Police seek return of radio

SANFORD — A police radio was taken during a residential home robbery on Tuesday and Sanford Police are hoping to get the item back.

According to incident reports, Cmdr. Bill Hissom's home in the Loch Arbor subdivision in Seminole County near Sanford was burglarized and among the items taken were five pistols valued at $2,050, an estimated $1,010 in jewelry and other items and the radio, valued at $4,000.

According to Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire, the radio was activated for transmission about 20 minutes after the burglary was reported.

"As soon as it is activated for transmission, even if the person doing that says nothing dispatch is aware of that and is able to deactivate it," Whitmire said.

The radio may appear "dead or useless" to those trying to use it at this time, Whitmire said. But it can be reactivated by police.

"We don't want them to throw it away because it can be used," he said.

Pomp and circumstance

LAKE MARY — The first graduation of Siemens, Stromberg-Carlson apprenticeship program has been moved to 1 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 11.

The planned visit of President Bill Clinton was cancelled and Secretary of Labor Robert Reich will not attend the event.

Secretary of Education Richard Riley is still scheduled as the speaker for the graduation.

The nationally-recognized program is a two-and-a-half-year telecommunications technician training program. The 15 students have scored higher on internationally standardized tests than any of their counterparts in the U.S. and Germany.

Phone fraud

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole County Sheriff's Fraud and Forgery Unit is following up on a possible scam against an Altamonte Springs woman.

According to Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Martha Holes told of having received a message on her answering machine at approximately 8 p.m. Tuesday, from a man who identified himself as Richard Briggs, 421 Rodeo Drive, Beverly Hills, California.

Briggs reportedly told the woman she had just won a contest in which the prizes included a $1,000 stereo, $200 in groceries and a vacation trip. However, he said she would first have to send a check for $289 to cover processing fees before receiving her prizes.

McDonough said the woman thought about it, but eventually decided not to send any money, choosing instead to contact the sheriff's office.

Amnesty day announced

SANFORD — Seminole County will be sponsoring another Amnesty Day, Saturday, Feb. 11. Residents of Seminole County will be able to dispose of hazardous household waste.

Young men most likely to need emergency treatment

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
 Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — "We're two wild and crazy guys" became a popular catch phrase a few years ago from a Saturday Night Live comedy sketch as two immigrants sensed they were on top of the world and no obstacle was too great to overcome in their new life in the U.S.

Whether prompted by a feeling of invincibility or the "No fear" attitude touted on teens t-shirts these days, a national survey released Wednesday shows young men in their late teens and early 20s comprise the majority of hospital emergency room patients.

However, at Central Florida Regional Hospital, the average age of men treated in the ER is 30 while the average age for females is 32. The nationwide survey figures suggest men in their late teens and early 20s are especially injury-prone.

Tim Puthoff, a marketing representative for the local hospital said the information on the most common types of injuries treated is not available. There were 12,794 patients treated in the local ER during 1994, Puthoff said.

Falls and motor vehicle accidents were the leading causes of injuries that led to a trip to the emergency department, said a report by the National Center for Health Statistics.

SANFORD — The bicycles have been well loved, it seems to tell.

And while the paint may be scraped in spots and some of the chains may be hanging a little loose, the bikes will still be loved.

Helen Morris is making sure of that.

Morris, the outreach coordinator and dropout prevention teacher in the district's Full Service Schools program, distributed 20 bicycles to the members of six families involved in the Full Service program.

The bicycles were donated by the Seminole County Sheriff's office.

Groundhog predicts weather today

SANFORD — Today is Groundhog Day, but no groundhog was around to see his shadow at the Central Florida Zoological Park.

"We don't have one here," commented Zoo Marketing Director Andrea Farmer. "If we did, I'm sure we could really give Phil some serious competition. After all, why should we let a Pennsylvania groundhog determine the weather we have here in Florida?"

In Pennsylvania this morning, Phil, the world's smallest and funniest weather forecaster, failed to see his shadow as he was hauled from his burrow, indicating according to legend that

Attempted murder trial continues

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

SANFORD — Odd, strange, eerie and a lower level of the words defers, witnesses used Wednesday to describe the man accused of firing five bullets into his political opponent's home in 1992.

Eric (Rief) Kaplan, 31, is charged with attempted first degree murder, armed burglary and shooting into an occupied dwelling in the Sept. 27, 1992 shooting at Rep. Bob Starks (R-Winter Park) home. Starks' wife, Judith, who was in bed during the early morning incident, was wounded in the leg. Starks, an airline pilot, was out of town although his car was at home.

Kaplan was the Democratic candidate challenging the GOP representative's reelection.

Kaplan's attorney is attempting to show the defendant was insane at the time of the incident. The defense called a number of lay witnesses from Kaplan's mother to business associates who recalled incidents when the defendant was exuberant and other times when he would stay alone in his room or later his apartment for days without contacting anyone.

Former sheriff charged with drug counts

JACKSONVILLE — Former Baker County Sheriff Joe Newmans has pleaded innocent to charges he provided protection to marijuana growers and suppliers for profit. The 63-year-old former lawman entered his plea Wednesday before U.S. Magistrate John E. Steele.

The charges cap a four-year investigation into marijuana growing and smuggling in the North Florida county. Newmans of Glen St. Mary allegedly accepted $70,000 in payoffs while in office and afterward from marijuana smugglers and growers for protection against raids. He was charged with drug distribution, conspiracy and obstruction of justice.

Newmans, who served as sheriff for 20 years until he was elected out of office in 1982, appeared in court hours after the five-count indictment was unsealed. The charges cover the period from 1985 to 1983.

"It is very difficult when someone in law enforcement is charged with something like this," said current Baker County Sheriff Murray Richardson. "But if you are going to dance, you have to pay the fiddler."

The former sheriff had no comment. He was released on $100,000 personal signature bond.

"A sheriff's involvement, as alleged, in a scheme to manufacture and distribute marijuana for personal profit by protecting drug traffickers, erodes the public's confidence in law enforcement and has a detrimental impact on society's fight against all crimes," said U.S. Attorney Charles Wilson.

Co-defendant James Prevatt, 49, of Ocala pleaded innocent to one charge of drug conspiracy and was released on a $50,000 signature bond.

If convicted, Newmans faces up to life in prison plus 135 years and a $6.2 million fine. Prevatt faces a maximum life sentence and a $4 million fine.

Both men turned themselves in to federal authorities Wednesday morning.

HMOs call for tough Medicaid standards

TALLAHASSEE — Companies providing medical care to welfare recipients should face the same requirements commercial health maintenance organizations do, a trade group says.

That should include monitoring physician qualifications, sales practices, and financial soundness, Roy Burgess, president of the Florida Association of Health Maintenance Organizations, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"Physicians in those networks do not have to meet the same credentialing standards that commercial HMOs do have to meet," Burgess said.

"We're definitely on the same side of the road with them going in the same direction," said Ed Towey, spokesman for the state Agency for Health Care Administration.

The agency is reviewing the state's prepaid Medicaid health plans to determine whether patients are being properly treated. The review began last week and is expected to take about six weeks.

Towey said the review, and a moratorium on new business for the plans, followed news accounts detailing instances of fraud and inferior or questionable care.

"Unlicensed, unscrupulous health plans that have been alleged in recent news reports are the result of the state's two systems of regulation, one for people who have private insurance and the other for patients supported by public funds," said Burgess.

Under the proposed bill, the commission — which represents 50 licensed HMOs with 2.8 million customers — the Department of Insurance would have powers to fine, suspend licenses, or seek prosecution of the prepaid Medicaid plans for fraud.

The Agency for Health Care Administration would get investigative and enforcement powers including the use of "secret shoppers" to detect questionable sales practices, Burgess said.

Navy licenses soundproofing material

MILTON — Lydia Esell had one question about a new soundproofing material that Navy researchers estimate is one million percent more effective than anything on the market today.

"Having recently had three teen-age daughters in the house, my first thought was, 'Could we put this in the walls?'" said Esell, chairwoman of the Santa Rosa County commissioners.

The first thing to be made from the material will be ear protectors used by Navy personnel who work around jet planes and other noisy equipment and weapons.

But after that, the rubbery substance may be used to reduce noise in the passenger compartments of automobiles and airplanes, and to make dishwashers run more quietly.

It also has applications in medicine and, yes, housing construction, Moldex Rubber Co. President Tom Henry said at a briefing for government officials Tuesday.

Although the Navy developed the material called NBS, short for "noise barrier system," it has licensed Mold-Ex, a Milton auto parts manufacturer, to develop and market commercial applications.

Inertial measurement unit fails

Space shuttle launch delayed by one day

By MARCIA SUMM
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — A critical navigation unit aboard space shuttle Discovery failed Wednesday and forced NASA to delay the Russian rendezvous mission by one day. NASA was about a half-hour away from pumping fuel into Discovery's external tank for an early morning liftoff Thursday when shuttle managers halted the countdown. The launch was rescheduled for Friday.

The navigation unit, called an inertial measurement unit, failed when workers tried to turn it on, said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. The other two navigation units worked fine. All three must work for launch.

Late Wednesday, technicians replaced the failed unit with a spare; each unit is about the size of a microwave oven. NASA had never switched an inertial measurement unit so quickly, Malone said. Initial tests showed the newly installed unit worked well; more tests were planned Thursday.

A similar problem on space shuttle Columbia in 1993 resulted in a two-day delay.

Friday's liftoff time is around 12:22 a.m. EST. Good weather is forecast.

The cause of the failure was not immediately known. The units measure the shuttle's position and speed.

Discovery is supposed to rendezvous with Russia's Mir space station during the eight-day flight as practice for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June. That's the No. 1 priority. The mission also will include a five-hour spacewalk by two astronauts and the release and retrieval of an ultraviolet telescope.

Discovery's crew of six includes Air Force Lt. Col. Eileen Collins, NASA's first female shuttle pilot, and Russian cosmonaut Vladimir Titov.

Task force: income replacement could cost up to $25.4 million

By BILL BOGERTSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's July 1 net fishing ban will leave more than 1,583 dislocated workers seeking training and job-hunting help, and that will cost taxpayers money, a task force estimates.

Those services will cost about $10.3 million in federal job training money over the next three years, the panel reported Wednesday to lawmakers and Gov. Lawton Chiles.

In addition, lawmakers will debate net buyout options ranging up to $15.4 million, possible boat buyouts costing up to $6 million and lost income replacement programs that could range up to $25.4 million, according to the study ordered by lawmakers.

Chiles will urge the Legislature to assure displaced fishermen "a real opportunity to get retrained, retooled and to re-enter the economy," said Chiles' spokesman, Ron Bacha.

Starting July 1, all gill and entangling nets will be banned in all Florida waters and nets larger than 500 square feet will be illegal in nearshore and in-shore waters under a constitutional amendment voters approved in November.

"It is obvious that the net ban, for all its intended benefits, will have negative impacts on the economic well-being of a number of individuals and communities throughout Florida," the task force concluded. "The majority of those impacted are, unfortunately, among the least equipped to rebound from these adversities without assistance."

The panel, including members from the departments of Labor, Commerce, Environmental Protection and Agriculture and the state Marine Fisheries Commission, compiled the report after research that included 22 community meetings.

Among Florida's 6,103 salt water products license holders, gill netters and their families will be hardest hit, the group concluded.

But many communities face widespread impact, said the report, citing the Oak Hill community in Volusia County which relies almost solely on commercial net fishing.

"The sense of despair, anger and hopelessness in these fishing communities, as experienced by the interagency task force which recently held 22 town meetings across the state, cannot be adequately conveyed on paper," the group reported.

Thirty-six of Florida's 67 counties recorded landings of net ban-affected species exceeding $10,000.

About 1,200 of the 6,103 salt water licenses landed more than $5,000 in such products, about 1,700 had landings of $2,500 or more, and 582 wholesalers or dealers and more than 2,550 retailers will face impacts, the study estimated.

The report said the federal job training funds would be available for services such as testing, job counseling and training and recommended adding state money to those efforts.

State money also will have to be used if lawmakers decide to compensate those affected by the ban.

Possibilities include net buyout options ranging from $5.5 million to $15.4 million depending on whether a sliding scale or a fixed price is offered.

Psychic, husband, shot to death

By KAREN TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — A Cuban radio station psychic, who had predicted Fidel Castro would remain in power through 1988, and her husband were fatally shot early Wednesday outside the station's employee entrance.

Manuel Ramirez, 57, was waiting outside WCMQ in Coral Gables to pick up his wife, 28-year-old Lillian Rosa Morales, after her show, which ended at midnight, said the station's news director Tomas Garcia Fuste. Morales' professional name on the air was Lillian Rosa Morad.

Ramirez was parked in the street by the side of the station, near the door used by employees, Fuste said.

"When she got there, apparently somebody was shooting them both," Fuste said. Both received multiple gunshot wounds.

"It was like walking into a nightmare," said Anibal Nunez, producer of Morales' show, Atraves el Permeamiento, which in English means Through Your Mind. It was Nunez who discovered the bodies inside the car, parked in a metered spot.

Nunez said he was leaving the station around 12:45 a.m. when he saw the cars. Its doors were open and its headlights and inside lights were on.

"In this town, you have to be careful, but I thought something was strange," Nunez said. As he approached the car, he saw what appeared to be two bundles.

Then he realized they were bodies, ran back inside the station and told a station staffer to call police.

Morales died at the scene. Ramirez died at Jackson Memorial Hospital. The couple had a 1-year-old son.

No arrests had been made Wednesday.

For about seven months Morales had hosted an hour-long, call-in show on astrology each weeknight. Though she talked more about UFOs than politics, Fuste said Morales included the Cuban dictator in her New Year's predictions.

Murder risk seen growing

Pre-schoolers, older minority women targeted

By MARSHALL E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Rising murder rates for the youngest Americans place today's children at greater risk than any generation in decades, according to an analysis of killing in America.

Pre-schoolers, pre-teens and teenagers "are currently experiencing record-setting homicide rates," the private Population Reference Bureau reported Wednesday.

"These extraordinarily high rates for teens and rising rates for young children must be taken as a clear warning signal that today's children are less protected and more at risk of violence than any previous generation over the past 40 years."

Prosecutors to pay legal fees for acquitted man

By The Associated Press

PORT LAUDERDALE — The federal government seized a suspected drug plane, but the owner was found innocent. Now, a federal judge has ordered prosecutors to pay the plane owner's legal fees in the eight-year-old legal battle.

Legal experts believe the order may mark the first time a federal judge has forced the U.S. government to pay the legal bills of the opposing party in a criminal forfeiture case.

At one point in the battle, the government pledged to return the plane to its owner, then reneged on the agreement.

That, Chief U.S. District Judge Norman Roettger decided, amounted to bad faith on the part of federal prosecutors, whom he ordered on Jan. 20 to pay $80,000 in legal fees to the plane's owner, RAC Leasing Corp. of Aruba.

For years, defense attorneys have complained about wide-ranging federal forfeiture laws that permit government agents to seize boats, cars, airplanes, computers and real estate they suspect is linked to criminal activity.

Under those forfeiture laws, the government can hold the assets until the criminal case is resolved, something that often takes several years.

Meanwhile, owners of the seized assets must prove in court they had no knowledge the assets were linked to a crime or a criminal activity.

So far, prosecutors have not yet decided whether to appeal Roettger's order, said Wilfredo Fernandes, spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office here.

But the decision could set a precedent, creating a new check on prosecutors willing to forfeit first and ask questions later, according to attorneys who specialize in forfeiture cases.

"I think it is a very salutary way of encouraging the government to look at its cases more carefully," said David Smith, a forfeiture attorney in Alexandria, Va., who authored the highly regarded legal book, "Prosecution and Defense of Forfeiture Cases."

The Miami attorney who convinced Roettger to award the fees also is upbeat.

"Now that this potential sanction is available, one would hope that the government would evaluate these decisions (to seize property) with greater care," said attorney Jonathan Goodman.

In the case decided by Roettger, the plane was a 1973 Mitsubishi valued at $150,000. It was seized in March 1987 as part of the cocaine trafficking investigation of Frank E. Bachner of Broward and Palm Beach counties.

In 1989, Bachner was convicted and sentenced to life in prison plus 110 years. The jury also decided that he should forfeit to the U.S. government a helicopter, a Lincoln Town Car and six airplanes — including the Mitsubishi.

But the plane belonged to Aruba-based RAC Leasing Corp., which said it bought the aircraft from Bachner before his arrest.

Some of the increase may be a result of more child-abuse cases being reported, she suggested. Because of the spotlight on domestic violence and child abuse, "now when a child dies it's more likely to be investigated as an abuse death," she said.

But the figures do show a trend, De Vita added, and drug use and sales may be a major factor in the murder rate for teens.

For nonwhite males aged 15-19, the homicide rate jumped from 39.7 to 62.0 per 100,000 population between 1985 and 1986. For whites of the same age, the rate rose from 7.3 to 12.5. Nonwhite females saw a murder rate increase from 9.5 to 12.8 in that time span, and white females' rate rose from 2.7 to 3.6.

been an increasing problem," Byers added. "Families where there is substance abuse are much more likely to neglect children."

For minority children age 4 and under, the 1980 murder rates were 8.9 homicides per 100,000 for boys and 8.6 for girls. Both have been climbing steadily since 1960, when they were 2.4 for both sexes.

For white youngsters, the rates climbed from 1.0 to 2.7 for boys and from 1.2 to 2.1 for girls.

"We don't want to give the impression that every young child is at risk ... but this does raise the question of whether we need to be more protective of children," said Carol J. De Vita of the population group.

Some of the increase may be a result of more child-abuse cases being reported, she suggested. Because of the spotlight on domestic violence and child abuse, "now when a child dies it's more likely to be investigated as an abuse death," she said.

But the figures do show a trend, De Vita added, and drug use and sales may be a major factor in the murder rate for teens.

Nonwhite females saw a murder rate increase from 9.5 to 12.8 in that time span, and white females' rate rose from 2.7 to 3.6.

The study noted that elderly nonwhite women are increasingly becoming murder victims with a rate rising from 6.7 in 1980 to 11.7 in 1986.

De Vita said the increasing independence of older people may be a factor, placing them more at risk, especially those who tend to live by themselves in neighborhoods where crime has increased.

And while minorities remain at greatest risk of murder in America, whites are closing the gap, according to the study.

For men, the murder rate for whites was 4.0 per 100,000 in 1980-71, compared with 78.4 for minorities. By 1980-81 the rates were 8.8 for whites and 83.7 for nonwhites. For white women, the rate rose from 2.2 to 2.8 over the same period, while for nonwhite women it declined from 14.5 to 11.3.

About 70 people a day were murdered in the United States in 1988, a rate of 10.0 per 100,000 people, the agency found in an analysis of data from the National Center for Health Statistics and the FBI.

That rate is down from the peak of 10.7 in 1980 but not far from the 9.8 of 1983, De Vita pointed out. "Homicide appears to be a prominent and perhaps unique part of American life and culture," she said.

The study was done by F. Landa MacKellar of the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis in Laxenburg, Austria, and Machiko Yanagishita, a population researcher at the bureau.

Cab manager wants to change rule barring him from ignoring customers

By The Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — The general manager of a cab company is seeking to change a city ordinance that makes it illegal for his drivers to refuse certain fares.

Yellow Cab Co. drivers are prohibited from picking up young black males at night from phone booths or other unspecified places.

The policy violates three sections of city ordinances that prohibit cab companies from refusing to serve anyone if they have cabs available. City Attorney Marion Radson said Wednesday.

Interim City Manager Karen Johnson said the city has decided to revoke Yellow Cab's permit to operate.

"We're hand-delivering a letter to the company this afternoon," Johnson said Wednesday. "We're giving him until Feb. 10 to say whether he wants a hearing. Otherwise, his permit will be revoked."

Yellow Cab general manager Dan McCarthy said he will ask for a hearing and will try to change the ordinance.

"The way the ordinance reads right now, if a driver sees the same people who robbed him last week, he has to pick them up again," he said.

McCarthy had explained his policy Monday while praising a driver and a riding companion who foiled a robbery attempt Sunday night.

"Rule No. 1 is never pick up a young, black male after dark if the place they're calling from can't clearly be identified," he said. "Rule No. 2 is never pick up two black men under those conditions. Rule No. 3 is never pick up three black males under those conditions."

Publicity about the rules prompted several black community leaders to call for a boycott of Yellow Cab.

Several Yellow Cab drivers said they do not always follow the policy.

"It's basically a guideline," said driver Jonathan Odde. "But it's got a lot of validity to it. The trouble comes from young, black males. The black community basically gives cabs a hard time, whether it's arguing about the fare or putting a gun to your head. But it was just a side comment from a loud-mouth manager."

In addition to the policy, the company is facing closure because it has failed to provide information and fees for occupational licenses and permits, Radson said.

McCarthy tried to pay for an expired license and regulatory permit Wednesday, but city officials said he did not have the appropriate paperwork.

Celebrating Black History

February has been declared Black History Month. This is the fourth time the event is being observed in Central Florida, but it has been growing in stature since the very beginning.

There are a few complaints. Why not have a White History Month, or, how about a Chinese or Polish History Month?

True, there are no such observances. But then, we didn't have a Black History Month until just a few years ago. It was instigated by people who were concerned that not enough of our history tells the story of involvement by African-Americans.

Regarding the need for white history, textbooks used in our schools back in the '30s, '40s and '50s tell the story. They contained nothing but white history. The only occasional black reference was to such people as Washington Carver, and then only a few paragraphs.

With more and more racial barriers being broken during the past few decades, black leaders have been able to obtain positions of extreme importance to our nation, in all aspects of involvement including military, government, space, and business.

We suspect, within another decade, Black History Month will reach a great deal more importance than many have allowed it to be until now.

Take a look at the turnout we have at individual events. Most people are African-Americans. We still haven't reached the position where everyone has an interest in learning about everyone else.

Perhaps in years to come, we will have special events to call attention to the role played in American development by Italians, Spanish, Polish, Hungarian, and the many other nationalities. If so, these will also have difficulty in getting started. Eventually however, people will begin to realize that our nation is comprised of everyone; every nationality, every color, every size and shape.

With Black History Month, we are on our way toward a unified population. The progress of this direction depends completely on each and every citizen. Do people truly care about making such progress, or will they continue to have their own Berlin wall to divide themselves from their fellow man?

Democrats as fools

Dear Congressman: ABC, CBS and NBC on Jan. 18, 1988 all covered the Democrats making fools of themselves on the floor of the House. If the Democrats wish to act like clowns, just sit back, laugh and enjoy their folly. The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus was in Orlando through Sun., Jan. 22, but the Democrats are more fun to watch.

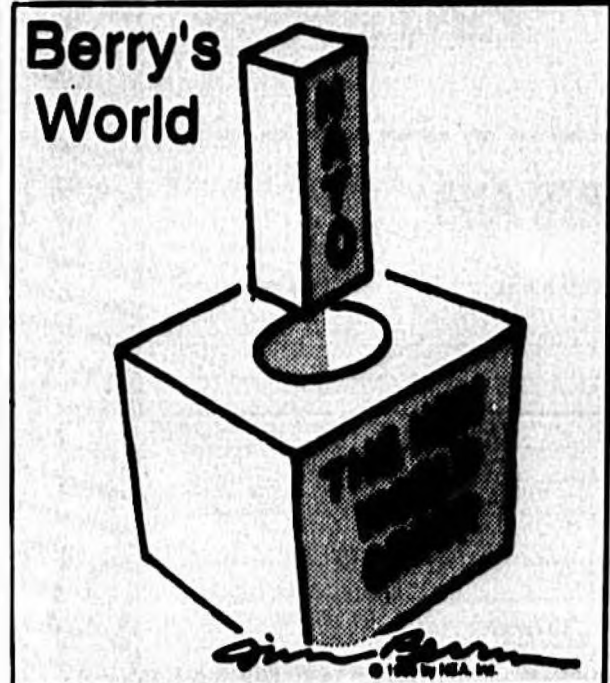

Keep your eye on the ball, keep possession of the ball, keep moving the ball forward and pass the contract with America.

With regard to the press, I used to watch the news and read the paper for information. Anymore I watch the news to discover the spin put on the news they decide is news, and to see what they do not report.

WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Why does Time fear democracy?

Time magazine's Jan. 23 cover story "Is Rush Limbaugh Good for America?" didn't really have a lot to do with Rush Limbaugh, but it enabled Time to put a picture of him on its cover and thereby increase newstand sales, if only for a week.

The real subject of the cover story was broad enough to include Limbaugh, but raised a larger question: What is happening to American democracy? Time's editors clearly fear that our system of "representative democracy," under which the public will be expressed through representatives elected by the voters, is being threatened by various techniques whereunder the voters make policy directly.

Time doesn't come clean (it never does) about its own interest in the outcome of the debate. The magazine has been going downhill for a long time, but back in the 1940s and '50s when Henry Luce was still running it Time's bureau chiefs in foreign capitals were explicitly instructed to regard themselves as equivalent in rank to the American ambassador, and often wielded more real power. To the extent that the magazine still has any influence left, it continues to acquire and exert it by playing that sort of inside ball, in Washington and elsewhere.

Time can hardly be expected, therefore, to welcome ballot initiatives (in the states where they are allowed) whereby voters can amend their states' constitutions or otherwise directly specify public policy. And it looks with even less favor on the vast upsurge of radio talk shows, which can bring to bear on Congress, in a matter of days or even hours, pressures far greater than Time ever could, even in its palmyest days.

To make matters worse, as Time concedes, "Listeners to these talk shows tend to be white, male and hep to conservative ideas -- just the audience the Republicans wanted to mobilize." (Conversely, the Democrats' much-touted "motor-voter bill" does little for car owners, who are usually registered voters and predominantly Republican anyway; but it also provides that a welfare recipient can register when he picks up his check -- a clever way of registering likely Democrats.)

Time doesn't come clean (it never does) about its own interest in the outcome of the debate.

Does Time have a point? Thanks to technological advances, such nutty ideas as Ross Perot's "electronic town hall," whereby voters could decide matters of policy by pushing a button, may now be theoretically possible; but such a procedure is hardly likely to get into the Constitution by way of amendment any time soon.

However, Newt Gingrich's idea of holding congressional hearings in five cities simultaneously by means of television, which appears to scare Time's editors nearly as much, has far more merit. One legitimate purpose of any congressional hearing is to inform and shape public opinion on its subject, and TV can only help.

Pure democracy has its dangers, but the real scandal is how little actual say American voters have in their governance. Every four years they are offered a choice of two or (exceptionally) three proscribed names from whom to choose a president -- most recently Bush, Clinton and Perot. God save us all.

The power of the almighty buck

All right, ladies and gentlemen, as well as you guys 'n' gals out there in readerland, listen up. We're going to talk about something that's very near and dear to all of us ... and all of us includes this ancient reptobate.

Yup. We're going to take a closer look at the "almighty buck" and what it used to do many, many moons ago. We'll also take a very realistic look at what it does today. We're going to do this by comparing then and now on various purchasable items while making reference to a totally separate entity ... just for the "halibut."

Way back when I was a kid (and that was really a long, long time ago) a dollar (the almighty buck) bought six gallons of name brand gasoline for the old jalopy. If the old wheezer would digest any of the offbeat brands of gasoline, you could, and did, get eight gallons. And when those folks walked to or drove to church (your church, my church, anybody's church) they managed, somehow, to drop a buck into the basket when it passed by them.

Today, it's all but impossible to find anybody's gasoline -- name or offbeat brand -- at a buck a gallon. Using seven gallons and a buck fifteen per gallon as a happy (?) medium, a buck's worth of gas then, now costs a shade over eight bucks -- just about an 800 percent increase ... and people are still putting that tired old single buck in the church basket.

Back shortly after dirt was discovered, the almighty buck could -- and did -- purchase 33 first class postage stamps (.03) with a whole penny left over for that ever-loving penny postcard. And you know what? People dropped old grinning George into that darn wicker basket at church ... then.

Today, that same beat-on-buck can buy only three first-class postage stamps at 32 cents each (96 cents total) with four whole cents left over -- not even enough for one lonely penny postcard. That would seem to be somewhere just under 1100 percent increase and guess what? Old snarling George is still being dumped into that tired, frassled wicker basket -- all by himself -- at church.

And too, way back, almost before dirt was discovered -- if you smoked cigarettes, you could get 'em for something like 18-20 cents a pack, depending on brand. Yup! You guessed it. People, somehow or other, managed to transfer old George from their pants pocket to the wandering wicker -- frayed or otherwise.

Just recently, I saw a sign on a cigarette machine advertising two dollars a pack. Unless my math machine is all screwed up, that appears to be somewhere in the neighborhood of 1000 percent increase in cost. And, would you believe it? Old lonesome George is once again shaking hands with himself bouncing around in that bedraggled wicker basket at church.

No, my friends, I'm really not picking on the gasoline companies, the postal service or the cigarette companies. And, most definitely, I have no animosity for the creators of good old George or the users of wicker baskets (yours, mine or everybody else) -- this country's churches -- by whatever name or denomination.

SEMINOLE OPINION

And before we proceed one more inch further into this column I very much want to clarify an ultra-important point.

Absolutely "no way" am I making any reference to those wonderful folks who are truly sacrificing when they place George's portrait in the basket at the church of their choice. Frequently, those who have the least seem to be the ones who give the most -- at least by comparison.

I am, however, having a fair amount of trouble comprehending the "purchase power thinking" of the two pack-a-day smoker (estimated at $28 a week) and/or the six-pack-a-day beer drinker (estimated at $32 a week) when he or she makes that "whole dollar donation" at his or her church of choice.

What makes this person think that his or her dollar for the church will still permit that church to pay 1988 bills with a 1940 value dollar bill? And only one at that.

Gasoline up some 800 percent. Postage stamps up some 1100 percent. Cigarettes up some 1000 percent. Come on folks, get real.

And so many of you keep on wondering why our society seems to be going (or already has gone) to hell-in-a-handbasket. Could it be that too many of us are part of the problem?

Why not become part of the solution and revive 1940 purchase power thinking into 1988 purchase power reality? There is a world of difference, you know.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Wasting hours to save seconds

I can think of three reasons to pass the line-item veto currently being considered by Congress, and not a one of them has anything to do with honest deficit-reduction.

For the better part of two decades, you have been hearing politicians, mainly Republicans but also a few Democrats, spluttering about "pork" and arguing that the line-item veto would curb the profligate Congress and cure the deficit problem.

Ronald Reagan made a mantra of it: Give him the line-item veto, he chanted, and he would get our fiscal house in order. Give him the line-item veto, George Bush said, and he'd "serve notice to Congress that the days of wasteful spending are over."

This is pathetic nonsense, if not outright demagoguery, and I will explain why I think so momentarily. First, a review:

The line-item veto would enable the chief executive to strike specific items from the gargantuan spending measures that Congress now sends to the president on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. The catch is that three-fifths of the budget is devoted to mandatory expenditures and is untouchable. Thus the veto's primary value would be as a weapon against "pork-barrel" expenditures -- the funds that legislators slip into appropriation bills to finance bridges, buildings, highways, studies, research projects and scores of other goodies for their home districts.

I would not for a second argue that pork ought to be preserved, but I will say that anyone who thinks its elimination would even come close to curing the deficit dilemma should probably check their diet for a protein deficiency. The sad truth is this: In the context of trillion-dollar budgets, pork-barrel spending is peanuts. Trying to fix deficits by slashing pork is akin to trying to scoop the ocean dry with a teaspoon.

It constantly amazes me that so many politicians, and particularly pit-bull Republicans, fixate on picayune projects while ignoring the huge expenditures and entitlements that spout red ink like geysers gush water. They moan about money spent on fish farms and bicycle paths while the $4.8 trillion national debt swells nearly $10,000 with each tick of the clock.

One of my favorite memories of the Reagan years is of his 1988 State of the Union address, when he hoisted a 43-pound, 3,296-page omnibus spending bill in the air and suggested that, with a line-item veto, he could trim that sucker down to a manageable size. There was a $50,000 item in there for cranberry research, for example, that he'd cut on the spot.

And with that bold swipe of the budgetary knife, he would have stemmed the growth of the national debt for three seconds.

George Bush once asked Congress to ax 68 spending projects amounting to $3.6 billion and said he'd do it himself if they would give him the line-item veto. In so doing, he would've financed the national debt for about 4-1/2 days.

Bill Clinton once claimed that with the line-item veto, he could slash $3.5 billion a year from the budget. That's three days and an hour's worth of interest on the debt.

The carnival never stops. Now Republican Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota is campaigning for the elimination of public broadcasting. Savings: about three hours worth of interest on the debt. Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., wants to trim Bock's-the-cat's postage bill. Savings: 0.00012 of a second worth of interest. You couldn't measure the betterment with an atomic clock.

This is pathetic nonsense, if not outright demagoguery.

New study: Men are making less sperm

By BARBARA G. HANNEY
AP Science Writer

A study has added fuel to the controversy over whether men are making less sperm these days.

The French study found that the sperm counts of donors at a Paris sperm bank have dropped by one-third over the past two decades. While the researchers said they could not explain their finding, they raised a variety of possibilities, including male fetuses' exposure to estrogen in the womb as well as environmental pollution and unspecified changes in diet and lifestyles.

The research, published today in the New England Journal of Medicine, is probably the most rigorous of several studies to look at this question. Many experts, however, remain skeptical.

"It has not been clearly documented this is a real phenomenon," said Dr. Stuart Howards of the University of Virginia. "This study from Paris raises the level of concern a bit."

"The vast percentage of men have fertility to spare," he said. In an editorial in the journal, Dr. Richard J. Sherrins of the Genetics and IVF Institute in Fairfax, Va., said there is little evidence that fertility is actually declining.

He noted that infertility has remained constant in the United States — between 8 percent and 11 percent — over the past three decades, and male infertility accounts for about one-third of cases.

In 1992, a Danish group looked at 61 different studies involving nearly 15,000 men. They said that when taken together, the studies suggest that men's sperm counts have dropped in half over the past 50 years.

The latest study was conducted by Dr. Jacques Auger and others from Cochin Hospital Group in Paris. They looked at trends over the past 20 years among 1,351 healthy, fertile men who made donations at the Center for the Study of the Conservation of Human Eggs and Sperm.

They found that the concentration of sperm dropped by 2 percent per year, from 89 million per milliliter in 1973 to 80 million in 1993. Men who have less than 20 million sperm per milliliter are considered to be infertile.

Men's sperm counts are higher if they have not ejaculated recently, and they go down as they get older. Even when these two factors were taken into consideration, sperm counts seem to have fallen, the researchers said.

They separately analyzed 382 men who ranged in age from 28 to 37 and had been sexually abstinent for three to four days before giving semen.

In these men, they found an even more striking decline: The sperm count of a 30-year-old man born in 1945 was 102 million per milliliter, while for a 30-year-old born in 1983 it was 81 million.

academically but in elementary school stood apart and didn't play with other children and was not involved in high school activities.

She said he was traumatized when he was told by the adoption service as an 18-year-old, seeking information about his birth parents, that he was not Jewish. After a shoving incident with his mother, Kaplan's parents sought treatment for him.

An employee at the family business, who has known Kaplan most of his life, described a drinking problem the defendant had as a teen and treatment he received in a rehabilitation center while in college. Kaplan was suspended from the University of Florida for injuring another student with a starter pistol. He later earned a psychology degree.

Several witnesses testified Kaplan gave up drinking and smoking when he converted to Buddhism a few years ago.

Kaplan worked in the family business and sometimes ate taco sauce sandwiches and water for lunch saying he was trying to save money. The company controller described Kaplan as extreme, eccentric, odd and different.

She told the jury she went with Kaplan to his apartment after the shooting to collect some belongings. She described the residence as a pig sty. It took two days for a cleaning service to clean the apartment and cost $250 for clothes to be washed at a laundry that charged by the pound.

Kaplan's immediate superior, Jerry Adelman said the defendant would work for a time, then disappear for days. When Adelman confronted Kaplan about his work schedule, Kaplan wrote a letter, questioning his boss' ability and Adelman backed off.

"It's hard to fire the boss' son," he said, when asked why Kaplan was treated differently than any other employee.

Adelman described an incident when Kaplan was siphoning gasoline from a vehicle in a closed warehouse stocked with merchandise.

"I thought he was strange," Adelman responded when asked to describe Kaplan. Adelman said when he attempted to tell Kaplan that many times first time candidates for political office are not elected, he wouldn't hear of it.

"He said he was the right man for the job. He was going to win," Adelman recalled.

When asked if Kaplan thought he was a better person than his opponent, Adelman responded, "He felt he was a better person than anybody. He felt his election would benefit mankind."

Gov. Lawton Chiles' daughter, Tandy Chiles Barrett described Kaplan as one of the best phone bank workers in the local campaign headquarters she managed during her father's first gubernatorial campaign. Barrett ran the campaign in Orange, Osceola and Seminole counties.

She recalled being uncomfortable one night when Kaplan approached her with a written plan for a watchdog agency he hoped to use to oversee the operation of HRS (Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services).

Under cross examination, Barrett said it seemed to her the plan was more of an obsession than a passion for Kaplan.

Prosecutors concluded their case presenting testimony by a handwriting expert who said Kaplan wrote the note containing Starke's address found when police searched his apartment. A hide-a-key box affixed to the vehicle seen leaving the shooting scene was almost new, investigators testified. Kaplan claimed earlier that whoever committed the shooting used the hidden key to take the vehicle trying to pin the crime on him.

Testimony resumes in the case Friday.

tion building at Seminole High where Morris had fixed up the bikes.

He selected a neon green boy's 3-speed bike and a small, teal lady girl's bicycle.

They were for two of his grandchildren who are presently living with him while their mother deals with some personal problems, he said.

"Raising a second generation isn't easy," Wesley said, "but I don't mind."

His grandchildren attend Idlewild Elementary School and Greenwood Lake Middle School.

"If he gets promoted," he joked, "the boy will be at Seminole next year."

Morris said the key to the Full Service School's dropout prevention program is making things easier for the whole family.

"We do what we can to make things better at home," Morris explained. "If things are good at home, they're more likely to stay in school."

Cubitt Malone's mother is disabled. It's difficult on her limited financial resources to give her five sons all the things she'd like.

Cubitt, 17, is a senior at Seminole High. He stopped by Morris' bicycle giveaway area to select bicycles for his four brothers.

"I selected one for each of my brothers," he said. Malone's idea that the Full Service School program offers assistance to those who need it.

"She (Morris) made sure we had a fine Christmas and Thanksgiving this last year," Malone said.

Joella Singleton, a guidance counselor at the school said the bicycle giveaway program had made a lot of young people happy and had added a great deal of self esteem to the youngsters involved in the program.

"It's like when I was growing up and there were people who showed they cared about me," she said. "I always felt better when I knew they were there for me."

Carjacking

According to Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire of the Sanford Police Department, Anderson complied with the request without hesitation.

As the gunman moved into the passenger seat, another man got into the driver's seat and they began to drive around, he told police.

Shortly, the gunman demanded that Anderson empty his pockets and turn the contents over to him. Again, Anderson complied, Whitmire said.

As the car arrived at Osceola Drive a short distance away, Whitmire said, Anderson was forced out of the car by the pair.

He called police and a description was sent out.

At about 7:15 p.m., Calvin DeLeon Lee, 18, was stopped by Seminole County sheriff's deputies near the intersection of 25th Street and Ridgewood Avenue. He was driving Anderson's car.

He was positively identified as the gunman by Anderson, Whitmire said, and placed under arrest. A passenger in the car was questioned and released, Whitmire said, because he did not fit the description of the Lee's accomplice and Anderson could not positively identify him.

Lee, of 2580 Ridgewood Ave., Apt. 203, Sanford, was charged with armed robbery, carjacking, grand theft auto, possession of a weapon during the commission of a felony and with battery on a law enforcement officer.

Whitmire said Lee did not go willingly with officers and during the arrest process, he kicked Sgt. Mark Nichols in the leg.

Whitmire said Lee's accomplice is described only as a heavy set black man wearing an Orlando Magic jacket. He is still at large.

Emergency

Some 34 million of the estimated 90 million visits to hospital emergency departments in 1992 were injury-related; the rest were due to illnesses. Fifty-six percent of those with injuries were men.

The injuries cost $271 on average to treat in the emergency departments, or $9.2 million, the center estimated. Fewer than half were classified as urgent by hospital staff.

A third of injured had wounds that required care, with an open head wound the most frequent diagnosis.

There were 13.5 injury visits to hospital emergency departments for every 100 people. But among males ages 15 to 24, there were 25 visits per 100; the rate for women that age was 21.2.

The center said injuries killed 145,655 people in 1992. In addition to the 34 million trips to emergency departments, injuries caused 2.7 million people to be admitted to hospitals and led to 66 million visits to physicians' offices.

Shadow

spring is just around the corner. The chubby groundhog was taken out of his man-made burrow by handler Bill Desley at 7:29 a.m. Decey kissed the animal and placed him on top of the stump outside Phil's home.

In Sanford, Farmer checked many of the animals at the zoo this morning, and with the sun shining brightly, she reported finding many already seeking shade, by the time word was received about the Pennsylvania prediction.

"The closest we have to a burrowing animal," Farmer said, "is the tortoise, and he didn't see his shadow because he's just too lazy to come out of his hole."

"Aiao," she continued, "Maude and Mary, our two elephants, didn't see their shadows either because they won't come out of their barn at sunup."

"If we would have had a groundhog here this morning," Farmer observed, "he would have seen his shadow, which means we would have more winter, but who's to say that a Sanford groundhog would be any more correct than that animal in Punxsatawney."

Although they don't like to discuss it, the members of the Punxsatawney Groundhog Club's Inner Circle actually decide in advance what the groundhog's forecast will be. Nonetheless, a crowd estimated at at least 7,000 cheered loudly as the announcement was made.

It is the 10th or 11th time the groundhog has predicted an early spring since 1887, depending on whose count you believe. The last time was in 1990.

The National Weather Service near Pittsburgh has issued its own prediction of above-normal temperatures for the next few weeks, in keeping with the relatively mild trend this winter.

"We haven't had winter yet. Spring feels like it's already here," said meteorologist Bob Reed.

The Groundhog Day tradition is based on a German superstition that an animal casting its shadow Feb. 2 — the Christian holiday of Candlemas — is an indication of bad weather to come. An old Scottish saying reflects a similar belief: "If Candlemas Day is bright and clear, there will be two winters in the year."

Phil ordinarily lives in a heated, glassed-in hutch near the town's library with two other groundhogs, Philomena and Barney.

Unfunded mandate bill

WASHINGTON — Picking up speed, the Republican-led House approved an unfunded mandates bill and is moving on to legislation giving the president authority to stop congressional spending excesses.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said he is looking for passage Monday of the presidential line-item veto bill the House was debating today.

The bill would give the president authority to delete specific programs from spending bills, saving lawmakers the discomfort of cutting expensive projects their colleagues want for their home districts.

Like other items of the House GOP's "Contract With America," the line-item veto is part of the drive ostensibly to make the federal government smaller, more fiscally responsible and less intrusive in the lives of citizens.

Simpson's friend testifies

LOS ANGELES — He said he loved O.J. Simpson as a friend for 28 years. He breezed into Simpson's estate with a press of the gate busser. As a policeman, he even ran license plates checks for him.

But now, Ronald Shipp says, he can't believe that Simpson would lie about a conversation they had the night after Simpson's ex-wife and her friend were murdered.

"This is really sad, O.J.," Shipp said Wednesday as he withstood a blistering cross-examination, starting at his old friend across the courtroom.

Shipp testified that on the night of June 13, after Simpson had been interviewed by police, Simpson questioned him about how long it would take to conduct DNA tests on a bloody glove found outside his mansion.

PBS background checks

WASHINGTON — A senator who controls the federal purse strings of public broadcasting is asking employees of National Public Radio about their ethnic backgrounds and genders, and where they previously worked.

Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Larry Pressler, R-S.D., is seeking the information as he considers wiping out millions of dollars in federal funds for the public broadcasting industry.

A committee spokesman, Joe Duggan, said the information from NPR employees "can give insights into whether programming is balanced."

Asked whether one can assume, for instance, that an Asian employee or someone employed by an evangelical station would automatically have a different point of view from someone of a different background, Duggan responded: "I don't think it is very presumptuous."

Soldiers patch dam

THE Netherlands — Soldiers crested through the night to patch a dam threatened by rising flood waters in Ochten, while the 5,000 residents of the low-lying town joined the largest refugee exodus in Dutch history.

Flood shelters were filling up Wednesday as evacuees fled north in packed cars along jammed highways, pulling trailers loaded with furniture. As many as 250,000 people have abandoned their homes and belongings in Gelderland and Limburg provinces.

The Waal River subsided slightly, but major sections of earthen dike protecting the low-lying southeastern Dutch countryside were weakened by the surging flood waters draining from Germany, Belgium and France.

Russia's battle for control

SAMASHKY, Russia — Russia's battle for control of breakaway Chechnya left a trail of smashed houses and smoldering fires in this town packed with refugees, an anvil beaten fiercely by Russian forces.

The Russian artillery attack Wednesday at Samashky, where Chechen fighters returned gunfire, seemed the bloodiest yet in a week when the war has expanded beyond devastated Grozny to engulf outlying areas of the republic.

International criticism continued to mount. A U.S. State Department report Wednesday blasted Moscow for numerous human-rights violations, including using excessive force in Chechnya.

Borrowing costs to rise

By KAREN GULLO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — When credit card rates hovered above 19 percent three years ago, consumer groups accused banks of gouging customers.

Don't look now. Interest rates on many credit cards and other consumer loans are heading back up following the latest hike in short-term interest rates, announced Wednesday by the Federal Reserve Board.

In the seventh increase in a year, the central bank pushed up two key rates to their highest levels since early 1991.

The discount rate — the interest the Fed charges on direct loans to commercial banks — was raised from 4.75 percent to 5.25 percent. The target for the more important federal funds rate — the interest that banks charge each other — went up by a half-point, to 6 percent.

The move prompted most major banks to increase their benchmark prime lending rates from 8.5 percent to 9 percent.

The Fed wants to slow the economy to the point where inflation is not a threat. Slower consumer spending is part of the formula, and by raising rates the Fed is pushing up interest charges on credit cards, mortgages and car loans for millions of Americans.

A credit card holder with a $1,700 balance will pay another 95 this year in interest charges because of the latest increase, according to Robert B. McKinley, president of RAM Research Corp., which tracks credit card trends.

Factoring in the impact of all seven rate hikes, the average cardholder is paying 850 more in interest charges compared to this time last year, RAM said.

Most credit cards carry variable rates tied to the prime rate. With the average card carrying a 17.99 rate, many Visa and MasterCard users will see rates rise above 18 percent, according to RAM.

The last time rates were that high, consumer groups and lawmakers accused banks of gouging customers. Hearings were held on Capitol Hill and many banks, fearing rate-cap legislation, lowered their rates. Competition also spurred issuers to lure consumers with special no-fee, low-rate cards.

Some banks now may introduce rate caps to keep consumers from switching cards, McKinley said.

"The good news is that rates are still below the levels they were three years ago, when they were around 19 percent," McKinley said. "The bad news is that the scenario is now set for rates to actually exceed 19 percent and hit even 20 percent by the end of the year."

McKinley's fears are based on the chance that the Fed will raise rates again this year. That depends on whether the economy slows to a sustainable but not inflationary rate.

The silver lining in the rate hike is that savings rates will increase.

Young Guns pull even

SANFORD — By winning both their matches Wednesday at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium, the Young Guns have pulled into a tie for first place in the A Division of the Sanford Recreation Co-ed Power Volleyball League.

They were able to secure the tie because previously unbeaten Tim's Team suffered its first loss of the season and split its two matches.

Trailing the Young Guns and Tim's Team (both 5-1) are the Power Rangers (who also were 1-1 last night to run their season record to 2-4) and Side Out (0-2 last night, 1-5 on the season).

In the B Division, the Spurchuckers enjoyed their second consecutive 2-0 week to improve to 4-2 on the season and pull ahead of Kelley's Team, which split last night and is now 3-3. They're followed by Beach Scene (0-2, 1-5).

Tampa blasts Rollins

TAMPA — Idris Mays scored 24 points to help Tampa to an 83-52 victory over Rollins on Wednesday night.

Tampa (18-3) was ahead 38-25 at halftime and never relinquished its lead.

Rollins (11-8) struggled without leading scorer Daniel Park and tied once 12-12 with 11:30 minutes left in the first half.

David Martino led Rollins with 13 points.

Rice leads Heat rout

MIAMI — Glen Rice scored 19 points and reserve Ledell Eckles added 16 as the Heat beat turnover-prone Detroit 98-75 Wednesday night.

Billy Owens scored 17 points, Matt Geiger had 16, Khalid Reeves 12 and Keith Askins 11 for Miami.

The last time the Lady Gators had lost at home was also to the Lady Volunteers, 68-75 on Feb. 23, 1993.

Tennessee (20-1, 7-0 Southeastern Conference), which entered the game having won all 19 of its previous meetings with Florida, leaped out to an 11-0 lead in the opening minutes.

Tribe gets boot from 5A-Dist. 6 tourney

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO — Seminole scored the game's first and last goals, but the top-seeded Kissimmee-Gateway Panthers found the net three times in between as they eliminated the Tribe from the 5A-District 6 boys' soccer tournament with a 3-2 decision Wednesday night at Cypress Creek High School.

Gateway advances to Friday night's district championship game against the winner of Wednesday's Leesburg-Cypress Creek contest.

Seminole ends its season 4-13-1.

"Despite our record, I think we had a good year," said Seminole coach Carlos Merlino. "The kids gave it everything they've got all season long. And my two assistants, Coach Sawyer and Coach Beale, did an excellent job this year. I couldn't ask for anything more." Seminole struck first, Barry Henderson scoring at 17:25 of the first half. Gateway tied the score with a goal less than five minutes before halftime.

The Panthers went ahead with a goal in the 17th minute of the second half, then added an insurance goal about five minutes later.

Josh Holloway got one of the goals back almost immediately as he scored for Seminole with just under 18 minutes to play. The Seminoles continued to attack, trying to come up with the equalizer, but were denied.

"We were all over them," said Merlino. "We just couldn't come up with that next goal."

Seminole outshot Gateway 24-18 and had a 7-3 advantage in corner kicks, forcing the Panther goalkeeper to make 16 saves. Tribe keeper Jason Cyrus collected 12 saves.

Wells Contracting alone in 1st place

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Thanks to a little help from Sheet Metal Workers Local No. 15, Wells Contracting found themselves alone in first place in the Sanford Recreation Wednesday Men's Polar Bear Softball League at Chase Park.

Reckers opened the night with a 16-9 win over Captain Bly's, then suffered a 12-11 defeat at the hands of Sheet Metal Workers, who pulled out the win by scoring a pair of runs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Wells Contracting then rolled to a 21-9 victory over Elite Interiors in the nightcap.

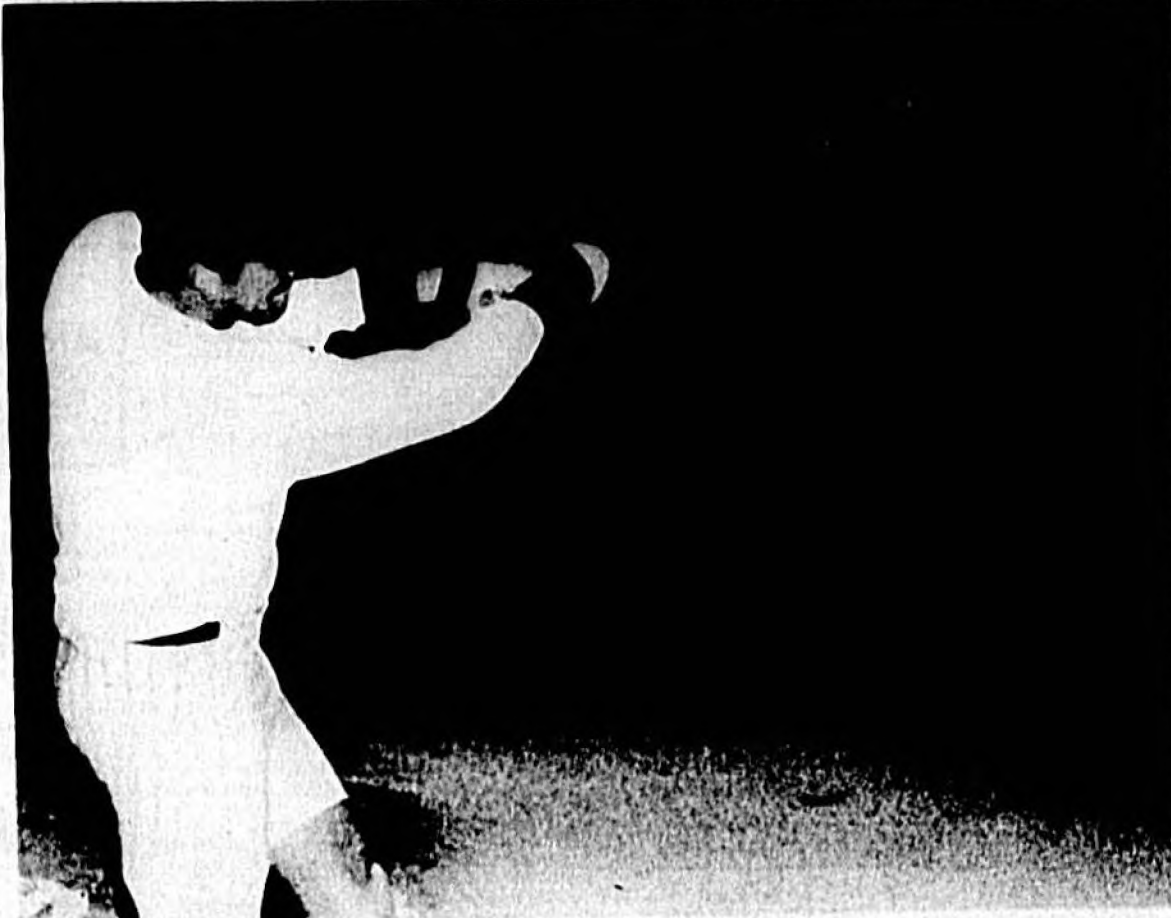

Through three weeks, Wells Contracting (3-0) is the lone undefeated team in the league. They're followed by Reckers (3-1), Sheet Metal Workers (2-2), Captain Bly's (1-2), and Elite Interiors (0-4).

Next week, Elite Interiors and Captain Bly's will meet in the 6:30 p.m. game before Wells Contracting takes the field for a doubleheader, battling Reckers at 7:30 p.m. before taking on Sheet Metal Workers at 8:30 p.m.

I want you to write me again but only after you have researched more of an understanding of what "I do." Good reading!

Then there was the time that a very nice lady in Des Moines, Iowa called upon me to help her find her lost wedding ring. First, I suggested that it was 14K yellow gold, she said Nope. So, I figured that I wasn't getting a real impression of the object.

Then for a moment I departed the table as I was appearing in a restaurant, and then shortly later returned and suggested that she look amongst the silver, linens, an area to the left and dark to the rear, and something about "pizza?" About two weeks passed and I received a letter informing me to contact her as she had located the ring. When I asked where it was, she told me that I was very close but had mispronounced a word. I guess we refer to everything in the kitchen as silverware and linens, but what actually happened was that she found the ring in the dining room in a drawer where the real silver and good linens were. Oh, as for the "pizza," that was the wrong word; if I had said the right word that very night, she could have found the ring immediately. You see, she had a small statue of Mary holding Christ on the chest of drawers, and it's called "The Pieta."

A MOM IN MICHIGAN
DEAR MISS: Mine, as well. Another mother of a small child wrote to say that her child - still in his crib - had pulled the cotton stuffing out of a small hole in his mattress and stuffed it into his mouth. Unfortunately, the child had already suffocated when the mother discovered it.

DEAR ABBY: We, too, suffered greatly when a niece attended my daughter's baby shower, bringing with her an album filled with pictures of her two-month trip to Central America.

I was furious, and my daughter was crushed that this young woman dominated the entire event with a story that went with every picture.

I did nothing at the time, but believe me, if this behavior is ever repeated, I will have plenty to say.

Consider this an open letter to everyone who attends any kind of shower: Sponsor your own party and share your pictures with your guests - not ours!

LOVING MOM AND AUNT.
DEAR ABBY: The following conversation (edited version) took place between me and my 19-year-old son. I hope you will print it as a message to all sexually active young men.

Son: She knew that I didn't want kids, yet she went and got herself pregnant!

Mother: You helped her get pregnant; did you use any protection?

Son: No! That's left up to the dumb girl!

Mother: Really? Do you ever want children?

Son: No! I don't like kids!

Mother: Have you ever thought of a vasectomy? Condoms? A spermicide? You know - foam or sponges?

Son: No, all that is for the dumb girl to do.

Mother: Did she want children?

Son: Yes, she told me she wanted to have my child.

Mother: She told you that, and you went ahead and had sex with her without using any protection?

Son: But, Mom - she knew I didn't want kids. She should have been taking the pill!

Mother: (shaking her head): You knew she wanted your child, and she did nothing to protect yourself?

Son: Yes, and now I've blown my chances of going to college. All because of a baby I didn't want in the first place. I'm going to have a vasectomy so this won't ever happen again!

Mother: Isn't that like closing the barn door after the horse is gone?

Son: Mom, please, I don't need that!

Mother: You are my only child, and you are going to be a father at 19. It's a good thing your father is dead because this would kill him. Your dad's dream was having you go to college. And now you've ruined it!

Son: How could this happen to me? I never expected to be a father - never! Never!

A SICKENED VA. BEARER
DEAR MRS. KNOWE:

How sad. I hope your son grows up soon, or his child will be an adult before he is.

When two people have sex, both must take responsibility for the consequences, that means protecting themselves from any possibility of a sexually transmitted disease or an unwanted pregnancy.

Is an office stress test safe?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many of us with heart problems have been asked to undergo a treadmill stress test. Would a doctor's office be OK for this procedure or is a hospital safer?

DEAR READER: This is an interesting question that I am frequently asked by my own patients.

A stress or treadmill test is a method of measuring cardiac function during exercise, which gives more precise information than merely performing a resting electrocardiogram.

Although, in most instances, stress tests are not dangerous, they can be. Some patients with heart disorders will, during exercise, develop dangerous and abnormal heart rhythms - even cardiac arrest and death. Consequently, any physician who performs stress testing must be prepared for any emergency that could develop. In short, he has to be equipped to institute cardiopulmonary resuscitation if necessary.

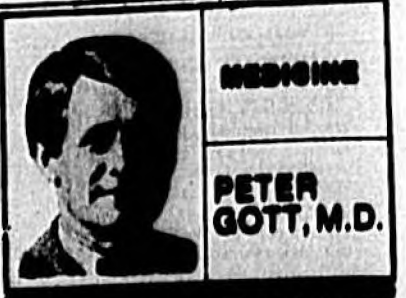

Obviously, in a hospital, such services are readily available. Other doctors, nurses, technicians and equipment are present to cope with disasters. These resources may not be available to the practitioner in his office.

Nonetheless, most doctors doing stress tests do have at least one assistant and an array of necessary devices, such as electrical defibrillators, handy. Therefore, office stress tests are, in the main, as safe as those done in hospital.

If I had a cardiac arrest, I'd certainly prefer to have it in a hospital. Yet, it is often more convenient and economical to have stress tests done in an office.

In answer to your question, office treadmill tests are probably as safe as those done in hospital, but make sure that in the office setting, the doctor has the required equipment: at the very least, an assistant, a defibrillator and a supply of drugs to be used in an emergency. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $8 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 3433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Woody Allen said, "Most of the time I don't have much fun. The rest of the time I don't have any fun at all." The solution to his problem is obvious: He should take up bridge.

How would he film himself playing?

Action! The players are sorting their cards. Woody opens the bidding. When Woody rebids three hearts, North, Diane Keaton, says, "Alert." West, Tony Roberts, inquires, "We play that that promises extra values and an excellent heart suit." Keaton proceeds to drive the auction into six hearts.

West leads a trump. As she tables the dummy, Keaton says, "Good luck." Pan to Woody, who is studying the thin dummy. Voice-over by Woody: "The trump lead is annoying. Without it, I could have ruffed two club losers in the dummy. But maybe if the trumps are 3-1, the person with the singleton will have both top club honors."

After winning the first trick, Woody leads the club queen from his hand. However, West wins with the king and returns a second heart. Close-up of Woody, beads of perspiration forming on his brow. Another voice-over by Woody: "Now I must establish dummy's diamond suit."

He plays a diamond to dummy's ace, ruffs a diamond in hand, ruffs a club in the dummy, ruffs a diamond in hand, draws West's last trump (discarding dummy's spade two), leads the spade jack to dummy's queen and ruffs a third diamond in his hand. A slight smile crosses Woody's face. He leads the spade king to dummy's ace and cashes the J-10 of diamonds, on which his last two clubs disappear.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 8, 1988

Good beginnings are often essential to happy endings. Take things one step at a time and build a firm foundation to strengthen your material position in the year ahead.

AGNARUS (Jan. 30-Feb. 19) The favors you do for others today might not be repaid immediately, but when they are, you'll receive more than you gave. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4485, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

FRIGUS (Feb. 30-March 20) Today you may have a certain knack for keeping your own secrets while extracting confidential information from others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Maintain an optimistic outlook today regarding your material status, but don't push for things when you sense the timing is wrong.

Taurus (April 30-May 20) Your determination will be impressive if you focus on a specific goal today. Put your energy toward a worthy purpose.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) A valuable lesson can be learned today by observing how someone you admire conducts him/herself in a development similar to one you might have to face later.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Today you might be privy to some confidential information about something that will occur soon. It could be profitable knowledge, but use it with discretion.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are faced with a difficult decision, seek advice today from a close friend who has counseled you wisely in the past.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may have some new ideas about your career today, but keep them under wraps for the time being. It would be wise to test them before revealing anything.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to distinguish between being rationally protective and merely being possessive of the one you love. If you hold the leash too tightly today, it might snap.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) If you refuse to settle for second best today, an important development can be finalized to your satisfaction. The secret is persistence.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you put off doing something important today, someone else involved will have to prod you into action. Do not wait to be pushed.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to take stock of your financial situation. Something very constructive could result that might help you make or save money.
