CASSELBERRY—A law providing for the establishment and creation of fire control districts in certain parts of counties having an official population of less than 27,000 inhabitants will be the chief topic for discussion at a meeting here at 8 p. m., tonight at the municipal building, of the Seminole County Firemen's Association, according to Paul Bates, Casseberry fire chief and vice-president of the county association.

Man Charged With Assault Of Two Youths

A 22-year-old Sanford insurance man was jailed last night following a sexual attack on a 14-year-old youth and a 16-year-old boy. The attack, which took place in the SanLando Springs area, occurred in the late afternoon yesterday. However, Adrian Allen Armour, a former Air Force man with a wife and two children, wasn't taken into custody until shortly after seven o'clock when deputy sheriffs followed the trail of the man to his home in Sanford.

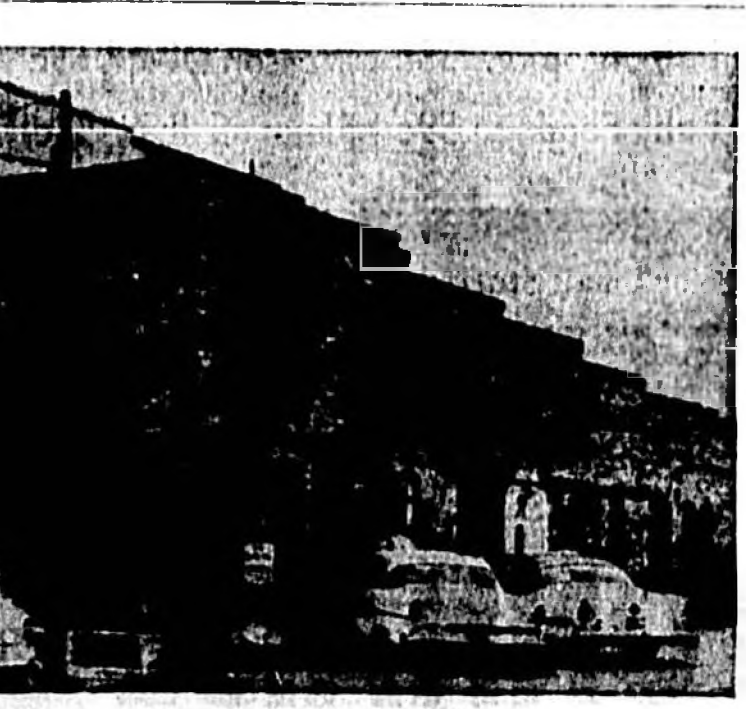

The 14-year-old boy, following the unnatural sexual attack on him, was taken to a physician last night for an examination. Deputy Sheriff Kris was led to the armour home on a "hunch", he said, after a description of the car, the license tag number, and other data which he had gathered in his investigation of the assault.

Walters Taken Into Custody On Five Forgery Counts

A 51-year-old Lake Mary man was taken into custody yesterday on five counts of forgery. Albert L. Walters, a former Lake Mary Volunteer Fire Department chief, was lodged in the Seminole County Jail when warrants issued by Seminole County Judge Wilson Alexander were served on him.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Lebanese rebels attacked the American Presbyterian Hospital in Tripoli today. The hospital's American staff had left. The attack started shortly before U. N. Civic Assn. Will Sponsor Proposed DeBary Library

A proposed DeBary Library will be sponsored by the Civic Association, it was stated at a meeting yesterday called to discuss plans to organize a DeBary Library Association.

Dr. William L. Fidler Jr., president of the DeBary Civic Association, who presided at the meeting, said "The proposed library means more than putting up shelves and books for the material must have reader appeal."

Health Dept. Once Dungeon-Like Jail

This is the first of a series of editorials in which we hope to bring to the people of Sanford and Seminole County both pictures of existing conditions in county facilities and the reasons why citizens should demand a progressive program of planning and building.

The Seminole County Health Department is located in a building used first as a livery stable, reportedly before 1900, and then when Seminole County was formed in 1913 renovated into a jail and space for equipment storage.

MIAMI (UPI)—Sen. George Smathers said today it is imperative that the United States change its "St. Vitus dance trade policy" toward Latin America.

Krider Selected Neatest Soldier In Guard Division

M/Sgt. John B. Krider Jr., Company "B" 184th Arm. Infantry Battalion, Sanford's own National Guard unit, was named the "Neatest" soldier in the 4th Armored Division, Florida Part, during summer-field training exercises at Fort Stewart, Ga. It was announced today.

It is the second straight year that Sgt. Krider has been so honored. He will receive a trophy in ceremonies at the local armory during the unit's next training period.

The competition for the neatest soldier in the division is held every year at summer field training. Over 100 men were in the competition this year. Judging in the contest is done with the men wearing only the uniform issued to them. No extras or special tailored uniforms are allowed in the competition.

M/Sgt. Krider has been a member of the local unit since January 1950 and has risen through the ranks to his present position. Currently Krider is assigned as the platoon sergeant to the unit's 81mm mortar platoon.

Rickover Concerned About U. S. Schools

MEMPHIS NOTE: Rear Adm. S. G. Rickover, developer of the atomic submarine and "father of the atomic navy," in one of his mother's leading national magazines. He is also an outspoken critic of the U. S. educational system. In the following interview with UPI reporter Linn Condon, he tells why he is concerned about the state of America's schools, and what he thinks should be done to improve them.

Q. United Press International: Rear Adm. Rickover, you are known as a scientist rather than an educator. What caused you to become concerned about our schools?

A. In my constant search for competent people to work in the atomic power program, I was driven to the conclusion that something is radically wrong with our educational system.

Q. You mean that our colleges and universities aren't turning out enough qualified scientists and engineers?

A. It's not primarily the fault of the colleges and universities. With some exceptions, the specialized professional education which they offer is pretty good. But they are severely handicapped by the weakness of the elementary and high schools.

Q. The public schools are sending the college students who aren't ready for higher education?

A. Exactly. Time wasted in public schools has to be made up in college. Instead of concentrating on producing many more students who are ready to enter the professions, we have to devote much of our college time to remedial courses in English or mathematics, or humanities courses to patch up the gaps in their professional schooling.

Q. Is this a blanket indictment of public schools?

A. No. We have some good school systems. But we have many more poor ones.

Q. What is basically wrong with many more poor ones?

A. Our teachers colleges and state boards of education have been permeated by the "impressionistic" philosophy of education that stemmed from the late John Dewey. This philosophy holds that the main function of schools is to help children "adjust" to life, rather than to impart knowledge to them. It has had a most pernicious influence on school curricula.

Q. How, specifically?

A. Well, it has led to elimination of many academic subjects on the grounds that they would not be "useful" in life, and to substitution of trivial, recreational and vocational subjects alleged to be of more practical value. It has prompted a futile attempt to make learning "fun" and to dispense with studies that can be absorbed only by plain hard work. The student thus receives neither intellectual training nor the factual knowledge which will help him to understand the world he lives in. He is instead handed a bag of "know-how tricks." He is helped to become a pleasant, nicely-mannered young person, able to get along with whatever groups he joins.

Q. You don't think the public schools should be teaching good manners and social adjustment?

A. No. I think we should turn back to the home what is properly the function of the home, and permit the public schools to concentrate on what is properly their function—the education of young minds.

Q. Should high schools offer different kinds of training to children who are going on to college, and those who will go to work or get married after getting their high school diploma?

A. Yes, but this doesn't mean that basic academic studies are unimportant for the non-college group. For all children, the educational process must be one of collecting factual knowledge to the limit of their absorptive capacity.

Twelve years of public school should provide for the average and below average student, a sufficiently broad terminal education to fit him into a modern technological society. For the talented student, it must provide a solid underpinning for subsequent professional education. Neither of these two objectives is now being achieved in the majority of American public school systems.

Science Today

By BELAS SMITH
UPI Science Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—The established medical order is now attacked because it keeps right on insisting that homosexuality is a disease that is an incurable disease. That just isn't so—it is a definite disease and one which definitely is curable, said the attacker.

He is Dr. J. A. Hadfield. His point of attack was the report of an official medical commission which looked thoroughly into what has been called "one of the most pressing social problems of our age" and reported that neither its array of medical witnesses nor the medical literature had produced a single instance of genuine cure.

Not Right Witnesses
The measure of that, of course, is whether the disease victim has been converted to normal sexual activity, that is, to heterosexuality. Hadfield said, in effect, that the commission just hadn't looked deeply enough into the literature and hadn't called the right medical witnesses. Himself, for instance.

He cited among his cures four homosexuals whom he treated 30 years ago. Three cures have lasted to this day. The fourth man has died, he said, but before he died his wife sued him for divorce "for running off with another woman—which, if not the most desirable outcome, at least confirmed the transference of his feelings from homosexuality to heterosexuality."

Hadfield practices "psychological medicine," which is another term for psychoanalysis when used as a medical tool. Like his colleagues in this specialty, he contends that homosexuality is an emotional disease whose most remote causes can be traced to stressful incidents of infancy.

Cure Through Recall
The cure is in recalling these forgotten incidents and thus permitting the victims to understand the commission's report to the British Medical Association.

He quoted a contention that infant experiences cannot be remembered. One of his patients recalled (in the psycho-analytic process) that his own birth had been exceedingly difficult, and another remembered having felt he was being suffocated and choked while at his mother's breast. Thirty years of experience can be a root cause of the adult disease, he said.

Hadfield is English. He attacked the commission's report to the British Medical Association.

TODAY'S THOUGHT
 "How beautiful are the feet of them that tread the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." Found between Romans 1 and 17.

Asafedita, Magic Cloth Bags, Or Salk Vaccine For Comfort?

Not too many months ago big business operations in Seminole County by one group of unethical salesmen were fleecing some local citizens of their hard-earned money.

These men didn't blink an eye as they sold one inch cloth bags contending that they bore magic potions that would drive away bad luck, bring good health, bring good luck and fortune, and even went so far as to claim that they would guide a person through big business deals with no trouble at all.

Truth of the matter is that the cloth bag contained two pellets of rabbit food which sold for a mere pittance per pound. Yet, these simple little bags were bringing such sums as $25, $50, even $75 from people who knew no better than to fall for the "line of salesmanship" handed out by these clever and illegitimate operators.

These magic bags were worn around the neck on a string supposedly warding off ill luck, ill health and ill omen.

Not too much different than those foul smelling bags that many of us wore around our necks during the winter time many years ago. Remember?

Asafedita is a foul smelling gum resin derived from a plant native to the Middle East. Superstition and old-wive's remedies once endowed it with broad sweeping medicinal powers. But science has long since demonstrated the utter worthlessness—just as local law enforcement officers convinced the public that magic powers weren't wrapped up in those one inch cloth bags.

We All Pay The Unjust Penalty

There has been a vast amount of talk right here in Sanford and Seminole County—and especially in Washington, D.C.—concerning tax reduction as a means of increasing consumer purchasing power and thus attacking the so-called recession.

Much of the talk—as all of us know—for want of a better phrase, deals with what may be called "political" tax relief. It would give the average taxpayer a few dollars more a week in his pay envelope. But it would do nothing at all toward correcting the built-in inequalities in our Federal tax system that discourages industrial growth and investment and that penalizes achievement.

What is needed, as the Wall Street Journal pointed out the other day, is not

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

THEY TELL YOU a lot about the intricate, strategic maneuvers of big league baseball—but sometimes the most devious plans of the master minds backfire disastrously. Like a time years ago when Manager Bill Terry was on the third base coaching line and his Giants were trying to solve the elusive slant of Dizzy Dean. The fellow pitching for the Giants was no slouch, either—a fellow named Carl Hubbell, and in the last of the eighth both sides had failed to score a single run.

The Giants got a man to first with one out when a back batter came to the plate. Just as Dean was about to deliver a pitch, he caught a signal from Terry. The batter stepped out of the box to Whereupon the great Dizzy Dean lost his patience and holered, "You lummox, he's done give you the bunt sign three times now! For Pete's sake, let's go!"

A new frozen food outfit has an intriguing slogan: "Don't dare food you ever thaw."

If fresh pineapple is not quite ripe when purchased, it will ripen at room temperature in a few days. When fully ripened, store it in the refrigerator, wrapping well so as to keep its odor from being absorbed by other foods.

CRUEL A. TUCKER, M
 Unfortunately man has found that an ideal climate for growing plants is consequently ideal also for many of our diseases and insects to thrive. Since most people that grow ornamental plants recognize this and expect diseases, it pays to learn to recognize the most common of these diseases and be ready to combat them.

Dr. H. N. Miller of the Plant Pathology Department of the Florida Agricultural Experiment Station says there are several diseases that invariably show up in summer. Let's take a look at some of these.

Anyone who has grown roses is probably familiar with the disease known as "blackspot." This is by far the most serious disease of roses in our area, and, if not controlled, may cause the plants to gradually decline and die.

This disease is particularly important during the rainy months of summer. The leaves have one to many very black spots distinguished by a fringed margin and minute black specks in the center. The size of the spots vary from 1/8 of an inch to 1/2-inch or more in diameter. Spots frequently grow together to form large blotches involving much of the leaf area.

Blackspot can be controlled by protecting the foliage of the plants with a fungicidal spray or dust. Complete coverage of both sides of the leaves is necessary. During the rainy season spray or dust once or twice a week for complete control. Use Fomate (Fermate) or Captan at a rate of one ounce in three gallons of water to which has been added a small amount of household lye. Fomate may be used as a dust, although a dust is usually less effective than the spray.

The most common and conspicuous of zinnia diseases is leaf spotting. Individual spots are at first circular in outline, but rapidly become irregular. The spots are reddish-brown in color and may have grayish-white centers on the upper leaf surface. The flowers may be affected.

To control this disease treat the seed with Semesan before planting. Pulling off and destroying infected leaves as soon as noticed will help check the disease, and spraying with Fomate is also helpful.

Chrysanthemum leaf spot is another damaging disease that usually appears in the summer. Small dark brown spots appear on

Plan Calls For Industrialization

By PETER SUN
United Press International HONG KONG —(UPI)—The People's Republic of (Outer) Mongolia had a far easier time becoming a Communist state than did either Russia or Red China. The small population and the backwardness of the people perhaps were the two major reasons why the Mongolian People's Revolutionary (Communist) Party found its task simpler than did their Russian and Chinese counterparts.

The Mongolian Communist Party has 42,500 card-carrying members, plus candidate members. The figure is roughly one-tenth the country's total 500,000 population.

Chinese Communist claim Mongolia never experienced the "development stage of capitalism." They say that Mongolia, "under superb guidance of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party," jumped over that stage and entered directly into socialism—which neither Communist China nor the Soviet Union did.

public. Communist historians say, the Mongolian republic has been "advancing towards more prosperous stages of socialism." It took the Mongolian Communists about 10 years before they "basically fulfilled the difficult and enormous task of uprooting feudalism."

During this period the Mongolian Communists also developed the country's industry and set up the "working class," thus bringing about some basic changes to Mongolia's economic and "class status."

The years after 1940 are considered by Mongolian Communists as a period when the people entered a new stage of socialist revolution and socialist construction aimed at bettering the living standard of the population.

Eight years were required to lay down the ground work of this "new stage of socialism."

Beginning with 1948, Mongolia plunged into two successive five-year plans aimed at developing the nation's economy and culture. The two periods ended Dec. 31, 1957. Mongolian Communists found it necessary to inaugurate three more years of economic planning, this time aimed at putting muscles into the country's industries.

Mongolia basically is a live-stock-raising country. But as in other Communist countries, Mongolian Communists feel their country will not be "strong" unless it possesses a sizable and independent industry.

Thus, appeals were made to the Soviet Union, Communist China and other eastern European Communist countries for their support in materializing Mongolian aspirations of industrialization.

Special friendship, cultural and technical delegations arrived in Mongolia from throughout the Communist world, and already a small but efficient industry has been established in Mongolia with foreign assistance.

Regardless of the Mongolian Communist ambition, however, Mongolia perhaps will always remain a country dependent on the Soviet Union and Communist China. Firstly, because of Mongolia's geographical position, sandwiched between the two major powers. Secondly, because of the country's majority of herdsmen population. Thirdly, the country's lack of industrial raw materials.

I really used my head today

I stopped waiting...bought a new Plymouth...and man, what I saved!

Sometimes it's smart to wait... and sometimes it isn't! Take me. I was putting off buying that new car we needed. Then I dropped in at my Plymouth dealer's. Just to look things over. It was the most profitable visit of my life.

I found I could get a price on a Plymouth a whole lot lower than I believed possible. PLUS a trade-in offer on my old car so high that I made 'em say it twice!

I saved a clean $140 on the Plymouth ride alone. That's famous Torsion-Aire Ride. It's standard on all Plymouths... but you have to pay up to $140 extra for the top side of the other two leading cars in the low-price field.

And Plymouth proved it can save me gas money by winning the 1958 Motor Gas Economy Run. (There's a brand-new Fuel-Saver Choke that makes your gas buck go a whole lot further!) It proved it will save me still more money at trade-in time, with Silver Dart Styling that will look new and bring more years from now!

Any way you look at it, here's a beauty that's a money-saver, too. I'm a proud guy right now... and a whole lot of money ahead! See your Plymouth dealer.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH DANYLUK

June 21 Ceremony Unites Miss Bowen, J. Danyluk

Miss Mary Lou Bowen, daughter of Mrs. John Bowen, became the wife of Joseph Danyluk in rites held at the Congregational Christian Church with Dr. J. B. Root officiating. White gladioli, yellow dahlias, and palms created the setting for the double-ring, candle light service, an event of June 21 at 8 p. m.

Miss Helen Witte, organist, accompanied Nick Pfeiffel who sang "Because" and the "Lord's Prayer" immediately before the ceremony began. The bride, given in marriage by her brother John Bowen, wore a ballering length gown of charming lace over taffeta. The tulle bodice fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves and a scalloped neckline pearl embroidered was joined to a bouffant skirt. Her finger-tip veil of illusion was held in place with a bandeau of sequins and she carried a white prayer book topped with a white orchid.

Miss Patricia Casube, the bride's maid-of-honor, wore a dress styled with a full chiffon skirt over taffeta and an embroidered imported Irish linen bodice. She carried a bouquet of tiny pink dahlias arranged on a white bridal heart.

Chosen as best man was John Hans Wolfel, and Tommy Kuhn and W. N. Huff served as ushers.

The mother of the bride's ensemble was a light blue street length dress which she wore with white accessories. She also wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Immediately following the service, a reception was held at Mrs. E. C. Kuhn's at 117 Park Ave. The house was decorated with

Ike's Favorite Cake Recipe

Every man has his favorite cake and President Eisenhower is no exception. I'm sure that you will agree with the "man in the White House" that this cake is tops.

THE CAKE

- 1/2 cup butter
- 2 cups of sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup sour milk
- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon (rounded) baking powder
- 2 1/2 cup cocoa dissolved in 1/2 cup boiling water
- 1 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

DIRECTIONS: Sift flour, soda, baking powder and salt; cream the shortening, slowly beat in sugar, add egg yolks and vanilla. Add cocoa, and flour mixture alternately with the milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour in to two greased layer cake tins. Bake 25 minutes in 375 degree F. oven. OR: Use two 9 inch square tins and bake 45 minutes in a 350 degree F. oven.

THE SEVEN MINUTE FROSTING

- 2 egg whites unbeaten
- 1 1/2 cups finely sifted sugar
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar or 2 teaspoons light corn syrup
- dash of salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

DIRECTIONS: Combine ingredients in top of double boiler; stir until sugar dissolves. Then place over briskly boiling water. Beat with egg beater until stiff enough to stand in peaks—six to ten minutes. Add vanilla, beat until thick enough to spread. During cooling keep sides of double boiler cleaned down with spatula. With an electric beater the process may take as little as four minutes.

Make Nursery Safe For Baby

MILWAUKEE. — (UPI) — Check the nursery for safety hazards before the baby arrives, experts say.

Electric outlets should be made safe from prying fingers. Cover base plugs with spring-mounted safety outlets. When an appliance plug is removed, these mountings spring over the opening. Also study outlets to determine if they can supply all light needed.

When painting walls, basins or cribs, use lead-free paint. Check paint labels to be sure the paint does not contain lead or lead chromate, which has toxic effects.

Problem Kid? No-Kids With Problems

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. — (UPI) — A woman who should know says there are no "problem children," just children with problems.

Miss Nell Farrar retired recently after 21 years as superintendent of the state vocational training school for girls here. She saw an awful lot of "problem children" come and go during those years.

Miss Farrar said most of the girls who passed through the school would not have been there if their parents had paid them more attention.

Her advice to parents is to stay home more with the children, take part in all activities which concern the children, such as school and church, know where the children are and the company they keep.

Do not store woollens in plastic bags in a closet with a window. Sunlight filtering through the bags may fade the clothes.

Dempsey Observes 63rd Birthday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jack Dempsey celebrated his 63rd birthday Tuesday with a beaming smile for his four granddaughters and a few tips on how boxing can solve its problems.

Looking fit and trim as he quietly observed the anniversary in his apartment in nearby Santa Monica, the former heavyweight champion explained that the fight game must first assume the responsibility of self-control.

"Boxing will just have to clean up its own affairs the way baseball did," he said. "It might be better off with some sort of national czar or commissioner, but since that's unlikely, it must take care of its own police work."

Dempsey, born William Harrison Dempsey at Manassa, Colo., June 24, 1882, insists that the present-day scarcity of top-flight fighters is due to the disappearance of the small neighborhood boxing clubs.

CAREY GIVES WARNING

CHICAGO, Ill. (UPI) — Casey Stengel, plagued with a slumping ball club which has lost seven times in the last 10 games, said today there'll be some changes made unless the league-leading New York Yankees do a turnaround and start to win.

"I've got a lot of ball players," said Stengel. "and I'm going to try some experimenting if we don't start winning."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Thomas, a rangy infielder with the Pittsburgh Pirates, seems ready today to make up for four years of frustration.

There were times in those years when Thomas, who chose baseball over the priesthood, thought he had made the wrong decision. Hailed as the man to replace Ralph Kiner, he never was able to live up to the billing.

But he is, at least, a "new" Thomas this season.

Arcaro Belittles Value Of Jockey

Racing fans who place a lot of importance on the value of a jockey to a horse are due for an awful letdown when they read what Jockey Eddie Arcaro told Sports Illustrated in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Arcaro stated in the interview that he believed a jockey's importance is overstated; pointing out that any one of a dozen riders, if given the best horse, would win.

However, he qualifies this statement by saying that a good rider will bring out the best in a horse.

Arcaro said that Citation was the best horse he ever rode but claimed he wasn't much help to him in that any boy who knew the elements of riding could have won with him, he was that good.

The 48-year-old rider derided the amount of space devoted by sports writers to a jockey's "sense of pace". Arcaro claims that there isn't a rider around today who knows how fast a race is run; claiming that track conditions vary as much as three seconds in a mile from one day to the next.

"If I had a clock in my head I would have won another Derby," said Arcaro. "In 1947, I pulled a bone that cost Phalanx the race by a nose. I tried to make my move with him on a muddy track between the half-mile and the quarter-poles, and I couldn't understand why he wasn't picking up the other horses."

The figure later showed that he was the fastest quarter mile in the race. I put so much pressure on Phalanx that he didn't finish with a real live punch he always had."

The article points out that Arcaro is at the top of his profession after 25 years of riding because his competitive spirit has not aged. He said that he will win in just as strong with a cheap claiming horse as with one of stakka caliber.

When one of Michigan's greatest football teams—the 1946 Rose Bowl champs—staged its 10th reunion this month the man who ran the show was the man who ran the team, quarterback Howard Yerges. Like all single wing signal-callers, Yerges was the unusual hero of that Wolverine powerhouse that swept to the 1947 Big Ten title and a subsequent 69-5 victory over the Southern California team in the Rose Bowl. But he blocked, faked and quarterbacked to perfection.

Slusser Signs With Indians

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida State University pitching star Frank Slusser has signed a contract with the Cleveland Indians for a bonus "in excess of $15,000."

Slusser was ordered to North Platte, Neb., of the Nebraska Kook League. He was the seventh FSU player to sign a bonus contract this season. The big right-hander was signed up at his home in Mescopok, Pa., by scout Hoot Everts.

The 21-year-old senior chalked up eight straight regular season victories, including a no-hitter against the University of Miami.

THE LONE DEPUTY

CHAPTER 30
"Under. On the other side of that brush. I rode him to death." He looked up, his eyes filled with defiance. "I guess you don't know what it is to be scared, but I couldn't think of nothing but to get a long way from here. I reckon I didn't rest him enough. He just quit and I was on foot when them Mohawks spotted me. I tried to run, but they got on both sides of me and I couldn't do nothing."

"I've been scared, son," Price said. "You bet I've been scared."

New shame took hold of Bruce as he gazed at him down. "You've never been scared like I was. I'm a coward. I couldn't think of nothing but running."

"You're not a coward," Price said. "There's a big difference between being a coward and being scared. Now talk when you've scared that way. I figured that saved my life, the way things were shaping up."

Bruce swallowed. "I couldn't think of nothing else to do."

"I'll fetch one of the Mohawks horses for you to ride," Price said and, stepping into the saddle, caught one of the horses and led him back to the boy.

He stared at the other horse, fighting his desire to be on the move. Finally he rode to the animal, caught him, and stripped the bridle from him. He gave the horse a beat on the rump with the bridle, knowing he would go back to the ranch, and in time the Broken Ring riders would find the bodies of the Mohawks brothers and take them in.

Jerking his head at Bruce, who was in the saddle, Price said the way back up the slope. Presently Bruce caught up with him. He said, "I'm hungry. I didn't have nothing to eat all day yesterday and today. I went into our house before I left, but Farnum was there and scared me off. I stopped and talked to Rusty, but she couldn't say nothing except that I ought to go to town."

"You'd have been better off if you had," Price said.

"I guess," Bruce mumbled. "I'm in a fix any way I figure it. I tell you I'm hungry."

"We'll get a meal soon as we hit town. Price promised.

"I ain't going to town," Bruce said. "I'm going back down on the Yellow Cat. I want to see Susie."

"No, you're going to town. I've been thinking about it. I know Susie's worried herself sick about you and I'm sorry we can't let her know you're all right, but there's a chance Weston's got some men along the creek, figuring you'll show up there. You're the key to this whole business, Bruce, and I don't propose for Weston to kill you and lose the key."

"I ain't no key," Bruce said sullenly. "You won't get nothing out of me."

They rode in silence for a long time, Price glancing now and then at the boy's narrow face. He had been starved, neglected and over-worked. He wanted to be a man, but he wasn't yet. There was a question when he would be, if an intangible thing like manhood can be dated.

Price's own boyhood had been a difficult one, and he understood how Bruce Jarvis felt, caught between his love for Susie Farnum on one hand, and his hopeless poverty on the other. Add to that the physical danger from which he was not yet free, and it was no wonder he was withdrawn and sullen.

They angled across Broken Ring range toward town. Price alert for other riders, but none they saw were distant, momentarily silhouetted against the sky from some ridge top. Too far away to be recognized. Presently they reached the last long slant that led down to Elk River, both Weston's headquarters ranch and Susie's back pasture from the top of the ridge that sloped gently down to the river.

Price pulled up. He said, "We'll get down and stretch."

"I'm hungry," Bruce said doggedly. "You gonna let me starve or . . ."

"I'm hungry too," Price said. "Town's not far off. I figure we'd better rest our horses."

He dismounted. Bruce hesitated, then stepped down, stretching and rubbing his legs. Not used to riding, these last hours had worn him down both physically and emotionally.

Bruce hunkered on his heels and rolled a smoke. He said, "Tell me what happened in the store yesterday morning."

"I ain't talking to you or in court," Bruce said with dogged stubbornness.

"Why not?"

"Cause Weston will kill me, that's why. I'm lucky to be alive and I ain't stay alive. Weston's the big shebang around here and I know what'd happen to me if I opened my big mouth."

"All right," Price said. "Just tell me."

So Bruce told him, reluctantly, the story tallying perfectly with what Jean had said. Now, pulling on his cigarette, his eyes on Weston's ranch, Price realized that it would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to convict the rancher of Walt Cronin's killing, but if Bruce would testify, Weston would hang for the murder of Red Sanders.

Everything, then, depended on this boy whose life he had saved, somehow he had to get through to him.

The story tells to a dramatic climax here Monday. Don't miss the conclusion of Wayne D. Overholser's novel next week in this newspaper.

Two Of Ireland's Landmarks Make Way For Progress

By DON O'BRIEN
DUBLIN (UPI)—Two of Ireland's historic landmarks have succumbed to progress.

A pile of rubble is all that is left of Liberty Hall, cradle of Ireland's labor movement. A skyscraper will be built there.

And Dublin Castle, once a symbol of British rule and the focal point of hate and fear to generations of Irish patriots, is being pulled down as part of a building program.

It was at Liberty Hall beside the River Liffey in the city's center that a dispirited and listless labor force first heard the call to organize, to close ranks in a common struggle. It was here, too, that the trade union movement had its bloody birth under police truncheons.

Some 20 years ago the booming cry of labor was planned and stirred laborers as they gathered in Liberty Hall. It was a reminder of the violence and death that greeted Ireland's efforts to proclaim the dignity of her working men.

"The Castle"
Within its weather-pocked walls a citizen's army was born, the first strikes were planned and young men prepared to die in defense of their rights.

Across the Liffey to the south is Dublin Castle, bleak and forbidding. It was once the hub of British power and prestige throughout the country.

With the castle go a thousand memories of intrigue and heroism, of pride and bitterness, its influence spanned a century of Irish history. It stood as a bulwark against the despairing effort of a tiny country to win the right of self-determination.

It was a name only to be whispered in dark side streets or in the secrecy of dusty little back rooms where determined men plotted to oust the British.

"The Castle" was the Irish symbol of all the pomp and power of an empire—its soldiers, courts, civil service and police.

At the turn of the century, when Ireland was grinding for another round with Britain, it was "The Castle" that men planned against.

It was "The Castle" that Irish soldiers fought behind hedges, in cottage ambushes and in swift, silent raids.

The Lighter Side
But Dublin Castle had its lighter side, too. It was the scene of pageants and gaiety as kings and queens, princes and dukes, fops and dandies of 18th century England danced and made merry in the huge, ornate state apartments.

Furnituremen Beat Navy Team 11-0

Wilson-Maier Furniture Company defeated the Navy, 11-0, in last night's Sanford Recreation Department's softball league encounter.

The furnituremen racked up five hits while the Navy men collected four hits.

Star of the game was Frank Stafford who punched a home run past the outfielder's reach.

Pitching for Wilson-Maier was Doc Merritt. Johnny Jones was the catcher for the winning team.

Tonight Robson Sporting Goods will meet the Phillips 66 Softball team.

Two Control Board Men Reappointed

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Gov. LeRoy Collins has reappointed two members of the State Board of Control, policy making body for Florida's colleges and universities.

Named to new four-year terms were Ralph L. Miller, Plymouth, representing the Fifth Congressional District, and James D. Camp Sr., Fort Lauderdale, representing the Sixth District.

Also re-appointed was Mrs. Elmer W. Boring, Wildwood, who was named for another term as District 11 member of the Sumner County Board of Social Welfare.

Governor Sees Nuclear Energy Use On Farms

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—The use of nuclear energy on the nation's farms in the near future was predicted by Florida Gov. LeRoy Collins in a speech here before a session of the American Seed Trade Association's annual convention.

"We have just begun to scratch the surface of the possibilities of nuclear energy" to drain swamps, create new fertile land, guard against freezes or develop new varieties of crops, Collins said.

On the "not-too-distant future," he said, one machine with "a single sweep over the field to do such things as planting, fertilizing and spraying" will be in common use.

Turning to other subjects, the governor charged that the public apathetic attitude is to blame for poor government. And putting in a plug for his home state, Collins said that Florida, with the missile test center at Cape Canaveral, likes to think of itself as "America's gateway to outer space."

Hough To Head Defense, Civilian Mobilization Office

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Eisenhower has named Civil Defense Administrator Leo A. Hough to be head of the new Office of Defense and Civilian Mobilization.

The new office will be set up July 1 with the merger of the Federal Civil Defense Administration and the Office of Defense Mobilization.

The White House said Gordon Gray, now head of defense mobilization, will succeed Robert Collins as the President's special assistant for national security affairs.

Hough, a former governor of Iowa, has been civil defense administrator for the past year.

Gray, former president of the University of North Carolina, was assistant defense secretary before becoming defense mobilizer. He also was assistant secretary and later secretary of the Army in the Truman administration.

Quinn Says Acting Field Unchanged

By ANTHONY QUINN
Written for UPI

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—New methods in acting have become as commonplace and as frequently changed as new models from Detroit. Hardly a moth goes by, it seems, without some new thespic messiah appearing to lead the faithful into a promised land of dramatic achievement.

At the risk of alienating quite a few friends and starting countless arguments, I would like to state that I don't think anything new has been added to acting technique in at least several centuries.

It would be foolish to say that acting hasn't changed. All one would have to do to disprove this would be to turn on a television set. The style of acting in movies made as recently as 18 and 20 years ago seems hopelessly florid and broad compared to the more restrained school of modern drama.

Restraint Performance
I recently completed a motion picture called "Hot Spot" for Hal Wallis at Paramount, in which Shirley Booth and I portray the parents of three children, enacted by Shirley MacLaine, Earl Holliman and Clint Kimbrough.

Throughout the production, I was conscious of the fact that the youngsters' performances, although excellent, were considerably more restrained than either Miss Booth's or my own. This is not, I am sure, from any acting "method," although Kimbrough is in graduate of the Actors Studio in New York, but surely a result of the fact that today's young generation is more restrained in speech and gesture than its predecessors.

In their own language, they like to play it "cool."

Behavior Changed?
The question this piece is to have acting styles changed or have styles in behavior changed? If a machine could be devised which would allow us to tune in, as with a television set, to the actions and conversations of people twenty years ago, would we not find that they were just as broad and florid in their behavior as the acting of the time was in its impersonation of life?

Acting—good acting—must always mirror life, and acting method will change as long as human behavior changes—which is constantly. The flamboyant acting styles of the Twenties mirrored the behavior of people in that era.

During the grim Thirties, we saw the start of the tightlipped school of acting. Now, when the younger generation has adopted a mood of repressed withdrawal, we see young actors and actresses who are withdrawn and repressed in their portrayals.

Methods will come and go, but acting remains now what it has always been. It is the ability of a performer to create a believable true-to-life portrait of the person he portrays.

RAIN INSURANCE
GUNTEN, Switzerland (UPI)—American ambassador to Switzerland Henry J. Taylor was assured today that if it rains during his July 4 garden party in Bern it will rain pennies from heaven. He insured the 1,000-guest party against rain for $5,000, which he planned to turn over to the University of Bern.

City Receives Lower Fire Insurance Rates

Word was received today from the Florida Inspection and Rating Bureau that the City of Sanford has been approved for a Class 3 rating for fire insurance premiums. This improved rating means dollars and cents saved to all property owners within the city limits effective Aug. 1, 1958.

Sanford insurance agents today announced that all insurance policies issued by them will be adjusted to the new rates on renewal.

A group of the local agents writing fire insurance coverage anticipated a flood of telephone calls relative to the new rates. Their announcement that the adjustment will be made on renewal, they said, might serve to inform policy holders of the action to be taken immediately.

According to the city's insurance agent, the savings will be approximately as follows: (1) Residential structure: Concrete block 11.1% Frame 13.7%

(2) Business structures: Brick 8.7% Frame 4.7% The establishment of the lower fire insurance rates is first started with a request from the city to the Southeastern Fire Underwriters to make a survey of the city and its facilities.

Water Supply 34% Fire Department 30% Fire Alarm 11% Police 11% Building Laws 6% Fire Prevention 6% Structural Conditions 14% Upon completion of the survey, the underwriters make a report to the Inspection and Rating Bureau for their approval. Under the deficiency point rating system, the reclassification places Sanford on a par with the best of the cities in its population size.

Cong. Syd Herlong To Seek Reelection

Fifth District Congressman A. Sydney Herlong Jr. announced today that he would again seek the Democratic nomination for that position in the September primaries. In making his announcement for re-election Herlong said he did so with the firm conviction that he was in an ideal position to give more effective service to the people of the Fifth District than at any other time during his tenure in Congress.

As the only Florida Congressman in history ever to serve on the powerful Ways and Means Committee, Herlong has a record of accomplishment both in the legislative field and in service to his constituents that is outstanding. His battles on the floor of the House and in Committee for sound, economical and efficient government have not only earned for him the high respect of his colleagues but have brought him into national wide prominence.

Herlong personally led the fight against a Federal "dole" system this year—and was successful in substituting a states' rights unemployment compensation extension bill authored by him. After his bill passed the House it was accepted by the Senate unanimously without the change of a single word. A rare accomplishment indeed.

Kiwanis Club Guest Describes Radio Isotopes

Seminole Memorial Hospital radiologist gave members of the Sanford Kiwanis Club a non-technical description of radio isotopes.

Dr. Ben Smaller explained that "isotopes means the same place—the place of the proton in the atom."

Describing the atom and its structure character, Dr. Smaller gave Kiwanis Club members, at their noon luncheon meeting, a capsule picture of radio activity explaining that the radioactive isotope came into being after World War II.

Dr. Smaller, transposing technical terms into laymen's language, described the three rays and their formation.

He said "We don't measure radiation in terms of weight but we do measure them in the number of particles."

"They can only be handled by qualified people," said Dr. Smaller and explained that isotopes cannot be handled without a license from the Atomic Energy Commission.

Isotopes are produced in a number of different ways and "up until a few years ago were handled as an experimental item in large centers for large areas."

We can now use them in almost any hospital since the Atomic Energy Commission is licensing radiologists on a local level, Dr. Smaller said.

Speaking on the use of the isotopes for medical treatment, Dr. Smaller stated that "they have been reduced to techniques safe to everyone concerned."

They can be administered in a cocktail or in a capsule, he said. Dr. Smaller was introduced by Dr. Leonard Munson, a member of the Kiwanis Club's public relations committee and program chairman for yesterday's meeting.

Dr. Munson, in his introduction, pointed out that Dr. Ben Smaller is a Fellow of the American College of Radiologists, a Diplomat of the American Board of Radiologists, is licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission, is a Fellow of the American College of Chest Physicians, and a Fellow of the American College of Chest Physicians.
