's time for a close inspection. This means getting the car off the ground on a lift. Automobile tires are designed to last many thousands of miles, through just about every conceivable road condition, but it's not the road that is responsible for premature tire wear. It's neglect. Following are five chief causes of early tire wear or failure.

1. Incorrect Inflation. Under-inflated tires tend to wear along the sides while over-inflation will wear a strip down the middle of the tread.
2. Badly Worn Tires. Tires that are soft all the time, but don't be fooled and assume inflation is correct. If you don't already own one, says Car Care Council, spend a few dollars for a tire gauge and use it at least once a month.
3. Incorrect Alignment. Periodic adjustments to steering and suspension components can generally correct this condition. You'll notice greatly improved steering and handling after correcting a misalignment problem. You'll also get better tire wear.
4. Poor Driving Habits. Careless driving over bumps and holes or coasting into curves can damage tires, change wheel alignment and/or balance. High speed driving and cornering too fast also contribute to premature tire wear.
5. Overloading. Towing a boat or travel trailer add to tire wear. Even too much junk in the trunk, like an outdoor motor and/or heavy tools and equipment, take their toll. Lighten up for better tire wear and fuel economy, says the Council.

If you own a front wheel drive car, you probably will need rear wheel alignment too. Balance (N Balance). Tires that don't wear evenly often are victims of this condition. The loss of just one balancing weight from the wheel rim, due to impact with a check hole or curb, can be enough to throw a wheel out of balance. The flat spots that wear into the tread of an imbalanced tire will cause a thumping sound like lumps on the road surface. Worn shock absorbers or struts will accentuate the symptoms and aggravate the wear.

Does Your Car Have An "Attitude" Problem?

Does your car have an "attitude" problem? Maybe its owner is at fault. How long has it been since it had an oil change, tune-up or cooling system service? How's its battery? Give it the spring service it needs and your car should be rarin' to go in even the hottest weather.

Getting older, better than ever

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — To be old does not mean being disabled, according to a study that finds elderly Americans are coping with age better than ever before. It's a trend that could save the nation billions in health care costs, a researcher says.

Duke University researchers report that the prevalence of disability among people age 65 or older dropped by 4.7 percent between 1982 and 1989.

Kenneth G. Manton of Duke said this translates into about 540,000 fewer elderly people requiring help to perform essential activities of daily life than would be expected by earlier trends.

"This could easily mean a savings of several billions of dollars annually in health care costs," Manton said in an interview Tuesday.

Elderly people who can maintain their independence are less likely to require expensive nursing home care or professional assistance in their homes. Of the 31 million Americans 65 or older in 1989, the study found that 24 million, or about 77 percent, were not disabled. This is an increase of 16.3 percent over the seven years studied, the report said.

"This work demonstrates that we must think about aging, and older people, differently," Dr. Gene D. Cohen, acting director of the National Institute on Aging, said in a statement. He said the study findings "give us even greater hope that disability can be managed and even reduced, allowing older people to function better."

Manton and his colleagues analyzed data from a federal long-term care survey and found that older Americans now are better able to live independently, with less help from others.

Several reasons could explain the trend, Manton said.

Older Americans are getting more medical care that enables them to overcome the disorders that often accompany age, he said. As examples, Manton said more people are getting cataract surgery to restore fading eyesight or are undergoing hip or joint replacement operations to maintain their mobility.

There's also been a change in attitude and rising level in education among the elderly. As a result, said Manton, they are more likely now to find ways to adjust techniques of everyday life and are less likely to surrender to declines caused by aging.

"People are learning to cope better and are less accepting of the stereotype that disability is the norm," he said. Between 1982 and 1987, more elderly people began to depend less on personal help in their homes and relied instead on the use of equipment, such as walkers or wheelchairs, or on physical changes in their homes.

For example, the study found there was a 148 percent increase in the use of raised toilets, and 65.9 percent increase in the use of shower seats and tub stools. Such devices contributed to a 9 percent decline in the use of personal assistance for both older men and women, the study found.

Manton said such changes in living facilities also help keep more people from requiring nursing home care.

The Duke researchers drew conclusions from data that counted the number of people who had difficulty in performing any of six activities of daily living, such as eating, bathing and dressing, or any of nine more complex activities, such as cooking, shopping and managing finances.

Health care system not too efficient, but it makes jobs

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It seems everyone has something bad to say about the health care system. They say it's wasteful, irrational and far too costly. An economy wrecker. But rarely do they say this: It creates lots of jobs.

Nearly half of the 550,000 jobs added in the U.S. economy in 1992 were in health services: at hospitals, dental clinics and medical laboratories, for example, according to the Labor Department. In 1991, jobs in the overall economy fell by 1.3 percent, but health services managed a 4.4 percent increase.

David Hiles, a Labor Department economist, calls health services a "job machine."

So, for whatever problems the health system is causing the American economy, the administration surely must be pleased that it is creating jobs in what President Clinton calls a "jobless" economic recovery — right?

Not entirely. As the administration sees it, these by and large are not the sort of jobs that make the economy stronger over the long haul. Labor Secretary Robert Reich says they serve an immediate need but also occupy people whose talents could be put to greater use elsewhere.

"We cannot rely on the health care sector to be the engine of job growth in the United States, and we shouldn't try to rely on it," Reich told reporters this week.

While the administration is glad for any kind of job growth, Reich suggested that Clinton's determination to slow the increase of health care costs will also put the brakes on the industry's hiring.

"When we put a cap on the growth of health expenditures, yes, there are going to be a lot of dislocations," Reich told a group of business executives Tuesday.

That prediction, coming from an administration whose No. 1 goal is to create more jobs, reflects the complexity of the problem.

"It's a real conundrum," said W. Bowman Cutter, deputy assistant to the president for economic policy. Imagine, he said, what people would be saying if say the computer industry instead of the health business were recording such good job gains.

"We'd be ecstatic," Cutter said in an interview. "And there wouldn't be large task forces saying, 'How do we control high-performance computing?'"

The health industry is creating lots of jobs because it is relatively immune to the normal forces of competition. Many economists say that also explains why health costs are eating up an expanding share of national wealth.

Hiles, the labor economist, said the health industry boom is due largely to the nature of the payment system, in which a customer rarely pays directly for services. This gives little incentive either to consumers to limit their use of health services or to health care professionals to hold down their prices.

Thus the hard push in Washington to enact health care reforms this year.

Hiles cited the example of the last major Medicare reform, in 1983, which changed the way hospitals and doctors receive Medicare payments for inpatient care. In the two years before 1983, job growth at hospitals rose by more than 4.5 percent a year. That slowed to a 0.7 percent gain in 1983, and in the next two years, employment actually fell. It resumed growing in 1986.

Reich likened the administration's intent to "downsize" the health industry to the shrinking of the defense establishment already under way.

"We have to control health care costs, just like we have to control military spending," he told a reporter. "Both of those sectors have been avenues of upward mobility for an awful lot of people, and society is challenged" to control those costs and "to come up with other avenues of upward mobility."

That doesn't mean the health industry necessarily will suffer a net loss of jobs as a result of such possible administration moves as price controls or switching to a "managed competition" system in which individuals and small businesses would join large insurance purchasing cooperatives.

"Our people are hearing from managers all sorts of dire predictions of what's going to happen," said Jerry Shea, a health care specialist at the Service Employees International Union, which has 400,000 members employed in health services.

"But our view is there are going to be job opportunities as well as job cutbacks," Shea said.

From 1980 to 1990, Flagler County, Fla., had, by a large margin, the greatest increase in people aged 65 and older — over 266 percent — of any county in the United States. Another Florida county, Hernando, was No. 2.

categories, the study found that a higher proportion of the elderly were finding ways to cope. There was a 6.6 percent decline in the number of elderly with eating difficulties, and a 2.2 percent decline in those who had trouble dressing. Although the study found an increase of 10.6 percent of those who needed help getting in and out of bed, this increase was lower than in 14.7 percent increase in the older population in general.

Reports on different aspects of the study are to be published in the April issue of the journal The Gerontologist and in a later issue of the Journal of Gerontology. Co-authors with Manton in the study were Larry S. Corder and Eric Stallard, also of Duke.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

Magic end slump

ORLANDO — Shaquille O'Neal's 35 points and 16 rebounds helped the Orlando Magic break a three-game losing streak with a 116-90 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers on Tuesday night.

Detroit and Indiana also won, keeping the Magic tied with the Pistons and 1 1/2 games behind the Pacers in the race for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

O'Neal hit 17 of 23 shots from the field in his biggest scoring output in two months. Scott Skiles scored 18 points and Nick Anderson 15 for Orlando, which hit 55 percent of its shots against the porous Sixers defense.

Clarence Weatherspoon led the 76ers with 24 points and 11 rebounds. Johnny Dawkins had 16 points, including four 3-pointers.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins lose first game

MIAMI — The Florida Marlins looked more like an expansion team the second time around.

The Marlins struck out 13 times against Ramon Martinez and two relievers and lost their first game, 4-2 to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

A sellout crowd of 42,689 saw the Marlins' first-ever night game. Florida beat Los Angeles 6-3 in Monday afternoon's opener.

Martinez struck out nine in six innings. He gave up six hits — three in the first — and two runs, and also drove home the Dodgers' first run with a sacrifice fly.

Jim Gott pitched two innings and struck out three. Todd Worrell, a free-agent acquisition from St. Louis, pitched the ninth for a save.

Lightning gain tie

TAMPA — Kevin Miller scored a third-period goal and Curtis Joseph made 40 saves as St. Louis preserved a 2-2 tie with Tampa Bay.

The tie helped maintain the Blues' one-point lead over the Minnesota North Stars for the final playoff spot in the Norris Division as the Minnesota North Stars defeated Buffalo 3-1.

It also broke a five-game home losing streak for the Lightning (22-51-6), who are winless in 10 of 11 games.

Miami whips FIU

MIAMI — Danny Rios retired the first three batters in each of the first four innings leading Miami to a 7-3 win over Florida International.

Gators edge Eagles

GAINESVILLE — Bo Camposano doubled in a run to cap a three-run fifth inning to help Florida over Georgia Southern 5-4.

Sean McClellan gave up two hits over the first five innings to secure the victory for the Gators and even his record at 2-2. Tim Roth (2-2) was the loser, giving up three runs in 4 1/3 innings.

The Eagles made a late comeback scoring a pair of runs in the eighth and two more in the ninth on a two-run homer by Craig Cassedy.

AROUND THE NATION

Cavs cool Heat

RICHFIELD, Ohio — The Cleveland Cavaliers relied on their big men to beat the Miami Heat 115-100.

The Cavs won for the 15th time in their last 16 home games and kept the Heat winless in nine trips to Richfield. The Cavaliers, who passed for 42 assists, are 8-0 when they collect 40 or more in a game.

Brad Daugherty finished with 27 points on 11 of 14 shooting and 10 rebounds. Larry Nance scored 20 points, and Mark Price had 17 points and eight assists.

Grant Long scored 18 points and Harold Miner 17 for the Heat, although 15 came in the fourth quarter, with the outcome no longer in doubt.

Hawkins' sixth-inning blast leads Cubs by Red Sox

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Adam Frank hopes he doesn't see Freddie Hawkins for a while.

Hawkins ripped a two-run home run with one out in the bottom of the sixth inning as the Railroaders Cubs remained undefeated in Sanford Recreation Department Little Major Baseball League play with a 4-2 victory over the Sunniland Corporation Red Sox at Ft. Mellon Park's Roy Holler Field Tuesday evening.

Hawkins' blast, his third hit of the game, spoiled an excellent pitching performance by Frank, who allowed five hits and struck out 11 while walking just one.

Frank was matched pitch for pitch by the Cubs' Terrance Daniels, who scattered six hits, struck out 13 and walked none in collecting the win.

The Cubs are now 6-0 on the season and alone atop the National Division, trailing the leaders are the Rinker Materials Dodgers (4-1), the Expos and the American Legion Cardinals (both 2-3) and the Monroe Harbour Pirates (0-5).

The National Division will play a doubleheader on Thursday night at Roy Holler Field.

At 5:45 p.m., the Pirates will take on the Expos and at 7:45 p.m., the Dodgers will play the Cardinals.

The Red Sox dropped to 4-2 with the loss and gives the undefeated D.A.V. (Disabled American Veterans) Royals (6-0) a full two-game lead in the American Division. Completing the American Division are the Fisher, Laurence & Deen Blue Jays (3-3), the Security National Bank Orioles (1-5) and the First Union Bank A's (0-6).

All of the teams will be in action Saturday at Roy Holler Field. At 8 a.m., the Cubs will host the Expos; at 10 a.m., the Dodgers will battle the Pirates; at noon, the Cardinals will face the Blue Jays; at 2 p.m., the Royals will tackle the Red Sox; and at 4 p.m., the A's will welcome the Orioles.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning as Daniels led off with a single and scored on a double by Hawkins. Hawkins came around on a pair of ground outs by Benji Chisolm and Jared Fedder, who got the RBI.

The Red Sox cut the lead in half in the top of

Tribe makes Z-hills finals

ZEPHYRHILLS — When keeping company among the elite, how you act reveals whether or not you belong.

In the semifinals of the Zephyrhills Invitational baseball tournament Tuesday, the Seminole Fighting Seminoles defeated their second state-ranked team, beating Tallahassee-Maclay 5-2 to advance to this evening's championship game at 7:30 p.m.

Maclay (13-2) is the No. 1-ranked Class 1A team in this week's Florida Sports Writers' Association's state poll. On Monday, Seminole topped Tallahassee-Florida High, ranked fifth in Class 2A.

Maclay and Florida High, which eliminated Zephyrhills Tuesday, will play earlier today for the right to play Seminole, ranked No. 10 in Class 3A.

"We're playing pretty well," said Seminole coach Mike Powers. "These guys (Maclay and Florida High) are very good. We're playing some top calibre teams and there are a bunch of scouts at every game. It's a nice place to show off our ability."

Tony Duncan delivered the game-winning hit in Seminole's 5-2 victory over Tallahassee-Maclay in the semifinals of the Zephyrhills Invitational

Tuesday. With two out in the bottom of the fifth and the bases loaded, Duncan lined a hit off the foot of the Maclay pitcher and into left field.

Seminole Community College pitcher Robert Hathcock put in a little overtime Tuesday, working all 12 innings in the Raiders' 2-1 win over the St. John's River Community College Vikings. SCC plays at Lake City today.

Raiders get most out of Cruz's hit

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Isaac Cruz only had one hit in six trips to the plate Tuesday afternoon for the Seminole Community College baseball team, but that one hit may rank as one of the most important of the Raiders' season.

With scored tied 1-1 and the bases loaded in the bottom of the 12th inning, Cruz hit a one-out single to score Randy Hagar with the game-winning run, lifting the Raiders to a 2-1 decision over St. John's River Community College in a Mid-Florida Conference contest.

The win keeps SCC (18-15 overall, 10-6 in the M-FC) in a three-way battle for the conference's second berth in the state tournament with Santa Fe (11-7 in the M-FC after beating Florida Community College at Jacksonville Tuesday) and Lake City (10-5 in the M-FC going into Tuesday's game with Valencia).

FCC-J, ranked No. 1 in Tuesday's state junior college poll, leads the Mid-Florida Conference with a 13-4 mark.

SCC could make great strides toward securing that state tournament berth over the next 36 hours, playing a make-up game this afternoon at Lake City and traveling to Gainesville on Thursday to face Santa Fe.

By the same token, the Raiders very nearly crippled themselves

Tuesday afternoon, needing 12 innings to beat St. John's River (12-23 overall, 0-14 in the SAC).

The Raiders scored a run before they got a hit Tuesday. In the bottom of third, Oviedo graduate Erik Jordan and Johnny Goodrich each drew a walk. After B.J. Calapa, another Oviedo graduate, bunted them up to second and third, Cruz grounded out to second base, allowing Jordan to score the game's first run.

Designated hitter Pete Bezeredi registered SCC's first hit when he singled with one out in the fourth inning. Bezeredi also doubled in the sixth.

By comparison, SCC pitcher Bob Hathcock gave up a single to the first batter he faced — Lyman graduate Kevin Scott — but didn't give up a run until the eighth inning.

Scott led off the eighth with a single but was forced at second when Charles Fadoul attempted to put down a sacrifice bunt. Edwin Gantney then singled Fadoul to

Raines hits three-run homer as Sox win opener

By MIKE MADEL

AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Sanford's Tim Raines hit a three-run homer during a six-run fourth inning Tuesday night and the Chicago White Sox won their seventh successive season opener, 10-5 over the Minnesota Twins.

Jack McDowell, 20-10 last season, allowed seven hits in six innings, including two-run home runs by Kirby Puckett and Dave Winfield. He also walked five but still won for the 47th time since the 1990 All-Star break, more than any other big-league pitcher in that span.

Kevin Tapani's string of wins in home openers ended at three. He allowed eight hits and nine runs, eight earned, in 3 1/3 innings.

The crowd of 51,617 demanded curtain calls from Puckett in the first inning and Winfield in the third after their homers rallied the Twins to a 4-3 lead. Winfield has 1,009 extra-base hits, tied with Ernie Banks for 18th in history, and leads active major leaguers with 433 homers.

But the cheers quickly turned to grumbles. Robin Ventura and Ellis Burks singled. Lance Johnson doubled in a run and Ron Karkovice walked before Ozzie Guillen's sacrifice fly put Chicago ahead. Raines sent Tapani's next pitch over the right-field wall for an 8-4 lead. Joey Cora then doubled, stole third and scored on reliever Mike Hartley's wild pitch.

Raines also led off the game with a single as Chicago took a 3-0 first-inning lead on George Bell's two-run double and Frank Thomas' RBI grounder. Raines later stole his first base of the season in the sixth inning.

Bo Jackson, back in baseball for the first time since Oct. 5, 1991, wasn't in Chicago's lineup. A football injury necessitated hip-replacement surgery and has made the once-speedy Jackson a DH; manager Gene Lamonit used Bell there.

Sanford rookie pilot Wathen posts fourth Run-About victory

By PAUL MARSELLA
Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Sanford's Mike Wathen took command at the halfway point and went on to win the Action Performance 20-lap Spring Run-About championship last Saturday night, April 3, at New Smyrna Speedway.

Wathen, who started the race from the eighth position of the 14-car field, took over second place on the sixth lap. Four laps later, Wathen passed leader Chuck Vola with an inside move coming out of turn four and took over the point.

Holding off a late race challenge by Brian Schlimmer (the winner of the Spring Classic the previous evening at Orlando Speedworld), Wathen took the checkers for his fourth win of the season.

"I'm real excited about my progress and this class," said Wathen, 26, who has been racing for about six months. "In 15 races, I have four wins and two seconds. I'm racing a '77 Olds that only cost me $400. This is a real good division to start in."

"As soon as I get some more experience, I'll be moving up to the Bomber class."

The Run-About class is for novice drivers only. They run street-legal American cars with a 100-inch wheelbase.

Trailing Wathen and Schlimmer to victory lane were Lee Wagner, Brett Weber, and Vern Porter.

For the second time in the same weekend, Wayne Anderson took top honors in the Late Model division. Fresh off of a win Friday night at the Orlando facility, Anderson repeated the feat Saturday night at New Smyrna.

Anderson, who started the race from the fourth position, took the lead before the completion of the first lap. He then went on to lead every circuit to score his sixth win of the season.

"I'm real pleased with the way the season is going," said Anderson, who is the current FASCAR Late Model points leader. "Out of 40 races, I have 11 wins and 30 top-five finishes. I have to give my dad a lot of credit for this. He's helping us set the car up and giving me some good driving advice."

Anderson's dad, Dick, is a legend in his own right in short-track stockcar racing and still competes on a weekly basis.

Anderson was trailed across the finish line by David Rogers, Bobby Blake, Greg Froemming, and James Tucker Jr.

Ted Vulpia was the winner of the Mini-Stock feature with Jerry Symons, Bobby Sears, J.D. Duncan, and Don Horne rounding out the top five.

Bill Loomis led every lap to win the Sportman main event. Finishing second through fifth were, respectively, Dale Howard, Tony Johnson, Dale Clauser, and David LeBeau.

Wally Semrow outdueled Johnny Mitchell to win his seventh Bomber race of the season. Chasing Semrow and Mitchell to victory lane were Mike Peppier, Dee Napier, and David Gould.

Dave Savicki won the Modified classic with Sanford's John Ripley, Mike Fitch, Wayne Parker, and Bob Rainey in tow.

For the second consecutive week, Keith Baiga took top honors in Limited Late Model action. Finishing behind Baiga were Jacob Warren, Michael Williams, Jeff Kolp, and Eddie Rice.

Volusia division pacesetters add to leads

Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — Brothers David and Tony Ponder as well as Jay Whittaker extended their leads in the 1993 track points standings after winning their respective division's races for the second straight week last Saturday night, April 3, at Volusia County Speedway.

Tony Ponder of DeLand claimed the 30-lap Late Model Stock trophy for the second straight week (boosting his division-leading points total to 360) while division newcomer Scott Lagasse slipped into second place ahead of Mike Hunter of DeLeon Springs.

Two weeks into the season, which will not conclude until Saturday, Sept. 18, Hunter trails Ponder by 25 points, 360-335. Wayne Lockett moved into third place (316 points) while Donnie Glessner is now fourth (293). Lagasse, on the strength of his second-place finish Saturday, is now fifth (170).

David Ponder, also of DeLand, hit the winner's circle at Volusia for the second straight week, claiming the hardware for the victory in the 15-lap Sportman Division with his Steel & Post-sponsored No. 26.

Ponder sits atop the Sportman list with 360 points with Rusty Ebersole, second to Ponder on the track two weeks in a row, is 20 points back at 340.

Two-time third-place finisher Karl Stairs is third in the points standings (330) while Bill Morris (320) has finished fourth two weeks in a row. Earl Mark of DeLand, having early engine problems, is now fifth (306).

Whittaker, another DeLand driver, claimed his second straight win over DeLona's Gene Menning and the rest of the pack in the Hobby Stock division to take a 20-point lead over Menning in the points standings (380-340).

Third is J.D. Clark (330) while Jim Butler

(315) and Robert Letter (310) are battling it out for fourth and fifth.

John Gamble's gift win in the Florida Modified division main event after leaders Wayne Heck, and Ed Woodring hit the wall coming out of turn four on the last of 20 laps last Saturday was good enough to move Gamble into second place in the points standings.

Gamble's 335 points trails only the total of David Indiveri (350), winner of the division's season-opening race. Ted Richard moves into third (330) while Woodring and Mike Guinaugh are tied for fourth (320). Bob MacKenzie is right behind the two (292).

Chris Lawrence, winner of the season opener for Street Stocks, got a little help from fellow racer Jimmy Heffner last Saturday night when his No. 63 Camaro couldn't make the feature event.

Anderson survives late-race challenge in Late Model win

By PAUL MARSELLA
Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Wildwood's Wayne Anderson led every circuit to win the Sonny King Orange Buick 25-lap Late Model feature event last Friday night, April 2, at Orlando Speedworld.

Anderson, who started the race on the outside pole, quickly jumped to a three-car advantage over the rest of the field. A caution-free race allowed Anderson to extend his lead to about 15-car lengths by the halfway point.

Suddenly, Don Fenn, who was running a distant second, made a charge at Anderson and closed on the leader's rear bumper with five laps to go. Despite several laps of door-to-door racing, Anderson was able to hold off the charge and made his fifth trip of the season to victory lane.

"The car was just outstanding tonight," said Anderson. "The current FASCAR Late Model points leader. "The crew does a real good job of keeping it race ready. That takes a lot of responsibility off of me and I can concentrate on racing."

Following Anderson and Fenn to the checkers were David King, Tank Tucker Jr., and Eddie Perry.

Barbara Pierce outdueled Paul Colgan and Bill Loomis to score her first win of the season in Sportman action. Fourth place went to Walt Loggins with Chuck McRoberts taking fifth.

Gary Schlichter dominated racing action in the Limited Late Model division to win his first ever feature at the Orlando speed plant. Rounding out the top five, in order of finish, were Jacob Warren, Mike Todd, Tommy Peters, and Jeff Kolp.

Jessie Pennington went green flag to checkers to score his first ever win the Bomber division. John Smith, Wally Semrow, David Gould, and Darren Gould trailed Pennington across the finish line.

Earnhardt, Wallace top Winston Cup standings

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Two former champions are locked in an early duel for the lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup points chase.

Five-time champion Dale Earnhardt leads the standings with 979 points after the six races of the 30-race, $26.5 million season. Rusty Wallace, whose victory in Sunday's Food

City 500 at Bristol (Tenn.) International Raceway made him the first double winner of the season, has 932.

The 47-point difference between Earnhardt and Wallace, the 1989 NASCAR Winston Cup champion, represents the difference between the first and ninth place in a race.

"I think it'd be great for everybody if it came down to me and Rusty at the end of the season," said Earnhardt, who has been a friend of Wallace for many years.

"We've still got a long way to go and there are a lot of good teams that will be in the hunt before it's all over. Still, I think everybody would really enjoy watching an Earnhardt-Wallace battle. In fact, I don't think anybody would enjoy it more than Earnhardt and Wallace," Earnhardt said. Geoff Bodine is third with 861 points, Mark Martin is fourth with 855 and Davey Allison is fifth with 804.

Rounding out the top 10 are Dale Jarrett, 802; Morgan Shepherd, 795; Kyle Petty, 774; Jeff Gordon, 744 and Jimmy Spencer, 738.

Earnhardt leads with $434,560 in winnings. Daytona 500 winner Jarrett is second with $350,385 and Wallace has $300,945.

Seminoles

Leading Seminole was winning pitcher Rob Morgan (6-2), who scattered eight hits over seven innings, striking out six and walking two, one intentionally.

"We were short on pitching coming into yesterday's game (with Florida High)," Powers said. "We had played Friday and Saturday. But (Jeremy) Chunal pitched well last night and Morgan pitched well tonight. And Todd Braden will go tomorrow. "The kids have really come through for us. We're facing topnotch competition and the kids are playing real well."

Tucker Barr gave Maclay a 1-0 lead when hit a home run with two outs in the top of the first inning. Seminole came back in the bottom of the second inning, when Phillip King drew a two-out walk and David Eckstein launched a two-run home run.

Maclay tied the score with a run in the top of the fifth but Seminole again answered with two runs in the bottom half of the inning.

With one out, Matt Diemer was hit by a pitch. An out later, Chunal reached on an error and John Luchering walked to load the bases. Tony Duncan then hit line drive off of the pitcher's foot and into left field, scoring Diemer and Chunal.

The Tribe added a run in the sixth inning. King led off with a walk, took second on a balk, advanced to third on Eckstein's sacrifice bunt, and scored on Diemer's single down the left field line.

Matt Freeman and Cory Gochee also hit singles for the Seminole.

second base. An out later, Lake Mary graduate Chad Ebert hit a single to center field, scoring Fadoul with the tying run.

Randy Hagar led off the bottom of the 12th with a double to left field. After Jordan was intentionally walked, the two advanced on a successful double steal. Johnny Goodrich then was intentionally walked to set up the force play. Calapa was retired on a fly to left field before Cruz delivered the game-winning hit.

The Raiders dodged several bullets before pulling out the win. In the second inning, Josh Alexander hit a one-out triple for St. John's but was thrown out at the plate by third baseman Rick Eckstein when Alexander tried to score on a ground ball.

St. John's loaded the bases in the seventh on two walks and an error by Cruz. But the Raiders escaped that jam when Jordan, the Raider left fielder, caught a line drive by Rob Gore and threw out Ebert, who tried to tag up and score on the play.

Beseredi was the only Raider with more than one hit. Randy Hagar doubled and scored a run while Jordan singled and scored a run. Cruz was credited with two RBI and a single. Ray Hagar and Goodrich each hit a single.

For St. John's, Scott had three singles. Alexander hit a triple. Fadoul singled and scored a run. Ebert had a single and an RBI. Gaine and Mike Wiggs each added a single.

the second inning. Donald White led off the inning with a single. White then stole second and continued all the way home as the Cuba catcher's throw sailed into center field for an error.

That's the way the game remained until the sixth inning as Frank and Daniels took over.

The Red Sox finally got something going in the top of the sixth inning. With one out, Jimmy Franklin singled, went to second on a wild pitch and stole third base. After another out, Frank tied the game with a single, scoring Franklin.

The Cuba got the winning runs in the bottom of the sixth inning when, with one out, Daniels doubled and stole third base before scoring ahead of Hawkins' home run.

Doing the damage for the winner's were Hawkins (home run, double, single, two runs, three RBI), Daniels (double, single, two runs) and Fodder (RBI).

Providing the offense for the Red Sox were Bud Bennett and T.J. Thompson (one double each), White and Franklin (one single and one run scored each), Frank (single, RBI) and Justin Erickson (single).

Kitchen designer's cooking motto: 'Be impressive, but make it easy'

By RENEE KEITH
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Jeana Morrison's life definitely revolves around kitchens. As the owner and designer of Kitchen and Bath Designs, her expertise in custom kitchen designing is in high demand. "I began my own business five years ago on a part-time basis only. However, through the grace of God and hard work, my business has grown into a full-time career." Working side by side with her clients, Jeana can accomplish what she has found to be almost every lady's desire, the dream kitchen. "Her ideal work place." "The kitchen is the heart of the home. With some creative and functional designing, the kitchen will oftentimes bring about that certain flow that will follow through the rest of your home," says Jeana.

Jeana and her husband, Danny, have been married for 11 years. Like Jeana, he also owns his own business. For nine years, Morrison Landscape Maintenance has been in operation here in Sanford. They have one son, Danny Jr., who works with his father in the landscape business.

With Jeana and Danny having such full schedules, finding that family time together can be quite an undertaking at times, however, quality time in their personal lives is of the utmost importance. Dinner time is one of their "come together" family times. So, with that in mind, Jeana makes sure she has something pleasing and delicious prepared. And with the vast array of clients she has, Jeana has been able to pick up on some new and exciting recipes. Her motto where cooking is concerned is "Be impressive, but make it easy!"

Microcook Easter dinner, including entrees

Easter dinner usually has lamb, ham or turkey as the entree. This is probably decided by tradition or your family's preferences. Each of these larger cuts of meat or poultry can be very successfully cooked in the microwave oven with little effort and a great savings in time and energy. The standing time for each of the larger cuts will allow you plenty of time to microwave vegetables, the salad can be prepared well in advance, so the meals will not require the cook to spend the whole day in the kitchen. It's all a matter of timing and planning.

BONELESS HAM WITH CHERRY GLAZE

1 2.5 lb. full cooked boneless or canned ham
Glaze
1 jar (12 oz.) cherry preserves
1 Tbsp. Dijon mustard
¼ cup red wine vinegar
Combine all glaze ingredients in 1-quart measure. Microwave on 100 percent power 5-7 minutes or until slightly thickened. Elevate ham, fat side side down, on microwave roasting rack. Cover with wax paper. Microwave on 50 percent power until temperature reaches 130° or 5-10 per pound. Turn ham over, halfway through cooking and score and glaze. When ham has finished cooking, remove from microwave oven.

TURKEY BREAST

Turkey breast — fresh or frozen (thawed)
3 Tbsp. Kitchen Bouquet browning sauce
2 Tbsp. butter or margarine
¼ cup white wine or apple juice

Combine browning sauce and butter in 1-cup glass measure. Microwave on 100 percent power 30 seconds. Dry turkey breast. Brush with sauce. (This will prevent the sauce streaking the turkey.) Place turkey on roasting rack, breast side down. Add wine or apple juice. Cover with wax paper. Microwave 10-12 minutes per pound. Estimate the total cooking time and divide time in half. Microwave 5 minutes on 100 percent power, reduce power to 50 percent and microwave the remaining part of the first half of the time. Turn breast over. Glaze with sauce again. Microwave the remaining time. Let stand 20-15 minutes, tented in foil.

This carrot casserole would be a good accompaniment to any of the entrees. It could be cooked during the entire standing time. Cover with foil and allow to stand 10-15 minutes. Glaze again before serving.

ROAST LEG OF LAMB

One 4-5 lb. leg of lamb

MARINADE

¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup olive oil
1 Tbsp. Kitchen Bouquet browning sauce
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp. fresh rosemary
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper

Combine all marinade ingredients in 8x11-inch oblong dish. Marinate lamb 3-4 hours, turning several times or overnight in the refrigerator. Place lamb on roasting rack, fat side down. Microwave on 100 percent power 5 minutes, reduce power to 50 percent and microwave.

Rare — 8-9 minutes per pound
Medium — 10 minutes per pound
Well — 12 minutes per pound

Turn leg over, halfway through cooking. Allow to stand, tented with foil, 15-20 minutes before serving.

CARROT CASSEROLE

1 lb. carrots, peeled and chopped
¼ cup onion, chopped
2 Tbsp. water in which 1 tsp. salt is dissolved
¼ cup mayonnaise

1 Tbsp. Dijon mustard
1 egg, beaten
1 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. tarragon
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup sharp cheese, grated

Place carrots and onion in 1½-quart casserole. Pour salt water over carrots. Cover, with plastic wrap. Microwave on 100 percent power, 5-7 minutes. Allow to stand 5 minutes, before draining. Combine mayonnaise, mustard, egg, and seasonings. Add to carrots. Mix thoroughly. Microwave on 70 percent power 5 minutes. Top with cheese. Let stand, covered, 3-4 minutes or until cheese begins to melt.

Easter treats for kids

Treat-filled, decorated baskets for the children are a popular part of the Easter celebration. This year, tuck a wrapped Hippity Hoppity Pop or Egg into your child's Easter basket. They will be delighted to discover their favorite cereal — marshmallow treats shaped and decorated with colorful candy sprinkles. The mixture can even be formed into miniature candy baskets, a unique treat idea for birthday parties or classroom celebrations.

One recipe makes 12 pops, eggs or mini-baskets. Home economists recommend using the microwave oven to prepare this recipe. After portioning, the individual treats can be re-warmed, if needed, in the microwave oven for easier shaping and handling. Also, light corn syrup can be warmed in the microwave oven and brushed lightly over the shapes before rolling them in the candy decorations.

HIPPITY HOPPITY TREATS

Pops, Eggs or Mini-Baskets (makes 12)

- 1/4 cup margarine or butter
- 1 pkg. (10 oz., about 40) regular marshmallows or 4 cups miniature marshmallows
- 6 cups oven toasted rice cereal
- Colored candy sprinkles or assorted candies (for the mini-

Fill baskets with Easter treats.

baskets)
 1. Microwave margarine and marshmallows at High (500 percent) in large glass mixing bowl for 2 minutes. Stir to combine. Microwave at high 1 1/2 to 2 minutes longer. Stir until smooth.
 2. Add cereal. Stir until well coated, quickly divide warm mixture into 12 portions on buttered surface (about 1/4 cup each). With buttered hands shape as desired. Roll warm shapes in candy sprinkles. Re-warm individual treats in the microwave oven for up to 10 seconds, if needed, for easier handling.
 3. Insert wooden sticks, if making pops. If making mini-baskets, mixture can be reshaped as they cool. Cool completely. Cover tightly. If using for Easter baskets, wrap individual treats in clear plastic wrap.

Micro-Tip — Reheating: Did you know that the microwave oven reheats most foods without loss of flavor or texture? When conflicting schedules prevent a coordinated mealtime, put an individual portion on a microwaveable plate for the latecomer. Cover and refrigerate. Then reheat, covered, when needed. The microwave oven becomes your short-order cook.

Happy smokers have no desire to give up weeds

DEAR ABBY: You told "A Moderate Texan in Freeport" you had never heard anyone say, "Gee, I'm glad I'm a smoker."

Well, now you've heard it. That's not all. Not only am I glad I smoke, I'm glad I do a number of other things some folks might consider evil — or bad for my health. I also have a few drinks occasionally — and there have been times when I've had one too many. I also eat ham and eggs — fried in butter — and I love steak and baked potatoes with plenty of sour cream.

In case you think I'm some kind of kook, I'm a happily married, 60-year-old man. I finished college with an M.A. and B.A., and recently retired from a long career in law enforcement. On retiring, I had almost nine months work of sick leave on the books because I had never taken any time off for illness. (So much for the theory that smokers cost industry billions of dollars a year due to illness.)

Abby, everybody has to die of something, and I would much rather enjoy my time on earth and die a little earlier than live a few more years and deprive myself of the things I enjoy.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Furthermore, I firmly believe that heredity plays a major role in how long we live — not diet and exercise, jogging and aerobics, or any of the other foolishness that health freaks advocate for longevity. (Incidentally, I notice a lot of folks die of heart attacks while exercising.)

My dad is 86, and he shoots pool every night at his senior center clubhouse. He is one of 12 kids, and with the exception of two who died accidentally, they all lived into their 80s and 90s whether they smoked or not.

Since I don't agree with you, you probably won't print this, but I feel better for having written it. By the way, I've left instructions for my obituary to read: "No matter what he died from, smoking didn't kill him."

IVERTSON, SACRAMENTO

DEAR AL: Well, I asked for it. Here's another letter in support of smokers:

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, in her 20s, had terminal breast cancer and she never smoked. I am a smoker, and we smokers are such amicable and gracious people that we do not lambaste others.

When my daughter was in Shands Hospital in Gainesville, Fla., it was the smokers who came by her room asking if I needed anything from town. It was the smokers — though they were strangers — who peeked in to offer comfort when things looked bleak.

At Emory, where my daughter received her bone marrow transplant, the smokers found a place for me to stay — at no cost — and smokers were welcomed!

Smokers have a special comradeship. Not only do we smoke together, we communicate. Wherever you non-smokers put us, we huddle together and share our experiences as "social outcasts."

Cook

Cubed Steak and Mushrooms is one of her favorites. This recipe falls into her category of easy. A few minutes of preparation in the morning, then put entire pan in the refrigerator. You can go on about your busy day and when you return home, you simply remove the pan from the refrigerator, add the mushrooms and simmer on a medium heat for about 20 minutes. "Your family will think you've been cooking all afternoon."

BOBBIE'S SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE is almost always requested when there is a function that requires a covered dish. "Everyone really raves about its a sweet, nutty taste." Impressive, yet easy, that is how Jeana describes Broccoli Stuffed Shells. This recipe is just wonderful if you're entertaining. I like to complement this dish with a Caesar salad topped with feta cheese. It makes a healthy combination and also adds a beautiful touch of color. "I feel a colorful presentation is almost as important as the taste itself."

BOBBIE'S SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

- 2 cups mashed, cooked sweet potatoes
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup melted butter or margarine
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup milk
- Combine all ingredients and pour into greased 2 qt. casserole. Mix together and top with: 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/4 cup all purpose flour
- 2 1/2 Tbsp. melted butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans (1 pkg.) (I usually add more.)
- Bake at 375° for 30 to 40 minutes until slightly firm.

BROCCOLI STUFFED SHELLS

- 1 Tbsp. butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 cup Ricotta cheese (non-fat variation is good)
- 1 egg
- 2 cups chopped cooked broccoli or 1 package frozen 10 oz., thawed and drained
- 1 cup (40 oz.) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- 20 jumbo pasta shells (about 1/2 of large box)
- 1 can (28 oz.) crushed tomatoes with added puree
- 1 package (1 oz.) Hidden Valley Ranch Original Recipe salad dressing mix
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- Preheat oven to 350°. In small skillet, melt butter over medium heat. Add onion; cook until onion is tender, not browned. Set aside to cool. In large bowl, stir Ricotta cheese and egg. Add broccoli and Jack cheese; mix well. Cook pasta shells 8 to 10 minutes until just barely tender (Do not overcook, they will fall apart!) Stuff each shell with about 2 tablespoons broccoli-cheese mixture.

In medium bowl, combine tomatoes, sauteed onion and salad dressing mix; mix well. Pour one third of the tomato mixture into 13x9-inch baking dish. Arrange filled shells in dish. Spoon remaining tomato mixture over top. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake, covered, until hot and bubbly, about 30 minutes.

Serves 4.

MATTIE'S COLLARD GREENS

- 2 large bunches fresh collard greens
- 5 or 6 large tablespoons bacon drippings
- 1 1/2 large tablespoons salt
- To prepare collard greens for cooking, remove stems from leaves. Wash 3 or 4 times in sink full of water. Tear leaves into smaller pieces.
- Fill large Dutch oven with 1/2 pot of water. Add bacon drippings and salt. Bring to a boil and add greens. (Make sure water covers the top of the greens. Add more water if necessary.) Bring to second boil for about 5 minutes. Then reduce heat and allow to simmer for about 1 1/2 hours or until tender. Taste for saltiness. Add a little more salt if necessary. Makes enough to feed large family. Enjoy!

JEANA'S LOW-FAT CUBED STEAK AND MUSHROOMS

- 1 Tbsp. margarine
- 4 pieces cubed steak
- 1/2 small onion, sliced
- 1 pint fresh mushrooms, cut in halves
- 1 cup Knorr Beef Bouillon (do not substitute!)
- In the morning, lightly season cubed steak with salt and pepper. In non-stick skillet, add margarine and cubed steak, brown both sides quickly on medium high heat. Add onions and Knorr Beef Bouillon, reduce heat to medium low and simmer 15 minutes. Remove pan from heat and allow to cool.
- Before leaving for your busy day, put entire pan in refrigerator.
- When you return that afternoon, remove pan from refrigerator and simmer on medium heat. About 15 or 20 minutes before serving add mushroom halves.
- Makes a delicious main dish. Serve with your favorite green vegetable and pasta or wild rice.

CAESAR SALAD

- Romaine lettuce
- 1 pint Cherry tomatoes, cut in halves
- Green olives with pimentos
- Feta Cheese
- Parmesan cheese
- Remove stems from leaves and tear in bite-size pieces. Arrange leaves on individual plates and top with tomato halves, olives and crumbled Feta cheese. Sprinkle with olive oil Caesar dressing and Parmesan cheese.

Antacids work better for gastric problems

DEAR DR. GOTT: Several people I know are using activated charcoal capsules for extreme gastric and stomach discomfort. Since it works as a strong enzyme and doesn't enter the bloodstream in any way, can it be harmful?

DEAR READER: Activated charcoal is not an enzyme. It is a highly absorbent product that traps substances and permits their elimination.

The compound is an invaluable adjunct in treating swallowed poisons because the charcoal binds with the poison to inactivate it. You are correct that activated charcoal does not enter the bloodstream; it is not harmful.

However, I believe there are more effective antidotes for stomach distress, such as gas, heartburn, bloating, and indigestion. Any of the over-the-counter antacids, such as Maalox or Gelusil, will neutralize excess gastric acid more quickly than will charcoal.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What are the risks of a person with an enlarged prostate undergoing prostate surgery? Will I become incontinent or diabetic following the surgery and how accurate is the PSA blood test?

DEAR READER: There are two fundamental types of prostate surgery: the transurethral resection (TUR) and the supra-pubic prostatectomy.

In the first type, part of the prostate gland is removed through the penis, using a device similar to an apple-corer. This operation, which leaves no scar and ordinarily doesn't affect potency, is an extremely common option for men with benign prostate hyperplasia (overgrowth). Once the excess of normal tissue has been removed, the patient no longer suffers from symptoms of bladder obstruction, such as dribbling, nighttime urination, poor urinary control and difficulty voiding.

The supra-pubic operation is more extensive and is usually reserved for men in whom the surgeon suspects prostate cancer. The whole gland is removed through a low-abdominal incision; because of irremediable nerve damage, impotence usually follows.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

The risks, which are ordinarily slight, depend on the type of surgery and include hemorrhage and infection.

By Phillip Alder

If you are defending and know that a bad split is waiting just around the corner, try to make the declarer commit himself in another suit before he finds out about the bad split. Today's deal exhibits the idea.

The bidding wouldn't meet with universal approval. Some Norths would rebid two clubs, not one no-trump. South overbid slightly with three clubs, but two clubs would have been truly feeble. Now North raised to four clubs, hoping for a slam. South almost passed four clubs, but a game-forcing auction is a game-forcing auction.

West led the spade two: queen, king, nine. Back came a crafty heart two: ace, five, four.

Declarer knew that the percentage play for one club loser was to take two finesses. But as he probably needed two heart ruffs in the dummy, South played the ace and another club to West's king.

Back came a naive diamond eight. Declarer rose with dummy's ace, ruffed a diamond in hand, cashed the heart king and ruffed a heart in the dummy. East's spade discard was a shock. However, South had another string to his bow. He ruffed a diamond in hand and led a spade to dummy's 10. When it won, he claimed 11 tricks: two spades, two hearts, one diamond and six clubs (four in hand and two ruffs in the dummy).

When in with the club king, West should have led another spade. South, thinking that the hearts are probably breaking 4-3, might not be willing to risk the finesse. And if he puts up the spade ace, he goes down in his contract.
