Midway arrest

SANFORD — Seminole County deputies assigned to District 2, combined to arrest a burglary suspect Thursday within 40 minutes of the reported crime.

Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough explained, Deputy Mike Nune had stopped Kenny Chisolm, 30, of 2410 Center Street, at approximately 11 a.m. yesterday. Nune was questioning Chisolm about a burglary just reported on Water Street in Midway.

During question, McDonough says Chisolm began to struggle with the deputy, who was forced to use his OC spray. Both Nune and Chisolm were reportedly hit with the spray, but Chisolm is said to have fled from the area. Additional deputies from District 2 arrived and conducted a search while paramedics treated Nune.

At 11:40 a.m., Lt. Terry Huffman, District 2 Commander, reportedly located Chisolm hiding in bushes between Randall and Water Streets in Midway.

Chisolm was arrested and charged with one count of burglary to a structure, resisting arrest with violence, and battery on a law enforcement officer.

Sheriff's office District 2 covers the areas just east and west of the Sanford City Limits.

E.B. Stowe surrounded by a few of the thousands of paintings which now hang in homes and offices across the country.

Beloved artist E.B. Stowe, dead at 100

By ROSE PFEIFFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — One of the most loved artists in Central Florida passed away Wednesday night. Edmund B. Stowe died at Hillhaven Healthcare Center at the age of 100.

“He was the most pleasant and happiest artist I have ever known,” commented Ashby Jones. Jones studied painting under Stowe from 1970 until 1985. “He was probably the most all-around artist of our time,” Jones continued, “anything you could think of, he would paint.”

Stowe's prominence was known not only in Sanford and Central Florida, but also in our nation's capital. One of his paintings started as a winner in a Hillhaven art and poetry contest in 1990, and eventually went to join other senior citizen art works on display at the U.S. Senate Office Building.

In the Daytona Beach area alone, Stowe at one time had 1,725 paintings hanging on the walls of major hotels, especially Holiday Inns.

His paintings have been displayed at various times over the years at Sanford City Hall, the former First Street Gallery, and many other buildings.

Stowe was born in 1894 in Mount Dora. After living in Coconut Grove and Jacksonville, Florida, he moved to Kingman, Arizona for a short period, finally moving to Sanford in 1915.

When he first arrived in Sanford, Stowe was a celery and flora farmer. He reportedly did not take up his painting until after his retirement.

On Aug. 30 this past year, a special 100th birthday celebration was held for him at Hillhaven. The event was marked with a large birthday cake and an official proclamation honoring the artist presented by Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith.

An estimated 70 persons turned out for the event, many of whom were prominent artists in their own right and former Stowe students.

At the time, Stowe wore a headset to improve his hearing, and his eyesight was not as good as it once was, but he was described as still with it, still very LONGWOOD — Secured in the back seat of a police cruiser with his arms behind his back in handcuffs, Anthony Correa should not have been able to get away from officers.

But he did. The Longwood man, who was arrested after he entered the residence he shared with a woman after an injunction had been served to prevent him from going to the home, apparently kicked his way out of the car.

On Thursday night at about 8, Longwood Police and Seminole County Sheriff's deputies served him with the injunction at his place of employment and told him not to return home unless he first informed police. He told them he would be working until 8 p.m. and would call them at that time.

At 7:45 p.m. officers were called to the house where the girlfriend said he had entered the home and had started throwing things around. Police found him outside, astride a bicycle, leaning against a pole.

Officers reported that Correa offered a sugges-

Dad, son placed on probation for covering up a murder

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An Oviedo man and his son were placed on two years probation Thursday for covering up a murder, destroying evidence and lying about it to officials.

Wilfred (Will) Roger, 75, and Kenneth Roger, 30, were also ordered to perform 40 hours of community service and write letters of apology to the victim's family.

The two men admitted seeing the body of David Richmond Sept. 6, 1992 after Michele Roger stabbed him in the condominium the couple shared. She alleged she was suffering from battered spouse syndrome and acted in self-defense when she stabbed Richmond.

Roger, who worked as a topless dancer at the time, sought her family's help after the stabbing. She was convicted of second degree murder last year and sentenced to 17 years in prison. The case is being appealed.

The elder man admitted removing Richmond's body from the murder scene with his son's help. Will Roger then took the body to a vacant lot, burned it, then mixed the ashes with cement and formed the mixture into blocks. Some days later Roger and his son, dumped the blocks in the Atlantic Ocean off New Smyrna Beach.

The two men were also sentenced to one year probation for failing to report a death. In December, Agnes Roger, 65, was placed on one year probation and ordered to do 50 hours of community service for failure to report the death of her daughter's boyfriend. The Roger family told Richmond's parents and investigators the last time they saw the aspiring musician, he was headed to south Florida to do cleanup work in the wake of Hurricane Andrew.

In another highly publicized case, Eric Kaplan was denied a new trial and will remain in jail until his sentencing for attempted murder in the shooting of his political opponent's wife.

Despite claiming he was insane at the time of the incident, Kaplan was convicted of attempted first degree murder, armed burglary to a dwelling and shooting into an occupied building for shooting into the home of Rep. Bob Starks (R-Winter Park), injuring his wife, Judith, on Sept. 27, 1992. He will be sentenced April 13.

Kaplan was the Democratic candidate running against Starks for the legislative seat.

Renaissance Festival benefits needy

By VICKI DeBORNER

LAKE MARY — You'll have a chance this weekend to return to the 15th century in order to help those in need now.

At L&L Acres Ranch near Heathrow, the second annual Central Florida Renaissance Festival, will take place Feb. 25 and 26.

The event started last year as a way to make money for charity. Hundreds of performers and merchants helped in the effort.

This year's event is even bigger. The event producer, Central Florida Festivals Inc., a not-for-profit corporation, will help to restock local food banks and raise money for local schools, charities and the arts in Seminole County.

The festival will recreate the excitement of a Renaissance Village Faire with craft shops, games, rides and a full complement of continuous entertainment featuring minstrels, jugglers, dancers, magicians and jesters.

There will be a human chess match, a full combat joust, a royal parade, theatrical plays and much more.

In addition, there will be hundreds of craft demonstrations throughout the weekend event.

Today is to be a special "Kids' Day" at the festival. Students from Seminole, Orange,

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Old habits are hard to break

FORT LAUDERDALE — Two teen-agers, accused of stealing 25 cars, found themselves without bus fare after a court hearing. So they stole another car, police said.

The boys, ages 14 and 15, helped themselves to a car two blocks from the Broward County courthouse, then drove by Police Detective John Curcio.

"They know me in the neighborhood, and as soon as I went by them, they took off," Curcio said.

The teens, who had been joined by two others, crashed the car into a fence, he said. Two fled, the two who had been in court Wednesday were caught.

The 14-year-old was charged with auto theft and fleeing a police officer. The 15-year-old was charged with violating a home detention pickup order, auto theft and flight.

The boys were turned over to the Broward Juvenile Detention Center pending another court hearing.

Risk manager embezzles county funds

GREEN COVE SPRINGS — A Clay County official, who allegedly used $100,000 in county funds to buy four vintage cars and jewelry, has been arrested on embezzlement charges.

Rafael R. Diaz, a former New York City prosecutor, was freed on $100,000 bond Wednesday after being arrested Tuesday. He was immediately suspended from his $40,000-a-year job as the county's insurance risk manager.

Diaz, 39, is cooperating with investigators and told them they could recover the two Corvettes and two BMW's and about $20,000 he had in two bank accounts.

Investigators determined that between October 1993 and last month, Diaz made at least 30 deposits of county insurance payments into two phony county bank accounts that he controlled, said Assistant State Attorney Timothy Collins.

Diaz has worked for the county since October 1991, administering the county's insurance program.

Group offering reward for dog torturer

PALATKA — Whether you call him Dawg or Prince, a mixed beagle skinned alive is drawing support from across the country in the form of donations for his vet bill and additions to a reward fund.

A New York-based animal protection group pledged $5,000 to the reward fund for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever was responsible for skinning the dog Sunday.

In addition, Carla Hutchins, supervisor of the Putnam County Humane Society, said the organization had been besieged by offers of help by phone and apparently by mail.

"The lady from our local post office said I needed to come up there and get the mail because it wouldn't fit in our mail box," Ms. Hutchins said.

The dog's owner, a 12-year-old boy, found Dawg tied to his chain in his dog house about 2 p.m. Sunday. Dawg's skin was hanging over his rump.

On Sunday, the dog was taken to veterinarian Gary Shelton in Interlachen, who reattached the skin with more than 125 stitches.

Ms. Hutchins said Dawg, renamed Prince following the ordeal, may need more surgery to recover from the injuries.

"Right now, he's on a lot of antibiotics. He has drain tubes in to help the infection drain out. He's doing good," Ms. Hutchins said.

She said the dog will be released soon from the veterinary hospital in Interlachen and will stay at the Humane Society during his recovery.

"His medical bills will be staggering," she said.

The society and the Putnam County Sheriff's Office are investigating the attack.

When Dawg fully recovers, Ms. Hutchins said, she hoped he will join his family, though she said she doesn't want to return the dog to the same neighborhood.

Ms. Hutchins said the investigator who picked up the dog renamed him Prince.

"He is named Prince for the way he reacted after all this happened to him," she said.

Karen Kirshner, a spokeswoman for the Fort Washington, N.Y.-based Pet Saver Foundation, said the organization was outraged after seeing a television news report and pledged a $5,000 reward to add to the $1,500 already collected by the Humane Society.

"We immediately reacted to the horror of the skinning of this dog," she said. "We're trying to draw attention to this cruelty and make people realize that is not OK and we are going to do something about it."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Donations can be made for the dog's care, or for the reward, to the Putnam County Humane Society, in care of Prince, P.O. Box 188, Hollister, Fla., 32147

Three little pigs find shelter

More than dogs, cats available at HSSC

By SUEAN WILSON
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Lions and tigers and bears may not sing in harmony with the Wizard of Oz but they might just get a welcome mat at the Humane Society of Seminole County.

Most people believe that the Humane Society aides in restoring health to injured dogs and cats and finding homes for them. Although this is true, the organization offers more than just your average feline and mutt for adoption.

Steve Mason, president of the Seminole County Humane Society Board of Directors, recently spoke of the three pot-bellied pigs that have become residents there. With bulging bellies leaving more marks in the sand than their hoofs, these creatures could scare any big, bad wolf away from their domain.

Othello, otherwise known as Bacon Bits, played cheerfully at his home near the main building. A few grunts and a squeal or two sent this little muddy animal rolling and pushing his little red ball. His other friends, fellow pigs, Baby and Ophelia, lead a more sedentary life with a little stick (cane, wooden house, got a little carried away with "The Three Little Pigs" story) and a load of hay for the ever-so frequent nap. All this eating and walking around, not to mention smiling at onlookers can get a tad tiring.

Betty Munos, director of the Seminole County Humane Society shelter in Sanford, commented about the wide varieties of fine, furry and stick friends that have graced their humble abode. "We have had turtles, ducks, snakes, guinea pigs, ponies, rabbits, iguanas, geckos, squirrels, possums, and raccoons, as well as dogs and cats." She said the capacity is for 200 creatures yet presently the shelter houses some 450/115 represent dogs. Munos continued by saying, "We have made great strides since the fire. There is still a lot that needs changing but considering what we got to work with now I think we've done a good job. The health of the animals is better now than a year ago."

An architectural blueprint is affixed to the railing at the entrance of the shelter. Munos further commented about the work planned. "Right now the site work is going on," she said. "They are preparing the ground and next, hooking up to city water. We hope this will be finished by the end of the month."

She shared information about the three phases of work scheduled. "The initial phase is for 80 to 85 kennels that will house 340 to 360 dogs. Then an office complex is set to be built. Last, a cat area will be built." She emphasized the need for such a large facility is partly due to the fact that they care for sick, abused and pregnant animals, and so euthanasia (putting animals to sleep) is practiced. The only exception is if the veterinarian determines for medical reasons the animal's quality of life would not be good." As Munos further emphasized, "the vet puts them to sleep, we don't."

Assisting with this program of caring for the animals are eight staff personnel and many volunteers. dog food, cat food and blankets are always present on the organization's wish list. Volunteers work whatever hours they can. As Munos put it, "we take help whenever and wherever we can get it." Some of these volunteers are from the community while others are sentenced to community service from Health & Rehabilitative Services or the county from probation orders. The facility is closed on Tuesday and Wednesday but remains open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on all other days. They are located at 2800 County Home Road which is at the side of Flea World. For further information about the shelter, call 323-8685.

Polls show residents divided over tax cut, lower deficit

By The Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Floridians are evenly divided when asked to choose between lower federal taxes and a lower budget deficit, according to a poll by University of Florida economists.

The poll, conducted throughout this month, found that 49 percent of surveyed Floridians want lower taxes by slashed federal spending; 51 percent want the deficit reduced.

The size of the proposed cuts didn't affect the responses, said UF research economist Dick Scoggins.

"A cut in the deficit represents a cut in future taxes, so I interpret these results as saying that the public is largely indifferent between getting their money now or getting their money, plus interest, later," he said.

While the overall survey group was split, some groups showed distinct preferences.

"It is particularly interesting that respondents over 65 years of age tend to prefer a deficit reduction to a tax cut," Scoggins said.

"We also found that college-educated people tend to favor a deficit reduction," he said.

The poll also found that respondents who described themselves as strongly Republican tended to prefer a tax cut and those who described themselves as strongly Democrat tended to prefer deficit reduction.

Meanwhile, consumer confidence drifted slightly lower in February, with the Florida Consumer Confidence Index registering a 93, compared to January's 94. UF's Bureau of Economic and Business Research reported Thursday.

Amendment would require vote for new tax increases

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A two-thirds vote of the 120-member House and 40-member Senate would be required for new taxes under a proposed constitutional amendment approved by a Senate panel.

The Ways and Means Committee approved a joint resolution (CS-SJR 124) aimed at responding to the anti-tax mood of the public — and making it tougher for lawmakers to pass tax increases.

Senators split along party lines in approving the measure 25-7, with all Republicans voting in favor and most Democrats opposing it. At least three Democrats supported the measure.

Sen. Locke Burt, the sponsor of the proposal, said if lawmakers didn't place the measure on the 1995 ballot, the public might place even tighter reins on the Legislature.

One proposal that the state

"I am not trying with this amendment to destroy representative democracy. I am trying to preserve it."

-Sen. Locke Burt, R-Ormond

Supreme Court did not allow on the 1994 ballot would have required voter approval of all new taxes.

"I am not trying with this amendment to destroy representative democracy," said Burt, R-Ormond Beach. "I am trying to preserve it."

Voters last year approved a constitutional amendment that tied the growth in state government spending to the average increase in personal income.

Burt's proposal would apply to specific tax bills considered by the Legislature.

Humans started spoiling paradise thousands of years ago

By PAUL STEEDMAN
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Prehistoric humans brought extinction to hundreds of bird species on the pristine islands of the Pacific thousands of years before Europeans arrived there, a researcher reports today.
A study of 4,000-year-old bird fossils shows that as many as 1,600 bird species disappeared within centuries of the first arrival of humans on the tropical islands of the Pacific Ocean, says David W. Steedman of the New York State Museum.
In a report in the journal Science, Steedman said the fossil study shows that prehistoric pioneers, some of whom paddled outrigger canoes for thousands of miles to settle in remote islands, brought with them pigs, rats and dogs that contributed to the extinction of many birds.
"By the time Capt. (James) Cook sailed the Pacific, most of the bird species that had been there were a thing of the past," said Steedman.

Cook was a British naval officer who explored Pacific islands from New Zealand to Hawaii. His exploration led to European colonization on many of the islands. Steedman said his studies of the fossils show that the mass extinction of birds had taken place hundreds of years before Cook's voyage in the mid-1700s.
Humans arrived in the Hawaiian Islands 1,500 to 2,000 years ago and the fossils show that at least 60 species of birds were extinct by the time of the European presence. An additional 30 to 25 species have been lost since, said Steedman.
Prehistoric settlement in New Zealand led to the extinction of 44 species before Cook. Easter Island, a remote bit of land in Eastern Polynesia, was among "the most severely affected by humans."

Before humans arrived about 1,800 years ago, the island was forested heavily. The forests were gone within a thousand years and so were all but one of 30 bird species.
The dramatic effect of humans is well documented on the Galapagos, an island group off the coast of Ecuador that was not inhabited until after European discovery in 1535.
Before humans came, said Steedman, only three species became extinct over a 4,000- to 8,000-year period in the Galapagos. But in the last 400 years, he said, 21 to 24 species of birds have become extinct.
Steedman said this proves that without humans, the rate of extinction among the tropical islands of the Pacific was very, very low.

Violence rises with prison population

By ADAM VERMANN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — As Florida's prison system grows, so too does the violence between inmates and the people hired to guard them.

Assaults by inmates on prison staff and on each other has increased steadily since 1991, figures from the Department of Corrections show. The state's prison population, meanwhile, has increased 21 percent from 48,333 four years ago to 58,000 in 1994.

During the same period, assaults by prisoners on guards increased 34 percent from 688 incidents in 1991 to 923 in last year. Inmate-on-inmate assaults increased by 14 percent from 1,507 incidents to 1,715.

With the Legislature expected to pass a host of crime-fighting measures this year, guards and prison officials warned Thursday that unless they get the resources to control inmates a dangerous environment behind bars could turn lethal.

"The type of individuals we're getting are much more violent than when I started working 18 years ago," Sgt. John Ryan, a corrections officer at Madison Correctional Institution, told the Senate panel overseeing criminal justice spending.

The panel's chairman, Sen. Charlie Crist, would like to eliminate much of the recreational amenities used by prisoners to control inmates and keep them occupied.

"Do you think that we are sending the wrong message when it is that we must entertain or recreate the inmate or they'll be bad?" Crist, R-St. Petersburg, asked Ryan.

"I don't think we're sending the wrong message," Ryan responded. "You have to give them something to do."

Crist suggested replacing basketball, weightlifting, television and other activities with vocations such as plumbing, carpentry and farming to keep prisoners busy.

Ryan said recreational activities reduce the stress among inmates and keep them from taking it out on each other or guards. He said he would like to see prisoners more self-sustaining with prisoners doing the work but said the state hasn't done much to make that a reality.

"I'd rather have them out there pumping the iron than in the dormitory punching on me," Ryan said.
Lawmakers are considering legislation to keep felons locked up longer, including mandatory prison terms for violent offenders and requiring inmates to serve at least 85 percent of their sentences.

Another measure increases the legal cap on prison capacity from 150 percent of design capacity to 180 percent.

Senate leaders, who say crime is their top priority, have said they would provide the money to keep the prisons safe for guards and inmates alike.

But the union that represents prison guards said the current staffing in prisons isn't even adequate. Ryan said one guard will watch as many as 150 inmates inside a prison dorm at night.

Bob Sheehan, president of the state Police Benevolent Association, asked the Senate panel to increase wages for prison guards. An officer who earns the minimum salary and heads a family of four qualifies for food stamps, he said.

Salaries for guards range from $17,930 to $59,773 a year, according to the Department of Corrections.

Be a donor

We have no doubt that people were touched by the story of Breanne Anderson in Tuesday's Sanford Herald. The story written for the Herald by Jim Shupe, was entitled "Tribute to Courage. Girl with spirit is winning fight for life."

While the courage of this teen-age girl in overcoming life-threatening illnesses (plural) is remarkable, and worthy of cheers from all of us, one paragraph in Shupe's story stood out as a message to all of us.

Regarding a needed bone marrow transplant, the story said, in part: "...the success of a bone marrow transplant depended upon finding a donor with a perfect match. Even if such a donor were found, survival rates hovered at less than 50 percent."

It continues, "Her doctors searched nationwide and found over 90 possible donors. ...The donor was willing to undergo the minor surgical procedure to donate the precious bone marrow, and...etc.)"

Young Breanne appears now to be making a remarkable recovery, and is looking forward to returning to school. The story appears to be moving forward to a happy conclusion.

What it shows is the need to become actively involved in helping others. In this particular situation, doctors found more than 90 persons willing to be donors, who matched the girl's specific requirements. These were among possibly hundreds of people who have volunteered to be donors across the nation.

The problem is that, not hundreds, but tens of thousands of people should be on the donor lists.

The same holds true with organ donors, and blood donors.

Many don't even want to think about it. But let's face it. Some people, try as they might, may not be around as long as they might wish. If they would be willing to donate part of their bodies to the medical profession, a life may be saved, and that person will have left more behind than descendants or physical property. He or she will be helping another life continue.

Even if a long and healthy life is forthcoming, there is always a need for blood donors, and, in the case here, bone marrow donors.

Yes, it may seem as though everyone is always saying to you, "give, give, give." During World War II the saying was, "Give 'til it hurts."

We agree with the use of the word "give," here. GIVE it some serious thought, and GIVE it some action.

What more could a person give than a continuing life for another human being. Be a donor.

GOP challenge is Clinton's best bet

Despite a deserved pausing in the press for staff incompetence in vetting his surgeon general nominee, President Clinton's polls are rising. Why? Because at last he seems to be fighting for things he believes in.

In an amazing feat of political jujitsu, Clinton has managed to turn the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster from a disaster into a wedge slammed deep in the Republican Party's deepest fault line, the abortion issue.

He can make further hay by showing that he is actually trying to limit teen pregnancy and make abortion "rare." For the last decade, even with Republicans in charge of the White House, the number of abortions performed in America has held steady at 1.5 million.

Clinton also has helped himself by threatening vetoes to block the GOP Congress from dismantling key items in his legislative record -- his 100,000 cops anti-crime plan and his low-interest direct-loan program for college students -- and from impairing his authority as commander-in-chief.

A new Times-Mirror survey shows that 51 percent of Americans can't cite a single thing Clinton has accomplished. But, now that these items are under attack by Republicans, Clinton has a chance to wage a campaign for them that will remind people that he has a record, after all.

On crime, for instance, only 4 percent remembered that Clinton and Congress passed a bill last year, but recent headlines played up Clinton's vow not to let the GOP do away with the police protection last year's bill provided.

In truth, Clinton's five-year, $9.5 billion measure pays for far less than 100,000 full-time cops at $50,000 a year -- 35,000 cops is more like it -- but $10 billion in GOP no-strings "block grants" to mayors for anti-crime programs would surely provide even fewer, although more cops on the beat is a proven way to stop crime.

At last he seems to be fighting for things he believes in.

House Republicans claimed in recent debate that they were demonstrating trust for local officials, but last year House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., argued that federal money provided to mayors would simply fund "pork and patronage."

Almost certainly, Clinton is going to win the police fight in the Senate, and probably will be able to claim in 1996 that he is responsible for passing not one, but two "tough" crime measures.

Similarly, Clinton has promised to defend student loans, and has adopted a new way of campaigning among middle-class voters by appearing at community colleges for round-table discussions and then a speech.

In the Times-Mirror poll, not a single voter mentioned that Clinton had accomplished anything in education or demonstrated assertiveness in foreign policy, so his fights with the GOP in these areas are a boon.

Clinton also plans to draw a line in the sand on welfare reform by insisting that states be required to impose a work requirement on recipients, whereas Republicans want only to mandate that states not furnish aid to unwed mothers under 18. Aides say the fight will make Clinton look "tougher on work, gentler on kids" than the GOP.

G is for gun; keep it hidden

WASHINGTON — For once, it never got to the bad part.

So this week at Princeton Elementary School in Prince George's County, Md., all 18 children in Mrs. P's kindergarten class are alive to enjoy their handcrafted cutouts. Eighteen whole and healthy kids can still practice words that begin with Mrs. P's "letter of the week."

No school custodian has nightmares about having scrubbed stubborn red stains from a classroom floor.

It never got to the bad, bloody part in Mrs. P's class earlier in the month. So this lucky kindergarten teacher — who was stunned to discover one of her students furtively showing friends a loaded .380 semiautomatic handgun — can't even visualize the tragedy that might have been.

"I can't imagine it because it didn't happen," explains Mrs. P, 37, who asked that her name not be revealed. "I'm glad I'm naive that way. ... Maybe if it had happened to another teacher, I'd be more scared or angry."

Before that Friday, Mrs. P, who just started teaching full time last year, had never seen or held a gun. So at first, she assumed the dull, black object handed to her by the 5-year-old — "a quiet boy who didn't realize he could hurt somebody" — had to be a toy.

But the "toy" was heavy enough to make her suspicious. She and the child were holding hands, walking to the principal's office, when the truth hit her.

"If I'd known at first that it was real," she says, and that, according to police, a 5-year-old could be strong enough to pull the trigger, "I might have panicked."

Last week, Patricia Lynn Walton, the child's mother and owner of the gun, was charged with two counts of violating a state law forbidding a minor to have access to guns. She could face a $1,000 fine on each count. If convicted, Walton should pay the $2,000 fine with a beatific smile on her face. Whatever your circumstances, a couple thou is a pittance compared with what you would pay, year after agonized year, if your child, or someone else's child, had been shot.

Even when it ends happily, the story of a 5-year-old bringing a semiautomatic to school evokes vivid, horrific images. The only person I know who heard about it and didn't imagine a tragedy is the teacher whose actions may have averted it.

I imagined it. Just as I did a few months ago, when I read that a first-grader unknowingly took a gun to school after his dad, a cop, forgot to remove it from the child's book bag.

No one was hurt. But what I imagined made me shiver.

It reminds me of what my younger son, now 8, used to say when we'd go to the movies. Whenever a scary, potentially bloody scene began, Darrell would cover his eyes and whisper, "Tell me when the bad part is over."

But sometimes, imagining the bad part is as bad as seeing it.

Today, just scanning the newspaper is a temptation to cover one's eyes. What's reported often is so gruesome, so off-the-charts awful, many of us feel powerless in the face of it.

But the often tragic result of a small children getting their hands on their parents' guns is one horror show we never have to see. This one bad thing we can stop.

Do you have a gun? Do you know someone who does? If so, have you made sure that it's absolutely inaccessible to children?

If you haven't, you're setting the stage for a scene that no amount of eye-covering can erase. Once you get to the bad part you will never forget what you see.

Or that you could have prevented it.

Asked what might have happened that Friday, Mrs. P — whose blessed naivete won't let her envision such evil — said only this:

"I have three children, and I think I'm important to them. The 17 other children in that class have families, too. The boy walked to school with the gun; there were kids out there."

She stopped talking. But the picture was clear.

Oh, Mrs. P said one more thing. Asked what the "letter of the week" was that students were studying that Friday, she hesitated, then almost laughed over life's weird irony.

"It was G," she said.

It never got to the bad, bloody part in Mrs. P's class earlier in the month.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Socialism thrives in the District

There is only one sure way for the District of Columbia to crawl out of the economic morass in which it is about to suffocate: It must adopt the Spear Foundation's three-step program for fiscal health and spiritual happiness.

First, the city council must acknowledge in an official resolution that it is, like the old Soviet Union and the nations of Eastern Europe, just one more failed socialist experiment.

Second, the mayor and city council must throw themselves on the mercy of the Congress and plead for help on the grounds that it is at least as deserving as Russia. ... and other recovering socialist governments receiving U.S. aid.

Third, it must adopt a free market economy.

I am well aware that this is a demanding rehabilitation program for a regime that gives new meaning to the cliché "battered by bureaucracy." Depending on the source you consult, the District's work force is somewhere between 42,000 and 50,000 — about eight percent of the total population. By way of contrast, Chicago, five times larger than Washington, somehow manages with about 10,000 fewer civil servants, Baltimore, with 120,000 more residents, gets by with 20,000 fewer city employees.

Reported the Washington Post in July, 1991: "Someone — a father, a nephew, a grandmother — in one of every six households in the District gets a paycheck from the city."

Free market reform will thus be painful, but it is utterly necessary if Washington is ever to regain its fiscal footing.

Schools are in such a state of disrepair that some are on the verge of being declared fire hazards. Student test scores are low. The dropout rate is high.

There is one category, though, in which D.C. is among the nation's leaders: One in eight residents is in prison or jail, or on probation or parole. Indeed, there are so many "ex-offenders" in the city that recently elected Mayor Marion Barry campaigned on the promise to create an "office of ex-offenders' affairs." It is a cause dear to his heart, perhaps because he is an ex-offender himself, having served time for cocaine use.

I haven't the space to impart the true flavor of life in this tarnished town, but let me try to give you just a taste:

... While seeking higher taxes on parking, cigarettes, gasoline and health care, former mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly hired a makeup artist to powder her nose for photo ops. Kelly also kept a round-the-clock security detail that cost $1 million.

... With coffers running dry in 1994, the council doubled some parking meter rates from $1 to $2 per hour, requiring visitors to carry about a pound of quarters for a short stay.

... With the school system in terrible disarray, the District Board of Education, already the highest paid in the nation, last fall gave itself an 11 percent cost of living pay raise. When the story broke, some members refused to accept the hike, then quietly took the raise after the controversy cooled.

Many have offered suggestions for Washington's salvation. Newt Gingrich wants to cede it back to Maryland, which donated the land on which the city sits 200 years ago. Patrick Buchanan believes it should become a federal territory. Jack Kemp has recommended it be relieved of federal taxes and turned into an enterprise zone along the lines of Hong Kong.

I like that. But first it must recant its socialist past.

craftsmen, historians, actors, cultural artisans, photographers, opera performers, storytellers and authors are just a few of the groups that will be invited to perform, exhibit or display their art programs. Exhibitor display areas will be located on either side of the concession area and the stage will be backed by a small lake on the property. There are also children's activities, play areas, including a moon walk and a bungee wall, and workshops planned.

The big draw for the event, which will run from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., will be performances by America, Orleans, Average White Band, Poco and Ambrosia, who will provide live music to suit a wide range of musical tastes. Orleans will open the show at 11, and America will be the last act, at 4:30.

The festival is expected to draw more than 10,000 people, which is a fraction of the 70,000 total attendance at the Lake Mary Heathrow Festival of the Arts, also held on the site. The cost of admittance is $6, $15 day of show, $3 for children under 12. Parking is free.

Ocoee, Lake and Volusia counties will take part in the special day, which includes educational demonstrations that are not open to the general public. Among the demonstrations will be blacksmithing, jewelry making, leatherworking, beadmaking, glass blowing, weaving, pottery making and lacemaking.

Proceeds from Kid's Day activities will be distributed to local children's charitable organizations. This year the organizers of the Renaissance Festival have added a "Kids' Village" that is sponsored by the Merriday Montessori School.

The village will feature a petting zoo, pony rides, stage entertainment and a variety of games and activities for the youngest crowd.

There will be "Wee Renaissance Games" where everyone is a winner. There will be storytelling, puppet shows, juggling, magic and more. Proceeds from the "Kids' Village" will help to integrate children with disabilities into mainstream classroom environments.

Organizers hope to top last year's attendance of several thousand visitors. Festival hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Feb. 25 and 26. Admission is free for children under 12 and seniors 55 and older. A coupon worth $1 will be given to all festival patrons who bring a non-perishable food item for local food banks.

active, and continually surprising everyone with the paintings he is still creating.

The 100th birthday drew congratulatory messages from such persons as President Bill Clinton, former presidents Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford, George Bush and Jimmy Carter, Florida Governor Lawton Chiles and senators Connie Mack and Bob Graham.

The day following the 100th birthday party, a group of local artists took Stowe out on the St. Johns River on board a pontoon boat for a two-hour ride at which time they traveled through the beautiful areas of the river which will remain forever through his art.

This year, the newly reformed Sanford/Seminole Art Association dedicated its first yearbook to Stowe.

tion as to what officers might do with the court-ordered injunction and pointed a finger at them to emphasize the point. One of the officers grabbed his arm and secured both ends behind his back with handcuffs. He placed him in the back of the cruiser and returning to the house to speak with the girlfriend.

When he came out of the house he noted the back passenger window of the vehicle was broken out and that Correa was missing.

"It would take quite some force to kick out the window like that," said Lt. Bruce Yelvington of the Longwood Police this morning. "We still don't know for sure how he did it. No one saw him do it."

Police and sheriff's department K-9 units were called to search for him to no avail. "The longer he is missing, the higher the likelihood that he has left the area," said Yelvington. "We're still looking, but we haven't gotten him yet."

Yelvington speculated that Correa is no longer wearing the handcuffs. "He's probably had someone cut them off by this time," he said. Damage to the police car is estimated at about $600.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Giving Americans what they want

WASHINGTON — House Republicans say the $17.5 billion they would slice from housing, clean-water projects and other programs is the beginning of their effort to give Americans the leaner, more efficient government they want.

But Democrats say the historic reductions approved by GOP-dominated subcommittees would hit poor people especially hard, and let majority Republicans use much of the money to finance tax reductions for the well-to-do.

Gramm to run for president

DALLAS — Fresh from a record-breaking fund-raiser, Texas GOP Sen. Phil Gramm is jumping into the 1996 presidential race with a vow to balance the budget in one term and "tell Americans the truth about the dangers we face as a nation."

The 52-year-old Democrat-turned-Republican was scheduled to formally announce his candidacy today in College Station, where he taught economics at Texas A&M University before being elected to Congress in 1978.

Gramm warmed up for his announcement with a $4.1 million fund-raiser Thursday night in Dallas, easily breaking his own $2.1 million record for an individual campaign event.

WORLD BRIEFS

Hottest Issue

OTTAWA — It's impossible to spend more than 30 minutes in Canada and not end up in a discussion about Quebec independence, the hottest issue in this cold land. President Clinton knows that.

That's no doubt why he plunged directly into those icy waters during his speech to the Canadian Parliament Thursday. Gingerly, but nonetheless clearly, he came down firmly on the side of a united Canada.

Prime Minister Jean Chretien was delighted.

The Quebec separatists were not.

Conference kicked off

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Government and industry officials from the world's seven richest nations kick off a conference today seeking to eliminate gridlock on the global information superhighway.

Vice President Al Gore is representing the United States at the three-day Group of Seven gathering, which also includes Canada, France, Germany, Britain, Italy and Japan. European Union President Jacques Santer is the host.

Some 45 top executives from such corporate giants as IBM, Time Warner and Walt Disney Co. will trade ideas at a roundtable discussion Saturday — making this the first G-7 event in which business leaders will share the stage with politicians.

From Associated Press reports

Speaking for the high court

By NICHOLAS CARROLL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court rookies seldom speak for the high court on the most divisive cases. But Stephen G. Breyer — the newest justice — proved the exception this week.

Typically, new justices are assigned to work in such legal backwaters as workers' compensation, trucking regulation and maritime law.

Breyer, however, wrote for the court as it ruled that federal judges should give state prisoners the benefit of the doubt when they are not sure if procedural errors in criminal trials helped bring about the guilty verdict.

Such cases don't attract much public attention, but at the nation's highest court they are among the most ideologically tinged.

Breyer was considered up to the task.

"He's comfortable. He fits in well," said Bruce Fein, a conservative commentator and court watcher. "In terms of collective leadership, Breyer could become an utterly critical vote."

The 6-3 decision making it easier for state inmates to win new trials probably won't affect many prisoners.

But the tone of Breyer's opinion marks a significant change from the court's recent hostility to such appeals to federal judges, known as habeas corpus petitions.

Defendants convicted in state courts, including many awaiting execution, routinely seek help from federal judges, contending that their prosecution violated a federal constitutional right.

A series of recent high court rulings had decried repetitive filings of such petitions as abuses by prisoners, particularly those seeking to prevent their execution. These decisions had curtailed the right of prisoners to habeas corpus petitions in federal court.

Rather than emphasize the blizzard of paperwork filed by criminals who turn into jailhouse lawyers, Breyer highlighted the importance of federal judges in guaranteeing fair trials in state courts.

HARTFORD, Conn. — Dino Radja scored 27 points and Boston shut down Shaquille O'Neal for most of the second half as the Celtics edged Orlando 119-117 Thursday night for their first win over the Magic this season.

How to save time Helpful tips for families on the go

CONSUMER

HUGHES/
GREGG

Could you use an extra 15 minutes or half hour each day? Unfortunately no one can give you extra time. However, the way you choose to use time can make a difference in how much time you "seem" to have.

Here are some time-saving ideas that you might find helpful:

• Avoid morning confusion: lay out clothes the night before for yourself and your small children. Teach your older children to do this for themselves. Pack the diaper bag, your brief case or tote bag the night before so it's ready to carry out the door. Prepare lunches the night before and refrigerate. Then, set the table for breakfast.

• Have a daily 10 to 15 minute pick up around the house involving the whole family. Have everyone clean up and put away items. Use comforters on beds to make bedmaking easier.

• Save work and time on the laundry. Provide two hampers for dirty clothes — one for light and one for dark-colored dirty clothes. Have a laundry tote for each family member and place clean folded clothes into these so each member can store their clean clothes without too much confusion. Mark clothing for each child with a different colored marker to make getting things back to the right person easier.

• Help kids help themselves. Hang clothes, hats, and coats on low hooks where kids can reach them. Store mittens etc. in a basket or container beneath the coats within easy reach. Place plastic containers of milk or juice on a low refrigerator shelf where your child can reach it. Place a paper cup dispenser at a child level too.

• Save phone time by getting an answering machine and screening calls. Call people back when it is more convenient. Unplug the phone during busy times. Don't hesitate to tell a caller that you are in the middle of something and will need to call that person later.

• Trim minutes at meal time by planning each meal on a note card. Keep a file of family favorite meal plans. Then shuffle the cards to take advantage of grocery store specials. Save leftovers in either meal size or serving size plastic freezer bags. Then you can sap an entire family meal or provide an individual serving when needed.

• Save shopping time by planning errands geographically. Then you won't have to back track, and you will get everything done in one trip. Use the mail and phone to order items you need. Carry a list of chores and items you need to purchase. Be sure to include sizes, colors, and other requirements on your list. During spare moments take care of jobs that don't take much time. Carry a book or stationery to catch up on reading or to write letters any time you must wait for an appointment.

The most important time management hint is to decide what's most important in your life and make sure you spend time on that.

Teen's curiosity causes lingering grown-up guilt

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am one guilt-ridden woman.

Twenty-three years ago, when I was 13 years old, I fondled a 4-year-old boy while I was baby-sitting him. This memory has been haunting me ever since. I knew it was wrong, but I was curious, and I can't get this incident out of my mind. This guilt is unbearable. I am not sure if it adversely affected the boy or not. I haven't seen him since the incident. Nothing like this has happened before or since.

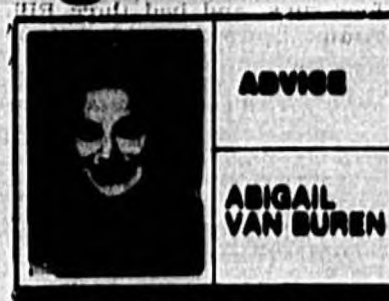

I am happily married and the mother of two children. I operate a thriving business, and am afraid of the embarrassment this may cause me and my family should anyone find out. Part of me wants to confront him, and tell him how awful I feel for what I did. I have asked God's forgiveness, but how can I expect God to forgive me if I can't forgive myself? Abby, please don't suggest counseling; I can't tell another person what I did.

Have any of your readers ever been taken advantage of by a babysitter? I need to know how to right this wrong.

NO NAME, NO CITY
DEAR NO NAME: You are suffering needlessly. I urge you to stop beating yourself up over that childhood experience.

Because after 23 years you still feel guilty, my advice is to consult a therapist. You will not be the first person to seek professional help for a nagging problem such as this.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you had a letter from a reader complaining that salespeople and others speak only to the companions of senior citizens — as though all seniors were incompetent.

Some years ago — I believe it was in Readers' Digest — I read a great response to that problem.

A daughter had accompanied her mother to the doctor's office, and the doctor kept addressing the daughter regarding her mother's condition and treatment, totally ignoring the mother. Finally, the mother had about all she could tolerate, so she said to the doctor:

"Doctor, do you work crossword puzzles?"

"Yes," he replied, trying to humor her.

"Do you do them with pencil or pen?" she asked.

"With a pencil," he replied.

"Well, I do them in ink. Now, talk to me!"

Parents: All teens experience mood swings

DEAR MARY: How can a parent tell when their teenager's mood swings are "normal" and when the kid is really in trouble? Sometimes my 14-year-old daughter is the most pleasant person to be around that I know, then with the blink of an eye, or the drop of a word, she's crying and saying no one understands her, and generally acting like a toddler having a temper tantrum.

Yesterday I told her I needed to make a phone call to a client while she was on the phone (as she is "every" evening). She slammed down the receiver and generally reacted like a queen stripped of her crown. I get so frustrated when she pulls one of these scenes, I feel like putting

her on restriction for the rest of her life, or until she's 18 and out of here, whichever comes first. Do other parents of teens have to put up with this craziness?

FRUSTRATED DAD
DEAR FRUSTRATED: Both your observations and your reactions are absolutely the norm among parents and teens, and while their anger may seem to erupt from nowhere, there's usually an explanation. Of course, all teenagers are physically on a hormonal roller coaster which results in see-sawing emotions. Often, too, they are caught in the bind of struggling to assert their independence while they are still financially and emotionally dependent on their parents.

Don't make the mistake of assuming that because your daughter is stomping around the house she is necessarily upset with you. Try to accept an occasional moody outburst as a normal part of adolescence, as long as there is no physical violence or excessive verbal abuse. Remember that teenagers often aren't sure why they're angry and frustrated. Perhaps you can remember the frustration and confusion you felt as a teen-ager and you'll probably empathize more with how your daughter feels.

Avoid arguing with her about every little problem; in other words — pick your fights. Then when you disagree over a legitimate issue, aim for a win-win solution rather than playing one-upmanship. It is best not to impose punishment during the heat of an argument. Let everyone cool off, then talk about necessary discipline. Finally, physical violence or extreme verbal abuse are never acceptable expressions of anger. If they should ever occur, you must seek professional help since such reactions might indicate severe depression or alcohol or other drug abuse.

Society to mark state's birthday

The Sanford Historical Society is sponsoring several events at the Sanford Museum during the weekend of March 4-5 in commemoration of the state of Florida's 150th birthday. Florida became a state on March 3, 1845.

There will be special displays relating to the statehood, and of local interest will be an exhibit of historic Sanford postcards from the collection of Lisa Carr. Joy Robinson, co-author, with Mark Andrews of the book "Flashbacks: The Story of Central Florida's Past," will be at the museum on Saturday March 4, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. for a book signing. Robinson is an editor for The Orlando Sentinel and writes the column "Seminole's Past."

George Scott will be giving a demonstration of palm frond weaving during the weekend. He makes ornaments based on ancient Native American designs. The Sanford Historical Society will be having a bake sale and will also have their 1995 pictorial calendars for sale. Proceeds from these fund-raising projects go toward various needs of the museum.

The Sanford Museum hours for these two days will be 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The public is cordially invited to attend at no admission charge. For information, call Grace Marie Stinecifer, 322-4381.

The Sanford Historical Society would also like to announce that they plan to produce a photo history of Sanford to be published in 1997 in conjunction with the city of Sanford's 120th birthday. Sanford was incorporated Sept. 28, 1977.

Faith... Not Fear

It has been observed that "those who are afraid of the deep will not catch many fishes." Grammar not withstanding, this axiom holds a solemn truth. We must deny impossibility. Faith, like love, is to some degree blind if it is true. It need not qualify. Faith, like God, simply is. Faith laughs at fear and forges ahead, encouraged by the certainty that the will of God prevails. We read in Luke 1:37, "With God, nothing shall be impossible." No mountain was ever conquered with fear as the guide. This Sabbath, visit God's house. If this is a new experience, you can be confident that God is waiting to welcome you. With God as your friend and faith as your guide, fear fades into oblivion forever... and no mountain is ever too high.

Zapf gave her heart to Jesus

Former inmate attributes change to jail ministry

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Elvia Presley sang a song titled "Jail House Rock" in the late 80's. Yet, "jail house religion," not rock was what JoAnn Zapf was accused of finding instead.

Now nine years after she found the Lord through the jail ministry, she confirms it wasn't just "jail house religion" but truly accepting Jesus as her Saviour. She said, "If what I found in John E. Polk Correctional Facility, in April '86, needs to be associated with crime, let it be the breaking cycle of crime, one life at a time, and let it begin with me."

Zapf shared her story of her stay in the facility and how she turned her life around and began a booming and successful business. "Due to an addiction I was an inmate in the facility, one of many times, the last time in 1986," she said. "I was a broken, beaten and shattered piece of so-called humanity who had reached my own personal pits of hell. At that time I was more concerned about having to leave the facility in thirty days than serving the time. I knew I would be without family or friends, automobile or driver's license, employment or money, but mainly without a place to live. How could this happen to me?"

She shared her upbringing in a churchgoing atmosphere and her involvement as a young mother with her children. "I was only 28 years old," she said. "I had what appeared to be a perfect life with a good husband, two beautiful children, a house on a lake, a good business and a lot of friends."

Her life took another direction with a different husband, parties, drinking, little responsibility and continuing to search for love. "When standing in front of Judge Wallace Hall that day waiting to be sentenced, I felt his love and compassion for humanity at its very worst. I questioned, 'do we have to lose everything we think we are, in order to feel this type of love?'"

She continued by saying, "In the jail, four days later, I personally met the man who is the bearer of this special love. His name is Jesus. He was the answer to the questions I had been searching for. He would fill the empty hole deep inside. I will never forget the hours following my salvation. On the cold metal bunk, deep in the heart of that jail I curled up in the arms of the Lord, my Father, and slept in peace for the first time in many years. Judge Hall had shown me the Love of God and Chaplain Pittroff was God's instrument to guide me to live that love. Chaplain Pittroff is the senior chaplain with the Good News Jail and Prison Ministry inside the jail. While serving my time I met a woman who was a volunteer with the ministry and is now the women's chaplain. Joanne Westmoreland became my friend, as well as mentor, and one of my main supporters when I left at the end of 30 days. I had arrived there a broken and beaten shell and left the child of a king and with a mission to serve my Lord.

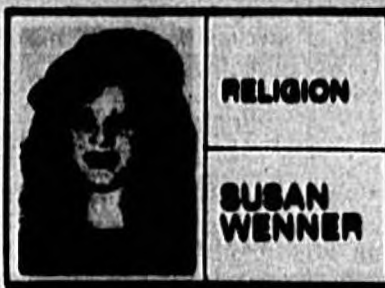

Zapf spoke of the goal she has now. "My dream was to return to that same jail one day and serve the Lord as my friend. Joanne, served by telling other women about Jesus. The other dream was to have a house where women leaving the facility in the situation I left in, could have a place to go that would be filled with this special love from Jesus. One dream was fulfilled in March of 1984 when I began going into the facility as a helper to Chaplain Westmoreland and taking the message of hope and a new life to other women. The second dream is in God's trusting hands."

Pastor praises positive effects of jail ministry

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Jails and prisons are full and overflowing. The lack of morals in society is blamed for the abundance of violence and crimes. Many fingers point to the home and others to the negative effects of television programming. Gangs and other organizations give youth a sense of identity that they seem to be striving toward yet with negative overtones. These less than desirable behaviors are carried out and soon crimes overwhelm them.

Although preventative measures are necessary before a person progresses to the point of incarceration, is it possible to prevent these inmates from becoming repeat offenders? Can

SUSAN WENNER

Christians bond together to relieve the burden to society once a person is caught up in the web of Satan?

Dan Maxwell, pastor of New Life Baptist Temple in Lake Mary, offered some suggestions to help those already in the detention systems. "I feel the jail ministry is very effective," he said. "I've been working in this ministry for almost six years. I've seen no less than 150 to 200 people turn their lives over to Christ. There were twelve people alone just this week."

Maxwell shared numerous examples of the many families and individuals that have become productive and responsible citizens because of the jail ministry. "I've seen families salvaged because the person incarcerated yielded their life to Christ. They had they now have a purpose. They have gone back to their homes and affected their environment in a positive way. I've seen some dramatic changes in them. I wouldn't have been able to reach them if God didn't put them in a place where the only way they could look was up."

He further commented about his vision for the church he pastors. "My vision for our church is to help these inmates when they are released. I'd like to see us start a repair shop for our repairs. This would train them for some skills and give them a support system. It would also offer people feeding car repairs honest work and payment would be evaluated according to what they could pay. For the ladies I'd like to see us be able to train them in some kind of clerical work or such."

Inmates share positive results of jail ministry

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Sharing the word of God is a command Christians are given in Mark 16:15, 16. It reads, "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Jesus adds, "He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

Jail ministries all over the nation have made it their mission to follow this command of our Lord. Is it really effective within the confines of this sealed environment?

Inmates, both male and female, shared some of their own personal experiences with this outreach and its positive effects. S. Grant said, "The Nurture program at the correctional facility has really expressed the meaning of spiritually in a most gracious way." Timothy Branch said, "I really hadn't given my life to him until now. I have realized through the jail ministry that the Lord wants me to do his work on this earth and to be one of his disciples." Ralph Guinones said, "I first started to really feel God in my heart when I came back to jail. Because of my Bible study in the program I'm looking forward, by God's grace, love, and power, to get a Bible degree and with the help of the Holy Spirit become a pastor and live my life for God." Kenneth Baker said, "On Oct. 18, 1986, here in jail, I asked God's forgiveness and told Jesus Christ I needed him in my life. I made a commitment to live as a loyal servant to our Father, right then." Donald Carter said, "I accepted Christ in my life wholeheartedly. The Lord has blessed me, my family and my life to come. I know one day I'll be free physically. I'm free spiritually now." Elizabeth Kirtrell said, "I truly praise God and thank Him for the Nurture program at John E. Polk Correctional Facility. The ladies in the program are warm, friendly and caring. Although they didn't know me they reached out to me

Inside the confines of Correctional Facility in friendship and love. They helped me through some pretty sticky times. We are a family. They care about me and I care about them. We laugh together, cry together and pray together. We go to church everyday at twelve noon where we have a different volunteer to come in and teach us and share with us. These volunteers are truly extraordinary. We formed a bond unlike anything I've experienced. It's a friendship that will last forever. Our chaplain, Joanne, is the most caring person that I know. Her love for us is truly a gift from God. This program gave me some structure in my life through studying the Bible and learning the Word and sharing it with these ladies. I learned a lot about myself and how to treat people. I learned how to smile and be happy. I learned how to confront my shortcomings instead of hiding them or running away from them. I learned most importantly how to trust and forgive. Surely this program has had a positive effect on my life and I am confident that I will never be back in jail again."
