"The Woman Pays"

Valli Valli, the renowned English actress, who has a long list of stage successes to her credit in both England and America will be seen on the screen here at the Star Theatre Tuesday, Jan. 4th in "The Woman Pays," a five act dramatic feature picture produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays Inc. for release on the Metro program. This production affords Miss Valli an excellent opportunity to give full sway to her remarkably versatile talents, which insures an interesting picture. In the role of Ruth Coventry she is shown as an attractive, ambitious and vain woman, who toys with fate and brings about the financial ruin of her husband, through her love of extravagance and social life. In the end she realizes her mistake, when her beauty is marred through an accident in a terrific storm, and she makes amends and saves her husband from public disgrace.

Miss Valli is supported by a cast of distinguished artists of the screen and stage, including Marie Empress, Edward Brennan, John E. Bowers, Paul Lawrence and Mrs. Julia Hurley. Admission 5 and 15c.

Pauline Frederick Superb in a New Role

In this adaptation of the powerful dramatic success by Henry Arthur Jones, Miss Frederick plays an entirely different type of woman, the loyal wife and devoted mother who goes through the mental tortures of the damned to save the name of her little boy from disgrace at the hands of his father. It is a tremendous role with compelling forcefulness in its every moment. Mrs. Gilmore is a sensitive, high strung woman who is passionately devoted to her little son Ned. The gradual cooling off of her husband's affections has slowly alienated Mrs. Gilmore's love for him, and this pent up emotion has been poured out in her apron of the boy.

When the infidelity of her husband and his cowardly murder of the man he has wronged become known to her, Mrs. Gilmore, instead of giving way to her natural feelings of revenge and hatred for the man is overwhelmed by the one great desire to shield the name of her son from disgrace. So, for the sake of little Ned the mother perjures herself on the witness stand and wracks herself into total exhaustion while fighting to keep the name of Gilmore clean.

At the Star Friday, Jan. 7th. Admission 5 and 15c.

Great Show Tonight

In accordance with the previous announcement made by the management of "September Morn," the cyclonic musical festival which delighted Chicago and other cities the past year will be the attraction at the Allen Theatre tonight.

"September Morn" is a girl, song, farce and dance show constructed purely to entertain. The story is woven about the famous Chubb's painting called "September Morn"—two imposters claim to be originators, one Rudolph Plastric, owner of an art studio who knows nothing of the art insists that he is the originator and painted the famous picture while immediately upon the scene arrives an actress who boasts she is the originator and engages a press agent to circulate a broadcast that she is the originator. The excitement following provokes a world of mirth while the two imposters are dodging each other, and to make the situation more ludicrous an army officer by chance meets and becomes infatuated with the actress and in the meantime discovers the fact that she is a good friend of his wife, which goes to entangle the situation and produces worlds of laughter.

The scenic production is beyond all expectations and the costumes are a riot of color. The company numbers nearly fifty people and the large beauty chorus appears to advantage in many dashing song numbers and ensembles. The large cast includes Carl George, Joe Taylor, Mahel Luffin, Vera LaVergne, J. J. Patton, Curt Vance, James Bisher, Walter M. Wolff.

THE POE OF THE SCREEN

Walthall Will Be Seen Here in "The Raven"

Henry B. Walthall, Essanay's leading actor, has been busy in photo plays before he won for himself the appellation of "The Poe of the screen." He naturally, emotional temperament, especially his remarkable likeness to the famous poet, has been the cause which gained him the name.

At the Star Friday, Jan. 7th, Walthall will be seen in "The Raven," a five act dramatic feature picture produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays Inc. for release on the Metro program. This production affords Mr. Walthall an excellent opportunity to give full sway to his remarkably versatile talents, which insures an interesting picture. In the role of Mr. Walthall is shown as an attractive, ambitious and vain woman, who toys with fate and brings about the financial ruin of her husband, through her love of extravagance and social life. In the end she realizes her mistake, when her beauty is marred through an accident in a terrific storm, and she makes amends and saves her husband from public disgrace.

title, Mr. Walthall naturally was selected for the leading role.

Long a student of Poe, Mr. Walthall learned much which aided him in emotional portrayals from the works of the noted writer, and it was he who discovered in "The Raven" the remarkable possibilities for a photoplay tragedy which, for intensity of action, fascination and wonderful photographic effects, it would be difficult at all to equal.

And in the intensely emotional character of Edgar Allan Poe, Mr. Walthall regarded as the most talented actor in motion pictures, has found unlimited opportunities to display his particular abilities to the best advantage possible and he has tried himself in this role to the heights of histrionic glory.

Born on a cotton plantation in Shelby county, Ala., on March 16, 1878, Mr. Walthall passed his youth on his father's farm, studying law for a time. He always had a hankering for the stage, however, and at twenty-two he abandoned his legal studies to join in a theatrical stock company, with which he remained until the Spanish-American war started. Then he joined the army.

After the war, he went back on the stage, playing throughout the east until 1906, when, quite by chance, he drifted into motion picture work. He has been with Essanay since June, starring in such successful plays as "Temper," "The Woman Hater," "The Circular Edge." He was also leading man in "Birth of a Nation." He is married and "proud of it."

Dangerous Household Pets.

It is commonly supposed that the danger from hydrophobia comes from the roving, ownerless, stray dogs of the city. This is not the real truth. Most of the victims of hydrophobia are bitten by house dogs or cats that are household pets.

First Oranges in America.

Denial that the first oranges were an introduction of citrus fruit into this country, planting a few pips close to a high school house, whose growth has carefully watched over by some cautious native priests.

Girls Should Be Used.

It is a common mistake to let people know the real value of our country's resources. What a pity, men, boys and young men are not used.

Laura Jean Libbey's TALKS ON HEART TOPICS

GIRLS WHO RUN AWAY FROM HOME.

When I loved you I can't but allow I had many an exquisite minute; But the soon that I feel for you now Hath even more luxury in it! Thus, whether we're on or we're off, Some wretchedly seems to await you, To give you is pleasant enough, But, oh, 'tis delicious to hate you!

By all that I can see or hear, can learn by tale or history, I am led to the observation that it does not augur well for a girl's future for her mother to give her her own way from childhood up to young womanhood.

"She knows just what she wants, and from the time she was ten years old, and indeed, even before, I allowed her to select her own hats, cloaks, and dresses, and even decide what we should have for our dinners. So when I raised a decided protest against the young man she was inviting to often to call upon her, I was terrified at her resentment and rage at what she deemed my unbecoming interference. She threatened to run away from home. If I do not permit the man—whom I know to be a worthless scoundrel, to visit her, she will assuredly carry out her threat. Then my heart would break."

This is an excerpt from a letter which a tormented mother has written me asking what she shall do to stop the girl's avowed intention of running away.

We have all heard of the needless fuss of locking the barn door after the frolicsome young colt that has never known halter or hindrance has de camped to fields new and pastures green. It also is useless to look back and point out what should have been done in the years that belong to the past to raise the daughter to look up to and respect her mother's opinion and heed her decision.

We must make an appeal direct to the girl, endeavoring to show her the folly of leaving her father and loving heart—the roof that has sheltered her and the friends around which those who love her gather, to cast her lot among strangers in a cold and merciless world.

There are girls who are foolish enough to believe that they are able to make their own way in the world, and that they can do so without the aid of their parents, and quite so often as they possess.

A fortnight's experience is ample to take the fine enthusiasm out of the most determined young woman. Post time that yield scarcely more than enough money to hold soul and body together are quite as hard to secure as the better ones, where there is seldom or never a vacancy. Boarding house landladies do not ask her what she would like for dining. She has to take what is set before her, not during to make protest.

In regard to her company, he finds little welcome. The parlor is for all; he cannot monopolize it. If he puts in an appearance three or four times a week the businesslike landlady makes no bones in pronouncing, "Men who have no compunction about coming around to wear other people's chairs out, burn gas, and take up room" decidedly unwelcome visitors. In short, nuisances. If the girl retorts spiritedly, she is soon after requested to give up her cheerless hall bedroom for some working girl who has no visitor.

If the girl weds the young man whom nobody likes, she is apt to find she has made a still greater mess of it. There's two in the hall bedroom of some other cheaper boarding place, and her scant earnings have to be stretched to cover the cost of feeding a husband. What the home folks say about her lover should have much influence with a girl. Under no circumstances should she run away from a loving mother and sheltering home. She would have all of her after life to repent of it.

QUIZZING HER HUSBAND.

When hearts and lips have grown cold, And love is but for an hour, When life a romance has been told, And kisses have lost their power, Then shall soft nights meet, No more a dream to enchain, Yet kisses are always sweet, And love is never in vain.

The man who has a wife so trustful that she believes implicitly in him, never questioning the truth of his words or honesty of purpose, has gathered unto himself a jewel that is both rare and precious. He should be most careful of his treatment of her.

The general run of wives are built on an exactly opposite plan. They harbor a lurking doubt regarding hubby's statements even while he is telling the truth. Most wives are "born lawyers," leaning toward one branch only—cross-examining. Once the suspicion that he is fickle dawns across her mind, the average married woman, instead of giving herself up to weeping in secret, sets about to ascertain, by adroitly quizzing her husband, a whether her lurking suspicions are groundless or he can be drawn into an admission of the transgressions.

Many a husband has been drawn into snares he little dreamed of by the wife to whom the quizzing habit had become a mania to find out his doings.

If he is half an hour late for dinner, explaining that business detained him, instead of letting it go at that, he is sure to undergo a severe quizzing, later on when he has well-nigh forgotten the matter, where he was on a certain evening; if he walked or rode straight home; if he encountered anyone he knew, and what a two-dollar bill missing from his pay envelope on that particular evening went for.

The average husband forgets his excuses as he utters them. It is therefore difficult for him to think up the same story twice.

Not one husband out of fifty deceives his wife with deliberate evil intentions. He thinks it wisest and best sometimes not to mention matters which might raise a domestic row.

No matter how earnestly admonished to keep silent the husband sooner or later under carefully prepared quizzing discloses the fact that his sister is ill and he had been to see her and where the missing bill went to. There's no use in talking the quizzing wife into her good-natured husband no match for her cleverness in unearthing anything and everything he had made up his mind to conceal from her that she might not be worried.

She keeps her better half constantly in hot water. His every word or glance is sure to be misconstrued. He spends the greater part of his life attempting to explain matters to her satisfaction.

He who has a quizzing sweetheart who wants to know where he was on the evenings he was not by her side, whom he saw and all about it should beware tight cars. He has a long rough weary road to travel after he weds her. It is a habit that is— but never relinquished by even the best patient of husbands. It is but a short step from quizzing to nagging. When that sets in, happiness is in imminent danger of being overthrown. No man loves a wife the better for it. Indeed, it more often means loveless talks and a woman who starts in to quiz her good husband builds a wall which may eventually part them.

GOOD BY, SUMMER GIRL

It is not supposed that far women are the only ones anxious to select the right place for their summer outing. Many a man scans the resort column and news with as much enthusiasm and interest.

All these minds do not turn in the same groove, there are those who seek the excitement of the city, and quite so often as they possess.

Many a bashful young man has put himself into the hands of a dancing teacher, hoping to be in the swim at hop, ball or barn dance.

The resolve is certainly praiseworthy. Such a young man is a good send to the hotel proprietor who is usually pulling his hair in his chest search for young men of good position, character and social prominence, as if attracted to make his hostelry profitable with families with numerous descendants. The papers are glad to print the list of eligible young men who will sojourn at this famous hotel or that one this summer. The girls read, but lo! visions of hop, ball, stroll, flirting and love-making do not turn them from the plans they have made for their summer outing.

Instead of flimsy lace dresses, white satin, French heeled slippers, summer scarfs and whole bolts of baby-blue ribbons, the girls will show you a blue serge skirt, middie blouse that can be washed and worn without laundering, thick soled lace boots, sweater and tam-o'-shanter cap. That means that nine-tenths of the girls who used to go in for the gay life at the summer hotel are to have quite a different vacation this season. They have danced all winter in tulle and satin, and have determined they must have a radical change to bring back the roses to their cheeks and rest up. So it's the camp life they're going in for. A crowd of them, all going together under the wing of some good, motherly old soul who has a household of girls of her own, who knows what they need and what is best for them.

Even the pretty dimpled flirts who imagined they couldn't live without some chap near by to make love to them soon forget to sigh for heart conquests, or to even dream of a man in their slumbers when they have lived for a week in the open. When they are all up with the dawn, chat-terpe like magpies how could one dare to cling to her pillow and hope to get another forty winks. There's a five-mile tramp to the brook, and an hour's fishing before sunrise, if they would have a trout for breakfast. Each takes her turn at frying potatoes, broiling ham or bacon and poaching eggs, whether she's a millionaire's heiress or the daughter of a country shopkeeper. The fried corn cakes (each girl with mouth watering eagerly waiting her turn to get one) tastes a thousand times more delicious than the finest short-cake ever put together by the best French chef.

THE FLORIDA SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

CLOSES A VERY BUSY YEAR, AND PLANS FOR MUCH GOOD WORK IN THE FUTURE

The Florida Sunday School Association has opened a new year of activity in its work in this state. The year 1915 was a remarkable one for the volume of business transacted over the previous year. The report of the general secretary and the office secretary revealed the fact that the magnitude of this work had assumed proportions undreamed of by most people. During the year just closed, General Secretary R. C. Weidner travelled more than 22,000 miles in this state, while the office received and sent out more than 29,000 pieces of mail matter. The general secretary made 305 addresses, speaking to more than 36,000 persons. Eighteen county conventions were held, and 123 institutes and 255 other meetings conducted. Twenty-one counties were embraced in this work.

The state convention at Miami, recently held, was in many respects the greatest gathering of Sunday school folks ever held in the state. More than twice as many delegates registered as ever had attended a similar meeting. Many radical changes were made in the policy of the Association and its work. The general secretary, who had resided at St. Petersburg and was asked to move to Jacksonville and have direct charge of the office. This he has done. The office, which is located at 212 Laura street is being equipped with a new, circulating library of Sunday school books which will be available to any person residing in the state. A reading table is also provided, and all the latest magazines and periodicals are always to be found there.

The motto adopted for the year by the Association is, HELPING EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL. The Association being the only organization in the state whose purpose is to help each school purposes this year to support the work that there will be no school closed in any of the counties where organized work is being done that will not be touched by the influence of the organization. The purpose of the Association is many-sided. It works of course thru and with the denominations, seeking always to help each denomination in its individual advancement. The Association never organizes new schools.

It also seeks to inspire the teachers and officers to better things and higher ideals, by magnifying the great work of the teacher. It thus directly pushes its influence through the teachers into the hearts and minds of growing boys and girls, helping thus to develop better citizens, fathers and mothers. This is best accomplished where the best county organizations exist.

The Association likewise acts as a clearing house for all the good methods of Sunday school work. Being part of the International Sunday School Association it is always in touch with the most modern and improved methods. Immediately these are found it passes them on to the Florida field. Not only that, but in a reverse way gives a kind of telescope view to the Florida schools, so that they may look out into the great field of North America, and through the Florida Sunday School Association become directly acquainted with all that transpires of value on the continent.

Newspapers for Banks

That newspaper advertising is the best means to bring business to banks and other financial institutions was declared by Frederick W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, in an address recently at the weekly luncheon of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia. He said experience had proved that newspaper advertising far exceeded circularizing and personal letters in producing results. In the connection the speaker cited an instance where the bank he represented through a newspaper advertisement had received $588,000 in deposits a few days after it was inserted.

Mr. Ellsworth, as an advertising expert was asked to address the Poor Richards on "Financial Advertising." A large number of representatives of financial institutions of New York and Philadelphia were present as guests of the club.

Illustrating the efficacy of newspaper advertising for banks, Mr. Ellsworth said many merchants who had engaged solely in international trading when the war began had nothing to do with their money because shipping was cut off. "One of them," he said, "came to our bank with $30,000 and asked us for a certificate of deposit, as he thought the money might just as well be earning something while the international market was closed. This gave us an idea. We mailed a circular letter to foreign traders explaining the advantages of depositing on these certificates in the war exigency, with the result that favorable answers started to come in. Then we placed the same letter in the daily newspapers in the form of an advertisement, and in a few days these ads brought in $588,000 in deposits."

The Office of Superintendent of Schools

1. That the people of this state are entitled to the best of schools that the state can afford to give.

2. That because it affects more directly than any other the coming citizens of the county, the future of the state, and the welfare of the people, and because it affects the future of the state, the future of the people, and the welfare of the people, and because it affects the future of the state, the future of the people, and the welfare of the people.

There are three factors that help to mould the character of our youth, the home, the church, the school.

And because the school is so important a factor in the moulding of our youth, it is our duty to see that it is the best possible.

When it comes to the interest of our children, their culture, mentally, morally, socially, we have a right to demand that the men who are in charge of the schools should be of the highest quality.

1st. We demand that he be a man of broad culture, college bred if possible, and abreast of the progress in the latest methods of education that shall result in thorough and proficient scholarship.

2nd. We demand that he be bold, ardent, penetrating, acute, quick to discern motive, and piercing in estimate of character and fitness on the part of teachers for the requisitions of the high and noble vocation which they aspire to fill.

We have a right as citizens who are being taxed for the education of our youth, to demand such a standard in the person who is to fill the office of county superintendent of schools, because upon his efforts and efficiency will depend the progress and success of the whole system.

He must have such an intimate knowledge of every school and every teacher that he can advise the board in regard to the conditions and requirements of every school, city or country, white or black.

He is to suggest the board to execute, and they have a right to demand of him a familiarity with every condition affecting the schools of the county.

When the time comes to cast your vote for county superintendent of schools for Seminole county, we pray you, in the sacred interests of our children, the coming citizens who are to preside over the future destinies of this part of our fair Florida that you select the man who can most successfully fulfill this ideal.

BUCKEYE

With Trees From Buckeye Nurseries A Certificate That Is a Real Asset

With every considerable lot of trees bought from Buckeye Nurseries there is now sent a certificate of number and variety of trees, date sold, etc.

The adoption of this certificate has been suggested to us by the number of inquiries received from persons who have bought trees asking for information to give other persons negotiating for the purchase of groves.

In scores of instances that have come under our observation in the past few years, buyers paid a handsome premium on grove properties by reason of the fact that they were planted with Buckeye trees.

In a great number of cases negotiations for the purchase of groves have fallen through when it could not be established to the satisfaction of the intending purchaser that the planting had been of Buckeye trees.

It is obvious the assurance that groves were made with Buckeye trees has come to be looked upon by shrewd investors as second only in importance to the title to the land, in view of the widespread reputation for quality of Buckeye trees.

We want to give our customers tree insurance that will protect them as much as does a title search. So we have devised this certificate, which will be found an asset of no small value in any transaction involving the worth of a grove. It is to the trees what an abstract of title is to the land.

Full particulars as to this new and helpful feature of Buckeye service will be mailed on application. It is described in detail in the new Buckeye Nurseries Catalog. If you have not received a copy of this book, be sure to write us for one at once—the edition is limited and will not last long. FREE on application. Address:

STAND BY THE PRIMARY

Since the announcement some weeks ago that the State Democratic Executive Committee would meet in Jacksonville, Jan. 6th, for the purpose of arranging for the primary election in June, several other matters that have heretofore proved disturbing elements to party harmony have "hobbed up" and will have to be threshed out before the committee at its approaching meeting.

The result of this family fight left a bad taste in the mouths of some of the old machine politicians who saw in the end of their hopes to juggle themselves and their friends into offices which they will lose this coming year.

The other group, the "new" men, will come before the state committee to be the calling of a state convention to frame a platform of principles for the party.

Our pastor, the M. E. church, says in the semi-annual report: "We are glad to see Rev. Tarbell in Geneva for a few days visiting his parents."

Quite a few of our boys were over to Sanford to the "Exchanges" in the "Exchange" building, as every time we go in they are running a few more.

Brooksville, Jan. 5. A new industry has been started at several points in south Florida that gives promise of solving the torage problem, namely, the propagating of Burbank's Spineless Cactus, Do-wonder torage crop.

Early in the year Mr. C. W. Hahn, southern representative of the Burbank Product Company, operating from Tampa, introduced a car of this finished product into this state and in the latter part of March several carloads had been started.

Beginning with about an acre, we planted five varieties the latter part of March of this year, four of which have made good with a big yield.

WINDOWS ARE HERE

Presbyterian Church Will Now Be Comfortable for Winter Season

After many vexatious delays the windows for the Presbyterian church have arrived and are being placed in position in the sanctuary. The windows are of the new cathedral design and are said to be very fine both in material and workmanship. All add greatly to the appearance of the church as well as the convenience of the audience. During the cold weather the church could not be heated properly with the windows out and the fact that the services have been held right through the winter demonstrates that the Florida climate is about all that could be desired. The idea of a church holding services when there were no windows to keep out the cold is something new even in church affairs. Now that the windows are in place the Presbyterian church can invite the people to worship there, as the building will be well heated and made most comfortable. The public is cordially invited to attend all the services, the hours of which are given in another part of this paper.

The new Presbyterian church while not finished complete has added a frame building to the new brick Sunday school department, making a good church building and the congregation is to be congratulated upon making this great progress at a time when it was difficult to raise funds. The new church building will be started in a few months and completed and will be one of the most beautiful and complete church buildings in the state.

Funeral of Mrs. Wilkerson

The funeral of Mrs. J. P. Wilkerson was held Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. G. Stringfellow, Rev. A. S. Park, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross officiating. The deceased had been in failing health for a long time, and had been confined to her bed for the past six weeks, so that death was caused by a gradual decline of the functions of life. Mrs. Wilkerson was born in Virginia about seventy-five years ago, and came with her husband and family to Florida many years ago, settling in the vicinity of New Smyrna. For the past five years Mr. and Mrs. Wilkerson made their home with their daughter, Mrs. L. G. Stringfellow, in Sanford, and during that time the deceased made many dear friends and the many beautiful floral tributes testified to that fact. Mrs. Wilkerson was survived by her husband, four sons, Arthur Wilkerson of Hialeah Park, William Wilkerson of New Smyrna, George Wilkerson of Daytona and John Wilkerson of Craighead, Fla., and two daughters, Mrs. Nell Wilkerson of Daytona and Mrs. L. After the services held at her late home, the remains of the deceased were taken to New Smyrna, where they were laid to rest. The body of all is extended to the bereaved ones.

Among the Methodists

On last Thursday the Wesley Truth Seekers Class of the Methodist church held an all day picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Chappell on Colony avenue.

Automobiles were at the parsonage at 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. The party of about thirty ladies were waiting out.

The gracious hostesses, Mrs. Chappell and Mrs. Colhour greeted them most cordially and had planned for them a delightful day. At twelve o'clock all were invited into the dining room to do justice to the tables heaped to overflowing with good things furnished by the hostesses and brought in by the enthusiastic picnickers.

At 2 o'clock the ladies were called to order for their regular monthly class meeting with Mrs. C. H. Smith, president, in the chair. Dispersed through the program were music and readings.

At the close of the day the joyous body of Truth Seekers bundled into the waiting automobiles homeward bound, refreshed and uplifted by this delightful outing.

Friday night at seven thirty a large number of ladies, members of the Wesley Truth Seekers Class met at the home of Mrs. R. M. Mason, preparatory to going to the parsonage to give their most loved teacher, Mrs. F. E. Steinmeyer, a surprise.

When all had assembled they repaired to the parsonage to await the arrival of Mrs. Steinmeyer who had been lured away from home by Mrs. Frank Adams, who was in the secret.

Being summoned back at this juncture to meet a "couple of neighbors who had called on important business," her surprise can be imagined upon her finding to greet her thirty-eight smiling Truth Seekers.

The evening's entertainment opened with vocal selection by Mrs. J. K. Mettinger, after which Mrs. Steinmeyer was called to the piano and from that vantage point was addressed by the class president, Mrs. C. H. Smith, in the following words:

Our loved Mrs. Steinmeyer and teacher.

The years 1914 and 1915 mark an epoch in the history of the wives and mothers of our church. Each succeeding Sabbath morning has found most of us and you busily getting through with breakfast, putting our homes in order, seeing that the children are dressed, hurrying for work, and then going to Sunday school. And thus it has been week by week. We have met with you as our teachers to study God's holy word of life, going home each time with a wealth and courage to battle and care yet, lifted heavenward where he many mansions are.

And as we stand tonight on the threshold waiting for the new year to open we desire in some measure to express our love and esteem for you and in token of this fact we as a class present to you this little New Year gift.

The gift being a beautiful cameo brooch, surrounded by strong pearls. The serving of refreshments which had been smuggled into the kitchen by the happy conspirators was a fitting touch to a most joyous occasion.

On Education. Education and Uncle Eben, enables many a man to express himself in a way that prevents him in conversation from being foolish.

SYNOPSIS.

The morning after the finding of Wu Fang's body and Kennedy's disappearance, a submarine appears on the bay. Marcus Del Mar plunges overboard from it and swims ashore. His purpose is to obtain information of Kennedy's whereabouts. He soon wins the confidence of Elaine. Later she is warned by a little old man to be careful of Del Mar, just in time to prevent Del Mar from carrying out his plans. Del Mar at last succeeds in getting the torpedo, only to have it destroyed by the little old man. Jameson is captured by Del Mar's men while on his way to mail a letter to the U. S. secret service. Elaine rescues him. Lieutenant Woodward and his friend, Professor Arnold, attend a party given at the Dodge home, where, unknowingly, Del Mar drops a note which gives Elaine a clue. In her attempt to prevent his cutting the Atlantic cable she is discovered and made a prisoner on the boat, which afterwards is wrecked by Woodward and Arnold. Jameson, in a hydro-aeroplane, saves Elaine from drowning. Elaine, disguised as a man, discovers the wreckage of Del Mar's plane, and at about the same time Arnold, by a "radio detective," has discovered the wireless station Elaine's discovery nearly proves fatal; she is saved by Jameson, both aid Arnold and Woodward in destroying the wireless station, but Del Mar escapes. In a deserted hotel in the woods he tries to make a number of gas bombs. Elaine discovers Del Mar's man at work is captured, but escapes. When the hotel is later attacked the men retreat to the woods, where they explode the gas bombs, nearly causing the death of Lieutenant Woodward and his attacking party. Elaine receives a package which contains a new searchlight gun from an unknown friend. Jameson and Elaine prove the accuracy of the new weapon. While motor-ing with Jameson, Elaine discovers a bomb placed there by one of Del Mar's men for a kidnapping. They take it to Lieutenant Woodward, who sends them to Professor Arnold's yacht. They are attacked by Del Mar and his men. The searchlight gun saves Elaine and Jameson who reach the yacht safely. Del Mar appears on the bay with a submarine and destroys the cable. The submarine is used to find that Professor Arnold and his party have escaped.

THIRTY-THIRD EPISODE

THE LURE OF THE MODISTE.

Early one morning a very handsome woman of the adventuress type arrived with several trunks at the big summer hotel just outside the town, the St. Germain.

Among the many fashionable people at the watering place, however, she attracted no great attention, and in the forenoon she quietly went in her motor for a ride.

It was Madame Larenz, one of Del Mar's secret agents, who up to this time had been engaged in spying on wealthy and impressionable American manufacturers.

Her sitting brought her finally to the bungalow of Del Mar, and there she was admitted in a manner that showed that Del Mar trusted her highly.

"Now," he instructed after a few minutes' chat, "I want you to get acquainted with Miss Dodge. She is quite human. Pretty good, isn't it? You'll get her to the St. Germain. Then I'll tell you what to do."

A few minutes later the woman left in her car, so rapidly driven that no one would recognize her.

It was early in the afternoon that Aunt Josephine was sitting on the veranda when an automobile drove up and a very stylishly gowned and bearded woman stepped out.

"Good afternoon," she greeted Aunt Josephine, "I regret that I can't see you at the house. Elaine, Madame Larenz of New York and Paris. Perhaps you have heard of my shops on Fifth Avenue and the Rue de la Paix."

Aunt Josephine had heard the name, though she did not know that this woman had assumed it without being in any way connected with the places she mentioned.

"I'm establishing a new sort of summer service at the better resorts," the woman explained. "You see my people find it annoying to go into the city for goods. So I am bringing the latest Paris models out to them. Is Miss Dodge at home?"

"I think she is playing tennis," returned Aunt Josephine.

"Oh, yes, I see her. Thank you," the woman murmured, moving toward the tennis court back of the house.

Elaine and I had agreed to play a couple of games, and were tossing rackets for position.

"Very well," laughed Elaine, as she won the toss, "take the other court."

It was a cool day, and I felt in good spirits. Just as we were about to begin I could do it still. I jumped over the net.

"Our game had scarcely started when we were interrupted by the approach of a stunning looking woman."

"Miss Dodge," she greeted. "Will you excuse me a moment?"

Elaine paused in serving the ball and the woman handed her a card from her delicate gold mesh bag. It read simply:

MME LARENZ
PARIS

Gown Elaine looked at the card a moment while the woman repeated what she had already told Aunt Josephine. "You have them here, then?"

Elaine, interested, queried: "Yes, I have some very exclusive models which I am showing at my suite in the St. Germain."

"Oh, how lovely!" exclaimed Elaine. "I must see them."

They talked a few minutes, while I waited patiently for Elaine to start the game again. The game, however, was destined never to be finished. More weighty matters were under discussion.

I wondered what they were talking about and, suppressing a yawn, I walked toward them. As I approached I heard scattered remarks about styles and dress fabrics.

Elaine had completely forgotten tennis and me. She took a couple of steps away from the court with the woman as I came up.

"Aren't you going to play?" I asked.

"I know you'll excuse me, Walter," smiled Elaine. "My frocks are all so frightfully out of date. And here's a chance to get new ones, very reasonably, too."

They walked off, and I could not help scowling at the visitor. On toward the house Elaine and Madame Larenz proceeded, and around it to the front porch, where Aunt Josephine was standing.

"Just think, auntie," cried Elaine. "Real Paris gowns down here without the trouble of going to the city and cheaply, too."

Aunt Josephine was only mildly interested, but that did not seem to worry Madame Larenz.

"I shall be glad to see you at three, Miss Dodge," she said as she got into her car again and drove off.

When I came down I found Aunt Josephine still on the veranda. In addition to my horse, which I had telephoned for, Elaine's little runabout had been driven to the door. While I was talking to Aunt Josephine Elaine came downstairs and walked over to the car.

"May I go with you?" I pleaded.

"No, Walter," she replied, laughing merrily. "You can't go. I want to try them on."

Properly rebuffed, I retreated. Elaine drove away, and a moment later I mounted and cantered off leisurely.

Near Del Mar's bungalow, might have been seen again the mysterious naturalist, walking along the road with a butterfly net in his hand and what appeared to be a leather specimen case, perhaps six inches long, under his other arm.

As Madame Larenz whizzed past in her car, he looked up keenly, in spite of his seeming nearsightedness and huge smoked glasses. He watched her closely, noting the number of the car, then turned and followed it.

Madame Larenz drew up a second time before Del Mar's. As she got out and entered the naturalist, having questioned his page, came up and watched her go. Then, after taking the specimen case for a moment, he made his way around the side of the bungalow.

"Is Mr. Del Mar at home?" inquired Madame Larenz, as the valet ushered her into the library.

"No, madam," he returned. "Mr. Del Mar is out. But he left word that if you came before he got back you were to leave a card."

The valet, standing at the desk, handed her a card which she took and returned to the library.

Del Mar's note had left a note here on his desk, she said to the valet.

A moment later she left the library, followed by the valet, who accompanied her to her car, and assisted her in.

"The hotel," she directed to her driver, as he started off, while the valet returned to the bungalow.

Outside, the naturalist had come through the shrubbery and had been looking in at the library window, watching every move of Madame Larenz as she wrote. As she went out he paused just a second to look about. Then he drew a long knife from his pocket, forced this window catch, and quickly climbed into the room.

Directly to the desk he went and hurriedly ran over the papers to it. There was the note. He picked it up and read it eagerly.

"My apartment, St. Germain—33, m. Larenz."

For a moment he seemed to consider what to do. Then he replaced the note. Suddenly he heard the sound of footsteps. It was the valet returning. Quickly the naturalist ran to the window and jumped out.

A moment later the valet entered the library again. "That's strange," he exclaimed, under his breath. "I don't recall opening that window over there today."

He looked puzzled. But as no one was about he went over and shut it.

Some distance down the road the naturalist quietly emerged in safety from the bushes. With scarcely a moment's hesitation, his mind thoroughly made up to his course, he hurried along the road.

Meanwhile, at the St. Germain, Madame Larenz entered and passed through the rotunda of the hotel, followed by many admiring glances of the men.

As she entered, quickly she selected one of the trunks whose contents were more smart than the rest, and laid the gowns out most fetchingly about the room.

In the office of the hotel a few moments later the naturalist entered. He looked at it curiously, then went over to the desk and glanced over the register. At the name "Madame Larenz, Paris, Room 22," he paused.

For some seconds he stood thinking. Then he deliberately walked over to a leather chair and took a prominent seat near by in the lobby. He had discarded his net, but still had the case, which now he had shoved into his pocket. From a table he picked up a newspaper.

It was not long before Del Mar pulled up before the hotel and entered in his usual swagger manner. He had returned to the bungalow, read the note, and hurried over to the St. Germain.

He crossed the lobby, back to the office. As he did so the naturalist had his face hidden deeply in the open newspaper. But no sooner had Del Mar passed than the newspaper fell unappreciated, and he gazed after him, as he left the lobby by the back way.

It was only a few minutes after she had completed arranging her small stock so that it looked quite impressive, that Madame Larenz heard a knock at the door and recognized Del Mar's secret code. She opened the door and he strode in.

"I got your note," he said, briefly, coming directly to business and telling her just what he wanted done. "Let me see," he concluded, glancing at his watch. "It is after three now. She ought to be here any minute."

Outside, Elaine drove up to the rather garish entrance of the St. Germain, and one of the boys in uniform ran forward to open the door and take charge of the car. She, too, crossed the lobby without seeing the old naturalist, though nothing escaped him.

As she passed he started to rise and cross toward her, then appeared to change his mind.

Elaine went on out through the back of the lobby, directed by a boy, and mounted a flight of stairs in preference to taking the lift to the second or sort of mezzanine floor. Down along the corridor she went hunting for number twenty-two. At last she found it at the end and knocked.

Del Mar and Madame Larenz were still talking in low tones when they heard a light tap on the door.

"There she is now," whispered Larenz.

"All right, let her in," answered Del Mar, leaping quickly to a closet. "I'll hide here until I get the signal. Do just as I told you."

Outside, at the same time, according to his carefully conceived plans, Del Mar's car had driven up and stopped close to the side of the hotel, which was on a slight hill that brought the street level here not so far below the ground story windows. Three of his most trusted men were in the car.

Madame Larenz opened the door, and "Oh, I'm so glad you came," she called out to Elaine. "You see, I've got to get started. Not a customer yet, but if you'll only take a few gowns, other people will come to me. I'll let you have them cheaply, too. Just look at this one."

She held up one filmy, creamy creation that looked like a delicate flower.

"I'd like to try it on," cried Elaine, flinging it capriciously.

"We are alone," agreed Madame Larenz. "Do so."

With deft fingers, Larenz helped her take off her own very pretty dress. As Elaine slipped the soft gown over her head, with her head and arms encased in its multitudinous folds, Madame Larenz, a powerful woman, seized her. Elaine was effectively gagged and bound by the gown itself.

Instantly Del Mar, thinking himself from the closet, disgorging his vision. Together they wrung the dress about Elaine even more tightly to prevent her screaming.

Madame Larenz seized a blanket and threw that over Elaine's head also, while Del Mar ran to the window. There were his men in the car, waiting below.

"Are you ready?" he called softly to them.

They looked about carefully. There was no one on that side of the hotel just at the moment.

"Ready," responded one. "Quick!" Together Del Mar and Madame Larenz passed Elaine, ineffectually struggling, out of the window. The men seized her and placed her in the bottom of the car, which was covered. Then they shot away, taking a back road up the hill.

Hurriedly the naturalist went through the lobby in the direction Elaine had gone and a moment later reached the corridor above.

Down it, he could hear someone coming out of room 22. He slid into an angle and hid.

It was Del Mar and the woman he had seen at the bungalow. They passed by without discovering him, nor could he make out anything that they said. What mischief was afoot? Where was Elaine?

He ran to the door and tried it. It was locked. Quickly he took from his pocket a skeleton key and unlocked it. There was Elaine's hat and dress lying in a heap on the bed. But Elaine was not there. He was now thoroughly alarmed.

She could not have passed him in the hall. Therefore she must have gone or been taken out through the window. That would never have been voluntary, especially leaving her things there.

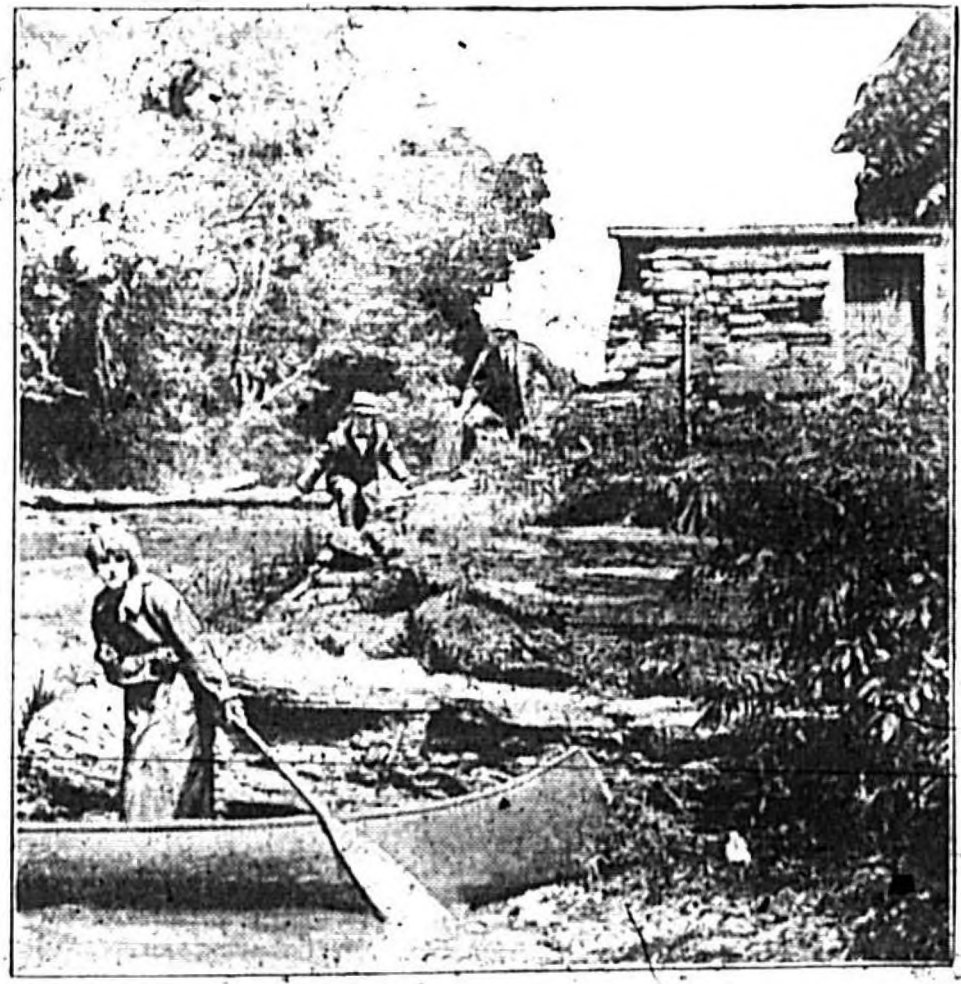

The window was still open. He ran to it. One glance out was enough. He leaped to the ground. Sure enough there were automobile tracks in the dust.

"Del Mar's car!" he muttered to himself, studying them.

He fairly ran around the side of the hotel. There he came suddenly upon Elaine's car standing alone, and recognized it.

There was no time for delay. He jumped into it and let the swift little racer out as he turned and gathered momentum to shoot up the hill on high speed.

Meanwhile, I had been jogging along through the country slowly and disconsolate. I don't know how it happened, but I suppose it was by some subconscious desire. At any rate, I found myself at the road that came out across one leading to the St. Germain, and it occurred to me that Elaine Jumped in and Seized the Paddle.

Elaine might by this time have disappeared through the hole in the wall for a year. At any rate I quickened my pace in the hope of seeing her.

Suddenly my hope faded, and a familiar little car flashed past me. But the driver was not familiar. It was Elaine's roadster. In it was a stranger—a man who looked like a biologist, as nearly as I can describe him. Was he running off with her car while she was waiting inside the hotel?

I galloped after him.

Del Mar's automobile, with Elaine bound and gagged in it, drove rapidly by back and unfrequented ways into the country until at last it pulled up before an empty two-story house in a sort of grove of trees.

The men leaped out, lifted Elaine, and carried her bodily into the house, taking her upstairs and into an upper room. She had fainted when they laid her down and loosened the dress from about her face, so that she could breathe. There they left her on the floor, her hands and feet bound, and went out.

How long she lay there she never knew, but at last the air revived her and she regained consciousness and sat up. Her muscles were sore and her head ached. But she set her teeth and began struggling with the cords that bound her, manning at last to pull the dress over herself at least.

In Elaine's car, the naturalist drove slowly at times, following the track of the automobile ahead. At last, however, he came to a place where he saw that the tracks went up a lonely road. To approach in a car was to warn whoever was there. He ran the car up alongside the road, got the bushes and jumped out, leaving it following the tracks up the side road.

The Romance of Elaine Sequel to The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama By ARTHUR B. REEVE

Stealthily the naturalist crept around, still hiding, until he was closer to the house on the other side.

From his pocket he took the leather case and opened it. There wasn't a cigar arrangement, like some of the collapsible arms on which telephone instruments are often fastened to a desk or wall, capable of being collapsed into small space or of being extended for some distance.

He thrust the thing over the edge of the roof and down, and looked through it. Below, he could see into the room from which came the peculiar sounds.

He looked anxiously. There he could see Elaine endeavoring to loosen the cords and unable to do so. Only for a moment he looked. Then he laid the pocket telescope in his pocket and stepped back to the edge of the roof.

She stood up and balanced herself—a dangerous feat in a canoe at any time, but doubly so in those dark, swirling, treacherous waters.

Del Mar, a little bit behind his man, who he could not recognize him, urged the man on, following carefully.

She looked back, terrified. Her pursuers were coming ahead fast now in her direction. Wildly she gazed around. There was a canoe on the bank, in an instant she jumped in, untied it and seized the paddle.

She looked about frantically. What was the meaning of this? "What are the waterfalls about?"

THE MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS

BEGINS THIS WEEK AND IS THE FIRST ONE UNDER THE NEW LAW

Medical inspection of all school children in Seminole county will begin this week under the provisions of the law passed at the last session of the legislature.

Dr. J. E. Vincent, county physician, who was the author of the bill providing for the work, and he has decided to finish the Sanford schools before looking after the rural schools.

Inasmuch as the form provided by the state Board of Health contains certain data which could not be accurately obtained from the school children in the lower grades, Dr. Miller requested Dr. J. E. Vincent, State Health Officer, to issue a form which will be furnished to the schools to be filled out at the time of the inspection.

The purpose of the form is to obtain a record of the child's health, and to determine whether the child is suffering from any disease which would render it inadvisable for the child to attend school.

The form will be filled out by the parent or mother, and will be returned to the school teacher at the time of the inspection. The teacher will then forward the form to the county physician.

Many deaths in Florida. The Boston Globe reports that during the past year, more than 100,000 people died in Florida, a record for any state in the Union.

Never has any other state in the Union recorded such a high death rate as Florida during the past year. The cause of this is the prevalence of malaria, which is the leading cause of death in the state.

The health department in Florida is now working to reduce the death rate by the use of quinine. This is a powerful medicine which has been found to be effective in the treatment of malaria.

Apply for Delegate. The Florida State Democratic convention will be held at Jacksonville, Fla., on June 14, 1916. Any citizen of Florida who is over 21 years of age and who is a member of the Democratic party may apply for a delegate to the convention.

Test your eyes. It is a good idea to have your eyes tested by an optician at least once a year. This will help to prevent blindness and other eye diseases.

There is no more popular name in Florida than the name of the printer who has printed this paper for so many years. His name is known by everyone.

IS IT MAN OR BEAST?

Bones of a Prehistoric Animal Found in St. Johns River

The boys pulling nets for J. E. Vincent found some more of the bones of the prehistoric animal in the bed of the St. Johns river near Ft. Florida last Saturday and brought them to The Herald office. They are a perfect ball and socket joint and undoubtedly belong to the shin bone brought to the office by Mr. Vincent last week.

Those bones have created considerable comment and many of the citizens think that if the Smithsonian Institute could be consulted about the matter they would send a representative here to make a search of the St. Johns river at this same spot and unearth the head and other parts of the animal. The bones belonged to some prehistoric animal and one of the mastodon type, for the animal that carried these bones in his body was of the mastodon family and if all the body could be found and mounted it would prove a valuable find for any college or institute.

Just how long these bones have been buried in the river none but a scientist could tell and the find would tell a most interesting story. Mr. Vincent says that a few days ago he was attracted to a small boat on the banks of the river and the bones were found in the boat.

The find of the bones is a most interesting one and it is hoped that a search of the river will bring up other bones of the same animal. The bones were found in a small boat on the banks of the river and it is hoped that a search of the river will bring up other bones of the same animal.

ELKS START BUILDING

Foundations Being Laid and the Corner Stone Services Will Follow

The new home of the Sanford Lodge of Elks is started at last and yesterday a large force of men under the supervision of Contractor Venable were busy starting the foundations. The location on Park avenue is an ideal one and a beautiful view of the lake will be obtained from the new building when it is completed.

The building will be practically three stories, the two stories and basement bringing it up to this height. The foundations are being laid with Georgia clay brick to the surface, then about four feet of vitrified brick will follow and then a concrete pressed brick will complete the structure, making a beautiful and very substantial building.

Contractor Venable is pushing the work in order that the corner stone ceremonial can be held at an early date and after that the building will be completed on record time. The members are rejoicing over the fact that the materials for the building are now being shipped and that the work will proceed to a successful finish.

FIRST HEALTH BOARD TRAIN FOR FLORIDA

THE STATE BOARD SENDS DEMONSTRATION CARS THROUGH STATE

Florida's "Health Train" is no longer a dream but an actuality. The present week marks the date of its initial journey through the state on its mission of education to better living, to better health through better sanitation and the prevention of disease.

The realization of this ambition of the State Board of Health, by which it may increase its efficiency and usefulness has come after almost infinite effort. It has been provided and equipped without special appropriation of state funds, and its operation will not add a single cent to the burden resting on the taxpayers of Florida.

The first trip began at Jacksonville Monday morning with the first stop at St. Augustine. The next was at Miami and the third at Key West. The return will be made next week at the various stops and the subsequent itineraries will be arranged later.

The State Board of Health, created by the legislature of 1914, the central transportation commission, has been provided with a fleet of demonstration cars, which will be used to educate the people of Florida on the importance of better living and better health.
