

FPL Warns Again Of Sanford Area Brownout Possibilities

By GEOFFREY POUNDS
 Herald Staff Writer

President Carter again has been asked to extend a suspension of clean air standards so six Florida power plants, including the Florida Power and Light Plant in Sanford, could burn high-sulfur fuel.

If the extension is not granted, area residents could experience sporadic power shortages and "brownouts," Scott Burns, district manager at the Sanford FPL office, said today.

Carter twice has given Governor Bob Graham the authority to relax air quality standards for 30-day periods.

The last presidential order is scheduled to expire on Monday.

On Friday, Graham's office sent a letter to Carter stating, "continuing shortages of low-sulfur fuel oil in Florida 'apparently will continue to exist for the next several months.'"

When the first suspension of the clean air standards was ordered two months ago, the Sanford FPL plant began purchasing and using high-sulfur fuel from its principal supplier, Exxon.

"We haven't been burning as much of the high-sulfur oil as we thought we were going to, but there is no way we could operate strictly on low sulfur oil," Burns said.

He said it was first thought that as much as 50 percent of the oil burned at the plant would be high-sulfur fuel, but that the plant has been using only 30 to 40 percent high-sulfur oil in its operations the past two months.

Burns said the plant maintains a 30-day reserve of fuel. The current reserve supply is about 40 percent high-sulfur oil, he said. If the President does not grant Graham's request and continued use of high-sulfur fuel is prohibited, Burns said, the Sanford plant would lose its full generating capacity before the first of July.

"We'll burn all the low-sulfur oil we can get from Exxon or from anybody else on the open market," said Burns.

"but without the high-sulfur fuel we would probably lose 20 percent of our units."

If the generating units are not operating at full potential during the high demand summer months, all power needs cannot be met and consumers would experience temporary "blackouts" or "brownouts," Burns said.

Burning high-sulfur fuel normally is prohibited by the federal Clean Air Act since its use results in greater air pollution. Graham first asked Carter to suspend the clean air standards for a 90-day period, but the President granted only 30-day lifting of the standards. The suspension was extended for a second month in early May.

Orr Announces New Program

State Will Give Tax Break For Hiring Poor

A new program providing tax credits to business and industry for employing the disadvantaged will be announced by Gov. Bob Graham next week. Details of the program to encourage the employment of economically disadvantaged Vietnam war veterans, convicts and youth were given to the general membership of the Seminole Employment Economic Development Corp. (SEEDCO) by Wallace E. Orr at a breakfast meeting Saturday.

Orr, secretary of the Labor and Employment Security for the state of Florida, is a native of Seminole County and brother of Horace Orr, president of SEEDCO.

"When the poor and minorities are certified eligible locally, they will take a voucher to a prospective employer," explained Orr, who forecasted Graham's plans. "The Department of Labor will confirm the certification within 48 hours and the employer will receive a $3,000 tax credit the first year. The second year a tax credit of $1,500 will be given.

"Maybe this program will help some of these who have given up, are discouraged and full of despair, give them a new lease on life," he said.

Noting the new program is entitled "Target Job Tax Credit Program," Orr "admonished and charged" those present to "commit yourselves to doing something about unemployment, to bring this new program to the attention of those needing jobs and employers with jobs to fill."

"There are a disproportionate number of minorities who are unemployed, who cannot find jobs," he said, pointing out that 55 percent of Florida's current prison population is comprised of poor and minorities. Yet, Orr said, minorities comprise only 22 percent of the population.

"There is something wrong when our state spends $14,000 annually to incarcerate a person but only spends $1,500 a year to educate your youth," he said.

Orr said 30,000 summer jobs also will be opening up in June for young people from poor families.

"A couple weeks ago we celebrated the 25th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision Brown vs. Board of Education, which ordered the desegregation of schools. I personally and honestly believe Brown was not enough. We are now experiencing a polarization of the races. There are people standing down on the corner who have not received their slice of the pie, who need jobs," Orr said.

"If we are going to do something about the problems facing the community there is going to have to be involvement and commitment by everybody. We must come to grips with social problems or it will be intolerable for our heirs," he said.

Edward Blackshear, principal of Crooms High School, who had graduated from Crooms with Orr in 1943, presented him with a plaque for achievement in the field of human and economic development.

Introducing Orr to the gathering at the Sanford Civic center, school board member Roland Williams noted the secretary of labor was born in Fern Park, and attended Roosevelt as well as Crooms High School.

Rev. Amos Jones, SEEDCO board of directors chairman, in opening remarks directed attention to the plight of the poor in Seminole County. "There are too many families living in hovels until for human existence. There are too many living in areas without paved streets or adequate drainage. We are committed to addressing in a significant way those who are deprived of dignity and self esteem," he said.

Among the special guests present was Miss Cheryl Cromwell of the State Department of Community Affairs, Tallahassee.

No Swindle, But Women Kill Selves

If you want to convert your late model car from unleaded to the less expensive leaded gasoline, now is the time.

Conversion by private owners is not against either federal or Florida state law now. But if the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has its way, it will be in the near future.

According to one Seminole County woman the process is simple. You need only pull the neck of the gasoline tank out and remove the piece of metal that restricts to lead-free the type of gas pump nozzle that can be used.

But even easier than that, according to an EPA spokesman, is the purchase of a wide-mouth funnel device now on the market. "The funnel is advertised, the spokesman said, 'as an emergency device as one to be used in a 'bona fide emergency as when a person runs out of gasoline and needs some to get to the nearest service station.'"

What happens to your no-lead type engine and the catalytic converter (emission device) on your car when you use leaded gasoline?

According to Beck Beckwith, after a couple or more tankfuls of leaded gasoline, the lead in the gasoline "renders the catalytic converter inactive." Beckwith is instructor of automotive technology at Seminole Community College.

Un-Leaded Too Costly? Some Find A Solution

"Leaded gasoline is two-to-three octane ratings higher than unleaded gasoline and costs about five cents per gallon more. "People who have cars requiring unleaded gasoline are getting an inferior rated gas and paying more," he said.

Beckwith said the leaded gasoline will not harm the engine of a car that is supposed to use lead-free gas.

Beckwith said he could not say for certain if a trend in conversion is occurring locally, but did note many individual automobile owners have approached him at the college asking if his automotive section could do it for them.

Beckwith said he promptly points out it is illegal, and that his class cannot perform the task.

Federal law calls for a $10,000 penalty to be levied against any service station operator or self-service operator who "causes or allows" leaded gasoline to be put into a lead-free gasoline tank, said EPA spokesman Mark Siegler.

In addition, he noted, anti-tampering legislation is on the books in 34 states, other than Florida. But only two states are enforcing the anti-tampering laws within their state.

Of the emergency funnel device, Siegler said, EPA has written to attorneys general of states that do not have regulations on the sale of such a device to bring it to their attention.

"Using leaded gasoline in lead-free cars could cost the consumer quite a bit of money," Siegler insists, adding the result will be destruction of the catalytic converters.

Is using leaded gasoline in these cars dangerous? "It is possible but rare for leaded gasoline to clog a converter and cause it to overheat as a result," Siegler, chief of EPA's fuel section, said.

"The catalytic converter can outlast the car," he said, "assuming the car is maintained with unleaded gas. Just a few tankfuls of leaded gasoline, however, will deactivate the converter."

Siegler said while EPA has been encouraging states with anti-tampering laws on books to enforce the law, the encouragement has not been met with much success.

Siegler has been involved in conducting a nationwide survey since August, 1977 to determine whether a trend is developing across the country to convert lead-free cars to leaded gasoline.

He said the survey has shown so far, an average rate of nine-to-10 percent conversion. The survey has not been successful in Florida because of the license plate system used here. A small sticker is placed on each license plate to renew those plates annually.

He said the method used in other states was to observe from a spot near a gasoline station, using tag numbers to verify through the state whether the vehicles for which gasoline was being purchased called for lead-free or leaded gas. From spots away from the stations the renewal stickers used in Florida could not be

Criminals Linked To Assassination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Assassinations Committee report on John F. Kennedy's death will say the former president was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy, NBC News reported Friday.

NBC said the final draft of the committee's organized crime section, due out in July, "doesn't prove, but discusses in great detail, how and why individual members of organized crime could have arranged the murder."

"The committee will say President Kennedy was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy," NBC said. "It will explain its conclusion that an acoustic analysis of the sound of the shots makes it highly probable two gunmen were shooting — even though three of the committee's 12 members questioned the acoustics evidence."

The network said the final report will say the mob's battle with John Kennedy and his brother Robert dates back to the McClellan anti-rackets hearings of the 1950s. Later, the Kennedy administration — with Robert as attorney general — brought about the strongest effort ever against organized crime.

"The report names Carlos Marcello and Santo Trafficante as the 'most likely' organized crime bosses to have been involved," NBC said. "It provides evidence, some of it inconclusive, that they and Teamster leader Jimmy Hoffa threatened John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy or both."

"Further, it suggests associations through which they could have influenced accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald or Oswald's killer, Jack Ruby."

Both Marcello, underworld boss in New Orleans and Dallas, and Trafficante, onetime underworld boss in Cuba, denied involvement, NBC said.

The network said the committee will say of Lee Harvey Oswald that "it is not likely he was a hired killer" but that "it is likely his principle motivation was political" and that Oswald's organized crime contacts could have deceived him about their true identities and motives.

Unleaded

—Using leaded gasoline will foul up spark plugs and carburetors and will contaminate the oil in the car more quickly, requiring changes of oil twice as frequently.

—The exhaust system deteriorates more quickly. EPA, working with the Department of Energy (DOE), recently proposed, according to Sieglar, a rule setting a maximum price differential at retail between unleaded and leaded gasoline of five cents. The actual cost differential at the refinery is two-to-three cents. If the cost is passed all the way through, the incentive to switch will be diluted," he said.

Thieves Pick $6,000 Worth Of Oranges

An estimated $6,000 worth of oranges were stolen from a grove in rural Oviedo sometime after May 1, Seminole County Sheriff's Deputies report.

Owner of the fruit, Henry Jones, 36, of 317 Teakwood Drive, Altamonte Springs, said today the oranges were picked off the trees in his grove next to the Hilly Field Camp in Oviedo. He said the thieves started at the rear of the 10-acre grove and worked their way forward, stripping about half of the trees. If packaged, Jones said, the stolen fruit would have filled about 800 to 1,000 boxes.

"I hadn't been to the grove for about a month," Jones said. "Whoever stole the oranges must have known my schedule. Jones said there were a number of truck tracks in the grove but it is difficult to determine how fresh the tracks are.

PITBULL STOLEN A white and brown male pitbull named "Spot" was stolen from the pickup truck of an Oviedo man, according to Seminole County deputies.

Owner Gary Cotton, 25, of Route 2, Oviedo, told deputies Spot was tied up about 9:30 p.m. Thursday in the cab of his truck and his home. Cotton said he left home for about one hour and when he returned his dog was missing.

Cotton estimated the value of his dog from $50 to $300.

Millions Greet Pope As He Returns Home

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — He left Poland as Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Wladyslaw, and keeping one of the first promises he made to the Polish people as pontiff, returned today as Pope John Paul II. Millions of Poles welcomed him in a massive outpouring of pride and patriotism.

John Paul was the first Roman Catholic pontiff to visit a communist country but, more important to his Roman Catholic countrymen, John Paul II is one of Poland's own. His reception immersed this war-devastated, rebuilt capital in a tidal wave of emotion and seemed certain to eclipse the welcome Poles have given previous visitors including President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Church bells throughout the city pealed in unison as the huge crowds crushed against steel-scaffolding barriers along a 5-mile route from the airport into the city center. Pope John Paul rode in on a gilded throne, surrounded by 18 bishops, on the back of a flatbed truck.

"I'm pretty sore, but everything went real well," said Dixon.

"They told me not to go skydiving and not to play too much tackle football, but other than that I'm fine," Dixon said. His sister was released from intensive care Friday, but will remain hospitalized for another month before returning to her home.

He said he expects to be out of the hospital in a week, but will not be able to return to work for a few months.

Tyrant Rule Still Abounds

By GERALD NADLER
 United Press International
 Invasions have ended two of the world's most blatant tyrannies. Idi Amin's in Uganda and Pol Pot's in Cambodia, but bizarre one-man regimes still abound in the world.

The international world sat on its hands while a Tanzanian-led force drove Amin from power and a Vietnamese-led invasion booted out Communist Pol Pot. Only Libya aided Amin for a time and China has been sending help to the remnants of Pol Pot's forces.

That same international silence, however, allows other one-man rulers — even a self-declared emperor and at least one president-for-life — to lord it in a host of small nations, most of them in Africa.

The potentes stater center stage in former colonial regions that are not exactly household names: the Central African Empire, Equatorial Guinea.

Although Uganda, with considerable help from Tanzania, has rid itself of "Field Marshal Amin," the Central African Empire is ruled by no less than Emperor Jean-Bedel Bokassa.

Bokassa, who proclaimed himself emperor in 1975 after ruling the former French colony as president since 1965, emerged from the French army much as Amin passed through the British army.

'Idi was a monstrous creature'

A report by Amnesty International this month said Bokassa's troops killed between 80 and 100 schoolboys for rioting against a decree on wearing school uniforms.

But the heir to Amin, if wholesale killing of opponents is the criterion, may be President-for-life Niasse Ngyenna Biyogo of Equatorial Guinea, a Maryland-sized former Spanish colony on Africa's west coast.

Most of Equatorial Guinea's 7,000 Europeans departed in the Iran this year lost its autocrat, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who left in mid-February, unable to stem Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution. But Khomeini's self-willed "revolutionary courts," decrying the shah's brutality, have summarily executed hundreds.

What keeps many admitted brutal rulers in place is "sovereignty" — the international principle of not disturbing another nation's territory.

Speaking in Hong Kong two weeks ago, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger summed it up, saying that while the Idi Amin and Pol Pot regimes were grotesque, their nations were sovereign.

"Idi was a monstrous creature," Kissinger said. "We should not do anything to support him. But for a foreign country to invade an independent nation is not acceptable."

Cambodia, he said, was governed by a "group of murderers, but this is not the reason they were attacked" by Vietnam.

"They were attacked because they were an independent nation and because of Vietnam's expansive intentions," Kissinger said.

The Debate Continues: Creation And/Or Evolution

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — An emotion-charged controversy that touched off rallies on the Statehouse steps, protests at Iowa State University and anxiety among state officials has been laid to rest — at least for now.

With the Legislature now adjourned for the year, John Jensen will have to wait until 1980 to renew a crusade that has evoked debate over questions as old as the human race.

Little attention was paid early this year when Jensen — a beefy Plainfield farmer, hawkish and first-term Republican state senator — embarked on a campaign to rid Iowa schools of what he believed to be an educational injustice. Joined by 11 of his colleagues, Jensen introduced legislation that would force schools to teach the theory of creation alongside Charles Darwin's theory of evolution in explaining the origins of the human race.

In essence, the creationists argued the origin of the human race is more closely in tune with biblical accounts than Darwin's theory of a human race evolved from lower order species.

"Origins by their very nature are outside the arena of true science. Any explanation is highly speculative — philosophical, not scientific," said David Boylan, dean of engineering at Iowa State University. "The conflict is not between science and religion, but between two models built on scientific observations that sometimes harmonize with religious beliefs."

Had it not been for an eye on higher office and an intense lobbying effort spearheaded by fundamentalist Christians, Jensen's bill might have remained an obscurity.

But the bill cleared the Senate Education Committee, triggering a hearing that beckoned analogies to the 1925 "monkey trial" of John Scopes, a Tennessee biology teacher convicted of violating state law by teaching evolution.

It also transformed Iowa into the battleground for a small but forceful movement paralleled by the introduction of similar legislation in at least two other states and inclusion of creation theory on school reading lists in five.

At issue is "scientific creationism" — a theory advanced by proponents boasting scientific credentials who use accepted scientific principles (including laws of thermodynamics) to discredit evolutionary development.

"These men are not fly-by-nighters," said Richard Bliss of the Institute of Creation Research, an arm of the San Diego-based Christian Heritage College.

"You'll never see one organism becoming another organism and there is no evidence to support that (evolution) theory. I'll tell you one thing — a man was always a man, a dog was always a dog, a cat was always a cat."

Jensen said his efforts are not aimed at forcing classroom Bible teachings. All he wants, he said, is a mandate that Iowa schools adhere to a dual-theory approach.

Jensen's bill has embroiled politicians, educators and students in controversy.

Fundamentalists at Iowa State coupled a strong lobbying effort in Des Moines with periodic actions on the Ames campus to call attention to the creation debate and underscore their claim of discrimination against creationists by university faculty members teaching evolution.

Jensen's bill, they said, strikes at the heart of academic freedom and is needed to overcome a bias existing in schools throughout Iowa.

Educators raised the same cry of academic freedom, arguing the Legislature should not be dictating curriculum.

Amid the turmoil generated by the creation-evolution standoff, the Department of Public Instruction and even Gov. Robert D. Ray treaded lightly, while indicating their displeasure with Jensen's bill.

A DPI position paper cautioned teachers to regard evolution "as a well-supported scientific theory — not a fact."

But it also advised inquisitive students "to have creationism explained to them by theological experts."

Drawing religion into the controversy infuriated the creationists, whose pleas for academic freedom have been met with warnings the creation bill might be declared unconstitutional if ever signed into law and challenged.

But among the creationists' adversaries is a group of Roman Catholic theologians, urging the Legislature to resist what they consider an overt attempt to inject religious beliefs into secular education.

"There is every reason to know and believe that science is not the product of creation and creation is not the product of science," said Rev. Leonard Renkli, a priest and biology teacher at a Catholic high school. "I love them both, but they are very, very unique."

It wasn't girls the guys were thinking about Thursday night...at least not during the prep jamboree in Sanford. Football was king. The outcome proved something of a shocker as Lake Brantley downed Apopka by 6-0, Lake Howell stopped Lyman by 7-0, Seminole trimmed Apopka by 6-0, Brantley mowed down Lyman by 14-7 and Lake Howell tied Seminole, 8-8.

Carter's Korean Visit A Delicate Dilemma

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When President Jimmy Carter took the oath of office in 1977, he placed his hand on a Bible open to chapter six of the Old Testament prophet Micah.

In the Gulf between those two events lies the delicate dilemma facing Carter as he prepares to visit South Korea following the Asian economic summit meeting in late June. Increasingly, U.S. church leaders are seeing the visit as a test of Carter's commitment to religious and human rights but as a unique opportunity for the president to put his own religious faith into practice.

When Christianity and Crisis recently published the first chapter of the Rev. Edward Norman's "Christianity and the World Order," it checked a number of the influential liberal magazine's readers. In it, Norman scorns the work and style of such international, interfaith bodies such as the World Council of Churches for their concern with the political and economic aspects of life, particularly in the Third World.

At issue is South Korea's dissident movement, protesting the lack of democracy and what many see as the increasingly harsh repressive actions of Korean President Park Chung Hee. South Korean government officials have maintained that the political and religious rights must be curtailed in the interest of national security and that any potential advantage to U.S. missionaries working in South Korea would be greatly outweighed by embarrassment, concessions and exploitation of the prestige of the American presidency.

At this moment he sits in a Seoul prison in an unseated cell, deprived of writing material, decent food, books and a light bulb as bright as 60 watts," Shriver said to Moon. "Even as window-dressing, that would be a gesture of justice," Shriver said of the possible release of Moon and Park. "But in or out of jail, will you ask to see them?" Shriver asked.

QUESTION: My teenage son recently told me that he is gay. I never dreamed my son would turn out like this. And there is nothing I can do about it. I am crushed. Have you personally known of homosexuals who are changing, or is he doomed to be gay forever?
ANSWER: Yes, homosexuals can change. I've seen it happen. Usually it happens quickly and permanently. I do not believe homosexuality is inborn, but it is a giving to weaknesses and the brokenhearted, to proclaim health except for the look in his eyes. "I'm a homosexual," he whispered. "I'm bound and I can't get free."

Homosexuals Change?

prayed for God's strength to work in his life, and through prayer, God broke the prison bars which held that young man captive. His inner man was set free. When I heard from him later, he told me Jesus had delivered him completely, and I felt assured in my heart that it was so. Jesus did what was prophesied in Isaiah 61:1: "The Lord hath... sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

Matthau: Unlikely As A Leading Man

WALTER MATTHAU

HOLLYWOOD UPI — Walter Matthau shuffled into the Universal Studios commissary looking like an unmade bed, grumbling with the ferocity of a bear awakened from hibernation.

"But after a while I learned audiences have become sophisticated. They began to pick up on satire and parody and the comments I was making as an actor were anti-heroic."

"You have to be good looking to be a hero. In the last 10 or 15 years people have accepted the anti-hero schump. That's me. So I play an old shoe kind of character man."

"I'm happy doing one picture a year. I can't do more because it's too much work. I need a few weeks to replenish the talent pool."

"I'm going to the Dodger game tonight," Walter said. "I want to see them with my own eyes."

broken and talked business for a few minutes. He hung up and folded his face into a grin.

"I never figured to make a living as an actor," he said. "Becoming a movie star didn't enter my mind. I wasn't pretty enough. I thought maybe I could make a living as a character man."

Silverman Analyzed Financially

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fred Silverman is betting NBC's money on Bob Conrad in "A Man Called Snot" and in "Real People" as the two new shows most likely to be hits in the network's fall schedule.

The NBC president's endorsement is a sign of confidence in the network's ability to revive its fortunes after a disastrous season.

When Silverman asked the projectionist to show the three network schedules, he was told it was available.

Renovated Radio City Hall Reopens

NEW YORK (UPI) — Debra Riddin, Radio City Music Hall reopened this week with a new summer musical extravaganza designed to put new life into one of the nation's most beloved entertainment landmarks.

The show, "A New York Summer," opened to the public on a two-show-a-day schedule at 8:30 for general admission after a gala premiere Thursday night.

Only last year, the Music Hall seemed doomed by financial realities that made it a loser as a first-run family movie showcase.

On Patient-Contact Area Doctors Rap Sex Poll Results

By SHARON CARRASCO
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County doctors strongly disagree with the one in five physicians who said in a UCLA survey that "erotic contact" with female patients was beneficial to their patients.

The poll, which appears in the June issue of Ladies Home Journal, said up to 13 percent of 460 doctors surveyed said they had such contact with female patients.

Erotic contact included everything from kissing to fondling and sexual intercourse.

Of the 460 physicians surveyed, 10 percent said they "actually felt this was useful to patients."

In the survey, anonymous doctors said "erotic contact" with female patients was deemed appropriate for a variety of therapeutic, emotional reasons.

'Work is for work. Fun is for fun.'

One physician, for example, said sexual stimulation "helps patients relax" while another colleague said erotic contact "demonstrates the doctor's effectiveness to a patient."

Other comments included: "It supports and reinforces the patient's sex appeal," "to teach sexual anatomy," "to aid a middle-aged female who feels undesirable," "to disclose areas of sexual blocking" and "to improve sexual adjustment."

"This is ridiculous," said Dr. G.V. Garay, chief medical examiner of Seminole County, in response to the University of California at Los Angeles survey.

"I don't think it's ethical," Garay said. "If you want to do something like that, do it as a private citizen."

"Those figures sound awful high but California is regarded as having a lot of nuts anyway," said Dr. Sara Irigoin, assistant medical examiner and associate pathologist of Seminole County.

"Like any other job, when you do your job, you stick to your job," Irigoin said. "Work is for work. Fun is for fun."

"I graduated from medical school in 1966. I was taught that was strictly unethical. This includes contact with one's day-to-day employees."

Dr. Clyde K. Meade, president of the Seminole County Medical Society, said erotic contact with female patients would "not add to the therapeutic value of anything."

But there are exceptions like sexual therapy "where a person is taught about a certain modality," said Meade, a general practitioner.

Although this type of treatment is not addressed in the medical society's by-laws, it is an "unwritten law" and would be "frowned upon" by society if practiced, Meade said.

'Any physician who feels that way should lose his license'

Ivan N. Menst, one of the two UCLA professors who administered the survey, said 19 percent who said they "actually felt this was useful to patients" compares closely to another study.

That study showed 26 percent of the medical students believed it was all right under the right circumstances for such "erotic contact."

The figures "delineate a core group of physicians-in-training and physicians-in-practice who are quite seriously asking, Why

"I treat my patients because they are sick," Bachrach said. "How could I be attracted to anyone who is sick?"

Dr. Pedro Bachrach of Urology doubted the validity of the survey results saying they were probably "exploited" in order to sell more magazines and newspapers.

Bachrach, vice president of the medical society said he has never seen this type of treatment for female patients documented in any scientific journals.

Personally, Bachrach said the "erotic contact" would offer no therapeutic value for female patients. On the contrary, it is damaging both psychologically and morally, he said.

"The figures 'delineate a core group of physicians-in-training and physicians-in-practice who are quite seriously asking, Why not?" said Menst, who is a professor of medical psychology.

Of the five medical specialties ranked by frequency of contact, gynecologists came in first, followed closely by general practitioners, psychiatrists, internists and surgeons, the study said.

But respondents to the survey said physicians maintain "the seductive patient is far, far more common than the seductive doctor. And the only reason we don't hear more about the seductive patient is that her victim, the physician, has nowhere to complain."

U.S. Officials To View $53 Million Midway PUD Site

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Officials from the U.S. Economic Development Administration (EDA) will be in Sanford Tuesday to view the proposed site of the Seminole Employment Economic Development Corp. (SEEDCO) $53 million industrial-housing complex.

The site of the 180-acre proposed planned unit development (PUD) is located at the northwest corner of state Route 46 and Brison Avenue in the Midway area poverty pocket east of Sanford.

The Seminole County Planning and Zoning Commission will consider a SEEDCO request at a 7:30 p.m. public hearing Wednesday to rezone the tract from agricultural to PUD.

"We have filed a preliminary application with EDA for federal funding for the project and officials from that agency will be looking at the property Tuesday," said Horace Orr, SEEDCO president, today. "It will take nine months to a year for EDA funding approval," he said.

"We will also be approaching the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Farmers Home Administration for funding on various parts of the project," Orr said.

He said preliminary plans for the proposed PUD have been modified to include the proposed commercial area while expanding the portions of the project devoted to industrial and housing development. Tentative plans now call for more than 100 acres in housing and the balance in industrial development.

"We don't think it is as attractive to develop commercially there. Commercial development is not where we want to concentrate," he said, adding SEEDCO is more interested in providing housing and jobs for that section of Midway.

Orr said he already has eight prospective industrial clients lined up for possible location at the site, including relocation of at least five new industries from as far away as California and as close as Melbourne and Orlando.

The new industries could be located on the property within 2 1/2-to-three years, he said, while the time schedule for complete development of the tract is five-to-seven years.

SEEDCO has placed a $5,000 binder on the property, agreeing to purchase it if rezoning is approved by the county. After the planning and zoning commission hearing, the county commission will consider the request. The request is not only for rezoning but also for a change in the county's comprehensive land use plan.

Four positive votes of the county commissioners are necessary, according to law, for the plan to be changed, according to Herb Hardin, county development manager.

Sale price for the land will range from $500,000 to $600,000, said Tom Binford, real estate broker for the sellers. The land is currently owned by 27 persons including C.W. Davis, a Putnam County rancher, who is trustee of the property.

BILL SMATHERS
...a fine job'

In Lake Mary Fire Chief Dead; Flags At Half-Staff

Flags in Lake Mary were lowered to half-staff today in the wake of Fire Chief Bill Smathers' death. Smathers, 41, died of a heart attack at his home on Anderson Lane Sunday afternoon.

Smathers began his service with the LMFID as a teenager. Former Chief Ralph Abell said Smathers, at 17, was too young to be a charter member of the department when it was formed in 1956. Nevertheless, Abell said, Smathers would hang around the station and do whatever chores were needed.

"He was with us from the start," said Abell.

"He certainly went well beyond the bounds of what could be expected of a volunteer chief. He did an outstanding job," said Abell.

After a stint in the service, Smathers returned to Lake Mary in the late 1950s and resumed his role as a volunteer with the department. He was promoted to assistant chief in 1978 and in January of this year was elected chief.

"When he started," Abell said, "All we had was a flatbed truck and about 15 volunteers. It wasn't until 1973 that we got a vehicle that we didn't have to convert."

A refrigeration and electrical instructor at Seminole Community College, Smathers was credited with organizing the department by rank and improving the communication skills and medic-team response of the volunteers. During his six-month stint as chief, the department's size reached an all-time high of 40.

"He did a fine job," said City Manager Phil Kullbes, "particularly with the training and on-the-job spot drills he organized."

In 1978, Smathers ran for city council, but was defeated in a runoff election by Francis Mark.

Kullbes said the flags will remain at half-staff until Smathers' interment Wednesday.

Smathers is survived by his wife, Nancy; two sons, Randy and Roger; and one daughter, Deborah Ann.

At Sewage Treatment Plant Gas Leak Is Plugged In Sanford

Fire technicians David Kite and Roger Bunnell (background) remove protective gear after stopping chlorine leak.

A crew of the Seminole County Public Safety Department successfully shut off a chlorine gas leak today at a Sanford sewage treatment plant minutes after the leak was detected.

W.E. Kinley, battalion chief, described the incident as "minor" because the leak was discovered so quickly and occurred in a sparsely populated area.

Kinley described chlorine gas as "deadly" if enough is inhaled in the lungs.

"Once you get it in your lungs, the chlorine gas turns into acid and eats your lungs up," Kinley explained.

A maintenance man discovered the leak at 10:30 a.m. this morning while making a routine check at the Gateway Utilities sewage treatment plant, Kinley said. The plant is located on Elder Road about one-half mile north of State Road 46.

"It took us about five minutes to shut off the leak," Kinley said. "The valve was leaking from a 150-pound chlorine cylinder and we were able to tighten the valve and stop the leak."

The chlorine gas is used at the sewage treatment plant to kill the bacteria in the water, he explained.

Kinley said the public safety department would contact the company responsible for the maintenance of the cylinder and have them repair the valve.

Four firemen were responsible for shutting off the leak, Kinley said. He said he didn't believe much chlorine had escaped from the cylinder because it was reported to be almost empty.

No one was injured in the incident.
