Want To Wager At Hialeah? You Can — By Phone

By LEE DANCY
Herald Staff Writer

Wagering on horse races at Hialeah Park this season can be accomplished by phone for Seminole County residents and others.

Glen Mathes, public relations director at the Dade County horse track, said Hialeah's new Tel-A-Bet system is a first for thoroughbred racing in the United States.

"Racing (wagers) has become so stagnant," Mathes said. "There's been no dramatic increase either up or down. We know there are people up there who would like to bet, and now they'll be able to."

Establishing credentials to use Tel-A-Bet can be achieved by sending a minimum $100 deposit to Hialeah. Although the bettor can spread the money around on various races, each phone wager must be a minimum $20, Mathes said.

A person wishing to use Tel-A-Bet will be assigned a code name, account number and card similar to those used to purchase goods on credit. No credit will be allowed on the betting-by-telephone system, however, Mathes said. Hialeah received permission from the state Division of Pari-Mutuel Wagering earlier this year to initiate the Tel-A-Bet system, Mathes said. No representative from the state agency in Miami was available to comment on the betting-by-phone program this morning, however.

The racing season at Hialeah begins Jan. 8 and runs through March 6. Anyone who has established his Tel-A-Bet account at Hialeah can simply pick up a racing form and call the track after choosing their wagers, Mathes said.

Results of the day's races will be available by phone. Most Florida residents will be able to use Tel-A-Bet if they so choose, Mathes said.

"This is not considered off-track wagering," Mathes said. "The money is here and the machines to place the bets are here."

Only Dade and Broward County residents will be excluded from using Tel-A-Bet. Mathes said people residing in those two counties live close enough to the track to place their bets in person.

Applications for the bet-by-phone system initially were offered earlier this month. Hialeah officials recently decided to allow Palm Beach County residents to participate, Mathes said.

The only other horse track to offer the opportunity to bet on the ponies by phone is Louisville Downs, Louisville, Ky. Mathes said Louisville Downs is a harness-racing track, however, and Hialeah was the first thoroughbred race track to offer the system.

Tel-A-Bet is, consequently, a kind of test for Hialeah.

"Almost every race track in the country will be watching it," Mathes said. "It will be constantly evaluated. We expect to see a rise (in betting) throughout the season, but we really have no gauge as to what constitutes success."

Jerry Collins, owner and chairman of the board of the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club, strongly disapproves of the Tel-A-Bet system at Hialeah, said Glenn Laney, director of public relations for the kennel club.

"It's basically off-track betting," Laney said, "and that's bad for racing."

Laney said the kennel club promotes its Greyhound racing as entertainment first and wagering second.

"We don't actually sell the wagering part of it," he said. "We sell the entertainment. How can you sell entertainment if the people don't come out?"

The kennel club opened its racing season Saturday night. Laney said 5,838 people walked through the gates Saturday night and placed a total of $420,966 in wagers on the dogs.

"We would have had a much larger crowd without the rain," Laney said. "We don't really expect the recession to hit us."

From an entertainment vantage point, a couple can come to the dog track, pay $1 each for admission and watch the races. If that couple only wagers what they would normally spend on an evening out and lose, the expense would be no more than usual, Laney said.

"If they win, they may win enough for a few dinners out."

Shut Down Grindle's Sanford Wheel Ranch Closed

A soft auto market, high interest rates and a generally poor economy have brought about the demise of the Art Grindle Wheel Ranch in Sanford as of this past weekend.

Art Grindle, president and general manager of the Art Grindle Wheel Ranches, two in Seminole County, one in Orlando and one in Apopka, said this morning the closing of the Sanford Wheel Ranch all but completes a consolidation plan under way for the last several months.

Grindle said the only Wheel Ranch that will continue operating as an automobile dealership is the one in Winter Park on State Road 436, the Semoran Wheel Ranch.

Tentative plans for the Sanford Wheel Ranch on U.S. Highway 17-92 call for holding periodic auctions, Grindle said.

Grindle, who has been extremely active in a multitude of fund-raising projects, said he has developed a new business, an auction company. He is also deeply involved in real estate.

Grindle said the first auction will be held at the Sanford Wheel Ranch sometime around the end of January. However, no cars will be auctioned, just various automotive equipment and other merchandise Grindle said his company has been acquiring and will sell off.

Depending on a number of factors, he said, the Sanford Wheel Ranch may continue to be used as an auction house in the future, but those "plans are still tentative."

This past weekend, Grindle's people moved the last of some 60 cars from Sanford to the Semoran Wheel Ranch.

Grindle's plans to consolidate his four Wheel Ranches began during the summer, he said, when it became evident that slumping auto sales were not going to improve and high interest rates were not coming down. "And I see no improvement until next spring," he added.

"We own all the land and buildings we operated the Wheel Ranches at free and clear. We're out of debt and that's the way we want to stay," Grindle said today. He said high interest rates made floor-planning virtually impossible and added that his inventory of nearly 200 cars at the Semoran Wheel Ranch is not floor-planned. "We own them free and clear," he said.

The Sanford Wheel Ranch produced about $500,000 a year in gross revenues, Grindle said. And when he was operating all four Wheel Ranches, he employed about 60 persons. That's down to about 20, he said, although, he added, he plans on letting no employees go. "We lost those others through attrition or their moving on to other things, which is an option I gave them," he said.

Grindle said his son, Artie Jr., will become president and general manager of the automobile business as of Jan. 1, while Grindle himself will continue to deal with the real estate end of the family business and continue to remain involved in the various fund-raising projects he's been active in over the last few years.

The Sanford Wheel Ranch first opened Dec. 13, 1972, according to Grindle. And while he plans, tentatively, to hold periodic auctions at that location, he may do the same thing at the Apopka Wheel Ranch, he said. The Wheel Ranch in Orlando at Oak Ridge and Rio Grande has been converted into an 8,000-square-foot shopping center, he added.

Knowles Asking Commission For OK On Pay Raises

It will be out with the old and in with the new if Sanford City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles has his way in receiving authority from the City Commission to grant pay raises to the city's six department heads based on annual performance reviews.

Knowles is slated to present his plan at tonight's commission meeting concerning pay raises for the city's recreation and parks director, public works director, police chief, fire chief, utility director-city engineer, and finance director-city clerk. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in City Hall on Park Avenue.

Knowles' new pay-plan proposal, prepared at the request of the commission, will establish pay grades and steps for department heads. The plan used to determine raises and promotions for other city employees. It will also establish annual performance reviews and merit raises for the department heads.

Under the city's current formula, department heads and the city manager are reviewed for pay increases by the commission. However, there is not set schedule for these reviews, and the last merit increase given department heads was in 1978.

The commission also is slated to discuss Knowles' request to shift the city employees' group health insurance policies from the Tampa-based Gulf Group Service Corp. to an insurance program sponsored by the Florida League of Cities.

After a two-month study of the policies and insurance rates initiated because of the possibility of a 75 percent increase in premiums to the city under the current coverage, Knowles is recommending the city switch to the league's insurance plan.

The rate for the league's coverage would be $43.63 per month, as opposed to an anticipated $72.22 for Gulf. Gulf based its increase on past high payoffs for claims.

Also slated for discussion at tonight's meeting is consideration of a work agreement between the city and Kelton and Associates, Inc. concerning double taxation.

Knowles is asking the commission to authorize the agreement between the city and the Deland-based consulting firm to study Seminole County financial records to determine whether city residents are being taxed double for county services they may not be receiving.

Sanford Man's Ex-Wife Charged In His Slaying

A Sanford woman is in satisfactory condition at Seminole Memorial Hospital today after she was wounded in an incident Saturday at a Midway bar which left a Sanford man dead.

Bernice Golden, 46, of Broad Way, Midway, is being treated for a bullet wound she received in a shooting incident at the Club Two Spot on State Road 46 at 10:15 p.m. Saturday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies said. Hospital officials said the bullet passed through her wrist and lodged in her hip.

The dead man was identified as Ronald Neal, 34, State Road 46, Midway. An autopsy by D.V. Garay, the county medical examiner, Sunday revealed Neal died as a result of the gunshot wound incurred at the bar. Garay said the bullet perforated Neal's lung and liver after he was shot in the right side of the back.

Gloria Jean Harrison Neal, 28, of 2301 Dollarway St., Sanford, former wife of the dead man, was arrested in the incident and is being held on $10,000 bond in the county jail. She has been charged with murder, attempted murder and carrying a concealed weapon.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies said a woman, armed with a revolver, entered the Club Two Spot and threatened Neal with the gun. Witnesses told deputies the man grabbed a bystander, identified as Ms. Golden, and held her in front of him when the woman started shooting.

Upon their arrival at the bar, deputies arrested Ms. Neal and transported her to the county jail. Ms. Golden and Neal were transported to Seminole Memorial Hospital.

Salvation Army Soup Kitchens Coming Back?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Salvation Army, faced with increasing requests for help because of rising unemployment and federal cuts in social services, is considering reviving the soup kitchens that helped feed Americans during the Great Depression.

"We're recommending that regional divisions concentrate on developing practical responses to the poor should an economic crisis develop," said Salvation Army spokeswoman Frances Weiss. "And those include soup kitchens."

At a meeting earlier this month, Salvation Army officials in Philadelphia said the group was preparing for the possibility of opening soup kitchens because of the nation's economic problems and the budget cuts.

Girl Born In Norfolk, Va.

First U.S. Test-Tube Baby

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The nation's first test-tube baby, a bouncing 5-pound, 3-ounce baby girl, was born today at Norfolk General Hospital, hospital officials said.

Hospital spokeswoman Karen Corrigan said the girl was born early this morning. However, the exact time was not announced.

"We're all ecstatic," she said. Hospital officials said both the mother and baby were doing fine. Miss Corrigan said there apparently were no complications in the birth.

The attending physicians and the parents were scheduled to hold a news conference later today. Miss Corrigan said the identity of the baby and the parents would be withheld until the news conference.

The birth is the first of an infant conceived in the United States through the in-vitro fertilization process at the nation's first test-tube baby clinic at the Eastern Virginia Medical School.

The clinic is headed by Dr. Howard Jones, who announced the mother's pregnancy last May. The baby was born two weeks ahead of schedule. She had been due Jan. 9.

In vitro fertilization is a technique used to impregnate women whose fallopian tubes do not function because they have been removed or damaged.

The process, pioneered by English Drs. Robert G. Edwards and Patrick Steptoe, is in widespread use in England and Australia. In October, the first American baby conceived through the process was born in England.

But today's birth marked the first conceived and born in the United States.

In the in vitro fertilization process, the egg is removed from the mother's ovary and fertilized by the father's sperm in a laboratory dish. The fertilized egg is then surgically reimplanted in the mother's womb.

The world's first test-tube baby, Louise Brown, was born July 25, 1978 in Oldham, England. In a recent interview,

The birth is the first of an infant conceived in the United States through the in-vitro fertilization process at the nation's first test-tube baby clinic.

Edwards said he expected 15 to 20 such babies would be born by the end of this year.

The Eastern Virginia Medical School, the first test-tube baby clinic in the United States, went into operation in March 1979. After more than a year of experimentation, it announced its first successful pregnancy in May 1980.

Since May, two more successful pregnancies have been announced and clinic officials expect the procedure to be routine within a few years.

Forest City Woman Dies In Car Wreck

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

A Forest City woman died at about 1:55 a.m. Sunday after her car ran off the roadway near the intersection of State Road 436 and Forest Lake Drive, Forest City, rolling over and pinning her inside the vehicle.

An autopsy Sunday by D.V. Garay, the county's medical examiner, revealed Agnes M. McLeod, 40, of 2617 Drake St., died as a result of a fractured skull and brain hemorrhage incurred in the accident.

There were no other persons or vehicles involved in the early morning crash, according to the Florida Highway Patrol. Mrs. McLeod died at the scene, troopers said.

JAIL FIRE

A Seminole County jail inmate has been charged with arson following an incident in Cell D-5 at the jail which caused about $100 damage to the cell.

Donald W. Corkill, 27, 120 Lombardy Road, Winter Springs, was charged with arson after jail officials discovered a small fire in his cell at 12:29 a.m. Sunday.

When jail officials discovered the fire after fire alarms were activated, they removed Corkill from his cell and extinguished the burning bed sheets. Matches were used to start the fire, deputies said.

Corkill's bond has been set at $10,000. He was previously

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS BOYS ROBBED

Two 15-year-old Altamonte Springs youths were robbed at 10:35 p.m. Thursday when they were riding their bicycles southbound along County Road 427 near the Disco Food Store, Altamonte Springs.

Michael Harris, 870 Darwin Dr., and William Rooney, 816 Agnes Dr., told sheriff's deputies they were riding their bicycles past the store when about six men, who were sitting in front of the store, yelled for them to stop. The boys continued riding but were chased down by the men in a car.

The men jumped out of the vehicle and asked the boys what they were doing in the area, deputies said. They then demanded that the boys empty their pockets, stealing a wristwatch and 50 cents from the youths.

MAN'S HOME BURGLARIZED

A south Seminole County man's home was burglarized about 9:30 p.m. Thursday by thieves who made off with two television sets, a stereo and a camera.

John Gilmore, 31, of 460 Pendleton Dr., Maitland, told sheriff's deputies the burglars entered his home through the carport door and made off with the items.

SANFORD HOME ROBBED

A Sanford man's home was robbed sometime between 4:30 p.m. Thursday and noon Friday of about $200 worth of personal property.

Steve Dunkle, 33, of 2800 Narcissus St. told sheriff's deputies someone broke into his home through the front door and stole five pairs of pants, three pairs of underwear, five animal pelts, a glass penguin bank and a rifle.

FIRE AX STOLEN

Someone stole a fire ax from a Seminole County fire engine at about 9:22 p.m. Sunday.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies said the ax was reported missing from Engine 131, after the unit had responded to two calls. Fire personnel said the theft may have occurred while they were answering calls at Wekiva Elementary School or in the Foxwood area.

President Reagan Begins California Working Holiday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan, expecting to hold a summit meeting sometime next year with Leonid Brezhnev, says the Soviet leader has replied negatively to his warnings against further repressions in Poland.

But White House officials indicated that Brezhnev response "does not close all doors." The tense Polish situation followed Reagan to California where he arrived Sunday with his wife, Nancy, for a week-long New Year's holiday stay.

Atlanta Trial Jury Called

ATLANTA (UPI) — Nearly 900 prospective jurors were called today for the start of the trial of Wayne B. Williams, accused in two of the 28 slayings of young Atlanta blacks. His fate may well hang on a collection of tiny cloth fibers and dog hairs.

Police say microscopic evidence, gathered in a search of Williams' home and car, matches that taken from the bodies of at least 10 victims. But the pudgy, bespectacled free-lance photographer and would-be talent scout has been charged in only two of the 28 murders.

Florida Tops Fatality List

Nearly 300 people were killed in traffic accidents during the Christmas holiday weekend, far below the officially predicted high of 550 despite slippery snow that coated roadways throughout the Midwest and East Coast.

A United Press International count showed that by midnight Sunday 297 people were killed in traffic accidents. Florida reported the most traffic fatalities with 32.

Hoagy Carmichael Dead

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (UPI) — Composer Hoagy Carmichael, who wrote "Georgia on My Mind," "In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening" and one of Tin Pan Alley's greatest hits, "Stardust," died Sunday of a heart attack. He was 83.

Carmichael was rushed by ambulance from his home to nearby Eisenhower Medical Center, where he died in the emergency room from "cardiac problems," a hospital spokesman said.

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Red Brigades terrorists released a photo of kidnapped U.S. Army Gen. James I. Dozier that showed he may have been beaten and in a communique called him an "assassin of the American massacre of Vietnam."

Dozier, seeming to have a half-smile on his lips, appeared tranquil in the photo. But he had a dark spot under his left eye that police said could be a bruise or a black eye.

Invasion Of Poland Wanted?

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has charged the United States would like the Soviets to invade Poland to give Washington an excuse to abandon detente and end nuclear arms negotiations that began in Geneva less than a month ago.

A lengthy commentary in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, said Sunday that interference in Poland's affairs by the West was a pretext to force the Soviet Union to send in its troops.

Haitians Riot In Miami Outside Refugee Center

MIAMI (UPI) — Police used tear gas to quell a weekend riot by up to 300 Haitians who threw rocks and set fires outside a refugee center. A Haitian leader warned he was giving President Reagan only until Friday to free his countrymen from Immigration Service camps.

Up to 20 refugees may have escaped during the riot Sunday, when hundreds of angry Haitians broke through a barricade and stormed the main gate into the Krome Avenue Detention Center on the edge of the Everglades, 18 miles west of Miami.

United Press International
Florida's Christmas holiday weekend traffic toll reached 32 early today but delayed reports reaching state Highway Patrol headquarters in Tallahassee were expected to equal or exceed the patrol's advanced estimates.

Prior to the holiday, the patrol predicted a total of 35 persons would die in traffic mishaps during the 78-hour period that began at 6 p.m. Thursday and ended at midnight Sunday.

Rotarians Seek Award Candidates

Jack Horner, president of the Rotary Club of Sanford, has announced the club is searching for young people as candidates for Rotary Foundation educational awards for study abroad in 1983-84.

The awards, for graduate and undergraduate students, teachers of the handicapped, students in technical training programs, and journalists, provide round-trip transportation, educational and living expenses for one academic year, and funds for intensive language training, if necessary.

Since the program began in 1947, the Rotary Foundation has sponsored more than 18,000 students.

The deadline for application to the local Rotary Club is March 1. For further information on eligibility and application procedure, call Horner at 322-2212.

Time Magazine Names Walesa 'Man Of Year'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Imprisoned Polish labor leader Lech Walesa, the "courageous little electrician" who became "one of history's more improbable heroes" in his battle for freedom in Communist Poland, was named Time magazine's Man of the Year.

"Walesa and his movement made a travesty of Communism's pretensions in the eyes of the world," Time wrote Sunday of the independent Solidarity labor movement founder now being held incommunicado by the Polish government.

"The courageous little electrician from Gdansk stood out not only as the heart and soul of Poland's battle with a corrupt Communist regime, but as an international symbol of the struggle for freedom and dignity."

The 38-year-old Walesa, the 55th Man of the Year picked by Time, is the first chosen while imprisoned since 1930, when India's Mahatma Gandhi was jailed — also seeking freedom for his people.

The magazine characterized Walesa, who is featured on the cover of this week's edition, as "one of history's more improbable heroes."

Time called him "a common man who has taken his fling at changing history not by leading governments, winning great battles or writing books, but by embodying the hopes, faith, courage, even the foibles, of the vast majority of his countrymen."

The title "goes each year to the individual who, in the judgment of the magazine's editors, has had the most impact, for good or ill, on the course of events over the past 12 months."

The very first Man of the Year was Charles Lindbergh in 1927. Last year Ronald Reagan was designated Man of the Year.

In his last major interview before martial law was imposed in Poland, Walesa told Time "I have more problems than the hairs on my head." But he later said: "I know that I will lose today, and tomorrow will be a victory."

With a double chin, a slight paunch and a height of only 5-foot-7, Walesa "hardly has an imposing physical presence," the magazine said. "His working-class Polish is rough and often ungrammatical; his voice, perhaps from years of heavy smoking, is harsh and rasping."

Haig Sees Possibility Of Soviet Intervention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some top U.S. officials say the threat of direct Soviet intervention in Poland may have increased because the crackdown in Poland has not succeeded.

"Martial law has not succeeded, and it would be premature to suggest that it had," Secretary of State Alexander Haig said in an interview published Sunday.

Haig said it was "much too early" to conclude the danger of direct Soviet intervention has lessened. "I think it may even be more possible than before these events occurred," he said.

"Passive resistance in my view will continue, and it will be aggravated" by worsening economic conditions in Poland," he said in The Washington Post interview.

Undersecretary of State Walter Stoessel, appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," agreed with Haig's assessment that martial law "has not succeeded, despite these massive measures" — arrests of thousands of Solidarity members and threats of violence against workers who strike.

"The continuing unrest and the food situation ... indicates the situation continues very serious and it could, in the end, result in a Soviet intervention if things do get out of hand," he said.

"Once you've started down this road — you've taken the decision to apply force — then you could be led inevitably to a greater spiral of repression that could involve Soviet intervention," Stoessel said.

His comments came as the Reagan administration continued to sort through possible American reactions to the Polish situation and officials pondered a letter from Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev to President Reagan.

White House officials confirmed the Brezhnev letter arrived late Friday, as a response to a warning Reagan sent the Soviet chief last week about repression of Solidarity and urging "the restoration of basic rights in Poland."

The letter was being closely reviewed and its details were kept confidential. Stoessel said "it would be premature to characterize" Brezhnev's response, and indicated an American analysis of the letter would come out "soon."

"With them, it's always negative," Reagan said aboard Air Force One en route to California. But the president and his aides turned aside all other questions on the Brezhnev letter.

In the television interview, Stoessel rejected the suggestion Poland faces the same fate as Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968, when brief flings with freedom were crushed by Soviet troops.

"The situation in Poland itself is different," he said. "Poland is a much larger country, and I think the world has moved on — we have after all the Helsinki agreement (guaranteeing human rights) and the fact that they're being so grossly violated now is an added element in the outrage which the world feels."

"In Poland we have seen the whole country united in a reform movement ... some which we really didn't see in Hungary and Czechoslovakia," he said.

Poland "will not be forgotten in the same sense Hungary and Czechoslovakia have been," Stoessel said.

Girl Plundered Parents' Savings

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The courts are still dealing with the case of a high school girl who was able to steal $32,000 from her parents' savings accounts in a 1978 scheme, buy 11 cars and a horse — and keep it secret for months.

Sandra Lee Smart, who is now missing after skipping bond in another theft case, testified in a sworn deposition that she got the idea to loot her parents' accounts in 1978, when she was 18. That year she found bank books and certificates of deposit in the attic of her home and withdrew the money in three or four months without her parents knowing, even though she lived at home.

For months thereafter, she said, she intercepted mailed bank statements and on one occasion took a telephone call from the bank about the accounts.

At the time of her arrest, she told a detective she was tired of being "a plain little fat girl. When you drive up in front of somebody's house in a Lincoln Continental, they pay attention to you."

Once, she explained in the deposition, she told a banker she was her mother, then forged Mrs. Smart's signature.

Let's End DOE's Misery

Members of Congress who voted to create a new Department of Energy in 1977 have since learned how Dr. Frankenstein felt when his monster broke out of the lab. President Reagan's proposal to abolish the department should be greeted with relief on Capitol Hill. It is time to put DOE out of its misery.

Former President Carter was barely in office when he called for creation of the department so a single federal agency would have "the broad authority to deal with our energy problems in a comprehensive way." Congress responded with alacrity, but the DOE began dealing with its mission in ways that were not so much comprehensive as incomprehensible.

By last January a new President dedicated to dismantling the department was entering office, and most members of Congress were willing to admit they had made a mistake. A congressional poll conducted by Forbes magazine in January asked senators and representatives to name the bureaucracy they considered the most inefficient or ineffective on the Washington scene. The Energy Department won hands down.

The waste and mischief of the DOE have been well chronicled, including its role in turning a modest disruption in oil supplies after the Iranian revolution into serious shortages of gasoline in some parts of the country. That fiasco, more than the department's sloppy administration of grant and subsidy programs, sealed its fate.

Mr. Reagan's decision to accelerate the decontrol of oil prices, one of his first acts as President, probably did more to improve the nation's energy inventory than the reams of directives and regulations that came out of DOE during the last four years. The new administration's energy policy is to let our energy industries do their thing in a free marketplace with a minimum of advice or interference by the government.

The question now is how to disperse those federal energy activities worth saving into existing government agencies. The administration proposes to lodge most of them in the Commerce Department, which makes sense in most instances. We are disappointed, however, that Mr. Reagan wants to give that department responsibility for the development and manufacture of nuclear weapons.

The nuclear weapons program was inherited by DOE from the old Atomic Energy Commission, which had overseen it from the beginning on the theory that it should be under civilian rather than military control. The weapons labs were an awkward fit in DOE, and will be an even more awkward fit in the Commerce Department.

The worldwide effort to control proliferation of nuclear weapons depends on building an impenetrable wall between the exploitation of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and the production of weapons. The United States offers a poor example by housing its nuclear weapons and nuclear power programs in the same federal department.

Is there a bona fide reason why the Defense Department, under its civilian secretary, cannot be entrusted with the research, development, and fabrication of nuclear weapons? The forthcoming congressional debate on how to dismantle the Energy Department offers an opportunity for a new debate on the philosophical and practical aspects of that issue.

BERRY'S WORLD

"You caught me at a bad time. I blew all my money on software for our home computer."

New Year's Day is four days away. For me, 1982 will mark year No. 10 as a Florida transplant. Most people reading this column wear the same hat I do in this respect. They live in Florida now, but they were born somewhere else.

I was born in Alexandria, Va. and lived there 15 years before moving to Cape Coral, Fla. Cape Coral is much like Deltona. Twenty years ago it was mostly undeveloped land and a gleam in some developer's eye.

Moving from a history-laden area like Alexandria to a manmade city like Cape Coral took some serious adjusting. Alexandria dates back to the 18th century. The first home in Cape Coral was built around 1954.

Four miles away from our house in Alexandria was Mt. Vernon, George Washington's estate. Robert E. Lee's birthplace was only a 20-minute drive away, and the nation's capital, Washington, was within reach.

About the only historical claim Cape Coral's city fathers could make would concern the city's population. Because most residents were over the age of 65, they represented history in themselves.

It took me three years and a trip to St. Petersburg to attend Eckerd College to learn to like Florida. No matter how I twisted the lifestyle in Cape Coral, it came up empty and superfluous.

St. Petersburg was different, however. That city had some history behind it. Ft. DeSoto, for example, on the southern tip of the Pinellas County peninsula, dated back to the early Spanish explorers.

The huge, pink Don Cesar Hotel on Pass-a-Grille Beach is a grand antique structure. Dating back to the 1920s, it attracted the rich and famous from across the nation — and does today.

I am not well acquainted with Sanford's historical background, but I know the city has character. A leisurely stroll down First Street tells me Sanford is a city with airs of the Old South.

Most of the southern cities like Sanford are disappearing. With its angle parking on First Street, large overhangs on the buildings to protect passersby from Florida's blistering sun, and structures, built before central air conditioning, Sanford today resembles many small Southern towns of yesteryear.

Many cities with main streets resembling

Sanford's are choosing to abolish their antique character. Buildings are renovated with modern facades or destroyed to make way for new steel-and-glass structures.

Too much of Florida is new. Florida is a state that continues to beckon the speculator, and developers, who rarely build distinctive structures.

It took me seven years and a brief residence in northern Virginia during 1978-80 to realize Florida was my home. I feel comfortable here because the weather is warmer, the people friendlier and the air cleaner.

For the most part, however, the parts of Florida that intrigue me the most are older. I like neighborhoods that look "grown in," architecture dated pre-World War II, and people old enough to appreciate more of life than just consuming things.

With the beginning of 1982, take a look around. Drive or walk down Sanford streets such as Oak, Elm and Maple to truly appreciate the quality of a well-built home and a brick-paved street.

In my book, nothing made of steel and glass, or paved with asphalt or concrete, can equal old wooden homes and red brick roads.

First Things Were 2nd

Such a temper that Menachem Begin has. It's not often that the minister plenipotentiary of a major power receives a dressing down such as Begin delivered to our man in Israel on the occasion of the embargoing of U.S. arms aid in response to Israeli annexation of occupied Syrian territory. In fact, there may not have been an instance of similarly public diplomatic vehemence since Cordell Hull read the riot act to Japan's envoys on the occasion of Pearl Harbor.

The Golan Heights is no Pearl Harbor, however. Tempers are frayed in Washington as well as Jerusalem, and the U.S.-Israeli connection is for the moment severely strained. But far from irreparably.

Both parties are still much too important to each other to remain estranged for long. And it's just possible that both will learn something valuable from the experience. Namely, that the basis of the U.S.-Israeli relationship is a common interest — stability in Mideast — and also cold self-interest.

In Israel's case, that is survival itself. Its existence will remain in question so long as the region remains perpetually in a pre-explosive state. For the United States, the advantage is greater resistance to Soviet penetration and less danger of regional animosities sparking an East-West conflagration.

Ideally, the interests of both are best served by a comprehensive Arab-Israeli settlement. Realistically, successive governments in both countries for decades have been prepared to make the most of such less. And they have been able to cooperate more or less effectively without benefit of formal alliance so long as each has a realistic understanding of what the other expects to get out of the arrangement.

For the past year, however, American policymakers have been viewing the Mideast somewhat differently. They have put the Soviet menace first and foremost, its immediate countering becoming the goal rather than an ultimate benefit of Mideast policy.

So we have had such American initiatives as the talking up of an anti-Soviet front grouping Israel with the Arab likes of Jordan and Saudi Arabia. Initiatives received as unrealistic by the concerned Mideastern parties which have not, however, been above manipulating them for their own purposes.

There was — still is — the great Saudi AWACS deal, a threat in Israeli eyes to which pragmatic Jerusalem may have believed it found the answer in the Nov. 30 strategic cooperation accord with Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger.

It is just conceivable that Begin genuinely believed that handshake, by which Israel made itself available as a U.S. arms cache in the Mideast, promised more than the folks back in Washington really intended to deliver. Or that those folks did not realize how Jerusalem might interpret the closest thing to a formal alliance in three decades.

And it is almost inconceivable that the Begin government was acting from anything other than the keenest sense of opportunity in appropriating Golan.

FTC Complaints Probe Hurt Businessman

WASHINGTON — Joe Sugarman is the kind of person whose cause I would normally champion. He has portrayed himself as a victim, a man caught up in a nightmare.

Sugarman came to my office for help more than a year ago. He asked me to look into his case. The deeper I dug, the worse he looked. This is his story:

Sugarman owns one of the largest mail-order companies in the country — JS&A Group Inc. of Northbrook, Ill. His ads have appeared in at least 75 publications.

For three years, Sugarman has claimed that the Federal Trade Commission waged a "vendetta" against his company for technical violations of the agency's mail-order rule. This regulation requires the seller to deliver within a certain time — whatever date is mentioned in the ad, or 30 days if no time limit is promised. If the seller doesn't deliver on time the customer must be notified of the new shipping date and the fact that the order can be canceled.

Sugarman claims that the FTC unfairly dug

ROBERT WAGMAN

Hill Doubting Reagan?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It is often said that a politician and a bookmaker are alike in at least one respect: Their word is their most valuable asset. Both are finished if people begin to doubt what they say.

Historians may well decide that Jimmy Carter lost his momentum, and ultimately lost his presidency, when he began to have difficulties with Congress. And many insiders say that those difficulties began when Congress realized that the president could not be counted on to keep his promises.

Ronald Reagan was supposed to be different. Congress was told that this president was a man of deep principle who would stick to his guns.

But these days the administration seems to be inventing its economic policy as it goes along. What was sacrosanct in March has been tossed aside. As a result, many members of Congress are starting to view this administration much as they viewed the Carter administration during its final years. Reagan may have some difficult times ahead on Capitol Hill.

The early months of the Reagan administration were replete with big congressional successes. The president's tax and budget victories in the Democratic-controlled House were possible only with the support of the liberal Republicans known as the "gypsy moths" and the conservative Democrats known as the "boll weevils."

These groups backed the president mainly because of the many promises that he made to them. The liberal Republicans received Reagan's solemn word that he would not touch the so-called "safety net" programs of life-and-death importance to their constituents.

But in recent days the safety net has been ripped apart. In a desperate attempt to cut the huge deficits anticipated through fiscal 1984, the administration is talking about slashing or eliminating programs such as Head Start, job training for the disadvantaged and public-housing assistance.

The conservative Democrats voted for the tax and budget cuts because they thought that the administration understood what was wrong with the economy and how it could be corrected. But their faith in the competence of the administration has greatly deteriorated.

Take the issue of federal deficits. The administration originally said that the tax cut would so stimulate the economy that military spending could be massively increased, key social programs could be maintained and the budget could be balanced by fiscal 1984.

Then in July, the administration predicted that without additional large budget cuts the federal deficit would reach $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982, $52.7 billion in fiscal 1983 and $44.2 billion in fiscal 1984. But it was still saying that the budget could be balanced by fiscal 1984 given some particularly favorable economic events.

In November, the administration admitted that the economy had not responded to the tax cut in the way that had been hoped. Thus, the deficit forecasts were raised to $66.7 billion for fiscal 1982, $126.5 billion for fiscal 1983 and $145.7 billion for fiscal 1984.

Now those figures have been revised again to predict deficits of $108.1 billion in fiscal 1982, $152.3 billion in fiscal 1983 and $182 billion in fiscal 1984. Thus, between July and December the total deficit forecast for those three years grew from $139.4 billion to $423.4 billion.

The boll weevils who sided with the administration because they thought it knew what it was doing economically have been left to swing in the wind, as have the gypsy moths who relied on the president's promises to protect programs vital to their districts and to their re-elections.

Already the GOP-boll weevil coalition that passed the tax and budget bills has been replaced by a Democrat-gypsy moth coalition that was evident in Republican defections on appropriations and farm legislation.

Even more ominous is the growing belief that Reagan can no longer count on the Republican-controlled Senate, at least in budget matters.

The president has made many promises to achieve his victories on Capitol Hill. Now he is having to break those promises. Thus, the same unhappy fate that befell Jimmy Carter on Capitol Hill may lie ahead for Ronald Reagan.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Imports Must Be Curbed

If the United States is not to slide into a depression, the Executive and Legislative branches of government must do more to defend the nation's legitimate economic interests. To date, this has not been done.

The issue comes into sharp focus at this time because of the expiration of the so-called multi-fiber agreement on Jan. 1.

This is the agreement on which hangs the fate of our country's textile and apparel industries. The agreement which has been in force is patently unfair to the American textile and apparel industries, which give employment to 2.7 million people. Under this agreement, foreigners were allowed to increase their exports to this country at a minimum rate of 6 percent a year. Various loopholes in the present treaty make it possible for foreign countries to increase some shipments by as much as 24 percent. These increases threaten American jobs and profits.

Sen. John East (R-NC) recently reported that in Los Angeles, 10 percent of the jobs are in textiles and apparel; in Philadelphia, 21 percent; in Miami, 22 percent; and in New York city, 33 percent.

The senator insists that we must not allow the flood of imports to continue unchecked. The result of inaction will be business failures and large-scale layoffs.

Sen. East said that the issue here is not "protection" versus "free trade." He pointed out that foreign textile and apparel companies enjoy "subsidized interest rates, officially-sanctioned cartels and monopolies, tariff and non-tariff barriers to imports." In short, our foreign competitors engage in unfair trade practices.

"What I am saying," the senator observed, "is that given the cut-throat practices that characterize the international market these days it is a little naive to talk about 'free trade' — as if foreign governments did not give every possible advantage to their own commercial interests."

The senator also could have noted that foreign workers toll under wage scales and working conditions that would be intolerable in America. Many textile and apparel items shipped into the United States are produced by workers earning 25 cents an hour.

The next agreement on textiles and apparel should safeguard U.S. manufacturers and their employers against unfair competition, against the kind of state capitalism one sees in Asian countries. Unfortunately, the U.S. State Dept. has a history of being more concerned with foreign countries than it is with the economic interests of the United States.

There's no indication that the State Dept. has changed in this respect under the Reagan administration. Indeed the old, share-the-wealth crowd is still in place in the State Dept., proposing more and more foreign aid.

The White House, however, would do well to send signals to the State and Commerce Departments, indicating that strong curbs must be placed on imports. Otherwise, unemployment will rise and economic distress will increase.

acknowledgement — but no watches.

Their letter to Sugarman continues: "October 22. Six weeks passed with no watches and no delay notice. This apparent violation of the FTC rule prompted our first phone call."

"October 30. . . 'Your six weeks passed with no watches. Call No. 2. At this time we were told that the watches were in transit and we should receive them in approximately 10 days.'"

But as the Nov. 25 letter noted, the 10 days passed, another phone call was made and JS&A assured the NCR group that the customer's cancellation option was in the mail. The letter ended: "Here we are — no letter, no delay and no watches."

Investigators for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., have determined that the NCR employees weren't the only ones bothered by Sugarman's late deliveries. Dingell had become interested in the case when more than 2,000 small businessmen wrote to him complaining about the FTC's treatment of Sugarman.

But the congressional investigators checked and found that JS&A's own records had furnished the FTC with its ammunition. Of 86,000 orders received by the company between August 1977 and December 1978, more than 8,000 were shipped at least more than 60 days late with no adequate delay notice being sent.

What about the Hong Kong watches? When my associate Tony Capaccio first called JS&A, Sugarman said he was unaware of the NCR employees' letter. On the second call, Sugarman said the watches had in fact been mailed out the very day we first called — while denying that the first call had anything to do with it.

The watches finally arrived on Dec. 16 — 14 weeks after the order was sent. A delay notice was never received.

Footnote: Dingell concluded in his report there was "no evidence of FTC wrongdoing or vendetta."

Nashville's Country Sound Is Sweeping The Nation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Nashville became an entertainment boomtown in 1981, leaving its mark on America as never before.

This city of 500,000, put on the map by its affection for banjos, steel guitars and fiddles, positioned itself to become the fastest-growing entertainment center in the world, influencing tastes, buying habits and lifestyles.

There were more country-flavored television shows, movies and books in 1981. In the past, country stars have been relegated to doing commercials about chewing tobacco and tractors, but in 1981 there was an explosion of country talent on the tube pushing everything from beer to perfume.

Radio continued its mass exodus to the country ranks, with 635 more full-time stations programming country than three years ago.

Country, once stereotyped as "hillbilly" music, now appeals to the more affluent and sophisticated. One in four country listeners makes between $20,000 and $40,000, according to the Country Music Association.

The CMA predicts gross country music sales of $631 million in 1981, a healthy 20 percent jump over 1980, and a share of about 14 percent of total industry sales wavering around the $4 billion mark.

Nashville is no longer the orphan of the American record industry. With the help of John Travolta's "Urban Cowboy," studios that are featuring more and more non-country performers, an influx of talent and a dab of Southern hospitality, Nashville has become the "Third Coast."

"It's like Howard Hughes once said, 'You don't go to Boston to dig for oil,'" says Dale Cornelius, executive director of the Nashville Music Association, an organization formed to promote the city as a "total music" center.

"There are only three music centers: New York, Los Angeles and Nashville. It's much easier here, more hospitable. Southern hospitality really does exist here."

"There's a joke about Los Angeles where people smile at each other, shake hands and then go to court. I'm not putting down either of the coasts, but by virtue of their size, there's no way they can do what we do here."

Ms. Cornelius believes the NMA is one way to assist the continued growth of Music City U.S.A., even if country music's popularity fades.

"Although country music is riding its peak, you cannot base a town on just one form of music," she says.

The NMA believes Nashville is the fastest growing entertainment center in the world. So do the owners of the Grand Ole Opry, who are gambling a major part of their future on the cable television industry.

WSM Inc. has poured a reported $100 million into a national cable TV network dubbed "The Nashville Network" which will make its debut in late 1982 with game shows, situation comedies, outdoor sportsmen shows, auto racing and Nashville-oriented music shows.

David Hall, general manager of Opryland Productions, the video arm of WSM Inc., expects cable to be in 50 million homes by 1991, with programming supplied by 18 national cable networks.

"Cable is going to explode and the Nashville Network is going to explode, too," Hall says.

Tourism, like cable television, will help expose Nashville to even more people in the coming years.

Don Belcher of the Chamber of Commerce says Nashville has become the No. 1 tour destination in the country, according to the National Tour Brokers Association.

Belcher says every time someone like Barbara Mandrell appears on network television, the advertising for Nashville "is worth millions and millions of dollars." Tourism meant $250 million this year to Nashville.

"Whatever we are in tourism, we owe to country music," says Dick Kinney, also with the chamber.

Money — old and new — is the key factor in the growth of country music and Nashville.

"All record labels care about is money," explains Joan Dew, a freelance writer currently working on "Ruby Dawn," a novel about a fictional country music star.

A hit country song doesn't come close to matching the sales power of a No. 1 rock song. But with the power of the crossover artist and the newfound popularity of country music, Ms. Dew says the gap between rock and country sales has narrowed.

"Now country artists are cross-selling like a pop artist would," Ms. Dew says. "Dolly Parton is a perfect example, you can see what's happening in Nashville by looking at her."

"When you start getting that happening — record sales that make the big boys in New York and L.A. sit up and take notice that's when you start getting that emphasis shift."

That "emphasis shift" has caused record companies to open up Nashville offices, or expand their current staffs. Studios have upgraded their hardware, become more flexible and made changes necessary for digital recording. One group of Nashvillians just opened the doors of Bullet Recording, a $2.5 million state-of-the-art studio to handle simultaneous audio-video recording.

Nashville — already a record publishing center in the world — now has more studios than any other city.

Although Nashville is known as the country music capital of the world, few realize that for the past three years more non-country albums have been recorded in Nashville than country albums.

Frank Sinatra, Tom Jones, Dionne Warwick, Paul Anka, Paul Williams, Chubby Checker, Maria Muldaur and Percy Sledge are among those who have chosen Nashville studios to record their albums this year.

Even punk rock star Elvis Costello has discovered the wonders of Nashville. Costello recently announced a world-wide tour of only five concerts. The cities: Los Angeles, New York, London, Paris and Nashville.

The major television networks took note of Nashville this year. The only network variety show on television was the Hollywood-produced Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters. The show, which also aired in several foreign markets, has been renewed for 1982.

Besides Miss Mandrell, the CMA's Entertainer of the Year, the networks have lined up a series with Jerry Reed. One network already has scheduled for the '82 fall season a soap opera type series out of Nashville similar to the popular Dallas program.

The network sent the woman who wrote the "Who Shot J.R." segment of Dallas to Nashville to do research for the pilot.

Jimmy Bowen, who produced records for Sinatra and Dean Martin in Los Angeles before becoming vice president of Elektra-Asylum Records in Nashville, wants the world to think of Nashville as a "complete" recording center.

"The key is to get the town together," Bowen says. "Then we can change the perception of Nashville in Los Angeles and New York, the money centers of the record industry, so they don't think we only make one kind of music."

Bowen foresees the continuing growth of the music business in Nashville, no matter what happens to the cowboy craze sparked by the Hollywood-produced "Urban Cowboy."

Recently a reporter asked Bowen if the success of country music was a fad.

"I said, 'Absolutely there's a fad element to it. Those hats that give you a headache and those boots that give you a backache are a fad. When city people get tired of them in a few months, they're going to put them in the closet. But they're not going to give up the music they've learned to dig. It's too big.'"

Ms. Dew, who also counsels new artists on how to handle press interviews, believes there are many similarities between today's Nashville and the Los Angeles of the 1960s.

"Now the Los Angeles atmosphere is the same as New York," she says. "Nashville is to Los Angeles what L.A. was to New York in the sixties."

Bickering Has Interlachen In An Uproar

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — The placid exterior of Interlachen (pop. 800), a quiet town of mostly retired people surrounded by pine trees and lakes, belies its brawling politics.

The almost constant bickering among the mayor, the town council, the publisher of the Interlachen Town Crier, a name-calling newsletter, and various and sundry others has now pushed the town 70 miles south of Jacksonville to the brink of political hara-kiri.

On Wednesday, the five-member town council will vote whether to override Mayor Ron Wier's veto of the fiscal 1981-82 budget. If the council doesn't override, Interlachen, chartered in 1887, could cease to exist as a town.

Some, including Mayor Wier, who says his action constituted "a revolt" by the people, assert that Interlachen already passed the point of no return. Wier says the council waived its right to override when it failed to act within 10 days of the Oct. 20 veto.

But Wier, 43, an insurance salesman by day and politician by night, acknowledges that "anything is within the realm of possibility in this town."

On the other hand, Town Council attorney Stephen Hilker, of Palatka, has advised the council it can continue to operate under "a tentative budget" until the question of Wier's veto has finally been settled.

Councilman Earle Hall accused the mayor of "playing politics ... he's got an election coming up in a couple of months."

After signing the vetoes, Hall said Wier went into Police Chief Lee Huckleberry's office and "Chief Huckleberry said the mayor leaned over to him and said, 'Chief, I just shut down the town by vetoing these two ordinances and you're out of a job.'"

Although Wier was quoted as saying that was his intention — to shut down Interlachen, he told UPI in an interview that the town could continue to function under administrators sent in by the governor.

"State officials have advised me they would physically come in here to run the town. State auditors would come in and look at the books. The money the state borrows to run the town would have to be paid back," he said.

"I guess you might say, the people are revolting through me," said Wier. "The government has got its hand in their pockets and they don't want it there."

Wier blames Interlachen's "inflated" budget on a spate of suits and counter-suits involving council members and publisher Hal S. Weidner.

"Do you know we've paid $29,000 in attorney's fees since January and none of the cases has gotten to court yet?" he said.

Wier opposed the council's approval of an 8.5 millage rate and a $154,429 budget. Last year's rate was 4.9 mills and the budget was $157,101.

An increase in the homestead exemption — from $0,000 to $20,000 — shifted the tax burden to fewer residents.

"A lot of people suddenly didn't pay any taxes at all," he said. "Others saw their tax bills go up from $300 to $1,300."

Wier proposed not paying the five councilmen and the mayor (each receives $100 a month), cutting the budget for legal services to $150 a month and reducing the town employees' work week from 40 to 34 hours.

Interlachen has seven employees — two policemen, two maintenance men, a town clerk, an assistant clerk and a librarian. Each got an across-the-board $500-a-year pay increase in the new budget.

"I don't know what to do," said Wier. "The only thing they (the town council) can do is go to court (to block the dissolution of the town)."

Meanwhile, Weidner, the 70-year-old muck-raking publisher, has four suits pending against him. The last, filed in August, claims he illegally tape-recorded "non-public" conversations at a Town Council meeting.

Town Clerk Aletha Woodworth is suing Weidner for $60,000 claiming he called her "a lying bitch" in his newsletter.

A petition asking for the recall of Wier, signed by four council members, was circulated in 1980.

Catch-Up

No Way, Tar Heels Plaster 'Cats

United Press International
Kentucky coach Joe Hall has been around long enough to know his team was in trouble when it fell behind by 15 points to No. 1 North Carolina.
"Playing catch-up against Carolina is about the toughest thing in the world," he said Saturday after the Tar Heels downed No. 2 Kentucky 82-69. "We gave up some easy baskets and they went into the zone. We couldn't make any 'headway into the lead."
But for all the ballyhoo surrounding the game, James Worthy of North Carolina downplayed the significance of the victory.
"I think the fans were more intense than we were with No. 1 vs. No. 2. I didn't see it as that," said Worthy, who tied his career high with 26 points.
While Worthy powered the Tar Heels in the first half, Sam Perkins provided the strength in the second half, scoring 17 of his 21 points.
North Carolina led 38-35 at halftime but the inside play of Perkins and the outside shooting of freshman guard Michael Jordan helped the Tar Heels open a 15-point lead with 11 minutes left and roll to their sixth straight victory.
Kentucky, 6-1, opened the first half in a

The Tar Heels were able to break the Kentucky zone.
In other games Saturday involving ranked teams, No. 12 DePaul defeated No. 9 Louisville 75-68 and No. 15 Oregon State routed Pittsburgh 88-58.
In Sunday action, No. 8 San Francisco topped Bradley 87-82 and No. 10 Missouri downed Alabama-Birmingham 98-80.
At Rosemont, Ill., the Blue Demons, 7-1, rallied from a 9-point first-half deficit to top the Cardinals, 6-2. Terry Cummings of DePaul hit 11-of-16 field goal attempts and 15-of-16 foul shots for a career-high 37 points and a season-high 19 rebounds.
The Blue Demons were down 33-29 at halftime but DePaul freshman Tyrone Corbin ignited his team in the second half, stealing a pass at midcourt and driving for a dunk to put the Demons up 37-35 with 16:54 left.
At Portland, Ore., in the first day of the four-day Far West Classic, the Beavers had no trouble with Pitt. Charley Sittton scored 21 points and Oregon State used a pressure defense to force numerous errors. The Beavers made 32-of-47 foul shots. Dwayne Wallace had 16 points for Pitt, 3-2.

The Wildcats, who relied heavily on Melvin Turpin's inside game, failed to get much offense out of him in the second half. Turpin, who scored 8 first-half points, was limited by North Carolina's zone to only one basket in the final 20 minutes. North Carolina also stopped Jim Master from taking his long bombs and limited him to only two second-half foul shots.
The Tar Heels went on a 19-5 spurt to open the second half, with Perkins having an easy time scoring down low. Jordan then got hot from the outside as

There is a limit of six for person. They are plentiful in the deeper holes. Grass shrimp is the best bait. If the wind stays down it should be an excellent week.

Turning to hunting, there is a lot of snipe on the islands, but the ducks are still pretty light.
Hunters in Florida will have until

Jan. 4—the end of mourning dove season—to match their skills against the fast, erratic-flying game bird.
"Mourning doves are difficult to shoot because they are quick in flight and also twist and turn," Fred W. Stanberry, the director of the Division of Wildlife for the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.
Stanberry said since the mourning dove's flight maneuvers offer a special challenge to hunters, it has proven to be one of the most popular game birds sought in Florida.

Captain Jim Swims To Win

Who said rail runners can't win in the rain? Who ever did, didn't have James L. Gentry's Captain Jim in mind. The smooth-running two-year-old held off a late rush by Larry Hughes' Cut The Cards to win the 47th Annual Inaugural Handicap at the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club opening night's festivities Saturday. Captain Jim's winning time was 31.87 seconds for 5-16 of a mile. The victory was Captain Jim's third in a row. He had won his last two races at Pensacola. RR's Teddy was third. The 3-6-7 trifecta paid $1,047. The 3-6 quinela was worth $76.60 and the Captain paid $17 to win. SOKK bettered last year's opening night by drawing 5,828 customers on the rain-dampened night, although the handle was down about $15,000 according to SOKK publicist Glen Laney. Saturday's handle was $420,966.

Suns 'Truck' Past 76ers

United Press International
Within the next few days, the Philadelphia 76ers may receive a greeting card inscribed "With fondest memories," signed by Leonard "Truck" Robinson.
"People always remember how you played against a good team and it means a lot more to do well," Robinson said after scoring 25 points, and adding 15 rebounds and six assists to lead the Phoenix Suns past the Philadelphia 76ers 99-96 Sunday night.
"If you play well against Utah, nobody thinks much about it," Robinson said. "But playing well against Philadelphia is something else. I'll remember this game, all right."
Robinson, who played 42 minutes, said he was not tired despite playing his fifth game in four days.
"It's really funny, last (Saturday) night against Golden State I was really fatigued and I got a lot more tired ... tonight the body was just ready to go. Sometimes it happens that way."
He said the key to the game was "defensive rebounding because they lead the league in field goal percentage and we couldn't let them get the second shot. We were also contesting the offensive boards because they love to run."
"We were forcing Julius (Erving) to pass off and let somebody else take the shot," he added. "The Doctor may have been a little frustrated."
Bucks 106, Bulls 96
At Milwaukee, Sidney Moncrief scored 28 points, Marques Johnson added 21 and Junior Bridgeman 20 to carry Milwaukee. Chicago has lost four of its last five games. Moncrief scored 12 points and Johnson had 10 to lift the Bucks to a 26-19 first-quarter lead that held up.
Lakers 139, Clippers 117
At Inglewood, Calif., Rookie Mike McGee scored 27 points and Los Angeles shot 71 percent from the field in the first half en route to their fifth consecutive victory. Jamaal Wilkes added 23 points for Los Angeles while the Clippers were led by reserve John Chambers' 20 points. The loss was the eighth straight for San Diego.

Scuba Diver, Prospector Hunt For Great White Killer Shark

MONTEREY, Calif. (UPI) — A scuba diver and gold prospector vows to find a giant killer shark lurking in the deep wind-swept wintry waters off the Northern California coast — and try to bring it back alive.
 David Fisse, 37, was forced Sunday to call off his first attempt to dive for the great white shark because of choppy waters in Monterey Bay. He said he would try again today.
 Starting Wednesday Fisse said he would use a "shark cage" in his dives. Until then, he will go into the water without one.
 John Parton, 26, a Modoc-Indian who is Fisse's prospecting partner, and Dave Bunkland, 20, of Cupertino, Calif., will provide backup for Fisse in an 18-foot aluminum boat and will carry .45-caliber pistols and high-powered rifles. Fisse's "shark dog," a mutt called Atasha, will be his mascot.
 Scientists calculated the shark, which killed an experienced surfer in 15-foot waves nine days ago, could be 23 feet long and weigh up to 2 tons.
 Fisse said he would bait the area and then try to swim under the shark when it was spotted. He said he would try to take the shark alive by firing a "bang stick," a 3-foot pole with a .38-caliber bullet on the end, at the shark's spine in an effort to incapacitate it.
 If successful, he said, he and Parton would try to sell it to the highest bidder.
 The 10-year veteran scuba diver said he would make three dives a day from his boat in search of the mighty sea monster, adding that he decided on the mission because the shark "killed somebody — it's murder to me."
 Fisse, of San Bruno on the San Francisco peninsula, said his search — if necessary — will extend from Monterey Bay all the way north to the Farallon Islands off the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

 The victim of the Dec. 19 shark attack was surfer Lewis Boren, 25, whose body washed ashore Thursday in Monterey a half mile south of where he disappeared.
 Scientists said the shark had not taken a full bite, though it cut halfway through Boren's 24-inch-wide surfboard and slashed him from his armpit to his hip.
 The board showed impressions of only eight of the approximately 14 teeth on the left side. This, the scientists said, meant that although the bite was 18 inches wide, the shark did not bite down with the widest portion of its mouth of serrated teeth.
 "However, big it is, I am confident there are larger ones out there," said John McCosker, director of San Francisco's Steinhart Aquarium, said. "... I am suggesting that the size of the shark in 'Jaws' — approximately 30 feet — is not so large that there might not be one swimming in the ocean."
 Scientists said this could be a prime area for great white sharks because their favorite prey — mammals such as elephant seals, harbor seals and sea otters — are in abundance in the coastal zone.
 "We can expect more attacks because of an increase in the shark population," McCosker said. "In the last decade we've seen a colossal increase (in attacks) in California and Oregon — and one can only assume it will continue."
 "The number of elephant seals is increasing, so the number of white sharks will increase."

Ranch Gets Christmas Parents

The Youth for Christ's Lighthouse Youth Ranch in Geneva received an unusual Christmas present — permanent house parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Post of Geneva made the move from their home on B Road to the Lighthouse the week before Christmas with their children, Sherry, 17, Tina, 12, and Jeremiah, 2.

Mr. Post has been a supervisor at the Seminole Juvenile Detention Center in Sanford for six years.

The youth ranch is an extension of the Youth for Christ ministry offering temporary shelter and loving care to teens who find themselves without a stable home. The ranch works in coordination with the State of Florida, Department of HRS, depending on them for placement of the teens.

Mr. Post stresses that "the young people coming to the home in Geneva are not delinquents," but teens facing problems that are not of their own making.

Many citizens from Geneva have dropped in at the Lighthouse since it opened two months ago to extend a helping hand, many bringing food and clothing.

Jim Post says of his new position, "Our door will always be open to our neighbors. I am looking forward to being a part of the Lighthouse and expect it to be a tremendous success for the kids and the community."

After Christmas, it will be back to regular monthly meetings for many of Geneva's civic organizations.

The Garden Club's president, Dolores Antilley, says the club's annual Christmas luncheon held earlier this month at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Oldham was a real success.

The meal enjoyed by 18 members of the Garden Club centered around a turkey and included all the traditional trappings. The Garden Club's first meeting for 1982 will be Wednesday, Jan. 6 at 10 a.m. in the Community Hall. Newcomers are always welcome.

The Leisure Time Softball Team has captured the Red Bug Park League top team trophy for the third year in a row.

The Geneva team, in its fifth season of play, won the tourney with a smashing 13-3 score against the Red Bug Nautilus team.

Mrs. Lorraine Whiting, Secretary of the Geneva Citizens Association, announces its next meeting will be Jan. 11, at the community hall at 8 p.m.

A representative from the Lighthouse Youth Ranch will be present to outline the goals and activities of the ranch and to answer questions that the citizenry may have.

Coronation To Usher In New Year

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Correspondent

Kappa Sigma Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will usher out the old year and yuletide season by having its initial Coronation of Miss Pink and Green at a New Year's Eve Ball, Thursday, at the Sanford Civic Center, from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m.

Bring in the new year with the crowning of Miss Pink and Green by Superstar of the Montreal Expos, Tim Lincecum of Sanford.

Tickets are available by calling 323-0779 or 322-0465. The lovely young ladies who are contestants will be judged at this gala affair for their personalities and scholastic and leadership abilities.

Vying for the title of Miss Pink and Green is Sherri Dee Wright, a 1980 graduate of Seminole High School. She is a freshman at Seminole Community College, daughter of Mrs. Beale Wright, and she is a member of St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church. Her hobbies are playing and watching basketball games.

Rene Michele Phillips, is a graduate of Seminole Community College, where she was a member of Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society, a cheerleader, and member of the Black Student Union. She plans to attend the University of Central Florida and major in Special Education and Psychology. Life-Giving Legacy Is Part Of Tragedy

DEAR ABBY: My best friend was killed in a motorcycle accident on Thanksgiving Day. He was only 22. Because of something he read in your column, he had sent for a card to will his eyes and kidneys to an organ bank in the event of his death. I just wanted you to know, Abby, that because of you two blind people now see, and two others got a healthy kidney. My friend is gone, but he left something worth more than anything money can buy. Thank you.

HOROSCOPE

By BEHNICE BEDE OSOL

For Tuesday, December 29, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY December 29, 1981
Business contacts you've developed over the years will prove very helpful in the months ahead. One in particular could put you on to something quite good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
In order to infuse new life into a venture you're involved in, it may be necessary to take a calculated risk today. You'll handle it wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Fortunately, you'll be able to recognize small opportunities today which may not be that obvious to others. You'll know how to make them into something larger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Changes or shifting conditions tend to work for your ultimate benefit today, even though you may question them at the time they occur. Be flexible. Ride with the tide.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
One who has enormous respect for you may come to you today for advice or counsel. This person knows you will level with him or her.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
To get what is coming to you today, don't be timid about voicing your rights. The squeaking wheel gets the oil. If you don't speak up you may be overlooked.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Activities which offer a bit of friendly competition should prove stimulating today. Play to win, but don't take yourself or the game too seriously.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Keep in mind the old adage today that everything comes to he who waits. Be patient. Your possibilities for happy end-results look extremely good.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Others may dodge their responsibilities today, but not you. Instead of looking upon them as being cumbersome, you'll take pride in meeting them well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Someone to whom you've proved your loyalty is prepared to back you up at this time, should you need his or her support.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
This a good day to take care of any business calls or correspondence that you have neglected. You'll feel better once they are off your mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
The progress you make is apt to be slow, but steady. Even if

Have Blood, Urine Check For Diabetes

DEAR DR. LAMB — With both of my pregnancies I showed a one plus sugar in my urine with a fasting blood sugar between 87 and 98. My babies were seven and eight pounds. I gained 30 pounds each time.

Station, New York, N.Y. 10019

Since my father is a diabetic I have a routine blood and urine test each year. I still have a one plus sugar in my urine and a fasting blood sugar of 87 to 98. I am now 46 and it is 20 years later. I am not overweight. In fact, I have lost about 12 pounds in the last year. My doctor never seems concerned about the results of my lab tests but I am. What do you say?

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a friend who has a cat and lives in an apartment. The cat never gets out except for trips to the vet. She is expecting a baby soon and I am wondering if she should give up the cat. I have seen her kiss the cat and she holds it a lot. I heard of a disease children get from excrement of cats. Can you tell me about it?

DEAR READER — You are probably thinking about toxoplasmosis, a parasitic disease. The parasite is widespread and it is commonly found in cat boxes.

In the United States the most common source of infection is undercooked meat. Meat should be cooked to 60 C (140 F) internal meat temperature at least 15 minutes to avoid this.

The disease is very serious if the fetus gets it and can cause eye and brain damage as well as other defects. But it cannot be transmitted through the placenta unless the mother has an acute infection. Your friend probably has already been exposed, if her cat is infected, and would have a chronic infection rather than an acute infection. Your friend might talk to her obstetrician or perhaps by now to her child's pediatrician.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Oswald: "Helen was not only the best woman bridge player of all-time, she was the equal of all but maybe two or three male players. Strangely enough, I always found myself playing against her until her last tournament, the national mixed team of 1968. Helen was terminally ill at the time, but playing with my son Jim and Minda Brachman of Dallas we won going away. With all respect to Minda and Jim, Helen carried the three of us."

Alan: "What system did you play?"

Oswald: "Straight Helen Strong notrumps (points unspecified), limit raises (forcing raises to be worked out as needed) and just good card play. On our very first hand I sat South and had a problem at my third bid. My five notrump was the grand slam force, but we had not discussed anything so complicated. Still the game was board-a-match and I knew Helen would not pass five notrump. She responded seven hearts and as she put down her hand, Helen remarked, 'I hope you were looking for the king and queen of trumps.'"

Alan: "That is what you needed. I also note that seven notrump does not make." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Alan: "How about some articles on women bridge players? I am too young to have known Helen Sobel Smith, but you must have played with and against her many times."
