SANFORD, FLORIDA, SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1933

New Deal Begins With Franklin Delano Roosevelt Assuming Duties As President Of United States

Gov. Sholtz Orders Banking Holiday For State Banks In Fla.

Sanford Bank Is Not Affected By Holidays Called By Gov. And Federal Reserve

Interviewed today by a representative of The Sanford Herald, Linton E. Allen, president of the Sanford Atlantic Bank, stated that the moratorium declared by Gov. Sholtz does not apply to the Sanford Atlantic Bank of Jacksonville or any of its affiliates and that they do not contemplate taking advantage of the banking holidays which are prevalent in other states.

TALLAHASSEE, Mar. 4. (A.P.)—Governor Dave Sholtz today declared a five-day banking holiday for state banks in Florida beginning today and ending at the close of business Wednesday Mar. 8th.

The Federal Reserve bank in Jacksonville also declared a "banking holiday" for today and Monday. Officials said the present plan is to resume operations as usual on Tuesday. They also explained that although state banks are ordered closed by the governor, it is optional for national banks in this state whether they "exercise that privilege."

During the banking moratorium in Florida total withdrawals from state banks will be limited to five percent of deposits plus $10 on each account. New deposits may be accepted by state banks during the five days of the moratorium but they must be kept liquid and "subject to withdrawal in full."

Governor Sholtz is in Washington attending the inauguration but proclaimed the holiday after a series of long distance telephone conversations with officials here.

Comptroller J. M. Lee immediately advised all state banks of the governor's action and ordered them to observe strictly the conditions of the holiday. Lee said he expected the 150 state banks to be "officially closed" within a few hours. The holiday, he said, applies only to state banks and not to national.

By The Associated Press Bank holidays spread rapidly over New England, the Middle West and the South today bringing restrictions on deposit withdrawals to most of the country.

Only five of the 48 states remained unaffected at midday. New York and Illinois joined the holiday in the early hours. Missouri, Iowa, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Connecticut, Florida, Montana and Minnesota followed in quick succession.

The federal reserve banks of New York and Philadelphia followed the action of their states. The federal reserve closing checked withdrawals of gold by both domestic and foreign agencies.

The New York Stock Exchange and Boston Exchange also closed for the period of the holiday. Representative Rainey, Illinois, member of the next Congress, announced an extra session of the senate will be called "at the earliest possible time" and "it would not be to

FARMERS DECIDE TO CURTAIL FIFTH OF CELERY CROP

Action Taken At Lakeland To Get Maximum Price Returns

Departing from a practice which has been in effect for the past five weeks, celery growers meeting in Lakeland last night unanimously voted to curtail one-fifth of the celery crops maturing during next week, instead of the one-third curtailment order which was voted last week.

This decision came after a discussion centering about the advisability of making the curtailment orders more flexible so that advantage may be taken of improvement in market conditions and daily studies that are made of the estimated shipments of the coming week.

W. A. Laffler, manager of Chase and Co., who was one of the leaders in the discussion, today explained why the growers voted to revise their curtailment schedule at this time.

"The object has been," Mr. Laffler said, "to regulate the flow of celery in order to derive as much as possible from the crop. The feeling now is that the market cannot be pushed higher at this time on account of general conditions obtaining in the markets. We also know about what will be the shipments from Florida for the next week, which we figure are rather less than the markets should absorb at the present prices. Therefore, it is a matter of calculation, and the unanimous opinion is that the percentage of curtailment be reduced. This applies for next week only. The object being to ship about 400 cars a week."

Continuing, Mr. Laffler said, "We are endeavoring through the closest kind of co-operation to make this policy as flexible as possible in order that maximum returns will be received. I have been advised that calculation made recently indicates that the policy which has been in effect has brought an added return of approximately $200,000 to the growers since the policy was first put into effect. The opinion at Lakeland last night was that growers will profit for the remainder of the season as the result of the curtailment policy which now has been placed on a flexible basis so as to insure a constant supply but not get the markets."

Among the speakers at last night's meeting was H. D. Green of the Bureau of Commerce of the state of California. He was loud in his praise of the solidarity of Florida growers and their decision to take a step which is more or less drastic. He congratulated them for their foresight, and said that he was "deeply impressed" with conditions among growers of Florida. Upon his return to California he said he will discuss the curtailment plan now in effect here with growers of that state, whom he said are already co-operating, and he predicted that next season California growers will have all joined Florida growers in controlling the celery market.

Those from Sanford attending the meeting were: W. A. Laffler, J. C. Hitchison, M. B. Wiggins, J. Howell Fish, L. P. Bustaloh, S. R. Dighton, E. J. Meyer, Harry Nick, Roy Symes, Gas Schmah, Peter Thurston, Fred Zermer, J. G. Bender, and H. R. Phipps.

HOOVER HOLDS LAST MEETING WITH CABINET

Grave Discussions Of Economic Ills Mingle With Farewells At Final Gathering

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—(A.P.)—Final contacts, a whole series of "last times", many tinged with the pathos of farewell, filled President Hoover's last full days as the nation's president.

His cabinet gathered for its final meeting, a session in which grave discussions of the nation's economic difficulties were mingled with personal gifts and farewells. Late in the day he had what may prove an historic discussion with President-elect Roosevelt, ostensibly come to the White House as an inaugural formality, but accompanied by his economic advisor, Prof. Raymond Moley. To assist Hoover, Secretary Mills and Governor Meyer of the federal reserve board were present.

While the entire group sat in the rec room drinking tea poured by Mrs. Hoover, the President and President-elect withdrew to one corner of the room and called in their economic advisors for a conference of high moment.

Earlier Hoover had called in newspaper correspondents for his final meeting with them. He talked along a more personal vein than he had displayed in years past.

"I have no news today," the President said, "but I have a message to his men to this effect."

"The repeal resolution," Colonel Woodcock declared in a recent bulletin issued by the Bureau of Prohibition, "must not disturb our work. In my judgment, it is a desirable thing to allow the people to express their will upon this national policy."

"If the amendment is adopted there still will be a need for this bureau to protect the dry states from the wet. In this wetter of public opinion let us show the world that here is one stable organization which does its duty loyally, persistently, and earnestly."

The bulletin goes on to quote from Washington's Farewell Address, in which the first President said, "The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and alter their Constitutions of government. But the Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by and explicit and authentic act of the whole people is sacredly obligatory upon all."

The last four words are printed in large type in the bulletin. Colonel Woodcock points out that since July 1, when more intensive prohibition discussion started, the bureau has actually done better work than before, although its staff has been cut by 110 men. More cases and better cases have been made in this period and there has been a slight increase in the percentage of convictions, he says. In January, 1933 there were 600 more cases than in January, 1932.

The size of the staff that will be needed to protect dry states in case the amendment is adopted, Colonel Woodcock says, will depend upon the decision of Congress as to the extent of federal activity. An large force as is now maintained may be needed in case the federal government receives jurisdiction to suppress liquor traffic between wet and dry states.

DYING LAME DUCK SESSION ENDS LAST DAY

Broad Powers Voted For Incoming President To Slash Government Expenses

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—(A.P.)—The dying lame duck Congress came through its last full day of life in a session of confusion and haste in the Senate.

Out of the water, however, it voted Franklin D. Roosevelt broad powers to cut government expenses on his own initiative and at the end of the day had completed action on nine of the eleven annual money bills estimated to save $200,000,000 under the present fiscal year.

Vice President Curtis was required to hand sharply with his gavel and insist upon order. The House ran out of work—and even speeches—and recessed before dark to meet again later in the evening for possible action on the conference report on the two remaining appropriation bills.

The supply bills sent to the White House calls for an outlay of $2,300,000,000 for the operation of departments, in addition to $1,300,000,000 for the public debt. President Hoover has signed five of the nine measures he has received.

Indications were the $30,000,000 supply bill for the District of Columbia would fall by the wayside in conference, but there was still hope that the $1,000,000,000 measure for the independent offices, carrying $200,000,000 for the veterans' administration, when the House approved the conference report on the $257,410,000 treasury post office supply bill which carries the economy provisions that will permit the new president to effect savings up to $200,000,000. It was sent to the White House, and Mr. Hoover is expected to sign it.

Congressional action was finished on the $1,000,000,000 supply bill for the independent offices, carrying $200,000,000 for the veterans' administration, when the House approved the conference report. The House also adopted the conference report on the $218,840,000 department appropriation bill, sending it to the White House without the $22,000,000 proposed by the Senate to care for jobless youths.

The appropriations in the nine bills passed, including $4,100,000 for farm board cotton for the Red Cross, totaling $2,890,587,000, exclusive of the public debt fund, compared with $3,619,430,000 provided for the current year. With the total outlay for the present year in the 11 money bills was $4,800,000,000.

Savings on the nine bills passed, under President Hoover's budget estimates, amounted to about $42,000,000, but approximately $20,000,000 was cut off of estimates for deficiency appropriations. A final attack was launched on the government departments by Senator Howard, Republican, Idaho, in the Senate in a denunciation of their resistance to efforts of Congress to reduce costs.

Inaugural Address

By FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

My friends, this is a day of national consecration. I am certain that my fellow Americans expect that on my induction into the presidency I will address them with the candor and decision which the present situation of our nation impels.

This is pre-eminently a time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and boldly. Nor need we shrink from honestly facing the conditions in our country today. This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So first of all let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance.

In such a spirit on my part and on yours we face our common difficulties. They concern, thank God, only material things. Values have shrunk to fantastic levels; taxes have risen; our ability to pay has fallen; government of all kinds is faced by serious curtailment of income; the means of exchange are frozen in the currents of trade; the withered leaves of industrial enterprise lie on every side; farmers find no markets for their produce; the savings of many years in thousands of families are gone.

More important, a host of unemployed citizens face the grim problem of existence; and an equally great number toil with little return. Only a foolish optimist can deny the dark realities of the moment.

Yet our distress comes from no failure of substance. We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Compared with the perils which our forefathers conquered because they believed and were not afraid, we have still much to be thankful for. Nature still offers her bounty and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our doorstep, but generous use of it languishes in the very sight of supply.

Primarily, this is because rulers of exchange of mankind's goods, have fallen through their own stubbornness and own ineptitude, have admitted their failure and abdicated. Practices of unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men. True, they have tried, but their efforts have been cast in the pattern of an outworn tradition. Faced by the failure of credit they have proposed only the lending of more money. Stripped of the illusion that they could escape the burden of their false leadership, they have resorted to short-sighted, pleading tearfully for a restored confidence. They know only the rules of a generation of self-seekers. They have no vision, and when there is no vision people perish.

The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths. The measure of restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than mere monetary profit.

Happiness lies not in the mere possession of money; it lies in the joy of achievement, in the thrill of creative effort. The joy and moral stimulation of work no longer must be forgotten in the mad chase of evanescent profits. These dark days will be ours all the more if they teach us that our true destiny is not to be ministered unto but to minister to ourselves and to our fellow men.

Recognition of the reality of material wealth as one of the standards of success goes hand in hand with the abandonment of the false belief that public office and high political position are to be valued only by the standards of pride or place and personal profit; and there must be an end to a conduct of banking and business which too often has given to a sacred trust the likeness of callous and selfish wrongdoing. Small wonder that confidence languished, for it thrives only on honesty, on honor, on the sacredness of obligations, on faithful protection, on an unselfish performance; without them it can no longer live.

Restoration calls, however, not for changes in ethics alone. This nation asks for action, and action now. Our greatest primary task is to put people to work. This is no unobtainable problem if we face it wisely and courageously. It can be accomplished in part by a direct recruiting by the government itself, treating the task as we would treat the emergency of a war, but at the same time through the employment of compelling greatly needed projects to stimulate and reorganize the use of our natural resources.

Hand in hand with this we must frankly recognize the over-balance of our population in our industrial centers and, by engaging on a national scale in a redistribution, endeavor to provide a better use of the land for those best fitted for the land. The task can be helped by definite efforts to raise the value of agricultural products and with this the power to purchase the output of our cities. It can be helped by insistence that the federal, state and local governments act forthwith on the demand that their cost be drastically reduced. It can be helped by the unifying of relief activities which today are often scattered, uncoordinated, and unequal. It can be helped by national planning for, and supervision of all forms of transportation and of communications and of other utilities which have a definitely public character. There are many ways in which it can be helped. But it can never be helped merely by talking about it. We must act and act quickly.

Finally, in our progress toward a resumption of work we will require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order: there must be a strict supervision of all banking and credits and investments; there must be an end to speculation with other people's money, and there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency.

These are the lines of attack. I shall presently urge upon a new Congress in special session, detailed measures for their fulfillment, and I shall seek the immediate assistance of the several states.

New Chief States Ho Might Ask For War-Time Powers If It Becomes Necessary

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—(A.P.)—President Roosevelt in a momentous inaugural address immediately after taking the oath at 1:06 P. M. today told the nation he would ask for war-time powers if necessary to meet the national emergency.

The newly inaugurated president said he would call a new Congress into special session to carry out his planned attack on the crisis facing "We must act and act quickly" but he didn't reveal when the session would be called.

Among the policies outlined by the nation's new president was that "there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency. I am prepared under my constitutional duty to recommend measures that the stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world may require. These measures or such other measures as Congress may build out of its experience and wisdom I shall seek within my constitutional authority to bring to speedy adoption."

"But in the event Congress shall fail to take this course I shall evade the clear course of duty that then will confront me. I shall ask Congress for one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—the broad executive power to wage war against an emergency as great as the power that would be given me if we were invaded by a foreign foe."

Vice-president Garner took office at 12:01 P. M. Meanwhile President Hoover as his last official act refused to sign the presidential emergency bill authorizing Congress to increase appropriations by $100,000,000 for the emergency bills that had been passed.

Hoover signed the $250,000,000 war department measure shortly before Congress adjourned also die shortly before noon.

Judge Wilkinson Has First Police Court On Friday

Judge S. A. B. Wilkinson's first act as this city's new Municipal Court judge was to impose a sentence upon E. B. McLean, white truck driver for an American Baking Co. which is operating in this city without a license.

Attorneys for the baking company sought to have the affidavit and order of arrest thrown out by citing incurable disease in which court decisions based on similar, they said, arrests, had ruled in favor of the contractor rather than a municipally sponsored firm to collect a license fee.

However, Judge Wilkinson denied their motion to quash, and after a hearing in which Fred B. Wilson represented the City as attorney, ordered Mr. McLean to be fined, and stated that pending an appeal which he understands the baking firm will take to the Circuit Court in May, a similar case against two other drivers will be continued.

In the meantime, the baking firm from out-of-town, are creating their trucks have without licenses, pending the settlement of the constitutionality of the City's ordinance which requires that a $300 annual license be taken out.

Jehol City Is Entered By Japanese Brigade

CHENGOW, Mar. 4.—(A.P.)—While one Japanese brigade marched into Jehol City, capital of Jehol province, today another pushed southwestward from Langsow and occupied Lungchow Pass in the Great Wall of China. The whole scene of the Chinese in the south of Jehol province is being viewed by Japanese as meaning the virtual end of military campaigns which began unofficially Feb. 23.

GOVERNMENTS IN SOUTH AMERICA ARE IN BUSINESS

Industrial Participation Based On Historical Trade Rule

WASHINGTON, Mar. 3.—It is ten more or less as a matter of fact in Latin America that government should take part in business.

Government participation in business in the southern continent of the American hemisphere is based on a different foundation than in other sections of the world where an increase in representative government has led to increasing socialization of industry. In Latin America it is based rather on a historical tendency to expect the government to do everything.

Moreover, the Latin Americans have not hesitated to join together for corporate private enterprise, such as has spread so rapidly in the United States and Europe. They are individualists at heart and rather suspicious of any group which forms to work "for the good of all." The largest corporations doing business in Latin America are firms which have migrated from the United States and Europe.

The forms of government in Latin America have been conducive to frequent entrance of business into government. In some instances the rulers, although representing the few rather than the many, have had a deep-seated desire to improve conditions of the people. At other times the positions of the ruling officials have been so precarious that they have had to prove themselves benevolent by making social improvements such as building railroads and docks, even though they exploited the people to do it.

In practically all of the Latin American nations, except Venezuela, the government owns or operates at least a section of the railroads. The banks established by some of the governments carry on business that is taken care of by private institutions in the United States. Some governments own mines, telegraph and telephone lines, docks and steamship lines.

In still others, the governing hand of government reaches down to keep a firm grasp on the distribution of outstanding natural resources, such as coffee in Brazil, petroleum in Argentina, guano in Peru and nitrate in Chile.

Municipal electric power plants and street railway lines are not unusual. Markets and slaughterhouses are also owned by some cities. Examples of the way government has entered business in Latin America include the following:

In Argentina the greater part of the petroleum is handled through the petroleum department of the National Government. Of the 25,558 miles of railroad in the country, 6412 are owned and operated by the National Government and 226 miles by the Province of Buenos Aires.

The Banco Hipotecario Nacional, established by the government in 1886 to make loans on real property, has a board named by the President of the Republic. The port of Buenos Aires, chief harbor of the country, is owned by the federal government. In Santa Fe, the electric light and power company is municipally owned.

Of the 1099 miles of railroad in Bolivia, 510 are owned by the government. Another way in which it has interrupted the free flow of private enterprise is seen in the issue of a 20-year monopoly to the Belgian subsidiary of the Swedish match company which pays 750,000 bolivianos annually for this privilege.

ORLANDO GROUP IN MIAMI

MIAMI, FLORIDA—These Orlando business men paid a good will visit to Miami and were entertained at the Miami Biltmore Country Club by Henry L. Doherty, president of the Florida Year Round Clubs. While here the Orlando delegation conferred with Greater Miami merchants in planning Orlando's participation in All-Florida Doherty Day, Mar. 10, which will honor the state's new business leader and lay groundwork for a state-wide advertising and publicity program.

The Banco de Brasil, official bank of Brazil, is operated as a private undertaking but the government also owns the entire capital stock of the Lloyd Brasileiro Steamship Company and an extensive system of railroads.

To develop and regulate the coffee industry, the Sao Paulo Coffee Institute was established as a legal entity of the government of the state of Sao Paulo in Brazil, with the state secretary of finance as chairman of the board.

In Colombia, an agricultural bank in which all the capital is government-owned, makes loans on first mortgages up to 50 percent of the appraised value. The bank is allowed to employ a limited amount for the construction of workmen's dwellings. In Barranquilla, the city government owns the market, water works, slaughterhouse and tramway.

In Costa Rica, the government has been authorized to operate a monopoly for the importation and sale of gasoline and negotiations are reported to have been started for the sale of a match monopoly. The Costa Rican government owns 83 miles of railroads and maintains in alcohol and liquor supply monopoly.

The chief railroad in Ecuador was sold to the government in 1924. In addition, it runs the Banco Central, telegraph and telephone lines and operates a salt monopoly. Railroads in Guatemala are government-owned.

The Chilean Government has a part in regulating the output of nitrate through the Cuzcoch. It delivered the nitrate fields in 1910. The directors of the Cuzcoch is composed of 12, of which four are appointed by the President of Chile. Government control of the Cuzcoch has recently been greatly strengthened. The Chilean government owns 3711 miles of railroad while the government-owned mortgage bank of the Republic makes loans to landowners. The federal government has taken over control of Valparaiso water supply, formerly held by the municipality, and has acquired many other publicly owned enterprises.

Three-quarters of the railroads in Colombia are owned by the national or departmental government but they have been operated since 1931 by a non-political council. Nicaragua has assumed full management of the only railroad of importance in the country, and a monopoly for petroleum products has been proposed.

The government in Panama operates 32 of the 295 miles of railroad and owns the national bank which has the right to invest funds in mortgage on real estate.

The Peruvian government owns 642 of the 2810 miles of railroad there. The government sets quotas for agriculturalists of Peru through the Compania Administradora del Guano, whose permanent director is named by the government.

The electric supply of light, power and traction is a government monopoly in Uruguay. Banks, harbors, railroads, telegraph and telephone are state-owned.

Venezuela is the only Latin American country which has no state-owned railroads. In 1928, the Venezuelan government established the Banco Agricola y Pecuario at Maracay to lend to agriculture and cattle raising industries and the Banco Obrero to finance the purchase of homes by workers.

Florida soil has been proved to be peculiarly adaptable to the production of tung nuts, from which tung oil is made. This bids fair to become a major industry. The Florida Keys are of coral formation.

CUBA PRESIDENT THINKS ISLAND IS ON ROAD TO TOP

Machado Offers To Accept Help Of Opponents In Task

HAVANA, Cuba, Mar. 3.—President Machado believes that Cuba is on the road to economic recovery. He declares his intention of continuing a program already started and states that he will gladly accept the co-operation of his opponents if they will forget political grievances and join with him. Briefly his program is this:

1. Lower the cost of living by a cheaper production of goods and a diversification of crops.
2. Promote and maintain inter-communication to all parts of the island that Cuba shall have an economic unity.
3. Maintain public and private credit that foreign capital shall have enough confidence in the Republic to continue lending assistance, despite the present business crisis.
4. Bring the sugar industry back into Cuban hands more capable of handling it than foreigners, since American standardization methods are not suitable on the island.
5. Work for any international action having for its purpose a universal economic disarmament especially as it applies to a readjustment of these measures and tariffs.

President Machado spends considerable time away from Havana. He has an extensive model farm near the city and it was on this farm that an interview was granted. Generally of general opinion, he is not directly guarded by soldiers. The place is protected but no more so than the White House at Washington.

The president appears more careworn than he did two years ago. Many things have happened since then, including a "revolution." But his figure is sturdy, his mind alert and his manner compelling. He was entirely agreeable to answering all questions.

To a query as to how he proposed to pay the national and international debts, for they form one of the most troublesome problems at the present moment, he explained that they would be taken care of through rigid government economy and an improvement in the methods for collecting taxes. He stated that the government had in view the making for new loans, or a reorganization of the present ones. He pointed out that Cuba had met its external obligations in the past and that income from the budget was sufficient to take care of them in the future.

Approximately 15,000,000 acres of Florida's area are covered with forests and second growth timber.

BOWLING NOTES

The Seminoles Country Bowling League last night was knocked out of the money in tournament play when it lost two out of three games, to the Dossy's Lunch Room team which came out of the cellar position in so doing.

With the tournament over, and three teams tied for first place, it will be necessary to play a special match to decide first, second, and third place prize money winners. This match will be played Tuesday night, and the Forrest Gatchel, No-11 Botler, and Smith's Harbers team will be the competitors.

A new tournament gets under way next week with practically the same teams. Following the tripple match Tuesday evening there will be a meeting of team captains and players to decide on line-ups for the teams, entering the new tournament.

Passenger Jumps To Sea South From Transport Plane

CHARLESTON, S. C., Mar. 3.—A passenger identified from his baggage as M. D. King, of Ka-nashan, W. Va., jumped 50 feet from the Eastern Air Transport plane last here yesterday and was believed to have fallen to a certain death.

A search was started in the Edisto river field, over which the 18-passenger plane was flying. So far it could be located, no one saw the man as he left the plane.

The passengers said their fellow traveler had complained of a headache early in the day and had shown no other signs of disturbance. He occupied a seat in the extreme rear of the cabin, on the left side. No one saw the man over the door from which he jumped through space.

HELANOR, Mich., Mar. 3.—(AP)—Marion D. King, 45, who stopped from a passenger plane yesterday, was president of the East Paper Company, one of the largest paper mills here. He leaves a widow and three children. Mrs. King said she knew of reason for the act, that her husband apparently had no unusual business worries, and to her knowledge had not been in poor health.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

Franklin D. Roosevelt is now president of the United States. With the possible exception of Washington and Lincoln, there has been no chief executive of our country who has entered upon his duties at a more critical time...

But it is equally true that few of our presidents have enjoyed such unanimous support and unqualified confidence, both of the people and the legislative branch of our government...

There are a thousand and one problems which will demand President Roosevelt's first attention during the next few weeks, not the least of which is the constricting of credit throughout the country due to the banking situation...

Mr. Roosevelt's presidential candidacy, since both during the campaign and since he has entered upon his duties, has been characterized by a certain amount of mystery...

Hidebound conservatives, fearful of change, may expect an unhappy time of it these next four years, for Franklin D. Roosevelt is going to take office with his face turned to the left...

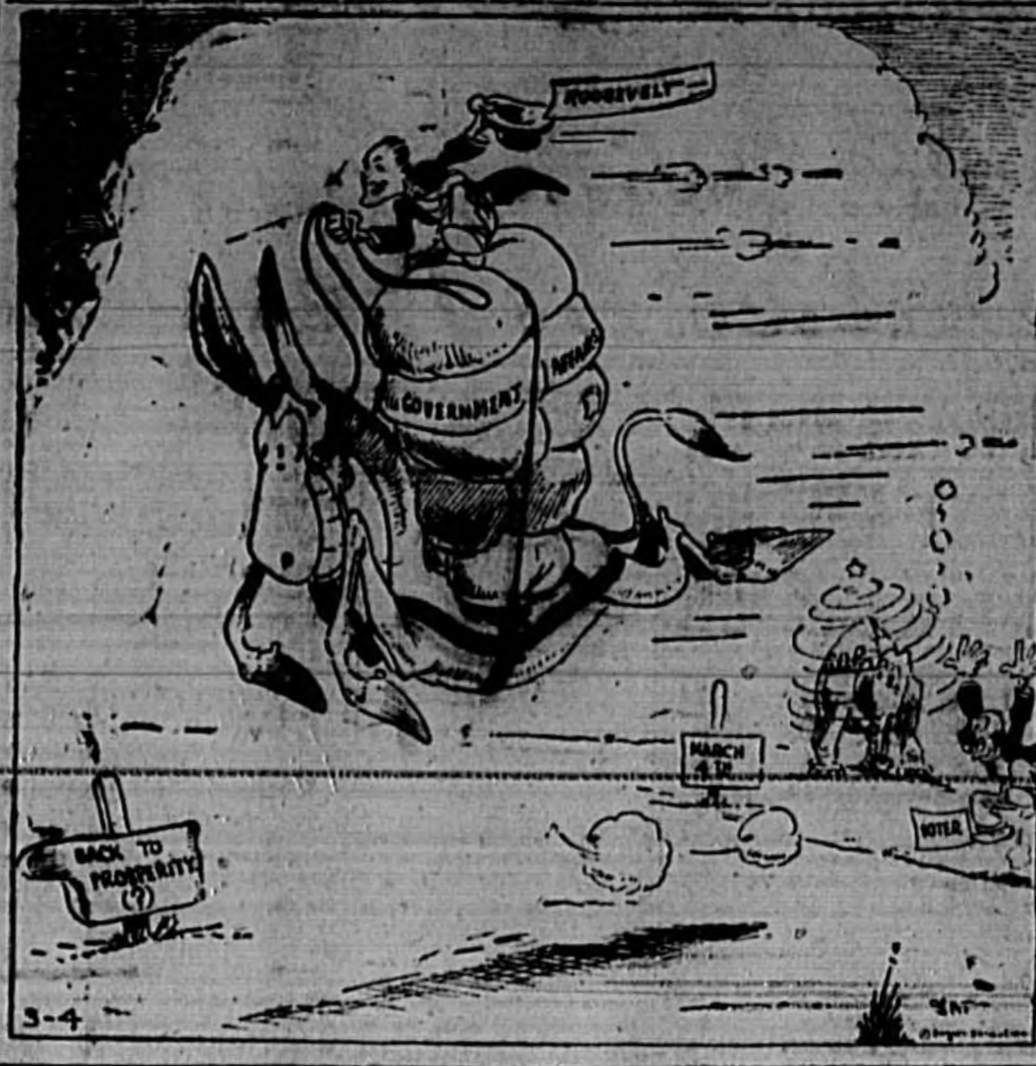

What other method is there for relieving unemployment and at the same time checking the remorseless process of deflation by pouring a stream of money into the dry bed of purchasing power?

At present, about one half of the total mileage is carried on 20,000 miles of line, one-tenth the total mileage...

More than 200 delegates are expected to be attracted to this conference which is particularly significant in the calibre and number of its speakers.

At a thousand necessary things are at hand to do. Flood control, reforestation, needed buildings and highways. The government's credit was never better and interest rates never lower.

POLICY AND AUTHORITY

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

It would be vain to suppose that it is possible at a time like this to arrive at a just estimate of the outgoing administration. The verdict which was pronounced in November expressed the actual desire of the people for a change of conditions...

Of few things in the later judgments can we be at all sure. Yet there can be little doubt, I think, that when the genuine historians come to be written scholars will not treat the Hoover Administration as a thing in itself...

The people followed these leaders willing, and even the opposition parties hardly dared to question the basic principles of the post-war regime. Yet this regime, which was described as a return to normalcy, proved in fact to be the attempt to create an economic abnormality...

With respect to revenue measures, as well as economy moves, the new President has definite ideas. He does not believe in the sales tax as outlined, and all the pressure exerted by powerful supporters has not been able to change his stand...

When it comes to foreign affairs, "America First" will be the Roosevelt policy, but by no means is this to be construed in terms of isolation. He realizes fully that we live in an interdependent world...

Mr. Roosevelt, however, is well aware that even the most drastic economic government itself will fail for want of meeting the needs of the present population. There are many present conditions...

the voters and his political authority. In the first place it did not wish to make any important readjustments of policy. In the second period, which began, broadly speaking, with the Hoover inauguration, it could not make them effectively and promptly because of the discontent of the people and the distrust of Congress...

These familiar truths at this time is that they carry with them so direct and important a lesson for the incoming Administration. The policies which Mr. Roosevelt described as the new deal provide, judging by the evidence available in the Democratic platform, the important appointments, a realistic course of action in dealing with the situation...

Thus the new Administration begins with essentially sound ideas, with ideas that, in respect to the immediate crisis at least, do not, I believe, differ radically in principle from the final convictions which the best minds of the outgoing Administration have finally reached...

For that reason the Roosevelt Administration will meet its crucial test at the very beginning of the special session. Either it will establish undisputed command of the Democratic majority and the course of legislation or it will be overruled and destroyed by the factions of which its nominal majority actually consists...

Other nations, was, in his opinion, a direct invitation to reprisals, a direct invitation to boycotts. With him the tariff is a trading proposition, basically, and he worked out along the line of reciprocal agreements. It will not be surprising to see him enter into immediate conversations with Canada and Mexico...

There can be no doubt as to where the new President will stand in the matter of inter-governmental relations. Cancellation is a thing that has no place in his policy. In the course of the fifty years of the Revolutionary War, the thirteen states were unable to pay France the money that had been borrowed, but there was honest acknowledgment of the debt, and in the course of the fifty years every cent was paid. What America did, other nations can do and must do.

It is not to be doubted that these debt negotiations will be handled from the White House. In other respects, Mr. Roosevelt may be expected to recover the powers of the Executive that have been steadily encroached upon by Congress in recent years. This carries with it the suggestion of a conflict with the legislative branch...

When it comes to foreign affairs, "America First" will be the Roosevelt policy, but by no means is this to be construed in terms of isolation. He realizes fully that we live in an interdependent world, and while convinced that our entrance into the League of Nations was longer in the field of practical political consequences...

Mr. Roosevelt, however, is well aware that even the most drastic economic government itself will fail for want of meeting the needs of the present population. There are many present conditions...
