Subdivision plans reviewed

LAKE MARY - Plans for a 40-acre subdivision to be located near Seminole Community College will be reviewed by the Lake Mary City Commission tonight,

Plans for Woldunn subdivision call for 83 homes between Cardinal Oaks subdivision and SCC on property owned by Mary Dunn Wolff of Lake Mary. The city Planning and Zoning Board approved the plans last month.

The commission will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 W. Lake Mary Blvd.

Woman buried alive in mud slide

COOS BAY, Ore. - A woman was buried alive in her ear for 11/2 hours before the faint sound of her horn honking from beneath a mass of mud. rocks and brush caught the attention of some neighbors.

"I was honking and honking. The horn was the only thing that worked," Diane Wallis said.

Wallis, 30, said she was driving home Tuesday night when she came to a mud slide blocking her way. She started backing up when another slide came down the hill.

A boulder as big as a two-story building and two large Douglas fir trees narrowly missed her small sedan, but tons of mud, rocks and brush spun it around and completely covered it at the edge of the road, she said.

About an hour after the mud slide, Wallis said she heard Jim Kellum and Pete Howerton, two of her neighbors in this southern Oregon coastal community, talking as they looked over the

Eatonville controversy thickens

EATONVILLE - Normally a hotbed of political intrigue, this suburban Orlando town was enmeshed in even more controversy after a judge ruled that Saturday's city election may have been rigged.

Mayor Ada Sims surprised everyone at Tuesday night's town council meeting by adjourning the gathering in less than two minutes. She cited a court order obtained by three losing candidates claiming that someone tampered with absentee ballots.

"It's always been crazy, but it's never been like this," said Margaret Williams, who regularly attends the meetings.

Ms. Sims said without elaboration, "A temporary injunction has been filed enjoining the new council members from taking their seats.

"But the terms of the current councilmembers expired legally on March 2.

New attendance zones affect hundreds

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD - School officials were a bit disappointed at the furnout for last night's public hearing on rezoing for Lake Mary's Heathrow Elementary School and Oviedo's Partin Elementary School.

About 100 parents and students, representing the interests of both areas, took their places in the Lyman High School gymnasium to listen to the district's proposals regarding zoning changes which will help fill the schools which are presently under construction.

Many of those in attendance did not address the board, but came as moral support for those who

A subdued crowd, there were few outbursts of emotions as plans were reviewed and presented.

There were nods of approval as Ken Boylo, area director of middle schools reviewed each suggested plan for rezoning in the northwestern part of the county and offered his recommendation.

"I favor Plan A," Bovio said, "It allows for equal growth for Heathrow and for Wilson (Elementary School, 985 Orange Blvd. in Sanford). It does not overload one over the other."

Plan A calls for moving 768 from their present school to either Heathrow or Wilson •88 students who live in the Markham Woods area would be transferred from Woodlands Elementary, 1420 E.E. Williamson Rd. in Longwood, to Heathrow Elementary.

Those students would be drawn from restdences at the south entrance of Wingfield Reserve, north on the west side of Markham Woods Road to the present Woodlands boundary. This includes all the homes and side streets which are on the west side of Markham Woods

• 190 students who live in the Lakewood West Section and Higgins Terrace would be transferred from Lake Mary Elementary, 132 Country Club Rd. in Lake Mary, to Heathrow.

Those students who live in Lakewood, north of Greenway Boulevard, south of Lake Mary Boulevard and west of Lake Park Drive, would be moved. All students who live in Higgins Terrace would make the switch to Heathrow.

SANFORD - Small change adds up.

That's the theory behind the new tack taken by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce to build up its scholarship fund.

Chamber President Jim Young and chamber education committee Chairman Jantee Springfield have asked the chamber's more than 800 members to consider making small donations to the "Business and Education Partners for Success' scholarship fund. Chamber officials hope gifts in the $25 to $1,000 range will add upto a substantial complement to larger donations from corporations, small businesses and civic organizations. 'As the economy slows and college mittons rise, many talented and deserving high school students will find it even more difficult to obtain the necessary college funding," the letter says.

Incinerator proposed in Sanford area

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

LAKE MONROE - A former county commisstoner has proposed an incinerator to burn biological waste from central Florida hospitals and physician's offices at the site of the old railroad icehouse on Rand Yard Road.

Sid Vihlen Jr. will ask county commissioners March 26 at 7 p.m. to allow an incinerator on his 30-acre Rand Yard Industrial Center east of the intersection of Rand Yard Road and Iowa Street. The industrial park is already planned to have a used tire recycling facility,

Residents of this quiet farming community contacted Thursday said they were not aware of the proposal. They said they were uncertain if they wanted such a facility in their neighborhood____

"It doesn't sound like something I'd want," said Martha Swaggerty, who has lived immediately south of the proposed industrial park since 1968. "I don't know anything about it, but it dosn't sound good."

"I don't like the idea," said Lewis Dellarco, a six-year resident. Viblen said the $9 million facility will produce less air pollution than a typical county road and will serve to clean the environment of illegallydumped waste from doctors, hospitals, funeral homes, veterinarians and dentists. He said the facility will employee 85 people with an annual payroll of $1.6 million. The incinerator can be doubled in size if demand grows. Viblen said. 'We have the opportunity to create an industry. at Rand Yard Industrial Center where there is a viable financial need," Vihlen said.

Herb Hardin, director of the county Land Management Department, said the incinerator proposal was approved last week by the county development review committee. He said the plans for the industrial park would not normally need commission approval, but the request for the incinerator requires commission approval.

Hardin said his department had some initial concerns about the regulation of the air discharge from the facility and ash disposal. Subsequent information sent by Vihlen showed such facilities are extensively controlled by the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation.

Police officer arrested for wife's murder

NORTH MIAMI - A Metro-Dade police officer was arrested for the murder of his wife, who was shot in the head in their northwest Dade home 18 months ago.

A Dade County grand jury indicted homicide detective Theodore Macarthur, 39, for first-degree murder in the Aug. 1, 1989, death of his 35-year-old wife, Pilar, a Dade corrections North Miami Detective Don Slovonic would not comment on what led to Wednesday's indictment.

"We're not in a position to discuss the circumstances or the particulars," Slovonic said. At the time of Mrs. Macarthur's death, her husband told police she was playing around with what they both believed was an unloaded pistol and accidentally shot herself.

Teen sentenced to finish high school

WEST PALM BEACH - Larry Jackson, the Boynton Beach teen-ager who shot another teen he believed sold his mother crack cocaine, has been sentenced to 21/2 years' probation and a pledge to finish high school.

Jackson, 18, pleaded guilty Tuesday to aggravated battery in the Oct. 8 shooting in which he took his grandmother's revolver and fired four bullets into 19-year-old Eric Pinkney.

Jackson could have been sentenced to a maximum 15 years in prison, but Circuit Judge Thomas Shoits decided to keep him out of jail by keeping him in school.

"I want you to get your life straightened out. I want you to study hard and get that education." Sholts told the 11th-grader Tuesday. "Although your motivation was to help your mother... firearms never solve anything."

Jackson's tale of vigilante justice - a poor teen-ager trying to atop his mother from using drugs in the only way he knew how — struck a chord in the community. A dozen of his neighbors. friends and teachers filled several rows in the courtroom. His attorney, West Palm Beach lawyer Joe Mincberg, donated his services. One elderly man visited Jackson at his grandmother's house just to shake his hand.

Couple plead guilty to child abuse

LAKE CITY - A couple belonging to a religious group that shuns doctors in favor of faith healing have pleaded guilty to child abuse by medical neglect for letting their son's heart ailment go untreated.

Charles and Marilee Myers will be sentenced April 2. Their plea agreement reached Tuesday recommends five years' probation, on the condition that their son and any other child under their care not be denied medical treatment.

The maximum sentence is five years in prison and a $5,000

Neither the Myerses nor their attorney, Karin Moore of Gainesville, would comment on the plea.

Their son, William, 16, almost died before he was admitted to North Florida Regional Medical Center on Oct. 22, suffering from a heart tumor. He had lost 32 percent of his body weight and only weighed 90 pounds. Complications from his condition included liver failure and bed sores. Lesions from his feet were draining so badly that his family placed buckets under his feet.

The youth was later transferred to Shands Hospital, where he underwent surgery to treat the tumor. He is now recovering.

Man sentenced to die

GREEN COVE SPRINGS - A Jacksonville man already on Florida's death row amiled when a jury sentenced him to die in the electric chair for the murders of his girlfriend and her two children.

Michael Alan Durocher, 31, had told the Circuit Court judge he wanted to die. He pleaded guilty to three counts of first degree murder in the killings of Grace Reed, 25, and her children, Candice, 5, and Joshua, 6 months.

Jurors needed only 35 minutes Wednesday to recommend unanimously that Durocher receive the death penalty for the 1963 killings. Elicuit Judge William A. Willies set sentencing

Ms. Reed and her children disappeared while on a trip from their Paulsboro, N.J., home to Orange Park with Durocher for a Thanksgiving visit to his mother.

CAPE CANAVERAL - NASA says it. will launch Atlantis as planned next month despite tiny cracks in the shuttle's door

Much larger cracks on Discov-ery's hinges prompted NASA last week to delay that shuttle's March military mission for up to two months for repairs. Discovery was to be moved from the launch pad back to the hangar today.

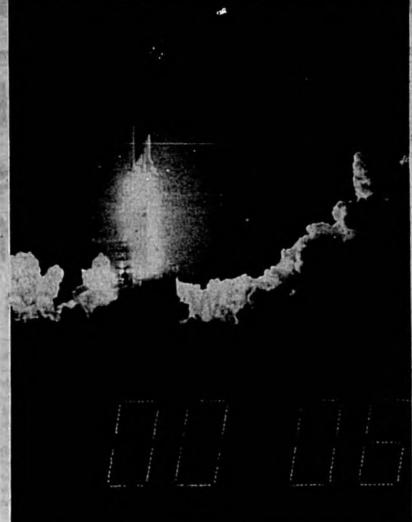

Tests showed the two. quarter-inch cracks on two of Atlantis' flapper door hinges pose no danger, NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said Wednesday. She said Atlantis' crew was consulted during a conference call and approved of the go-ahead.

The two flapper doors on the belly of the orbiter must close tightly once the big external fuel tank drops off shortly after liftoff, or the shuttle could be destroyed by the heat of atmospheric re-entry.

Repairs would have delayed liftoff, targeted for no earlier than April 4, by several weeks.

During the mission, Atlantis' crew will release the Gamma Ray Observatory into orbit and undertake the first spacewalk in more than five years.

Discovery has two cracks, 2 inches long each, of unknown origin, according to NASA. The third shuttle, Columbia, has small cracks like Atlantis."

Florida got younger and more Hispanic in the last decade as more than 3.1 million people squeezed in, pushing the total population to almost 13 million, according to the latest U.S. Census data.

The state's explosive growth since 1980 was stoked by 715,985 new Hispanics, mostly in migrants from Latin America. They made up 12.2 percent of the population in 1990, up from 8.8 percent in the 1980 census.

"The population is fundamentally changing," said Thomas Boswell, a University of Miami geography professor who says Dade's Hispanics could reach 55 percent by the year 2000.

"What's happening in Dade County is that a lot of the whites are just leaving and the Latins and blacks continue to come in high numbers," Boswell said.

Another reason for the decrease among non-Hispanic whites is the changing nature of the retirement population, when they die, replaced by newcomers from the North, he sald.

"Florida as a retirement haven just isn't the whole story anymore," said Stanley K. Smith, director of the Bureau of Economic and Business Research at the University of Even greater ethnic shifts were evident inside Miami's city limits, where Hispanics now make up 62.5 percent of the population, to 27.4 percent black and just 10.1 percent non-Hispanic white.

Fewer northern retirees and an exodus of non-Hispanic whites shrank the county's non-Hispanic white population by 17 percent to 586,000, or 30.2 percent. But Haitian immigrants helped the black population grow by half to 20.5 percent of the

For example, when Federal Bureau of Investigation chief J. Edgar Hoover died in 1972 he was proposed for a stamp. But a decade later, opinions had changed. He has yet to be commemorated on a postage

The same rule kept Charles Lindbergh from being mentioned on the 1977 stamp commemorating the 50th anniversary of his solo flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

That stamp, showing his plane, the Spirit of St. Louis. above the ocean said it marked the anniversary of flight. Lindbergh was not mentioned: he had died just three years

On another occasion, President Carter called for a stamp honoring labor leader George Meany, who died in 1980. The advisory committee cited the 10-year rule in turning down the request, but compromised by approving a stamp honoring organized labor.

Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., Introduced a resolution last year calling for a waiver of the rule for Pepper because of his "singular and extraordinary career."

The resolution drew more than 300 co-sponsors but never made it to the House floor. Moody aides say the congressman is undecided about whether to try again.

The resolution is a popular idea, yet Congress it reluctant to take the next step and press it on postal officials.

said every member of the committee would support the idea in theory, but would not send it to the House floor.

The committee has a policy not to consider legislation for commemorative stamps, he said.

The independent Citizens Stamp Committee was established in an attempt to avoid political pressure in picking stamp subjects. The committee is appointed by the postmaster general and sends its recommendations to him. The postmaster general makes the final choice.

The advisory committee gets 25,000 to 30,000 letters each year, suggesting 1,300 to 1,500 stamps. The group recommends about 30 new stamps each year.

They won't release tabulations of which subjects are requested most often. It's not a popularity contest, committee officials say.

But one leading candidate is a stamp honoring prisoners of war and members of the armed services who are missing in action. A POW-MIA stamp was issued in 1970, but continues to be suggested regularly.

There also is an organized effort to get singer Elvis Presley included on a stamp. This has drawn some controversy because of his alleged drug use. but remains popular.

Pepper likely would fall into the stamp series known as Great Americans, which has included politician William Jennings Bryan, Justice Hugo Black of the Supreme Court, writers Margaret Mitchell and Bret Harte, and painter Mary Cassatt.

Among the applicants from Seminole County is Pat Harden, past president of the Friends of the Wekiva River Inc. Harden has been active in river protection issues and served on an environmental advisory group reviewing Seminole County's plans for the Yankee Lake sewage treatment plant wetlands treatment system.

Former Seminole County commission candidate Amos Jones also applied. The third applicant from Seminole County is Carolyn Franz. All three are Democrats, according to the county elections office.

County's master plan criticized

Planners dispute Sierra Club's clairns about rural development

By J. MARK BARFIELD Horald staff writer

SANFORD - The local chapter of the Sierra Club criticizes Seminole County's proposed comprehensive development plan, saying it encourages housing in all the wrong places.

There's too many ways to weasel out into the rural areas," said Sharon Carveth, chairman of the environmentalist organization's Central Florida Group. "We don't have any problem with growth. Just where they're putting it."

The group's comments were sent to the Florida Department of Community Affairs, the state agency which approves local "comp plans." Carveth said DCA considered their comments when reviewing Orange County's plan. Carveth said she believes the proposed plan will be rejected by DCA, forcing major revisions.

In a detailed response, county planners stated they have adequate controls in the plan to prevent uncontrolled growth in the rural areas.

The Friends of the Wekiva River Inc. also commented on the plan, largely suggesting more committed language, such as the use of the word "shall" or "will" instead of "should." County planners said the changes will be made.

By requiring centralized water and sewer systems in rural areas and allowing greater congestion on rural roads, Sierra's Carveth said the plan encourages "urban sprawi." State growth guidelines seek to contain development in already developing areas. One method is to require adequate "infrastructure" — water, sewer and roads — to be available by the time residents are there to use it.

Requiring private wells and septic tanks under strict guidelines would assure housing in rural areas would be built on spacious lots, instead of suburban neighborhoods, Carveth said. The group also recom-mends less congestion be allowed on rural roadways to

SANFORD - The Seminole County commission will hold final hearings on the comprehensive growth plan tonight beginning at 6 p.m. in the County Services Building, 1101 E. First Commissioners will take public testimony on plans for future land use, transportation and the $181.7 million cost of the program.

prevent substantial additional development.

The group also criticized the county for not encouraging more use of mass transit services such as busses and carpools. By lowering the number of parking spaces required in commercial areas, workers would be encouraged to use mass transit services to avoid the frustration of competing for a small number of spaces.

The group also suggested the county adopt a zero loss policy for wetlands, tracking similar state and federal policies. Under the policy, wetlands would be preserved or created to replace an equal amount of wetlands destroyed for development. Seminole County now allows up to 10 percent of wetlands to be destroyed without some form of preservation or replacement.

Commissioners added wording to the land conservation section of the plan to consider no net loss requirements and less wetlands destruction to preserve high-quality wetlands.

New look welcome on crop subsidy

The European Community has finally bowed to pressure from the United States and other farm exporting nations to negotiate a reduction in crop subsidies. Last December, the EC's intransigence led to a breakdown in talks to extend the 108-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which is desigend to foster increased global commerce.

Now, the 12 EC nations have agreed to make "specific binding commitments" to reduce farm price supports, export subsidies and import barriers. The EC's new flexibility clears the way for resumption of the Uruguay Round of negotiations to expand and refine GATT rules.

All told, 15 areas of trade are being negotiated in the talks. The United States has been especially interested in broadening the coverage of GATT to include such sectors as banking, services, investments, and intellectual property such as trademarks and copy-

The sticking point in earlier efforts to work out a compromise on agriculture subsidies was the EC's reluctance to subject its 10 million farmers to the competition of the global market. The EC provides its farm sector more than $50 billion a year in subsidies. Japan and the United States together provide more than $30 billion a year to their farmers in subsidies. These government supports greatly skew the world agriculture market - to the detriment of consumers and taxpayers.

Although the United States always has been willing to pare its farm subsidies for the sake of GATT, and Japan has gone along to get along, the EC is showing flexibility for the first time. The United States and other farm-exporting nations have proposed a... ports by 75 percent and export subsidies by

Now that the Uruguay Round is back on track, it is critical that President Bush receive from Congress an extension of the so-called "fast track authority." Under-this -arrange. ment, which is scheduled to expire on June 1, negotiated trade agreements are suject only to a simply up or down vote in the House and Senate. Lawmakers are not permitted to attach amendments that can either kill or delay passage of the agreement negotiated by the administration.

Successful conclusion of the Uruguay Round could expand global trade by as much as $4 trillion by the end of the decade and increase U.S. exports by as much as $200 billion. With so much to be gained from freer trade in agriculture and other sectors. Congress should move promptly to extend the fast-track authority.

Food truce

About once a week, the typical parent of a small child, surveying a plate of uneaten food, decides the little tyke is going to starve. It is about then that the action begins.

For the 2-year-old, it is disinformation. "Himmmm, this (broccoli, spinach, green bean, cauliflower, tomato - name your poison) tastes better than cookies." For the 5-year-old, it is an early dose of social guilt. "Don't you know that there are homeless children going hungry?"

And from the other side of the front lines comes the inevitable salvo, usually a variant on the famous New Yorker cartoon. "I say it's spinach, and I say the hell with it." The battle is joined.

For the combat-weary, research now offers reason for a dinnertime truce. In the study published recently in the New England Journal of Medicine, University of Illinois researchers put a variety of nutritious food. from breakfast cereal to broccoli to cottage cheese to ham to brownies, in front of kids ages 2 to 5 at three daily meals and three snacks. The children were allowed to eat as much - or as little as they wanted. The researchers then measured what the kids had eaten, meal by meal, day by day.

Although the kids' eating habits looked bizarre and highly individual - gorging at breakfast one day, picking at the waffles the next - none starved. To the contrary, the study found that the children were highly consistent in how much food they took in each day, matching their intake to their

It seems that young children, given a menu of good foods to choose from, will eat what they require, and only that. Where did the rest of us go so wrong?

It's the American century, after all

The triumphant end of the Gulf war makes it surveying the scene, declared that the 20th possible, at last, to make sense of the 20th century would clearly be known to history as century: to understand the feroclous impulses that fueled its wars, and to identify the nations and tendencies that have emerged victorious at

When the century began, the world was still dominated by a handful of European nations preoccupied with their historic rivairies and quarrels. But this world destroyed itself in the conflagration of the First World War, and was swiftly succeeded by one driven by powerful supranational impulses generated by the Enlightenment: scientific rationalism (represented by the disciples of Karl Marx, in the Soviet Union and its satellites), the Romantic response to this (perverted by fascism into various mythic forms that powerfully attracted such great nations as Germany, Italy and Japan). and the classical liberal tradition (which flowered into political and economic freedom in the United States, Britain and elsewhere).

The Second World War represented the first willingness of the major clash of these rival systems. At its close, fascism was dead, the Soviet Union had been tagonists to use the gravely injured, and the United States spokesman for freedom - was indisputably the both possessed. This most powerful nation on earth. Henry Luce, prevented a direct and decisive collision between "the American century." But almost at once (and not for the first time in history) deep differences had emerged between the victorious ailies of the war just ended. By 1947, what plainly deserves to be called the Third World War had broken out between the United States and the Soviet Union and their respective supporters.

What made the Third World War unique was the untwo major pronuclear weapons that the two "superpowers", and their conflict (the "Cold War") dragged on for more than four decades, taking every conceivable form: economic, political and military. [The civil wars in China, Korea, Vietnam, Angola, Nicaragua and Afghanistan are only a few examples of its military form.)

At last, in the late 1980s, the Soviet Union simply buckled under the economic strain of the conflict and the manifest inadequacies of Marxist economic theory. Once again the United States emerged as the world's only superpower.

But it was a different country, in many ways, than the one Henry Luce had hailed 40 years earlier. Its self-confidence had been eroded by domestic attacks on its inherent fairness, and by an all too visible decay in moral standards. The Vietnam War - easily the worst planned and worst conducted war in American history - was cited as evidence that the country was "a pitiful. helpicas giant."

I will spare my liberal readers any extensive comments on what Ronald Reagan had to do with changing all this, and note only the tremendous developments of the past seven

War: what are kids thinking?

BOSTON - When the war began, the young teacher had worried about the fear she saw in the faces of her third grade. We had talked then about how and how much to reassure children. Her desire to protect them had struggled with her desire to acknowledge that war was indeed fearsome. What should children know about war, she had wondered, and how should they know it?

But when the teacher called back on Victory Day, it was with a different report from the classroom and playground. She was worried now about the cheefulness of her young charges. The case of war had crased their anxiety. The glory of war had trumped its

As the international good guys trounced the bad guys, as America won, her children played Scuds and Patriots. Gradually, her own vast sense of relief at the end of the killing had developed an edge. What had the children learned about war and is it what they should know?

I listened to this teacher and to her restraint in the middle of a national celebration. I had no answer for the questions that she raised. But her reservations resonate when I think about adults as well as children: What will all of us learn about war and is it what we should know?

Like the teacher, I was among those who believed we should stop short of fighting. For most Americans, the passion to fight depended on the number of casualties they imagined. I imagined them by the tens of thousands.

Yet once it began, most of us who questioned the war were left with one shared wish: that it be short and victorious, that our soldier sons, daughters, mothers, and fathers come through it safely. Well, we got what we wished for.

In its 43 days, there were more Americans killed in the plane collision in Los Angeles than in the collision in the Perstan Gulf. Our military performed and so did its hardware. We stayed on the right side of that elusive line that separates moral from immoral behavior in war. We beat Saddam, rescued Kuwait. And best of all, we did it quickly.

Yet, despite the vast, unifying sense of relief at the body bags that will come home empty, there is still a wound. An unexpected, unrelenting worry about the meaning of an "casy" win.

Vietnam, with all its horror, taught us about the sweaty, terrifying brutality of war. Will the Gulf teach us about a swift, surgical, antiseptic strike? Vietnam taught us about the terrible toll of war without victory. Will the Gulf teach us about the glories of victory with only "collateral" carnage?

And Vietnam taught us to be reluctant about getting into another faraway war. What message will come from the Gulf? Don't be afraid?

On V-Day, the speeches were also aimed at a long domestic debate. The victorious ends will surely be used to justify the peacetime means: the military budget and buildup of the 1980s. that came at the cost of bridges and schools and children.

Dick Cheney, the secretary of defense, said with I-told-you-so delight that during the Reagan years we were "buying more than $600 tollets." He will surely ask for more. Which of our leaders - those who bask in being "right" about this war or those who worry about being "wrong" - will say no to Stormin' Norman, Colin Powell, and their commander in streets a well as the cheering souls in the Kuwaiti streets. For a time their words will be damp blankets under a flag-strewn sky.

Neither the teacher nor I would trade victory for defeat or wish a single more casualty. We got out of this without chemical warfare, without nuclear holocaust, without domestic devastation - by the skin of our teeth. Still I understand why she worries about 8-year-olds who have known only a good little war. If this is how they, how we, will understand war: good and little.

Last week, at recess this woman stopped a fight on the playground with her normal. routine admonition: "This is not the way we solve problems." On the faces of her children there was a look of disbelief.

Finding right way hard in the desert

WASHINGTON - With few, if any landmarks in the Saudi desert, one of the major hazards of the six-month buildup to the war was getting lost. Some U.S. armored vehicle crews had to pop the hatch, climb out and get a crude compass reading for their bearings in the desert.

The problem is the Pentagon never bothered to develop an adequate built-in navigational system for the M-1 Abrams tank and the M-2 Bradley fighting vehicle.

In the days leading up to the ground offensive, the Bradleys were used as scouting vehicles for tank and infantry units, probing enemy positions to make sure there would be no surprises for the troops who followed. On a mission like that, the met thing a man wants to do is show his head to find out which way is in Europe with landmarks, roads and varied terrain. The Iraqi desert has no such conveniences. In Europe, a map makes more sense than a high-tech navigational system. But the chances of having to use the M-Is and Bradleys in Europe are not as great as the chances that they will be used again in the unstable Middle East.

A lost armored vehicle, or one that shows up where it isn't supposed to be, is as much a target for "friendly fire" as enemy fire.

Hughes Aircraft Co. has a contract with the Pentagon to build a system that allows commanders to track the location of their armored units on the battlefield, but it will not be available in large numbers for years. A lack of coordination with allied aircraft on the whereabouts of friendly ground units resulted in "friendly fire" casualties in the Persian Gulf War. To compensate for the lack of built-in gadgetry, the Pentagon ordered thousands of portable receivers that use the Global Positioning System - a network of 16 satellites used for sea navigation. Trimble Navigation and Magellan Systems Corp. make the hand-held devices called Small Lightweight GPS Receivers (SLGRs), nicknamed "sluggers." They pick up signals from the GPS satellites and can pinpoint the user's location

The 16 GPS satellites can't give 24-hour-a-day coverage, but the hand-held receivers got rave reviews from U.S. troops who figured they were better than nothing.

The units that got "sluggers" before the ground war started were few and far between. The Pentagon won't give out numbers, but our sources estimate there were between 2,000 and 5,000 of the hand-held receivers available for use during combat. Ideally, the troops could have used about 50,000 of them.

A spokesman for the Air Force Space Systems Division, which buys the receivers. told us the companies couldn't keep up with the demand. "These are small companies. They can't pop these things out like TVs."

But officials at Magellan Systems told our associate Dean Boyd that the Pentagon has been too prudent in its orders for the "sluggers." The Pentagon is considering replacing the existing models with a new system in 1993 that would have greater military capabilities and may have been reluctant to stockpile sluggers that would soon be obsolete.

The sluggers have been ordered in relatively small increments. When the ground war began, Trimble Navigation was booked up through May with Pentagon orders. But Magellan Systems had excess sluggers in

General's wife has always known her husband was a hero

TAMPA - Brenda Schwarzkopf didn't need to hear the outcome of the Gulf war to learn her husband of 22 years was a hero.

"I've always known how smart and wonderful he is." she beamed. "I definitely consider him a hero. I always have even before this."

She filled with pride last week watching allied commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf host a news briefing from Saudi Arabia graphically depicting troop movements that led to iraq's swift defeat.

"I knew he would do a good job. It wasn't a real surprise." Mrs. Schwarzkopf said during an interview Wednesday in a trophy room outside her husband's office at MacDill Air Force Base.

She described a military wife as someone who is strong, patient and flexible. "We're trying to be strong but calm and keep anything to worry about." Once, she said, she lost that levelheadness. One night she flipped on the television set to learn Scud missiles were launched toward the headquarters for the U.S. Central Command her husband heads in Saudi Arabia.

"I was standing there in a real panic and the phone rang," she said. It was Schwarzkopf and she wanted to warn him.

"Norm, there are five missiles heading your way. I'm screaming over the telephone like he's going to run somewhere and get out of the way.

"There was a calm voice. 'Brenda, it's all right. Everything is OK." " he said, reassuring her with their age-old family expression - "Just hang in

There's a misconception about his temper, she said. "It isn't a hot temper. It is a short temper." she said. Five minutes later the problem is forgotten. "He's a person who's very serious about what he does.'

Economic analysts look ahead

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON - Washington policy-makers are anxiously waiting to see whether spending on homes and cars rebounds now that the Persian Gulf War is

So far, policy-makers hoping for a quick end to the recession are clutching at faint signs of a rebound in those two key consumer sectors, although they concede their anecdotal evidence could turn out to be wrong. Federal Reserve Chairman

Alan Greenspan told members of Congress on Wednesday that he was encouraged by reports last week following the end of the war that customer traffic had picked up in auto showrooms and in real estate offices.

While cautioning against reading too much into these preliminary reports, he said they did "raise the possibility that stronger consumer demand may be emerging."

Economists say it is not a coincidence that Greenspan is closely watching car and home sales for signs of a turnaround. Traditionally, these two interest rate-sensitive segments of the economy lead the way out of recessions, and analysts don't believe this time will be any different.

So far, however, the actual reports on sales have remained bleak.

L. January, new home sales fell 12.3 percent to their lowest level in 812 years, while sales of existing homes dropped 7 per-

The initial news for February hasn't been much better. Sales of cars and light trucks fell 8.9 percent in the latter part of the month from the same period a year ago. But Greenspan noted Wednesday that all of this information came while the country was at war. He said the key to the future lies in spending decisions made now that peace has returned.

A sampling of consumer sentiment taken since last week's cease-fire in the gulf provides mixed signals.

A weekend survey by USA Today suggested that the end of the war may not revive consumer spending. Only 27 percent of the 802 people polled said the end of the war would make them more willing to spend money.

However, a Washington Post-ABC News poll published Wednesday said that 71 percent of 1,215 people polled said they believed the end of the warwould have a positive effect on the nation's economy. Consumer sentiment is considered crucial to getting the country out of the recession because consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity,

The Bush administration is forecasting that the nation will emerge from the recession sometime in the April-June quarter.

However, private analysts say that forecast may be optimistic.

Allen Smal, chief economist of the Boston Co., noted that home sales were still falling in January. He said the overall economy does not normally begin to show improvement until four to six months after home sales start to

For this reason. Smai said the recession could well last until mid-summer or later. He said the Fed will likely be forced to cut interest rates once or twice more to stimulate consumer borrow-

Some analysts worry that consumers are so heavily burdened by debt that they may not be willing to take on further obligations, regardless of where interest rates go. In addition, banks, concerned about rising numbers of bad loans, are lightening up their own lending standards.

A trade group, the American Financial Services Association, reported Wednesday that personal bankruptcies climbed 16 percent last year to 718,107, their biggest increase since

But David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, said he believed that consumer purchases of autos and other big-ticket tiems would start to show signs of life in March, a view he said Greenspan apparently shares.

"He is basically telling the market that this recession was caused by the war, the war is over and therefore he thinks the recession is going to end without further prodding from the Fed."

LONGWOOD — Scoring two runs in both the bottom of the seventh and eighth innings. Lyman twice came from behind before finally beating Seminole 7-8 Wednesday night in a Seminole

Athletic Conference baseball game. With the Greyhounds trailing 6-5 with one out in the bottom of the eighth, Jeff Bouley ripped a double and accred the game-tying run on John Lyman then loaded the bases as Andy Spolski was intentionally walked and Jeff Jackson was hit by a Rick Eckstein pitch. Eckstein got Frank Harmer to fly out, but Doug Porter came through with a single to drive in Jump with the game-winning run.

Kevin Stuckey, 3-0, was the winning pitcher for Lyman in relief of starter Jason Goodpastor. Eckstein suffered the loss for Seminole.

The Greyhounds, 8-2 overall and 2-1 in the SAC, took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first when Spolski, Jackson and Porter delivered singles. Spolski scoring on Porter's hit.

Seminole jumped on top with a five-run fourth inning. David Eckstein contributed an RBI double that tied the score while B.J. Osborne added a two-run double that capped the rally. Matt Freeman and Ray Adcock also had RBI during the rally.

Lyman got two runs back in the home half of the fourth. Kevin Scott, Gil Vogler and Jump drew walks to load the bases to set the stage of Spolski's two-run single.

The Greyhounds lorced extra inhings when they railled for two disputed runs in the seventh. After Spolski and Jackson singled, Rick Eckstein was called for a balk that was hotly contested. With the runners now in scoring position with one out, Porter plated Spolski with an RBI ground out before Shane Odom delivered Jackson with a single.

Seminole quickly retook the lead with a run in the top of the eighth. Tony Chavers walked but was retired when David Eckstein bunted into a flelder's choice. W.L. Gracey put the Tribe back on top when he ripped a double that brought home Eckstein.

Neighbors remember

Academy Manor Neighborhood Association recently held a memorial tribute to beloved resident Doris A. Thomas, the late wife of Sanford City Commissioner Bob Thomas. Mistress of Ceremonies was Bernadette Brown. Invocation was given by Evangelist Eddie MacCrae. Mayor Betty Smith groeted guests after which Flossie Zanders introduced speaker Eula Martin. Also participating were: Patricia Hitchmon, Tajiri Arts singers and dancers, (bottom photo), Sanford Parks and Recreation Director Jim Jernigan, Theima Nathan and Elder James Bradshaw. Top photo: Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriet presented Thomas with a civic service award.

Married Wheaters but Wester James

Woman trips on altar path with older man

old woman and I'm dating a 47-year-old man. I am very mature for my age and have always seemed to relate better to older men. Our relationship is very serious and he's asked me to marry him. Al treats me wonderfully, and I would love to spend the rest of my life with him.

Here's the problem: Al is my mother's age, and I'm afraid if my parents and out the age difference, they will be against our marrying. My mother thinks he's 42, which is OK with her, but I'm sure five more years would make a difference. I try not to let other people influence my decisions, but my parents are a big part of my life and it's not easy for me when we disagree.

Abby, this man is wonderful, and we both think we are right for each other and the age difference shouldn't make a difference. Do you think it does?

IN LOVE WITH AL
DEAR IN LOVE: The age difference is not the issue. The fact that you consider yourself
"mature" and are still lying to your parents in order to win their approval is. Be honest with your parents about this man's age. If Al is all you say he is and your parents are intelligent people, the age difference won't matter.

DEAR ABBY: There is a man I work with who always needs a ride somewhere. He owns a car, but it doesn't run. He bums rides to work, to the bank, to lunch, to the mall after work — and these rides are not along the way. they're sometimes 15 or 20 minutes out of the way.

It's not just me he hitches rides from. It seems like it's just me who, minds.

While giving him a ride, I had to stop for gas and discovered I had no cash with me, so he gave me $3, which I assumed was a gift in return for all the free rides I had given him. Three days later, he asked me if I had forgotten about the $3 I owed him! I reluctantly gave him $3, but it really burned me up. After that I was so mad. I decided he would never get a ride from me again. How can I get out of this

HATES PREELOADERS

DEAR HATES: Be up-front and tell him he can no longer depend on you for free transportation. And if he asks why you suddenly made that decision, tell him the truth, and don't pull any punches.

DEAR ABBY: I own a small pet shop in Illinois. Today when I came to work, I noticed a box in my parking lot. When I opened the top, a large cat jumped out! A note inside read. "Hi! My name is Bear. I am very friendly. I know you will find a good home for me because you love animals, too."

Well, I didn't find a good home for Bear, because the frightened animal slipped out of my hands and into the street in the middle of traffic and was killed instantly.

Abby, people have dumped boxes of sick kittens, malnourished puppies, half-dead rabbits, baby hamsters and guinea pigs at my store with no note — nothing! As far as I am concerned, these people have no hearts and no brains. My veterinary bills for these animals have run into the hundreds of dollars in the two years I've been in the pet shop business. I simply cannot afford to take care of other people's problems.

Abby, please tell your readers to take these animals to the local Humane Society so they can find homes for them or cuthanize them. Although "putting down" an animal is not an easy thing to do, it's far more humane than letting a cat fry in the heat in someone's parking lot or get killed in traffic.

Avoid injury during a fainting spell

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please provide information on vasovagal syncope. I've passed out four times in restaurants. What makes my blood pressure drop so suddenly? Glucose tolerance tests are negative.

DEAR READER: The pulse rate is under partial control of the vagus nerves. Stimulation of these nerves causes the heart rate to slow: this, plus an associated tendency toward low blood pressure, can temporarily deprive the brain of circulation and oxygen, leading to fainting (syncope). No one knows why some people exhibit accentuated responses to vagal stimulation. but the phenomenon is real and can result in periodic loss of consciousness.

Vasovagal syncope is often caused by intense physical or mental stimulation, such as pain, fright or the sight of blood. In fact, patients who feel lightheaded or pass out during routine blood tests usually do so because of low blood pressure and the slow pulse that follow stimulation of the vagus nerves by the brain.

The fainting is almost always preceded by symptoms of nausea, weakness and sweating: therefore, patients with vasovagal syncope can learn to prevent fainting by lying down or sitting with the head bowed between the knees. Also, these patients readily discover what kinds of stimulation cause the syncope, so patients learn to avoid such situations.

I do not know why you experience symptoms in restaurants. People with hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) may experience lightheadedness and weakness a couple of hours after eating sugar and high-calorie foods. Evidently, your glucose tests were normal. Therefore, you should be examined by a cardiologist or circulatory specialist to determine the cause of your symptom.

Remember that with vasovagal syncope, as with any cause of fainting due to deficient circulation, you can prevent serious injury (from falling) by getting your head down. This maneuver allows gravity to maintain adequate blood supply to the brain. Therefore, when you feel lightheaded, don't tough t out; bend over or lie down before you faint.

WIN AT BRIDG

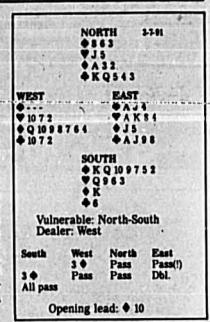

By James Jacoby

Pre-empts tend to fall in and out of favor over the years. The trend among modernists is to bid very boldly in first and second seat. The theory is that getting in the way of the opponents will cause them to err more frequently However, there must be partnership agreements that define the limits of a pre-emptive hand.

Today's bidding is a good example. Dr. John Fisher, who was spending an afternoon of his Hawaiian vacation playing bridge, sat East. When Shreveport expert Jack Kennedy opened three diamonds, Fisher passed quietly. He knew his partner and knew that with favorable vulnerability West would not pre-empt with even as much as the ace of diamonds. South now bid three spades, duly doubled by East.

Kennedy's 10 of diamonds went to declarer's king. Next came the six of clubs to dummy's king and Fisher's acc. West following with the two. Fancy footwork was now required on defense. Fisher led a low spade back. Declarer could now make his contract by playing low on this trick and winning it in dummy, but he preferred to believe that East's double was based on high cards and not on the A-J-4 of spades. When South won the trick with his king, he played a heart to dummy's jack and East's king. East played back ace and a spade. Declarer now had to lead away from his Q-9-6 of hearts to go down one.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY March 8, 1991

Social involvements are likely to share equal importance with material ambitions in the year ahead, and it looks like you'll fare OK in both areas.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) When in the company of people who have influence over your career today, be mindful of your comments. What you say, good or bad, will be duly noted. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper. P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone very nosy, who may not be working for your best interests, might probe you for confidential information today. This is the last person to whom you'll want to reveal secrets.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

An acquaintance who has a tendency to gossip about others might try to draw you into an intrigue today. The subject matter could be fascinating and you may snap at the bait.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are in need of counsel today. be extremely selective regarding whom you go to for advice. Your judgment is a bit questionable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) To be on the safe side, write down any critical instructions you are to pass on to co-workers today. If you don't, something might get lost in the translation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not take small details for granted in your commercial dealings today. A point you treat indifferently now might turn out to be a thorn in the lion's paw later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Harmony on the homefront will be threatened today if you find more in your mate to criticize than to praise. If you don't have something nice to say, keep mum.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) We all have feet of clay, so try not to think of yourself as the exception today. If you start to look for faults in others, expect to have the tables turned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Small extravagances at this time could add up to a shockingly large total when the sum is finally computed. Be as mindful of spending dimes as you are of spending dollars.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have a pretty good eye for details today, and this could be a plus. However, be careful that it doesn't become a negative obsession. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19) Sentimentality definitely has its place, but if you try to make logical judgments from an emotional perspective today, you may find success hard to come

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There's a possibility that it might be more costly to do business with a friend than with a stranger today. Keep this in mind if you are anxious to make a good deal.
