WHAT THE NEW YORK WORLD said

(A Leading Democratic Newspaper)

about MR. HOOVER in 1920

In the judgment of The World the best qualified and best qualified man to succeed Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States is Herbert C. Hoover.

We should be glad to support Mr. Hoover as the Democratic candidate for President on a platform that represented the historical principles of the Democratic Party. We should be glad to support him as an independent candidate on a platform of progressive liberalism. We should not hesitate to support him as the Republican candidate on a platform representing the kind of government which Mr. Hoover has exemplified in his public career.

The partisan objections to Mr. Hoover are unwarranted in his favor. The American people are tired of professional politicians and disgusted with party politics. The old party lines have broken down as far as the rank and file of voters are concerned, and in respect to principles both parties are bankrupt. Although the spirit of partisanship has never been more bitter or more intense, and never since Reconstruction has it been more harmful to the welfare of the country, the battle of these warring politicians is a fruitless contest.

Mr. Hoover has proved himself one of the greatest administrators of all time. His achievements are among the glories of the war, and when these speak of efficiency it is no longer a matter of it in terms of Germany but in terms of Hoover.

The Democrats cannot successfully challenge the Republican claim to superior leadership. They are already doing that in the best period when the party spirit has become a distasteful relic of the past. The Democratic Party has failed in the past because of individual rivalry and of the party spirit. It is time that the party spirit should be put to rest and the qualifications of a leader should be the determining factor.

serion of which was never more needed than it is today.

If Mr. Hoover is a Republican in respect to administrative capacity, he is a Democrat in respect to decentralization and human rights.

The argument for his nomination does not stop there. One of the great organs of British Liberalism, the London Nation, recently declared that Mr. Hoover was the ablest man that the war had produced. Of the men who were without high reputation when the conflict began, there can be no question that he is the most commanding figure that emerged out of this war of nations. Such ability is not to be held lightly at a time like this. The American people are going to need it, and need it badly.

Of all the men whose names have been mentioned, The World believes that Mr. Hoover alone measures up to the Presidency in the fullest sense.

The fundamental rights and liberties of the American people are menaced today as they have never been menaced before. . . . Between two greedy groups of fools and fanatics there is a great middle ground which is held by the vast majority of Americans, and which they will continue to hold under competent leadership, but competent leadership there must be, and no man better embodies it than Herbert C. Hoover.

He has worked with his hands and he knows from personal experience the point of view of the man who works with his hands. He has been a director of labor in great enterprises and he knows from personal experience the responsibilities and difficulties of the director of labor. He knows the economic conditions of the world better, perhaps, than any other American, and economic understanding is now a vital element in government. He knows the difficulty and the politics of Europe as few Americans have ever known them. Moreover, he knows them at first hand, as he knows conditions in the Far East at first hand, and such a knowledge has become essential to any intelligent direction of the foreign affairs of the United States.

These Americans who want a business man for President can find him in Mr. Hoover, who has brilliantly managed one of the most successful business undertakings known to history.

Those who want a progressive in the White House will find in him an instinctively democratic progressive. Those who want administrative ability will find in him administrative ability of the highest order which has proved itself on three continents. Those who want an unyielding champion of human rights and a responsible government under law will find in him a candidate about whom they need have no misgivings.

The Presidency of the United States is a varying office. Its constitutional qualifications are fixed and rigidly defined, but its other qualifications change with circumstances. After this war it can never again be safely made a refuge for a parochial politician of negative character who even his nomination to the fact that the managing politicians of his party think well of him as a dispenser of patronage, and that so far as the rest of the country is concerned there is nothing to be said against him.

In point of ability, in point of experience, in point of capacity to deal comprehensively with the new problems of reconstruction, Mr. Hoover towers above all the candidates who have been brought into the contest. There are no arguments against him except the arguments that are spouted out of the stagnant waters of professional politics.

For itself, The World does not care whether Mr. Hoover calls himself a Democrat or a Republican or a Progressive or an Independent.

He is the kind of man that ought to be President of the United States, and he is the man The World intends to support for President of the United States regardless of all the artificial barriers of a debased and discredited partisanship.

Herbert Hoover in 1928 has had eight years of intensive study of the many intricate problems of our government which make him infinitely more qualified now than eight years ago for the great office of President of the United States.

Complex Campaign Nears Finish With 2 Sides Optimistic

The surface indications that the straw votes, betting odds and newspaper "experting," all indicate a Hoover victory. Yet there are puzzling elements and baffling cross-currents presented in this election that have never entered into any previous election in American history and exactly what they portend only time can tell.

A list of these new and puzzling factors might be extended indefinitely, but generally they can be grouped under three headings, to wit:

1. The presence for the first time of an acute controversy over prohibition in a national election.
2. The injection of a religious issue which heretofore has never been a factor.
3. A new army of approximately 10,000,000 voters added to the nearly 30,000,000 that participated in the 1924 election.

To the forecaster who carefully analyzes the actual ball strength contained in this trio of new elements tomorrow's election is an open book. But to most observers, trying to chart their course by old, tried and familiar landmarks, they present a complex conundrum that can only be solved tomorrow night by counting of some 10,000,000 votes.

A majority of newspaper experts have selected Hoover to win. It is usually "safe" to predict Republican victory in national elections. As Senator George H. Moses naively observed, there are normally 3,000,000 more Republicans than Democrats in this country. To which the Democrats retort that this is no normal year. The Democrats liken it to 1916, another year in which the exact opposite predicted Republican victory, only to wake up two days later to find a Democrat elected.

Perhaps 1928 may be another 1916. Perhaps it won't. But it is going to take a poll of the religious prejudices, if any, and the wet-and-dry views of some 40,000,000 American citizens to determine whether it is or not.

Both sides can dig into the electoral college figure box and produce tables of certain probabilities and extra ultra-probabilities that are extremely safe factors to them. Figures cannot be but they can be marvellously juggled.

The Republican tabulators can produce tables in a twinkling showing that Hoover victory is as certain and inescapable as death and taxes; that the D. C. traffic between San Francisco and New York is inevitable and that a landslide is probable.

When all the extravagant claims are thrown out such as Hoover sweeping the 10 states of the solid South, and Smith getting five to the Pacific Coast and Middle Western states, the difference of opinion between the tabulators is found to focus on a considerable group of states, scattered from Massachusetts to the wheat belt of the West.

There are four states that are regarded by the leaders on both sides as more or less "hot" candidates for a better vote. These are New York, Massachusetts, Missouri and Wisconsin. That does not mean that they are the only doubtful states. It does mean that if Governor Smith carries all four, he is conceded an excellent chance of doing it.

The electoral votes of these four states total 54, an important figure in itself. But what is considered more important in the final analysis is that each of these states is representative of the 10 states in which it is located, so that its immediately adjacent states will be calculated to follow the lead.

In the East Rhode Island and Connecticut usually are found in the same column with Massachusetts after election New York and New Jersey or the Middle Atlantic states usually go along together. Missouri is typical of the always important border states.

County Expects Largest Poll In Voting History

Signified by E. G. Smith as state committeeman and J. P. Hall as county Republican chairman, the following statement was given out from local Hoover headquarters:

"Mr. Hoover says there should be no North, no South, no East and no West but we are one and inseparable. He stands for maintenance of the constitution of the United States, the Eighteenth Amendment and its strict enforcement. Our issue is not a question of the number of foreigners admitted to the United States but of the character of the immigrants admitted. No laboring man can afford to have the competition of foreign pauper labor, which would overrun this country under proposed changes in the immigration laws as advocated by the Democratic nominee.

"Mr. Hoover is one of the world's greatest humanitarians, known as the greatest living administrator and one of the ablest citizens ever produced in America. He is not a politician but a business man who has devoted his life and fortune to relieving suffering, promoting the welfare, not of party but of every man, woman and child in this country."

The polls will open tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock and will remain open until midnight of 5:27 p.m. The poll is in precinct one, Sanford, will be located in the Wechs block on Railroad Avenue, and in precinct three, Sanford, in the basement of the courthouse.

shot at close range. While they thought it possible that the black sedan may have passed very close to him at the curb, it was believed more probably that he was shot in a room of the hotel, across the street, and then made his way downstairs.

It was learned that shortly after 9:30 o'clock last night, less than two hours before the shooting, Rothstein was accosted by two men in front of Lindy's Restaurant, which he owned, at 50th Street and Broadway. The three argued for several minutes. Then Rothstein dismissed the men abruptly and vanished in a taxicab. His movements from that time until the shooting are not known.

The shooting first became known when Rothstein staggered into the service entrance of the Park Central at 50th Street, just west of the main side entrance, and asked for a taxicab. He was wounded in the right side, near the heart, so severely that he could hardly stand.

He approached Lawrence Fallon, the house detective, and gasped: "I've been shot. Get me a taxi."

After being taken to the hospital, Rothstein suddenly exclaimed: "I want my wife. Send for her."

Mrs. Rothstein, the former Carolyn Green, had not been living with her husband, although they were not divorced. A few hours later she appeared at the rear entrance of the hospital, accompanied by three men. They dodged photographers who tried to take flashlight pictures.

The wife, a somewhat mysterious figure, entered the hospital and waited for her estranged husband to come out of the other. Later Mrs. Rothstein urged her husband to reveal who shot him. "No, dear," he gasped weakly, "you know I can't."

GIRL'S SLAYER SAYS HE ACTED TO REPEL KISS

Vincent keeps on staying away. Since the night of the party Vincent had taken out another girl. The police are seeking a girl seen to alight from a train in Staten Island Saturday evening, weeping violently. She held a paper in her hand and sobbed to a girl who met her: "I don't think Vincent could have done such a thing."

Associates of Vincent and Alice said Vincent had told how he respected Alice and hoped some day to marry her.

The police think "puppy love" and jealousy had a lot to do with the crime. In his confession young Rice said he had spent the day in Alice's home, her mother being at work. They had played the piano and sang. About dusk, he said, she approached him with an embrace.

"This I resisted," he swore. "She also kissed me. I protested. Finally I stood between the bedroom and living room. She approached me again, putting her arms around me. She said, 'come on and be a sport.' I did not like that. I became angry and struck her a blow on the forehead with my clenched fist. Her head struck against the door, inflicting a wound which bled freely. I became frightened. I did not know whether she was dead or alive. I moved back and forth in the house. I saw an electric cord, used for an electric iron. I found the cord around my neck three or four times and threw pillows and blankets on her body. I then left."

Candidate FOR GOVERNOR OF FLORIDA

My Political Creed

I believe that public office is a public trust, and a true public officer is a servant of all the people. He cannot be to wise to learn and should not be so weak as to be misled; he should give "leadership," not "dictation" and take "counsel" not "orders;" he should gather wisdom from the minds and hearts of all people and translate into the public welfare through his own clear conscience, mature judgment and patriotic service.

I believe the one great purpose of government is to make happiness and prosperity universal, establish justice between man and men, the individual and the state; that no man or set of men is so big as to rise above the government and no individual is so small as to fall below its protecting care.

I believe in our form of government and that the spirit of the constitution should be held inviolate by legislative, executive, and judicial officers—by every citizen of the land; that every law should have that quality of reason and right that inspires respect, and that its observance should be upheld.

I know there is a line of justice where men of every class and creed should meet on a common ground without a sacrifice of principles but with devotion to the common good.

Are you telling what will the probability will be? Republicans will win or lose, but it is not as John.

This editorial is concerned with some of those questions, but with the more fundamental one: Has the Democratic Party in Florida a Well Defined and Approved Platform?

To the question there is no simple answer. It is a question that a skeleton of a platform must be drawn up in a government while a primary determines the candidates.

Therefore the Democratic party has a platform on only as the Republican party. Indeed, it would not be true to say that the Democratic party has no platform. They have this, plus powerful precedents that were never violated since in the period from 1880 to 1912 and for which the Democratic party has a record.

Other Matters At Stake

Tomorrow's election may not be the bitterest ever held in the history of the world but it is almost certain to be the biggest. In many states increased registrations properly indicate that two or three times as many persons will cast ballots as voted in 1924. In Florida 62,000 voted for Davis; 20,000 for Coolidge; yet tomorrow some three hundred thousand persons are expected to choose between the Democratic and Republican tickets. Forty million throughout the whole country will likely march to the polls.

Other states may be as doubtful as Florida, but none of them is confronted by so serious a problem as that which faces the citizens of this state. Other Southern states may abandon the traditions of their fathers and bolt the Democratic party, as far as the national ticket is concerned, but none of them is likely to witness a complete Republican victory. We do not believe that Republican strength has increased in this state until the members of that party have anywhere near a majority; yet a combination of circumstances makes their success in the gubernatorial and congressional races, at least a possibility.

The Fourth Congressional District of Florida has never before had the opportunity of being represented in Washington by a citizen of such outstanding qualities of ability, leadership, and personality. The nomination of Ruth Bryan Owen in the June primary was a triumph for the Democratic party of which it has all too seldom had the occasion to boast. In this entire district, whether among Democrats, Republicans, Socialists, Prohibitionists, or whatnots, there is no one more completely equipped to command attention in the halls of Congress and to gain for Florida the recognition it needs, than the nominee of the Democratic party.

Yet Mrs. Owen goes into the general election with victory by no means certain. Attempting as she has to stand strictly to her own business and confine her activities to her own campaign, she has aroused the ire of many members of her own party. In accordance with the oath she took in the primary, she has declared her loyalty to the Democratic party, and has announced her support of the ticket. But this apparently has been unsatisfactory to many on both sides of the national question.

Smith Democrats have persistently insisted that Mrs. Owen abandon her own campaign and take the stump in behalf of the national ticket. This Mrs. Owen, with equal persistence, has refused to do. On the other hand Hoover Democrats have brought great pressure to bear in an endeavor to force Mrs. Owen to declare for Herbert Hoover. This Mrs. Owen could not do because of the path she took in the primary. It has been an impossible situation, but has created much opposition even among those who voted for her last June.

Doyle Carlton has likewise been confronted by the same unenviable situation. He has, in addition, found in his opponent a man of wealth who was willing to spend much of it on this campaign. And among some of his opponent's supporters, he has found men who resorted to what, even in politics, might be called irregularities. Among these, we might mention the pathetic attempt to show that Carlton's relief work among the storm sufferers was prompted by political motives, and that his failure to stump the state for Smith was ample reason for loyal Democrats voting for the Republican Howey.

Florida Democrats, in their mad excitement over the Hoover-Smith controversy, should not lose sight of the fact that the future of the state of Florida is at stake in the gubernatorial and congressional races. They should not allow their animosities, inspired by an issue wholly without the state, to affect their decision when voting for state candidates. They should go to the polls tomorrow and pile up tremendous majorities for Ruth Bryan Owen and Doyle Carlton. They will probably need, and will most certainly deserve, every vote they get.

A FRIEND OF ours, who incidentally is a Hoover Democrat, severely criticizes our Saturday night editorial showing the possibility of a Smith victory. He insists he will have a tremendous horse laugh on us after the election and what he terms the Hoover landslide. His diagnosis is that Smith will carry only four states in the North and that he will lose a number of Southern states. New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island are placed in the Smith column with all Southern states except North Carolina, Florida and Texas. To a certain extent then we are in thorough accord. We would not for one minute pretend to say that Smith will carry all the states listed for him in Saturday night's editorial. We do, however, contend that those states will give him the highest percentage of votes. In other words he will come nearer to winning Nebraska than Iowa, Connecticut than Vermont, New Jersey than Delaware. We also believe that Smith will secure a higher percentage of votes in New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island than he will in North Carolina, Florida and Texas. And we based our argument for his victory upon the "presumption" that he would carry the Solid South solidly, together with New York and Massachusetts.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY'S PLATFORM ORLANDO SENTINEL

Assertion has been made that the Democratic party in Florida has no platform. Is the criticism based on knowledge or ignorance? Is it true? Is it fair?

This editorial is concerned with some of those questions, but with the more fundamental one: Has the Democratic Party in Florida a Well Defined and Approved Platform? To the question there is no simple answer. It is a question that a skeleton of a platform must be drawn up in a government while a primary determines the candidates.

The first four acts already past. A fifth shall close the drama with the day.

The shades of this night are a curtain which falls to reveal tomorrow on the last act of a great political drama. There are villains and heroes and there will be a conventional climax preceded by a final chorus—but the audience is still confused about the plot and uncertain of the happy ending.

Hero or Villain of the plot? Alfred E. Smith who will be most colorfully remembered and heartily missed when the stage darkens tomorrow. His are the lines that have been most interestingly spoken, his the part most aggressively played and the personality most intimately carried to the audience. Win or lose, the Happy Warrior has filled the house. He may shortly fill another and whiter house.

"Ask yourself what Woodrow Wilson would have done if he were alive today," reads a "Hoover Democrat" advertisement. The authors of this advertisement know well what Wilson would have done. They have his own words in high endorsement of Alfred E. Smith. They have his often repeated scorn of religious and social snobbery. They have the spectacle of all those who were nearest and dearest to him—his wife, his daughters, his secretary, his cabinet officers and his bosom friends—vigorously supporting Democracy's leader today.

"Governor Smith," said Woodrow Wilson, "is a man who has stood quite apart in a great many ways, and I believe he feels in an unusual degree the impulses and compulsions of the changed order of the nation and the world's affairs."

The same advertisement concludes with the plea "Vote as your conscience dictates." Fair enough. Among the components of conscience are memory, history, loyalty, love of one's own people and land and of the organizations which have nobly served them. Vote as your conscience dictates by all means. There is no earthly law against it and every mortal duty in favor of it.

"The Democratic party," said Woodrow Wilson, "is a means to an end, and its power depends, and ought to depend, upon its showing that it knows what America needs and is ready to give it what it needs." He would have said the same thing of the Republican party too and have found it as unprepared this year for such a test as the Democratic party is prepared.

parties have a platform. Is the platform well defined? A more accurate question.

First, Carrying out the program of road construction laid down by the legislature; but keeping all departments within the budget.

Second, Retrenchment for all departments of the State Government in order that the burden of taxation may be lessened.

Third, Improvement and expansion of education facilities both as to the common schools and our state institutions of higher learning.

Fourth, completion of the State's work in the Everglades (in some places that will remove it from the field of politics) and make the area a safe place for human lives, and this work to be done without a bond issue against the State.

Fifth, improvement of banking laws and practices with provision for adequate examination and strict supervision, for the protection of depositors and stockholders.

Sixth, Abolition of the evils of local legislation.

Seventh, fostering agricultural production, particularly as pertains to the farmers' problems of production, distribution and marketing.

Eight, conservation of the natural resources of the state by wise and direct protective laws.

Ninth, making and keeping the state's business the people's business so that this may be truly a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

Tenth, honesty, arduous, progressiveness in government conducting public office, as a public trust.

This primary approved platform is sufficient answer to the declaration of Republicans that Democrats have no platform. They have this, plus powerful precedents that were never violated since in the period from 1880 to 1912 and for which the Democratic party has a record.

"A DICTATOR FOR MR. HOOVER"

LITTLE INTEREST IN TAX MATTERS GAINESVILLE NEWS

Little interest in tax matters was shown in the light of expert advice and technical survey, a report of being reached through to public members of the tax committee at the end of the session, as has some times been the case in more than one state.

It is freely admitted that the average citizen is scarcely qualified to pass on tax matters. He lacks the time to study the subject in the "open" and he lacks also the qualifications necessary to enable him to distinguish between the various subjects of taxation and to assess them equitably. It requires an economist to do that. Many states have tax commissions to administer the law and to advise the lawmakers as well and in the spread of that idea the best hope for more scientific levies that will be just alike to the state and to the taxpayer.

Revision of many laws is a prime necessity. In recent years the burden has become very intolerable and there is a bitter realization on the part of many state executives that equalization through revision on a basis of scientific inquiry is impratively needed if matters are to be adjusted. SANFORD FORUM

Editor of The Sanford Herald: If it appears that some of the critics of Dr. F. D. King's article in regard to the political campaign have resorted to mockery in their frantic attempts to get votes for Al Smith. Even if Dr. King was entirely mistaken in his political beliefs, due respect for a man who is so faithfully and constantly giving his life for the advancement of humanity should have caused them to have tempered their rebuttal statements with loving kindness.

However, their vain attempts to cloud the issues on the campaign will have no effect on many of the intelligent voters of this country. There is at least one voter who is from Missouri in regard to the charge that Herbert Hoover is so disloyal to the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of his country that he drinks of the forbidden liquid. At any rate his campaign manager has boasted that Herbert Hoover takes a drink. Even if a man enjoys a drink should he not be willing to make a little personal sacrifice in order to secure law enforcement and advance the welfare of his fellowman? Is a man who patronizes a bootlegger a good citizen?

Do we want a trained and successful business man or a Tammany trained politician for Commander in Chief of the American Army and Navy, for the appointor of our Supreme Court Judges, for the selector of the President's Cabinet, for the advisor of the House and Senate, and for the graceful and responsible position of Chief Executive of the United States?

Talk about party loyalty—what does a man who repudiates the prohibition plank of his party's platform and chooses a wet Republican for his campaign manager care for party loyalty? Does loyalty to country come ahead of man's instincts and reasonableness as to what God would have him do? Did not our great grandfathers withdraw from England when their independence was placed in jeopardy? Did not our grandfathers, for a common withdrawal from the British, fight the Revolutionary War?

In another article in the Florida Watchman appears the following, taken from the September issue of The Protestant, Washington, D. C.: "Now in diplomatic relations with more than thirty other powers, it demands the United States as one of these powers. In all human affairs, public opinion is the most powerful of all."

support from a Democratic nominee whose views are antagonistic to the voter's ideas of Democratic principles? Talk about the negro question—Did not Al Smith work for and help pass a law making it a crime in New York state for any hotel, restaurant, bar, shop, theater or any other place of accommodation to make any distinction between whites or blacks or to say that negroes were not wanted?

Talk about immigration—Are we not already loaded with undesirable citizens and could we not welcome a few desirable ones? Talk about the good man who is supporting Al Smith—is it impossible for a good man to make a mistake?

Talk about religious intolerance—what about the following, quoted from a statement by Bishop Cannon in The Florida Watchman, Bishop Cannon says: "I quote also from an editorial appearing in the Union and Times, official organ of the diocese of Buffalo, (N. Y.), published by the Buffalo Catholic Publishing Company, at St. Stephens Hall, Buffalo, New York, issue of October 24th: "The Protestant Church in the United States has existed upon the unshakable fact that this is a Protestant country. It has clung to the fallacy like a dying man to a straw. It has mocked its members into believing it and it has followed the statements of those who have accepted it without proof. Were a Catholic elected tomorrow the drowning man in the person of the Protestant Church, would quickly sink from view. The straw at which he has grasped as an anchor would disappear with him. The remnants of Calvinism, Lutherism, Wesleyan teachings and Episcopalianism would die as their sects are disintegrated from division, disaccord and dissension."

Every informed citizen of the United States knows quite well of the telegram which Governor Smith sent to the Houston Convention after his nomination in which he declared his purpose to set aside that part of the Democratic platform which referred to prohibition. But the Herald readers are told in the Forum letter of "this afternoon" that he set aside that part of the platform which referred to prohibition. that Governor Smith in his telegram to the Democratic Convention mentioned no other part of the platform, but the prohibition plank. The local attorney clearly was asleep at the time. His name may be treacherous. He does not seem to know that Mr. Smith has made the whiskey issue by no means his campaign.

The writer of the letter to Mrs. Josephine Daniels and Mr. Carter Glass as worthy and able examples in this most important political campaign in the history of America. Again in the attorney's memory, comes to mind a "case" I attended in Mrs. Nellie Hall Ross, Los Angeles, California, under date of April 23rd, 1921. Joseph Daniels reported as saying "I think it will be a fatal mistake for the Democratic party to nominate a man with the set record of Governor Smith and I could not stand for any wet." And Mr. Glass, one of the local attorneys, returned with such certainty, said in an issue of Review of Reviews in the May number of 1921.

"Should Governor Smith be nominated as an exponent of the Eighteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution should be repealed or modified, he would in my judgment be beaten by a man and the South and the country. Prohibition is not a party question, but a moral question. It may not be a prophet, but I believe to have won enough to force the issue. The American people in 1923 assume to make a political candidate because he is a proponent of prohibition or a proponent of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, it would be unwarranted. If Mr. Hoover is elected, his statements of two of his own witnesses are:

The greatest piece of moral legislation in the history of the country is the Eighteenth Amendment. We believe that once the greatest nation in the world, countless millions are watching this hour to see what will be the result of the battle which the United States is waging with the whiskey forces. If Alfred E. Smith should be elected, the news would be flashed to the ends of the earth that American citizens had abandoned their effort to defeat the greatest enemy of moral progress which Earth has known. Governor Smith is the most dangerous enemy this piece of moral legislation has ever had or has to have.

In his speech in Tennessee, Mr. Hoover declared, "The purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment is to protect the American home, a sacred obligation is imposed on the President to secure its honest enforcement and to eliminate the abuses which have grown around it."

In the face of the immeasurable ruin which would inevitably follow the return of the legal whiskey traffic, if Governor Smith's determined efforts should succeed, I will not permit my party ties to stand in the way of my patriotic duty. The only way to get Al Smith out of the presidency is to elect Herbert Hoover. F. D. King

Editor "Sanford Herald": Dear Sir! If you want to publish this yet to day, here it is: I think the democratic county bosses will feel relieved and rest after their hard work to press their voters to vote as they command. Oh how thankful am I, that I can do my own thinking and to be at liberty to vote as I see best for the country. One of the advisers here (a vote gave us a list of many candidates that took a drink and on now Mr. Wilson was named; too. Now I think Mr. Wilson took it too strong, or how could he forget all about the 14 points before he returned from France? And then comes Mr. B. and tells us about the protestant and catholic boys in war time, but Mr. B. has not read Father Phelan's sermon, published in the "Western Watchman" of St. Louis, Mo. some years ago, in which the following sentence appears: "If the government of the U. S. ever gets in conflict with our church we will fight with the government of the U. S. we fight for our church."—Finally Mr. Papworth informs us that N. Y. where Mr. Al. Smith was ruling for so many years, that crookedness and graft is such, that those at Washington committed are only "badly" a. s. f. So vote for Al. Smith is have these conditions of N. Y. spread over the whole United States and feel contented forever more.

Sufficient Reasons Why Democrats Should Stay Loyal

When the Republican party sees fit to entrust a negro with an important office, or to give a place of authority in the councils of the Republican Party, what section of the country do they select in which to make these "noble experiments?" The Solid South.

What party appointed Joseph E. Lee, a negro, to the important post of Collector of Internal Revenue in the State of Florida and kept him ensconced in a comfortable office in the federal building in Jacksonville, the metropolis of the State? The Republican Party.

What party appointed Crum, a negro, as Collector of the port of Charleston and waged a bitter and steady fight to keep him in office by virtue of ad interim appointments over the protest and the objections of a solid Southern delegation in Congress, led by Senator Tillman, which delegation was able to prevent his confirmation? The Republican Party.

What party appointed in one of the fairest Federal offices in the South, the office of Deputy Collector of the South's leading port, New Orleans, one Cohen, a negro, and required the white people having business with that office to deal with him? The Republican party.

What party recognized as its National Committeeman from the State of Georgia, the Empire of the South, one Ben Davis, a negro? The Republican party.

What party recognized as its National Committeewoman for Georgia, the Empire State of the South, one Mamie Williams, a negro woman? The Republican party.

What party recognized as its National Committeeman from the State of Mississippi one Perry W. Howard, a negro, until he was forced to resign as a result of his indictment by a Federal Grand Jury for the harbor and safe for money of Federal officers in the State of Mississippi? The Republican party.

What party recognized as its National Committeewoman for the State of Mississippi, the State of Jefferson Davis, the proud chieftain of the Confederate lost cause, Mary C. Hoize, a negro woman? The Republican party.

What party now recognizes in the State of Tennessee (a State which gave Harding its electoral vote), as one of the two Republican bosses of that State, Ben Church, a Memphis negro, who with J. Will Taylor controls the destinies of the Republican party in the State of Tennessee? The Republican party.

What party recognizes as its National Committeeman from the State of South Carolina, the State of John C. Calhoun, and of Wade Hampton, one Blanche Redfern, a negro woman? The Republican party.

What party has recognized and seated in every convention of its party held since the Civil war negro delegations from the South in opposition to contesting white delegations? The Republican party.

What party has frowned upon and discouraged, and discountenanced and defeated efforts of the respectable white members of its own party to build up a white Republican party in the solid South? The Republican party.

What party is responsible for the fact that in the South there does not exist and cannot exist a white Republican party? The Republican party.

Facts are facts and all the Hoover Clubs in the world cannot change the facts. The facts are: That ever since the Civil War the Democratic party has been the friend of the South and the friend of white civilization and white government in the South. Whatever the Democratic party may do in the North with its relatively small negro population, it has respected the Democracy of the South as a white man's party.

It has not tried by force bills to destroy white rule. The Democratic party as the ancient champion of State's Rights was in a position to consistently recognize State's Rights, which in the South means Anglo-Saxon rule. On the other hand, the Republican party bred and brought into being out of the bitterness of Civil War, nurtured on hatred of the South, has consistently opposed white rule in the South and every time that it thought it had the power has attempted to infringe upon it.

As further proof of these facts we cite the approval in the Republican platform of this year of the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill, a measure aimed at the South, which was defeated heretofore in the Senate by a filibuster led by Oscar W. Underwood, the Democratic leader. We cite the presence in the office of the Deputy Collector of the Port of New Orleans today of a negro Cohen. We cite the authority and the recognition given to Ben Davis and Mamie Williams in Georgia and to Perry Howard and his negro female co-worker in the State of Mississippi. We cite the recognition of Ben Church, the Memphis negro, as one of the Republican leaders of the State of Tennessee. We cite sixty-three years of history of the Republican party, since the Civil war, all of which demonstrates hostility to Southern traditions, Southern ideals and Southern principles.

The leopard cannot change its spots and the fact that Glenn Skoper, the insurgent Republican of this State, made a fortunate guess and supported Mr. Hoover and thereby got his contesting delegation seated at Kansas City, does not indicate that the Republican leopard has changed its spots or that the Republican party has deserted this policy of fostering negro rule on the white people of the South. In fact, the evidence is overwhelmingly to the contrary, all the Hoover Clubs to the contrary notwithstanding.

Therefore, we call upon the Democrats of Florida, irrespective of differences of opinion about platform questions or concerning the personalities of candidates, to remain true to that party, and that organization which for sixty-three years has been the friend of the South, and has supported white rule in the South.

The earnest Democrats who are about to leave their party to join one to which they do not belong and in which they cannot be happy, are respectfully invited to come back home.
