Burglar Suspect Caught After Long Stakeout

Herald Staff Writer

A four-month Seminole County Sheriff's Department stakeout paid off with the arrest Wednesday night of a man suspected in at least 50 early morning "cat" burglaries of homes in southeast Seminole County.

Seminole County sheriff's investigator Greg Sica spotted the suspect driving a car with its headlights off in the Woodstream sub division in Winter Springs at about 7 p.m. Wednesday. Sica identified the driver as a suspect who had reportedly been identified in a photo lineup following a Monday morning burglary at 1033 Nodding Pines Way, Sheriff's Lt. Joe Patton said

Sica arrested the suspect on charges of burglary to an occupied dwelling and possession of drug paraphernalia. The paraphernalia charge relates to a homemade smoking device found in the Mark Eric Osterback, 18, who refused to give an address, but who Patton said has been living on University Boulevard, just across the Seminole County line in Orange County, has been charged in the case. He was being held without bond in the Seminole County jail.

Patton said sheriff's investigators expect to add additional burglary charges. Osterback is a suspect in about 50 burglaries that have occurred since November in the Red Bug Road/Deer Run area of southeast Seminole County, Patton said.

Osterback's arrest Wednesday is for the burglary of the home of Suzanne Diehl, of 1033 Nodding Pines Way, Casselberry, Mrs. Diehl reported to sheriff's deputies that at about 4:26 a.m. Monday she found a man in the garage of her home. He was going through items taken from inside the home. Mrs. Diehl was face to face See CAUGHT, page 12A

Reagan Accepts Blame

But Looks Ahead

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan, accepting blame and assuring the nation he has learned a tough lesson, wants to "go forward" now that he has admitted his deals with Iran became a trade of arms for American hostages.

Without going as far as a public apology, a contrite Reagan offered one of the most forthcoming presidential speeches in years Wednesday night with his 12-minute televised address to the nation on the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal.

Reagan took full responsibility for the consequences of his 18-month overture to Iran's radical Islamic government and for the scheme to divert profits from the secret arms sales to Nicaraguan Contra rebels. And he admitted for the first time his policy resulted in a swap of arms for U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

But in his first substantive comment on the crisis in three months, Reagan reaffirmed he had no prior knowledge of the possibly criminal Contra diversion scheme and, fighting to restore his credibility and public trust, urged the nation to help him get his wounded presidency back on track.

"What should happen when you make a mistake is this you take your knocks; you learn your lessons and then you move on," he said. "You put things in

Waste Plant Power Gets Local Interest

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer

Within five years, Seminole County may have its own energy-producing waste inciner-

The Council of Local Governments in Seminole County stopped short of passing a motion to recommend a feasibility study Wednesday night at Oviedo City Hall. Before making that recommendation to the county commission, the council will have county administrator Ken Hooper and Jim Bible, director of environmental services, address their next meeting.

But the council was visibly enthused after hearing a presentation that showed a typical plant could sell $6.5 million worth of electricity per year.

The presentation was by Waste Management, Inc. of Florida, represented by Warren Smith, business development electricity. Scap metals are also manager, Orlando.

one in Tampa called McKay Bay Plant. Others are proposed or being built in Pompano Beach. Fort Lauderdale, Hillsborough County and elsewhere around the country.

Smith said there are hundreds of electricity-generating garbage plants around the country and much of the technology in use came from Europe and Japan.

The plant in Tampa sits on a bay that is a bird sanctuary and is a quarter mile away from a major subdivision. Smith said these plants are harmonious with the environment, producing no odors or smokey stacks. Tampa's plant is owned by the city but was built and designed by Waste Management, Inc., which has a 20-year contract to Incineration-for-power is 'an altogether saner way of disposing of garbage than endlessly dumping it in a landfill."

Smith said residents' garbage collection rates have gone up about 20 percent to pay for the plant, but he said it should reach a point when it pays its own

"I don't care how big the county's landfill is, it's not infinite, and the amount of garbage is," said Jane Dees, commissioner from Oviedo.

Smith showed slides of garbage haulers bringing in loads of garbage and dumping it in slots in the wall where it goes to be picked up by machinery and tossed in giant incinerators. Steam is produced, and thereby extracted for sale, and the ash

Smith said it was "an altogether saner way of disposing of garbage than endlessly dumping it in a landfill."

The plants are equipped with pollution control devices and the only discharge that is produced goes into the sewer city system. The Tampa plant handles about 1,000 tons per day. Also, the plant uses treated wastewater from the city for its cooling processes rather than potable

"It's cheaper to operate an energy recovery system than a landfill site with transfer facility." Smith said. Depending on the price of energy, he said a new plant could be paying its own way within a few years. But the soonest a plant could be on line in Seminole County would be five years, he added.

"It's tough to face up to the fact that you're going to have to plan something for the future. but better you should face it now than 10 years from now," Smith told the council.

The council talked with the consultants about joint financing possibilities and equity arrangements. The council was told that once the plant gets gping, it should be selfsupporting on electricity sales and (garbage) tipping fees.
Phil Kulbes, commissioner from Winter Springs who originally suggested looking into a waste plant, then wrapped up his feelings by stating, "I don't think, it would be premature for us to go before the county commission and ask for a feasibility study, and I'm making that motion.

Mayor Dick Fess of Lake Mary seconded the motion.

But Commissioner Lee Constantine of Altamonte Springs

Kulbes suggested that Hooper would not be an expert and that the county should hire a consultant familiar with waste incinceration plants for advice. But the council seemed content to start with Hooper's opinion since he was the environmental director before taking over as administrator.

For the county commissioner's part, Bill Kirchhoff said perhaps the county was just short of the capacity threshhold needed to support a waste incineration plant. And he was concerned about transportation costs for the garbage to the central plant location. Also, bonds will no longer be tax exempt for such a project, there is a lost invest-

Seeking Permit To Sell Adult Books, Magazines

Erotic Emporium Owners File Appeal

The owners of the Erotic Emporium at 1520 U.S. Highway 17-92 near Longwood have filed an appeal with the county commission to get full privileges to sell adult reading material as well as the videos and paraphernalia they now

Nomen Deferre Limited has filed the appeal, according to zoning coordinator Ginny Markely, but she said no hearing date has been set.

R. D. Inman, president of Harmon Glass which owns the nextdoor business

Meanwhile, a dispute over parking at the store continues.

Bob's Glass, has filed a letter saying he will not give permission for joint access to the emporium. A parking agreement is necessary for legal operation of the emporium, the county says.

But the owner of the land that both the emporium and Bob's Glass sits upon. Walter S. Young of Maitland, has filed a letter stating he has no objection to the special exception. As far as which authority will rule over the parking agreement, Ms. Markley said, "That's really something that Mr. Inman would have to settle with Mr. Young."

Some sentiment was expressed by the Board of Adjustment that a lessee has certain rights. Board member Mike Hattaway, a Realtor, was particularly sure that the lessee's desires would have to be considered.

So far no lawsuits have been filed over opening of the store, which was fought by neighbors and churches in both Seminole and Orange counties.

The store opened on an apparent loophole unclosed by a county ordinance approved too late to take effect. Ms. Markley said the county had an ordinance which regulated adult bookstores but did not cover video tapes. Then in Feb. 10 the county adopted a new ordinance that included the video tape wares under regulated commodities. But that ordinance had apparently not gotten put on the statutes in Tallahassee when the store took its option to open without the books and magazines. On that basis, the store opened.

Because of those conditions and because he felt nude dancers would not benefit his business at this time, owner Jim Kyler said the store would also forego : ' them for now.

Longwood Set To Legitimize Salaries

By Jane Casselberry

Herald Staff Writer The Longwood City Commission has ordered an ordinance prepared that would provide a monthly salary for the five members of the Planning Agency, although they each have been getting $100 a month for some Commissioner David Gunter had previously questioned this practice. Commissioner Harvey Smerilson made a motion Monday night to order the ordinance prepared that would authorize the salary. That motion passed 3-2, with Gunter and Commissioner Lynette Dennis opposed. Gunter said he is against paying the LPA members a salary, because no other Seminole County city or the county pay their boards a salary, but they are compensated for mile-

"I don't think we're so big yet that we need a salaried board." Gunter said. "If we give the LPA a salary next the code enforcement board and other volunteer boards will be saying, 'If the LPA board gets a salary, why shouldn't we?" City Attorney Ann Colby, who was asked to prepare the ordinance, told the commission the city code allows for LPA members to be compensated for expenses, but does not provide for salaries, such as the $100 per month they have been receiving. "If you wish to pay them a salary or wage as the state law permits, we will create an ordinance to that effect and repeal the ordinance that says they don't receive a salary." Ms.

Or, she said, vouchers could be provided so that they could account for their expenses.

LPA members have been receiving the $100 per month without being required to fill out any expense vouchers.

Also at Monday night's meeting. City Administrator Ron Waller recommended the city consider a proposal for the city to support a one-time option to withdraw from the Florida Retirement System. He said the commission could reserve the privilege of reviewing the law to see if there are any items in it they don't want. It was pointed out that the state retirement system charges more than 13 percent fee on employee's salaries and it was only 3 percent when the city city joined the system. The fees for police officers and firefighters are in the 15 percent range, double that of Social Security.

Should the city withdraw, present employees would have the option of staying with the state retirement system, while new employees would be covered by a new plan that supporters say would give the city workers more for less.

Warm Weather Sets Records

By United Press International

Unseasonable weather that has sent the mercury soaring past dozens of long-standing record highs in 10 Western states spread into the Midwest with promises of more of the same on the way.

However, the rain combined with melting snow that sent rivers to flood stage and caused mudslides in Washington and Oregon was not expected to cause a problem in the Midwest, forecasters said.

"There will be at least a dozen records again (today)," said Harry Gordon, a National Weather Service forecaster. "Clear skies and warm temperatures should cover the Western half of the nation."

Meanwhile, 50 mph winds and rain were blamed Wednesday for uprooting a large poplar tree that killed Jason Strong. 17, of Willits, a northern California coastal community.

Wind warnings were posted over portions of northern California, where winds gusted to 75 mph at Arcata. There were many reports of power lines downed by winds between the California towns of Orick. Garberville and Willow Creek, the weather service said.

High winds also closed ski areas at Mount Ashland in southwestern Oregon and Willamette Pass in the central Cascades. State police briefly closed Highway 62 between Prospect and Union Creek County after winds toppled Unseasonably warm temperatures were common over much of the nation Wednesday with afternoon readings generally in the 50s, 60s and 70s as far north as central Montana. Temperatures hovered in the 30s and 40s from North Dakota to southern New England and in the 20s over western and upstate New York to northern

New England. Records were set Wednesday in Montana, California, Idaho, Wyoming, North Dakota., Minnesota, Washington, Oregon, lowa and Utah. Many of the records for the date were established more than 50 years ago, and the 75-degree reading at Havre, Mont., toppled the old record of 61 set nearly a century ago in 1889.

Other records for the date included 85 at San Diego: 72 at Great Falls, Mont.; 71 at Helena, Mont.; 70 at Bolse, Idaho, and 69 at Billings Mont., Portland, Ore., Sloux City. lowa, and Salt Lake City.

Seattle-Tacoma, Sheridan, Wyo., and Miles City, Mont., all set records with readings of 68 degrees; Glasgow, Mont., and Williston, N.D., both had 66; and International Falls, Minn., known as the "nation's icebox," reached 52.

The warmer weather sent winter-weary golfers itching for spring out to the links.

"The course is stacked," said assistant pro John McCrotty at the Lake Hefner Golf Course in Oklahoma City. "It was that way yesterday and the day before. As the weather gets better the play picks up. They're everywhere!'

"It's not Southern California but at least it's warm," said Paul Patrick, a cab driver from Portland, Ore., where the temperature reached a record breaking 70 degrees. "My fares just seem happier, less rushed."

Flood warnings were continued for several rivers in Washington and Oregon, where rainfall cased Wednesday as did dangerously high water

"We have the typical flooding in a few lowland areas," said a spokeswoman for the King County Department of Public Works in Washington.

Wednesday's high temperature in Sanford was 73 degrees and the low during the past twenty-four hours was 52 degrees as reported by the University of Florida Agricultural and Education Center. No rainfall

League Of Cities Conference Gives Mayor Management Ideas

By Karen Talley Herald Staff Writer

Taking note of other city's management methods and philosophies 'keeps us from re-inventing the wheel and opens our horizons to new ideas," says Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith.

Mrs. Smith compared notes with officials of other cities during the National League of Cities Congressional-City Conference in Washington, D.C. Feb. 27-March 1.

As one of the league's newest Human Development Committee delegates, Mrs. Smith and about 30 co-members spent a good part of the conference working on items the group will lobby for from from Congress. But she also met a number of the other 5,000 city representatives who attended the conference and said her conversations with some of them could ultimately benefit Sanford, both in providing positive ideas anc tips on pitfalls to be avoided.

At the same time, the mayor's comments about Sanford's substance abuse efforts have apparantly

..we don't live in a vacuum and would hurt ourselves by trying to function as though we do.'

-Bettye Smith

sparked interest among some league colleagues. As a result, Mrs. Smith said she expects to give a more detailed presentation at an upcoming league seminar.

The human development committee is scheduled to draft policies this year on substance abuse. AIDS, education, teen pregnancy and infant mortality, Mrs. Smith said.

The league has a number of standing committees, each of which sets respective priorities, then drafts policies for presentation to the full league membership for adoption.

The policies are "wish lists" containing programs and recommendations the league will lobby for, Mrs. Smith said.

Two more human development committee sessions, in Washington again and St. Paul, will precede this December's policy adoption conference in Las Vegas.

Mrs. Smith said she plans to attend the three sessions, but will only consider asking the city to pay for one, the Las Vegas conference. Mrs. Smith paid for last week's conference and said she will not ask repayment from the city. By rights. she said, Sanford could be asked to cover all four conferences.

Since her election in 1985, Mrs. Smith has become involved in numerous local, state and national governmental associations and made it a practice to attend many of their conferences and meetings. Each session provides "a broader view" she carries back to Sanford,

"It's easy to see your own boundaries, but seeing beyond them is necessary because we don't live in a vacuum and would hurt ourselves by trying to function as though we do," she said.

Politicians Want Debate Control

Look out, Mr. Nielsen. The Democratic and Republican parties have decided to try their hands at television producing. You see, the leaders of both parties got together and decided that the televised presidential debates are far too significant to let the League of Women Voters, a neutral organization, keep organizing them.

The parties want artistic control in 1988, and to get that, they're forming a bipartisan, non-profit commission to hammer out the debate format.

It's not hard to understand why two political parties supposedly fighting each other for control of the White House agree to a jointly sponsored national presidential debate. Republicans and Democrats alike fear that a televised debate - a major campaign event — might pose unpredictable hazards. The candidate might make a mistake. He might look foolish.

Republicans probably recall with a shudder the second televised debate between Jimmy Carter and then-President Gerald Ford in 1976. Ford told all those viewers that he didn't think the Soviets had much clout in Eastern Europe. Surely he didn't do much for this credibility when he said, "I don't think the Poles consider themselves dominated by the Soviet Union."

Having won the 1976 election, Carter then refused the League of Women Voters' invitation to one presidential debate in 1980. protesting that John Anderson, a third candidate, was to be on the podium along with Republican Ronald Reagan.

One can be reasonably certain that a presidential debate sponsored by Republicans and Democrats would snub any third party or independent candidates. In fact, the format likely would be an exercise in damage control, a dull affair that might put viewers to sleep but at least avoid any nasty surprises or either presidential candidate. The opponents would have a party-designed script to follow. They would be less likely to make

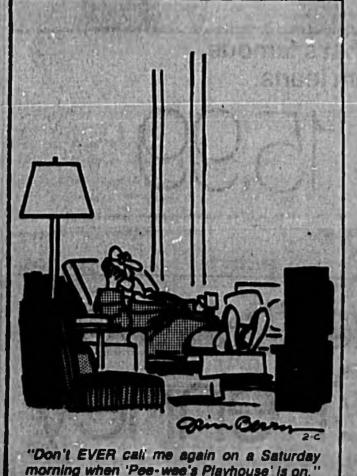

The parties, of course, have a valid interest in presenting their candidates in a favorable light. But the tactical political advantages of presidential debates are murky at best. Their public interest value is indisputable, however. They give voters a chance to measure up the candidates and their grace under fire. If the opponents falter, if they give a wrong answer, so be it. The contenders who refuse to participate are cheating the public.

We think the parties should cooperate with the League of Women Voters and give up their designs on controlling the televised national debates. If party leaders dislike the League's handling of the events, then let the networks arrange the debates. It's the media's job to cover presidential campaigning objectively. And the media, we expect, would be fair-minded and tough.

If the parties are intent on turning presidential debates into "softball politicking," they might as well stick to paid partisan advertising. The voters deserve presidential candidates who aren't afraid to face the public — or each other.

Which Party Fights Racism? Which Side?

What could be more ironic than a bipartisan group of senators making a more persuasive case for a Democratic presidency than the candidates themselves?

The irony was heightened when one of the nation's ablest Democratic candidates, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, pulled out of the game of musical chairs. But a wretchedly less qualified stand-in was salivating in the wings.

Four days after Cuomo's withdrawal, Missouri Rep. Richard A. Gephardt announced his candidacy.

Anybody who takes Gephardt seriously ought to be given a urinalysis test.

Whether or not a Democrat succeeds Reagan in 1988 will depend largely on the record of his senatorial colleagues. And they are percolating

Led by the "civil-rights conscience of the Senate." Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, a bipartisan group of 52 senators has two civil-rights measures as their priorities for the 100th Congress.

One bill would end discrimination in housing:

the other would overturn the 1984 Supreme Court "Grove City" decision, which reopened the door to discrimination on the basis of sex. age and race.

"Housing discrimination is America's apartheid," declared an eloquent Kennedy. "It is one of the most virulent forms of bias. The violence of Howard Beach and Forsythe is the bitter fruit of the racism fostered by racism."

Only after the Democrat-controlled Senate declared its legislative intent did a Justice Department spokesperson claim the administration was "fully responsive" to the needs of minorities (don't laugh, she was serious) and supported "in principle" the aims of the two pieces of civil-rights legislation. Urinalysis tests should be bipartisan.

When Reagan officials start saying the anti-civil rights administration of the president and Assistant Attorney General William Brad-ford Reynolds is "fully responsive" to minorities, you begin to wonder if there shouldn't be an investigation into what kind of cigarettes they're smoking in Reaganland.

Jocularity aside, the Reagan presidency continues to entrench its place in American history as a practitioner of more racial divisiveness than any of the 20th century.

Much of the interracial amity lovingly nurtured by years of civil-rights progress has been dissipated by the White House apologia for racial violence.

In an increasing number of communities, the two races are at each other's sociological throats because President Reagan has abandoned his role as the nation's moral conscience.

To our out-of-touch-with-reality president. racial integration means trotting in a group of black Republicans - as he did recently - and reassuring them that the Emancipation Proclamation has not been put up for sale.

Fortunately, Ronald Reagan is not forever.

Only the Republican Party. Its problem is the absence of any candidate courageous enough to challenge that small, noisy, influential claque of GOP dinosaurs whose notion of integration is watching "The Cosby Show" and cheering Michael Jordan's slam dunks.

Stars Are Blind To Reality

WASHINGTON — A writer for The Washington Post's style section recently wrote that like "many celebrities of conscience" Kris Kristofferson has visited Nicaragua to examine the Sandinista regime. He found it good.

Elsewhere in the Post article, the writer reports that Kristofferson visited Cuba in 1979 and "dedicated a song to Fidel Castro." This makes shocking reading for the families of Cubans who spent 20 years being abused and tortured in Castro's prisons on the Isle of Pines. In view of his outlook, it isn't surprising that Kristofferson was in Moscow recently to attend the peace conference organized by the Soviets as part of a global propaganda effort designed to promote Mikhail Gorbachev's new image.

There have been no media reports about Kristofferson or any of the other Hollywood "peace" promoters mentioning the hundreds of thousands of Soviet people who are confined to the Gulag, the Soviet concentration camp in the Arctic. The man who dedicated a song to Fidel Castro dida't protest the beatings that KGB agents administered to Jewish demonstrators in Moscow's streets days before the Kremlin's peace conference. However, only weeks before he left for Moscow, Kristofferson was in Nevada with radicals Daniel Ellsberg and Ramsey Clark to protest American nuclear tests.

Americans who buy Kristofferson's records and make possible his rich lifestyle most probably don't understand the extent of his radicalization. It is hard to understand why numerous show business types - from Gregory Peck to Phil Donahue - are so determined to put the best face possible on Soviet totalitarianism.

Phil Donahue, who taped a series of programs in the Soviet Union. gave his viewing audience the leftist line of moral equivalence. According to The New York Times, Donahue said that international hostility is caused by the "small percentage of people in both countries who remain hard line and militaristic." He said this ignoring the enormous Soviet arms buildup. which necessitates U.S. deterrence, and ignoring the deployment of 120,000 Soviet troops to crush the people of Afghanistan.

South Africa Today

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - This is my eighth visit to South Africa in the past 25 years. This time I am one of about 30 journalists and educators on a fact-finding tour organized and financed by Rev. Sun Myung Moon's World Media

We will be spending two weeks talking to spokesmen for just about every imaginable position on South African affairs, from President P.W. Botha and U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins to Soweto firebrand Nthato Motlana and Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi. Our group itself boasts a variety of talents and a spectrum of opinions, including as It does former assistant secretary of state Stefan Halper, Southern Christian Leadership Conference national vice president John Nettles, and former Hudson Institute president Dr. Max Singer, to mention only three of my colleagues.

Not even the jet age has managed to bring South Africa really close to American shores. Our trip involved a seven-hour flight from Washington to London, another five and a quarter hours en route from London to a refueling stop on Ilha do Sol in the Cape Verde Islands (where we watched a Soviet transport plane take off for Angola with a fresh supply of Cuban troops) and a final eight-hour haul southeastward to Johannesburg.

We have spent the trip's first several days in this capital city of South African business, and naturally I seized the opportunity to inquire what effect U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa, imposed by Congress over President Reagan's veto, are having. Precisely as predicted by those of us who opposed them all along, they are having almost every effect save the one intended by those who favored them.

The hope of these supporters was that sanctions would (to quote one paper) "jolt the South African gov-ernment" into abandoning its segregationist policies. On the contrary, it is agreed by political analysts right across the South African spectrum that sanctions have simply hardened white South African opinion against further concessions to the blacks, put an end to the good will toward America that President Reagan's policy of "constructive engagement" had engendered, and strengthened the support of the Botha government among white voters so spectacularly that Botha has called an election for May 6 to cash in on it.

On the economic side, the sanctions have thrown substantial numbers of blacks out of work (once again, as opponents predicted) - an especially painful wound in a country whose unemployed have no dole to fall back on.

Of course, in the long run - after South African entrepreneurs have made some quick money filling the gaps opened by the U.S. sanctions - the continued shortage of foreign capital for fresh investment ought to begin to slow down the South African economy. To the extent that it can, the government will try to alleviate the resulting black unemployment by giving these workers the jobs, in mining and elsewhere, currently held by visiting workers from Lesotho, Swaziland, Mozambique and elsewhere - thus shifting the impact of sanctions to these hapless neighboring states. But the long-term effect on South Africa's blacks is bound to be

SCIENCE WORLD Groups Promote

Loafing

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Contrary to what many believe, people spend more time goofing off when working in a group than they do when tolling by themselves, a psychologist says.

The phenomenon is called social loafing, defined as "the unconscious tendency for you to slack off when performing in a group, even if you're doing something interesting and meaningful," explains Bibb Latane, psychology professor and director of the Social Loafing Research Program at the University of North Carolina.

This observation is significant, according to Latane, because it discounts the theory that group efforts increase productivity and enhance a sense of responsibility, creating a whole that is greater than the sum of its parts.

"The knowledge that social loafing exists could change the way corporate America organizes itself in terms of forming committees and task forces to get things done, said Latane, who has been studying social loafing with a team of psychologists, sociologists and fesearchers for the past decade.

The negative effects of "social loafing" are that people tend to "work less and take less responsibility and care in what they're doing" when in groups, Latane said.

He recommended more attention be given to cultivating interdependency among group members and restructuring group tasks.

Latane and associates, after conducting research and performing experiments between 1981 and 1983 in Japan, Thailand, Malasia, Taiwan and India concluded that "social loafing is universal, though modified by cultural effects." Oriental cultures were selected due to their group-oriented societies, he

Men in the United States showed a greater tendency toward "social loafing" in clapping and shouting experiments than women, according to Latane and assistant professor Charles Hardy.

Latane declined to make any assumptions but speculated that women may feel more responsible in group situations than men do.

In similar experiments in India. women showed a greater tendency toward social loafing than men, said Latane.

FBI Kept Tabs On James Cagney

By Jack Anderson

And Jeseph Spear WASHINGTON — Was Yankee Doodle Dandy a dirty pinko rat?

The FBI's suspicions that the late James Cagney was a communist sympathizer dogged the Hollywood star for years, even though the government concluded as early as 1943 that there was no substance to doubts about Cagney's patriotism.

This decision, made the year after Cagney's Oscar-winning performance as song-and-dance man George M. Cohan in the superpatriotic wartime movie "Yankee Doodle Dandy" didn't keep the FBI from repeatedly dredging up its old suspicions, which dated back to unsubstantiated charges made by anonymous tipsters in 1938. Whenever the FBI had occasion to mention Cagney in memos and reports, the vague charge of communist sympathy was sure to be Indeed, this is a common theme in most of the FBI's flies on celebrities; we have been reporting on them for more than a decade.

As late as 1968, when President Johnson asked the FBI for back-celebrities who might be invited to the White House, the bureau reported that Cagney had been the subject of a security investigation. The report did not add that allegations against the movie tough guy had never been confirmed. The G-men's dark suspicions about Cagney are difficult to fathom. W.C. Lyles, a Paramount producer for 50 years and a pallbearer at the star's funeral last year, was astonished when told about his lifelong friend's recently released FBI file by our associate Stewart Harris.

Lyles said Cagney was one of the most patriotic Americans he had ever known. Indeed, the producer recalled that Cagney, who rose from the sidewalks of New York to the top of the movie world, had been known to shed tears during the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The FBI's misgivings about Cagney may have begun in 1935. when he starred in Warner Brothers' "G-Men." playing an FBI agent. An internal memo indicates that the FBI declined to cooperate with Warners on the movie ground information on dozens of "because it was inappropriate."

This may have been due to Cagney's previous roles as gangeters and hard-bitten convicts.

Cagney's acting ability apparently got him off the hook that time. The film was a critical success; an FBI agent summarized the San Francisco Chronicle's rave review in an internal memo: "The picture re-moved all pretense of glamour from the public enemy, but still managed to create hugely effective enter-tainment, all on the right aide of the law. ... The picture gives Cagney, a former public enemy No. 1, a new role as a two-fisted government agent operating against criminals."

But these brownie points weren't enough to prevent an FBI investigation three years later, after unnamed tipaters claimed that Cagney was secretly contributing $100 a month to the Communist Party through an attorney. The charge was never confirmed.

The FBI did conclude that Cagney donated money to lettuce strikers in Salinas, Calif., and to the Loyalist side in the Spanish Civil War. Agents particularly questioned Cagney's efforts with another movie gangater, Edward G. Robinson, to buy the Loyalists two ambulances.

The Loyalists were helped and eventually dominated by the Soviet Union in their fight against Gen. Francisco Franco, who was aided by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. Such Loyalist support was subscquently and euphemistically labeled by government Red-hunters as "premature anti-fascism."

In 1940, the first chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, Rep. Martin Dies, D-Texas, announced that Cagney (and Humphrey Bogart and Frederic March) had never been communist sympathizers.

Despite this public exoneration, and the FBI's own 1943 clearance. the old charges against Cagney were dusted off again in 1958, when Paramount wanted to do a TV series based on FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons in Hiding." Cagney had expressed an interest in the project, and that was enough to chill the G-men.

An internal memo said Cagney had been "linked to numerous communist front organizations." and said: "Certainly with this background, we don't want to have anything to do with Cagney."

Christian militia leader said Wednesday that missing Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite and four Western professors kidnapped from a west Beirut college are in Syrian Army custody and will be freed soon.

Dani Chamoun, the leader of the Christian National Liberal party, said Waite and the four Beirut University College professors, three Americans and an Indian U.S.-resident, "would be released very soon."

There was no independent confirmation of his report, but a senior Syrian military source, who asked not to be named, denied it, saying, "If the hostages or Walte were under Syrian custody they would have been released immediately.

"The hostages are not held in areas under Syrian control," said the source, hinting they might be detained in the southern suburbs of Beirut, a hotbed of pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalism outside Syrian control.

He said "contacts with the concerned parties were underway to secure their release."

Breast Cancer lests Urged

American Cancer Society, re-spending to an unexpected rise in the prevalence and mortality rate of breast cancer, has launched an extensive campaign to combat the disease.

The door-to-door effort will urge women to perform monthly self-examinations and, if over age 35, to undergo periodic mammographies that detect lumps with X-rays long before they can be felt, officials said Wednesday.

"If we find it in the early, early stages there is a good chance we can get it out without mutilating the breast," said Dr. Arthur Holleb, spokesman for the cancer society. He cited several studies that show breast cancer is almost 100 percent treatable when caught in its earliest stages. Holleb said the campaign, which will combine door-to-door canvassing with national advertising, is to counter a disturbing report earlier this year from the society that 1 in 10 American women will develop breast cancer at some point during her life, an increase over last year's estimate of 1 in 11

The society also reported last year an unexpected 7 percent increase in the breast cancer mortality rate for women under 50. The death rate went from 5.9 out of every 100,000 women in 1983 to 6.3 women in 1984, the last year figures are available, epidemiologists said. However, they said the breast cancer cure rate for all women has remained steady at 90 per-cent for two decades and the increase may be a simple fluctu-Doctors from the society and

Commission Moves To Reduce Pressure On Redfish

Conservationists hope that history will soon be made in the state of Florida. It is rare that a commercially sought species of fish achieves gamefish status due to overharvesting.

There is a distinct possibility that the endangered redfish will soon be a gamefish in Florida and it will be illegal to sell or net this species.

The "blackened redfish" craze caused a depletion of the redfish stocks in our state. Commercial prices soared from 50 cents a pound to over $1.25 a pound in the span of a week. Huge net boats harvested millions of pounds of breeder redfish in Gulf

The Marine Fisheries Commission, the agency in charge of saltwater fisheries management. proposed that the sale of redfish be prohibited and that limits be set on sport fishermen. A state hearing officer rejected the portion of the plan that proposed gamefish status for redfish.

The First District Court of Appeals in Tallahassee recently reversed the state hearing officer's ruling that had delayed the Marine Fisheries Commission's plan to protect and replenish redfish.

The successful appeal was a joint effort of the commission. the Attorney General's office, and the Florida Conservation Association. The court ruled that the commission's proposals to prohibit the sale of native redfish and to establish a daily bag limit for the sport fishermen of five fish per person are "valid exercises of delegated legislative authority."

The governor and cabinet will consider the commission's proposals on April 2, and if approved, these measures will take effect prior to the season reopening on May 1. This would complete the management plan developed by the commission to reduce the fishing pressure on this severely oversished re-

Currently the minimum size limit for redfish is 18 inches, and anglers are allowed only one redfish over 32 inches per day.

No longer are our saltwater fishes deemed to be in endless supply. They are now recognized as a valuable resource that must be managed, and if necessary. protected.

If these new proposals are enacted into law, we all will benefit. Redfish populations will increase dramatically and there will be good fishing for us and for future generations.

SHUPE'S SCOOP - Waves crashing over the New Smyrna jetties have discouraged even the bravest of anglers. #### Edmonton Snaps Losing Streak With 8-5 Victory Over Canucks

United Press International

All the Edmonton Oilers needed to break their longest losing streak in three years was some rest - and the Vancouver Canucks.

The Oilers had lost four straight games entering Wednesday night's matchup against Vancouver. The last time Edmonton had stumbled so badly was February 1984. when it dropped five in a row. To find the last time the Ollers lost to the Canucks, however, you'd have to look back even farther.

"It's nice to see everybody contribute on a night like tonight," Edmonton center Wayne Gretzky said after the Oilers' 8-5 victory over Vancouver extended the Canucks' winless streak in the series to 19 games. "We've been in a little bit of a slump, but tonight we played well as individuals and as a group.'

The game was the Oilers first in five days, and the layoff gave six of their stars the opportunity to rejuvenate following their participation in Rendez-Vous 87. While most of the league rested during that series, the NHL's All-Stars played a draining two-game series against the Soviet Union.

The Canucks, in last place in the Smythe Division, are 34 points behind first-place Edmonton.

Elsewhere, the New York Rangers dropped the New York Islanders 7-5 and Chicago nipped Winnipeg 3-2.

Tyson Asks For More Fights

LAS VEGAS. Nev. (UPI) — Mike Tyson is finding life as heavyweight champion a bit too leisurely, so he has asked his managers for a more ambitious workload.

According to his plan. Tyson's heavyweight unification bout against James "Bonecrusher" Smith Saturday night will be his first of five fights this year. Even that is slow by Tyson's standards, considering he fought 15 times in 1985

"The 3 1/2 months Mike has gone between fights is the longest layoff of his career," said Jim Jacobs, Tyson's co-manager. "That's fine for most boxers, but for Mike it was an eternity. He's used to fighting every two weeks."

"I love fighting so dearly," said Tyson, the youngest heavyweight champion in history at 20. "It's my No. 1 priority. I would like to do it every week."

Tyson won the World Boxing Council title Nov. 22 with a second-round knockout over Trevor Berbick. He will try to add Smith's World Boxing Association title.

Wow! Jordan Gets 61

United Press International Too bad for Jeff Malone and Gerald Wilkins.

On a night when Malone of Washington scored a career-high 48 points and Wilkins pumped in 41 for New York, Michael Jordan came up with 61. Jordan, who scored 26 of the Bulls' 33 fourth-quarter points. guided Chicago to a 125-120 overtime victory over the Detroit

Malone paced the Bullets to a 117-114 triumph over the New Jersey Nets while Wilkins, whose season-high is 43, led the Knicks to a 102-99 triumph over young star. "The other night against New Jersey, I made a mistake and I played him too long and he ran out of juice," Collins said. "So, tonight. I bit the bullet and took him out in the third quarter and was hoping we could stay tough."

Celtics 123, Jazz 105 At Boston, Kevin McHale scored 33 points and Larry Bird added 27 to power Boston. The Jazz franchise has not won a game in Boston Garden, losing all 17 visits. The Celties have won 63 of their last 64 games in Noah was a study in emotion throughout the fifth set and tie-breaker, ranging from grimaces after missed shots to fist-pumping joy over a wellplaced winner. NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange lasues.

Early turnover amounted to about 18,650,000

The Dow Jones industrial average and other indexes jumped to record highs Wednesday as investors ignored the political crisis in Washington and focused buying on auto. oil, drug and technology stocks.

Bid Ask

Analysts said a strong bond market and news of a massive General Motors' stock buyback plan helped fuel the buying.

The Dow rose to 2257.45, passing the previous record close of 2244.09, set Feb. 19.

Analysts attributed buyers' renewed confidence In part to General Motors' announcement late Tuesday that it would buy back up to 20 percent of its common stock by 1990. But Michael Metz, investment strategist at Oppenheimer & Co., said Wednesday's rally was foreshadowed by Tuesday's trading activity, which was marked by light volume and a dearth of sellers.

"There was no pressure on the market Tuesday, and there were a lot of buyers waiting impatiently in the wings," Metz said.

From burglary sites deputies have many samples of human waste to be analyzed, which are expected to further tie the suspect to the burglaries. In one case the burglar defecated inside a briefcase in a burglarized home, Patton perspective. You pull your energies together. You change. You go forward."

Reagan said moving ahead "in no way diminishes the importance of the other continuing investigations" into his worst crisis, "but the business of our country and our people must proceed."

The president voiced confidence that the trail of the missing millions of dollars in arms sale profits will be traced by two special committees in Congress and independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh - three investigations that will keep the scandal in the public eye at least through the summer.

"I didn't know about any diversion of funds to the Contras," he said. "But as president, I cannot escape responsibility. .. As personally distasteful as I find secret bank accounts and diverted funds, as the Navy would say, this happened on my watch.

Heeding the advice of friends and foes alike, Reagan welcomed the critical report issued last week by his own presidential Tower Commission, speaking of his "wrenching ordeal" while the board conducted a threemonth review.

"Let's start with the most controversial part," he said. "A few months ago I told the American people I did not trade arms for hostages. My heart and my best intentions still tell me that is true, but the facts and the evidence tell me it is not."

The president stuck by his insistence the deals "began as a strategic opening to Iran," but admitted they "deteriorated into trading arms for hostages. ... There are reasons why it happened, but no excuses. It was a mistake."

Reagan said he accepted all the recommendations and findings of the three-man board. which blamed not only his top advisers but the president himself for the sort of lax management that allowed the policy to go awry.
"Let's face it." Reagan said.

"my (management) style didn't match its previous track record. I have already begun correcting

He outlined several changes he has made already - including the appointment of former Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., to replace Donald Regan as White House chief of staff - but he still did not address several key points such as whether he believed laws were broken during the Iran-Contra operations.

And though he expressed disappointment and anger at "some who served me," he did not mention anyone by name.

Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver North, the two ousted White House aldes who have refused to testify about their principal roles in the operations.

Still, lawmakers responded to the speech by applauding Reagan for conceding error and promising to work with Congress - though Democrats said substantive action is required to back up his pledge of effectiveness as chief executive.

"The president now must ensure full and prompt disclosure of all aspects of the Iran-Contra scandal - and that includes complete accountability for all of the missing money." said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., the House Foreign Affairs Committee chairman.

Reagan was said to have had a big hand in drafting the candid speech, which was one of the most forthcoming since President John Kennedy took personal responsibility for the failed Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in April 1961.

Reagan's previous public discussions of the scandal — a Nov. 13 address and a Nov. 19 news conference — were tainted by his own shaky recollections and a chronology later found to have been falsified by White House aides to conceal his role in the policy's initiation.

Reagan asserted that poor recordkeeping by aides "led to my failure to recollect whether I approved an arms shipment before or after the fact." The Tower board concluded he "most likely" gave prior approval in August 1985 for the first shipment of U.S. arms to Iran to be made from Israeli stockpiles.

The significant question became a major point of dispute between two top presidential aides - Regan and former national security adviser Robert McFarlane — and the president changed his story twice in interviews with the Tower board.

"I did approve it: I just can't say specifically when." Reagan said Wednesday night. "Rest assured, there's plenty of recordkeeping now going on at including Rear Adm. John 1600 Pennsylvania Ave."

The president told the nation he "paid a price" for refusing much comment on the scandal until now but defended his decision to give the Tower board "the chore of pulling the truth together for me.' Former Sen. John Tower of Texas, the Republican Reagan loyalist who led the commission in its review, called the president's speech "brilliant" and said it could reverse his political troubles.

"You don't ordinarily have sitting presidents confess to error like that," Tower told ABC News. "I think a man is never more credible than when he admits a mistake."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas also praised the president, saying he "told the American people what they needed to hear - that mistakes were made and he made them. ... Coming on the heels of the Howard Baker appointment, tonight's speech caps a comeback week for the president."

But Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said he was disappointed and thought Reagan "should have recognized it was his orders that authorized the arms sales to Iran. ... It didn't just deterioriate Into that."

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, joined many of his colleagues 'n noting Reagan new must back up his words with actions.

"If there is one thing the American people knew before this, it is that Ronald Reagan can deliver a good speech," Mitchell said. "The real test is his actions over the next 18 months."

Rep. Dick Cheney of Wyoming, ranking Republican on the select House panel investigating the scandal, said he thinks Reagan already is "on the way back.'

"He hit exactly the right note," said Cheney, former chief of staff to President Ford. "It's clear that he has studied the Tower Commission recommendations and taken the report to

Touchy Scandinavian Prefers Relationship At Arm's Length

DEAR ABBY: The person signed "Touch-Me-Not" would fit into my family very well. Being Scandinavian, we are not as demonstrative in public as people of other nationalities. Unless we haven't seen each other for a long period of time. even family members do not like to be hugged or kissed. That goes for hugging and kissing children, too. And then we do it only in private. I have an excellent relationship with my grown children and their spouses, but we seldom touch each other. Being grabbed, clutched or jabbed would be unbearable for us. Luckily most of our friends are of Scandinavian descent, and wouldn't think of doing something like that.

ANOTHER UNTOUCHABLE

DEAR UNTOUCHABLE: l'ouch-me-not behavior is not a problem, unless, of course, a cool, immovable Scandinavian encounters an irresistible, affectionate. Latin. Semite or European type.

However, conversions have been known to occur, and I'd dare say it would be easier to warm up a Scandinavian than to cool off a hot-blooded Hungari. have birthdays and an-

DEAR ABBY: The letter about "Touch-Me-Nots" touched me where I live. However, your answer was too gentle. It took four pints of blood and a 20-day stay in the hospital, not to mention the hospital bill and a loss of work for a month!

My stupid brother-in-law, when greeting me, punches me so hard on the upper arms. I last for three weeks. If he is behind me, he tabs me in the kidney area and I am in terrific pain for a week.

So, Dear Abby, please en-courage victims of these idiots who grab, clutch and jab to fight back by kicking them in the shins and punching them in the

EDWARD D., SPRINGDALE.

DEAR ABBY: I appreciated your column on the responsibilities of godparents to their godchildren. I totally agree with your explanation, and would like to add that a special relationship usually develops between godchild and godparents. but greeting cards and gifts should become reciprocal after the child natures.

However, when the child becomes an adult and merely expects these thoughtful gestures, we (our family) feel it's time to call a halt to that one-way street. Godparents also niversaries, and they celebrate Christmas too, so a card or small gift acknowledging those occasions is not too much to expect of a godchild who has been on the receiving end for many, many years.

Please publish this for godchildren who have the "gim-

TIRED OF ONE-WAY STREETS

DEAR TIRED: Not all godchildren have the "gimmies," but those who do may experience a rude awakening if they read this and realize their thoughtlessness. However, people who continue to give gifts when there is no reciprocation or worse yet, without thanks should either quit giving or quit complaining.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please save a marriage? My husband and I each made a New Year's resolution, and we've agreed that if either one of us should fail, then on June 1, the loser has to pay the other one

My husband resolved to quit smoking. I resolved to lost 20 pounds. (I'm 5 foot 7 and weigh 155 pounds; my husband doesn't need to lose any weight.)

Here's the catch. I don't smoke, so I don't put any temptation in front of him, but he hauls out doughnuts, cookies, chips and dips in front of me. and proceeds to pig out while I'm looking on — tempted. If I taste something he freaks out. He does this in front of company, too, and I don't hold up very well in the face of temptation.

Medical Equipment Malfunctions Unreported

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Food and Drug Administration is not getting the information It needs to regulate the safety of medical devices ranging from bed pans to heart-lung machines, government investigators said Wednesday.

The General Accounting Office concluded that once a medical device has reached the market, 'severe underreporting" of problems hampers the FDA in taking regulatory ac-

"The main finding was that the FDA only knew about 1 percent of the problems with the devices," Gerald Dillingham, the GAO's project manager for the study.

"That is pretty significant since the FDA is charged with regulating the effectiveness and safety of the devices. That 's pretty tough to do if you don't get the information."

A spokeswoman for the FDA said agency officials are studying the report and will comment on it in a few weeks.

The GAO study, prepared for a Senate committee and released in January. found most problems with medical devices in hospitals were unknown to both the manufacturers and FDA.

"Even when the problems were associated with injuries or had the potential for causing injury, information almost never reached FDA," said the GAO's report on the investigation.

Medical devices are non-chemical products used to detect, prevent or cure diseases or to alter the way the body works. The report said products range "from the very simple to the extremely complex. from common household items such as thermometers and bandages to kidney dialysis machines and implantable heart valves."

Other examples of medical devices include artificial hips, soft contact lenses. hearing aids, X-ray machines, pregnancy detection kits, tongue depressors, tampons, condoms, bed pans and syringes.

The report noted that there are more than 1,700 different types of medical devices available in the United States and that it is a $14 billion-a-year industry.

In 1976 Congress expanded the authority of the Food and Drug Administration to regulate medical devices after many complications were linked to faulty heart valves and an intrauterine contraceptive device. A 1984 regulation requires that manufacturers report serious problems with medical devices to the FDA.

Menstruation Cycle Changes With Age DEAR DR. GOTT - I'm 35. pressure, dizziness, shortness of

My menstrual cycles have always been very regular. Now ing catastrophe. I do not un-I'm beginning to get spotting a week before my period. My Pap test and exam were normal and my gynecologist brushed it off as excessive. Cardiograms and "getting older." I don't feel she enzyme blood tests will indicate answered my concerns. Is a D & a heart attack. This seems to me C in order?

DEAR READER - I think not. Women's menstrual periods do tend to change with age, and your spotting may simply be such a change. If you believe that your gynecologist did not 4 Divine satisfactorily answer your questions, ask for another session with her to review your concerns.

DEAR DR. GOTT - Your article on fish oil as a lifesaver was quite educational, but most of the fish in our Great Lakes have high levels of PCBs, and we are instructed to remove the fat. With the fat discarded, does the fish still offer the same benefits?

DEAR READER - Omega-3 22 Negatives fish oil, a compound that shows 24 Tug promise in combatting arteriosclerosis, is present in the flesh of fish as well as in its fat. 30 Bays Ocean fish may be preferred over lake fish if your homegrown variety is spiced with industrial pollutants. Fish oil also is available in capsule form. Because fish fat obviously contains more oil than non-fatty tissues, you probably will get less Omega-3 from fully cleaned fish. However, scientific studies do not show this to be a dietary disadvantage.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been treated, for an underactive thyroid for about a year. During several trips to the emergency room because of chest pains, difficulty breathing and left-arm numbness, the doctors have told me they can't tell the difference between a heart attack and a thyroid attack. Are they correct? I'm female, 5-foot-1 and 175 pounds.

DEAR READER - Too much thyroid in your system could lead to nervousness, sweating, weight loss, weakness and palpitations. The symptoms of heart attack are chest pain or breath and a feeling of impendderstand your doctors' confusion. A simple blood test will tell if your thyroid level is to be a straightforward problem;

Incidentally, your weight seems to be excessive for your height. I think you should check with your doctor to see if a weight-reduction program would help your symptoms.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

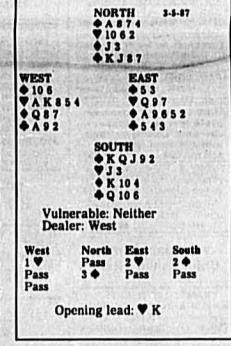

Although some of the work heads in figuring out the location of missing high cards is worthy of Sherlock Holmes, many times even Inspector Clouseau would easily get the right answer. One easy rule to remember is this: Whenever you can afford to do so without risk, force out high cards that you must lose in any event, like aces, before attacking the suits where you have to do some guesswork.

On the third round of hearts, East tries to win the queen, but you ruff. On these deals, get into the habit of counting high cards. Because East raised to two hearts, he should have about 5-9 high-card points. The unseen cards at this point are the club and diamond aces and the diamond queen. East is likely to have one of the aces, since only intrepid declarers do with their two red queens would probably not be worth a response to his partner's opening bid. So you draw trumps and then play the club queen. When West shows up with the club ace, play his partner for the other ace. There is a further reason why this is good play. When you came in with a two-spade bid, opening bidder West passed. Very likely he would have competed with a three-heart bid with three aces and a king.

If the defenders had wanted to be nasty, West could have underled his hearts to the East queen at trick two. Now a low diamond back would have placed declarer in the position of having to guess before knowing which defender had started with the club ace.

Art In The Park

Spectators stroll by art exhibits in Sanford's Fort Mellon Park during the last St. Johns River Festival Arts and Crafts Show. A record number of artists are expected to exhibit their work at this year's festival.

Glenda Wright

...From David Farr, Executive Director Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce

Dear Visitor:

We are excited about this year's St. Johns River Festival. We've planned the largest display of arts and crafts represented by some of the most noted exhibitors in the United States. The more than 160 exhibitors will be displaying a wide range of arts and crafts for your appreciation.

We have also arranged for a variety of food vendors to make your day complete. You will find everything from popcorn to ice cream, including hamburgers, drinks. Don't forget to try hot dogs, and cold the fresh St. Johns River catfish prepared by one of our local fish camp operators.

Second, to develop a county-wide interest in the appreciation of art and its relationship to the cultural growth of the county, which should keep abreast of the economic expansion.

The SSAA for many years presented the Fall For Art show in Sanford. but has decided to join with the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce for the St. Johns River Festival to be presented on March 7 and 8 of this year, the festival will be held at Fort Mellon Park, located on Lake Monroe.

- Diving is as safe as swimming and safer than many other outdoor activities.
- You don't have to be strong or even a great swimmer to scuba dive. Most divers have never seen a shark. And those who have, took
