At schools, C is for cappuccino

By MARIA OREM
Herald Staff Writer

High school students in Seminole County don't need to go the mall anymore for gourmet coffee.

Barnie's line of gourmet coffees is now available in the cafeterias of Lake Mary and Seminole high schools. Plans are in place to soon add the service at Oviedo, Lyman, Lake Brantley, Lake Howell and Winter Springs, said Dan Andrews, director of food services for the Seminole school district.

Andrews said students and teachers are very excited about the service which includes cappuccino. Available flavors include German Chocolate, Vanilla Creme. Because of the low caffeine content in the products, Andrews refers to the line as non-caffeinated. The price is $1 for a cup. High schools have been offering a regular coffee service in the county for at least 10 years. Kids have many options, including soft drinks and juices, he said.

"This is a very high quality product and we're excited about it," Andrews said, adding that

Getting to the heart of the matter

You can call it hearts of palm or swamp cabbage, but can you find it around Sanford? You can if you go to Stanek Herbs & Specialties. Looking at light rail

By JEFF BERLINICKE
Herald Staff Writer

Louis Rotundo stepped up before the Longwood City Commission and asked them to close their eyes.

Rotundo is the lobbyist for the cities of Altamonte Springs and Maitland and is trying to persuade the Longwood City Commission to approve the federally funded light rail transit system near Interstate-4 as opposed to downtown Longwood.

After a lengthy speech, Rotundo asked the commissioners to close their eyes and imagine. "Where are the biggest traffic jams?" he asked. "It's right on I-4."

The Longwood commissioners have been debating the topic for weeks. Light rail is slated to lead commuters from as far away as Sanford to downtown Orlando, and Longwood is a major point in the route. Rotundo conceded that the light rail system would be built regardless of its Longwood location but was adamant that the best choice for a station site was closer to I-4.

Celebrating National Night Out

By MARY ROWELL
Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY - Like neighborhoods all over the United States, Remington Oaks in Lake Mary enjoyed National Night Out on Tuesday evening.

It was a social event, a get together to give neighbors a chance to know each other.

It was also a chance for residents to meet some of the area law enforcement officers and rescue personnel.

When neighborhoods and law enforcement work together, crime doesn't stand much of a chance.

Remington Oaks Homeowners Association President Charles Cramer welcomed the residents and guests. J.R. Longdorf said a prayer of thanks. Carmen Leal sang the "Star Spangled Banner."

Deputies seek clues about missing woman

By DAVID FRAZIER
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS -- The Seminole County Sheriff's Office is reporting that there is still no word on 61-year-old Carmen Malcolm Baker. The elderly woman walked away from the Family Living Center, 1131 West Lake Brantley Road, Altamonte Springs last Wednesday, July 30.

Sheriff's deputies received a telephone call Tuesday night from a First Union Bank branch located at South Orange Avenue in Orlando after Baker's photo appeared on TV. Bank officials said Baker was seen at the First Union Bank on Friday. Her checks are direct deposited in First Union and she was making a withdrawal.

Investigators also contacted Baker's daughter who works in Casselberry. However, the daughter told deputies that she has not been in contact with Baker and has no idea where she might be. According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Baker is a reported schizophrenic who has a history of delusional thoughts. She also has been diagnosed with diabetes. Baker left all of her prescription medications at the Center.

Sheriff's Office investigators met Tuesday with HRS, Lakeside Alternative officials and the owners of the Family Living Center. HRS is investigating why Lakeside Alternatives caseworkers waited five days to report Baker as missing.

News you can use

Child proofing for grandkids

Child proofing your home for your grandchildren can save time and energy of the visiting parents and your time, energy and money!

Depending on how often you get the grandchildren, there are many temporary safety measures you can take to make your home safer. Once taken, those measures can be "deactivated" for your convenience when your grandchildren to home. But most importantly, they can be easily "re-instated" for the next visit.

Following are some tips on child proofing your home that won't slow you down when the grand kids leave. There are many other areas of concern, these are just some easy, common items that apply to most homes.

• Install magnetic locks in your cabinets that you want off limits to the grandkids. This should include cabinets containing cleaners, toiletries, plastic bags, breakables, etc. These locks have a mechanism that can be disabled so that once the grandchildren leave, you won't even know the locks are in place. When activated, they are very quick and easy to use. For your own safety, leave a cabinet unlocked that the kids can get into, such as one containing plastic bowls and lids.

• Purchase a few bath tub safety products to make bath time safer. A tub spout cover, bath mat, and an edge cushion for the tub. Remove all soaps, shampoos and razors from the reach of the grandchildren and have a little basket of toys handy for entertainment. When they leave, these products can be stored under the bathroom sink.

• Keep your hot water heater turned to 120 degrees or less to prevent tap water scalding. If this is not possible, at least adjust it during your grandchildren's stay or install some anti scald devices.

• Put a toilet lid lock on your toilet because a child can drown in just one inch of water. This may also save you some money in plumbing repair bills and may preserve some of your small valuables. A toilet lock can be left unlocked when the grand kids leave or it can be removed altogether.

• Remove items that you don't want handled or broken. If this seems bothersome just consider that a few minutes of putting away your cherished knickknacks can save you from heart break. Even worse, if any thing gets broken, your grandchild may get injured.

• Many grandparents keep medications and vitamins in easy to find, easy to reach places such as the bed stand. Iron supplements are the leading cause of poisoning in young children and are toxic to kids. Get a medicine safe or install a magnetic lock, if possible, on your bedside stand. Also, make sure purses are inaccessible because they may contain medication or other items that a little one can get into trouble with. Many poisonings occur at grandparents' homes so take extra precautions.

• Have a pool fence installed. This should be the last layer of defense between your grandchild and the pool. Though a little costly, a pool fence can be removed and stored when the grand kids aren't around so you can fully enjoy your pool area. To be on the safe side, also install alarms on the doors and windows leading to the pool so you'll be alerted if a grandchild goes exploring without you. Many alarms can be deactivated when you don't want to use them.

Many of us were raised without having our homes child proofed and we survived. However, looking back on the statistics, many did not fair so well. This is the reason we have so many safety measures today and the reason for putting preventative devices in our homes.

If you need some help figuring out what you can do to make your home safer for your grandchildren, call Safe Surrounding Child Proofing, (407)699-0841. You'll receive some valuable tips, a safety evaluation of your home and an estimate of the cost to child proof your home according to your needs.

Adult supervision is the best way to protect your grandchildren.

Kids' Day: Try to catch the fun

No matter what else you do today - or any day for that matter - make sure to be kind to children. It's Kids' Day.

Many parents will take their children to work with them today.

Others may have a picnic or a night at the movies planned.

Is there anything as neat than seeing a father playing catch with his son?

Halfway there

At precisely 12:08 PM today, summer will be half over (just don't tell the kids who are back at school). Here's the math: 46 days, 7 hours and 48 minutes will have elapsed and the equivalent will remain before 7:56 PM, Sept. 22, the beginning of autumn.

Leos we loved

Lucille Ball, Alfred Lord Tennyson and Alexander Fleming were all born on this day. Comic, poet and bacteriologist. Leos we loved.

If laughter is the best medicine, Lucy should have won a Nobel Prize.

Today is...
RUSS WHITE

Fleming did win the Nobel. His contribution: penicillin.

Hiroshima Day

Memorial services will be conducted in many places today for the victims of the atomic bombing at Hiroshima, Japan, August 6, 1945. At 8:15 a.m. an American bomber, the Enola Gay, dropped a bomb known as "Little Boy" over the city. More than 205,000 civilians died either immediately or subsequently because of radiation.

Fiddlers aren't crabs

Want to have some summer fun? The places to go are Galax, Va and Ocean City, N.J. The Old Fiddlers' Convention begins today at Galax. Plenty of old-time, bluegrass music. More than 25,000 are expected to the 62nd annual Old Fiddlers' Convention.

Time again for the Miss Crustacean USA Beauty Pageant and Ocean City Creep. Participants are hermit tree crabs. By sunset, the most beautiful tree crab and fastest crab on earth will be honored.

Switching channels

Gertrude Ederle took a 14 hour, 31 minute swim on August 6, 1926. Little tri across the English Channel from Cape Gris-nez in France to Dover, England. She was 19, and the first woman to swim across the Channel.

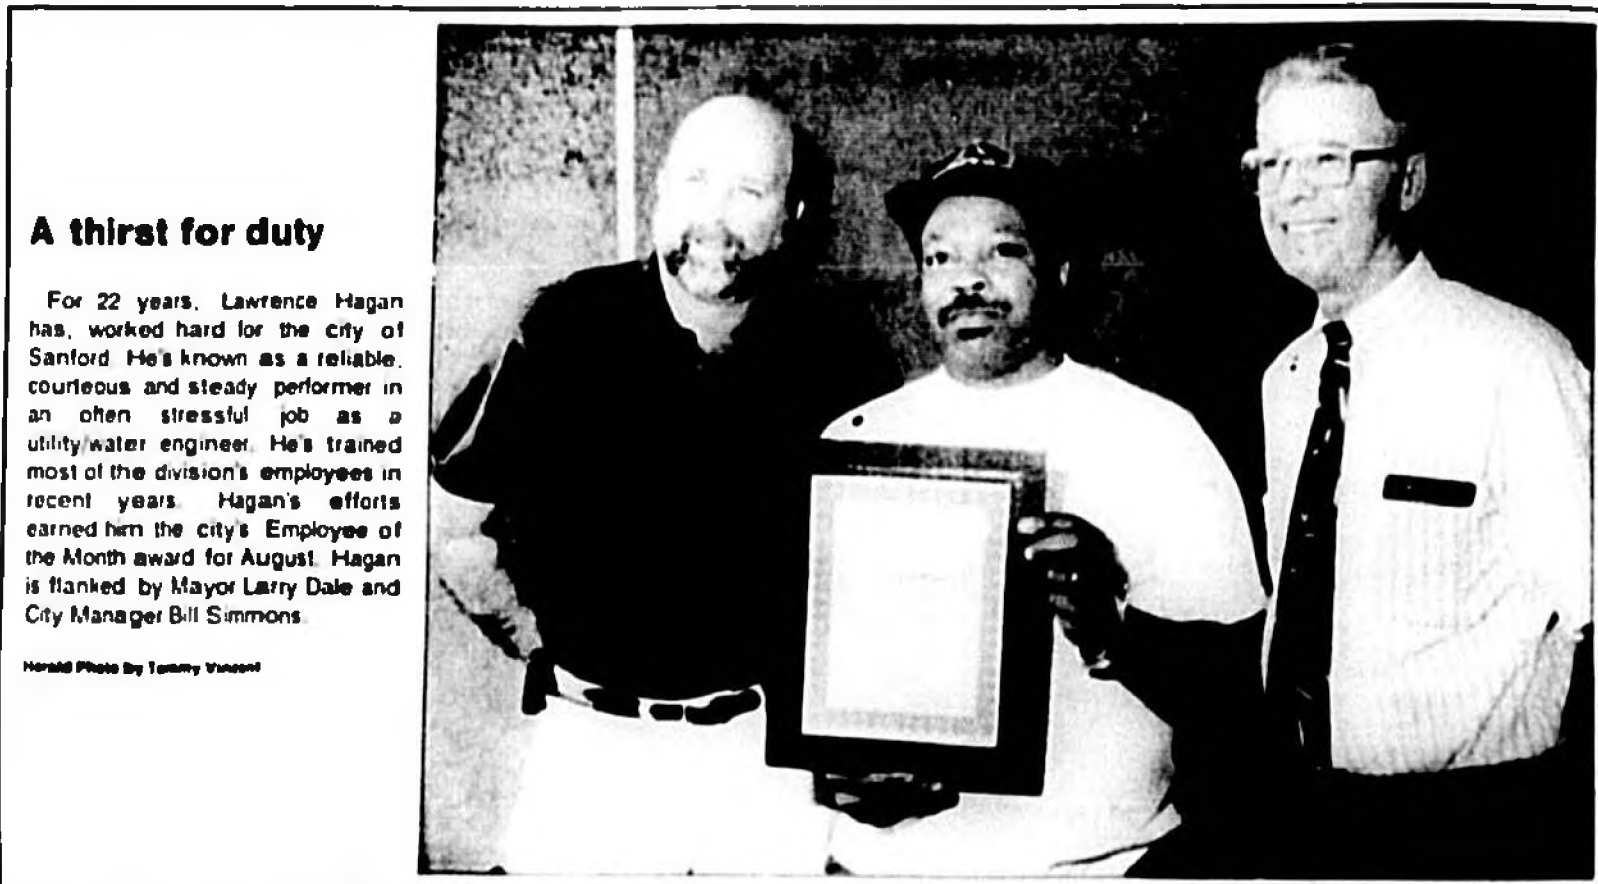

Two years earlier, she won an Olympic gold medal.

Gertrude was a native New Yorker, smart enough to stay out of the Hudson River.

A Laker and a Spur

Two birthday parties that top today's list are for Freddie Laker (75) and David Robinson (32). Flyboy Laker never played basketball. Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs was never a Laker. Robinson was born in Key West.

A thirst for duty

For 22 years, Lawrence Hagan has worked hard for the city of Sanford. He's known as a reliable, courteous and steady performer in an often stressful job as a utility/water engineer. He's trained most of the division's employees in recent years. Hagan's efforts earned him the city's Employee of the Month award for August. Hagan is flanked by Mayor Larry Dale and City Manager Bill Simmons.

Experimental grove known nationwide

By GRACE M. STINECUPHER
Herald Columnist

The Sanford Historical Society learned at its recent meeting that Belair, General Henry Sanford's experimental grove, was known nationwide during the late 1800's. General Sanford experimented there with various trees and plants to determine what could be grown in the area. On his 145 acres, he had about 100 varieties of citrus, the Valencia orange was founded there. Some people believe that the camphor tree is a native of Florida, but General Sanford introduced it here from Japan.

Some other things grown at Belair were pineapples, figs, bamboo, palms, mulberry, papaya and hibiscus. Belair was, of course, of great economic value to the city and area. But back to back freezes about wiped it out as it did most other vegetation in this area. Much was learned, though, while it was here as to what could and could not be grown here.

The present Chase Groves development is located on the site of Belair. Some of the original plantings have been saved and are in the city of Sanford's nursery.

Also of interest was the fact that some of the first things laid out in the new city of Sanford were five parks. Four are still in existence and are what we now know as Jaycee Park, Centennial Park, Park on Park and Grammar School Park. The city policy station stands on the fifth original park site.

The Arbor Day ordinance of January 4, 1886 required all property owners to plant trees down the side and across the front of their property. If you didn't, the city would plant them and bill you. The area included was from French Avenue to Pump Branch and Lake Monroe to Seventh Street. These trees were beautiful, but have created many problems with their pervasive root systems which the city continues to have to remedy.

There are now 9,000 trees on the right of ways in the area from French Avenue to Sanford Avenue, Lake Monroe to 25th Street.

Providing all of this information and much more was Howard Jeffries, Parks and Grounds Maintenance Coordinator for the City of Sanford.

During the business meeting, conducted by president Millard Hunt, it was announced that True Grits...What Else??? by Dr. Charles L. Park should arrive by August 31. Order forms can be obtained at the Sanford Museum and from various merchants. The price after August 31 will be $12.95. Dr. Park's generous donation of the copyright to the society is allowing them to reprint the book.

On August 9, several society members will travel to the Orlando Museum of Art for the Imperial Tombs of China Exhibit. Members were advised that space was still available and to contact the museum to be added to the list.

Bette Cannavino announced that the Heritage Brick project continues. These will be placed in front of the Sanford Museum at a future date. Several bricks have already been purchased in honor of persons, as memorials, with the buyers own name, etc. On the bricks are names of individuals, families, organizations, etc. The cost is $50 each and may be ordered at the Sanford Museum.

The publications committee chairman, Jan Cara, announced that "At Tale of a Mosquito" should be published by October. Added to this reprinting of Mrs. J. N. Whitner's history of early Sanford will be original sketches by Linda Dolinger.

Pictures for the 1998 historic calendar have been selected and they are now being made ready for the printer by Don Vincent Paul Biggers, chairman, said they should be released early in September.

A display case for the top of the Yowell Department Store counter in the Sanford Museum has arrived and members exclaimed over its beauty and usefulness. This was purchased from the Carraway bequest fund.

At the end of the meeting, members and guest enjoyed delicious refreshments provided by Bette Cannavino.

As with any great neighborhood party, there was plenty of food.

Volunteer Chris Fishbeck cooked hot dogs, which were served by Judy Cramer and Laurie Lee Vaughn. The coordinating assistant for the event and the mother of the chief was Diane Fishbeck.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies Darrell Anderson, Rocky Ford, Charlie Reynolds, and Tom Harasti visited the event. Sgt. Reynolds delighted the children by giving out autographed SheriffStar cards.

Ivan Mustafa and Chris McEudree represented the Seminole County Fire and Rescue Department. Lt. Mustafa gave residents a tour of his rescue vehicle, which is a combination fire and emergency vehicle.

Seminole Court Fire and Rescue was among the first fire and rescue departments to employ a rescue vehicle that combined the two services. Soon after the vehicles were put into use, calls came from departments throughout the county, and other jurisdictions followed. The county now has 11 rescue vehicles.

A rescue vehicle is like a small firetruck and a small emergency room on wheels. Rescue vehicles can respond solely to car fires without having the bigger vehicles come out. Trained personnel on the vehicles can accomplish almost as much as doctors can at hospitals.

They can take EKGs, an especially vital function when administering to a heart attack victim.

To prevent accidents during a response and to decrease the response time, the rescue vehicle also has a traffic preemption system. With this system, the rescuers can signal all lights to turn red except the one the vehicle is approaching. All traffic lights on Lake Mary Boulevard, except the new one, are equipped to respond to the system.

For those who missed their community's National Night Out, there are other chances to become acquainted with the Sheriff's Office.

Lake Mary Law Enforcement Day will be held Saturday, August 16 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Lake Mary Center, Westend. On display will be an ALERT helicopter or marine patrol boats. There will be a mini SWAT display, and bicycle safety talks.

Rotundo said he has been lobbying local governments in Orange, Seminole and Osceola counties in an effort to best utilize the $30 million in federal money designed for the mass transit system.

He challenged the commissioners to place the station where the people wanted to be, not where Longwood is hoping to grow.

"You are on the queue," Rotundo said. "I can assure you that there is a billion dollars waiting for you."

Springs, he said, the Altamonte Mall would be a sort of "go to" location. In Maitland, the Maitland Center would be considered the same way.

"If it is in downtown Longwood," Rotundo said, "I doubt it would be a 'go to' location."

Longwood Mayor Bill Winston said the city had already done its letter of recommendation but Rotundo replied, "You can either change the character of your downtown or put it where the people are."

Construction of the light rail system should begin in about five years, Rotundo said. He reiterated that Longwood needs to consider where people currently are rather than where they will be in the future.

"You need to be where people want to go rather than where you want them to be," Rotundo challenged the commissioners.

He told the commissioners that placing the system in downtown Longwood would be a "very expensive mistake."

He then told commissioners that any place along the line would have to be a "go from" or "come to" spot. In Altamonte

We must help each other

Unless it's a bizarre situation or has some other relationship to what may (or may not) be considered newsworthy, most media do not report on suicides. It is generally the feeling that the families of persons taking their own lives are already suffering enough without having the details brought further into the public eye.

We believe this is good, and have followed that practice.

On the other hand, refusing to recognize something does not make it go away. It's the ostrich with his head in the ground, thinking that whatever frightens it will cease to exist.

The shocking news as we see it is that suicides are on the upswing, especially among teenagers. Suicide is now the third-leading cause of death among teens.

The rate of suicide for people ages 15 to 19 quadrupled in the last four decades, rising from 2.7 per 100,000 in 1950 to 11.1 per 100,000 in 1990. The suicide rates for 10- to 14-year-olds increased 120 percent between 1980 and 1992.

There have been a number of teen suicides in Central Florida in the past months. A 12-year-old girl reportedly killed herself because of failing grades in school. Another, a boy just short of his 16th birthday, killed himself because he was found to be involved in the theft of several hundred dollars.

A few have done so because of the loss of a boyfriend or girlfriend or some other event which may have seemed at the time, to make life no longer worth living.

We don't have statistics, but we would assume, and few would probably disagree, that several decades ago, when families appeared to be stronger, there were few teen suicides. Family members spent time talking with each other rather than going hither and yon, their separate ways. They stayed together in the same home until the teens turned adult and got married.

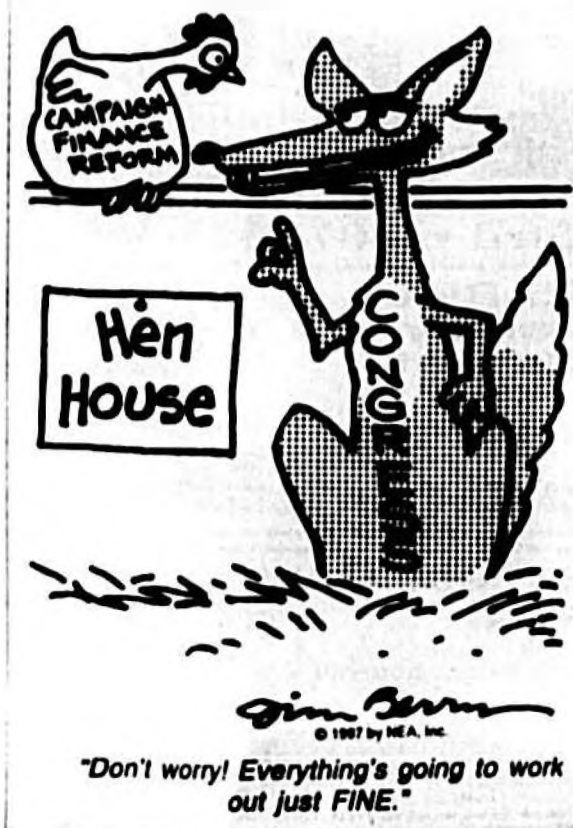

When there were problems, mom and dad most often did all they could to help alleviate the situation. If not them, then other family members stepped in to offer advice or assistance.

There is little we can do to return to this age once again. Everyone has a car. Everyone has a TV set. People seem to have too much going these days to spend much time with the family (if they even get along like they should).

That leaves everyone else. Has anyone asked for advice, an opinion or other types of help or assistance recently? Did you attempt to help or were you too busy?

The only way we are going to see any progress in today's standards and morality, the only way we are going to start reducing crime, and particularly these teen-age suicides, is to be willing to help each other. Call it brotherly love or the Golden Rule. Call it what you will, but don't ignore it.

Berry's World

BEN WATTENBERG

Terror a la Russe; Terror a la Roth

Not planning to see "The Lost World" again (this time with your eyes open) no matter how many times you see the TV commercial? Consider two recommendations for even more terrifying summer alternatives. Philip Roth's latest novel, "American Pastoral" (Houghton Mifflin, 1997), revisits the lost world of America in the 1960s. "Russia's War," a 10-hour series on PBS, excavates documents and historical film from previously secret Soviet archives to reconstruct the lost world of Premier Josef Stalin's Russia from 1924 to 1953. Each is a masterpiece in its medium. And each is far more frightening than a bunch of animatronic dinos.

Roth's novel is microcosmic, existential. The documentary is macrocosmic, epic. "American Pastoral" is a study of what happens when one decent and conventionally successful businessman -- Swede Levov -- suddenly finds that he has become the "plaything of history." "Russia's War" is the chronicle of what happens when the history of a massive nation becomes the plaything of a runaway ideology in the hands of a psychopath -- Josef Stalin.

The novel provides a high-resolution study of one man's confrontation with revolutionary passions. The documentary offers a wide-angle survey of a vast empire's encounter with revolutionary passions. But both ultimately arrive at a similar and crucial insight that has shaped the major horrors of this century: When revolutionary ends determine means, personally or nationally, the pastorals end, the wars begin, and the bodies pile up.

The action in "American Pastoral" is fairly simple. Seymour "Swede" Levov is a legendary high-school athlete (and, to neighbors in his Jewish enclave in Newark, N.J., a symbol of assimilation into the American cultural mainstream.) He marries a Catholic beauty queen, takes over his father's glove factory, and attempts to sink roots among New Jersey's Yankee gentry in rural Old Rimrock. The apolitical Swede would like to make gloves, not war, and enjoy his old stone mansion, prize-winning cattle and other totems of his American pastoral.

But history, in the guise of his teen-age daughter, Merry -- a bright but emotionally disturbed stammerer -- has other ideas for him. Radicalized by the Vietnam War, Merry transforms herself into a Weatherman-style violent '60s revolutionary. In the lexicon of the time, she "brings the war home," blowing up the Rimrock post office. The blast kills an innocent country doctor.

Critics on the left have furiously denounced Roth's novel as a badly disguised social and political allegory that romanticizes a complacent nose-to-the-grindstone postwar America while caricaturing and trivializing '60s idealism. Most galling of all for the left, Roth seems not to take the ideals and rhetoric of '60s radicalism at face value.

SARA ECKEL

This is the tale of two cleaners.

Act would adjust unfair pay scales

This is the tale of two cleaners. Cleaner No. 1 is called a "custodian." The custodian cleans offices of the U.S. Congress and has duties that include sweeping, vacuuming and mopping the offices' rooms, halls and common areas. The custodian also dusts, restocks supplies and empties trash and recycling bins that can be as heavy as 165 pounds.

Cleaner No. 2 is called a "laborer." The laborer cleans offices of the U.S. Congress and has duties that include mopping and vacuuming the floors, stairs and common areas. Laborers also clean the bathroom and empty trash and recycling bins that can be as heavy as 165 pounds.

What's the difference between Cleaner No. 1 and Cleaner No. 2? About $1 an hour -- and the fact that Cleaner No. 1 is a woman and Cleaner No. 2 is a man.

The job descriptions above come from the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which has filed a lawsuit on behalf of 50 female custodians alleging gender discrimination. The custodians, most of whom are women, are paid $10.08 an hour for their efforts, while the laborers, the vast majority of whom are men, make $11.10. Laborers can also collect overtime pay, while custodians cannot.

While such a brazen inequity might sound shocking, it is not unusual. This nation has seen many instances of pay disparities that are hard to attribute to anything other than gender. There were, for example, the New York City police dispatchers, almost all of whom were minority women, who were making $4,000 to $6,000 a year less than the city's fire-department dispatchers, the vast majority of whom were white men.

And then there is the trickier issue of jobs that are not the same but require comparable levels of effort, skill and education. This notion of "comparable worth" is one that conservatives love to lambaste, as they insist that any attempt to recalibrate the value of various jobs would be a big-government nightmare. Their argument sounds good until you consider the actual jobs in question and ask why, for example, nurses aides make less than security guards. Or why school cafeteria attendants make less than janitors. Or why clerk typists make less than delivery van drivers. Or why a high-school's secretary should make less than the audio-visual technician.

All of these examples come from actual cases in which someone asked, "Why indeed?" In the case of the nurses aides, it was a recent report by the Rhode Island Department of Administration, which recommended that "institutional attendants" should have their titles changed to "nursing assistants" and get a pay raise. At the same time, it said that "Capitol police" should have their title changed to "security guard" and have their pay cut.

In New York state recently, comparable-worth advocates were not as successful. Last May the mostly female secretaries of a Long Island school district lost their bid to have parity with the mostly male custodial staff, who make $1 per hour more than they do. Edward Mercado, commissioner of the state Division of Human Rights, said that the decision to dismiss the case was based on shortcomings in the law.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Before you shoot ...

BOSTON--The story came over the AP wire in one pristine paragraph. There it was, the Zeitgeist honed down to a solitary police blotter entry:

"A man was coaxed out of his home in Issaquah, Washington, by police officers after he pulled a gun and shot several times at this personal computer, apparently in frustration."

Who could resist a tale of computericide? Who among us who had ever booted up, crashed, or freaked out could have done anything but exhale a resounding "YESSS!" for the man who pumped lead into his hard drive. "Apparently in frustration."

I for one taped this onto my personal computer as a cautionary tale. You might even call it a warning shot across the bow--or in this case, the mouse--directed at the computer gods that lie within: Don't you interface the wrong way with me, pal.

Now I do not usually applaud domestic violence. Nor can I imagine shooting a gun at hard or software. After all, there are so many other weapons available. As Dan Gookin, the author of "Word for Dummies," writes, "I'm a firm believer in baseball bat therapy for computers." Bats will do the trick.

But no jury of his peers will ever convict this Issaquah man of premeditated computericide. Not when there is a plea of justified computericide or even self-defense.

Jury of his peers? This is a moment in history when millions of his peers are engaged in simultaneous sink-or-swimming. We are at the low end of the learning curve. And more than occasionally reaching the end of our cyberslope.

As you may have guessed, I am one of this miserable multitude. This summer I upgraded my computer to several levels above my head, I have now opened a new and bleak Window on life. Opening Windows '97 is like opening windows in 1976 in the movie "Network" when everyone yelled into the air, "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not going to take it anymore."

Of course, there are some people who find this learning process easy. These people are (1) below 25 years old, or (2) employed residents of Seattle or (3) linguists who recently learned Urdu from teachers whose native language is Mandarin.

New software is simple for those who understand at first reading the meaning of instructions such as: "To Show files with Hidden or System Attributes, Click the View Menu and then check the Show Hidden/System Files check box." That handy tip can be located under something called "help."

It is equally simple for the guru who comes to solve your problem, takes over your chair, and demonstrates the right moves at a triple-ram speed you can neither follow nor duplicate.

The rest of us, however, are experiencing what Avram Miller, the vice president of Intel, describes with astounding understatement as the "pain of ownership issues." We went looking for a tool, not a toy. We regard bells and whistles as hassles. We are feeling computericidal. "Apparently in frustration."

Who could resist a tale of computericide?

I was promised that within days I would be "calibrating your joystick" and getting it on with the "new hardware wizard." In fact, I am slugging it out with the mouse and the file manager. I still don't know what or where my joystick is, but I swear (frequently) that it's overrated.

Like millions of people, I have been convinced to invest-waste?-untold hours--days? weeks?-in order to become more productive. I am struggling to learn a new way to do what I used to do the old way so that I can once again work with everybody else who is also learning a new way in order to work with me. Soon, no doubt, I will have to learn a newer way.

This is progress. This is what is called "user-friendly." And this is one of the great pickup lines of the late 20th century.

User-friendly? A friend does not require absolutely literal instructions. A friend does not destroy your self-esteem. A friend, most assuredly, does not lose three chapters of a book. And then say it's your own fault.

As for user-hostile, well, the very week that the man from Issaquah was dragged off by the police for a mental health check, there was a report about the public health dangers of aggressive drivers behind the wheel. But that's nothing compared to the public health dangers of frustrated drivers at the keyboard.

No I don't think that computer killing will become the random violence of the next decade. But just in case, I'm going to pin another sign on my PC: "Before you shoot, back up."

Hearts of Palm or Swamp Cabbage? By any name, it would taste as sweet

By SHARI BRODIE
Herald Staff Writer

It really depends a lot on where you were "brung up." In fine restaurants, it's called hearts of palm, but native Floridians know it as swamp cabbage.

How your were raised also determines how you prepare this delicacy. Sliced raw in a salad is good but boiled with salt pork and served with barbecue is better.

The problem with this "vegetable" is that in the state of Florida, harvesting hearts of palm is regulated. You see, hearts of palm, or swamp cabbage, is the product of the cabbage palm, also known as the cabbage palmetto, also known as the sabal palm, the state tree of Florida.

Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings wrote in Cross Creek Cookery, "I always feel a little uneasy in recommending swamp cabbage (hearts of palm at the Ritz), for this greatest of Florida vegetables is the white core of a young palm tree, and it's cutting means the death of the tree. I fear always that some enterprising backwoodsman will take a notion to send them to market, and that the beautiful tropical palm groves will be decimated."

About the only place you can get fresh swamp cabbage in this area is at Stanek Herbs & Specialties.

Meryem Stanek received a shipment of fresh hearts of palm Saturday. She orders hers from South America, cleaned and ready to cook, but says she can order whole logs from a Seminole Indian reservation in south Florida. Stanek says she had heard that there used to be a cannery somewhere in Sanford.

Located on Beardall Avenue, Stanek Herbs & Specialties is a wholesaler for a wide variety of fruits, vegetables and home-grown herbs. Stanek's three-page product list includes edible flowers, fresh hot peppers, bulbs, roots, salad greens, tomatoes, berries, dried, frozen and fresh fruits. The most expensive items are frozen and dried mushrooms. How about Dried Morels #1 or frozen White or Black Truffles? You really would have to have a craving for these beauties.

Stanek started her business

in her home, shipping only those items she grew in her own garden. That was 15 years ago. At that time, there were no fresh herbs to be found in the area. "Florida is backwards," Stanek said, as most of the fresh herbs back then came from California.

At onetime, thanks to her business savvy and knowledge of her product, Stanek had the exclusive contract to supply specialty items to all of the Disney kitchens.

The business really took off and Stanek moved to the warehouse on Beardall.

Husband John, retired as a technical writer from Siemens-Storberg Carlson, son Jonathan, 15 1/2, and daughter Natasha, 11 1/2, help out with the family business. Stanek focuses on quality, with much of her products being organically grown.

What the strangest item this specialty supplier has ever supplied? Oddly enough, it is citrus for the Florida Citrus Commission. For some reason the fruit they had in storage for a photo shoot went bad and she had to exhaust her suppliers to get them some replacement fruit (Florida fruit, of course).

So now that you know everything you want to know about swamp cabbage, how about some recipes? From Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' Cross Creek Cookery:

SWAMP CABBAGE SALAD

Only an expert can cut down a palm and strip the core properly to its ivory-white, layered heart. The lower portion of the heart must be tested by taste for bitterness, the upper portion, for fibrousness, until one is down to a white cylinder of complete sweetness and tender crispness. Slice thinly and soak for an hour in ice water. Drain well, serve with French dressing or a tart mayonnaise. The flavor is much like chestnuts.

SWAMP CABBAGE, CAMP STYLE

Prepare swamp cabbage as above. Boil slowly in as little water as possible, with several slices of white bacon. The bacon will probably provide sufficient salt. Pepper may be added if desired. If palm heart has any tendency to bitterness, parboil for five minutes, drain off water, and cover with fresh boiling water. Otherwise cook, tightly covered, for 45 minutes or until meltingly tender, and until most of the moisture has been absorbed.

SWAMP CABBAGE, CROSS CREEK

Instead of white bacon, add two tablespoons of Dora's butter and a half teaspoon of salt to sliced palm heart and cook in very little water until dry and thoroughly tender. Add one-half to one cup of Dora's cream, heated, quantity according to amount of palm heart. Heat to simmering and serve at once. Prepared this way, heart of palm is fit for a king. (Dora was MKR's irreplaceable cow.)

From What's Cooking?, published locally by the Chapter AX, P.E.O. Sisterhood, here in Carolyn Durack's recipe for Hearts of Palm Salad:

HEARTS OF PALM SALAD

Take several cups of chopped fresh Sabal Palm hearts, cover with water; chill. Dice several stalks celery. Dice three to four ounces of candied ginger. Drain one cup canned crushed pineapple.

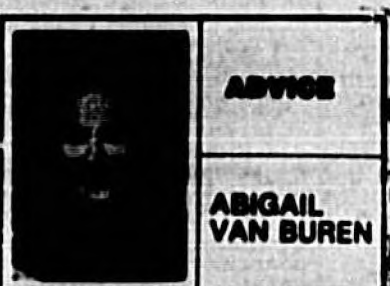

Dressing: Blend two to three tablespoons of mayonnaise with lemon juice to thick consistency, add salt and sugar to taste. Tint light with food coloring. Add nuts if desired.

Mix hearts, celery and pineapple. Place each serving on lettuce leaf. Spoon on dressing. Sprinkle with ginger bits. (If preferred, pineapple and ginger may be swirled into the dressing first to mingle flavors.)

Open wallet may give too much away

DEAR ABBY: I own a very busy neighborhood retail newsstand/convenience store. We serve a few hundred customers a day — more men than women, for some reason. While our male customers generally dig into their pockets for bills or coins when paying, women usually bring out their wallets and open them to get cash. This is a dangerous practice.

When women open their wallets and reveal credit cards and the driver's license in the window pocket, I get a good look at personal information — as do customers standing beside or behind them. It may take only a few seconds to get money out of the wallet, but it takes me less time to read their names and addresses.

It may seem like a reasonable place to keep your license in order to find it quickly should an officer ask for it, but most officers ask that the license be removed from the wallet anyway. I have made my family and friends aware of the danger, and have moved my wife's license to a safer location in her wallet.

I am reluctant to point out this danger to my customers because they may feel "funny" about my noticing. However, I worry that someone who is unstable or dangerous may obtain names and addresses — and then who knows what will happen?

I propose that women put a favorite photo in the display window of their wallets — or better yet, a photo of a very large male. That sends a safer message.

RICH FROM LUCKY STOP,
NORTH BABYLON, N.Y.

DEAR RICH: Great idea. And if the woman has no husband, boyfriend, son, uncle or male friend, a picture of a German shepherd with teeth exposed should suffice. Or perhaps women should carry a small coin purse with a few dollars in it and leave the wallets safely out of sight in their purses.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about the letter from Marva Boehm Mason concerning adopted children. I agree with her 100 percent. When you're adopted, you know you were wanted. I often hear people refer to children as "adopted." It's an unnocesary label. Some birth children wish they had the love and attention that some adopted children get. Mrs. Mason's parents were kind and loving, and let her know that she was special.

Some natural-born children find out that they were "accidents" — that their parents weren't ready for them. They are constantly reminded that they are an intrusion into their parents' lives.

Television and print media are guilty of using the term "adopted," referring to a certain actor's children as "so-and-so's adopted children." They are his or her children, period! It is cruel for society to create distinctions between children. It is because of labels like these that adoptees go in search of their "real" parents, instead of realizing that the people who loved them, fed them, nurtured them and made them productive members of society are their "real" parents.

The individuals who gave them up are the ones who lose. For whatever reason, they were denied the pleasure of seeing a delightful child grow into a fine adult.

May God bless all those who open their hearts to adopt babies and give them a loving home.

MARILYN BOZEMAN, CHICAGO

DEAR MARILYN: And God bless those mothers who placed their babies for adoption in order to give them a better home than they (the birth mothers) could provide.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column daily, and you offer good advice. Keep up the good work.

I'm writing to offer a suggestion to kids who have spare time this summer. I'm 12 years old and volunteer at my mother's job. She works in a nursing home. I walk with patients, talk to them, run errands and help with activities, plus a lot of other things. You can learn a lot, and bring patients joy and a smile to their faces.

Volunteering teaches you responsibility and earns you friends. I'd definitely recommend working at a nursing home or volunteering at other places — such as animal shelters, businesses, farms, hospitals, or just work at people's homes for free.

It may sound boring to some people, but it's worth the time. I've made many friends and have had lots of fun doing it.

REBECCA L. MAHAN,
KEWASICUM, WIS.

DEAR REBECCA: Giving of one's time is the most precious gift a person can bestow.

Pain Drug Surprises Researchers

(SPECIAL)—A drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur 110" and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur 110, relieves pain by first selectively attracting, and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur 110 is available immediately without a prescription in an odorless, tasteless, non-staining cream or new roll-on liquid form. Arthur 110 is guaranteed to work or your money back.

Sportsmanship is taking a back seat to winning

Back in high school (up north), I had a choice. Go out for sports or join the school band. I chose the band, and as a result, earned a good second income for over 40 years with music.

Had I selected sports, I doubt if I would have been able to earn as much as one cent for my abilities.

I therefore join many people in not knowing a darn thing about sports. I enjoy watching certain sports, but actively participating? Nope.

However it doesn't take a sports expert to know about being a sport.

In team games (talking about schools and amateur), there is always a need for sportsmanship. Some coaches may tell you to get out there and do anything you can to trounce the opponent. Knock them down, hit them with the ball, do whatever you can without getting penalized. Just in the name of winning.

We wonder if some of our coaches might be spending most of their time in teaching how to win (regardless of how it's done), rather than how to enjoy the game.

Believe it or not, there have been people actually saying that what Mike Tyson did in biting the ear of his opponent, was "just part of the sport."

In individual competition, people most often compete against friends. How many friendships have been lost when someone attacked an event in an unsportsmanlike manner?

Then there are parents. Many of them want their youngsters to succeed so much that they will do anything. They attack the coach, shout at opponents or parents of members of another team. Some even throw things onto the field, and there have been a few who launched into a rumor attack just to get rid of their son's or daughter's coach who didn't let the youngster play enough.

Some of our professional sports stars have become role models. Yet look at the way some of them behave. Do we want our youngsters to grow up and follow their idols? Or would we rather have them grow up knowing that the word "sports" is part of another word, "sportsmanship."

Yep, I know nothing about sports except that I like to watch. But whenever I see unsportsmanlike attitudes by players, coaches, fans, or whatever, I generally turn off the entire event. I have left high school football games and turned off the TV on a number of occasions.

We want our youngsters to grow up with respect for their fellow man (and women). Allowing or teaching them how to be nasty, no matter what, in sports, will only lead in the opposite direction.

Just one spot higher

Post 53 looking for American Legion state title

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — A year ago they were the state runners-up. This year they want to be champions.

Sanford Campbell-Lossing Post 53 showed a lot of character and guts in coming out of the loser's bracket to win three straight games last week and the championship of the Florida American Legion Eastern Area Tournament and now have a shot at moving up that top spot when they open play in the Florida American Legion State Tournament in Hialeah tomorrow afternoon.

After dropping a 6-2 decision to West Boca (Post 245) on Tuesday afternoon, Post 53 came back to eliminate Ft. Pierce Post 40 4-3 with a two-out run in the bottom of the ninth inning in a game that ended after 11 p.m.

Several of the players on the Post 53 team then had to attend the first day of school as Seminole County schools got an extra early jump on the school year and then showed up at Alumni Field and looked very good in the 7-5 and 9-0 victories over Post 245. Winning despite a long delay for a lightning storm and a blowup on the part of the West Boca squad.

The Sanford team showed off its power stroke in the sweep, as the team hit five home runs (two by Tim Raines Jr. and one each by Clyde "C3" Williams, Jeremy Frost

County well represented on Bombers

By DEAN SMITH

LAKE BUENA VISTA — They were known as the Central Florida Bombers, but they could have easily been called the Seminole County Bombers as over half of the team will be attending Seminole Athletic Conference high schools.

The 14-and-Under team that plays in both the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) and AABC (American Amateur Baseball Congress) was outstanding in going 10-1 to claim the AAU National Tournament at Walt Disney World's Wide World of Sports Youth Baseball Complex last week.

named to the AAU All-National Tournament Team, will continue to be teammates as both will attend Lake Mary High School this fall.

UCF hoop team overseas, football team practicing

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — The University of Central Florida has been busy with its men's basketball team preparing for a trip to Europe, its football team opening fall practice, and two changes in the coaching administration.

Sanford's Brad Traina and the rest of the basketball team of head coach Kirk Speraw will leave the UCF Arena today at 12:30 p.m. for Orlando International Airport a flight to John F. Kennedy Airport in New York before flying to Nice, France where the team will begin a two week tour of France and Italy where it will play games and take in the sights.

Meanwhile, UCF football coach Gene McDowell welcomed 27 newcomers to campus on Monday, marking the beginning of practice for the 1997 season.

The newcomers, mainly freshmen, checked into their housing and then spent the day in meetings with their segment coaches. They got their first taste of action Tuesday morning when they were timed for speed and then put through a series of agility and strength tests.

"This is probably the best class of newcomers we've had, they look really good physically," McDowell said. "I'm not going to know how they'll play until we get them out there on the practice field with the varsity and see how they stack up with those guys."

The newcomers will start two-a-days today, at which time the veterans are also supposed to report. The veterans will be timed and tested on Thursday before the entire squad unites for practice on Friday. UCF will open its second season in Division I-A, August 30, at Southeastern Conference member Mississippi.

KAUFMAN PROMOTED
UCF Athletics Director Steve Sloan announced Tuesday he promotion of Mary Joy Kaufman to Associate Athletics Director.

Kaufman, who served as Assistant Athletics Director for Administration and Women's Sports for the past three years, serves as the athletics department's advocate for women's issues.

Kaufman, a longtime UCF administrator, was a charter member at UCF for seven of the University's formative years (1967-74). She later joined the athletics department and was named Senior Woman Administrator in 1991 under former Athletics Director Gene McDowell.

Is there help for insomniacs

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 75-year-old man who has suffered from insomnia for years. Over-the-counter remedies are ineffective. Melatonin doesn't work, and the Restoril my doctor prescribed has lost its punch. Another doctor told me that I cannot sleep because a past infection "ruined" my immune system. Could this be the problem?

DEAR READER: I doubt it. The immune system has little or nothing to do with the sleep center in the brain.

Insomnia is a common complaint and has many causes, ranging from stress and worry to problems with the "biological clock" (which tells us when to sleep and when to awaken).

Ask your doctor to refer you to a sleep laboratory. Such facilities are generally available in most large teaching hospitals. In such a setting, specialists will examine you and your sleeping pattern using sophisticated testing methods such as brain wave tests. Once the cause of your insomnia has been identified, the specialists will suggest treatment, ranging from drugs to behavioral modification. You do not have to suffer indefinitely from insomnia; help is available.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Some friends told me that eating carrots is not healthful. Is this true? I love the vegetable.

DEAR READER: Carrots, when eaten in moderation as part of a well-balanced diet, are healthful. They provide minerals, roughage and vitamin A.

Notice that I qualified my answer by using the word "moderation." There have been several studies showing that people who consume huge quantities of carrots or carrot juice (a pound a day or more) may develop carotenemia (an excess of the yellow pigment carotene, which can lead to vitamin A poisoning and liver damage).

However, carrots are certainly healthful when consumed in normal quantities.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 43-year-old son is addicted to Dilaudid. He has taken about two pills a day for several months. He refuses to face this problem. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Dilaudid, like morphine, is a narcotic painkiller with a high addiction potential. However, before labeling your son an addict, I'd have to know the answer to two questions.

— Why did he start taking Dilaudid?

— Where is he obtaining it?

If your son is taking this prescription drug under the supervision of a licensed M.D. for pain control, he may not be addicted. This is an appropriate use.

If, on the other hand, he is buying the narcotic on the street only for the calming effect it produces, he has a problem.

Your first step is to sort out the situation by talking to your family doctor — or to your son's doctor. Two pills a day is not particularly excessive, but if the physician is prescribing the drug, you should certainly let him know of your concern.

If the doctor knows nothing about this, you may need to seek help from law-enforcement authorities.

Unfortunately, too many doctors misuse their skills by over-prescribing addictive medicine for flimsy reasons. Should this be the case here, the police should certainly be alerted and the doctor severely disciplined.

Stage three: the simple approach

By Phillip Alder

Unless you have just flown in from Mars, you will have heard of the Law of Total Tricks — perhaps in these columns. It was uncovered some 40 years ago by Frenchman Jean-Rene Verne. But it rested almost unknown until Larry Cohen wrote and published "To Bid or Not to Bid" in 1982. That book and its sequel, "Following the Law," are overkill for most players. However, for the rest of us, Cohen has now put out "Introduction to the Law" (Baron Barclay, $8.95 postpaid; 800-274-2221).

This 60-page book provides an excellent prologue to the leading guide for competitive bidding. If you and your partner read this book, discuss its implications, and apply it at the table, you will become much tougher opponents.

This deal exhibits the Law in action. You hold the North hand. Your partner opens one spade and West overcalls two hearts. With neither side vulnerable, what would you bid?

Only one high-card point. How can you possibly act? Yet you have five-card support for partner's spade suit. The right bid is four spades.

The primary conclusion of the Law, assuming you cannot make game on high-card power, is that you should bid to the level of your combined trump holding.

Here, partner has shown at least five spades. You have five spades for a total of 10. So, bid four spades, the 10-trick contract.

Probably East will double and South will go two down, losing one heart, two diamonds and two clubs. However, minus 300 is a beneficial sacrifice against a making five-heart contract worth 430.

In the year ahead there could be some unexpected, but constructive changes in your chosen field of endeavor. Each of these shifting conditions might produce benefits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) Even though you might have your mind set on doing something a specific way, don't discount bright alternatives that come to you from out of the blue today. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10108.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23) You are still in a favorable trend where your material interests are concerned. Think positive and see yourself as a recipient of good things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Social involvements that contain elements of friendly competition could be a pleasant experience for you today. Your skills are at a peak.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Hunches you get today pertaining to the outcome of events should be rather accurate. Operate where these perceptions are most prevalent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If your thoughts tend to focus on a specific friend today, it could be because you're on his or her mind as well. Check it out for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A condition that could benefit you either financially or career-wise might have an excellent chance of manifesting itself today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Seek creative outlets today, because you're likely to be reckless and irritable if you aren't involved with things that challenge your imagination.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) If you're embroiled in an important bargaining session today, don't expose all of your cards at once. Hang onto your aces until you're ready.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have a problem resolving an important decision today, sound it out on a trusted ally whose suggestions were of enormous help previously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not be afraid of trying new methods today to solve an antiquated problem. It can be resolved if you are resourceful and innovative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something you've learned recently can be used to your benefit today to improve an alliance that has been faltering. Search your memory for the answer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might have some unexpected interruptions in your routine today, but you won't dislike them. In fact, they may turn out to be fun.
